The census of 1900 shows that there were 1,635 who resided here and the present one makes the number 1,783 of which Lima claims 68 and Sylvan 1715, the village being in portions of both townships.

The returns show that only Ann Arbor, Sylvan, Saline, Milan and Ypsilanti have gained. The present population of the county is 46,676 and in 1900 it was 47,761, showing a loss for the whole county of 1,085. The returns for the two years are given in full as follows:

A BAD RUNAWAY

Team Became Frightened by an Automobile and the Occupants of the Carriage Were Shaken Up.

Sunday about noon, as Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Miller and some of the members of their family were returning to their home from church, and when near the Skinner farm the team became frightened by an automobile that was coming toward them and ran away.

The team at the time the accident happened were descending the hill and in attempting to turn around ran the carriage on to the high embankment and the vehicle was tipped over throwing some of the parties to the ground and the others were dragged some distance before the animals got freed from the conveyance. After getting away from the carriage the frightened animals continued on their mad race until they reached the intersection of Main and Summit streets where they brought up one on either side of a telephone pole seemingly none the worse from the effects of their race of nearly two miles.

While all of the party was frightened and more or less bruised but no serious results will follow the catastrophe. Arthur Looney, who was driving the team, probably was the one that will suffer the most, he had one of his shoulders dislocated, face considerably scratched up, and his body more or less bruised, the entire party had a very narrow escape. The auto was owned by residents of Ypsilanti.

The carriage and harness came out of the melee badly wrecked and the repair bill will amount to several dollars.

COMMITTEE WAS APPOINTED

Transportation for the Workmen at Four Mile Lake--Calls Forth Considerable Discussion.

There was a public meeting at the town hall last Thursday evening in response to the call issued for the purpose of discussing the street railway situation.

Several of the business men were called upon to give their views on the subject and all thought that the most feasible plan, if either, the D. Y. A. & J. or the so-called Boland line were to be taken up, it would be better for the business interests of Chelsea to have the route run via the Cement Plant at Four Mile Lake and Dexter.

A committee of five was appointed consisting of L. T. Freeman, Jazb Bacon, B. Parker, Jas. Taylor and W. P. Schenk, who with a like number from Dexter, were instructed to meet the officials of both companies and learn if there was any possible chance to either complete the Boland route, or induce the other line to look with favor toward furnishing means of transportation for the workmen who are engaged at the cement plant both from this place and Dexter.

As the White Portland Cement plant is fast nearing completion, it behooves the enterprising business men of Chelsea to give this matter of transportation for the workmen employed at the cement works more than a passing thought. As a matter of fact, unless there is some other means, rather than the present handcar coaches, found, there will be a small sized village growing up a short distance to the east of us and if that is allowed to take place for the want of proper transportation for the employees of the new enterprise, Chelsea and Dexter merchants must of necessity, expect to see other merchants locate within the confines of the new burg. Get together gentlemen and try to have one or the other line build via the cement works.

THE GRANGE PICNIC

Fair Attendance at Cavanaugh Lake Saturday--The Address a Good One--The Local and County Granges Meet.

Cavanaugh Lake was the scene of much good fellowship Saturday afternoon, when the Washtenaw Pomona, Cavanaugh and other granges met as a picnic party. The rain of Friday night and the threatening weather of Saturday forenoon caused many to remain at home, who had intended to meet with their brethren, and others braved the threatening elements and went to the appointed place until enough had assembled, so that when called together, for the program the audience was a good sized body.

This like all other gathering of a similar nature was termed a basket picnic and the grangers and their wives all came with well filled receptacles that made, when spread out, a feast that might well satisfy the most fastidious epicurean, and all did ample justice to the handicraft of the matrons. W. F. Hill, master of the Pennsylvania state grange, who had been engaged to deliver the address of the day was present and gave the patrons of husbandry a good talk along the lines of their chosen vocation, that was listened to with rapt attention. Every number of the entire program was carried out with marked ability that showed each participant had become master of the subject assigned them.

The afternoon brought forth considerable enthusiasm and all renewed friendships of long standing and when the hour arrived for the homeward journey all departed with assurances that the afternoon had been one well spent both intellectually and socially.

WILL DELIVER A LECTURE.

The Mysterious Stranger Who Has Done so Much for the U. of M. is a Michigan Man.

Dr. J. C. Leonard, the mysterious benefactor of the University of Michigan, has again been heard from. Major Harrison Soule is in possession of two newspapers from Boise, Idaho, one of which contains an interesting article written by Dr. Leonard: "In the Gold Fields of '62," which is a review of past and present conditions in Idaho with a few words on irrigation. The other paper contains a description of Dr. Leonard's life, which is illustrated by a half-tone of the Doctor. He was born in Michigan in 1843 and went west in 1860. During the years which have elapsed since that time Dr. Leonard has led a nomadic life, drifting all over the West and in his wanderings picking up curios, natural history specimens, archeological treasures and many strange and curious things. That he has not forgotten the state of his birth is evidenced by many objects sent from time to time to the University. Indeed there is one case in the museum which contains nothing, but his gifts and naturalists and scientists from all over the country come here purposely to see them. During the last twelve years he has driven one team of mules over forty thousand miles, going north in the summer and in the winter working among the ruins in Arizona. Dr. Leonard intends to come east in September and will visit Ann Arbor, where he will lecture on the "Curios of Cliff-dwellers of Prehistoric Times."—Ann Arbor Times.

CAR STRUCK THRESHING MACHINE.

Limited car No. 3 on the Jackson & Battle Creek Traction Co. struck a threshing machine at 9:30 o'clock last Friday morning two miles west of Jackson where the interurban crosses both the highway and the Michigan Central tracks. Five men were cut and bruised including J. A. Bucknall, general passenger and freight agent, but none seriously. The threshing machine was destroyed and the traction engine cut loose and landed on the Michigan Central tracks, blocking traffic for half an hour. There were forty passengers in the car, including the Tecumseh baseball team. None of the latter was injured.

GERMAN-AMERICAN DAY.

HELD FORTH AT ANN ARBOR.

Neither Chelsea nor Jackson Vereins Took an Active Part--It Was a Success and Afforded Considerable Amusement.

German-American Day, celebrated in Ann Arbor last Thursday, called together residents from all over Washtenaw county in honor of the founding of Germantown, Pennsylvania, in anti-revolution days. This anniversary is called by the Arbeiter Verein, a benevolent society, German-American Day, and is celebrated extensively throughout the United States.

The German societies of Chelsea and Jackson in years past have taken active parts but this year both were conspicuously absent, most of the members staying at home and the crowd was not as large as usual, yet enough gathered at the appointed rendezvous to make the gathering a large and successful one.

The oration of the day was delivered by George Haller in German. The subject was the influence of the German citizens of the United States in building and maintaining the republic. He spoke of the revolutionary and civil war soldiers of German descent and of the Germans who have helped the country in its commercial and industrial progress. He referred to the reflex influence that the German-Americans have had upon the old Fatherland by keeping up a bond of sympathy between the two countries and by returning to the old world and bringing back with them progressive ideas. The speech of welcome was made by Mayor Brown.

Everybody partook of the amber fluid, but capacities seemed to be greater than normal, for there was comparatively little drunkenness. "Hil-lee hi-lo," "Ach, du lieber Augustin," "Ich bin ein Musikant" and the other well known favorites did faithful services all day and well into the night, but the hilarity was all good-natured and did not overstep the bounds of the law. The nearest approach to an untoward incident was when an Irishman started to sing, "It was the Dutch." The crowd started for him, but he escaped by swift sprinting. The evening was taken up with social sessions, enlivened by a fine display of fireworks. Jackson was chosen as the place for holding the celebration next year.

Late in the evening the belated traveler could hear some one make the remark "Donnerwetter, what a day we had already yet," as some of the celebrators were homeward bound.

THE STATE FAIR.

Year by year the state fair of Michigan has grown in size and importance, and more and more is it looked forward to and its coming eagerly awaited by thousands. At Pontiac, September 12-16, the fair for 1904 will surpass all previous efforts if the hopes and expectations of those in charge are realized. The handsome premium list which is now being sent out, is brim full of interesting information. New features have been added, and each day will be a continual round of enjoyment for young and old alike.

The grounds will be in ideal condition this fall; the work of improvement done last year was of a permanent nature, and this, supplemented by additions this fall will make the grounds more satisfactory than ever before. Secretary Butterfield predicts that this will be one of the most instructive fairs ever held. A grange headquarters tent will be a feature. The mammoth grand-stand, with a normal seating capacity of 4,000, has been enlarged this year to accommodate the crowds. No better testimonial of the popularity of the fair needs to be cited than that this stand was last year found to be far too small. One thousand seats are to be added.

A Wind Call.

Dust thou art and unto dust,
Playfellow, return thou must;
Lingering death it is to stay
In the prison-house of clay—
Bricks of Egypt year by year
Walling up a sepulcher.

Better far the soul to free
From its close captivity
And with us, thy comrades, go
Where'er we list to blow,
Come! for soon again to dust,
Playfellow, return thou must.

The Love Chase

BY KEBLE HOWARD

"There's the church!" cried Monica.

"Where?" asked Jack, a little indifferently.

"There! Can't you see the spire just peeping through the trees? Put your head out of the window."

"No, thank you. I might get a spark or something in my eye."

Monica sighed deeply. "I think you might try," she protested.

"I am trying. I've been trying ever since we left Baker street. I am bound to admit, however, that up to the present—"

"That'll do. If I'd known you were not going to play the game, I—"

Jack rose hastily, took off his straw hat, and thrust his head out of the window.

"Can you see it?" asked Monica.

"No. Oh, yes! Quite reminds me—Damn! He flung himself back onto the seat and groped in a pocket for his handkerchief."

"Don't say it's a spark!" pleaded Monica.

"I shall call it something worse than that in a minute."

"I'm so sorry. It was my fault. Let me see if I can get it out."

She sat down beside him, took the handkerchief, wetted one corner and screwed it into a point.

"Now, open your eye. Is it at the top or the bottom?"

"I dunno. It's hurting most co-foundedly, wherever it is."

"Poor boy! Try to keep quite still. Look down."

I am looking down. Don't keep on jabbing me like that."

"I'm not jabbing, Jack. It's no use in getting in a temper about it. I'm doing my best."

"Better leave it alone and let it come out by itself."

"Then it may go on hurting you all day. Keep still a moment! I see it!"

"Look out!"

"Got 'im! It's only a tiny little speck, after all."

"You wouldn't think it so tiny if it had been in your eye, I'll bet."

"I expect not. Hallo! Here we are!"

The train slowed down and stopped with a jerk at a small country station. Jack and Monica alighted.

"That's a new porter," whispered Monica, as they descended the steps.

"Very likely. They don't generally keep them at stations like this for five years, you know."

"Five years isn't so very long."

Jack's tone was significant. Monica said nothing.

They turned the corner rather shyly and walked through the village as carelessly as might be.

"I wonder if any one will remember us?" said Monica.

"I hope not."

"Why?"

"Oh, I don't know! Only we used to be so frightfully—what d'you call it?"

"I didn't know you objected so strongly to being in love."

"I don't. I mean, I didn't. No, I don't."

They were outside the village now, and a few minutes would bring them to the lane that led to the wood of many memories. Monica stopped,

"Don't keep on jabbing like that," said Monica, and looked her husband squarely in the face.

"Before we go any further," she began, "I should like—"

"A drink? We've passed all the pubs."

"Don't be vulgar. I should like to know whether you are really serious."

She stopped short, turned her back on him and whipped out her handkerchief.

"Please don't cry," he pleaded. She waved him back. Was it possible that—? Yes! Hurray! Monica had sneezed.—Sketch.

Strange Myths of the Tibetans.

The Tibetans have numberless strange myths, one, the most curious, pertaining to the sun, moon and stars. The sun is believed to be an immense ball of yak meat and fat, whereon the spirits of departed ancestors are supposed to feast, the light being caused by its heated condition. The stars are portions of this immense feast, which, dropping to earth, give birth to animals for the sustenance of suffering humanity. The moon is a lesser ball of similar texture as the sun, in use while the larger one is being replenished for the morrow. When sun or moon fails to appear in cloudy days and nights it means that the deities are undergoing a period of fasting and religious abnegation. And the parched and sterile condition of bleak regions is ascribed to the fact that many thousand years ago the sun ball slipped from the hands of its keepers, descended too near the earth, and, before being recaptured, scorched those parts with which it came in contact.—Booklovers' Magazine.

Indictment of Aristocracy.

That the idle rich of to-day are worse than the French aristocracy is the opinion expressed by Lady Helen Forbes in a recent number of an English magazine. The French aristocracy, she says, was obliged by the despotism of the crown to live in the capital and grind down its dependents, but the modern idle rich live the life they lead from choice. And the women she finds are worse than the men, at least in England. When the South African war came to prove the mettle of the country, many of the men of the idle rich stood the test. They went out and faced reality. But the women failed. Some of them, too, went out to South Africa with a lie in their mouths, and a particularly black and cruel lie, too. They made the life-and-death struggle of the empire an occasion for a picnic, an assignment with lovers, under cover of a pretended desire to be of use.

Could Afford Philosophy.

"Put yourself in my place, young man. Would you want your only daughter to marry a penniless youth?"

"Put yourself in my place, sir. Would you want to remain a penniless youth when there were rich men's daughters to marry?"

"You confess that you'd marry my child simply for her father's wealth?"

"And you confess that you'd withhold her from me simply because of my poverty?"

"What other reason do I need?"

"What other reason could influence you?"

"This talk is quite useless."

"Quite."

"We have nothing to gain by it."

"Absolutely nothing."

"You take it philosophically."

"Why shouldn't I? Your daughter and I were married a month ago."

—Stray Stories.

Yes! Hurray! Monica had sneezed!

Half-way up the lane they came to a cottage.

Five years ago they had been wont to take tea at that cottage. The old lady who made the tea was still making it and they stayed there for quite an hour.

"Doesn't this remind you?" whispered Monica.

"It's the very same blend," said Jack, peering into his cup with a sentimental eye.

Monica's heart sank. There was nothing left for it but the wood.

At the top of the lane they climbed a stile, and followed a narrow, winding path that led between two banks of yellowing corn. The sun was setting. Monica was glad of that. Jack, on the other hand, looked at his watch.

"There's plenty of time," Monica expostulated.

"The evenings are apt to be chilly," said Jack.

"Anyhow, you've got to wait until dusk. You promised."

"All right, but it's not very sporting to ask favors after dinner."

"I won't ask any favors at all in future."

They had come to the edge of the wood. Monica paused irresolutely.

"Perhaps we are making a mistake after all," she observed. Her eyes were very wide open, for she was looking down a flickering glade that led to a dell. It was in that dell that the primroses used to grow. Incidentally, too, Jack had proposed to her there.

"Let's chance it," he suggested, and began to make a way for her through the brambles.

They wandered about the wood for rather more than an hour. Here was the curious little knoll that Monica had called her throne; there the ditch that Jack had fallen into because he would look at Monica instead of where he was going. To-day he was picking his way with the utmost care.

At last it began to grow dusk. Jack knocked the ashes out of his pipe and buttoned up his coat. Monica, pretending not to notice him, led him to the dell.

"Better not climb down," said Jack. "It's sure to be damp."

"Never mind. Come on!" She seized him by the hand and dragged him down.

"Pretty little spot," said Jack, filling another pipe.

"I love it," she paused a moment, and then added, "Do you remember, Jack?"

"Stop! Don't speak to me for a moment!" His mouth was open, his eyes screwed up. . . . He sneezed.

"You hateful!" cried Monica.

"How could I help it? I told you this place was damp."

"Don't speak to me! I'll never try—"

Here three teacups dropped.—London Sporting News.

Life in Chile

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

To vegetate in a delightful climate, whose hottest sunbeams are cooled by breezes blown from Andean snow fields, exempt from all excitements except, perhaps, those that spring from natural causes, such as love—that is the delight of life in Chile. To promenade in the cool of the evening in the "Garden of Delight," the public garden of the populace, and still later to attend the opera, or tertulia, as the social gatherings in the private houses are called, is almost the sole diversion of the Chilean.

The fair Chilean rises late, in deshabille she dawdles about, amusing herself with fancy work or nothing at all until sheer ennui drives her forth to seek relaxation in shopping or making calls. Then the glossy hair mounts high on the head in a heap marvelous to behold. She dons a pair of French boots with heels so high one wonders they do not cripple sequently the gentlemen returned to the hotel, while the ladies were compelled to content themselves with bread and butter and, I fear, a few regrets audibly expressed. A friend calling during the evening suggested that we have our meals brought from the cafe—a common custom here—pending the arrival of our cook. One has a set of tins made, fitting one into the other, a wire passing through rings at the sides. The bottom tin contains coals, and the meats, vegetables, etc., are placed above one another in the successive tins.

The strings of tins vary in length according to the magnitude of one's purchase. It was most amusing to me to see men hurrying in every direction with these tins at the dinner hours. We managed to live, or rather exist, in this way for a week, all the food half cold and I always had a horrible suspicion that the tins

the foolish wearer after the day's comfort in slippers. She sallies forth with stately tread ("Solomon in all his glory was never so gorgeously arrayed"), ever closely attended by a servant, who is expected to attend to her most trivial needs.

In the early evening she repairs to the promenade to enjoy a little music or a mild flirtation, the latter being confined discreetly to sighs, eyes and possibly following footsteps. So pass the days in this land of indolence for the women—days go by monotonously, year in and year out.

As for the men, they omit the mass, which the women always attend, their deshabille covered by the long black mantua—covering, indeed, many omissions as regards neatness of toilet. They attend "a little" to any business they may have during the middle of the day, but most diligently to the opera, the promenade and the gaming table for the night. Gambling is a national habit. In most of the well-to-do classes of Valparaiso and Santiago the gaming table is regularly set out and forms the most important feature of private entertainments, like the baccarat of Great Britain, which some time ago plunged his now Royal Highness of England into such torrid water. Even the poorest peons and raggedest gamins may be seen at all hours betting nuncios and centavos (the pennies and nickles of this country) with as much eagerness as the wealthy mine owner stakes his golden ounces. The tallest gambling that ever came under the writer's observation took place on a steamer plying between Copepo and Talcahuano, when a man who had recently struck it rich in the Atacama mines lost more than half his fortune.

It was not difficult to catch the Spanish pronunciation and the following dialogues usually occurred: "Yusero por papas, huevos, beefsteak," (I want potatoes, eggs and beefsteak), to which the servant replied, "Si, senorita, muy bueno." (Very well, Miss).

Our man servant—we are obliged to magnificently style him "majordomo"—takes charge of the dining room, waits at table and acts as chambermaid. It is a singular fact that the chamber "maids" of Chile are almost invariably of the sterner sex.

Up the one staircase everything must come. The first thing I hear uncomfortably early each morning is the step of the water carrier, who, with unnecessary clatter, brings us two kegs of water, daily, for which he is paid $2 per month. Then comes our breadman, to whom we pay 30 cents per day for what our family of five are supposed to consume; then the milkman, charging six cents for half a pint, and, lastly, but surely not the least of necessary evils, the cook, bringing the day's supply of marketing and fuel.

Sunday is the day for complimentary visiting in Chile and in case you have a letter of introduction to Senor So-and-So, and have been recognized by receipt of a card saying he will "celebrate greatly acquaintance with you," and "that his house and all it contains is at your service"—(a meaningless phrase, by the way)—you may call and be received cordially by his wife, who will serve you with tea and entertain you to the best of her ability until midnight, regardless of the host's absence, for he is rarely at home after sunset.

Ladies are seldom attended home by anybody but a servant, no matter what the hour, as in Chile it would be considered very bad form for the man of the house or a man friend to perform this, with us, oftentimes pleasant duty.

Government Building.

$30,000 in a single night. There is a law against gambling, but—well!

In regard to an American wrestling with the mysteries of Chilean house-keeping, I can give you a slight insight into my own. We engaged a cook, who promised faithfully to come on a certain morning, retaining our predecessor's man servant—neither of whom spoke a word of English, while we, unfortunately, were equally ignorant of Spanish. We took possession on the day appointed, but "a la Frisco," no cook appeared. There was nothing in the house but groceries and bread, as at the moment we were unable to buy anything, being unable to speak the language or traffic, consequently the gentlemen returned to the hotel, while the ladies were compelled to content themselves with bread and butter and, I fear, a few regrets audibly expressed. A friend calling during the evening suggested that we have our meals brought from the cafe—a common custom here—pending the arrival of our cook. ## CARE IN TESTING FLOUR.

Big Mills Take Pains to Ascertain Quality of Output.

"It is surprising to note the difference that exists between the various brands of flour," said O. D. Hutchinson, the representative of one of the big mills in Minneapolis, Minn. "It all depends on how the flour is milled and on the kind of wheat from which it is made. Flour made from hard spring wheat will give from twenty to forty more loaves of bread per barrel than that made from the softer winter wheat. It contains a larger percentage of gluten and absorbs more water. The mills are exceedingly careful about the kind of flour they send out, and the testing department is one of the most important branches."

"After the flour is ground comes the crucial test. A sample is taken and made up into bread. We have four bakings a day, and from twenty to thirty loaves are baked each time, each one representing a sample of flour. After the test has been made the bread is turned over to the Associated Charities."

"You may have noticed that the color of flour is no longer a marble white, but a creamy white. This comes from the fact that the rich portion of the grain, right under the woody coating, is ground into the flour. What is left can hardly be called bran, for it is only the coarsest part of the outer fiber."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Trees Make Complaint.

When the trees in his orchard at Fresno, Cal., are getting cold feet or chilled limbs, they call Mr. J. P. Bolton up on the phone, so to speak, and tell him to get up and put a hot water bottle or a blanket on them.

Mr. Bolton has had great trouble with his orchards on the slopes of California mountains, where sudden frosts killed the buds at night.

But necessity proved the mother of an invention, which, though it keeps him awake cold nights, gives him care-free sleep between whistles.

In every row there is a tree fitted out with a thermometer and wires connecting with an electric bell and dial board in his bedroom.

Whenever the temperature is too low for the comfort of the young buds, in any row, the "monitor tree" with the thermometer registers a noisy kick in Mr. Bolton's bedroom and keeps it up until measures have been taken to warm the trees up.

"The method is not to administer whisky or chafe the limbs, but to spread rolls of cloth about the trees, squirt warm water on them and leave tubs of water about. These, by freezing, use up the action of the cold in the atmosphere."

Pay the Fiddler.

Every time the traitor Folly chases Reason from her throne, he has to pay. Someone has to be the victim—some poor sinner must atone.

It's an old and truthful saying—printed on each page of fame—

They who dance must pay the fiddler; It's the ethics of the game.

In this world where Folly's minions are so largely in excess,

Many a "fiddler" gets his money, quietly, as you may guess.

And the world is none the wiser—not a chance is left for shame

To the man whose purse is equal to the limit of the game.

But, alas! for those who falter, those who hesitate to pay

For the music and the dancing through King Folly's night and day

Such a one-disgrace, dishonor, even penury, shall claim—

They who dance must pay the fiddler—'tis the order of the game.

Rats and Sulphur.

Here is a farmer's mode for ridding his premises of rats and mice: "If you will sprinkle sulphur on your barn floor and through your corn as you gather it there will not be a rat or mouse about. I have done this for several years, and I have never been bothered with rats or mice. I have some old corn in my crib at present, and not a rat or mouse can be found. In stacking hay or oats, sprinkle on the ground and a little through each load, and my word for it, rats or mice can't stay there. A pound of sulphur will be sufficient to preserve a large barn of corn, and it is good for stock, and will not hurt the corn for bread."

English Legal Technicalities.

In English courts the solicitors must always appear in their robes. A London newspaper of recent date contains the following: "I can neither see you nor hear you," said Judge Edge to Mr. Turner, a solicitor at Clerkenwell county court, when that gentleman, who was unrobed, rose to oppose a barrister's application to have a case adjourned. Mr. Turner began to put on his robe, but Judge Edge interposed. "Now, that will do," he said. "I will not have this court made a robing room of. Next case."

Mr. Turner protested that it was an injustice to his client, but the judge ordered him to be silent.

Whence Esopus?

The most puzzling thing about Esopus is the origin of the name. Philologists are busy working on the question. They are divided on its derivation between the Indians, the Dutch and the early English colonial governors, with the odds in favor of the Indians. Even Schoolcraft, authority on Indian matters, could not settle the question in his researches. He thought it might be from "Sepus," the name of a river among the Mohegans.

Tuberculosis in Belgium.

It is estimated that the deaths from tuberculosis throughout the kingdom of Belgium in 1904 were 13,467. This malady is seemingly on the increase and efforts are being made to provide sanatoriums for the afflicted. The province of Liege has already expended 1,300,000 francs ($250,000) in this matter, and will go further in its endeavor to offer medical care and attention to the afflicted.

TORTURING PAIN.

Half This Man's Sufferings Would Have Killed Many a Person, But Doan's Cured Him.

A. C. Sprague, stock dealer, of Normal, Ill., writes: "For two whole years I was doing nothing but buying medicines to cure my kidneys. I do not think that any man ever suffered as I did and lived. The pain in my back was so bad that I could not sleep at night. I could not ride a horse, and sometimes was unable even to ride in a car. My condition was critical when I sent for Doan's Kidney Pills. I used three boxes and they cured me. Now I can go anywhere and do as much as anybody. I sleep well and feel no discomfort at all."

John Nicholas Brown, 4 Years Old, Worth $10,000,000.

John Nicholas Brown of Rhode Island is only 4 years old, but he is rated worth $10,000,000. His fortune came from his father and an uncle, in equal amounts, before he was 3 months old. Young Brown has three palatial residences, a yacht, is always attended by a physician and has a retinue of ten servants. He lives on sterilized milk chiefly and has more care bestowed upon him than a royal prince. He is weighed morning and night on special scales and is groomed in the most luxurious manner. The youngster's fortune consists in stock in great cotton mills in New England. His mother was a Miss Dresser, sister of Mrs. George Vanderbilt.

Lives a Primitive Life.

Paterson, N. J., has brought to view at various times no small number of eccentric persons. The latest freak in that community makes his breakfast of a cucumber, his luncheon of a carrot, a turnip or a raw potato, and eats a few nuts for supper. He never touches flesh or fish, wears very little clothing, and sleeps out of doors, except when rain is falling. He looks strong and well, and asserts that he never feels an ache or a pain. The possibilities of human perversity are unaccountable.

Needs Only a Little Thinking.

The food of childhood often decides whether one is to grow up well nourished and healthy or weak and sickly from improper food.

It's just as easy to be one as the other provided we get a proper start.

A wise physician like the Denver Doctor who knew about food, can accomplish wonders provided the patient is willing to help and will eat only proper food.

Speaking of this case the Mother said her little four year old boy was suffering from a peculiar derangement of the stomach, liver and kidneys and his feet became so swollen he couldn't take a step. "We called a Doctor who said to us we must be very careful as to his diet as improper food was the only cause of his sickness. Sugar especially, he forbid."

BACKACHE AND DIZZINESS

Most of the Ailments Peculiar to the Female Sex are Due to Catarrh of Pelvic Organs.

MRS. M. BRICKNER.

99 Eleventh Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

"A short time ago I found my condition very serious, I had headaches, pains in the back, and frequent dizzy spells which grew worse every month. I tried two remedies before Peruna, and was discouraged when I took the first dose, but my courage soon returned. In less than two months my health was restored."—Mrs. M. Brickner.

The reason of so many failures to cure cases similar to the above is the fact that diseases peculiar to the female sex are not commonly recognized as being caused by catarrh of one organ is exactly the same as catarrh of any other organ. What will cure catarrh of the head will also cure catarrh of the pelvic organs. Peruna cures these cases simply because it cures the catarrh.

If you have catarrh write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

STILL CALL FOR HORSESHOES.

Trolley Cars and Automobiles Have Little Reduced the Output.

"How about horseshoes?" was asked of a dealer in iron and steel supplies, including horseshoes. "Has the increased use of automobiles lessened the demand for horseshoes?"

"No, it hasn't," was the reply. "We're selling as many horseshoes as ever. It was thought when the trolley car was introduced that something was going to happen, but the trolley cars came in so gradually that their introduction had no effect on the horseshoe trade, and it is so as to the auto. Horseshoes yet remain in general use, and the demand for horseshoes still continues."

There are fourteen concerns in the United States manufacturing horseshoes. Their annual output is somewhere about 1,000,000 kegs of 100 pounds each.

Voices of Native Africans.

The timbre of the voices among central Africans is usually good—deep and strong in the men, very melodious and sweet in the women. One notable peculiarity about the people is the forced key in which they always carry on conversation. The ordinary quiet tones of civilized speech are scarcely ever heard among them. They literally shout and, such being their habit, it is a matter of indifference to whom they are speaking is close by or twenty yards away. "They are most tireless chatterers," says a traveler. "I doubt whether any other people in the world talk so much or laugh so much. Their laughter is particularly healthy, natural and unrestrained—a most exhilarating sound."

Shouting Their Praises.

Rev. Mr. Hatch says:— "I have been suffering from Bladder and Kidney Trouble for 26 years and I have tried everything that people said would do me good. But nothing did me any good except Dodd's Kidney Pills."

"I haven't felt a pain since I took Dodd's Kidney Pills. They gave me health and I feel like a new man altogether. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best I ever had."

All Urinary and Bladder Troubles are caused by diseased Kidneys. The natural way to cure them is to cure the kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure diseased kidneys in any stage or place. They always cure Backache and they are the only remedy that ever cured Bright's Disease.

CHAPTER XIV.—Continued.

Among the last to emerge were Alexis and Ivan—Ilda, with the women, had gone before.

In going to the van in which they were to be conveyed to the railway station to begin their long journey to the mines of Siberia, Ivan and Alexis passed the conveyance where Ilda sat in company with two other women.

They had not seen each other since they had been taken from the office of the minister of police, when Ivan, torn by the soldiers from the arms of Olga, felt, as he received a last farewell embrace, the hapless girl faint in his arms.

"Alexis!" Hearing the voice, Alexis stopped, and with him Ivan, for they were ironed together.

"Ilda!" Both spoke at once.

But the one word was the last.

A Cossack guard had overheard them, and with a rough "Prikazano ne gavarit" (talking is forbidden), he pushed them forward with the butt of his rifle and hustled them into the van with scant ceremony.

The cortege started, and in less than half an hour the prisoners had been transferred to the long train of convict cars, the whistle sounded, the train moved, and the dreary journey of the exiles to Siberia had begun.

As the train rolled along, Ivan and Alexis found for the first time an opportunity of exchanging confidences. They had been placed in separate cells in the prison, and knew nothing of what had transpired during the time of their confinement. Of their destination they were both ignorant, beyond the fact that they were bound for Siberia. They found some consolation, however, in being together, and each tried to comfort the other by expressing a hope that when the truth was known their punishment would not be so severe. One fear, however, possessed them both—that on their arrival in Siberia they would be separated and unable to communicate with each other.

It is a long journey at best from St. Petersburg to Saratov; but in a crowded convict car, with no conveniences, with a hot, stifling atmosphere, and in the company of some of the worst characters in Russia—for with refined cruelty the political exiles were compelled to associate with malefactors of all kinds—it was, as Alexis afterward described it, a horrible nightmare while awake.

Up to their arrival in Saratov, Ivan and Alexis had been allowed to wear the ordinary dress, although Alexis, immediately after his arrival in the Petropavlovsk prison, had been compelled to give up his uniform and don the garb of a civilian. Now, however, they had arrived at the depot for those destined for Siberia, and they were soon made aware that henceforth they would live under changed conditions.

Two or three days after their arrival at Saratov, a rumor spread among the prisoners that the convoy for Siberia was about to start on the following morning, and this proved to be true, for the order was issued to prepare to march. As a preliminary the convicts were divided into two classes—the politicals and the criminals—other than those convicted of offenses of a political nature. Of the first there were two classes—the syni or simple exiles, whose offenses were designated under the general term of "untrustworthiness"—and the hard-labor class, who were convicted of some overt act against the peace and dignity of the czar. Some of the prisoners were taken to the barber shop, where one side of the head was shaved bare; and the hair on the other side being allowed to remain, they presented, when their caps were removed, a pitifully grotesque appearance. To the strong leather belt which confined their greatcoats at the waist were attached two chains which reached to the ankles, where they were riveted to the ankle irons.

Alexis and Ivan were fortunate in being exempted from the degradation of having their hair cut in the manner described, but in all other respects they were treated as the other convicts. They tried to gain information from the guards as to Ilda, but it was without avail, and they were left in uncertainty as to her fate. But they were not long in suspense.

Early on the following morning a bugle sound rang through the prison, and a few minutes later all were active. Orders were issued in quick, sharp tones to the prisoners to be ready to march, and after a hasty breakfast of the regulation fare—black bread and barley soup—the prisoners were drawn up in line in the courtyard. A list of their names were called, their irons examined, each prisoner shouldered his canvas bag and then, led by a detachment of soldiers and guarded on both sides and the rear, the column of "unfortunates"—the general term for exiles in Russia—was ordered to march. The outer gates opened and the prisoners were on their way to the landing place, where a steamer was in waiting to carry them up the Volga to Kasan.

Among the three hundred and odd prisoners—there were some thirty-five women—some of them being the wives of exiles, who elected to share their husband's fate; some who were being deported for political activity, and others who had been guilty of crime. As the column started, Alexis and Ivan, who had managed to still be together—a favor granted to them by reason of a trifling bribe to one of the guards—recognized Ilda in her dress of an exile. That Ilda also recognized them they were sure, although she made no sign, fearing to betray a desire to get nearer to them—a movement that would have been prevented because desired.

But when they reached the steamer they were rewarded for their self-denial, and for the first time since they had been separated at the doors of the prison in St. Petersburg they found an opportunity to converse freely. This gave them a chance to agree upon a cypher mode of communication which they felt would prove useful in the probable event of their early separation.

Alexis was by far the most cheerful of the three, and did all in his power to comfort his companions. "I feel sure," he said, "that my father when he discovers the true facts will relent and that our pardons are only a question of time. But I have a stronger ground for hope. I do not believe that Gen. Cobb will desert me, and I feel sure that even now he is at work on our behalf. Keep up a brave heart, dear Ilda, and be assured that happiness is yet in store for us all."

The steamer with its load of human freight went on up the broad Volga until Kasan was reached. Here a short delay occurred, but in a few hours the exiles were transferred to another steamer, their destination being Perm, on the River Kama. They were now rapidly approaching the Siberian frontier. On their arrival at Perm, they were marched to a train of cars in waiting, and without further delay were forwarded on their journey.

At the end of the railway line the prisoners were disembarked and taken to the receiving prison, where they were to rest a few days before beginning their long march of weeks, perhaps months, to the mines of Siberia. It was while at this place that Alexis, Ilda and Ivan learned of their destination. Ivan and Alexis were to go to Chitka, the capital of the province of the Trans-Baikal, a place on the bank of the Ingoda river, one of the tributaries of the Amoor. Ilda learned that at this point she would be separated from her companions. She was to go some two hundred miles further—to Stralensk.

We may pass over the long and dreary march of the exiles for weeks and months in their journey over the great highway of Siberia. It is a painful story—a story full of tears. The scanty food, the foul air of the kamars or prison pens, the long marches on foot day by day—these need not further be referred to. Suffice it to say that the journey was accomplished at last, and the exiles were at their destination.

By great good fortune the commandant of the district where Ivan and Alexis found themselves was an old soldier who had served under Count Nazimoff in the Turkish war, and he felt pity for the son of his old commander. Alexis was allowed many privileges not accorded to ordinary convicts, and the horrors of exile were, by his intercession, also softened for Ivan. Ilda, they heard, had been assigned to duty by the governor at Stralensk as a nurse, and she had also an opportunity to earn something beyond the scanty government allowance by teaching the governor's children.

Ilda had been but a short time in Stralensk when an opportunity was afforded her for materially improving her condition. A violent epidemic of typhus fever had broken out, not only among the convicts, but among the officials themselves. With a noble disregard of her own safety, Ilda exposed herself to every risk, and to her watchful care and skillful nursing was due the saving of the lives of the governor's wife and children. The gratitude of the governor's wife knew no bounds, and it was at her suggestion that Ilda was given quarters, instead of being confined in the women's department of the prison, in the governor's house. She had been here now two months, and was regarded with feelings of grateful esteem by all classes—prisoners and officials alike. Stralensk is on the main road to the mines of Neretchensk, and since the arrival of Ilda several convoys of prisoners had passed through the place en route to the destination at the mines. As the long columns of unfortunates wound their weary way along the valley of the Neretcha, Ilda had many opportunities to perform little acts of kindness to suffering prisoners. It was while binding the bruised foot of a poor woman who had suffered terribly on the march that Ilda was startled by the sufferer asking if she knew any prisoner named Ilda Barosky.

Ilda's heart beat fast. She had not heard from Alexis or Ivan since she was separated from them to continue her journey, and while she knew that they had been stopped at Chitka, she believed that they had only been halted there, preparatory to being sent further into the interior, perhaps to the dreaded mines of Karc. Ilda revealed her name to the stranger, who produced a paper. It proved to be but a single work "Nadeshta" (Hope), but it was as a very message of future happiness for the girl, for she recognized the hand of Alexis. She learned that the scrap of paper had been handed to the woman at a point some three hundred miles away, where a survey was being made for a new road, and by further questioning found out that Alexis and Ivan had been given employment in that way—so far as the woman could describe the man who had given her the scrap of paper, and who had but a moment to ask her to deliver it to Ilda Barosky, if they should meet.

Thus the months passed away—the exiles waiting, watching, with anxious hearts for a word of hope from those nearest and dearest to them. In Siberia, they knew that they could not even, if they so desired, hope to remain as they wished for any length of time in the place in which they were. The whim of an officer in authority; the command of an ispravnik—the sub-governor or mayor of the smaller towns; a draft for more laborers for the mines—any of these causes might compel them to change their residence at a moment's notice, and go to a point, hundreds, if not thousands, of miles distant. Hence our friends were kept in a constant state of fear and suspense, lest at any moment an order might issue which would place them further apart—perhaps never to meet again.

It must not be supposed that Alexis and Ivan had calmly reconciled themselves to their fate, and had passively accepted the misfortune that it had been their lot to endure. The thoughts by day and the dreams by night of exiles of Siberia are of escape, and Ivan and Alexis were no exceptions to the rule. They had discussed many plans, but one after another had been dismissed as impracticable. For it was not alone for themselves that they planned. They had determined never to leave Siberia without Ilda and the hapless Olga.

In spite of every effort, no word of the fate of Olga had reached them, and Ivan was in an agony of apprehension regarding her. But one thought consoled him. He knew that the Baroness von Rhineberg would do everything in her power to mitigate the sufferings of the unhappy girl, and he knew, too, that he would certainly hear some news as soon as any information of his location could reach the baroness—if it ever did.

Last of a Noted Gallows.

The wooden gallows in the jail yard has been torn down to make room for a modern steel structure. By way of a grim joke the sheriff's office spread the report that Deputy Sheriff Love intended to take the frame of the venerable instrument of death to his home and build a chicken house out of it, on the theory that no negro, no matter how ardent a lover of chicken meat, would dare to rob such a hen roost.

As a matter of fact, the old gallows is to be split into kindling wood for use in the furnace of the court house. This morning a negro man who has seen years of service as an attaché of the sheriff's office, was engaged in piling up the weather beaten lumber under the steps of the portico on the north side of the court house. The steps, intact, lay stretched on the ground.

"Many a man has taken his last walk up those stairs," said a bystander. "Indeed, they have," said the colored man. "I have seen twelve of them go that way—Hawes and Byars and Scroggins and Ben Eldridge and others. Makes me feel kind o' creepy to handle this stuff, but I guess it will burn all right."—Birmingham News.

Mrs. Rosa Adams, niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C. S. A., wants every woman to know of the wonders accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot tell you with pen and ink what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me, suffering from the illa peculiar to the sex, extreme lassitude and that all gone feeling. I would rise from my bed in the morning feeling more tired than when I went to bed, but before I had used two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to feel the buoyancy of my younger days returning, became regular, could do more work and not feel tired than I had ever been able to do before, so I continued to use it until I was restored to perfect health. It is indeed a boon to sick women and I heartily recommend it. Yours very truly, Mrs. ROSA ADAMS, 819 12th St., Louisville, Ky."

Any women who are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhoea, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, general debility, and nervous prostration, should know there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No other medicine for women has received such wide-spread and unqualified indorsement. No other medicine has such a record of female cures.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am very pleased to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for womb and ovarian difficulties from which I have been a sufferer for years. It was the only medicine which was at all beneficial, and within a week after I started to use it, there was a great change in my feelings and looks. I used it for a little over three months, and at the end of that time I suffered no pain at the menstrual period, nor was I troubled with those distressing pains which compelled me to go to bed, and I have not had a headache since. This is nearly a year ago. I always keep a bottle on hand, and take a few doses every week, for I find that it tones up the system and keeps me feeling strong, and I never have that tired out feeling any more."

"I certainly think that every woman ought to try this great medicine, for it would prove her worth. Yours very truly, Miss ELISE DANFORTH, 208 De Soto St., Memphis, Tenn."

THE ANGORA GOATS

RAISING THEM A GROWING IN-DUSTRY IN THIS COUNTRY.

Their Wool Is a Valuable Product and Is Used in Almost Countless Ways — Valuable for Other Things.

The Angora goat is not generally known throughout the world as a domestic animal; many who come upon its name in the natural histories and cyclopaedias pass it out of mind as a semi-wild beast. However, if all who are indebted to the Angora for some of their most beautiful clothing were familiar with the animal itself, it would have tens of thousands of friends. The most valuable feature of the Angora
goat is its fleece, and when the ladies are told that this fleece is what is

ANGORAS AT HAVERHILL, MASS.

known in commerce as mohair, they will think they know all the rest; but it is hardly possible that they are aware of the fact that their brilliant-
line and zibeline dress goods, their imitation astrachan coats (though not often sold as imitations) and a score or more of such-like goods are made of mohair; because this product has all the luster of silk, all the durability of the frame of the chair itself, and all the beauty of design that can be woven into any fabric; that their children have muffs and cape trimmings of the raw mohair; and that hundreds of floors have rugs made from the skins of Angoras, generally dyed a brilliant color, but often in the natural white. When men are informed that almost every upholstered car is done in mohair plush
they are still really astonished until they are still further informed that mohair is nothing else than Angora goat hair. All this is true, and much more could be added. The world's annual production of mohair is truly immense.

The native habitat of this little friend of mankind is Asia Minor. At different times efforts have been made to acclimatize them in various countries, but generally without success, owing usually to an unsuitable climate. However, a few heads were brought to the United States in 1849, where they have lived a precious existence for many years.
In the early fifties a considerable number were transported to Cape Colony, where they have thriven to such an extent as at this time to make that country the leading mohair-producing territory in the world.

During the last four years there has been a distinct revival of this industry in the United States, a condition which has been brought about largely through the efforts of the government in its behalf. Previous to this time most of the goats had been concentrated at places in a few of the western states,
and not many people knew anything

ANGORA KIDS AT PLAY.

about them; but now they may be found in every state and territory, and at several points in Canada, and nothing but the best reports are heard of them from all these sections. They are doing well in the semi-arid southwest in the mountains of California and Montana, and on the sand-dunes of Lake Superior. In New England they give fair promise of being the forerunners of a rehabilitation of the abandoned farms there, where the extreme cold of winter does not injure them.
The present expansion of this industry
in the United States is based principally upon two features—the production of mohair and the destruction of brushwood by the goats. Incidentally, they produce very fine mutton, but not many good mohair producers are slaughtered for meat. The fleece is found to be superior to the South African product, and only slightly inferior to the Turkish hair. There are mills in New England that consume all of the domestic product, and, besides, they import over a million pounds. Although there will be a rapid increase in the amount of hair produced in the United States, there is no prospect of a surplus for many years to come.

GEORGE FAYETTE THOMPSON.

EXPORTS OF FRUITS.

RAPID GROWTH DURING PAST FEW YEARS.

Value of Product Shipped During Present Year Will Exceed $20,000,000—
Prunes and Bananas
Important Items.

Exports of fruit from the United States in the fiscal year 1904 will exceed $20,000,000, against less than $3,000,000
in 1894 and less than $2,000,000 in 1884.
The growth in the exportation of fruits
from the United States has been very rapid during the last few years. The department of commerce and labor,
through its bureau of statistics, has issued a table showing the value of fruits
and nuts imported and exported in each year from 1884 to 1904. It shows that the importations were practically $20,- 000,000 in value in 1884, and will in 1904
be about $22,000,000, while the exports which were $1,746,418 in 1884, will be about $20,500,000 in 1904.

Apples, oranges, apricots, prunes and raisins form the principal items in the exports of fruits. The value of the apple exportations in 1904 will amount to about $8,500,000 out of the $20,500,000 worth of fruits exported, and of the $8,500,000 worth of apples exported about $5,500,000 worth was exported in the natural state and $3,000,000 worth
as dried fruit.

The exportation of prunes from the United States has grown very rapidly in recent years, the total number of pounds exported in 1888, the first year in which a record was made by the bureau of statistics, being, in round terms,
16,000,000; in 1902, 23,000,000; in 1903, 66,000,000, and in 1904 will amount to about 74,000,000, valued at about $3,500,- 000. Germany, France and the United Kingdom are the principal customers
for this class of American fruit, the total quantity sent to Germany in the fiscal year 1903 being 18,500,000 pounds;
France, 16,000,000, and the United Kingdom, 15,000,000; while Belgium took nearly 5,000,000 pounds, Netherlands
nearly 4,000,000, and Canada about 4,500,000. Of the 66,000,000 pounds of prunes exported in 1903, 9,000,000 went from San Francisco and $3,500,000 from New York, although they are chiefly the product of the Pacific coast.

The imports of fruits and nuts have changed but little in total value, but in character there has been a material change during the last decade. Oranges, of which the total importations amounted to over $2,500,000 in 1896, will amount in 1904 to but little over $500,000 in value of imports. Lemons, which amounted to over $5,000,000 in 1896, will amount to a little over $3,000,000 in value in the importations of 1904. The bulk of the lemons come from Italy, and of oranges chiefly from the British West Indies.
Bananas form by far the largest single item in the importations of fruits and nuts, and will aggregate over $7,000,000
in the fiscal year 1904, against $4,500,000
in 1898. They come chiefly from Central America, Cuba and the British West Indies.

RICH, BUT HANDLES TRUNKS

President Stillman's Son Works as Humble Baggage Smasher at Oakland, Cal.

Among the men who struggle with trunks and baggage that come and go with the trains over the Sixteenth street station in Oakland, Cal., is Charles Chauncey Stillman, son of James Stillman, New York banker, Wall street operator, and one of the biggest multi-millionaires in the land.
Young Stillman already owns $6,000,- 000 in his own name, and there are only two sisters to share with him
some day the $40,000,000 his father is reputed to have.

The scion of one of New York's wealthiest and most prominent families wants to learn the railroad business. There is nothing freakish about his becoming a baggage smasher. On the contrary, he is a quiet, very earnest young man, filled with a worthy ambition to become a thoroughly trained railroad man, and be prepared to take charge of the vast transportation interests of his father. He has set out to gain practical experience in every branch of the business, and before he became baggage man he spent several weeks at a truck, worked as a janitor and then served as a depot
in northern California.

Stillman enjoys no privileges, but does overalls and does his share of work as an ordinary employee of the Southern Pacific.

Photograph Aids Huckster.
Cries of "Ripe tomatoes," "Early potatoes," etc., coming from a huckster's wagon, aroused curiosity on the streets of Philadelphia the other day.
No one was in or near the wagon. Investigation revealed an ordinary photograph in a potato bag. Then the huckster came along and explained.
"I lost my voice in the civil war from a wound," said he, "and this machine does well enough in its place. When trade is slack I draw a crowd easily." So saying, he switched on another record and turned on "Bedelia." The crowd fled.

Could Be Used to Advantage.
A Philadelphia dog wagged his tail,
knocked a candle off a chair into a can of powder and an explosion followed. That dog is wasting his time there, says the Chicago Daily News.
He should be in Port Arthur.

Must Have Been a Good Dog.
A man in Connecticut traded his sweetheart for a coon dog, says the Baltimore American, and yet they say romance is as strong as in the days
when a true knight held his life as his lady's plaything.

BAND BLOW OUT.
The Oakville cornet band will give a 30th.

Y. M. C. A. BUILDING.

David Metcalf of Adrian has donated $10,000 toward the erection of a new building for the Y. M. C. A. of that city.

LABOR DAY CELEBRATIONS.
The labor unions of both Jackson and Adrian have made extensive arrangements for celebrating labor day in both cities.

OLD TICKET.
W. L. Seaton has a republican ticket of 1864, in the year Lincoln and Johnson ran. There are 33 names on the ticket, all but four of whom have passed away.—Jackson Citizen.

THE FARMERS ORGANIZE.

The farmers of Livingston county met at Howell Tuesday of last week and perfected a bean growers association, the object of which is to secure an equitable price for their bean crop.

RESIDENTS PROTEST.
Hudson residents protest against the irrigation from the Cincinnati Northern's premises, as in times of a copious rainfall, the water rushes into the streets
and upon adjoining lots, making it damp bad for the owners.—Adrian Press.

SOLD HIS BUSINESS.
Mr. Custard has sold his business as dealer in agricultural implements at Mendon. If he were in the printing business it would have Custard plow every day, and use no eggs, but he would have enough dam to hold St. Jo River.—
Adrian Press.

MUST BE DONE RIGHT.
The insurance companies are notifying users of electricity in this village
that they must have their buildings
wired in accordance with state regulations. A state inspector was here and made an examination, some time ago.—
Manchester Enterprise.

NEW KIND OF BERRY.

A new kind of a berry similar to a strawberry has been supplied to the local market the past two weeks by Fred Burgdolt. The berry grows on a shrub, has much the same flavor of the common berry and ripens most any time during the summer.—Hillsdale Leader.

WITHOUT A CHAPTER.

Ann Arbor is going to be without a playhouse this season. The Athens theater is owned by the White estate and Pierpont White, of Buffalo, one of the executors, has ordered it closed up and it will remain so until sold. No bookings for plays, lectures or political meetings will be made.

CATCH BASINS.

The authorities in charge are constructing catch basins on the University campus at Ann Arbor, so that in rainy times the ground will not be flooded.
In the winter, there were frequently submerged walks covered with ice and falls. Now the students will neither slip up or down.—Adrian Press.

A GOOD RECORD.

Charles C. White informs The Star that he has sprinkled the streets of Jackson for forty six years, and that he has played in brass bands here forty-
three years, first with the Jackson Greys
a military company that went into the civil war in 1861, yet "Chasey" looks to be not over 40 years of age.—Jackson Star.

ALAS, POOR "SPORT."

Charles Denton's dog, "Sport," was lost last week and when found three days after he disappeared he was dead.
In some manner he had caught his tail
in a barbed wire fence and there died.
"Sport" had made four trips to the north woods with Mr. Denton.—Milan Leader.

SOUND ADVICE.

Readers of the Observer will remember that our home merchants are still selling groceries. We are informed that a party of box car grocery con-
surers are again scouring the country.

GIVEN ANOTHER CHANCE.

Lee Klitridge, the Ann Arbor boy who was arrested in Canada for stealing bicycles, was released on suspended sentence at Windsor Saturday, his father paying the costs of prosecution.
He was arrested in Essex and brought to Windsor for trial. The stolen wheel belonged to Glen Craig. In court the lad pleaded guilty to taking Craig's wheel and also to stealing two other bicycles. The father was in court and he made an earnest plea to the magistrate for clemency for the misguided son. He said that the boy had never done wrong until about a year ago and that evil companions are responsible for his undoing.—Ex.

TO LEASE GROUNDS.
A movement is on foot among the business men to lease the plot of 20 acres of ground from Baxter Van-Wormer, just beyond the Ann Arbor
railroad track, to be fitted up for a race track, base ball grounds and possibly a fair ground. The necessary lease money is nearly all pledged, and if taken, work
will commence at once to put in condition.—Milan Leader.

TOOK CUSHION AND WHIP.
A certain young couple went to Bridgewater to church, Sunday evening,
and during the service an acquaintance
passing by, recognized the rig, and proceeded to play a practical joke upon the young couple, taking the cushion and whip home with him. We will leave the reader to imagine the young man's feelings when he came out of church
and discovered the state of affairs.—Sa-

BOUND OVER.
John Becker, who confessed last week
to setting fire to two barns on Mrs.
Nelson Osborn's farm in Scio was bound over to the circuit court on the charge of arson by Justice Doty of Ann Arbor Thursday. Becker had confessed and he waived examination, but Prosecuting Attorney Duffy was not willing to omit the examination. As a formality Undersheriff Gauntlett was put on the stand and he told of Becker's having confessed to him.

WILL MEET AT ADRIAN.
Adrian seems to be "in it," religiously speaking, as the following shows. The Michigan conference of the M. P.
church will meet there for the week of August 23, with 53 ministers and a like number of delegates. The Detroit conference of the M. E. church will assemble at same place September 14,
with 400 ministers and 200 laymen and ladies in attendance. And the Michigan synodical meeting of the Presbyterian missionary societies will occur there in October.—Ex.

GRASS LAKE THE PLACE.
On September 14th, the anniversary of the battle of South Mountain, the Seven-annual reunion in this village. It is expected that about 100 members of the old regiment will be in attendance. A business session will be held in the afternoon and about four o'clock a banquet will be enjoyed at which a number of speeches will be delivered. Keep the date in mind and plan to give the aged veterans a hearty and royal welcome.—

has on his farm 76 rye stalks that germinated from a single seed or grain of rye. It is a usual occurrence that one kernel brings forth 40 to 60 stalks; but this is extraordinary. All the stalks are tall and have fully developed heads. He will harvest the 76 stalks, curious to see how great an increase the single grain of rye will make.

SHALL WE DISPUTE
The statements of scores of Michigan
Citizens.

The people of Michigan, like other American citizens, desire to "get at the bottom" of everything. They want to know the whys and wherefores. When investigation leads to the most positive proof it is hard to dispute the evidence of people we know. The testimony of friends and neighbors can be easily proven and vouched for. There are many cases like the following, all from people here at home, and if the reader
is still a skeptic why not investigate
further, the way is open.

Mrs. E. S. Kimbell, of 514 West Kalamazoo street, Lansing, says: "For years
I suffered with pain across my back, frequently radiating up under the shoulder blades. In the early morning, long before my rising hour, across my loins became so lame and sore that I was unable to sleep and was compelled to get up. A weakness of the kidney secretions existed, and my limbs and hands have been puffed and swelled and felt as if they were on fire. I obtained Doan's Kidney Pills at Gardner & Robertson's drug store and though they have not radically cured me, whenever I noticed an attack of kidney complaint
I took a box or so and up to the present time they have never failed to bring relief. In this way I have taken four or five boxes during the past two years."

HARRY LEHR HAS NEW FAD

Wears a Crimson Tie Instead of the Conventional Black with His Tuxedo at Newport.

Harry S. Lehr has introduced a new fad in Newport this season, but it remains to be seen to what extent it will be followed by the men of the cottage colony. Each year Mr. Lehr has introduced fads of his own, but, as a rule,
there have been none of the other men
with the courage or desire to follow
his example.

A few nights ago Mr. Lehr appeared at the open air theater with a party of women and men. As soon as he entered the place all eyes were turned on him. He was dressed in a tuxedo, and in place of the conventional black tie,
he wore a crimson one. Mr. Lehr did not seem to be annoyed at the turn of eyes in his direction any more than he did when he appeared on the avenue a year or two ago with a wrist
bag. The general impression is that this example set by Mr. Lehr will not be generally followed.

TOOK HER CASH.

Mrs. Sparks Wants the Police to Find Her Wealth.

Mrs. Ellen Sparks, who lives in a substantial house in Butler township, came distractedly into Coldwater Monday night and sought the police. She is known to be wealthy, and some people have for years believed there was a treasure house in her home. But the public never knew until last night.

She told the police she had been robbed of notes representing $2,250 in value, a $1,000 mortgage, a $600 mortgage, $100 in cash, and a quantity of jewelry.

The police learned that the missing valuables had been kept behind a dresser in the lady's bedroom, from which place they mysteriously disappeared July 20. Mrs. Sparks said she had herself tried to detect the thieves before applying to the police.

Bah-We-Tah-Yosh.

James Bah-We-Tah-Yosh, 70 years old, a remnant of the once sturdy Chippewa tribe of Indians who in years past held sway in the Saginaw valley, was married Saturday on his deathbed to Martha A. Nah-Shank, 55 years old, with whom he had lived under Indian marital customs nearly 40 years. Since that time the couple have reared a large family and accumulated quite an amount of property.

As the laws of the state do not recognize the customs of the tribe it was deemed advisable to go through the formality of another marriage which would stand a legal test in order that after James passed away his wife will be in a position to maintain her property rights. Rev. James Cloud, who ministers to the people in Indian town, brought about the new state of affairs and officiated at the marriage.

Prisoner Suicides.

George Greene, an insane inmate of the state prison hospital, killed himself Wednesday by diving headlong from a window to a board floor only four feet below. Greene was sentenced from Saranac county for burglary for two to four years and was received at the prison February 26. A little over a week ago he exhibited signs of insanity and attempted to commit suicide by cutting the arteries of his wrist. A guard was placed over him in the hospital. When the guard turned his back Greene leaped from the window and died of a fractured skull.

Matches and a Child.

Emmie Beckman, a 6-year-old daughter of John Beckman, of Flint, was seriously, if not fatally, burned Thursday. She secured a quantity of matches and went into the back yard unobserved by her mother to play. A short time afterward Mrs. Beckman heard her daughter screaming, and running to the back yard saw the child's clothing afire. With much difficulty the mother extinguished the flames, but not before the child was frightfully burned about the right side and head.

Unfortunate Children.

A 4-year-old son of William H. Hethorn, of Lansing, was run over by a heavily loaded wagon and his recovery is doubtful. Two ribs were fractured and the left lung crushed. The Hethorn family has been particularly unfortunate in the matter of accidents. One son lost his life by the explosion of a cannon cracker a few years ago. Another son, who was shot in a quarrel last December, recovered and was nearly burned up at Waverly park last week by his clothing catching on fire from a balloon.

Damaged Fruit.

Heavy rain, accompanied by the worst hail in years, swept over quite a section of Berrien county Tuesday night. Reports received from various inland points are to the effect that thousands of bushels of tree fruit, including apples, peaches, pears and plums, were blown to the ground during the hail storm, meaning a loss to fruit growers of thousands of dollars.

Died of Lockjaw.

Chas. Elliott, the 12-year-old son of Alonzo Elliott, who has made his home for the past year with Frank Mann, near . . . , stepped on a rusty nail a few days ago. ## BY TORNADO.

St. Paul Suffers In Loss of Life and Property.

Five are reported to be dead, two score injured and property destroyed to the extent of $2,000,000 by a fierce tornado which swooped down on St. Paul, Minn., shortly after 9 p. m. Saturday. The Tivoli theater was demolished; the Empire theater razed; the high bridge, an immense steel structure crossing the Mississippi river at a height of 200 feet was almost totally destroyed and 200 buildings are more or less damaged.

Great damage was also done in Minneapolis to property in the business district. Several people were killed and many injured.

Strikers Are Hungry.

Packing house employees and hungry strikers vied with each other in a steer hunt that extended throughout the night, following a riot precipitated by the appearance of 11 runaway beavers from Morris & Co.'s plant at the stockyards Thursday evening. Friday the carcasses of four were accounted for. Little beyond the hoofs and horns remained to tell the story, and there was an ample beef supply in many a home to which such a luxury has long been a stranger.

The fate of five of the remainder is still in doubt, as only two have been rounded up and driven back to the yards. Scouting parties representing both the big packing firm and the hungry throng that battled with the police scoured the prairies south and west of the yards all night, and when the latter located its prey the creature was slain and disappeared as though by magic. The herd was valued at upwards of $1,000.

The mob numbered 4,000 persons, and the streets were cleared only after 120 policemen, in five squads, had charged the rioters on four sides.

Shots were fired and scores of rioters were clubbed. A bullet grazed the cheek of Police Lieut. George Prim, and a police sergeant was stripped of his star and clubbed by a woman rioter. One man was so severely battered that he was sent to the Englewood Union hospital. Few arrests were made.

The Wheat Pit.

Another wild day in wheat is Saturday's record. Frosts generally kill, but a suggestion of killing frosts in Canada and the Dakotas only influenced the bulls and sent September option up to $1.11 1/2 in Chicago.

Prices soared upward in Minneapolis, the September option touching $1.21 within thirty minutes of the opening. Later it touched $1.23. December advanced to $1.17 and May to $1.18.

There was a lot of profit-taking in the wheat market in New York by Saturday's close. The market was somewhat of the high people who thought values about high enough for the present, but it was so well absorbed by new buyers that prices established fresh high records again, September selling at $1.16 3/4 against $1.13 7/8 the previous night.

NEWS OF THE WORLD

A Brief Chronicle of All Important Happenings

CRUISER NOVIK SUNK BY JAPS.

Driven Ashore on Sakhalin Island by Admiral Togo's Cruise.

After a severe engagement with the Japanese cruisers Chitose and Tsushima the Russian cruiser Novik was run ashore in a sinking condition in Korsakovsk harbor on the Island of Sakhalin.

Stoessel Is Profane.

The terms of surrender sent to Gen. Stoessel, Russian commander at Port Arthur, provided that the garrison should march out with the honors of war and join Gen. Kuropatkin; that all civilians be brought to a place designated by the Japanese admiral; that the Russian warships in the harbor numbering seven, namely: the battle ships Retzivan, Sevastopol, Pobleda, Peresviet, Poltava, the armored cruiser Bayan, and the protected cruiser Pallada, and 12 or more torpedo boat destroyers and four gunboats be surrendered to the Japanese.

Lieut. Gen. Stoessel is alleged to have received the terms with a burst of wonderful profanity, his habitual taciturnity deserting him. He strode the floor until he became calmer and then remarked that if the Japanese proposition was a joke it was in bad taste.

Gen. Stoessel's treatment of the Japanese major was courteous, but his reply was prompt and characteristic. The Japanese major then asked for a three days' truce in which to bury the dead. This was refused. The battle was renewed at 10 o'clock on the morning of the 17th and as the junk left it was being waged furiously on all sides.

Defy the Japs.

Gen. Stoessel, in command at Port Arthur, has refused to surrender and has declared the removal of non-combatants there. Reasons for this latter action are not given, but it is probable that the non-combatants are unwilling to accept a favor at the hands of the Japanese. They confess, however, that necessity for their removal exists. It is expected the Japanese attack, will be resumed immediately; it now enters upon its final stage.

Twenty Thousand Killed.

A battle of huge proportions raged around Port Arthur August 14 and 15 and was resumed August 17. The Japanese, it is reported, sacrificed 20,000 more men but gained important advantages in the matter of position.

Unprecedented Visit.

The archbishop of Canterbury sailed from England Saturday on the Celtic for a visit of two months to the United States, where he will attend the great conference of the Episcopal church in Boston in October, and will spend the remainder of the time in traveling and visiting the homes of bishops of the American church. The visit of the archbishop, the head of the church of England, is really a courteous return of the visit of American bishops to the decennial Lambeth conferences. The visit is an unprecedented event, and has aroused much interest in the church. It was announced in London that he may possibly make occasion to repeat his visit later. He comes by special permission of King Edward.

Isaac Myers, of Napoleon, Ill., is dead at the age of 104 years. He had used tobacco since he was 12 years old.

Gen. Wilmon W. Blackmar, of Massachusetts, was elected commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. Thursday by acclamation.

John R. King, of Washington, D. C., former commander of the department of Maryland, was chosen senior vice commander-in-chief. George W. Patton, of Chattanooga, past commander of the department of Tennessee, was elected junior vice commander-in-chief by acclamation.

Dr. Warren R. King, of Indiana, was elected surgeon-general, and Rev. J. H. Bradford, of Washington, D. C., was chosen chaplain-in-chief.

Denver, Colo., was unanimously chosen as the place for holding the next national encampment.

A citizen of Statesboro, Ga., who helped to burn the negroes Reed and Cote at the stake boldly said, "No grand jury would indict and no petit jury in this country would find guilty any man who had participated in the work."

Gen. Wilmon W. Blackmar, elected commander in chief of the Grand Army at the national encampment in Boston, is a well-known veteran. He was born in Pennsylvania in 1841, enlisted in the Fifteenth Pennsylvania when the war broke out, and fought at Antietam, Stone River, Chat-

ta-nooga, Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. At Five Forks he led a charge so gallantly that he was promoted to be a captain by Gen. Custer. When the war ceased Gen. Blackmar studied law, and has followed that profession with much success. His home is in Hingham, Mass.

By Monday's declaration of a 5 per cent quarterly dividend on the stock of the Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey, the cash income of the Rockefeller and their associates from that stock alone for the first three quarters of the calendar year is increased to $28,000,000.

The Press says: President Roosevelt will not deliver any political addresses between now and election day, November 8. His speech at the time he was notified of his nomination and his letter of acceptance, yet to be published, will be his only personal contributions to the campaign.

John Veres, aged 20, came to Owosso from Henderson on a Michigan Central train last night and jumped before the train stopped at the station. His head butted a box car and his scalp was lifted, as well as if a war Injun.

Unknown persons at an early hour Sunday morning attempted to kill Supt. F. M. Hordailer, of the Austen Coal & Coke Co., and his family by blowing up the residence at Austen, W. Va., with dynamite. The charge was placed on the front porch directly under the room in which the family were sleeping.

Col. Prentiss Ingraham, of Chicago, said to be the author of more than 1,000 novels, is dead at Revere, Mass., aged 60.

The Pullman Sleeping Car Co. by a lease agreement with the Big by which that train leases 40 passenger coaches.

A plot to blow up the Ohio state lottery at Columbus was discovered Wednesday by Foreman Driver. He found a stick of dynamite and a pint of nitro-glycerin mixed with a hidden in one of the shoes.

CONDENSED. John Veres, aged 20, came to Owosso from Henderson on a Michigan Central train last night and jumped before the train stopped at the station. His head butted a box car and his scalp was lifted, as well as if a war Injun.

Unknown persons at an early hour Sunday morning attempted to kill Supt. F. M. Hordailer, of the Austen Coal & Coke Co., and his family by blowing up the residence at Austen, W. Va., with dynamite. The charge was placed on the front porch directly under the room in which the family were sleeping.

BURNED ALIVE.

Horrible Scene at a Georgia Lynching Described.

With clothing saturated with kerosene, writhing and twisting in their agony, screaming to heaven for the mercy that the mob would not show, Paul Reed and Will Cato, negroes, two of the principals in the murder and burning of Henry Hodges and wife and three of their children, six miles from Statesboro, Ga., three weeks ago, were burned at the stake on Tuesday.

A photographer was present and the crowd was cleared back that he might get several views of the men bound to the stake and ready for the burning. Then followed an awful scene. The match was applied and frenzied cheers rent the air as men, almost crazed with hatred of the men being punished, saw the cruel flames drinking up the life blood.

Just as the match was applied to the bare one of those in front asked Reed if he wanted to tell the truth before he died. "Yes, sir; I killed Mr. and Mrs. Hodges," he replied.

"Who killed the children?" he was asked.

"Handy Bell," came the response, as the flames leaped upward, and further questioning was impossible in the wild tumult. As the flames touched Reed's naked oiled skin he twisted his head around in an endeavor to choke himself and avoid the fearful torture. Only once did he complain. He said:

"Lord, have mercy."

Cato screamed in agony and begged that he be shot. His heavy head of hair, which was oiled, was almost the first thing the flames fastened on, and screaming with agony while the hemp rope became a collar of fire around his neck, a thrill of horror ran through the spectators. Before the flames had quenched Cato's life the rope was burned in two, and his head swung from side to side as he endeavored to avoid the fiery tongue. By almost superhuman effort he writhed under the close-locked chains. For only about three minutes was he visible to the crowd before the great pile of fagots made a wall of flame which hid him from view. He was the first to exhibit unconsciousness and perhaps the first dead.

Gen. Wilmon W. Blackmar, of Massachusetts, was elected commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. Thursday by acclamation.

John R. King, of Washington, D. C., former commander of the department of Maryland, was chosen senior vice commander-in-chief. George W. Patton, of Chattanooga, past commander of the department of Tennessee, was elected junior vice commander-in-chief by acclamation.

A list of the democratic campaign managers looks like a roll call of a big trust directorate.

Uncle Sam makes mistakes occasionally, but he has never bought the same political gold brick twice.

The American workman has no desire to return to the democratic breakfast food which he had on his table for some years.

Judge Parker is said to have written his financial views so as to not offend Bryan. He voted that way, too, a couple of times.

The voters of the nation have never shown any mad desire to support a party that believes in the free coinage of adversity.

The best appeal the democrats are making to the country is based on their promise not to disturb the republican legislative achievements.

The democratic party may have regained its sanity, but the police who tried to preserve order at the St. Louis convention think differently.

In order to secure his nomination, Judge Parker was compelled to give hostages to defeat by appearing under the chaperonage of Hill and Belmont.

Judge Parker says he will be satisfied with one term as President. The voters will doubtless convince him that he should be satisfied with one less than one term.

The Dingley law brought prosperity and has maintained it for seven years. The persons who are tired of prosperity can close it by patronizing the democratic ballot box.

The New York Herald has printed a facsimile of Judge Parker's gold telegram. It should furnish a companion piece by printing a facsimile of his silver ballot in 1896 or 1900.

The question is now being discussed as to whether a shadow can occupy space. The answer must be in the affirmative to those who believe there is a money plank in the St. Louis platform.

If the telegraph wires had been down during the St. Louis convention the convention might never have heard of Judge Parker's views on the money question, but the platform would have been just the same as now.

The Democratic argument this year should be printed in the humorous columns. It is, in brief: "You need not be afraid of us, for if we elect a President and the House, the republican Senate will keep us from doing any damage."

England is trying to shake off the policy of free trade which has impoverished her workmen. Democrats, in the American paradise of the workingman, are trying to have us adopt the system which England, after half a century of disastrous trial, is now anxious to discard.

FACTORY AND GRANARY

America has long been recognized as the granary of the world. Our products of the farm, dairy and orchard have so far exceeded our own wants that we have been able to supply a very liberal share of the demands in those lines in the markets of the world. American wheat enters into the food supply of every nation civilized enough to know the uses of bread; and American meat forms a portion of the menu in every nation where meat is eaten. Drought and flood, storms and pests may ruin the crops in Australia, India and other grain-growing countries, but the American supply is always sufficient to feed the world. This is a record of which the nation has long been proud but a new one has just been made which promises more for American industry and prosperity.

In May of the present year, the exports of manufactured goods amounted to about $1,000,000 more than the value of agricultural exports. This is the first time that this has taken place for a month at a time; but the day is rapidly approaching when the value of our manufacturing exports will lead the shipments from our broad farms and plantations. The condition is fraught with significance to the farmer, the mechanic and the business man. Our available agricultural area can not be very much increased, although our population is increasing at a rapid rate. This promises a home market for the farmer, a demand at his door for his products which will go to the support of the workman in the mill and factory. As a result, our manufacturing industries must be largely increased and a market for a very considerable share of the product must be found abroad. This has been made possible by the republican system of protection, the continuance of which guarantees a market for the farmer, good wages for the workmen and prosperity for every citizen of the republic. The republican party guarantees a continuance and development of this prosperity.

RURAL FIREMEN.

The latest with the farmers near Union City, Branch county, is the organization of rural fire brigades, effective service by this means having been made possible by the recent construction of rural telephone lines all through the county.

Farmers within a radius of two or three miles organize themselves into a brigade and each member is supposed to equip his premises with ladders and plenty of buckets. Then when a fire breaks out, the entire neighborhood is quickly notified by telephone and the rural brigade comes rushing from every direction to the scene of the conflagration. Already this summer a large number of buildings have been saved by this means, while in other instances, where the fire has gained such headway as to prevent saving the buildings, a sufficient force of men has gathered in time to save the contents of the buildings.

The farmers of this part of Washtenaw could easily form a like organization, as there is hardly a section near here that is without telephone connection, and this might save many dollars for them if they were to have a fire break out on their premises.

LOUIS L. DOLL.

Word was received here Saturday that Louis L. Doll, who went to Oregon about five years ago for his health, died Friday, August 19, 1904, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Peter Winkler, near Portland, Ore. He was born in the township of Dexter, August 11, 1880, and had passed his 24th birthday a few days before his demise.

His remains were brought here for burial and the funeral will be held from the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, of which he was a member, Friday forenoon, conducted by his pastor, Rev. Fr. Considine.

He leaves an aged mother, Mrs. Catherine Doll, who resides at the old homestead in Dexter township, three brothers, Edward, John and William Doll, four sisters, Miss Mary Doll, Mrs. M. Hindelang, Mrs. John Quirk and Mrs. Peter Winkler, who have the heartfelt sympathy of a host of friends in their hour of affliction. Interment in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

FATS VS. LEANS.

The Fats and Leans had it out in baseball yesterday at McLaren-BeGole park, the latter winning by the fat score of 15 to 5. The game was short and snappy, the outfield work of both teams being of the sensational order. Both pitchers were lean and both catchers fat, while the umpire, a Lean, satisfied all of the Fats and eight of the Leans. The Leans grew fat leaning up against the curves of the Fats' pitcher, while the Fats, who had no chance to grow lean running the bases, reduced their weight considerably by chasing the Leans' batted balls. The features of the game was the catching of Edward Chandler, which was of the "Johnnie-on-the-spot" order; the pitching of Larry Dunn, which gave the windows of the pent works an awful jar, while Schussler was star ball chaser.

Batteries—Fats, Dunn, Turnbull and Schussler; Leans, Leach and Chandler. Two base hits—Cole, Guide and several others. One base hit—Too numerous to mention.

LATEST FRENCH FASHIONS.

STUNNING EARLY FALL OUTFIT.

THE VOGUE OF MADEIRA LACE

OF LINEN AND LACE

THE DAYLIGHT DECOLLETE.

With the waning summer days the look of fashion still keeps on growing, and new and novel concepts are added to Miladi's wardrobe daily.

The French watering places the sojourn is maintained at the same tempo prevails in Paris in the height of the season. Picnics, water parties, moonlight trips, al fresco dinner parties and the dances follow each other in bewildering rapidity. The gowns for each of these social amenities—these they term them in New England—are carefully planned as are those for the more elaborate formal functions that constitute the season "en ville." Even the promenade or constitutional is considered an occasion for smart gowning. The Frenchwoman is stylish even in simplicity.

Although we hear rumors more or less to the effect that the extremely sloping shoulder—a thing of the past, nevertheless one even the very latest productions of famous houses showing this feature, the little blouse coats that prevail in Paris, chambray and other washable fabrics, every effort is still being made to obliterate the shoulder seam and to follow the yoke, invariably of irregular fanciful design, and some portion of sleeve in one piece.

And the way in which those same sleeves are growing is something to make us stare. The French tailor usually takes size and build of his customer into consideration in building the new sleeve, hence one does not see a short, stout woman overloaded and weighted down with a two-yard puff on her sleeve, like her tall and slender sister, built up on the "bean-pole" order, displaying a tight-fitted sleeve and a skin-tight garment. Either the couturiere or customer, the one or the other, or, perhaps, both, is gifted with some sense of proportion, and the result is the avoidance of the ridiculous extremes.

On the new model gowns, which are cut with the tall and well-proportioned woman in mind, the sleeves have taken themselves an amplitude of outline and material that verges upon the extravagant.

The touch of trimming is very obvious on the late season gowns, and lace, ribbons and strappings are in high vogue. Cordons, shirings and the latest "smocking," are all made effective, and buttons with simulated buttons are posed on yokes, revers, cuffs and a very large use is made of cuffs. The new modes. They may appear almost anywhere on the sleeve from the wrist to the elbow; they may flare up or downward; they may be fashioned from a single band or take on cavalier outlines, but whatever their shape or size conformation they simply must be worn.

A very recent revival is the use of the lion collar and cuffs, and to these Parisienne has taken with a degree of enthusiasm that is as unexpected as it is general. One sees the stiff, high, turning collar topping a delicate mull or even blouse; and it must be confessed that the result is not altogether

The cuffs en suite are worn with all lengths of sleeve, being used even with the elbow sleeve that calls for a lace mitt to complete the arm covering. These collars and cuffs come in sets, fagoted or embroidered both in blind and a four work, and are almost invariably in plain white. Occasionally one sees a tiny touch of color introduced in the fagoted bands, but the needlework and foundation are alike in white.

Extremely fancy capes—which are very far removed from the articles we used to know—are among the latest things in summer wraps, and delightfully frivolous looking little things they are. They usually are planned en suite with and to complete a costume, and in linen they add just that last touch to an outdoor gown that makes it a picture. There is simply no limit to the designs in these; but one feature is common to them all, and that is brevity. The outline is extremely irregular, laces—particularly the heavier kinds—are used lavishly, and fantastic fringes are the accepted mode for trimming the edges. Some of them are cleverly manipulated to admit of a simulation of a sleeve in the shoulder portion, the fulness being merely tacked to let the arm through; while the shorter ones have the line lengthened to lie over the dress sleeve and so give some impression of an arm covering.

Flounces are another feature of fashion that promise delightfully. In the extremes of frills and fluffiness that prevail flounces can find a wide employment. The sheer and soft, supple fabrics that rule the roster at present lend themselves especially well to such designs; and where they are used in profusion one often sees the hem rolled on the right side and blind stitched, just as used to be the fashion ever so many years ago.

The new lines on sleeves are prettily developed in the flounced models, the lining cut on the bell or umbrella shape and just covered with the ruffles. On the new skirts the flounces are oftener used in groups, and bands of lace, encrustations of medallions and such often intervene.

The models that are shown in French bathing suits look a trifle too frivolous for acceptance on this side of the ocean. The American belle uses her bathing suit for a dip in the ocean rather than for a promenade on the beach, and while she does not shun a pretty design or a dainty trimming, pays rather more attention to the practical side of the suit. The silk swimming suits are delightfully light in weight and really require quite a lot of trimming to make them effective; but for general purposes there is nothing that can take the place of mohair or brilliantine for practical use. White St. Etienne, being heavier than either of the other two weaves mentioned, has recently come into favor; but quite a heavy quality must be selected, or else the results are deplorable when the suit gets wet.

Steel, in buttons, cabochons, beads, buckles and hallheads will be much used on the gray gowns that are sure to be a feature of the fall fashions. An imported modish gray velveteen shows the fitted happ it were better to define it as onion-skin, for it is a trifle darker than the covering of the Spanish or Bermuda onion. Another tint is the "thoughtful brown," this color, is known as mordore, a dull mahogany tint that shows more brown and but little red in its composition. It is pretty nearly the shade that one sees owners tried to improve upon Nature's coloring. The parrot tones in red and in green, especially the former, are being used in chiffon cloths for dinner gowns. A cloth gown with decollete cut seems somewhat freakish; but so soft and satiny is the weave that it were difficult to tell it from silk. This remarkable semblance is noted in the new crepe finish, in which the cloth looks for all the world like an unusually heavy Chinese crepe. A transparent chemise of lace usually accompanies the gown, and this is inserted for daylight wear.

A New Kind of Labor Leader. It is the "good fellow" who now holds the rod over unionism, quite as rigid, quite as exacting in his tribute and every whit as dangerous as Paris, Carvill or McCarthy. You would characterize him in the vernacular of the labor world as a "d— good fellow," and as such must be fought by his own followers.

Martin Murphy is the best specimen of his class I have ever found—the best because he is honest—because he is in truth a good friend to labor at all times—because he is in all an "honest graffer."

After giving up his search for work as hopeless Murphy inaugurated what is today recognized as one of the most unique features of organized labor—the council hall. It stands at the corner of Huron and Elliott streets, with Murphy's saloon on the ground floor, a fitting monument of an "honest graffer." It started in a small way, with his saloon on the ground floor and less than a dozen leased rooms above. Struggling locals were of ing and again for a nominal sum. Now fifty locals meet there nightly, and a thousand men spend their evenings there to their detriment and Murphy's profit—a greater part of the time in the saloon. From Leslie's Monthly Magazine.

While driving toward Main on Middle street, west, last Thursday evening a son of Chas. Stapish collided with a farm wagon that had been left in the street and as a result one of the front wheels of the buggy was smashed into kindlings. The management announces that for the balance of the season all of the players will be strictly home talent, and that every player will put forth his best endeavor to put up the best kind of a game. Dates for games may be had by applying to the manager.

From the tone of the Ann Arbor papers one would be led to think that the gentlemen who took the last census of that place had committed a great offence. The official returns show an increase of 90 in the last four years, and that probably included the students who come there from all parts of the United States, and the men who done the work are in all probability nearer the mark than the man who sits at the office desk and guesses at what the population ought to be, and when the officials make their returns, set up a howl.

The Methodist church and Sunday school will hold a picnic at Cavanaugh Lake on Saturday, August 27. All members and attendants of the church are urged to come and bring their friends with them. The picnic is not for the children only but for the older people as well.
