After attending to his own affairs in town, he suddenly remembered the marriage license, but was nonplussed. for he had not asked the name of Uncle Joe's fiancee. He happened to recollect that he had noticed Uncle Joe around the kitchen a good deal of late, and that Amanda, dusky, fat and 40, and the best cook in the county, always had a delectable morsel reserved for the old man: so, of course it must be Amanda. Armed with the happy credentials, Mr. George galloped home and handed the paper to the old man, who took it and looked at it. The license was read to him.

"'Mondy Jones!" he cried, when the brid name was pronounced, "Why, it ain't her-it's Lize Allen down by de crick." Here was a dilemma, "Well," said

Married Life in Abyssinia. In Abyssinia, a husband who can afford the expense is continually adding to his household of wives. As soon as his favorite begins to pall on him he deposes her for another. The new wife rules the house, dictates orders to the other wives, who, strange as it may seem, obey her without open remonstrance. If any of the former favorites ever cared for their lord they soon cease to be jealous of his affections. They know, too, that the time will surely come when they will be turned out into the streets to look for another master.

One of the surgeon's operations which has been cinematographed was that by which the link of flesh connecting the Hindu twins, Redica and Doodica was severed.

Old Soldier's Story.

Sonoma, Mich., June 13 -That even in actual warfare disease is more terrible than bullets is the experience of Delos Hutchins of this place. Mr. Hutchins as a Union soldier saw three years of service under Butler Barke in the Louisiana swamps, and as a result got crippled with rheumatism so that his hands and feet got all twisted out of shape, and how he suffered only a rheumatic will ever know.

For twenty-five years he was in misery, then one lucky day his druggist advised him to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Of the result Mr. Hutchins says:

"The first two boxes did not help me much, but I got two more, and before I got them used up I was a great deal better. I kept on taking them and now my pains are all gone and I feel better than I have in years. I know Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure rheumatism."

When gratitude goes up it never comes back empty-handed, Fewer married men than bachelors commit suicide

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly falling to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hail's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J Cheney & Go., Toledo, Ohlo, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Miss M. Cartledge gives some helpful advice to young girls. Her letter is but one of thousands which prove that nothing is so helpful to young girls who are just arriving at the period of womanhood as Lydia E. Pink. ham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: —I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly, for it is the only medicine I ever tried which cured me. I suffered much from my first menstrual period, I felt so weak and dizzy at times I could not pursue my studies with the usual interest. My thoughts became sluggish, I had headaches, backaches and sinking spells, also pains in the back and lower limbs. In fact, I was sick all over. " Finally, after many other remedies had been tried, we were advised to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am pleased to say that after taking it only two weeks, a wonderful change for the better took place, and in a short time I was in perfect health. I felt buoyant, full of life, and found all work a pastime. I am indeed glad to tell my experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it made a different girl of me. the center of the room. "Who is responsible for this outrage—this insult? Who is master here?" she demanded, in quick, impassioned tones, while her face indicated the terrible excitement which possessed her. Paul Nazimoff advanced quickly. "Stop, girl! You forget yourself and who you are. You were commanded here by me-Paul, Count Nazimoff-" "Who and what is Paul, Count Nazimoff, that he should command me?" was the imperious answer. "Am I your servant, your serf, your child, or your debtor? I am a free-born Russian, no slave, and I shall not obey you!" .

Count Nazimoff, by his command had thrown down the gage of battle, and Ilda Barosky-for it was the exile's daughter—had taken it up. Two strong natures were in conflict. On the one hand stood Paul Nazimoff, rich, powerful, noble, accustomed all his life to command and to be obeyed, and now humiliated, if beaten, in the presence of all his guests.

On the other, the young girl, proud, laughty and unbending, her woman's gride stung to the quick by being brust like a serf into the midst of the brilliant throng, and commanded to play, as a master commands a slave. It was not hard to see that hers was a nature that never would yield to force, not even if resistance meant the loss of life itself. How was the battle to end?

"I shall not obey you!".

The words that ended the young girl's speech kept ringing in the ears of Paul Nazimoff. "I shall not obey

No such words had ever been addressed to him before. Could he believe the evidence of his own senses? Surely everybody in St. Petersburg knew that he, of all the great nobles in the capital, was the one whose autocratic ways were best known. All his guests knew it-and yet here, an unknown girl, an humble musician, dared to stand before him, under his own roof, and to fling in his face the bold defiance, "I shall not obey you!"

Paul Nazimoff's face, flushed before, now turned to a ghastly white, and his eyes seemed to turn to coals of fire. He no longer shouted. He appeared calm, but it was the calmness of the tiger about to spring on his unsuspecting victim.

'And I swear"-the words came slowly, with a hissing sound, from between the lips-"and I swear you shall obey me. You forget who I am. I am Paul, Count Nazimoff."

"And I swear I shall not obey you. l am Ilda Barosky, the daughter of an exile, and I shall not play 'God Save the Czar!'"

No one spoke.

The strain was fearfully intense. Paul Nazimoff shook for a moment as the tree shakes when it feels the first blast of the hurricane! The storm was now beyond control. He forgot himself, his guests, his position, manhood, nobility-all-everything. With an oath he snatched the whip from the hands of Hanajka and raising it advanced a step toward the girl.

"Father!" "Count Nazimoff!"

The two expressions rang out as one -the first by Alexis, the other by

The answer of Ilda Barosky, shrill and clear as a trumpet sound, rang out, as with a quick motion she raised the violin far above her head, and, before any one could prevent, dashed the instrument into a thousand pieces at the feet of Na-

He was baffled-beaten.

There was a gasp as he made a motion with the whip. Cobb and Alexis sprang forward to avert the blow, but it was needless. The whip fell from his hands and he fell forward. The strain had been too much, and the next moment he was unconscious.

With a quick motion Alexis sprang to the side of the girl. "Quick, come with me," he said in a low voice, as he grasped her by the arm. In all the confusion Cobb seemed to keep his mind. "Get her away," he urged Alexis, and at the same moment he supported the stricken count to a low couch where several physicians among the guests attended him. A moment consultation and they decided that it was nothing serious. Paul Nazimoff was suffering from the effects of a shock and overtaxed nerves. It was I all right. A few hours rest and he would be quite himself again.

With a word of apology to the guests for the unhappy affair that had brought the festivities to such an unpleasant termination, Alexis bid good night to such as remained. Cobb he asked not to leave him.

Alexis Nazimoff, immediately after the departure of the last of the guests. retired to his own room, accompanied by General Cobb. He was laboring under intense emotion, and it was some minutes before he became sufficiently composed to trust himself to speak. When he became somewhat calmer he turned to the American, and putting out his hand as if to ask for friendship and sympathy, said, in a voice that still indicated the intensity of his feelings: "Cobb, my tate was decided to-night!"

Cobb was about to answer, when, with a movement, Alexis stopped him, and in an impassioned strain broke out: "You do not know-you do not know that she who stood before my

To say that Cobb was astounded mildly expresses it.

He sat amazed and expectant, not knowing what to say. Alexis went on: "Three years ago I first met her, when she was a pupil at the Conservatory. She had appeared before a brilliant assemblage, and won the admiration of all by her wondrous beauty and her genius. I sought and obtained an introduction to her through the Baroness von Rhineberg. I loved her madly, passionately, devotedly-1 loved her then as I love her now. I offered her my name, I asked her to become my wife."

Cobb started. He had anticipated a different avowal, and in his mind had framed a reply to Alexis. But he was not prepared for his.

"Ilda refused," continued Alexis, "unless I could gain my father's consent. My marriage with her, she urged, would be a blow to my fondest hopes of military distinction; would ostracise me in St. Petersburg, and would alienate the affections of my father. All this was true, but I cared nothing for it. I begged, implored her to listen to me-to give her consent. I offered to resign my commission in the army, to leave Russia with her, to make, in short, any sacrifice -but all in vain. My father heard of my love for her and we had a stormy scene, which ended in my leaving the nouse. I went directly to see Ilda-she was gone! In vain I sought her everywhere; she had disappeared as if she were no longer on earth. A week later I received peremptory orders to proceed to the frontier and join the Don Cossacks for a campaign in Turkestan, and a

Within this underground apart ment, for such it really was, were gathered, on the same evening as that on which the events described in the last chapter occurred, some twelve or fifteen men and three women. Their faces, darkened even beyond their natural color by the smoke and grime, were marked by suppressed excite ment, while their conversation, animated in the extreme, was carried on in that suppressed way suggestive of extreme caution and ceaseless appre hension.

Sire Sign of Death.

The doctors who soothe the demon of drink in the alcoholic ward of a New York hospital have recently discovered an unfailing indication of the approaching death of patients. One of them described it in this way:

"The great majority of alcoholic patients in this city are truck drivers. Naturally, when they are driving a team and are continually urging their steeds ahead. "The explanation of this lies in the peculiarity of one foot to walk faster than the other. Or, to be more correct, perhaps it should be said that one leg takes a longer stride than the other, and this, combined with the quicker movement, causes one to walk more to one side than the other. It is well known, for instance, that if one is lost in the woods, the tendency is to walk in a circle and eventually to return to about the starting point. This demonstrates the fact, also, that one foot walks faster than the other.

You can try an interesting experiment in this way if you will place two stakes in the lawn about eight feet apart, and then stand off about sixty feet, allow yourself to be blindfolded, and endeavor to walk between ed the proffered hand of Alexis and them. You will find it an almost impossible task, because one foot will go Alexis was on his way to seek Ilda a bit faster than the other, either to the right or left. In the administrative offices of the capital, Washtenaw, I believe, has never been represented.

No matter what may have been our differences at home, Washtenaw has Sample. been unswerving in her loyalty to the state organization and has faithfully served the party in a spirit of happy devotion. The time has come, however, when we wish to name one of the leaders who will march at the head of a sictorious army next November. We have in our midst a charming gentleman, a man of culture and refinement, a liberal supporter of Christian and educational institutions, a captain of industry, an exponent of republicanism, and after New Years we propose to call him State Treasurer Glazier of Washtenaw county.

There is no halting for republicanism. We have set a high standard. We are compassed about with a cloud of witrun with patience the race that is set before us. Conscious of our high calling, let us press forward to victory. In honor preferring one another, let us put to shame the bickerings and discord of other political parties and, by perfect harmony and united effort, make Washtenaw republicanism known to every wherever that republicanism is known let it be recognized as the republicanism of Lincoln and Blaine and McKinley and Roosevelt and none shall be ashamed!

At the conclusion of the speech Hon. John Campbell was chosen temporary secretary, and Frank Creech was named as Mr. Campbell's deputy. Two tellers, Geo. H, Fischer and John Munn, were also named and the officers of the convention weae then sworn by Col. H. S. Dean.

The following committees were then named by the chair: On Resolutions-Hon. A. J. Sawyer journed until 2 o'clock. When the convention reassembled at 2 o'clock the committee on credentials reported no contests and every ward mitted the following: 1st-That the temporary officers of the convention be made permanent.

arge to the state nominating convenbion at Detroit, June 30, and one delegate at large to the state judicial convention at Saginaw, Sept. 7.

4th-The election of 20 delegates to each of said conventions. But your committee would recommend that the 20 delegates to the state nominating convention, as a matter of courtesy to Washtenaw county's candidate for state treasurer, Hon. Frank P. Glazier, be named by him, and that the 20 delegates to the judicial convention be elected, ten each, from the respective county districts.

5th-That if the recommendation prevail Mr. Glazier name the delegates and that the convention then divide by districts for the election of delegates to the indicial convention as provided.

At this point a heated discussion arose concerning the recommendation of the committee to allow Mr. Glazier to name the delegates to the convention at Detroit. The chief objectors were Col. Dean and Capt. E. P. Allen, but inasmuch as both these gentlemen were more or less committed to the practice in times past, their arguments lacked the force of unselfish devotion to a principle, and so far as giving Mr. Glazier the enthusiastic backing of the republicans of Washtenaw the convention was for that almost unanimously, and the report of the committee was adopted by a rising vote of about 30 against to 200 for.

Hon. W. W. Wedemeyer was then elected delegate at large to the state convention at Detroit, and the same honor was given Hon. A. J. Sawyer, sr., as dean of the Washtenaw county bar, to the judicial convention in Saginaw. The convention then divided that the table first and second districts might elect son.

As per the order of business the com mittee on resolutions next reported. There were quite a number in the convention who favored an endorsement of the specific brand of primary reform as outlined in the so-called Colby bill. A. J. Waters, of Manchester, was first on his feet to ask such a modification of the resolutions, but he gave place to Capt Allen who had his ideas embodied in a written resolution. The discussion that ensued was spirited and interesting. nesses of our past successes and must The debate seemed to turn on the point whether or not the convention ought to commit itself to any one specific plan for the accomplishment of primary reform. The convention seemed argeed that greater safeguards should be thrown around the nominating system, but the majority were unwilling to go citizen of the Peninsular State. This compelled the management to either pay taxes on the excess or own up. Mr. Simpson was finally authorized to remove the lid, and the matter became public property.

Mr. Simpson stated that items amounting to an average of a million dollars a year had been shifted from the operating expense account in the years 1900, 1901 and 1902. The object was to show a more prosperous condition of affairs, than existed. In his direct testimony on behalf of the railroad, which is trying to reduce the intangible valuation given it, he produced the reports made by the directors to the stockholders in those three criminals, among them Jack White, years. Going over the reports item by item, he specified those which were ferred from the steel cages to the not correct.

In the 1900 report he picked out items aggregating over $940,000, which he said should have been added to operating expenses. Had this been done, irstead of a dividend and surplus there would not have been enough ner earnings to have paid interest on bonds.

TOOK FIGHT OUT OF BULL.

Well Managed Automobile Too Much for Savage Animal.

Dr. John Phillips owns several farms in Essex, England, and, as he visits them frequently, he recently ourchased an automobile and discarded the carriage in which he had traveled over his broad acres for many years. With his new acquisition he was mightily pleased until he happened one day to drive through a field in which a savage bull was grazing. The moment the animal saw the automobile it started to its feet and in the twinkling of an eye came helter-skelter for Mr. Phillips. The latter was equal to the emer-

Increasing his speed, he charged for the infuriated animal and promptly knocked it down. In a second, however, the bull was again on its feet and, with head lowered, was preparing for a second rush, but the farmer was too quick for it, for, turning the automobile, he charged again, and struck the bull in the rear with such force that it was almost knocked nights, as it was some trouble to shut senseless. This was the end of the combat, for as soon as it recovered from its amazement the bull sneaked owner shut the door after that. A away, and never since then has it ventured to renew the attack, though pane of glass in a window adjoining Mr. Phillips frequently drives close the roosts of the poultry. It was Taught by Mistakes.

We learn much from our mistakes, and the lessons we so learn are impressed upon us. Every poultry raiser could cite a large number of disastrous accidents occurring as the result of precautions not taken. One man had two beautiful broods of half grown Plymouth Rocks. He had them in two coops, the slats of which were but indifferently nailed on. Two cats got in one night and slaughtered all the feathered innocents. That was a lesson in favor of well-built coops, and the owner of the said broods then bought wire netting and made coops that were cat-proof and rat-proof. Another man had a fine flock of hens, but left the door of their house open it. A mink recognized it as his opportunity and slaughtered 22. The man we know of accidentally broke a March and the winds were cold and the rains frequent. He knew he ought to have the window fixed at once, but did not. In a week two of the birds had swelled heads and the man began to doctor for roup. But that was only the beginning. The roup had come in An English writer, commenting on through the broken window, and it staid with the flock for four months. The man fixed the broken window and moved his fowls to a new poultry house, but the roup remained. After he had lost 46 birds he killed the 40 poultry business for a year, to give his yards a chance to cleanse themselves through the processes of na-

We knew of a man that had 200 young chicks, the result of setting three or four hundred eggs under a large number of hens. He staked each hen in the yard and left a box for each hen and brood to run under. It would be so nice and natural for them with a board at the bottom. One night there came a tremendous downpour of rain, the water falling with such rapidity that it could not run off the level land fast enough to prevent the inundation of the coops surrounded as they were by fences and walks. By the glare of the flashes of lightning the man succeeded in saving a part of the frightened broods. After that none of his chicas slept on the ground.

A farmer that had been raising chickens for a good many years thought he had learned about all there was to learn. He at least had learned one thing well, he believed, and that was that lard alone would kill chicken lice without the help of kerose But once he wanted to save time, and instead of giving the chicks several treatments with grease a few days apart, decided to do the job up at one time. If a little grease was good, more should be better. So he greased the chicks all over. But too much grease is fatal to chicks, and this man lost thirteen out of sixteen so greased. But he didn't make that

These are most abundant in the spring and summer months, and it is at this time that the chickens thrive. To secure the best results, foods simulating both the composition and the mechanical character of these should be supplied. #### THE MACCABEE FEAST

The Contest For Membership Resulted in the Victorious Whites Being Tendered a Banquet by the Losing Reds.

Maccabees, their wives and children and other adherents to the number of over 400 gathered Monday evening and sat down to a rib distending feast laid on tables at the town hall.

The reason of this occasion grew out of the contest for membership which began March 10 and ended April 29. At the outset the lodge was evenly divided 85 members on a side called respectively the Whites and Reds. Fred Fuller captained the Whites and Tom Hughes the Reds. The contest was exciting from the start, first one side was ahead sure to be opened to Ann Arbor. and then another and the increasing rivalry resulted in bringing into the organization many who would not otherwise have had the benefits of the order brought to their attention.

On April 29 the contest closed and when the smoke had cleared away it was found that 97 beneficiary members had been added to the Chelsea Tent, and that the Whites had won over the Reds by a narrow margin of four. As per the understanding before the beginning of the contest the defeated side was to give the victorious ones a banquet.

The Reds, true to their agreement, Monday evening invited in their victorious brethren to a banquet that in the matter of all appointments and numbers present is seldom equalled in Chelsea. Other than the banquet there was a fine musical program rendered and speeches were made. Master at Arms of the Great Camp, R. D. Walker, pre sented Fred Fuller captain of the victorious Whites with a fine emblem of the order which was presented by the Great friends of Mr. and Mrs. Spiegelberg

Altogether the contest and banquet has been profitable to all concerned. The membership of the local lodge has been increased until it now numbers over 300 and others are making application for membership.

BOLAND ROAD, ASSURED.

Work on the Line Now Going Rapidly Forward-Perhaps a Car Will Be Run By the End of the Week,

The Boland road, so far as Chelsea is oncerned is now almost a reality. It is probable that the stringing of the trolley vire, from where the third rail leaves off, is going forward as we go to press as the supports for it were nearly ready yesterday. There still remains 34 poles to set from where they leave off until Main street is reached, but those in charge of the work say the setting of these poles will not take long. The work train, drawn by the loco motive, has this week been in use beween here and Grass Lake and it is said that electrical connections have been made with the third rail and the power house at that place. It has been thought by those in charge of the construction work that a car could be run into Chelsea Saturday evening, but this advent of the trolley car will probably have to be postponed until early next week. Even after the first car comes to town it will probably require about two or three weeks before the road opens on schedule time. A loop, on which the cars may turn, must first be built just east of town. As soon as that is completed the work of opening the road to Dexter will then be commenced, and if opened to Dexter it is Whether it will then be continued eastward cannot as yet be definitely stated, but construction to Ann Arbor is all but
