AWFUL ACCIDENT AT UNADILLA.

John Hudson Cut in Two by a Circular Saw.

A dreadful accident happened Tuesday morning at Laverock's saw-mill in Unadilla, by which John Hudson, aged 71 years, lost his life. The unfortunate man was taking a slab away from the big 58-inch circular saw, when in some way he let it come in contact with the top of the saw as it rapidly revolved. He was drawn under the saw and his back was sawed clear off from the buttocks up to his neck. His left hand was cut off at the wrist the heel of his left foot was severed, and he received a bad gash in his head.

As the relentless saw drew his mangled body steadily downward it fell through the opening in the floor under the saw into the water below and his right leg was broken between the knee and ankle. Mr. Laverock was the only man in the mill with Mr. Hudson at the time. His wife and one son survive the victim of this frightful accident.

Mr. Hudson when quite a young man met with an accident that nearly proved fatal to him. While carrying a cradle he fell and the blade struck him in the neck severing the veins in such a manner that he almost bled to death. He strove to get home, still carrying the cradle, but weakened by loss of blood again fell and the point of the blade struck him in the cheek. He finally recovered, but all his life has been subject to fits that would seize him and he would writhe on the floor and dash himself about terribly.

WASHTENAW BEAN GROWERS

Met in Ann Arbor Yesterday and Organized an Association.

The Washtenaw County Bean Growers' Association of the American Society of Equity was organized at a meeting of farmers held in Ann Arbor yesterday. At the afternoon session when the actual business was done, about 75 farmers were present, addresses were made by George Wi-nans, of Hamburg, on the importance of the farmers' calling and the value of organization, and by C. M. Starks, of Webster, who was chairman of the meeting.

A constitution and by-laws were adopted, the name of the association fixed as above given, and the dates of the regular meetings were fixed to be held at the court house in Ann Arbor on the third Saturday in April and the third Saturday in August of each year, the latter meeting being the annual meeting.

Officers were elected as follows: President, George Merrill, Webster; vice president, John McDougall, Ypsilanti; secretary, K. H. Wheeler, Dexter; treasurer, Otis Cushing, Webster; board of directors: Salem, John Munn; Ypsilanti, John McDougall; Augusta, J. D. O'Brien; York, A. D. McIntyre; Pittsfield, Alfred Hutzel; Ann Arbor, J. M. Braun; Northfield, Wm. Donnegan; Webster, Frank Wheeler; Soio, Alex. Dancer; Saline, Willis Fowler; Lima, E. A. Nordman; Lyndon, S. G. Palmer; Sylvan, S. L. Gage; Dexter, R. S. Whalian. Lodi, Bridgewater and Sharon townships were not represented and no director was chosen.

Lawsuit Over a Horse.

A case that created a good deal of interest was tried before Justice J. P. Wood Tuesday. Ellsworth J. Fletcher, of Lima, sued Jacob Schlimmer, who had been working for him, for $100, the value of a horse, which it was claimed by the plaintiff had had its leg broken by a stone thrown by the defendant. The case was tried before a jury consisting of N. H. Prudden, W. H. Burkhardt, Martin Howe, Thos. Monks, Orin Thacher, and Eckhard Weiss. A. J. Sawyer, jr., and John Kalm-bach were the attorneys for Mr. Fletcher, and Turnbull & Witherell represented Mr. Schlimmer.

Several witnesses were examined, mainly for the plaintiff, and the case went to the jury who returned a verdict of no cause of action.

BOYS VS. GIRLS.

The Bloomer Girls the Big Baseball Attraction This Week.

The Junior Stars again demonstrated their ability to play good ball with a team of all home players at Ypsilanti Friday afternoon, when they defeated the East Side Athletic Club of that city by a score of 10 to 8. BeGole, Holmes, Raftery and B. Steinbach all cracked out two base hits and the playing of the boys all round was good. The score by innings was:

123456789 R.H.E.
Junior Stars...062000200-10 9 8
E. A. S. C....002213000- 8 8 6
Batteries—Holmes, Beissel and Steinbach; Witmire and Crist. Umpires—Fr. Kennedy and Frank Kirk.

A rattling good game was played Saturday afternoon between the Clinton nine and the Junior Stars. The Clinton boys won the game by a score of 5 to 4. Hits were numerous on both sides, but the Stars lost the game through errors. The score by innings was:

123456789 R.H.E.
Clinton.....030100100- 5 10 4
Junior Stars...110100010- 4 9 7

The game between the Bloomer Girls and the Junior Stars Monday afternoon brought out the largest crowd that has been seen on the ball field this year. Most of them came more out of curiosity to see how girls would play ball than from any expectation of seeing a good game. Out of the nine Bloomer Girls, four were men, but two of them were so cleverly disguised that it was difficult for many to distinguish them. The game was a listless affair and the Stars won 14 to 6. The score by innings was:

123456789 R.H.E.
Junior Stars...10850000*-14 14 1
Bloomer Girls..000100014- 6 5 4
Batteries—Holmes, Rogers and Steinbach; St. Clair, Neilson and Ollis. Umpire—Mat. Kirk.

Webster Farmers' Club Meeting.

We had the pleasure last Saturday of meeting with our old friends of the Webster Farmers' Club at their September meeting held at the home of J. W. Wing and son, in Scio. There was, as there always is, a large turnout of the members, some coming from as far off as Hamburg, in Livingston county. The questions discussed were, "Which is the most profitable, a large farm or a small one?" and the primary reform question. Both were presented by Cyrus Starks, and were warmly and intelligently discussed by G. A. Peters, E. A. Nordman, Lewis Chamberlain, Mr. Lyons, Rev. Morrison, G. W. Merrill, Geo. Wing, and others. The sentiment of the farmers of Webster is strongly in favor of primary reform, in spite of the miserable primary reform election farce that was perpetrated on them, in common with other Republican voters in this county, two years ago.

A Pleasant Surprise Party.

George J. Crowell was 70 years old last Sunday and in commemoration of the event a party of his brother Maccabees and their wives went to his home Tuesday evening and gave him a surprise. Mr. and Mrs. Crowell gave their visitors a hearty welcome and the evening was very pleasantly spent in visiting and the discussing of the dainty refreshments that had been provided. During the evening the band appeared on the scene and enlivened the proceedings with some good music. The visitors left with Mr. Crowell a handsome leather upholstered rocking chair as a remembrance of the day on which he came into his Maccabee pension.

CHAPTER XVIII—Continued.

In the midst of the oval spaces a group of maidens and warriors were gathered to watch the wonderful flower-faced woman play at quoits under the instruction of a noble tutor. Seburt paid her the tribute of a quickly drawn breath, even as he took his eyes from her to scan the butterfly pages who ran to and fro, recovering the gilded rings. In all the picture there was but one figure crowned with such raven locks as had distinguished Fridtjof the Bold, and that figure belonged to a girl standing directly opposite by the mossy curb of the old well, which, guarded by a circle of carefully tended trees, rose like an altar in the center of the inclosure.

Something about her, while it was entirely strange, was yet so absurdly familiar. Now she looked up to answer some jesting words, and the man in the passage saw her smile and shake back her clustering curls with a gesture so familiar . . . so familiar.

Rothgar's gloating eyes detected light breaking in his victim's face, incredulity, amazement, consternation; and he began to jeer under his breath. "A great joy is this that you see your Fridtjof again! Why do you not go in boldy and rescue him? Does he not look to be in need of your help?" To stifle his laughter, he muffled his head in his cloak and leaned, shaking, against the wall.

Flushing a deeper and deeper red, the Lord of Ivarsdale stared at the smiling maiden. Just so, a hundred times, she had lifted her sparkling face toward him, and he—fool that he was! where had been his eyes? Turning, he forced a laugh between his teeth. "I do not deny you the right to be amused. You speak truly that she needs no help from me. I will hinder you no longer."

Rothgar leaped forward to bar the passage, and the mantle that fell from been drawing heavily on his scant stock of patience. Suddenly, he ran out completely. Seizing the Etheling by the shoulders, before he could raise finger in resistance, he thrust him through the open doorway into the garden, a target for every startled glance. After which, he himself stalked grimly on to await him at the city gate.

CHAPTER XIX.

How the Lord of Ivarsdale Paid His Debt.

A moment, it was to Randalin, Frode's daughter, as if the heavens had let fall a star at her feet. Then her wonder changed to exultation, as she realized that it was not chance but because of her bidding that the man she loved stood before her. Glorifying in his deed, she stood shining sun-like upon him until the red cloaks of the advancing warriors came between like scarlet clouds.

"Who are you?" "What is your errand?" "How came you here?" she heard them demand. "You are an English spy!" "Seize him!" "Bind him!"

The scarlet cloaks drew together into a swaying mass; a dozen blades glittered in the sun. With a gasp, she came out of her trance to catch the royal mantle.

"Lord King, you promised to give him safety!"

The seriousness which had darkened Canute's face at the intrusion vanished off it as breath-mist of a mirror. "Is it only your Englishman?" he asked, between a laugh and a frown.

She grudging the time the words took. "Yes, yes! Pray be quick as you can!"

He did not seem bitten by her haste, but he took a step forward, clanging his gold-bound scabbard against the stone well-curbing to make himself

A while Canute's keen eyes weighed him; then their sky was cleared of the last cloud. The best expression of which his brilliant face was capable was on it as he turned and held out his hand to the girl beside him.

"Shall we pledge our friendship anew, Frode's daughter?" was all he said; but she knew from his look that he had taken her under his shield for all time to come. For an instant, as she yielded her trembling fingers to his palm, her groping spirit turned and clung to him, craving his sympathy.

It seemed that he divined the appeal, for with the hand that pressed her he drew her forward a step: "Is it not your wish to speak to the Lord of Ivarsdale yourself and thank him for keeping his troth with Fridtjof?" he said kindly; and without waiting for an answer, moved away and joined a group of those who had been his companions before the interruption.

At last she stood face to face with the man she loved, face to face, and alone. And still he neither spoke to her nor looked at her! So strange and terrible was it all that it gave her resolution to speak and end it. Her Viking blood could not color her cheeks, but her Viking courage found her a whisper in which to offer her plea for the "sun-browned boy-bred wench."

"You need not think that I did it willingly, lord. Very roughly has fortune handled me. The reason I first came into camp-life was that I trusted some one too much, knowing no more of the world than my father's house. And after the bonds were laid on me, it was not easy to rule matters. The helplessness of a woman is before the eyes of all people—"

His words broke through hers: "No more, I beseech you!" His voice was broken and unsteady as she had never known it. "Who am I that I should blame you? Do not think me so—so despicable! If unknowingly I have done you any wrong when I owe you—"

He paused and she guessed that it had swept over him afresh how much he did owe her. Perhaps also how much he had promised to pay?

At last he turned and came a step nearer her, courteously and noble as he had always been. "I owe to you everything I have, even life itself," he said, "and I offer them all in payment of the debt. May I ask the king to give you to me for my wife?"

In its infinite gentleness, his voice was almost tender. For as long as the space between one breath and the next, her spirit leaped up and stretched out its arm to its joy; but she stayed it on the threshold of utterance to look fearfully into his face, whose every shade was open to her as the day. Looking into his eyes, she knew that it was no more than pity. He guessed that she loved him and he pitied her; but he could not forgive her unmaidenliness, he could not love her.

TREES THAT MAKE MUSIC.

Pleasant Sounds Produced by the Action of the Wind.

As the visitors passed through the botanical gardens, a flutelike whistle made itself heard—a sweet and pleasant sound that rose and fell as the wind rose and fell.

"What is that whistling," the visitors said.

The head forester, laughing, answered: "That is our whistling tree playing an obligato in your honor. Come this way, and I'll show it to you."

The tree stood in the sun. The breeze rocked its branches, and a clear chorus, as of flutes, arose.

"Well," murmured a man, "this is almost uncanny."

"The tree," said the forester, "comes from the Soudan. You perceive the pods on the branches' ends? Well, it is these pods that do the whistling. They are hollow, and holes, caused by the wind or by insects, perforate them. Thus they are musical instruments—penny whistles. Blown through by the breeze they give forth a flutelike sound."

The south wind bent the tree almost to the ground, and the music was shaken forth loud and sweet.

"Strange, isn't it?" said the forester, and he added:

"The tree does well in this climate. It may become popular here. But it would never do to have it near the house, for on windy nights it would keep the folks awake."

The Homeless of London.

From an investigation made by the medical officer of the London County Council it is estimated that one in every 2,000 of the population of the city of London is homeless.

A census of the persons who could not pay for a night's lodging in the cheapest of lodging houses and passed the night out of doors in the streets, or under arches, or in the recesses of front doors, or on landings and staircases of tenements where the doors had been left open, revealed such a number in a certain district that the officer felt justified in making the estimate presented to the council. On the night this investigation was undertaken there were 6,000 vacant beds in the lodging houses.—New York Medical Record.

Wanted to See the Work.

Dr. Beckwith, whose hobby is the Atlantic City beach patrol, and who is in personal charge of that large corps of life savers, was visited in his hospital tent on the beach by an old Cincinnati friend and his seven-year-old daughter. With great enthusiasm the doctor explained his various methods of reviving persons dragged from the water. The little girl listened with wondering eyes. When the doctor stopped she fairly gasped: "Oh, papa, I wish somebody would get drown-dee!"—New York Times.

Names That Are Hoodoos

If one should be so bold as to characterize the superstitious sailor as silly he would at once declare that there is sufficient reason for his belief and would proceed to prove that war vessels named after stinging and venomous things have been unlucky, and that the country should not be so indifferent to the men who follow "a life on the ocean wave" as to organize a mosquito fleet.

That Snake is regarded as an unfortunate name for a vessel is shown by the fact that two of that name have been lost, one in 1781 and the other in 1847; but no vessel bearing that name is known to exist now. Serpent, which is only a substitute name for Snake, is an unlucky one also, for the one wrecked in 1892 was the fourth British war vessel of that name to meet the same fate. Viper has been an unlucky name in the British navy. The first one was wrecked in 1780, but the Admiralty would not swerve, and so kept the name on the list, each vessel meeting its doom, and the fourth was lost only recently. The French navy has also been unlucky with vessels so named. The Viper, used in the British service after she became a prize from the French, was lost in 1793. The second was lost a year later, the third in 1797 and the fourth was recently lost in a collision off Guernsey.

The Cobra, another British war vessel, was lost recently at the same time as the Viper. Among other vessels similarly named and which met fates other than in battle are the Rattlesnake, in 1781; the Alligator, in 1789; the Crocodile, in 1784; the Adder, in 1846; three Lizards, two Dragons and one Basilisk. All of these were of the British navy. The list could be made larger by citing the records of other navies.

The Norsemen, who were so fond of naming their vessels against the laws of superstition and using hideous heads of dragons and reptiles on their high prows, were less unfortunate, and these did not meet with frequent disasters. They did have a belief, however, that it was unlucky and a sacrilege to select such a name as did Lord Dunraven for his first yacht to challenge for the America's cup, the Valkyrie. And this belief was strengthened when she was sunk by the Satanita. The second challenger, with the same name, gave trouble, and she was broken up after only a short existence.—Navy League Journal.

Given a Jammy Sentence

Capt. Krech of the Hamburg-American line's steamship Graf Waldersee was called upon during the trip to pass sentence upon a thief caught stealing aboard the vessel. His manner of conducting the case and his judgment were commended by all the passengers.

Several steerage passengers on the earlier days of the trip frequently missed food and sweetmeats which they had taken aboard, and nothing was known of the culprit until one day a woman, going to her bunk, found a little, flaxen-haired girl busily engaged in emptying a pot of jam which had been concealed there. The little one had the jam plastered all over her face and hands, and in that condition the woman who discovered her led her to the chief steward. He in turn took her before the captain on the bridge.

Many of the passengers, seeing the little girl being dragged before the captain, gathered about to learn the cause of the trouble. Capt. Krech, who on his ship, like other captains, is judge, jury and court of appeals, listened to the charges with a stern look. Besides learning that the little girl had taken the jam he also learned that her father and mother were poor and could not provide any sweetmeats for her. When the case had been presented Capt. Krech thought over the evidence for a time and, as the girl was caught with the evidence all over her face and hands, he pronounced her guilty.

"This is a very serious case," he said, "and must be dealt with accordingly. The penalty for the first offense is imprisonment. For the second it is spanking, and for the third it is hanging or exclusion from America. But the facts in this case are such that I shall have to be more severe. I therefore sentence you to eat the best jam this ship can produce every time you feel like it. The jam will be supplied by the steward."

The little girl could not understand the meaning of all the talk, but when the steward brought forth a big pot of jam, as ordered, she gave the captain a pretty little smile and marched off with it. From that time on her face was never clean.—New York Times.

The Power of Love

Quite recently, at Waterford, a pretty and fascinating young lady, who was very popular in the town, fell ill and died. Her death occasioned general regret. She had many friends, and a large number followed her remains to the cemetery. The last rites were said and all returned to their homes, saddened at the loss of one who had been so dear to them.

An extraordinary sequel occurred. A peasant farmer, living in the vicinity of the cemetery, rose early next morning to go to his work. Happening to look over the wall of the cemetery, he was astonished to see a man on his knees beside the newly filled grave. The peasant watched and saw him feverishly scraping away the earth with his hands, not looking aside for one moment.

The onlooker remained with his eyes fixed on the strange sight. To his amazement the mysterious visitor continued his gresome task with unabated vigor, until presently the coffin was laid bare. Then, with the aid of an iron implement, the man forcibly wrenched off the lid.

The climax in the weird drama had been reached. Bending down over the open shell the stranger who had so wantonly disregarded the sacredness of the spot, gazed long and earnestly upon the face of the dead girl. Then, imprinting one passionate kiss upon her forehead, he raised himself and readjusted the lid, afterward proceeding to fill in the earth over the coffin again.

Meanwhile, however, the authorities had been informed of the occurrence, and the police arrived and arrested the extraordinary intruder. He was taken to the police station and formally charged.

In his possession was found a telegram, handed in at Waterford, and delivered to him at Bristol, telling him of the death of the young lady. It appeared that on receipt of the news he took his passage immediately for Waterford and, on arriving, repaired to the graveside.

When arrested he said: "They thought they could prevent me seeing her, but they were mistaken." He was taken before the magistrate, who committed him to an asylum.—London Mirror.

Disease a Dear Article

By careful calculation the cost of malarial fever in Texas alone is estimated by Dr. Woldert to be at least $5,000,000 a year and probably nearer $10,000,000. One person in twelve in some places is down with the disease. What a good business plan it would be to save three-fourths or nine-tenths of this wasted money by preventing the disease. No physician doubts the possibility; the methods of prevention are well known and are easily carried out.

The public, however—at least its lawmakers—cannot be brought to realize the wisdom of such economy. Money can be found for "junketing tours," public buildings of a political character, and a hundred less necessary measures, but nothing, or next to nothing, for stopping the greatest loss to the community—that from disease. For every dollar spent to pay public health officers and the expense of preventive medicine there can be $100 saved.

Ignorant Children.

In a class in a Manchester (Eng.) school not one of the children knew what a bee was. This statement was made at Norwich the other day at the conference of the Museums Association by Mr. Fritchard, of Boston, America. The ignorance in his own town was even greater. Statistics showed that 77 per cent. of the school children there had never seen a crow, 57 per cent. had never beheld a frog, 20 per cent. had not seen a butterfly, 31 per cent. did not know an elm tree, 75 per cent. did not know what season of the year it was, and 50 per cent. could not say what butter was made of.

It is this financial aspect unfortunately that must be emphasized, and which, long enough and loudly enough reiterated, may at last bring about some attention practical law-making on the part of our legislative bodies. Some philanthropist should give a $1,000 prize for the best essay on the subject, "The Expense of Disease to the State," designed to show the common people how much could be saved by boards of health if made active and powerful by public money and support.

Such a pamphlet sent and repeatedly sent to every voter should in time establish competent public health officers and then lessen the mortality rate by half and the morbidity figures by three-fourths. For every death there are two years of sickness and even with our present knowledge at least half of this waste of money and life is unnecessary.—American Magazine.

Motive Power in China.

From time immemorial the Chinese have depended upon draft animals and man power for transportation by land. The wheelbarrow and the clumsy bullock cart are still used and it is no uncommon sight to see a "freight train" consisting of barrows, with men pushing at the heavy handles and each man's wife walking ahead, pulling bravely at the load. Railroads are coming in slowly. Between Canton and Fatsan are a number of the little old locomotives that did good service for so many years on the elevated railway lines in New York city. These locomotives, by the way, are now pretty well scattered all over the habitable globe.

Danced on Raft in Salt Mine.

A famous salt mine dance was given at Wellisca, Austria. One of the most singular features was a great raft, which was made to float on the surface of an underground lake in the mine. On this the dances were conducted, some 300 persons being present. The place was illuminated by torches, and the splendor and impressiveness of it all may be imagined.

Old Man's Secret.

Alpena, Mich., Sept. 5 (Special).—Seventy-five years of age but hale and hearty is Mr. Jerome K. Fournier, of this place, and to those who ask the secret of his splendid health he gives the good advice "Use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

When asked for his reason for so strongly recommending the Great American Kidney Remedy, Mr. Fournier related the following experience: "I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills because they cured me of Diabetes. I suffered with my kidneys for a long time and suffered terribly from those Urinary Troubles that are so general among aged people.

"Then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and eight boxes of them cured my kidneys, regulated my water and made me feel like a hearty young man."

Dodd's Kidney Pills make the old feel young because they make sound kidneys. Sound kidneys mean health and health is the other name for youth.

Burdened With Big Names.

Pity the babies of a presidential year. Through life they will have to stagger under the burden of names other men have made famous, and they can neither live up to them nor live them down. It is like a brand of nonentity stamped upon those who otherwise might have lived peacefully in respectable mediocrity among thousands of their unmarked fellows.—Baltimore American.

Where Buttons Are Made.

Glass buttons are chiefly made in Bohemia, where children are largely employed. Pearl buttons are almost exclusively a Vienna product, but shirt buttons are made chiefly in Birmingham, which is also the seat of the metal button trade. The most extensive kind of button manufacturing is that of the Parisian and Berlin novelties.

His View of It.

The story is told by Dr. Abraham Jacobi that a gentleman on being introduced to Dr. Gerster some years ago inquired: "Are you the brother of Etelka Gerster, the great prima donna?" "No," replied the doctor, "Etelka is the sister of Arpad Gerster, the famous surgeon."

Tar to Lay Just.

Three and a half miles of road in the neighborhood of the Bois de Boulogne in Paris have been treated with tar by the French Anti-dust League.

BUILDING FOOD

To Bring the Babies Around.

When a little human machine (or large one) goes wrong, nothing is so important as the selection of food which will always bring it around again.

"My little baby boy fifteen months old had pneumonia, then came brain fever, and no sooner had he got over these than he began to cut teeth and being so weak, he was frequently thrown into convulsions," says a Colorado mother.

"I decided a change might help, so took him to Kansas City for a visit. When we got there he was so very weak when he would cry he would sink away and seemed like he would die."

"When I reached my sister's home she said immediately that we must feed him Grape-Nuts and, although I had never used the food, we got some and for a few days gave him just the juice of Grape-Nuts and milk. He got stronger so quickly we were soon feeding him the Grape-Nuts itself and in a wonderfully short time he fattened right up and became strong and well."

"That showed me something worth knowing and, when later on my girl came, I raised her on Grape-Nuts and she is a strong healthy baby and has been. You will see what a strong, photograph I send you is now, but he didn't look anything like that before we found this nourishing food. Grape-Nuts nourished him back to strength when he was so weak he couldn't keep any other food on his stomach." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

All children can be built to a more sturdy and healthy condition upon Grape-Nuts and cream. The food contains the elements nature demands, from which to make the soft gray filling in the nerve centers and sturdy nerves absolutely insure a healthy body.

Look in each pkg. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

"The man in the passage saw her smile."

his face showed no laughter of mouth or eyes. "I have not as yet spoken harm, but it is not sure that I do not mean it," he said. It is not allowed me to take revenge on her for her treachery, but I think I need not spare you, as you got the profit of her falsehoods."

The Etheling's sword was out while the other was still speaking. "By Saint Mary, do you imagine that I am fearful of you. Never in my life was I more thirsty for fighting."

But Rothgar pushed the blade aside with his naked palm. "Not here, where she could come between. Besides, the king wants a thrust at you first. Nor have you yet greeted Randalin, Frode's daughter."

On the verge of an angry retort, Seburt paused to regard him, a suspicion darting spark-life through his mind. Did the Jotun's words smack of jealousy? It was true that it needed not that to explain their bitterness, and yet—

What more natural than that the king's foster-brother should love the king's ward? If it was so, it was small wonder the girl had said that he would slay her when he discovered her unfaithfulness. Unfaithfulness! Seburt started. Had she not in that very word acknowledged a bond. Not only did he love her, but she must have returned his affections. The spark of suspicion flared into a flame.

The young noble's lips curled as he glanced at the warrior beside him, at the coarse face under the unkempt locks, at the huge body in its trappings of stained gaudiness. Involuntarily, he looked again at the group by the well. She was very winsome in her smiling, and the graceful lines of her trailing robes, their delicacy and soft richness, threw about her all the glamour of rank and state. He clenched his hands at the thought of such treasures thrown down for brutal feet to trample on; and his heart grew hot with anger against her, anger and scorn that were almost loathing, that she who looked so fine should be so poor, so—

But he did not finish his thought, for on its heels came another, a recollection that stayed his anger and changed his scorn to compunction. However dear Rothgar might have been to her, he could be dear no longer, or she would never have betrayed his trust and dared his mate to save Ivarsdale Tower—and its master.

Meanwhile, the son of Lodbrok had heard. "Unhand the Lord of Ivarsdale, my chiefs," he ordered. "We will accept your greeting now, Englishman, even though you have been hindered in the giving of it," he said politely.

Standing there, watching the young noble advance, it seemed to Randalin that there was not room between her heart-beats for her breathing. How soon would he look up and know her? How would his face change when he did? Presently it occurred to her to suspect that he had already recognized her—perhaps from the doorway—and in her rush of relief at the idea of the shock being over, she found even an impulse of playfulness. Borrowing one of Eifgiva's graces, she swept back her rustling draperies in a ceremonious courtesy before him.

Again he bent in his bow of stiff embarrassment; but he did not meet her glance even then, returning his gaze, soldier-like, to the king.

The awkwardness of the pause seemed to afford Canute a kind of mischievous amusement, for all the courtesy in which he veiled it. His voice was almost too cheerful as he addressed the Etheling. "Now as always it can be told about my men that they stretch out their hands to greet strangers," he said, "but I ask you not to judge all Danish hospitality from this reception, Lord Ivarsdale. Since Frode's daughter has told me who you are, I take it for granted that they were wrong, and that you came here with no worse intention than to obey her invitation."

His glance sharpened a little as he pronounced those last words, and the girl's hands clasped each other more tightly as she perceived the snare in the phrase. If the Etheling should answer unheedingly or obscurely, so that it should not be made quite clear to the king—

But it appeared that the Etheling was equally anxious that Canute should not believe him the lover of Frode's daughter. His reply was distinct to bluntness: "Part of your guess is as wrong as part of it is right, king of the Danes. Certainly I came here with no thought of evil toward you, but neither had I any thought severer of the Lady Randalin, of whose existence I was ignorant. I answered the call of Fridtjof Frodeson, to whom I owe and I pay all the service which lies in my power—as it is likely you know."

JAPAN'S EMPEROR.

Very few people have ever known the emperor of Japan closely. He must be undergoing something of an evolution, for theoretically he is designed as a national figurehead rather than as a natural ruler. The present crisis must have brought him out as never before.

The English sometimes date their pedigrees back to the conqueror with a certain pride. But Mutsuhito-tenno, emperor of Japan, is the present representative of the oldest royal dynasty extant. He is the 121st emperor of his dynasty, which dates back in an unbroken line 2,555 years. He is the direct descendant of Gimmu, the "divine conqueror," who, according to Japanese mythology, "descended from heaven on the white bird of the clouds."

Up to the opening of the present war the Japanese always carried the Oriental notion that their emperor should maintain a certain seclusion appropriate to his position. The fact that he was hardly known personally to his own people made him, however, more free to go among them incognito, which he is said to have done extensively.

In the emperor's reign the bands of feudalism that bound Japan to the middle ages have been broken. He granted a constitution voluntarily. Literature, science and industry were encouraged. It was only the remarkable advancement in the reign of Mutsuhito that made it possible for Oriental Japan to be equal to the task of a possible successful war with Russia.

War is costly, but it often lends the most powerful stimulus to advancement. Japan has made more progress within a few years than other Oriental nations have accomplished in centuries.—Boston Globe.

FARMERS EAST AND WEST.

An Iowa farmer who was bred in New England, after making a visit to the old farm, remarks that he observes an absence of the old-time thrift and application that once existed among the farmers of New England. He says they work 300 days a year in Iowa and that the New England farmer would have more "cash money" if he would labor on his farm at least one-third of each twenty-four hours for at least nine months in the months attend to the work of turning year, and during the other three the forests into fields. He admits that the New England farmer can make more dollars from an acre of corn than they can in the west, but that the western farmer makes it up by having more acres under cultivation.—Boston Globe.

RUSSIA SHOULD RECALL HISTORY.

Few, if any, incidents in her history have reflected more credit upon Russia than her declaration of neutral rights, in 1780, which led to the formation of the first armed neutrality. It is true that that declaration was formerly, perhaps first, made by Frederick the Great of Prussia, and that from him it was carried to Russia and suggested to the Russian emperor by France. But Russia has always had the popular credit of it, and it would seem ungracious to try to rob her of it.

Rather it is profitable to recall that in that famous declaration Russia limited the list of contraband articles to the items of arms and ammunition and sulphur. Nay, more, the immediate provocation of that act of Russia was Spain's seizure of two Russian vessels laden with foodstuffs. It would be a strange turn about for Russia now to repudiate the principles of her famous declaration of neutral rights and herself to approve and commit the very acts against which it was a protest and a prohibition. In 1870 she organized an armed neutrality to uphold the principle that food was not contraband of war. Can it be that in 1904 she will set herself against all the world by declaring it is contraband of war? In a century and a quarter has the world, in her opinion, relapsed so far toward barbarism?—New York Tribune.

THE RUSSIAN SOLDIER'S TEST.

That the Russians have fought so well after three months of steady defeats, and retrograde movements speaks highly for the character of the rank and file. Over-burdened and ill-shod as they have been, fighting far from home in tropical heat, for reasons unknown to most of them, the position of the enlisted men has been had enough to try the Spartan three hundred. Should there now be a severe defeat, followed by a rapid retirement of the army upon Mukden or Herbin, the troops will be subjected to the severest test to which armed men can be exposed. Only an army splendidly disciplined, well commanded, devoted to its officers, and enthusiastic in its cause can come through such an experience without disastrous results. Of the Russian army of today it is only known that the men are generally devoted to their officers. That must not be forgotten, moreover, that the early disasters of 1877 in Bulgaria did not prevent the Russians from going to the very walls of Constantinople later.—New York Post.

IS CRIME INCREASING?

Whenever a crime of unusual turpitude is committed, and particularly whenever a number of such forbidding events occur in quick succession, we hear much about the "epidemic of crime," accompanied by lugubrious comment to the effect that wickedness is increasing, that it is outrunning the growth of population, that the country is rapidly degenerating. It has become the settled conviction of minds chronically indisposed to look upon the sunny side of things that the criminal population is increasing at a more alarming rate than at any time in the country's history, yet no prof is at hand to support this pessimistic view.

Penologists are awaiting trustworthy and sufficiently comprehensive statistics on this interesting subject. Samuel J. Barrows, Commissioner for the United States on the International Prison Commission, declared in a paper published in 1903 that for want of any comparative statistics in the United States it is extremely difficult to say whether criminals are increasing with reference to the population, inasmuch as so much depends upon the activity of the police. Mr. Barrows observes that as social relations multiply the standard of propriety and good conduct and of social protection is constantly raised, and when new laws are rigidly enforced "we may expect an increase for the time being in the number of offenders until society has adjusted itself to the new requirements."

It may be noted that the system of news gathering has been brought to a high pitch of efficiency in our day. Every crime of importance occurring almost anywhere in the country is immediately reported. We hear very much more about crime than our forebears did. The diligence of the reporters and the news agencies creates the impression that the world is growing worse. The law-abiding millions attract little attention.—Philadelphia Ledger.

CULTIVATE A HOBBY.

"Since the home woman is the indispensable woman, it is a pity she so often allows herself to fall in her full development and reward," says an editorial in Harper's Bazar. "She is apt to be so unselfish and so conscientious that she lets the four walls of home narrow about her, and the simplest remedy is to have at least one outside interest. The woman who takes up one hobby, one charity, one line of work beyond her household cares, and follows it steadily, will find that it brings freshness and power with it. It becomes both outlook and inflow to her. And the woman with a hobby grows old so slowly that she often never grows old at all, but keeps to the last that freshness of interest which is the mark of youth."

SPORT AS A PEACEMAKER.

International sporting events are of immense value in promoting good feeling between neighboring peoples. Men are like boys in that respect; good playmates seldom become very bitter enemies. Orientals break bread together and are thereby debarred from lifting their hands against each other. Occidentals break "records" in friendly competition, with a like effect.

The Lipton races for the America's Cup have been great promoters of the Anglo-American "entente." They do not, of course, decide the question for statesmen; but they incline the common people—who are the rules of both nations—toward a friendly policy. The automobile races between the French and the German chauffeurs have also been having an undoubted effect in bringing those two peoples together.

King Sport is a peaceful Prince. Friendly sporting clubs can do quite as much for the world's peace as so many peace societies with their solemn resolutions and their lurid definitions of war. Peoples who visit each other as competing athletes and who entertain each other so generously that the visiting club never has quite a fair chance for the trophy, can with the utmost difficulty be induced to go gunning for each other in deadly earnest.

The Sportsman's Cup is the modern substitute for the pipe of peace.—Montreal Herald.

A CHANCE FOR PUBLICITY.

If it were possible to compel the national committees to keep an accurate record of and publish a true account of their expenditures for campaign purposes a work of the utmost importance would be accomplished. England has virtually eliminated the bribery of voters in her parliamentary elections by requiring that each candidate's campaign expenses shall be recorded and made public.

TRAITS OF PRESIDENT KRUGER.

Poultney Bigelow Writes of Great South African Statesman.
Poultney Bigelow, writing before the Boer war, gave a very interesting impression of ex-President Kruger. "The president of the South African Republic," he wrote, "is indeed a grand old savage from one point of view and a noble statesman from another. He is theoretically the first citizen of the most democratic community, yet in practice he surrounds himself with a tawdry splendor that would shock many a crowned head of Europe. When I first had the honor of meeting this anachronistic phenomenon he was drinking coffee and throwing out a cloud of strong tobacco smoke but a still greater volume of violent language, emphasized by the thumping of his massive fist upon the table. The room in which he received was crowded with long-haired, full-bearded and stolid-featured fellow burghers, who reminded me partly of Russian priests, partly of Californian miners, and partly of certain alleged portraits of the apostles. I feared that I had unwittingly interrupted a cabinet meeting, but later it turned out that this was Mr. Kruger's usual 'at home.' When the president is not at his office he delights in nothing so much as entertaining his countrymen with coffee, tobacco and political proverbs. He harrangues his visitors with the voice of a bull in distress, and they like it. He governs by personal contact and spoken parables, and it is his boast that he knows personally every citizen of his republic."

Swinging on the Gate.

I can see a picture painted. I can smell the drying hay. Where the busy mowers rattle through the lazy summer's day? I can see the hungry plowboy wading through the billowed corn. With expectant ear to windward, listening for the dinner horn. While unconscious of necessity, the future or of fate, I make wondrous childish journeys as I swing upon the gate.

Strange how back among the many recollections of the past Memory will grope and wander till it brings to us at last Some poor, foolish, fond remembrance, seeming hardly worthy the while. Yet some wondrous potent like a tender passing smile, Fleeting, gone, and soon forgotten—yet remembered by and by With a swelling in the bosom and a dimming of the eye.

Knew His Master's Voice.

The wonderful instinct and intelligence of dogs was illustrated a few days since where one recognized his owner's voice over the telephone at a distance of some fourteen miles. The dog's master, who was going out of the state, sent the animal to a suburban city, where he was to be cared for. A few days after the keeper of the animal was called up and the dog placed on a chair and the telephone receiver placed at his ear. His master spoke to the dog, who recognized his voice and demonstrated it by vociferously barking. It was with much difficulty that the animal could be induced to go away from the telephone long after his master had rung off, the proprietor of the kennels afterward informed him.

Advice to Graduates.

In addressing the Cornell students this year President Schurman broke away from the beaten path of baccalaureate counsel and exhorted graduates in regard to duties which are generally left to their own discretion. "I feel deeply," he said, "that every young man should look forward to providing for a wife and family, which is beyond doubt the chief blessing vouchsafed to man in this earthly career. I have no patience with the college graduates who deliberately elect bachelorhood, whose social circle is the club and whose religion is a refined and fastidious epicureanism. It would not be worth while maintaining colleges and universities for the production of froth like that."

Would Attract Attention.

A small boy from the East Side wandered over to Fifth avenue. With a large crowd of sightseers he hovered on the edge of a red velvet strip which stretched beneath a canopy across the pavement to the door of a great mansion. He exclaimed in awe: "Hully Gee! I wisht I was in-wit!"

Malini and Oscar, Both Conjurers.

Malini, the conjurer, according to an individual with a talent for remembering trifles, paid a visit to Oscar and discovered the latter to be a conjurer, too. "I make to appear," said Malini, "a egg from your mouth." And he did. Much to the amazement of Oscar an egg was extracted from his lips. "It is nothing," observed the cook. "From the egg I will produce an omelette which cannot be rivaled in magic." He made good with a chafing dish, and Malini ate the omelette. After which he remarked: "I make to appear another egg!" "All right," said Oscar: "You must be hungry."

Fibroid Tumors Cured.
A distressing case of Fibroid Tumor, which baffled the skill of Boston doctors. Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, Mass., in the following letter tells how she was cured, after everything else failed, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Hayes' First Letter Appealing to Mrs. Pinkham for Help:
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been under Boston doctors' treatment for a long time without any relief. They tell me I have a fibroid tumor. I cannot sit down without great pain, and the soreness extends up my spine. I have bearing-down pains both back and front. My abdomen is swollen, and I have had flowing spells for three years. My appetite is not good. I cannot walk or be on my feet for any length of time. The symptoms of Fibroid Tumor given in your little book accurately describe my case, so I write to you for advice."—(Signed) Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Note the result of Mrs. Pinkham's advice—although she advised Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, to take her medicine—which she knew would help her—her letter contained a mass of additional instructions as to treatment, all of which helped to bring about the happy result.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Some time ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully, and to-day I am a well woman. "The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system. I can walk miles now."

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female trouble of any kind to give it a faithful trial."—(Signed) Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony—or take the place of the health and happiness which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought to Mrs. Hayes.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women; all ovarian troubles; tumors; inflammations; ulceration; falling and displacements of the womb; backache; irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation. Surely the volume and character of the testimonial letters we are daily printing in the newspapers can leave no room for doubt.

Mrs. Hayes at her above address will gladly answer any letters which sick women may write for fuller information about her illness. Her gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so genuine and heartfelt that she thinks no trouble is too great for her to take in return for her health and happiness.

Truly it is said that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing so many women, and no other medicine; don't forget this when some druggist wants to sell you something else.

Three of my brothers have died of heart trouble, and I thought I was going the same way, but about two and a half years ago I got a pamphlet about Dr. Miller's New Heart Cure and thought I would try a few bottles. After using them I recovered, and have had better health since then than before for several years. I can heartily recommend them for heart trouble."—REV. THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1904.

At the Jackson Republican county convention held last Thursday, the whole of the nominees were men from the city of Jackson despite the protests of the country delegates. It will take country voters to elect a ticket composed entirely of city fellows, and the Republicans of Jackson county may find out in November that they have made only one other of the many mistakes that the Michigan Republican machine is making these days.

The Republican machine got a great swipe on the head yesterday in the judicial convention at Saginaw, when the only man of its slate to be nominated was Russell C. Ostrander, of Lansing, for the seven years term. Chas. A. Blair, of Jackson, was nominated for the five years term, and Judge Aaron V. McAlvay, of Manistee, for the three years term. Both of the latter are anti-machine men.

Manchester Enterprise: Now you may expect to see political candidates most any time. They want to know how you are and how you're making it. Also, how you will vote.

Yes, and this is about the only time in two years that they would care whether you are alive or dead, or would even know you as you pass by.

Several complaints have been made lately of flowers being taken from graves in Oak Grove cemetery where they had been placed by the hands of loving friends. One grave in particular seems to be the special mark for these acts, the flowers having been removed five or six times this summer and the dishes in which they had been placed thrown away. Those who are guilty of these actions possibly think they are cute and cunning, but how would they like to have these things done to them?

FARMERS MUST WAKE UP

To Escape from the Rule of the Republican Machine.

When millionaires in Michigan become disgusted with the actions of the Republican machine in this state and begin protesting in no uncertain tones against the taxes it is heaping up on the people at large, it is not at all to be wondered at that the farming community and others are also waking up to a realization that there must be something doing among them to escape from the excessive burden of the machine methods.

A. W. Wright, the millionaire lumberman and capitalist, of Alma, who has been a Republican voter since he voted for John C. Fremont in 1856, and who owns and personally manages $400,000 worth of farms in Gratiot county, says of the state Republican machine as follows:

"The state administration is today absolutely in control of a machine. It is a corrupt machine, and it is continually working to perpetuate its power. The majority of the voters of the state will one of these years repudiate this machine. They may not do it this year, but they would if they only considered how the machine to keep itself in power is increasing their taxes. The machine under the present condition of things names the Republican party's candidates for state offices and members of the legislature and you may be sure they won't relinquish that power until the rank and file of the party wake up and compel them to do it. The rank and file did not make the machine, but they can smash it with a primary reform law, and as I said one of these years they will do it."

"I do not think the farmers of Michigan realize what an expensive thing this machine rule is for them. I am something of a farmer myself, for I own 20 farms in this section and I drive to all of them. Recently I was visiting a nephew who has a farm of 100 acres in Canada, 30 miles north of London. He has a brick house on it and fine buildings, and it is well stocked, and the neighborhood is an old settled one. There is no better farming land anywhere. I asked him about his taxes. The gross amount he pays for all purposes is $28 a year, beside seven days' work improving the highways. On the same valuation of farm property here in Michigan I am paying at the rate of $75 a year taxes. Where does this great excess go? It doesn't go into building roads, for our roads are not as good as the roads in the London district. Our machine made rulers may be able to explain. I never was a tax dodger, but these exorbitant taxes drive many honest people into making false statements to the assessors and hiding taxable property. Such a rapid increase in taxation that we have had in Michigan in the past 10 or 12 years is driving capital out of Michigan. I say it is time for reform in state affairs."

"When Bliss was elected governor I was hopeful that he would show himself to be independent of the machine. I had known him for 30 years. He threw away the opportunity to give the party and the whole people an administration that we could remember with satisfaction. I have been greatly disappointed in him. The machine bosses have had full control of him, and now I am told these same bosses brought about the nomination of Warner. I do not know either Warner or Ferris. I supported Homer Warren because Detroit friends told me he had a mind of his own."

Asked "Who will get your vote for governor this year," Mr. Wright said:

"Well, now, several of my Republican neighbors have told me they are going to vote for Ferris. I think that is all the reply I care to make to that question at this time."

"The government of the United States is supposed to be one of the people, by the people and for the people, but it has sadly degenerated into one of the bosses (machine), by the bosses and for the bosses. It rests with the farmers to overcome this condition of affairs, assisted by those in the city and villages who are independent in thought and action and not under the rule of the bosses."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remediation. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; unless cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous services.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE MICHIGAN NEWS

Showing What's Doing in All Sections of the State

SUGAR BEETS.

New Scale of Prices and Division of Territory.

The Michigan Beet Sugar Manufacturers' association has determined to take the last step toward meeting the demands of farmers in an effort to induce the planting of sufficient acreage to supply the factories of the state and will for next season offer three forms of contracts. The action has been under consideration for months and was not agreed upon until after the Sanilac Sugar Co. insisted upon being permitted to put out a flat rate contract. The company insisted that without it it could not get sufficient beets to make it worth while to start the factory. The other factories, after four months of discussion, agreed on condition that the association adopt the new plan as a whole. As a consequence farmers will be given the choice of a contract paying $5 per ton flat for beets delivered on cars, factories paying the freight, or the old contract at $4.50 per ton for 12 per cent beets and 33 1-3 cents additional for each additional per cent of sugar. It is claimed by the factories that the flat rate will appeal to only such farmers as do not care to improve crops and wish only to be sure of money; that it will be detrimental to factories, as bigger acreage will be grown at the expense of sugar percentage, while farmers accepting the sliding scale will naturally pay attention to culture to secure the largest proportion of acreage with the largest percentage of sugar.

The division of territory has also been decided upon for both this and next year and it is announced that there will be no cutting into each other's territory by factories.

BLACK BART.

Now Holshey, the Bandit, Is Thought to Be Good.

Among the petitions for clemency now under consideration by the state board of pardons are a number presented in behalf of Raymond Holzhey, formerly known as "Black Bart," the highwayman, who is serving a life term in the Marquette penitentiary for the murder of a Wisconsin banker during the hold-up of a stage coach in Gogebic county about 15 years ago. Since the man's incarceration his character has entirely changed and there is reason to believe that his case will at least be given serious consideration.

Totally friendless when first imprisoned and popularly regarded as the most desperate outlaw in Michigan, Holzhey has gained the esteem and active good will of many of the leading men in the upper peninsula who are now engaged in a concerted effort to secure his release on parole. It is contended that the man acted the part of a criminal while in an unbalanced state of mind; that he has already served more years in prison than the average life sentence usually amounts to; that his behavior in prison since his recovery has been irreproachable, and, finally, that through his persistent efforts for self-education, the man's thoughts and ambitions have become markedly anti-criminal, a fact to which his writings of late years give ample testimony.

A DOUBLET.

A Curious Imagination and Its Effect.

An interesting instance of consciousness of a double self is seen in 5-year-old Paul Harwood, son of C. L. Harwood, a former Constantine boy, living in New York, but now visiting his former home. Paul's alter ego is an imaginary boy named by himself "Tommy," who is very real to him, and who plays, eats and sleeps with him. When Paul's mother makes a request he is reluctant to obey, he asks "Tommy" to do it, and though eventually he obeys, he says "Tommy" would not have hesitated a moment. His parents refrain either from ridicule or encouragement. While there are other instances of a knowledge of a double personality in children, the uniqueness in this case lies in the fact that Paul attributes all the virtues to his imaginary companion, instead of making him a scapegoat for his own pranks.

Killed By Excitement

The store of John Hyde & Son, of Emmett, caught fire and only for the timely arrival of help the entire business portion of the village would have been wiped out. Mr. Hyde's loss consists chiefly of goods damaged by smoke and water.

Neighbors being alarmed at the non-appearance of Miss Theresa O'Mera, broke into her home at noon and found her lying on the floor dead. The deceased owned property and rented rooms adjacent to John Hyde & Son's store and it is thought the shock of the fire killed her as she has always been a very healthy person.

Game Warden's Work

State Game Warden Chapman's monthly report shows record-breaking activity, judging from the figures given. He reports 66 arrests the past month, 103 complaints investigated, convictions 56, fines amounting to $815, and the seizure of over 5,000 pounds of fish, all of which went to state and charitable institutions, the report says.

There Was Water.

Nearly 1,000 persons gathered Sunday afternoon on the banks of Bern creek, to witness an old-fashioned baptizing by immersion, about four miles southwest of Morenci. It was conducted by the ministers of the United Brethren church, who have been holding gospel meetings in a tent near there. Eight converts, men and women, were baptized.

John Olson, a Calumet Swede, cut his throat from ear to ear Tuesday. He had been out of work and despondent.

BURGLARS' WORK.

Several Towns Are Scenes of Bold Robberies.

A series of burglaries occurred in the vicinity of Traverse City Thursday night covering a wide stretch of territory. The safe of Jerry Sullivan, mill owner and leading business man, of Cedar, Mich., was blown open and over $40 secured. The safe in the mill office of George E. Habbeler, at Lake Ann, was blown open and nearly $50 taken. The Manistee Northwestern station at Solon was entered and Station Agent Alvin Smith's property ransacked; a number of things were taken and the safe opened, but the burglars secured only about $7. At Traverse City a number of business houses were entered, tills tapped and small amounts secured.

One of the most complete cleanups ever made by burglars in Genesee county occurred Thursday night at the village of Linden. Seven stores were entered, besides the postoffice. The thieves forced an entrance with a crowbar and cold chisel. At the postoffice they took all the mail belonging to the Bank of Linden, took all the letters sorted out by the rural delivery carriers, cleaned up the typewritten and business letters from the private boxes of the office and appropriated some stamps. The mail was later found, opened. The thieves had thrown the envelopes and whatever else they did not want into the river. The staff was found this morning in the apron of the dam. Sheriff Rust and Post-office Inspector Parcell, of this city, are working on the case. Local talent is suspected.

Both Were Killed

While on their way to visit a sick brother, who lives about a mile west of Gallen, near the Michigan Central railroad, Sunday morning, Mrs. Geo. W. Chase and Mrs. Henry Smith, of that village, two sisters, were struck by flyer No. 11 and were instantly killed. The accident happened at a cattle guard crossing, and it is thought that one of the women had caught her shoe in the narrow irons and the sister was trying to extricate her when they were struck by the engine. The ladies were hurled high in the air and horribly mutilated. Both ladies were prominent, having been residents of this section over 50 years. Mrs. Chase was 64 years of age, and Mrs. Smith, 70 years old.

SAD RETURN.

House Burns and a Little Boy Meets Terrible Death.

Walter Sweetland, aged 7, was burned to a crisp in his father's house at Logan Monday afternoon. He had been left alone in the house and it had caught fire. To get away from the flames he retreated upstairs, and by the time help arrived it was too late to save him. The parents returned to find their house in ruins and their little son a charred corpse.

Honor Victim of Historic Massacre.

Two states united at Monroe in doing honor to the memory of the heroic soldiers who fell a costly sacrifice at the massacre of the River Raisin. The monument erected by the legislature's act and with the assistance of the Ladies' Improvement association 91 years ago was unveiled with appropriate ceremonies and in the presence of the greatest audience Monroe has ever seen.

Cost a Life.

In a spirit of fun Fred Johnson pushed Henry Nagle, a lad of 19, into the river at Port Huron, but Nagle could not swim, and sank at once. Johnson plunged in to rescue him, but could not find him, and when the body was recovered by Joseph McLaughlin it was extinct. Johnson was arrested and will probably be tried for disorderly conduct.

F. C. Andrews' Latest Plunge.

Frank C. Andrews, of Detroit City Savings bank fame, has gone into business on Wall street with Russell Sage—not the Russell Sage of uncountable wealth, but his reputed nephew and nearest heir-at-law.

NEWS OF THE WORLD

A Brief Chronicle of All Important Happenings

RUSSIANS RETREATED.

Liao Yang Falls and the Russians Flee Pursued by the Japs.

The Japanese left began pressing the Russians toward Tatzho at dawn this (Friday) morning. The Japanese right is engaged in the neighborhood of Helyingtai.

The news that the city of Liao Yang has fallen and the Russian army retreated to the right bank of the Taitse river reached only a small section of the people of St. Petersburg at a late hour and caused intense excitement and disappointment.

Thursday's dispatches indicated that the tide of battle around Liao Yang had turned appreciably in favor of the Japanese. With a tremendous and sustained assault on his right and center and threatened in his rear by a heavy force, which had crossed the Taitse river, Kuropatkin was forced to abandon Liao Yang and cross the Taitse river.

A St. Petersburg dispatch says his order was given last night after the Russians had withstood an artillery and infantry attack from dawn to midnight, but that the Japanese pressure was too great to permit its being executed. Kuropatkin probably fearing that a retrograde movement at that time might result in a rout. A dispatch.

STAKELBERG SAVED.

Liao Yang Falls and the Siberian Corps Escapes.

The only direct news from the seat of war bearing Sunday's date, came by way of Tokio in a report from Field Marshal Oyama, saying that Liao Yang fell into the hands of the Japanese at 9 o'clock that morning; that the Japanese casualties were believed to be heavy and that nothing was known by the Japanese concerning conditions on the right bank of the Taitse river.

The only comfort for the Russians at home was the news conveyed in a report from Gen. Kuropatkin, dated Saturday afternoon, that Gen. Stakelberg's First Siberian army corps of 25,000 men, reported Saturday as having been cut off in the westward of Liao Yang, had been safely extricated and that the corps had succeeded in joining the main Russian body on the right bank of the river, but no details of the escape of Stakelberg are known. Gen. Kuropatkin also reported that the greater portion of his army was at the time of filing the report south of Ventai (ten miles northeast of Liao Yang), and a few miles from the Yental mines, where fierce fighting had been in progress.

It is indicated that there has been a cessation of the fiercer fighting. Kuropatkin reporting that his men were not being much interfered with by the Japanese in the neighborhood of the army. In St. Petersburg the absence of news is looked upon as lightening the gravity of the situation for the Russians.

It was reported in St. Petersburg Sunday night that Kuropatkin had arrived at Tielhing, which is ten miles north of Yental and eighteen miles south of Mukden.

Bulletin Reports.

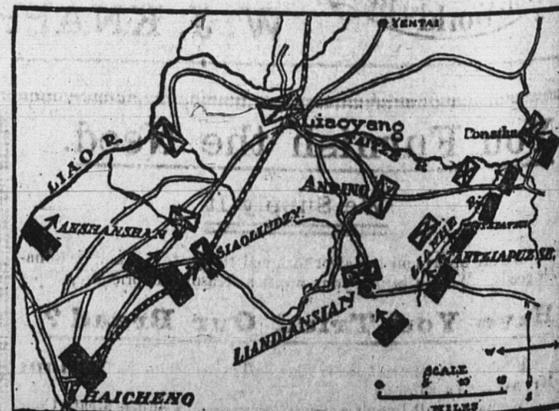

"St. Petersburg, September 5.—It is reported here, but not yet confirmed, that Gen. Kuropatkin was obliged to abandon 200 guns at Liao Yang. Some of them, it is added, were damaged in the fighting and the rest were disabled by order of the Russian commander-in-chief.

St. Petersburg, September 5.—6 p. m.—According to the latest but unofficial reports to the war office some rear guard fighting is progressing and the retirement of Gen. Kuropatkin's main army is continuing.

Russians May Be Surrounded.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 6, 2 a. m.—It is reported at a late hour that Gen. Kuropatkin's rear guard has been almost annihilated, and that the main Russian army is in imminent danger of being surrounded.

Mukden, Sept. 5.—Preparations are being made for evacuation of Mukden.

A Meat Famine.

Famine in meat is declared by the Chicago strikers to be the probable result of their new move in the strike against the packers. Orders have been issued for a general strike of all butchery workmen throughout the country. They are expected to go out tomorrow. The order will affect in all about 2,000 men in Chicago, including the independent plants. The order, observed, will also affect independent plants of large capacity in the following cities: East St. Louis, Omaha, St. Louis, Kansas City, Sioux City, New York, Milwaukee, Syracuse, St. Louis, Ill., and hundreds of small plants throughout the country which employ from 10 to 20 men.

Altogether union officials assert that 15,000 men will go out, and the meat supply will be seriously crippled, leaving as the only supply the output of the big packers by their non-union help.

TWO RESCUES

BY STEFAN BARSONY

It was near midnight, when the telephone in the castle of Zsaby began to ring sharply and excitedly. Baron Sebastian Petrovics, the owner of Zsaby, had not yet retired, but was deep in a book. He hurried to the telephone. "Hallo! Petrovics. What can I do for you, countess?"

An excited female voice, the sobbing of which betrayed only too plainly that something had happened, replied: "Are you there, baron. Thank God, you are at home. Please come over at once; burglars are breaking into the house!"

"I will come immediately," the baron shouted into the telephone. "Bolt the doors, and let no threats prevail upon you to open until I am here. I shall take men with me. In ten minutes! Be brave, countess!"

He did not wait for the answer; snatching his hat, revolver and sword, he rushed out of the room, swung himself on his horse and called to his men: "Follow me as fast as you can!"

He spurred his horse and galloped toward Gyongy. Gyongy was the property of Countess Gulacsy, separated from Zsaby only by a narrow strip of woodland. The owners of the two castles led a retired life, the baron from necessity, for his finances did not allow him to continue the extravagant life he had led in first youth; the countess from a hatred of people which had induced her to take refuge in this secluded spot. Her marriage had not been a happy one, and her husband's conduct had made the thought of men hateful to her. It was only a certain community of interests which had brought her and the baron together. They were neighbors, and could not avoid a meeting from time to time. Gradually she became accustomed to Petrovics, who was an excellent companion and knew how to make time pass in pleasant conversation.

Once he had said to the countess: "You see, countess, you make me happy when you allow me to amuse and entertain you. If you are willing, we can arrange things so that I may hear your voice even when it rains, or in the long winter evenings whenever you would enjoy a friendly talk."

"You know, baron," the countess had interrupted, "that I am no friend of society. You would often seek me in vain, and find only Mme. von Csongay, my companion and friend."

"But if you will give your permission, I will have a telephone connection made between Zsaby and Gyongy, so that you can call me when you please."

The young woman smiled and made no objection. Then the "devil's machine," as the servants called it, was introduced; but up to the time this story opens no one had as yet made use of the telephone.

One day, the week before, the mistress of Gyongy was in very bad humor, and even vented it on her companion. "My dear Csongay," she cried, that yourself. No, I am no longer at home for the baron."

A week had passed since this conversation, when the baron was called to Gyongy over the telephone. When the burglars appeared, the male servants happened to be away on various errands. The enormous Newfoundland dog barked furiously. He attacked one of the villains, but a pistol shot soon made an end to the faithful animal. The report roused the inmates of the house. The mistress of the castle hurried to bolt the doors

Swayed, and would have fallen, and then she had the happy inspiration to telephone for the baron.

The burglars seemed to be numerous. They hammered at the lattices of the windows, and swore to set fire to the house if the doors were not opened. Mme. von Csongay was beside herself with fear; she was saying the Lord's prayer over and over, and muttered between times: "It is over with us. They will murder us."

The bandits now tried to burst open the outer door, and the noise was terrible; but the countess was no longer frightened, for her fine ear had detected the sound of hoofbeats, and soon she saw three horsemen coming at a gallop.

Shots were heard outside. The noise was deafening, and above the tumult rose the death-cry of the burglar who had stood guard. After a while quiet ensued, and was broken only by the commanding voice of the baron. The countess turned white as death; it was not her own fate, but that of the baron, which frightened her. Feverish and trembling, she opened the door; the baron stood before her. When she saw him safe and sound she swayed, and would have fallen if the baron had not caught her in his arms.

About a year and a half later after that exciting night a happy family event was celebrated at Gyongy—the baptism of the first-born son of the Baron Petrovics and his wife, formerly Countess Gulacsy.

Mme. von Csongay played a more important part than ever. The champagne and the joy had loosened her tongue, and while she caressed the baby she remarked, jestingly: "You owe it all to me; both you, my precious, and your father."

She turned to the baron with a meaning glance. The baroness looked up and saw it, and also that her husband flushed crimson. There was nothing for it but confession. Kissing his wife tenderly, the baron said: "Since it must be, dear, I will tell you all. I adored you, and yet you banished me from your sight. Your friend there was my good angel. She knew how I suffered, and suggested a plan—a detestable plan, I admit. Well, you insisted on a hero, and we played that little comedy of the burglars."

A shouting and running in the yard interrupted the confession, much to the baron's relief, and he went out to see what was the cause of the excitement. The baroness felt as if she had tumbled from the clouds, and resolved to be seriously angry with her husband. When he returned, she was about to make a cutting remark, but checked herself at the sight of him. He was dripping wet from head to foot.

"What has happened to you?" she exclaimed anxiously. "Nothing much, dear. The little dog of one of my men had fallen into the well, and would have drowned if I had not jumped in after her. The men seemed to have lost their heads. For answer the baroness, flushing with pride, held out her arms to her husband, who smiled and said, pointing to his wet clothes: "Wait a minute, dear, until I have changed my things."

Mme. von Csongay looked triumphantly at the baroness, as if to say "You see, he is a hero, after all!"—From the Hungarian of Stefan Barsony.

HOW TO MAKE FRIENDS.

Be Interested in Them, but Never Show Curiosity.

If you would have friends, be interested in them.

There is a difference between interest and curiosity. Never be curious. Interest asks nothing, but is glad of others' joys and sorry for others' misfortunes. Curiosity seeks to find more than is written upon the surface, seeks it for the purpose of distribution, for innocent slander.

One's friends like one to be interested. They detest one who is curious.

To be interested in those one meets needs to wish them well.

To see the best of those about us will cause us to wish them well.

To our well-wishers we pour out our joys and sorrows. They are interested. They understand.

The interested friend always understands. The curious acquaintance never sees through motives. The curious one is blinded by his own interpretation of causes and his prejudiced view of results.

Don't, therefore, seek to know what is hidden. If your friends conceal something from you he has a reason for doing it. Prove your interest and your lack of vulgar curiosity by trusting him in spite of the concealment.

Those who are truly interested and never curious are surrounded by friends.—Detroit Tribune.

William Penn's Grave.

I notice that one or two of your correspondents seem concerned about the condition of William Penn's grave. Having, while in England during the summer of 1902, visited Jordan's Meeting House and burying ground, where the remains of William Penn lie, I can testify that the graveyard was then in a respectable condition, and the graves of William Penn, his two wives, Isaac Pennington, Thomas Ellwood and others prominent in their day, were well kept, and marked by neat, modest head stones, after the simple manner of the Society of Friends. The little graveyard and the meeting house close by are under the care of trustees, who appear to guard and protect the property carefully. Jordan's is about two miles from the quaint and ancient village of Chalfont St. Giles. It was in this place that the poet John Milton lived, and where he wrote "Paradise Lost." The house is in a good state of preservation, and visited by many every year.—Letter in Philadelphia Public Ledger.

A Yachting Family.

Some very remarkable figures as to the influence of the Coats family in yachting were given in the course of a speech made at a dinner in Largs, which Mr. George Coats gave to the crews of his yachts Flinnella and Kelpie. The various members of the family have no fewer than twelve yachts in commission, ranging in size from the stately schooner Gleniffer and the magnificent Queen of Scots to the bantam racer Thetis. The boats give employment to about 120 men, and its costs not less than $100,000 per annum to maintain them.

A Natural Inquiry.

A few days ago a gentleman called up his wife by the automatic phone, but when a voice responded knew there must have been a mistake in the number. The question hovering on his lips slipped out anyway, and he said: "Is supper ready?"

"Yes," replied the unknown lady.

"I'm coming up immediately."

"All right," said she, "but who are you?"

He hung up the receiver hurriedly.—Nebraska State Journal.

Her Day.

She worried over little woes,
From which he laughing turned;
She smarted 'neath the little blows
Which left him unconcerned;
She borrowed little troubles when
He had none of her own;
He smiled, as is the way with men,
And let her fret alone.

A sorrow that was real and great
On them was laid one day;
Bewailing his heart-breaking fate
He flung his hopes away.
But in that dreary hour she went,
While still her eyes were wet,
And led him forth, infirm and bent,
To help him to forget.

PILGRIMS ON WAY TO MECCA

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Ten thousand pilgrims have lately passed through Constantinople on their way to Mecca, yet the streets of Stamboul still teem with the faithful, and still half a dozen large steamers, flying the green flag at the foremast and the red at the mizzen lie at their moorings in the Golden Horn. Many of the pilgrims have come from distant parts of the Russian empire and central Asia, from Circassia, Afghanistan, Turkestan, Mongolia and the majority have traveled many miles out of their way to visit Constantinople; for Constantinople is the capital of the Mohammedan world, the sul-pilgrim seems to consider himself complete without an umbrella and the itinerant vendors thereof do an immense trade.

A Tartar pilgrim carrying an open umbrella over his head is a most grotesque spectacle, and puts one in mind of the illustrations of Robinson Crusoe in the days of one's childhood. But the pilgrim only uses his umbrella when the sun shines, for, rain as it may, he is never to be seen with one unfolded. The Tartars, then, supplied with an umbrella apiece, their next proceeding is to engage a number of arabs to convey them to the palace, tan of Turkey the supreme spiritual head of Mohammedanism. How many of these pilgrims will live to return from Mecca? Many die on the way there, and die contented and happy, for, according to their faith, even the greatest criminal, if he dies during the pilgrimage, goes at once to paradise, where, on account of his pilgrimage, he is accorded extra privileges. Two years ago the mortality from disease was so great that last year Russian subjects were prohibited from making the pilgrimage.

Despite the extraordinary confusion of nationalities, costumes and languages in Constantinople, one cannot be mistaken in the identity of the pilgrims, for, with the exception of the yellow men from Mongolia, who are easily distinguishable, there is a marked similarity in the cast of their countenances and, with variations, a uniformity in their attire also. Moreover, they move about the streets in groups. Friday, the Turkish Sunday, is the best day to observe the pilgrims. Let us glance at a party who have just landed in Galata from a Russian steamer. These men are Tartars. They wear knee boots, long tunics composed of sheepskin sewn together, with the wool turned inward and headresses of the same material, but with wool outward, and bound round with soiled white cloths. Shaggy, unkempt-looking creatures they are and the dark tangled hair and beard of one man so well match the sheepskin on his head that one cannot tell where the wool ends and the hair begins. But it must not be supposed that the pilgrims are poor. It is expressly laid down in the koran that no man shall undertake the pilgrimage to Mecca unless he has sufficient money to defray his expenses; and this law is strictly adhered to. Many have saved up money all their lives to make the pilgrimage and none carry less than £300—some as much as £1,000. Peep into the Ottoman where they will witness the selamk and see the Sultan go to mosque; and from the amount of noisy haggling which goes on before they are finally packed, four and five into each araba, it is evident that the pilgrims know how to drive a bargain. Hard by another detachment of these sheepskin-coated and hatted pilgrims half block the street at a money-changer's, but the Constantinople money-changer, astute though he is, will find it difficult to get the best of them by a single para. The pilgrims, however, spend their money freely enough. They buy watches, jewelry and revolvers. One day a gunsmith's shop in Galata was, in a few minutes, cleared of the whole stock of revolvers. The pilgrims are all armed either with knives or revolvers, or both, and although they behave quietly enough ashore they are sometimes turbulent at sea, so as a precautionary measure their arms are taken from them when they go on board at Constantinople and not returned till they are landed at Jiddah.

In the mosques many of them sleep and wash as well as worship and now on a balcony in the rear of the building some scores are performing their ablutions and hanging out clothes to dry, till the imam, from the minaret, shall summon them to their evening devotions. Below the balcony, amid a confusion of fruit and vegetable stalls, stands a long row of umbrella-shaped tents, suitably large to afford shade for two people. There are two men under each of these umbrellas—the one a barber, the other a pilgrim having the crown of his head shaved. Here are pilgrims of all descriptions—yellow men from Mongolia, many of them of great stature and with so strongly marked Chinese features that involuntarily one looks for pig tails; men from Bokhara, the sleeves of their long robes double the length of their arms; Turkomans, in padded cotton robes of many bright

SCENE OF RECENT BOMBARDMENT AT PORT ARTHUR.

The scene of the recent fierce bombardment of Port Arthur reported by Gen. Stoessel, is indicated on the map. The fortifications under fire are what are known as the Keekwan forts, the most northerly and easterly of the defenses of the fortress. Sushiyen, or Suet-ze-ying, also is pointed out. It is in front of this village that the Japanese are said to be digging trenches in the Tiger valley. Sushiyen is a mile west of the railroad and four miles from Port Arthur.

While excavating for a new Baptist church parsonage at Portage, Wis., the workmen exhumed the remains of the famous explorer and trader, Pierre Piquette. Historians have been searching for years to discover his body.

Altercation on Way Home Results in Death of Two.
Jellico, Tenn., dispatch: While on their way home from attending a circus Floyd Hilton of Halsey, Ky., shot and killed Will and Flem Bray of Mad Creek, Ky., and dangerously wounded their father, when about a mile from here. bank and you will see scores of the Russian subjects changing their paper roubles into gold. They squat round on the floor till they have counted over their gold and then tie it up in a dirty cloth. A thousand Turkish liras weigh about fourteen pounds, so some idea may be formed of the weight of gold the pilgrims carry about with them. But the first thing the pilgrim does on arriving in Constantinople is to buy an umbrella. No colors, and all except the Circassians and Tartars wear turbans. There are men of all ages, from mere youths to very old men, who, now that their day is drawing to a close, seek a happy death in the pilgrimage. The majority, of course, camp outside the town, sleeping in carts and caravans, and in a few days more we shall see the last of them dispatched by sea—perhaps 50 per cent of them on their last journey.

Can Asthma Be Cured?

People Who Have Had It Say It Can, and They Have Written the Following Letters for the Benefit of Others.

Jackson, Mich., July 21, 1904.
I have been afflicted with asthma in its worst form for many years. I was very bad, could not rest day or night, as my nerves were badly wrecked, and I had no enjoyment. I went to Dr. Wilkinson April 8, 1904, and he helped me at once, and in two weeks I was entirely free from asthma, and have been ever since. My general health has improved very much. I had got so bad that all other treatments failed to relieve me, and I suffered every hour day and night. I take pleasure in telling everyone suffering with asthma where they can get cured. Curing asthma, with Dr. Wilkinson, is no experiment.

MARIE A. HAZEN, 728 Russell St.

509 Ten Eyck St., Jackson, Mich.

Dr. E. L. Wilkinson:
For the benefit of others suffering with asthma, I desire to make a statement: I have been troubled with asthma for over thirty years, and the last four years I was very bad.
The last year I had to sit up in a chair every night one-half the time, and a part of the time the whole night. The month preceding my visit to you I had no rest at night and my heart acted so badly that I thought every night that I could not live till morning. I have been treated by several leading physicians of Jackson—one treated me two years and the others several months each—but I kept growing worse all the time. Some of them told me I could not get well, and that I was likely to die soon.
I called on you May 21, 1903, and I have had no asthma whatever since the first week of treatment. You tell me that you have never given me one dose of regular asthma medicine. I don't know as to that, but I do know that it is entirely different from that of any of the doctors who have treated me. I am strong now and I do more work than I have done for many years. Neither night exposure, any kind of work or anything I do brings on an attack of asthma. In fact, I feel perfectly well, and don't think the asthma will return if I obey your instructions.

Most farmers are planning to sow some wheat this fall, as buying the family flour at present and prospective prices is not a condition of things highly relished by the average farmer. We believe that some wheat can be profitably raised on almost every farm. Put it in right, in season, on good soil, and barring such winters as last year, you can now, as you have in the past, raise good wheat in Michigan.
