Lafayette Grange Doings.

Lafayette Grange had an interesting meeting at the Lima M. E. church, Saturday, Oct. 1, although but a few members were present. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fletcher and Mr. and Mrs. G. T. English were elected delegates to the county convention held at Ann Arbor Tuesday, Oct. 4.

The meeting day of Lafayette Grange has been changed to the first and third Wednesday of each month.

Arrangements are being made to entertain Pomona Grange Nov. 15.

The next meeting will be held at the Lima church Wednesday, Oct. 19. The program will be as follows:

Miscellaneous quotations.
Select reading.
Topics—"Your ideal of a farm house kitchen;" "The beef industry in Michigan."

Supplementary questions—In what way has the beef industry been retarded in Michigan? Name five leading breeds of cattle. What has caused a lack of uniformity in beef cattle? What to look for in purchasing feeders. Experience in raising skim milk calves for beef.

What Your Home Paper Does for You.

"Your home paper never loses interest in you." This possibly you have not given a passing thought. No matter if you like the newspaper man or if he likes you, if he is true to his profession and publishes a paper for the people he allows no personal matters or party spites to interfere with his news gathering. He may meet you as a stranger, yet along with his best friends, chronicles your success and sorrows whatever you may be, and those who would otherwise forget you are ever and anon reminded of your existence by an item in your home paper. Others may deceive and defraud you, but your home paper never forgets you. Possibly you do not deserve decent treatment by the paper, but you get it just the same, and if it should at any time say things to cause your fur to turn the wrong way, study a moment and see if it has not at various times said many nice things for which you fail to give it credit.—Portland Oregonian.

FELL FROM A HANDCAR.

Clarence Filkins Badly Injured Tuesday Morning.

Clarence Filkins, of Ypsilanti, who was working for the White Portland Cement Co., at their works at Four Mile Lake, met with a very serious accident Tuesday morning. He boards in Chelsea and goes to and from his work on one of the handcars used by the workmen for that purpose. Tuesday morning two of the cars were proceeding to the works loaded with men, one car close behind the other, when Mr. Filkins fell off the foremost car on which he was riding. The second car ran over him before it could be stopped and he was severely hurt about the back and spine and it was even feared his back was broken. He was removed to the Bowen house nearby and was taken to the U. of M. hospital for treatment on the 8:20 a. m. train. His entire body is paralyzed from his shoulders to his feet and his recovery is doubtful.

How They Are Provided For.

Fourteen of the "immortal nineteen" of the Michigan state senate who have in the past few years built up the machine that has wrested from the people many of their rights and privileges and brought about the condition of affairs that the taxpayers are rebelling now against, have been well provided for with places on the public pay roll. Here is the list, which can be verified from the official records:

Senator Atwood, railroad commissioner.
Senator Moore, state bank commissioner.
Senator Sayre, tax commissioner.
Senator Maitland, lieutenant governor.
Senator McMullen, postmaster at Cheboygan.
Senator Graham, state board of agriculture.
Senator Charles Smith, state senator.
Senator Humphrey, clerk in auditor general's office.
Senator Heald, deputy food commissioner.
Senator Blakeslee, member of pardon board.
Senator Brown, secretary of Agricultural College.
Senator Collingwood, postmaster of Agricultural College.
Senator Flood, member of the railroad crossing board and in charge of the federal census.
Senator Latimer, member of the railroad crossing board and assistant sergeant at arms in the United States senate.

HOW GREAT SCHOLAR WOODED.

Dr. Samuel Johnson's Final and Concluding Argument.

Dr. Samuel Johnson married a Mrs. Porter of Birmingham. That lady's daughter thus described the doctor's wooing: "His appearance was very forbidding; he was lean and lank, so that his immense structure of bones was hideously striking to the eye, and the scars of the scrofula were deeply visible. He also wore his hair, which was straight and stiff, and separated behind; and he often had, seemingly, convulsive starts and odd gesticulations, which tended to excite at once surprise and ridicule. Mrs. Porter was so much engaged by his conversation that she overlooked all these external disadvantages and said to her daughter: 'This is the most sensible man that I ever saw in my life.'" Mrs. Porter, who was twice Johnson's age, was not easily won. Urged by her learned lover to say why she still refused him, she said "an uncle of hers had been hung and she did not wish to bring disgrace on him." "Is that all?" said Johnson. "Why, though I have never had an uncle hung, I have two or three uncles who deserved it. So let's get married and say no more about that."

THE KING OF SPORTS.

Balloon Voyaging Recommended as Ahead of Everything.

There is a variety of sensations, to which one never quite accustoms himself, that makes of ballooning the king of sports. There is an exhilaration in automobiling over the smooth, picturesque roads of the continent at sixty or seventy miles an hour. One looks at the trees that line the roadway, and, facing almost a cyclone, notices that every leaf on a quiet day is motionless. The speed, which is maintained hour after hour and not released in descending hills, is magnificent, and the sensation inspiring. But to those who think that this is the limit of human sensation I can recommend as better and safer a voyage in a balloon over the Alps.—The World's Work.

A Romance of the Danish Conquest.

CHAPTER XXIII—Continued.

The guard discreetly held his tongue—but he likewise held his position. Elfgiva's bosom was beginning to heave in hysterical menace when a second soldier, lounging against the wall behind the first, ventured a soothing word.

"For your own safety, noble one, ask it not. The King is listening to a quarrel between an Englishman and a Dane; and by reason of it, there are many in the room whose tempers may—"

Randall, who alone of all the maidens had remained undaunted at her mistress's elbow, caught that elbow in a vice-like grip. "Take the gallery, then, lady!" she urged in a piercing whisper. "The gallery—as quick as you can."

After a moment's bidding, Elfgiva whirled back with an angry frown of her draperies. "The gallery, then, dog! I shall reach my lord's ear from that, which will be an unlucky thing for you."

Whatever its shortcomings as a show-case, the balcony was excellently adapted both for spectators and for eavesdroppers, its distance from the floor being little more than twice a man's height, while the fire which doled its light so stingily, lavished a glory of brightness on the spot where the King's massive chair stood beside the chimney-piece.

Enclosed by a martial throng, so massed and indistinct that they made a background like embroidered tapestry, three figures were the center of attention—the figure of the young King in his raised chair, and the forms of the Dane and the Anglo who fronted each other before his footstool.

Shielded from the heat by his palm, Canute's face was in the shadow, and the giant shape of the son of Lodbrok was a blot against the flames, measured voice sounded sharply through the hush. For the first time, he lowered his hand and bent forward where the fire-glow could touch him.

As she caught sight of his face Elfgiva shrank and clutched at her woman. "Ah, Saints, I am thankful now that it is dark!" she murmured.

Sebert sustained the look with proud steadiness. "Nothing that would be of use to me," he said; "and I do not choose to pleasure you by setting up a weak plea for you to knock down again. If your messengers had not taken me by surprise—I He paused, with an odd curl to his lips that could hardly be called a smile; but Canute gave him command to finish, and he obeyed with rising color. "If your messengers had not come upon me as I was riding on the Watling street and brought me here, a prisoner, I would have argued the matter with arrows, and you would needs have battered down the defense of stone walls to convince me."

Mutters of mingled admiration and censure buzzed around. Through it all Canute sat motionless, studying the Etheling with his bright colorless eyes.

At last he said unexpectedly, "If you would not obey my summons until my men had dealt with you by force, it cannot be said that you have much respect for my authority. Do you not then acknowledge me as king of the English?"

Rothgar betrayed impatience at this branching aside. Sebert himself, showed surprise.

He said hesitatingly, "I—I cannot deny that. You have the same right that Cerdic had over the Britons. Nay, you have more, for you are the formal choice of the Witan. I cannot rightly deny that you are king of the Angles."

Fancy placed a scarlet-cloaked figure at his feet and raised at his knee a face of sweetest friendliness.

but the glare lay strong on Sebert of Ivarsdale, revealing a picture that caused one spectator to catch her breath in a sob. Equally aloof from English thane and Danish noble, the Etheling in the palace of his native king stood a stranger and alone, while his swordless sheath showed him to be also a prisoner. He bore himself proudly, one of his blood could scarcely have done otherwise, but his fine face was white with misery, and despair darkened his eyes as they stared unseeing before him.

Answering a question from the King, Rothgar began to speak, his heavy voice seeming to fill all the space from floor to ceiling: "By all the laws of war, King Canute, the Odal of Ivarsdale should come to me. The first son of Lodbrok took the land before ever this Angle's kin had seen it. He built the tower that stands on it, and the name it bears to this day is the name of his giving. Under Guthrum, a weak-kneed son of his son of his lost it to the English Alfred, and we fell out of our fortunes with the tipping of the scales, and Angles have sat since then in the seat of Lodbrok's sons. But now the scales have risen again. Under Canute, Ivarsdale, with all other English property, comes back to Danish hands. By all the laws of war, my kinsman's inheritance should be my share of the spoil."

Ending roundly, he drew himself up in an attitude of bold assurance. Wherever a group of scarlet cloaks made a bright patch upon the human arras, there was a flutter of approval.

In the shadow of his hand, Canute nodded slowly. "By all the laws of war," he affirmed, "your kinsman's inheritance should be your share of the spoil."

Again an approving murmur rose from Danish throats; and Rothgar was opening his lips to voice a grateful answer, when a gesture of the royal hand checked him.

"Recollect, however, that just now I am not only a war-chief, but also a law-man. I think it right, therefore, to hear what the Englishman has to say for his side. Sebert Oswaldson, speak in your defense."

"I have nothing to say. Your justice may most rightly be meted out."

"Nothing to say?" The King's rose slowly to her eyes and rolled slowly down her cheeks, but on her mouth was a little smile whose wondering joy mounted to exaltation.

The murmur below was growing, despite the king's restraining hand; and now, crashing through it in hideous discord, came a burst of jeering laughter from the Jotun. What words he also spoke they could not catch, but they heard the Danish cries sink and die, and they saw a score of English thanes spring upon him and drag him backward. Above the noise of their scuffling, the king's voice sounded stern and cold.

"While I act as law-man in my judgment hall, I will hear no disputing of my judgments. Whoso comes to me in my private chamber, as friend to friend, may tell his mind; but now I speak as king, and what I have spoken shall stand."

Struggling with those who would have forced him from the room, Rothgar had no breath to retort with, but the words did not go unsaid because of that. Wherever scarlet cloaks made a bright patch, the human arras swayed and shook violently, and then fell apart into groups of angry men whose voices rose in resentful chorus:

"Such judgment by a Danish king is unexampled!" "King, we are all to expect this treatment?" "This is the third time you have ruled against your own men." "You are our chief, whose kingship we have held up with our lives." "What are these English to you?" Snarling more and more openly, they surged forward, closing around the dais in a fiery mass.

Canute's sword was no more brilliantly hard than his face, and his eyes were glittering points. The ring of steel was in his voice as he answered:

"You speak as you have a right—but you speak as men who have swines' memories. Was it your support or your courage that won me the English crown? It may be that if I had waited until pyre and fire you would have done so, but it happened that before that time the English Witan gave it to me as a gift, in return for my pledge to rule them justly. My meaning in this judgment, and the others that you dislike, is that I am going to keep that pledge. I tell you now, openly and without deceit, that henceforth there is to be but one rule for Angle and Dane alike; and I shall be as much their king as yours; and they shall share equally in my justice. You may like it or not, but that is what will take place."

How they liked it was suggested by a hurrying look, and the scuffling of many feet as the English leaped forward to protect their new king and the Danes whirled to meet them, but the women in the gallery did not wait to see the outcome. In a frenzy of terror, Elfgiva dragged up the kneeling maids and herded them through the door.

"Go—before they get into the ante-room!" she gasped. "Do you not see that he is no longer human? We should be pleading with iron. Go! Before they tear down the walls!" (To be continued.)

Where Racing Manners Win.

Manners are becoming more and more important to the success of harness horses that are expected to race in good company and make any sort of a showing. The overanxious trotter or pacer will take so much out of himself in scoring that a horse of less speed than he himself possesses will beat him handsily before the race is ended. The horse that cannot be placed at the will of his driver after the word is given will not win any race worth talking about. Neither will the horse of opposite temperament—the sort that must be "recofer" and rallied from start to finish. The winning trotter must have ambition enough to beat the other horses in the race, speed enough to meet them on equal terms in that particular, and the willingness to let his driver decide when the brush for the front shall be made. That sort of horse is a rare bird, and when you find one and expect him to win three or four races in a row you must add to his other good qualities those of being a good shipper, a first-class feeder and the ability to stand a week of track and water every week.—Los Angeles Times.

Rough on "Joe" Chamberlain.

Joseph Chamberlain's list of jokes includes this one on himself:

On one occasion he was invited to Liverpool to make a speech. It was to be a great celebration. The mayor, who was to preside at the meeting, had arranged a fine dinner for the guest of honor. A distinguished assembly surrounded the table, and at the right of the host sat Mr. Chamberlain. For a couple of hours the company chatted over their food, and finally the coffee was served. It was at this juncture that the mayor leaned over and whispered to Mr. Chamberlain:

"Your excellency, shall we let the crowd enjoy itself a while longer, or had we better have your speech?"—New York Times.

World's Largest Monolith.

London Engineering illustrates and describes the largest monolith yet built. Two of these structures form the foundations for the roundheads at the entrance of the new Midland Railway Company's harbor at Heysham, in Morecambe bay. The roundheads are three hundred feet apart, and only a short distance removed from the main channel formed by Heysham lake. They are built on monoliths, which constituted one of the most interesting features of the works, for, being fifty feet in diameter, they were the largest constructed in connection with harbor works.

AGRICULTURE

Buying Fertilizers.

Our state legislatures are doing what they can to protect the people against low grade fertilizers. Some of the states require the experiment stations to publish special bulletins on fertilizers and send them to all the farmers that want them. This is to spread the information among the farmers as rapidly as possible. If our farmers would avail themselves of these opportunities more than they do they would be the gainers. The fertilizer trade is already a very large one in the East and is growing rapidly in the West. All the information that can be gained should be laid hold of. Our best fertilizer firms are selling only good materials and are as anxious as the farmers can be to keep the poor goods out of the market. Any attempt to enforce the fertilizer laws always has the support of these companies, for their worst enemies are the small companies that are selling inferior goods at a low price. The farmer thinks he is getting a bargain in buying these cheap goods and so goes to the men that sell him the poorest stuff and make the most out of him. If the men that are selling the cheap fertilizers sold it as low as do the men that sell only high grade fertilizers the men that sell the poor stuff would have to go out of business. They sell the poor stuff and make money by really getting for the fertilizers contained a greater price than the others do. The farmer is finding this out only slowly.

Some of the large firms stoop to create bogus companies that sell this material. The writer happened in the territory of one such firm doing business in the southern part of Illinois. The large firm in question had an agency in the place and this agency sent out two sets of agents, one set representing the agency and the other representing a fictitious company supposed to be located in the same place. The cheap material was worked off under the name of the bogus company and generally on farmers to whom could not be sold the high priced goods, but who wanted something cheap. It was found best to sell mostly to farmers too far away to come to the place and look up the headquarters. But one day a farmer who had been buying the cheap goods came into the agency referred to and said he was very much dissatisfied with the fertilizers of the company he had been buying of, and he wanted to be directed to their store. The agent informed him that the company he was looking for had formerly been located in that neighborhood, but had been burned out and had gone out of business, but that he would be glad to supply the farmer with goods that could not be found fault with.

The farmer that is always looking at the price and not at the quality at the same time is always getting beaten in his trades. It is impossible that it should be otherwise as long as there are unscrupulous men that are making a living in commercial ventures.

Professor Hopkins has been telling the farmers that they must ignore everything in fertilizers except the elements that they are looking for, and he is right. It is not a question of how many tons of fertilizing material a farmer buys, but of how many pounds of potassium, phosphorus and nitrogen he is getting, and at what cost per pound.

Records of Farm Drains.

Another feature of engineering work for farm drainage in which there should be great improvement is that of maps and records. At Ames, on the college farm, the present authorities have had predecessors who put in quite extensive amounts of tile drains without leaving accurate plats, so that in many places we cannot now find even where the drains were built, to say nothing of their sizes, grades and depths. In making excavations old lines of tile whose very existence was not suspected are not infrequently encountered, and the writer knows of places where at least two systems of tiles in the same locality have been put in by successive generations of authorities. The same or a worse state of affairs must result on individual farms throughout the state, as time goes by and the farms change owners, unless the present almost total neglect of keeping complete records of all tile drains built is remedied. Even if the land does not change owners, men's memories fail, and the writer has often noted that even after a very few years men who actually help build drains are frequently unable to locate them within a considerable distance. Without complete maps showing the particulars of our drains how can we hope to keep them in working order! The breaking and choking up of a single tile might render many acres of land worthless in a wet season, and cause enough damage in a single year to have paid ten times over for records which would have enabled the difficulty to be located and remedied at less than one dollar's expense.—Iowa Station.

At the Ontario agricultural college potatoes were planted in rows 26½ inches apart with the sets one foot apart in the row, and others were planted 33 inches apart each way, exactly the same amount of seed being used in both cases. The close planting gave a yield of 31.4 bushels more than the other method.

GOING TO FIND MOTHER.

Pathetic Story of Henry Ward Beecher's Childhood.

William James, the Harvard psychologist, was illustrating the confusion into which children's minds may be thrown by the reception of different ideas about the same subject.

"Henry Ward Beecher," he said, "furnished us in his childhood with a good example of the thing I mean. On the death of Beecher's mother the little fellow was told by some that she had gone to heaven, and by others that she had been laid in the ground."

"He brooded over these contradictory ideas until they were reconciled in his mind. Then, one morning, he was found digging in the garden very busily."

"What are you doing?" they asked him.

"Why," said the child, "I am going to heaven to find mother."

Then Finish the Dishes.

The B's had given an impertinent maid notice, and in consequence were obliged to assume the duties that she pointedly neglected. On the last day of Katie's stay, as one of the ladies of the family was hastening to answer a ring at the front door, she was arrested by an explosive whisper from the rear of the hall, where the irrepressible ex-maid, Katie, in most unpressing dishabille, was established: "Mrs. B, if that's anyone for me, say I'm out."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Fish Fighting in Siam.

Fish fighting is the most popular sport in Siam. The two fish, trained from the age of six months to fight, are placed in a large glass bottle. It is most curious to note each fish's attitude when it becomes aware of its adversary's presence in the bottle. Swelling with rage and pride, they sail around and around the narrow space, pretending not to notice each other, until suddenly one fish makes a savage dart at its unwelcome companion, biting its fins and body. The fight continues until the referee sees that the issue is no longer in doubt, when the contest is stopped.

Straining the Air.

A woman living in a smoky city helps to keep her house clean by straining the air as it is drawn into the cold air register or box to be sent up through the pipes into the different rooms, says Good Housekeeping. The register is taken out, a piece of cheesecloth a trifle larger than the opening is spread over the pipe and the register is replaced, its edges holding the cheesecloth in place. The particles of soot and dust which accumulate on the cheesecloth soon prove how much the wall paper and furniture have been saved.

Animals of Angora.

A writer on the Angora goat calls attention to the fact that the climate of Angora possesses some remarkable peculiarities causing the development of a silky coat on animals of various kinds. Not only the famous goats, which produce mohair, are thus furnished, but a similar tendency is exhibited among such animals as cats and greyhounds living in the same country.

Spectacles of Famous Man.

Walter Newbegin, a Kezar Falls, Me., collector of curiosities, has the spectacles worn by Rev. John Buzzell, the first Baptist minister in Maine, who is said to have had his eyesight suddenly restored and to have grown a new head of hair and a set of teeth at the ripe age of 90 years.

CAN DRINK TROUBLE.

That's one way to get it.

Although they won't admit it many people who suffer from sick headaches and other ailments get them straight from the coffee they drink and it is easily proved if they're not afraid to leave it to a test as in the case of a lady in Connellsville.

"I had been a sufferer from sick headaches for twenty-five years and anyone who has ever had a bad sick headache knows what I suffered. Sometimes three days in the week I would have to remain in bed, at other times I couldn't lie down the pain would be so great. My life was a torture and if I went away from home for a day I always came back more dead than alive."

"One day I was telling a woman my troubles and she told me she knew that it was probably coffee caused it. She said she had been cured by stopping coffee and using Postum Food Coffee and urged me to try this food drink."

"That's how I came to send out and get some Postum and from that time I've never been without it for it suits my taste and has entirely cured all of my old troubles. All I did was to leave off the coffee and tea and drink well-made Postum in its place. This change has done me more good than everything else put together."

"Our house was like a drug store for my husband bought everything he heard of to help me without doing any good, but when I began on the Postum my headaches ceased and the other troubles quickly disappeared. I have a friend who had an experience just like mine and Postum cured her just as it did me."

"Postum not only cured the headaches, but my general health has been improved, and I am much stronger than before. I now enjoy delicious Postum more than I ever did coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason" and it's worth finding out.

THOUGHT SHE WOULD DIE.

Mrs. S. W. Marine, of Colorado Springs, Began to Fear the Worst. Doan's Kidney Pills Saved Her. Mrs. Sarah Marine, of 428 St. Utah St., Colorado Springs, Colo., President of the Glen Byrie Club, writes:

"I suffered for three years with severe backache. The doctors told me my kidneys were affected, and prescribed medicines for me, but I found it was only a waste of time and money to take them, and began to fear that I would never get well. A friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. Within a week after I began using them I was so much better that I decided to keep up the treatment, and when I had used a little over two boxes I was entirely well. I have now enjoyed the best of health for more than four months, and words can but poorly express my gratitude."

IN GREAT DISTRESS

VOMITING SPELLS LONG RESISTED EVERY EFFORT TO CHECK.

Mrs. Brooks Became So Weak She Thinks She Would Have Died But For Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. Sarah L. Brooks, of No. 45 Lincoln Park, Chicago, Illinois, gives the following account of her cure from distressing spells of vomiting:

"For five years off and on I was treated in vain by different doctors for relief from a stomach trouble which showed itself in frequent and trying spells of vomiting. Part of the time I was able to work, and again I would be confined to bed for three or four days in succession.

"My stomach was at times so delicate that it would not retain even plain water. The spells would sometimes occur at intervals of half an hour, and would leave me so weak that I would be compelled to lie down between them. I would have several of them during the night following a day of such attacks. Finally I became so weakened that I had to give up working altogether. I weighed only ninety-four pounds.

"Last January I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in one of the Chicago daily papers and bought a box and began to use them. After I had used half a box I found that I could keep on my stomach the food I ate. I was encouraged by this and kept on using the pills for four months. At the end of that time the vomiting spells had ceased altogether and my weight went up to 142 pounds and is still growing.

"I think I surely would have died if it had not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for I sometimes vomited clear blood, and for three or four days at a time I could not eat a bite of anything. One doctor said I had chronic inflammation of the stomach, and another said my difficulty was a cancer, but none of their medicines did me any good at all. Finally I concluded that I did not have blood enough to digest my food, and I began the treatment that has cured me. I can eat anything now, and have strength for all kinds of work. I always keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on hand, and I recommend them to my friends because I know they cured me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills agree with the most delicate stomachs and strengthen the digestive organs until they do their work perfectly. They are sold by all druggists.

CURIOUS WAYS OF SEA CRABS.

Take Elaborate Precautions to Protect Themselves From Enemies.

Certain species of crabs cover themselves with sea weed in order to deceive their foes. One crab was seen by the naturalist, Elsie, in 1878, to pluck off zoophytes, those plant-like animal colonies which grow on shells and stones, and to fix them on the spines and hairs of its shell. A still deeper romance of defensive tactics is to be found in the case of certain hermit crabs. They live in the cast-off shells of whelks and crawl about, house on back. One claw is bigger than the other, and this is an adaptive feature, for when the crab retires into its house the bigger claw is tucked across the mouth of the shell to bar the way against a possible intruder. More curious still is the habit of one species which toils along with a sea anemone fixed to its shell, like a Simbad carrying the Old Man of the Sea. Great care is taken of this anemone. It is fed by the crab, and if the latter fails to seek a new shell by reason of his growth he tenderly shifts his tenant off the old abode and places him on the new one.

A Small Boy's Essay on Water.

A very original essay on water by a very small boy is quoted by a contemporary. He divides all water into four subheadings—rain water, soda water, holy water and brine. "Water," he continues, "is used for a good many things. Sailors use water to go to sea on. Water is a good thing to fire at boys with a squirt gun and to catch fishes in." But the strangest of all uses for water is this: "Nobody," he says, "could be saved from drowning if there wasn't water to pull them out of." One is here reminded of a similar essay on pins, in the course of which the boy writer said that pins had saved many lives by people not swallowing them.—Ram's Horn.

Restrict Heights of Buildings.

These requirements as to height of buildings in Manchester, Eng., are enforced: Buildings in narrow streets shall not exceed in height two and a half times the width of such street; buildings in the principal streets are restricted to ninety feet, and buildings in ordinary streets are restricted to sixty-five feet.

In the village of Meavy, Dartmoor, England, is an old oak which was flourishing in the reign of King John, and is still flourishing, though supported by stout props.

Sure Cure at Last.

Monticello, Miss., Oct 3 (Special)—Lawrence County is almost daily in receipt of fresh evidence that a sure cure for all Kidney Troubles has at last been found, and that cure is Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Among those who have reason to bless the Great American Kidney Remedy is Mrs. L. E. Baggett of this place. Mrs. Baggett had Dropsy. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

"I was troubled with my kidneys," Mrs. Baggett says in recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills to her friends, "my urine would hardly pass. The doctors said I had Dropsy. I have taken Dodd's Kidney Pills as directed and am now a well woman."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys. Cured kidneys strain all the impurities out of the blood. That means pure blood and a sound energetic body. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the greatest tonic the world has ever known.

Cling to Their Farms

"All the farms in New England are not in the market," said a man whose business tends to speculation in farm property. "Some are being held by the old people as a matter of sentiment."

"In one of my recent trips down in Maine I stopped at a farmhouse that was erected more than sixty years ago. The owner did not know it, but I had gone all over his land and had taken a fancy to it. He and his housekeeper were the sole occupants of the house at the time of my visit.

"We were on the veranda one evening, when I broached the subject of buying his farm. He said it was not for sale at any price. I suggested as diplomatically as I could that he would not need the place much longer, and that with the money I proposed to pay him he could pass the remainder of his days in peace and independence.

"I knew that he had a boy in New York who was doing well, and who would never return to the old farm. I mentioned this as an inducement to make the trade. He shook his head the more determinedly.

"That's the reason," he said, "that I don't want to sell. If it was not for that boy I might be tempted to let the old place go. But it's this way:

"He was born here. He went to school not more than three miles from here. He knows every path in the woods. He has played all over this ground as far as your eyes can see.

"Just across the field over there is the family burying ground. His mother and brother and sister are all there, side by side. I guess you are right when you say he will not want to come back. He's got to be quite a city man, and I never expect to see him come back here to live. Perhaps 'tain't natural that he should.

"I ain't never asked him to come back, and I don't think that I ever shall. But some of these days when he gets along where I am now, maybe he'll get tired. Of course, he'll have his own home in the city by that time, where he can sit down and take it easy. I hope so.

"But after that it may be some consolation to him to know that he will be sent back here. That's why the farm ain't for sale."

"And his refusal to sell is the refusal of many others in the old state. They are holding on their places for the sake of their children who have gone away, but who, they are sure, will be sent back if they do not come of their own volition. That is why the old farms in New England are not for sale."—New York Sun.

Crabs Made the Trouble

One of the prominent women of Orange, N. J., gave a crab dinner the other night, to which she invited a dining room full of guests. The function proved highly enjoyable, and a few remarks to their hostess that they had never seen crabs so deliciously cooked. Some of her more intimate neighbors even besought of her to tell them the secret.

With a smile which reflected the pride she felt, the hostess was about to whisper the recipe to a haughty looking dame at her elbow, when a low moan from the kitchen alarmed the whole table and brought the conversation to an abrupt stop. The next moment the waitress, who had been acting queerly for some time, rushed back from the kitchen with a bandage in one hand and a bottle of sweet oil in the other. The hostess was the first to recover her composure, and, catching hold of the bandage, she asked:

"Mary, is there anyone hurt?"

"It's the c-c-cook, mum," stammered Mary.

"And what is the matter with Bridget?"

"Shure, mum, she burnt herself. I ou-ought tu haf told you afore mum. It wuz in the fixin' of them crabs, mum."

The hostess excitedly excused herself and rushed to the kitchen. There she found the cook, rocking back and forth in a chair, doubled up as with the most intense pain. On seeing her mistress, Bridget showed fright, and attempted to disguise her sufferings by struggling to her feet.

"You're badly hurt, Bridget?" said her employer hurriedly. "What is the matter? Tell me all about it."

"It's ashamed ter tell yuh. I's fraid yull fire me if you knows what's happened. It wuz the crabs, mum."

"Did you not prepare them according to the cook book I gave you yesterday? That new way, called Tote embroille?"

"Sure, I did, mum, but when I chucked 'em in the pan the blasted critters kicked the grease all over me."

The housewife threw up her hands. "Oh, Bridget!" she screamed, "do you mean to say you didn't clean them?"

"Shure I did, mum," was the reply. "I held them under the faucet."—New York Tribune.

Love Among the Japanese

The boys and girls, the young men and young women of Japan do love each other, I suppose, but one never sees the slightest shadow of evidence to prove it. The spirit of love does not dominate the national life as it does in America and the countries of Europe. Japan's poets do not sing of love; her story writers tell no tales of love that can thrill an Anglo-Saxon heart, and her artists paint no pictures of love that can reach the Anglo-Saxon understanding. Now, considering all this, how can there be such a thing as "a good old summer time" in this land of the sunrise? And yet there is, and it is especially delightful in its way, too, because the Japanese are a nation of feasters and picknickers, of nature lovers and world beautifiers, and if one can only lose sight of the fact that everywhere one goes the poor little women toddle meekly along behind the men, who stalk pompously ahead as if they owned the earth, one may almost enjoy one's self.

One never sees a woman caressed in Japan, not even with a glance; one seldom sees a baby fondled; in fact all human tenderness or expression of human tenderness is conspicuous by its absence, and I believe that is the one impassable great gulf that is fixed between us and this people which is endeavoring so earnestly to become one of us. And yet the people are happy, with a simple, sweet happiness that is charming. That is it. It is an atmosphere that mildly charms, but never thrills, the western heart. All the nation's love is concentrated upon the emperor, and the highest note of the national life is sounded in yamato-damashi, Japan spirit—patriotism; and even this is beyond our comprehension, because it is empty of romance and unsatisfactory to us, who cannot separate the interests of "fair women and brave men" even upon the battlefield.—Elean Franklin's Japan Letter in Leslie's Weekly.

Valuable Red Sea Jewels

Many valuable jewels are fished out of the Red Sea. The pearl fisheries in that body of water are very little known, but according to United States Consul Masterson, who writes from Aden, Arabia, they are important.

"The name Lohia applies to a small group of islands at the lower end of the Red sea, and pearl fishing has been carried on there for a number of years. The divers are all Arabs, but the men who finance the industry are generally natives of India, and for this reason it is hard to get the correct output in numbers of pearls or their value for any particular year, as a great number of the pearls found at Lohia go direct to Bombay and are not reported here at all.

"There are several merchants who handle these pearls. Each pearl or collection of pearls is sold according to the particular perfection of the pearl or collection, and there can be no price given for pearls indiscriminately.

"Several years ago there was a trade with the United States in mother-of-pearl shells from these pearl fisheries, but the entire output now goes to Europe.

"Pearls are the most popular of all the precious stones among the inhabitants of India and Arabia, and it is very seldom that a native woman of any social position is seen without pearl ornaments of some kind, either in rings for the nose, ears or fingers, and some even wear pearl rings on their toes. There are also extensive pearl fisheries in the Persian gulf, the entire output going to Bombay."—Jewelers' Circular Weekly.

Washington Had His Heart

Mrs. N. is the teacher of the infant class in one of the best known Sunday schools in the city of Washington. Among her numerous scholars is her own small son, who has the greatest respect and love for the memory of that illustrious man whom all loyal Americans love and venerate—George Washington.

On the Fourth John was up bright and early, and, between firing off "crackers," exploding bombs, and throwing torpedoes on the ground to hear the noise they made, beseeched his mother to tell him of the first president of the United States, being particularly interested in the tales of him as a great soldier.

The Sunday following Independence day, the Sunday school lesson was about Paul. Mrs. N. laid special stress on the fact that Paul was a soldier of the Lord, ever ready to fight when duty called. When she thought the lesson had been fully understood by all the small tots present, she said:

"If any one of you can tell me the name of the brave soldier I have been telling you about, raise his hand."

The silence in the room could be felt. The little ones gazed at "teacher," but did not offer to answer her question. Finally her son caused her heart to swell with pride by raising his hand.

"Speak loudly, John," she said, "so we can all hear."

The answer came in strenuous tones: "George Washington!"

Many women are denied the happiness of children through derangement of the generative organs. Mrs. Beyer advises women to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered with stomach complaint for years. I got so bad that I could not carry my children but five months, then would have a miscarriage. The last time I became pregnant, my husband got me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking the first bottle I was relieved of the sickness of stomach, and began to feel better in every way. I continued its use and was enabled to carry my baby to maturity. I now have a nice baby girl, and can work better than I ever could before. I am like a new woman."—MRS. FRANK BEYER, 22 S. Second St., Meriden, Conn.

Another case which proves that no other medicine in the world accomplishes the same results as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was married for five years and gave birth to two premature children. After that I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it changed me from a weak, nervous woman to a strong, happy and healthy wife within seven months. Within two years a lovely little girl was born, who is the pride and joy of my household. If every woman who is cured feels as grateful and happy as I do, you must have a host of friends, for every day I bless you for the light, health and happiness Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought to my home. Sincerely yours, Mrs. M. P. WHARRY, Flat 31, The Norman, Milwaukee, Wis."

Actual sterility in woman is very rare. If any woman thinks she is sterile let her write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., whose advice is given free to all would-be and expectant mothers.

The politicians among the saloon keepers are planning a new law regarding liquor bonds for enactment by the next legislature. It is a compulsory act for the furnishing of liquor bonds by bonding companies, instead of being signed by two taxpayers of the city or township. The argument is that all bonds would then be absolutely secure, and that saloons owned by tough and disreputable persons would have to go out of business, as bonding companies would not be disposed to do business with those classes on any terms.

Two important questions will be submitted to the voters at the general election in November. One for a general revision of the state constitution, and the other relative to the repeal of the section which limits the time for the introduction of bills in both houses.

Postmaster General Payne died Tuesday evening in Washington, D. C., aged 60 years, after a week's illness from heart disease. He will be succeeded in office about Dec. 1 by George B. Cortelyou.

Prohibition Congressional Convention.

A convention of the Prohibition party of the second congressional district will be held in Christ church, Toledo street, Adrian, Mich., Tuesday, Oct. 11, at one o'clock p. m., to nominate a candidate for congress and to transact any business that may come before the convention. By order of committee,

E. R. BRAGG, Chairman.

Saves Two From Death.

"Our little daughter had an almost fatal attack of whooping cough and bronchitis," writes Mrs. W. K. Haviland, of Armonk, N. Y., "but, when all other remedies failed, we saved her life with Dr. King's New Discovery. Our niece, who had consumption in an advanced stage, also used this wonderful medicine and today she is perfectly well." Desperate throat and lung diseases yield to Dr. King's New Discovery as to no other medicine on earth. Infallible for coughs and colds. 50c and $1.00 bottles guaranteed by Glazier & Stimson, druggists. Trial bottles free.

The Charm of a Moslem Girl.
When she is 12 or 14 the Moslem girl comes to know she is beautiful, though she does not marry at the early age of the Hindu girl. She counts the saris and cholis, and sighs for fringes of pearls and modern diamond earrings she sees the friends of her mother wear. In her rose-colored veil with gold spots she is the prettiest picture you ever saw. With gazelle eyes and Asiatic grace she is full of ardor and naivete at the same time. She runs like a fawn at the approach of a stranger, but when unobserved her laughter rings through the house, and the instinctive coquetry of her smile shows that the purdah is a necessity.—Edmund Russell in Everybody's Magazine.

Wishes.

They sat around the blazing fire, Ted and Ned and Lou, And popped their corn, and cracked their nuts, And wondered what they'd do If but one wish were granted each, With promise to come true.

Ted said he had ambitions, He would go abroad, And see the world and marry well; Perhaps he'd be a lord, And with the King and Queen he'd sit Right merry at the board.

Ned would like to be a singer, With a wondrous voice; To sing upon the stage, And be his final choice, And he would charm the whole wide world, And make each heart rejoice.

Still until the last one, Thoughtfully sat Lou, She pulled a curl, and frowned a bit, Uncertain what to do, "I think," she said, "if I'd one wish, I'd wish to make it two."

Cheaper Than Horses.

The following is the record of a gasoline tractor used in England for drawing agricultural machines: Six acres of grass cut in three hours and forty minutes, using five and a half gallons of gasoline; three acres of grass cut in one hour and thirty-five minutes, using three gallons of gasoline; two and one-tenth acres of land, with hard surface, plowed to an average depth of seven inches, in five hours and fifty minutes, using a double furrow plow, and consuming seven and three-fourths gallons of gasoline; nineteen acres of wheat harvested in ten hours, using eight and one-half gallons of gasoline. The cost of the machine is said to be $1,500.

From indigestion, aches and pains, Your system will be free, If you'll but take a timely drink Of Rocky Mountain Tea.

Glazier & Stimson.

County Notes.

John Schaible, of Saline, was helping at a barn raising on the Kuhl farm in that township Wednesday of last week, when a heavy timber fell and struck him on the head fracturing it in four places. He died within an hour afterwards.

Miss Cynthia Bailey, only daughter of Postmaster T. B. Bailey, of Manchester, died of consumption at Albaquerque, New Mexico, on her 22d birthday, Sept. 26. The funeral was held at the family home in Manchester, Sunday afternoon.

Thomas Becker, the young man who set fire to the barns on the Osborne farm in Scio, because his employer Charles Lang, who rented the farm, kicked him, was given a sentence of 10 years in Jackson prison by Judge Kinne in the circuit court Tuesday.

Wm. A. Russell, of Willis, was instantly killed within a few feet of his home while driving across the Wabash tracks yesterday by being hit by a fast freight engine. His wife had her arm and leg broken and was seriously bruised, and a little child who was with them was also cut and bruised but not seriously.

Numerous "wise" upper classmen at the U. of M. have been doing the freshmen who come to that place of learning by selling them campus tickets at $2 each. One of the biters was bit the other day when he sold a ticket to a freshman who gave him an imitation $10 bill in payment and received back $8 in good money as change.

Rev. S. W. Bird was awakened by a noise at his widow at the hotel in Munith Monday night and on going to the window came face to face with a burglar who was trying to break in. It would be difficult to tell which was the worse frightened, but the burglar fled. The residence of Wm. Hoffman was burglarized the same night.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

What is a "Jambiste"?

G. Washington Lobb, a Paris dancing master, has recovered $150 from M. Alberti for lessons given in dancing. The defendant said that he did not receive any lessons, but attended the dancing classes as a "jambiste." A "jambiste" is a young society man who occupies his leisure hours by acting as an auxiliary at a school of dancing, where he is always willing to dance with any of the women who are in want of a partner. He furnishes his services to the dancing school gratuitously, but sometimes the "jambiste" meets with a rich young heiress at the school and marriage results.

Briefly Told Hard Luck Story.

The teacher of a primary grade in one of the public schools in the Eighteenth ward was made the confidant by a young pupil of the following hard luck story. The little chap is noted for a slowness of speech, which is offset, however, by a directness of statement that goes straight to the marrow of any subject. He said: "Miss J-o-n-e-s, pop wuz i-e-a-d-i-n' a horse l-a-s-t night, an' he dropped d-e-a-d."

"That's too bad, Johnnie. I—"

"Yes, m-am, an' he 'ad j-u-s' paid sixty-nine dollars for 'im," interrupted and concluded the youngster.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Heating Power of Coal.

The heating power of coal is measured by the amount of carbon contained in a ton or a pound. Anthracite coal is found in many countries, but it is only in the United States and in England that the article is high grade—92 per cent or better. Even our coal differs widely in its constitutional elements. One kind holds more ash than another. Still another variety holds more clinkers, in spite of repeated burnings. The best coal leaves no clinkers and makes very little ash.

Whose Fault Was It?

Recorder Goff relates with great glee this joke on himself: A jurymen applied to him to be excused from serving, on the ground that he was deaf and could not hear clearly. "You've been in the court all the morning—didn't you hear my charge to the jury?" asked the recorder. "Oh, yes, your honor," was the quick reply; "I heard it right enough, but I couldn't make any sense of it."—New York Times.

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your New Method Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itching of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 5 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the New Method Treatment for four months and at the end of that time every disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish."

Look Cheerful.

No matter how depressed you feel,
Look cheerful!
A gloomy face is ungentle,
Look cheerful!
Nobody cares about your woes,
Each has his sorrows, goodness knows
Why should your griefs disclose?
Look cheerful!

Though you are blue as indigo,
Look cheerful!
You're prettier when you smile, you know,
Look cheerful!
The world abhors a gloomy face,
And tales of woe are commonplace,
So stir yourself, and take a brace—
Look cheerful!

The SHERIFF'S DAUGHTER

BY HENRY Q. BARRISON

"About five years ago I was staying in a little town on the Pacific coast, partly for health and partly for pleasure, and it was there I first made the acquaintance of Tom Chatlern. Tom was a great favorite in the neighborhood, as his face, form and manners were irreproachable, and we soon became fast friends. We were called the twins by the wits of the town, for we were inseparable, and many a lonely night we spent together, camped on the hillside under the twinkling stars. But Tom had a buried past, and no matter how jovial he was he would never speak of his early life, so I concluded he had suffered some bitter disappointment and had buried himself away from civilization in the rude but hospitable west.

"He was, like many others, very susceptible to female charms, and was—or was reputed to be—in love with Eva Liston, the daughter of the sheriff of the county, one of the greatest of thief hunters known, but his daughter was his opposite in every way, and was the fairest and sweetest girl on the shores of the Pacific.

"One morning I shouldered my rifle and sauntered down the principal street of the town, on my way to seek Chatlern, who was to accompany me on a day's shooting. I had not proceeded far before I met the object of my search, who rushed up and said, hurriedly:

"I can't go to-day, Jim. I have received some news about family affairs that has staggered me completely. I'm awfully sorry, but I really don't feel fit to go out. Good-by and a pleasant day's sport.

"I watched his retreating form as he dashed up the street, and then slowly paced along wondering what could disturb a man usually so cool and confident, but I soon gave up surmising and started for the hills intending to make the best of a bad matter and spend as good a day as possible.

"It was a singularly unlucky day, for I could not get within range of anything large, so with a curse at my ill-luck I made tracks for the town early in the evening. I did not tell you that the town was situated on a rocky coast, whose shores were precipitous and dangerous in the extreme, especially near the town; in fact, no vessel save skiffs and small boats dare run the gauntlet into the little sheltered bay inside the breakers.

"As I approached the town I felt a little sheepish at returning so early, and empty-handed to boot; so I determined to take a stroll by the shore until night fell, when I could slip unnoticed home. I struck down by the shore road, but soon quickened my pace, for I observed a crowd running in the direction of the Black Rocks, the most dangerous point on the whole coast, and I immediately concluded that some wayfarer had fallen over the rocks and was dashed to pieces below.

"I rushed up breathless and saw them gazing into the roaring sea hundreds of feet below, straining their eyes to catch a glimpse of some object beneath.

"He has escaped!" roared a big, burly man whom I recognized as the sheriff; "but, by heaven, he shall never leave there alive! Would a revolver reach him, I wonder?" and, throwing himself down, he crept to the edge of the cliff and fired several shots toward the sea.

"Missed!" he growled as he wiped again, as it will save us the trouble of finishing him. Hello, Mr. Harding! addressing me, 'are you here?'

"I asked the meaning of all the excitement, and as I spoke the crowd gazed curiously at me, and some of them audibly remarked that I had been fooled, too.

"Well, it means that your twin brother, as he was called, is not Mr. Chatlern, but Jake Gaston, the most bloodthirsty and relentless villain in the states. You needn't look alarmed. I don't blame you, as I know you never suspected him—neither did I, for he has been hiding here for years. He dispatched a message down the coast this morning to send a vessel up, for he smelled a rat; but we were too quick and made a raid on the house. Confound the fellow! He slipped through our fingers like an eel and made for the coast. Finding himself closely pressed, he went down these rocks like a monkey, and now sits below out of reach awaiting the vessel. By heaven! there she is and he signals her!" and he pointed to a schooner that swept around the point under sail and anchored half a mile from the shore.

"The excitement was now intense, and bets were freely taken about the result. They of the schooner saw that they dare not approach nearer to the shore, and were evidently afraid to send a boat through such a treacherous reef.

"The sheriff danced with glee at their discomfiture, and, turning to me, said:

"Would you oblige me with your rifle, Mr. Harding, as my revolver can't reach him? I have instructions to take his body, alive or dead."

"I politely declined to part with my rifle for such a purpose, much to his astonishment, as Chatlern had never wronged me and I had no wish to assist at his death.

"When matters were at a deadlock a skiff shot out from the coast, describing a crescent, spoke to the schooner, and skinned in to the rescue of the prisoner. All eyes were turned on the fragile boat, and as it drew near to the rocks below I saw, with horror, that the occupant was the sheriff's pretty daughter.

"Nearer and nearer crept the little boat, dodging through the network of rocks till at last it was so near that I could distinguish the golden locks and white, set face of the rover. Poor girl! she loved him despite his wicked career, and I could not but admire the unselfish devotion of the unfortunate girl.

"The sheriff was beside himself with rage and vexation at being cheated by his own daughter, and as the skiff shot out, Chatlern, or rather Gaston, stood up and waved him an ironic adieu. Eva stood by his side, the tears streaming down her face. But they were tears of joy.

"We watched them till the boat was a mere speck on the bosom of the ocean. That was the last I have ever seen of my 'twin brother.' Like Barrison, he went out with the tide!"

Henry Q. Barrison in Chicago Journal.

GOVERNMENT AS A BREEDER.

Department of Agriculture to Raise Fowls and Domestic Animals. The government is going into the large-breeding business. Plans are now under consideration by the department of agriculture for the expenditure of the $25,000 appropriated by the last congress for the purpose of breeding domestic animals and fowls. Especial attention, it is understood, will be given to the raising of horses, both for cavalry and carriage purposes and preparations to this end are being made at the Fort Collins experiment station, in Colorado.

At other stations in various parts of the United States experiments will be conducted with full-blooded chickens, cows, sheep and hogs, and Secretary Wilson is determined that the limit of excellence in each class shall be reached. The progress of the experiment is being watched with interest by breeders and cattlemen throughout the country.

Ungrateful Teacher. Elbert Hubbard was born in Bloomington, Ill., and a Bloomington man said of him the other day:

"Hubbard and I went to school together when we were little chaps. It was a private school, a kind of kindergarten, and the teacher allowed us a good many liberties. Hubbard had a little puppy dog, and one of the liberties allowed to him was the privilege of bringing in the dog and keeping it at his feet during the session.

"This went on for a week or more. The puppy was quiet at first, but, as it got accustomed to the school, it began to take liberties, to be free, to caper about and bark.

"One morning it disturbed the whole room. It broke up the session altogether. Therefore the teacher said:

"'Elbert, take that dog out, and never bring it in here any more.'

"Hubbard, nearly heart-broken, lifted the puppy up in his arms and went slowly down the aisles. He held its head against his cheek, and, as he departed, looking back reproachfully at the teacher, he said:

"'And it's named after you.'"

The Road to Success.

"The world is overfull today," said the discouraged man; "I'm sure I can't see any way my destiny to plan; The pictures are all painted now. The songs have all been sung. There's not a mission left, I vow. For hand or brain or tongue."

"I'll make a mighty bid for fame!" Said the persistent man; "I'll paint a picture and my name Shall future ages scan. And while I work I'll sing a song Of rollicking good cheer To help the lagging ones along. And keep my soul from fear."

His picture hung on castle walls. Fame knew him for her son; His song was sung in stately halls. "Two earnest labor won. And if you want to move the world, Make no abject appeal. But with your strength against it harry."

Put shoulder to the wheel. —Chicago Record-Herald.

Refused His Own Medicine.

A noted surgeon of this city was recently attacked by appendicitis. This surgeon performed last year 500 operations and lost but two, but when he was told that he had to be operated upon he objected, although the operators were also noted surgeons and intimate friends.

"Not on your life," said the patient. Urging was of no avail, and finally remedies unaccompanied by the knife were used.

The surgeon was sick some weeks, but he finally recovered, and only recently has been chronicled as having performed an operation for the disease with which he, too, was afflicted, and for which he would not undergo a siege at fellow professionals' hands. —Baltimore Sun.

Things of Birth.

Last fall Daniel J. Sully, the de-throned cotton king, was down South making a personal inspection of the condition of the cotton crop.

He traveled quite a little and visited one plantation after another. Driving along the road with a planter one afternoon, Mr. Sully noticed a swarm of negro children playing. They had sufficient clothing on them, but not one wore shoes. Mr. Sully then remarked:

"I thought everyone was getting rich down here on thirteen cent cotton. Now, not one of those children has shoes on. Do they always go barefoot?"

"Yes," said the planter, "they were all born that way."

Would Display a Star. Representative Charles F. Landis, of Indiana, one evening sought rest at a rural inn the proprietor of which was opposed to him politically. While seated on the veranda a star fell and elicited from the landlord's wife this comment, "Another soul has gone to heaven."

"Madam," asked the statesman good-naturedly, "will a star fall at my death and indicate that I, too, have gone to heaven?"

"Mr. Landis," said the woman haughtily, "to make room for such a big man as you in heaven a star must fall." —New York Herald.

Consolation.

One day Gen. Wood attended the funeral of a friend, and, waiting for the procession to start, the inevitable garrulous citizen stepped up to him and remarked:

"Sad about poor Jones, isn't it?"

"Very," replied Wood.

"And yet," persisted the citizen, "his pretty little widow doesn't seem quite broken-hearted. I suppose her composure is due to her pastor's assurance."

"Don't you believe it," said the general; "it is due to her late husband's insurance."

The rising inflection—"May we go to the picnic?"

In asking a question the rising inflection is to the voice what cheerfulness is to the face.

THE VOICE AND THE RISING INFLECTION: HOW TO ASK QUESTIONS.

It seems unfair, but we must make the best of it—that some people have, naturally without any study or effort, better voices than others can acquire by any amount of patient practice.

The kinds of voices can be represented by the kinds of type in a newspaper, as slim, thick, small, large, high, low, clear, dim, strong, weak, attractive, pleasant, respectful.

Anyone is able to improve the voice by watching it and listening to others and by exercising it systematically. An old professor of music and elocution said: "Go slow and low in order to get a clear and pleasant voice before trying to have it loud and strong."

If a hundred people were to say to a clerk, "Have you any good peaches?" there would be many kinds of accents and the clerk would be more attentive to some than to others on account of the way the words were inflected. Make your voice climb the stairs when asking questions:

Number, please? What is it, please?

Do not let your voice fall down stairs when asking questions. As a question requires or invites some one to make an effort or exertion it should be given in a way to create respect and compliance. (Copyright, 1904, by Earl M. Pratt.)

RICE PAPER IN FLORIDA.

Queer Tree Successfully Introduced There From China.

The rice paper tree, one of the most interesting of the entire flora of China, has recently been successfully experimented with in Florida, where it now flourishes with other subtropical and oriental species of trees and shrubs.

When first transplanted in American soil the experimenters expressed doubts of its hardiness, fearing that it would be unable to stand the winters. All these fears have vanished, however, and it is now the universal opinion that it is as well adapted to the climate of this country as to that of the Flowery Kingdom.

"It is a small tree, growing to a height of less than fifteen feet, and with a trunk or stem from three to five inches in diameter.

The celebrated rice paper, the product of this queer tree, is formed of thin slices of the pith, which is taken from the body of the tree in beautiful cylinders several inches in length.

The Chinese workmen apply the blade of a sharp, straight knife to these cylinders, and, turning them around, either by rude machinery or by hand, dexterously pare the pith from the circumference to center. This operation makes a roll of paper, the scroll being of equal thickness throughout.

After a cylinder has been pared it is unrolled, and weights are placed upon it until the surface is rendered smooth throughout its entire length.—New York Herald.

Action and Relaxation.

The American girl is developing two sides of her nature—two moods—one of action and one of relaxation. And, of course, it goes without saying that she dresses to suit the mood.

When she plays golf and tennis, it is the short skirt and the comfortable shirt waist that she wears, and it is since she has become such an active young person that she has taken to wearing the effort skirt, not only on the golf links and the tennis court, but shopping, traveling and for general utility wear, says the Chicago Herald.

So clever is the American girl of the day that one would never recognize her as the same girl as she appears at different hours of the day. She has learned the importance of resting just as she has realized the benefit derived from outdoor exercise. She regards being lazy as a virtue—that is, just for a certain length of time each day. Her relaxing hour is part of her beauty culture treatment, and it is then when she is resting body and mind that she is wearing the fascinating negligees that the shops show the whole year through.

Unlucky Thirteen.

A gentleman who had been dining at a restaurant, and who often ordered a dozen oysters, counted them one day, and found but eleven.

Still another day he counted them, with the same result. Then he said to the waiter:

"Why do you only give me eleven oysters when I order a dozen?"

"Oh, sir," answered the waiter, "I don't think you'd want to be sittin' thirteen at table, sir."—Spare Moments.

MUST APOLOGIZE.

An Auto Causes An Big Trouble in Massachusetts.

The following telegram bearing on the case of Hugh Curney, the British diplomat who was arrested at Lee, Mass., for speeding his automobile and fined for contempt when he refused to plead, was sent to Squire Phelps, who imposed a penalty, by Acting Governor Curtis Child, Jr., of Massachusetts:

"The assistant attorney-general informs me that if the facts are as stated you have in your endeavor to enforce the laws of Massachusetts for the security of life upon our highways, committed in this particular case a grave breach of international law. May I ask you to telegraph me at once if Mr. Curney was arrested and fined in spite of protest. Other channels of redress are open in case of the violation of Massachusetts laws by the diplomatic representatives of other nations. Therefore, if fine was imposed and collected the commonwealth will apologize. The fine must be remitted and I need not suggest to one so respected as you the personal attack that you will, of course, desire to make to Mr. Curney for the error in method adopted by your court in this unusual case. Kindly forward me affidavit of the evidence of any breach of Massachusetts laws."

Curney is third secretary of the British embassy and was fined $50 on two charges, $25 for contempt of court, and a similar fine on a charge of speeding his automobile in Stockbridge Sunday.

It is believed at the state department that the matter may be far more serious than local officials at Lee seem to regard it. By constitutional and statutory law, the persons attached to an embassy are expressly relieved from any legal responsibility and the exemption even extends to domestic servants.

Advantages of Sunshine. The importance of admitting sunlight into our dwellings can not be too highly estimated. Every house should be built if possible, in a way by which sunlight may force itself through during some portion of the day. A sun bath is one of the most important factors in producing a healthy condition of the body. It is a misfortune that a sun bath costs nothing, for if it did it would be more highly prized. There is no doubt that people who are exposed to the sun and live out of doors are much stronger and more healthy than those who are compelled to labor in close rooms. Indeed, good health is quite as much dependent on sunlight as on pure air. How depressing are the dull, sunless days! No matter how much fatigued physically, a few minutes in the fresh air and bright sunshine is a better tonic than people realize.

Letters from People Who Have Been Cured.

2nd Case Permanently Cured.

R. F. D. No. 1.
Moscow, Mich., Sept. 6, 1904.
When I called at Dr. Wilkinson's office in February, 1903, I was sick, weak and discouraged. I could hardly get around. I had doctored with other doctors, and went to the hospital, but did not get any help. I could not sleep night or day. I had pain in my head and I thought it would split. Also had awful pain in my right side. When I went to Dr. Wilkinson's office I had not done any work for seven months, but I began to improve in a short time, and by April, 1903, I was as stout as I ever was, and I have not been sick one hour since. It is now about 18 months since I quit taking medicine, and I have felt like a new person ever since. I advise any one sick to call on Dr. Wilkinson, and he will have them on the right road in a short time. He certainly cured me to stay cured. None of my friends thought I would ever get well.

Modern Scarecrows.

So many cases of troublesome short circuiting of electric wires have occurred recently by owls, crows, hawks, eagles, etc., lighting on the wires that the Electrical Review suggests the expedient of putting scarecrows on the tops of the poles. The electrical inventors have found ways to head off most of the technical troubles of electric distribution, but these pranks of animals are more difficult to prevent. When a bird or cat makes a bridge between two highly charged wires it is instantly cremated by the current, but this is small satisfaction for the damage and scare at the central station that this sudden short circuit causes.

Unearthed Bod; of Abbot.

Recent excavation on the site of St. Augustine's abbey, Canterbury, Kent, England, have brought to light the leaden coffin and coffin plate of Abbot Ulric I. (985-1006), and the body of another abbot wrapped in silk vestments, much decayed, with pieces of copper gilt clasps. Numerous fragments of carved marble, brightly painted stones, gilded pinnacles and figureheads have also been unearthed.

Fattening Oysters.
Many people seem to regard the plump white oysters, so often served now in restaurants, as preferable to the grayish rather thin oyster that the gourmet is accustomed to consider the luscious delicacy best suited to his taste. Because of this false taste, oysters are bleached and rendered plump by dealers on the way to local markets. Normally, oysters are accustomed to sea water. If they are removed therefrom and placed in fresh water for a time they become much whiter than before, and apparently grow fat because they absorb the fresh water.

Herbs for Fine Cooking.

Wherever there is a foreign population there will be found a demand for herbs. A French chef is sometimes greatly at a loss here in America for the "fines herbes" he can buy in ready-made bunches at any market in France. It is on these that he depends for his most subtle efforts. One has only to glance through a French cook-book to see what an important part they play in French cookery, and this is equally true of the Italian and Spanish cuisine.—Country Life in America.

Better Than the Locomotive.

Passing the Academy of Music one matinee day, I met a friend coming out. "What is the matter," I asked; "play bad?" "No," he replied, "but it is too hot in there; the house is literally packed with women. You see, it's the name—'Ninety and Nine'—that catches them. They fancy that the admission has been marked down from a dollar and can't resist the bargain."—New York Times.
