Two Good Games of Baseball.

The Junior Stars played a good game of ball Saturday afternoon with the nine from Whittaker. It was considerable of a pitchers' battle, Wood for the Junior Stars striking out 17 men and Lamkin for Whittaker 14 men. The batting of Mc-Guinness, Dorr Rogers and E. Cooke were the features of the game aside from the good pitching. The Stars had the game won up to the eighth inning when they allowed the Whit taker chaps to score three runs which gave them the game, the Stars failing to score in the last inning. The score by innings was:

less American of 24 sat on a bench on the alameda at Quillaine, in one of the South American states. It was twilight. The band played and the people promenaded.

He had made a long journey over the mountains, after meeting with all kinds of bad tuck, and on the morrow would ask the American consul to ship him home as a "distressed." He had not tasted food for twenty-four hours, and his lodging that night must be in the open air.

Clothed in evening dress and with a hundred dollars in his pocket, Tom Mosher would have looked what he was, but ragged and penniless, he shrank from observation, even though he clung to his seat to rest his aching

Then it happened. A young lady promenading on the arm of her father dropped her handkerchief to start a flirtation with a military officer. The handkerchief fell equi-distant from Mosher and the officer, and both sprang forward, bumped their heads together and rolled on the asphalt.

"You loafer! You tramp! You scum!" shouted the officer as 'he reached his feet.

"It was no one's fault-a pure accident," replied Tom, who had been successful in securing the handker-

Tom took it. That is, instead of taking a blow with the flat of the sword he took the sword itself from the hands of the humiliated and enraged officer and stepped back to defend himself from a dozen men rushing up with exclamations on their had appealed to him for charity, and, being refused, suddenly attacked him and got possession of his sword. The crowd-wanted no further excuse. Nearly every man had a knife, but no one seemed to have a pistol. They pushed forward to lay hands on the American, calling for the police at the same time, but when Tom's borrowed sword began to play they dared not close in.

Tom began a retreat. He did not know where it would end, but he slowly fell back, down the wide avenue. The police arrived and demanded his surrender, and presently the hoodium element began to throw stones and heave flower pots.

To the demands of the police he was silent; the missiles thrown he had good luck in dodging. He had been pressed back four blocks and a crowd was forming in his rear, when above the cries and shouts of the street be heard a woman's voice:

Into the hotel here and upstairs!

It's your only chanca!" From the corner of his eye he saw a girl on the balcony of a building to released. his right—a girl leaning far over the aron railing and waving to him.

A hungry, discouraged and penni- | from his path and hurried up the broad stairway.

At its head he met a girl of 20 whom he knew at once to be from the United States. As he stood gasping for breath she said:

"Hold the stairs for three minutes and I'll be back with something to shoot with."

The police and the mob crowded into the vestibule. "One rush and he is ours."

There was a rush, but it paused before the head of the stairs was reached. Tom Mosher had learned

As the crowd stood growling and cursing and menacing the girl returned from her room with a revolver in her hand, and said to Tom: "It's dad's pet gun, and I know how to use it. Now, then, let the gentlemen walk up. Keep your face to this mob, and if anyone comes up the backstairs they'll find me on guard. You are an American' aren't you?" "Yes-Tom Mosher of Fall River." "And I am here with my father, Col. Dale of Montana. He owns most of the Uncle Sam copper mine. What is the trouble about?' Tom briefly explained, and he had just finished when the crowd gave way for the mayor to ascend alone. "Senor Americano, I demand your peaceful surrender in the name of the law. You have assaulted an officer of the army and defled the police, but I promise you a fair trial."

"The officer who says I assaulted him is a liar!" replied Tom, "and I shall surrender only when so advised by the American consul."

"Then the young lady will please retire while we kill or capture you." "The young lady will remain right here!" answered Miss Dale, "and if there is a rush, look out for lead." "But the senorita will not protect a revolutionist-a criminal-a man who has forfeited his life?"

"We will hold the stairs against you all. This man is an American. He is neither a criminal nor a revolution-

"Thank you, Miss Dale," replied Tom, without looking her way. It's very brave of you to stand by me in this way, but if they rush us and three or four people are killed, won't it make matters a great deal worse?" "If you surrendered now they'd take you out and shoot you, and it will be no worse if you fight for your life. If that old dad of mine was only here?"

"Well, what's wanted?" asked a voice at her elbow ,and she turned to find that her father had joined her-"Oh, dad, this is an American, and they want to kill him!"

"I see. Well, here's the consul right behind me. Give me that gun and you fall back. Proud of you, my girlproud of you-but let me do a little talking."

Col. Dale talked, the consul talked and the mayor talked, and as a result the mob withdrew. As a second result the consul became responsible for Tom Mosher's appearance in court next day.

SNAKES HAUL HIS BOAT.

Truthful Fisherman Tells Story Which Must Be Believed.

Dr. Bergesser of Nevada is the possessor of a lot of trained snakes which some time ago he deposited in Tucker Lake. As soon as the doctor gets in a skiff these trained snakes, which have the faculty of distinguishing their master from anyone else, swim to his skiff, and hooking their tails over the bow of his boat, haul him to the place where the bass are playing thickest. When the doctor prepares to fish these educated reptiles unhook their tails and swim away.

After the doctor catches a boatload of bass, these intelligent snakes return, hook their tails over the boat and pull him to shore, always bidding him good-by with a hearty tailshake, which they hold above the water in a most friendly manner.

This is the reason Dr. Bergesser can catch fish where other successful anglers fail.

The doctor also says that he has noted a certain kind of frog which sits on the bank and warns the fish not to bite, and he always has to shoot these frogs before he can have any luck fishing.

The doctor is not only a successful, but he is also a truthful fisherman, as persons will realize who read of the manner of his success as thus stipulated.

Mrs. Longfellow's Dinner.

Speaking of "company" coming reminds me of a story a Boston man tells of the poet Longfellow. Mr. Longfellow had a soul above sordid material considerations, and on one occasion he brought a guest home to dine without advising Mrs. Longfellow beforehand. The guest was a distinguished Englishman, who had just arrived with a letter of introduction. The day was Friday, and the cook being a Catholic the family had fallen into the habit of eating no meat at the Friday dinner. Mrs. Longfellow thought despairingly of the fish and then, realizing, I dare say, that dry bread would be a feast with Longfellow at the table, led the guest to the dining room with a faint heart. The fish was brought in. The distinguished guest glanced at it, and then he smiled at his hostess.

"I know Mrs. Longfellow will pardon me," he said, "if I decline the fish course."-Washington Post.

The Grain Dealers' National Associ ation, recently in session in Milwau kee, passed the following resolutions: Whereas, Seed houses do a large business in the sale of seed grains and thereby may materially affect the general business of the crops of grain thus produced, either for better or worse; and, Whereas, It is known that seed

thus sold by seed houses does not always possess the merit of type and breeding sufficient to meet the expectations of the purchaser, and in fact often does not tend to raise the standard of the general crops produced. For example it has been too common a practice for seedsmen to purchase ordinary corn from farmers' cribs and sell the same under special brands when in fact it possessed no special merit whatever, with respect to type and breeding, and the same is true in regard to other grains; there

Resolved. That the Grain Dealers' National Association, now in convention assembled in Milwaukee this 23d day of June, 1904, does hereby urgent ly request all firms engaged in the selling of seed grain to adopt a line of business policy that will result in giving more attention to the questions of type and breeding and adaptability and thereby assist in improving the quality and yield of grains; also,

Resolved, That the secretary be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to all the principal firms engaged in the business of selling seed grains in the grain producing states, and also to all the leading agricul tural papers in the country.

The practice against which the res olution is directed is one that has long been condemned by conscientious dealers. It not only injures the farmers, but injures the firms that are trying to do an honest business. It is gratifying to see a great association take the stand that this one has taken. The agitation is sure to bear fruit.-Farmers' Review.

Spelt (Triticum Spelta).

Spelt is a cereal which in appeararce is intermediate between wheat and barley, but, in reality, is one of | the types into which wheat is divided. It is a native of the countries near the Mediterranean sea. At the present time it is grown principally on the poorer soils in Switzerland, southern Germany and northern Spain. It is also grown at an elevation in Switzerland where the common wheat (Triticum vulgare) will not thrive For general cultivation is is considered much inferior to the finer varieties of wheat. The head is open, narrow, beaded or bald, and is usually very long. When the grain is threshed the head breaks into pieces at the different joints, or nodes, leaving the quently called Spelt belongs to the Emmer class, and is, therefore, improperly named. To find out the value of Spelt for growing in Ontario. we have imported at different times no less than ten varieties from Switzerland, Russia, Germany, the Argentine Republic and the United States. Two of these varieties proved entire failures, two others gave poor resuits, and the other six varieties yielded moderately well. As the grain is enclosed by a chaff somewhat similar to oats, and weighs less than 40 pounds per measured bushel, the results here presented are given in pounds, instead of bushels of grain per acre. One of the best varieties of Spelt has now been grown in the experimental plots for five years, and has given an average yield of 1,623 pounds of grain per acre.-Ontario Station.

SLEEP AN AID TO BEAUTY.

Plenty of Rest Will Enable One to Defy Hand of Time. Women who sleep a great deal and comfortably, who are addicted to maps and regard nine hours of wholese rest as absolutely requisite to their physical well-being are the women who defy the frosting hand of time. These are the women whose wrinkles are few and far between and whose eyes remain the brightest and cheeks the rosiest for the longest period after the bloom of youth has fled. No less notable a beauty than Diana de Poletiers, who retained her irresistible loveliness until her seventieth year, recognized the value of sleep as a preventive of wrinkles. Indeed, so fearful was she of losing a moment of perfect rest, that, mistrusting the beds of her friends, she carried her own, with its splendid fittings, on all her journeys.

Catch Words or Phrases.

If you desire to get rich quickly, in vent catch-words or phrases that will grip the attention of the public. Big sums are paid for the right article The inventor of a word now used for a brand of crackers is said to have re ceived $5,000 for it. Manufacturers of various things from soap to nuts have paid nearly as high. A railroad com pany gave $100 to a girl who suggest ed a name for one of its fast trains.

Man and Wife.

Buxton, N. Dak., Sept. 12 (Special). -Mr. B. L. Skrivseth of this place has been added to the steadily growing following that Dodd's Kidney Pills have in this part of the country.

Mr. Skrivseth gives two reasons for his faith in the Great American Kidney Cure. The first is that they cured his wife and the second is that they cured himself.

"I must say," says Mr. Skrivseth, "that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best remedy for Kidney Trouble I ever knew. My wife had Kidney Disease for years and she tried all kinds of medicine from doctors but it did not help her any. An advertisement led her to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. The first box helped her so much that she took eight boxes more and now she is cured.

"I also took three boxes myself and they made me feel better and stronger in every way."

Dodd's Kidney Pills have never yet failed to cure any kidney disease from Backache to Rheumatism, Diabetes or Bright's Disease.

Theory Regarding the Moon.

The novel theory of Dr. Voight, a German astronomer, is that the greater part of the moon's craters repre sent work of coral insects in long vanished seas. He finds that if the earth's tropical ocean were suddenly dried up the bed would resemble the face of the moon, the coral forma tions appearing exactly like the crat ers of the extinct volcanoes.

Wife in Place of Hog.

The following anecdote shows how the Fijians treat their wives. A Fijian chief bought a gun from a captain in the navy for which he was to pay two hogs. But try as he would he could manage to get only one hog. This he sent to the captain, and in place of the other hog sent his wife.

Value of Laughter.

If we realized the power of good cheer and the habit of laughter to retard the progress of age and to stay the hand which writes the wrinkles of care and anxiety on the face, we should have discovered the famed fountain of youth—the elixir of life.

Church Decorating.

Women who take upon themselves the pleasant duty of decorating their churches may be interested in what the bishop of Worcester has to say of the subject. "Flowers," says the bishop, should be used only on fee tivals; they should never be allowed to remain after they are withered; they should be voluntary offerings; there is no ecclesiastical reason why they should be put in brazen jars or tortured into unnatural shapes; there should not be too many of them; leaves or flowers should not be ch lowed to intrude themselves upon or near the ledge of the pulpit so as to interfere with the preacher hands or books, or to hinder the proper use of the font."

Her voice broke as the memory of hat time passed over her like bitter waters, and she was obliged to stand silent before him, steadying her lip with her teeth, until the waters had

"It was the King who sent for you, that he might know whether I had spoken the truth concerning my disguise-" she said when at last her voice returned. "Now, by coming, you have helped me against his anger,-let that settle all debt between us. I thank you much and—and I bid you farewell." Again Elfgiva's schooling came to her mind and she swayed before him in a courtesy. She did not know that her cheeks were as white as her kerchief, that her eyes were dark wells of unshed tears. She knew only that at last he was howing, he was turning, in a moment more he would be gone-

But just short of that point he stopped, and all motion around her appeared to stop, as a noise down the corridor plotted out every sound in the garden,—the noise of a great body of people rousing the echoes with jubilant shouting.

"The King! The King!" could be heard again and again, and after it drowned the rest.

Listening, everyone stood motionless as the babel came nearer with a swiftness which spoke much for the speed of the shouters. Only Randalin's little red shoe began to tap the earth impatiently. What did it matter what they said?

"Hail to Canute of Denmark!" "Hail to the King of the Danes and-" Again cheers drowned the rest.

everywhere for you!" The pat of light feet, a swish of silken skirts, and Dearwyn had thrown herself upon the bench under the oak tree, her little dimpled face radiant. Only think that Elfgiva will be a queen and we shall all go to London!" As the only adequate means of expression, she threw her arms around her friend in a rapturous embrace.

"What is the matter with you that you are so silent as to your tongue. when you must needs be shouting in your heart?" Disengaging herself gently, she climbed upon the bench | which she had ever shown him. as she chattered. "The messenger had a leather bag around his neck which I think likely contains Edmund's crown and-Ah, Tata, look! look! Thorkel is holding it up!"

Yes, it was Edmund's crown. Again, a picture of the English camp-fire rose before her, and she shivered as she recognized the graceful pearled points she had last seen upon the Ironside's stately head. Now Thorkel was setting them above the Danish circlet on Canute's shining locks, while the shouts merged into a roar of acclamation.

"But why does he look so strange?" Randalin said suddenly,

And Dearwyn laid a finger on her lip. "Hush! At last he is going to speak."

Canute was bending toward the messenger, holding him with his glance. "Tell more news, messenburst of deafening cheers that ger," he was saying sternly. "Tell about the cause of my royal brother's death."

The messenger seemed to lose what little breath his ride on the shoulders of the crowd had left him. "My errand extends no further," he panted. "It is likely that the Earl will send you more news-I am but the first-" His breath gave out in an inarticulate gasp, and he began to back away.

But the King moved after him. "Stop--" he commanded,--"or it may first alarm like a covey of gray birds, be that I will cause you to remain that you were obliged to do it to save yourself. Even after I heard how you had made a bargain to inherit after each other, I never suspected what kind of a plan was in your

Standing in silent listening, Canute's gaze traveled from face to face until it came to the spot where Eligiva fluttered among her women, holding her exquisite head as if it already wore a crown. An odd gleam flickered over his eyes, and he made a step toward Pealing her silvery laughter, she turned toward him, her eyes peeping at him like bright birds from under the eaves of her hood. "Lord, I believe that I am afraid of you!' she coquetted. "When I bethink me that all the time I have been chiding you for being unambitious for glory, you have had this in your mind!" Laughing, she stooped and kissed his hand with the first semblance of respect

His face was curiously still as he regarded the beautiful Elfgiva,-and stilly curious, as though he were examining some familiar object in a new light. "You believe then that I had him murdered?" he asked. "And you find pleasure in believing it?"

"Now, it is not murder!" she protested. "When a king kills-in war-"But this is not war," he said slowly. Lifting one of the jeweled braids from her shoulder, he played with it as he studied her. "This is not war. for I had reconciled myself to him. I had plighted faith with Edmund Ethelredsson and vowed to avenge his death like a brother."

Her white forehead drew itself into a puzzled frown. "But you were not so foolish as to swear it on the holy ring were you?" When he did not answer, she raised her shoulders lightly. "What should I know about such matters? Have you not told me, many times and oft, that it behooves a woman to shun meddling with great

He gave a short laugh, "And when were you ever before content to follow that advice?" Letting the braid slip from his fingers, he stood looking her up and down, his lips curling with Randalin spoke abruptly to her companion. "Dearwyn, I can tell you something. Elfgiva will never get In Use For Over 30 Years. the queenship over England.'

"What moves you to say that?" the little English girl asked her, startled. But Randalin's attention had gone back to the King, who had turned where the son of Lodbrok waited regarding him over sternly-folded arms.

"Brother," he was saying gravely, your opinion is powerful with me, so I will openly tell you that you are wrong in your belief. Never have I so much as hinted to yonder peacenithing a word of harm against Edmund Ironside."

From Thorkel the Tall came one of his rare laughs,—a sound like the grating of a rusty hinge,-Rothgar unfolded his arms to fling them out in angry rejection.

"This is useful to learn!" he sneered. "Do you think I could not guess that you had no need to put your desire into words after you had shown Edric by your actions that your mind and his are one, after you had admitted by your bond with him that you hold the same curious belief about honor?"

This time it was Randalin who clutched the English girl. "Oh!" she

For Canute's eyes were less like eyes than holes through which light was pouring, while his fingers opened and shut as though he had forgotten his sword and would leap upon the scoffer with bare hands.

Thorkel left off laughing to grasp the Jotun's arm and try to drag him backwards. "Do you want to drive it from his mind that he has loved you? Go hide yourself in Fenrir's mouth!" (To be continued.)

SWEET PEAS KILL FLIES.

Druggist Makes a Discovery of Value to the World.

A local druggist has found a new agent for the destruction of flies that for activity and effectiveness discounts anything heretofore offered for that purpose. And not only is it harmless, but it is a thing of beauty as well. After selling annually thousands of sheets of fly paper of the sticky and poisoned varieties and a ton more or less of insect powder, the new antidote for the pest bids fair to supersede all previous methods with him and those of his friends who are in on

For several days the druggist, who is a lover of flowers, has had upon his front cases bunches of sweet peas of a variety grown originally in California and but recently cultivated in this section of the country. Each morning after opening up the store he has found collected around the base of the vessel containing the peas quite an accumulation of dead flies.

For the first day or so he regarded the mass of defunct dipterous insects as an accidental gathering in the neighborhood of the flowers, but curiosity prompted him later to watch the conduct of the few flies left in the store. It was observed when the peas were freshly picked that immediately after their being placed in the vases those flies in the vicinity swarmed

Laughter and Dyspensia.

Laughter stimulates the digestive process, accelerates the respiration, and gives a warm glow to the whole system. It brightens the eye, expands the chest, forces the poison out from the least-used lung cells, fills them with life-giving oxygen, and tends to restore that exquisite poise or balance which we call health. If there is anything we need to learn, it is to laugh at meals. There is no tablesauce like it. It is the great enemy of dyspepsia.

At that, the poor fool seemed to cast to the winds his last shred of sense. "They do say that the Earl poisoned him,' he blubbered. "But none say that you bade him to do it. No one dares to say that."

"How could they say that?" Randalin cried in amazement, while the King drew back as though the grovelling figure at his feet were a dog that had bitten him.

"I bid him do it?" he repeated. All at once his face was so terrible that the man began to crawl backward, screaming, even before Canute's hand had reached his hilt. Before the blade could be drawn,

Rothgar had stepped in front of his royal foster-brother with a savage sweep of his handless arm. "Do not waste your point on the churl, King," he said in his bull's voice. "If you want to play this game further, deal with me,-for I also believe that you bade the Gainer murder Edmund."

As though paralyzed by his amazement, Canute's arm dropped by his side. "You also believe it?"

Little Dearwyn hid her face on the Danish girl's breast. "Oh, Randalin, would he do such a deed?" she gasped. "The while that he seemed so kind and gentle with us. Would he do such horrid wickedness?" "No!" Randalin cried passoniately

But even as she cried it, Thorkel the Tall dared to lean forward and give the royal shoulder a rallying slap. "Amleth himself never played a game better," he said; "but is it worth while to continue at it when no Englishmen are watching?" And his words seemed to open a door against which the others were crowding.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1904.

The Republican state committee, alarmed at the revolt against the gubernatorial candidate, Fred Warner, and the machine, has asked George B. Horton, master of the state grange, to do something in the way of speech making and issuing a statement to help suppress the revolt.

One of the questions asked of the candidates at the recent school teachers' examination was the naming of every nominee for state offices on all the political tickets this fall. That's considerable of a jackass question. Wonder how many of the candidates answered it?

HOPE GONE.

Bussians Admit Defeat This Year, But

The Russian war office is reluctantly disposed to admit that with the defeat of the Russians at Liao Yang all hope as practically departed of turning th tide of the war this year. Patiently and doggedly in spite of successive reverses by land and sea, Gen, Kuropatkin's friends had pinned the faith in his assurances that when I accepted battle victory would crow Russian arms, but failing in his a tempt to turn the scale they face and other indefinite period of waiting. Kuropatkin must retire, await reinforcements and prepare for a new campaign next year. But, disappointed as they are and discouraging as the situation is, no word is heard in favor of making peace.

"Russia will be victorious in the end the war must continue, if not this year, then the next; if not the next, then the year after," is the unvarying sentiment.

According to the best information from the front, both armies are now tired and resting after the exhausting days of fighting and marching The general opinion is that the Japanese will again push on as soon as the rains cease and the roads are dry. Meantime Gen. Kuropatkin is enjoying the advantages of a railroad. He has sent north his baggage and the wounded, and doubtless a portion of his troops

The prevailing idea is that Gen. Kuropatkin will not make a stand at Mukden if the Japanese come on again in earnest, but that he will retire at least to Tie Pass. Once through the pass the general impression in military circles is that the Japanese will

Not exceeding two months remain for military operations this fall, and despite reports from Tokio of a winter campaign, the most competent critics who are familiar with the rigors of the Manchurian winter don't think that the Japanese will attempt it. Unless the unexpected happens the withdrawal of Kuropatkin's army above Tie Pass, they believe, marks the end of the campaign for this year, the Russians wintering at Harbin, with their rear guard at Tie Pass, and the Japanese at Liao Yang, with their advanced base at Mukden.

most impassable. Official figures from Tokio, which place the Japanese losses during all the engagements which constituted the battle of Liao Yang at 17,500, make necessary a big reduction of the reported casualties of the great battle. According to military experts the Russian losses should not exceed those of the Japanese; in fact, as Russia was on the defensive, they should not be so great. The Tokio figures, therefore would indicate that the total casualties were not more than 30,000.

My Dear Sir: I accept the nomination for the presidency tendered me by the Republican National Convention, and cordaily approve the platform adopted by it.
The principles which we profess are those in which we believe with heart and those in which we believe with heart and soul and strength. Men may differ from its but they cannot accuse us of shiftiness or insincerity. The policies we have pursued are those which we earnestly hold as essential to the national welfare hold as essential to the national welfare. and repute. Our actions speak even louder than our words for the faith that is in us. We base our appeal upon what we have done and are doing, upon our record of administration and legislation record of administration and legislation during the last seven years, in which we have had complete control of the government. We intend in the future to carry on the government in the same way that we have carried it on in the

The acts of the Administration in onnection with the war with Spain, the Isthmian canal and the upholding of the Monroe doctrine the President defends at length, and declares the party is prepared fully to accept the issue on these questions. He con-

In addition to those acts of the admin-istration which they venture to assail after misrepresenting them, there are others which they dare not overtly or of-ficially attack, and yet which they cov-ertly bring forward as reason for the overthrow of the party. In certain great centers and with certain great interests our opponents make every effort to show that the settlement of the anthracite coal strike by the individual act of the president and the successful suit against the Northern Securities Company—the merger suit—undertaken by the department of justice, were acts because of sich the present administration should be thrown from power. Yet they dare not openly condemn either act. They dare not in any authoritative or formal manner say that in either case wrong was done or error committed in the method of action, or in the choice of instruments for putting that action into effect. But what they dare not manfully assert in open day, they seek to use furtively and through special agents. Some of our opponents complain because under the anti-trust and interstate commerce laws suits were undertaken which have been niccessful: others, because suits were not indertaken which would have been un-The Democratic state convention in New York dealt with the anthracite coal strike by demanding in de-liberate and formal fashion that the naional government should take possession of the coal fields; yet champions of that convention's cause now condemn the fact that there was any action by the presi-dent at all—though they must know that it was only this action by the president which prevented the movement for na-tional ownership of the coal fields from gaining what might well have been an irresistible impetus. Such mutually de-structive criticisms furnish an adequate neasure of the chance for coherent action or constructive legislation if our pponents should be given power. So much for what our opponents openy or covertly advance in the way of an tack on the acts of the administration. When we come to consider the policies for which they profess to stand we are met with the difficulty always arising when statements of policy are so made that they can be interpreted in different ways. On some of the vital questions that have confronted the American peoe in the last decade our opponents take the position that silence is the best pos-sible way to convey their views. They contend that their lukewarm attitude of partial acquiesence in what others have accomplished entitles then to be made the custodians of the financial honor and commercial interests which they have but recently sought to ruin. Being unable to agree a second the second able to agree among themselves as to whether the gold standard is a curse or a blessing, and as to whether we ought or ought not to have free and unlimited coinage of silver, they have apparently thought it expedient to avoid any committal on these subjects, and individually each to follow his perficular bent. Their each to follow his particular bent. Their nearest approach to a majority judgment seems to be that it is now inexpedient to assert their convictions one way or the other, and that the establishment of the gold standard by the Republican party should not be disturbed unless there is an alteration in the relative quantity of production of silver and gold. Men who hold sincere convictions on vien who hold sincere convictions on vital questions can respect equally nen with whose views they radically differ; and men may confess a change of faith without compromising their honor or their self-respect. But it is difficult to respect an attitude of mind such as has been fairly described above; and where there is no respect there can be no trust. A policy with so slender a basis of principle would not stand the strain of a single year of business adversity.

We on the contrary, believe in the gold standard as fixed by the usage and verdict of the business world, and in a same sound monetary system as matters of principle; as matters not of monetary posound monetary system as matters of principle; as matters not of monetary political expediency, but of permanent organic policy. In 1896 and again in 1900 far-sighted men, without regard to their party fealty in the past, joined to work against what they regarded as a debased monetary system. The policies which they championed have been steadfastly adhered to by the administration; and by the act of March 14, 1900, Congress established the single gold standard as the measure of our monetary value. This act received the support of every Republican in the house, and of very Republican except one in the senate. Of our opponents, eleven supported it in the house and two in the senate; and one hundred and fifty opposed it in the house and twenty-eight in the senate. The record of the last seven years proves that the party now in power can be trusted to take the additional action necessary to improve and strengthen our monetary system, and that our opponents, cannot and twenty-eight in the senate. The record of the last seven years proves that the party now in power can be trusted to take the additional action necessary to improve and strengthen our monetary system, and that our opponents cannot be so trusted. The fundamental fact is that in a popular government such as cours no policy is irrevocably settled by law unless the people keep in control of the government men who believe in that policy as a matter of deep-rooted conviction. Laws can always be revoked; it is the spirit and the purpose of those mentary standard of the nation is irrevocably fixed so long as the party which at the last election cast approximately forty-six per cent of the total to the determination to remain silent cannot be accepted as equivalent to a recantation. Until our opponents as a party explicitly adopt the views which we hold and upon which we have acted and are acting, in the matter of a sound currency, the only real way to keep the question from becoming unsettled is to keep the Republican party in power.

As for what our opponents say in reference to capital and labor, individual or corporate, here again all we need by way of answer is to point to what we have actually done, and to say that if continued in power we shall continue to carry out the policy we have been pursuing, and to execute the laws as resolutely and fearlessly in the future as we have executed them in the past.

The action of the attorney-general in enforcing the anti-trust and interstate commerce laws, and the action of the last congress in enlarging the scope-of the interstate commerce law, and in creating the department of commerce and labor, with a bureau of corporations, have for the first time opened a chance for the national government to deal intelligently and adequately with the questions affecting society, whether for good or for evil, because of the accumulation of capital in great corporations, and because of the new relations caused thereof capital in great corporations, and be-cause of the new relations caused thereby. The laws are now being administered with entire efficiency; and as, in their working, need is shown for amendment or addition to them—whether better to secure the proper publicity, or better to guarantee the rights of shippers, or in any other direction—this need will be met. It is now asserted "that the common law, as developed, affords a com-plete legal remedy against monopolies." But there is no common law of the United States. Its rules can be enforced only by the state courts and officers. No federal court or officer could take any action whatever under them. It was this fact, coupled with the inability of the states to control trusts and monopolies, which led to the passage of the federal statutes known as the Sherman antitrust act and the interstate commerce act; and it is only through the exercise of the powers conferred by these acts, and by the statutes of the last congress supplementing them, that the national government acquires any jurisdiction government acquires any jurisdiction over the subject. To say that action against trusts and monopolies should be limited to the application of the common law is equivalent to saying that the national government should take no action whatever to regulate them.

Undoubtedly, the multiplication of trusts and their increase in power has been largely due to the "failure of officials charged with the duty of enforcing the law to take the processory preing the law to take the necessary pro-cedure." Such stricture upon the failure of the officials of the national govern-ment to do their duty in this matter is certainly not wholly undeserved as far as the administration preceding Presi-dent McKinley's is concerned; but it has no application at all to Republican administration. It is also undoubtedly true that what is most needed is "officials having both the disposition and the courage to enforce existing law." This is precisely the need that has been met by the consistent and steadily continued action of the department of justice under the present administration. So far as the rights of the individual wage-worker and the individual capital-ist are concerned, both as regards one another, as regards the public, and as regards organized capital and labor, the position of the administration has been so clear that there is no excuse for misrepresenting it, and no ground for op-posing it unless misrepresented. Within the limits defined by the national consti-tution the national administration has sought to secure to each man the full enjoyment of his right to live his life and dispose of his property and his labor as he deems best, so long as he wrongs no one else. It has shown in effective fashion that in endeavoring to make good this guarantee, it treats all men, rich or poor, whatever their creed, their color, or their birthplace, as standing alike be-fore the law. Under our form of government the sphere in which the nation from the state is narrowly circumscribed; that sphere all that could be done has been done. All thinking men are aware of the restriction upon the power of action of the national government in such matters. Being ourselves mindful of them, we have been scrupulously careful on the one hand to be moderate in our promises, and on the other hand to keep these promises in letter and in spirit. When we take up the great question of the tariff we are at once confronted by the doubt as to whether our opponents do or do not mean what they say. They say that "protection is robbery," and promise to carry themselves accordingly if they are given power. Yet prominent persons among them assert that they do not really mean this and that if they come into power they will adopt our policy as regards the tariff; while others seem anxious to prove that it is safe to give them partial power, because the power would be only partial, and therefore they would not be able to do mischief. The last is certainly a curious plea to advance on behalf of a party seeking to obtain control of the govern-

At the outset it is worth while to say a word as to the attempt to identify the question of tariff revision or tariff re-duction with a solution of the trust question. This is always a sign of desire to avoid any real effort to deal ade-quately with the trust question. In speaking on this point at Minneapolis, on April 4, 1903, I said:
"The question of tariff revision, speaking broadly, stands wholly apart from the question of dealing with the trusts. No change in tariff duties can have any substantial effect in solving the so-called trust problem. Certain great trusts or great corporations are wholly unaffected by the tariff. Almost all the others that are of any importance have as a matter of fact numbers of smaller American competitors; and of course a change in the tariff which would work injury to large corporation would work not merely injury but destruction to its smaller competitors; and equally of course such a change would mean disaster to all the wage-workers connected with either the large or the small corporations. From the standpoint of those interested in the solution of the trust problem such a change would therefore merely mean that the trust was relieved of the competition of its weaker American competitors, and thrown only into competition with foreign competitors; and that the first effort to meet this new competition would be made by cutting down wages, and would therefore be primarily at the cost of labor. In the case of some of our greatest trusts such a change might confer upon them a posichange might confer upon them a posi-tive benefit. Speaking broadly, it is evi-dent that the changes in the tariff will affect the trust for weal or for woe sim-ply as they affect the whole country. The tariff affects trusts only as it af-fects all other interests. It makes all these interests large or small profitthese interests, large or small, profitable; and its benefits can be taken from the large only under penalty of taking them from the small also."

There is little for me to add to this. It is but ten years since the last attempt made, by means of lowering the was made, by means of lowering tariff, to prevent some people from prospering too much. The attempt was entirely successful. The tariff law of that tirely successful the causes which in year was among the causes which in that year and for some time afterwards that year and for some time afterwards effectually prevented anybody from prospering too much, and labor from prospering at all. Undoubtedly it would be possible at the present time to prevent any of the trusts from remaining prosperous by the simple expedient of making such a sweeping change in the tariff as to paralyze the industries of the country. The trusts would cease to prosper, but their smaller competitors would country. The trusts would cease to pros-per; but their smaller competitors would be ruined, and the wage-workers would starve, while it would not pay the farm-er to haul his produce to market. The evils connected with the trusts can be evils connected with the trials can be reached only by rational effort, step by step, along the lines taken by congress and the executive during the past three years. If a tariff law is passed under years.

struction and uprooting of the tariff, and therefore of our business and industry, that they are piedged. When our opponents last obtained power it was on a platform declaring a protective tariff "unconstitutional;" and the effort to put this declaration into practice was one of the causes of the general national prostration lasting from 1893 to 1897. If a protective tariff is either "unconstitutional" or "robbery," then it is just as unconstitutional, just as much robbery, to revise it down, still leaving it protective, as it would be to enact it. In other words our opponents have committed themselves to the destruction of the protective principle in the tariff, using words which if honestly used forbid them from permitting this principle to obtain in even the smallest degree.

Every class of our people is benefited by the protective tariff. During the last few years the merchant has seen the export trade of this country grow faster than ever in our, previous history. The manufacturer could not keep his factory running if it were not for the protective tariff. The wage-worker would do well to remember that if protection is "robbery," and is to be punished accordingly, he will be the first to pay the penalty; for either he will be turned adrift entirely, or his wages will be cut down to the starvation point. As conclusively shown by the bulleting.

for either he will be turned adrift entirely, or his wages will be cut down to the starvation point. As conclusively shown by the bulletins of the bureau of labor, the purchasing power of the average wage received by the wage-worker has grown faster than the cost of living, and this in spite of the continual shortening of working hours. The accumulated savings of the workingmen of the country, as shown by the deposits in the savings banks, have increased by leaps and bounds. At no time in the history of this or any other country has there been an or any other country has there been an era so productive of material benefit alike to workingman and employer, as during the seven years that have just passed.

The farmer has benefited quite as much as the manufacturer, the merchant, and the wage-worker. The most welcome and impressive fact established by the last census is the wide and even distribution of wealth among all classes of our countrymen. The chief agencies in producing this distribution are shown by the ing this distribution are shown by the census to be the development of manufactures, and the application of new inventions to universal use.

In the forty years ending in 1900 the total value of farm property increased twelve and a half billions of dollars; the farmer gaining even more during this period than the manufacturer. Long ago over-production would have checked the over-production would have checked the marvelous development of our national agriculture; but for the steadily increasing demand of American manufacturers for farm products required as raw materials for steadily expanding industries. Conditions change and the laws must be modified from time to time to fit new exigencies. But the genuine underlying principle of protection, as it has been embodied in all but one of the American tariff laws for the last forty years, has worked out results so beneficent, so evenly and widely spread, so advantageous alike to farmers and capitalists and workingmen, to commerce and trade of every ingmen, to commerce and trade of every kind, that the American people, if they kind, that the American people, if they show their usual practical business sense, will insist that when these laws are modified they shall be modified with the utmost care and conservatism, and by the friends and not the enemies of the protective system. They cannot afford to trust the modification to those who treat protection and robbery as synonytreat protection and robbery as synonymous terms.

In closing what I have to say about the system of promoting American indus-try let me add a word of cordial agree-ment with the policy of in some way including within its benefits, by appropriate legislation, the American merchant marine. It is not creditable to us as a nation that our great export and import trade should be well nigh exclusively in the hands of foreigners.

Our opponents contend that the govern-and that whereas there was "a surplus of $$0,000,000 in 1900" there is "a deficit of more than $40.000,000" in the year that has just closed. This deficit is imaginary, and is obtained by including in the ordinary cur-rent expenses the sum of fifty millions, which was paid for the right of way of the Panama canal out of the accumulated surplus in the treasury. Comparing the current or ordinary expenditures for the two years, there was a surplus of nearly eighty millions for the year 1900, and of only a little more than eight millions for the year that has just closed. But this diminution of the annual surplus was brought about designedly by the abolition of the war taxes in the interval between the two dates. The acts of March 2, 1901, and April 12, 1902, cut down the internal revenue taxes to an amount estimated at one hundred and five millions a year. In other words, the reduction of taxation has been considerably greater than the reduction in the annual surplus. Since the close of the war with Spain there has been no substantial change in the rate of annual As compared with the fiscal year ending in June, 1901, for example, the fiscal year that has just closed showed a relatively small increase in expenditure (excluding the canal payment already referred to), while the year previous showed a relatively small decrease.

The expenditures of the nation have been managed in a spirit of economy as far removed from waste as from niggardliness; and in the future every effort will be continued to secure an economy as strict as is consistent with efficiency. Our opponents promise independence to the Philippine Islands. Here again we are confronted by the fact that their irreconcilable differences of opinion among themselves, their proved inability to create a constructive policy when in power, and their readiness, for the sake momentary of momentary political expediency, to abandon the principles upon which they have insisted as essential, conspire to puzzle us as to whether they do or do not intend in good faith to carry out this promise if they are given control of the government.

If our opponents came into power and attempted to carry out their promises to the Filipinos by giving them independence, and withdrawing American control from the islands, the result would be a frightful calamity to the Filipinos themselves, and in its larger aspect would amount to an international crime. archy would follow; and the most vio-lent anarchic forces would be directed partly against the civil government, part-ly against all forms of religious and educational civilization. Bloody conflicts would inevitably ensue in the archipelago. and just as inevitably the islands would become the prey of the first power which in its own selfish interest took up the task we had cravenly abandoned, During the last five years more has been done for the material and moral well-being of the Filipinos than ever before since the islands first came within the ken of civilized man. We have open-ed before them a vista of orderly development in their own interest, and not a policy of exploitation. Every effort is being made to fit the islanders for selfgovernment, and they have already in large measure received it, while for the first time in their history their personal rights and civil liberties have been guaranteed. They are being educated; they have been given schools; they have been given libraries; roads are being built for their use; their health is being their use; their health is being cared for: they have been given courts in which for: they have been given courts in which they receive justice as absolute as it is in our power to guarantee. Their individual rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are now by act of congress jealously safeguarded under the American flag; and if the protection of the flag were withdrawn their rights the flag were withdrawn their rights would be lost, and the islands would be plunged back under some form of vicious

The letter concludes: Alike as lawmakers and as administrators of the law we have endeavored to do our duty in the interest of the people as a whole. We make our appeal to no class and to no section, but to all good citizans, in whatever part to all good citizens, in whatever part of the land they dwell, and whatever may all good citizens, in whatever part of the land they dwell, and whatever may be their occupation or worldly condition. We have striven both for civic righteousness and for national greatness; and we have faith to believe that our hands will be upheld by all who feel love of country and trust in the uplifting of mankind. We stand for enforcement of the law and for obedience to the law; our government is a government of orderly liberty equally alient to tyranny and to anarchy; and its foundation stone is the observance of the law, alike by the people and by the public servants. We hold ever before us as the all-important end of policy and administration the reign of peace at home and throughout the world; of peace, which comes only by doing justice.

Donnelly, of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America. During the strike, approximating 53,000 persons have been involved in the strike, which is estimated to have cost the men about $5,100,000 in wages, as against an estimated loss of $7,500,000 to the packers in loss of business and in increased expenses.

The Allied Trades Council, consisting of nearly all the stockyards unions except the butchers, will make a proposition to the packers that the members of these unions be taken back as unionists or not at all.

BILIOUSNESS CONSTIPATION CURED BY THEDFORDS BLACK-DRAUGHY

Because the liver is neglected people suff with constipation, bilions with constipation, biliousness, headaches and fevers. Colds attack the lungs and contagious diseases take hold of the system. It is safe to say that if the liver were always kept in proper working order, illness would be almost unknown.

Thedford's Black-Draught is so Thedford's Black-Draught is so successful in curing such sickness because it is without a rival as a liver regulator. This great family medicine is not a strong and drastic drug, but a mild and healthful laxative that cures constipation and may be taken by a mere child without possible harm.

The healthful action on the liver cures biliousness. It has an invigorating effect on the kidneys. Because the liver and kidneys de not work regularly, the poisonous acids along with the waste from the bowels get back into the blood and virulent contagion results.
