SENIORS RECEIVE SOUND ADVICE

Delivered at M. E. Church Sunday Evening ---Large Audience Present---All Well Pleased With the Effort,

The Baccalaureate sermon was deivered by Rev. Bastian Smits of the First Congregational church of Jackson drop their hats and pick them up, and to the senior class at the Methodist stand on their heads on the horses' church Sunday evening, June 19. Rev. backs. Smits congratulated the class and Chelsea on having such a large percentage of boys and said that the colleges of the land would not look forward to the propect of becoming young ladies' seminaries if all schools were as well re- through the first tent and saw all the presented.

The "Unity of Life" was the subject of tigers, monkeys, polar bears, ostriches, his address and was centered upon the lions, zebras, elephants, hippopotamus, thought in Philppians 3:13-14 begin- goats, camels, penguins, giraffes, ning "This one thing I do." He said leopards, black bears and many others. that the most successful man or woman is the one who becomes a specialist, that this is an age of specialization. He drew a vivid picture of the sacrifices which must be made if one is to attain the highest success in his chosen line of work but warned young people against the seeming success of which the world might approve and urged There we saw men looping the gap and them to "press toward the mark for the men and ladies performing. Two clowns prize of the high calling of God in Christ and Buster Brown and his dog came.

Rev. Smits is a pleasing and forceful speaker and his address was appreciated by a large audience who are deeply interested in the welfare and future poured all over them. Another clown of the eight young people who form the came out with a dog. The dog took the class of 1904.

The Junior class of the high school revived a custom that has been in Friday evening they tendered the Senior class and high school teachers a reception at the home of Prof. and Mrs. F. E. Wilcox. The house and porch were tastily decorated for the occasion Barnum & Bailey's circus. We passed and presented a fine appearance. The Seniors were each presented with two precepts by the Juniors, which were to be used in future life. Light refreshments were served, after which the company adjourned to their respective homes, the Seniors thinking of the fact that their high school days were over and the Juniors of the time when they would be entertained as Seniors by those that are now Sophmores.

WANTED NO LIME IN SHOES.

Wealthy Contractor Did Not Want the Salesman to Give Him Away.

There is a rich contractor living out in Germantown about whom many amusing stories are told. For years he has purchased his shoes at the one place, a little shop on Main street, and thither he repaired the other day, and was waited on by a new clerk, who didn't know him. The new clerk, sizing the customer up as a laboring man, tried on a pair of cheap brogans, which suited the contractor, except that he thought them a trifle hard to pull on.

"I'll fix that all right," said the clerk, and he dusted a little powder in each shoe. Much to his surprise the customer grew livid with rage.

"What d'ye mane by insultin' me that way?" he demanded. Just then the proprietor came in and inquired as to the trouble.

"The young dude is afther putting chloride o' lime in me shoes!" exclaimed the irate contractor. "Tis an insult!"

The proprietor explained that the supposed chloride of lime was merely a harmless powder to make the shoe go on with greater comfort, and the old man was satisfied .- Philadelphis Record.

HOT SPRINGS OF MONGOLIA.

uxurious Surroundings for Bathing Are Not Demanded.

A traveler in Mongolia writes: There are some hot springs by the road about twenty miles north of Chingpeng. The place is named Tangshan. The arrangements for those anxious to benefit by their healing properties are very primitive. A row of twenty or thirty wooden boxes the size of an ordinary packing case are ranged beside the road. In these sit bathers of every age and both sexes, with their heads protruding. Attendants with buckets continuously refill the boxes from the springs. For less luxurious bathers there is accommodation in a pool which has been dug out close by. In this they squat, scooping up the water and pouring it over their heads with brass basins. It is curious to reflect that establishments like Homburg and Aix-les-Bains have had their origin in such tive races there are none better qualified to act as guardians of the law than the Zulus. They are the aristocrats, of Africa, dignified, honorable and trustworthy to a degree. They are far finer men physically than the ordinary Kaffirs, and this is an additional qualification as regards their courage, that was sufficiently shown in their battles with British troops in the old days. Imitation, it is said, is the sincerest flattery, and this is probably why natives of inferior races often try to pass themselves off as Zulus, although they seldom succeed in securing the distinction of entering the Zulu police force.

Joke Not on Him.

At Oxford university a certain undergraduate was adjudged too fond of dress, and it was decided to correct this weakness by dropping him bodily into a fountain. The victim was seized one night when attired in evening dress and promptly immersed. To the surprise of his assailants, he made no resistance, but seemed thoroughly to enjoy his bath. "This won't improve your clothes, old man," said their leader. "Oh, these aren't mine," he replied, mildly. "I heard what was on, so I slipped in and borrowed your dress things for the occasion."

I soon tired of my position and at night frequently turned from side to side and got up in the morning feeling as unrefreshed as I was when I went to bed. The secretions from the kidneys became irregular, highly colored and unnatural and deposited a heavy sediment. I was also bothered with spells of dizziness and felt in general poor health. I had taken bottle after bottle of medicine but nothing appeared to do me any good I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills and procured them from Johnson & Henderson's drug store. "DO IT TO-DAY."

The time-worn injunction, "Never put off 'til tomorrow what you can do today," is now generally presented in this form: "Do it today!" That is the terse advice we want to give you about that hacking cough or demoralizing cold with which you have been strugg. ing for several days, perhaps weeks.

Take some reliable remedy for it today and let that remedy be Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which has been in use for over thirty-five years. A few doses of it will undoubtedly relieve your cough or cold, and its continued use for a few days will cure you completely. No matter how deep seated your cough even if dread consumption has attacked even if dread consumption has attacked vour lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble. Fortunately the island is largemore than 300 miles each way-and the rivers very numerous, so that it will be some time before the country is crowded. Thus far only a very few of the most accessible rivers have been fished in at all. Along the east coast and the northern peninsula are many rivers that have never known a fisherman. At the present time these are rather difficult of access by land, it is true, but by chatering a small vessel fishermen can, at moderate cost, visit the most remote of them and be sure of almost unlimited in its architecture flung into a great mountain gorge; its streets sometimes so narrow that neighbors are neighbors indeed; streets that ascend the mountain side with amazing steepness, with here and there massive arches thrown across, and everywhere color to delight an artist.

There is nothing like it anywhere else; for sheer picturesqueness, for something that seems remote from America-a city that might be found in the heart of Asia or in northern Africa-Guanajuato is without peer or rival. And underneath these streets on rainy afternoons the water pours in torrents, are some of the deepest mines in the world, mines whose production in silver and gold, the ore often rich in the yellow metal, now reaches to more than a thousand million dollars.

Families here have in the past been enriched beyond the dreams of avarice: daughters of the great miners have astonished the capitals of Europe with their lavishness, and the men have squandered wealth with open hand in Paris, in the great gambling palaces of the old world, or built them mansions in the city of Mexico.

Mines there are here dating back to 1548, to the days when the king's conductas, or treasure trains, with their little flags flying, passed safely down the long and dutsy roads to the capital where the viceroys ruled. There is always romance in mining, and nowhere more of it than here. The product of the mines of Guanajuato, flung into Spain, upset the ratio of gold and silver in distant India in the years when the emperors reigned.

There have been years of "bonanza," when the great mine owners lived with the luxury of princes, when costly wines and furnishings for their houses, ordered from France and ble roads from distant Vera Cruz, and methods of transportation.

It has taken an English inventor to supply an improvement over the old form of awning, as shown in the illustration. Instead of attaching the upper edge of the awning to the window casing by tacks or otherwise, this awning is mounted on a spring roller, which lies back of the face board of the frame in a horizontal recess or pocket formed for the purpose. It will be noticed that the face board of the pocket is secured to the outer end of the awning and to the swinging rods which maintain the awning at an angle with the window frame. would accomplish wonders."

It has been decided that the average height of all the waves running in a gale in open sea are about twenty feet. But the height of individual waves varies considerably. Vaughan Cornish reports to the Royal Geographical society: "During a strong gale in the north Atlantic, with a heavy sea of more than ordinary regularity, I have observed in the course . of a morning numerous waves from thirty feet up to a measured height of not less than forty feet, when the average of all the waves was perhaps twenty-five feet. It is, I think, clear that in any statement we may make as to the size of the waves in a gale at sea, we ought not to neglect the mention of the larger waves which occur at fairly frequent intervals. These, which I term the ordinary maximum waves, are, I think, what seamen really refer to when they state the size Admiral Walker, since becoming of the waves met with during a storm at sea. 'About forty feet' is a common estimate of the height of the larger waves in a severe gale in the north Atlantic, and this estimate corded average of little more than twenty feet."

Of all the members of the moderates, none had opposed the extreme views and aims of Oraminsky and his following with greater zeal and earnestness than Ivan Barosky. The son of an exile-an exile as he believed cruelly and unjustly punished-Ivan was as intense in his enmity to the existing powers in Russia as was Oraminsky himself. But he was too able and farseeing, too progressive and cautious to commit himself to what he truly believed to be a course of action that would alienate from the Russian revolutionists the support and sympathy of the friends of liberty in every country in Europe.

Oraminsky's impassioned reply, and the favor with which it had been received, convinced Ivan that further discussion would be futile.

Evidently a signal for the expression of intense anxiety changed instantly to one of relief; the people resumed their seats, and Ivan, with a commanding gesture, which Oraminsky himself submitted to, exclaimed, throughout Europe. It had been "A friend! Open the door, Aronsky." found by the side of the Czar Alexan-swiftly descended the steps and came into the midst of the expectant group. Her face was flushed with excitement, her fine hair disheveled, and her whole appearance indicated that. she was laboring under some intense mental strain.

Ivan sprang to her side. "Ilda, my sister, what has happen-

Ilda gazed wildly for a moment, and then, her voice quivering with emotion, she spoke in quick, disjointed sentences: "Oh, infamy! Oh, cruelcoward-the lash-Alexis-I will be avenged-terribly avenged-do you hear? The cruel Nazimoff; oh, it was cowardly-" and, overcome by the recollection of the terrible ordeal through which she has passed, the girl sank into a chair, burying her face in her hands, and shaking like an aspen leaf from the violence of the conflicting emotions.

After having recovered in some degree, Ilda told the story of the night The sudden illness of Anna Dorski had deprived the famous orchestra of its great soloist, and at the last moment Anna appealed to Ilda to take her place. In vain Ilda urged that she had a reason for not going to the Nazimoff mansion, and it was only when the famous leader himself begged her, with his daughter, not to place him in a false position before the assembled aristocracy of the capital, that she gave a reluctant consent.

When Ilda reached the part of her story where she was brought by violence into the room, her audience manifested intense interest, and she proceeded amid deepest silence. But when she told of Nazimoff raising the whip, the indignation of all present could no longer be restrained. "Coward!" "Wretch!" and "Woman beater!" were some of the male dictions hurled at Nazimoff, and threats, deep and earnest, of dire vengeance for the deed, were uttered on

But it was when she spoke of her refusal to play "God Save the Czar." and of her sending the violin crashing into a thousand pieces at the foot of Nazimoff, that the excitement broke all bounds.

"Death to the Nazimoff!" was one remark, and the refrain was taken up by all present.

Ivan had taken ilda a little apart from the rest, and was doing what he could to restore her to calmness. He seemed anxious to gain every particular, even to the smallest and apparently most unimportant detail of what had occurred. But particularly was he concerned about Alexis Nazimoff. "What did he look like? How did he act? What did he say?" with these and a score of other questions Ivan plied his sister, getting of course little or no information beyond what Ilda had told him at the beginning.

In the meantime, under the direction of Oraminsky, the assemblage began putting in operation the "rule of the order" to decide upon whom should fall the task of avenging Ilda's

"And now for the Red Bearty." From around her neck, fastened by a string, Hersy produced a small

As he dropped the red rouble in with the rest, Oraminsky shook the bag and one by one the men approached and drew. Ivan took his chance with the rest.

"Glad I am that it is so!" exclaimed Ivan. "I will wipe out Nazimoff's insult in a way that will show to all the world how a Russian can avenge a sister's injury. And now, friends,' he went on, as he made a motion to Ilda to prepare to accompany him, what is your last answer-the final reply to the leaders of our section? Will you defer action longer, or will you take issue with us and act alone?

Oraminsky advanced.

"Say to-" he spoke no further. Half a dozen hands went up at once with the signal for silence. Footsteps were again heard at a distance in the frosty night.

With a movement Ivan and Oraminsky both raised their hands. The people in two rows ranged

His Name Was George.

"Funny thing happened this trip," said the sleeping car conductor. "Just as the porter was yelling 'First call for breakfast on the dining car!' a very fat, elderly, sober-faced, respectable old lady came jolting down the aisle, looking at the curtains that were still up in front of most of the berths, and at last stopping before me, she poked her umbrella at upper

"Kitty!" she called, "where are you? Is that you up there?'

"There wasn't any answer, and the old lady got right mad. She beat a regular tateo on the brass curtain rod and fairly yelled:

"'Kitty, Kitty! Get up right away! Why don't you answer me? It's time for you to get up, Kitty! Breakfast is ready. Kitty, Kitty, get up!'

"Then the curtains of upper ten were pulled apart. A large red face, with long, black whiskers on the lower half of it, was poked out, and a her to marry him.

THE BIRDS

RESULTS OF THE EFFORTS TO SAVE THE SONGSTERS.

They Were More Successful Than Was Generally Expected-Many People Have Become Interested in the Movement.

When, a short time ago, the work of saving the starving birds was begun by distributing food in the gardens fields and woods, many people were very skeptical as to results. I heard honest doubts expressed concerning the probability of the wild birds approaching very close to food which lay in the fields, on the bare spaces cleared with the snow shovels. It was suggested that these spaces would look so unnatural that most birds would be suspicious and would keep away on general principles. The results have shown that in future no one need allow such doubts to deter them from handling a snow shovel in this good cause; whatever suspicions the birds may have had, they evidently laid them aside very promptly, and took care that whatever other evils might befall, death by starvation should be avoided. In my own town, Stoneham, Mass.

40 men and boys, mostly students of the high school, in one morning estabished about 50 feeding stations for the birds over an area of about ten square miles, and in many cases there were immediate results. The leader of one squad reported that at one point, even as the grain was being scattered on the uncovered ground, a flock of 20 quail approached within six feet of the relief party, and moved away only because a newspaper representative who was present tried to get too close a snapshot of them. This flock of quail returned to the spot the next day, and with hem two ruffled grouse, and as they were unmolested, it is not to be doubted that | cal. they will visit this feeding station as often as they find themselves in need of

Personally, I was present at the establishment of eight feeding stations, and when I inspected these the next day I found that every one of them had been visited by birds. Judging by the foot prints in and about the cleared spaces, two had been patronized by crows only, but small birds were feeding or had been feeding at all the others. At one place two blue jays were enjoying themselves, hopping about and filling their throats and bills with cracked corn, afterwards flying off with their cargoes. At another point I saw a mixed flock of 20-juncos and tree sparrows; at another a flock of ten tree sparrows with a house sparrow among flock of 30 snow buntings. At one place where suet had been tied to the branches and trunk of a tree, there was a flock of eight chicadees, all busy eating or carrying away little lumps to store in the bark of other trees, and not far off, on the side of a road, a redbreasted nuthatch was hammering vigorously at a piece of frozen fat which he had discovered nailed to a branch. Reports from other members of the relief party showed that of the 20 feeding stations inspected within 48 hours after their establishment, there were having been visited by birds.
