MAKING PEAT FUEL.

The National Peat Fuel Factory at Chelsea Turning Out the New Fuel.

Attracted by the smoke and steam belching from the funnels and stacks of the National Peat Fuel Company's factory and having heard that the company was now making peat fuel, the editor of the Herald visited the local factory last Saturday and found the big plant doing business in the fuel making line.

Mr. D. Bennett, the superintendent of the works, very kindly piloted the editor through the building and explained in detail the various stages through which the raw earth passes before it is ready to burn as fuel. It hardly seems possible that in the old huckleberry marsh, over a million tons of fuel, as good as any coal, is lying dormant, and that in time it will supply our citizens with their regular supply of fuel, at one half the cost of coal. Yet it is clearly demonstrated that as a fuel, peat is equivalent to coal. It will burn to advantage in any stove, grate or furnace, and the local company has evidently solved the problem of how to make it commercially at a good profit.

Several acres of the marsh have been cleared of the bushes, shrubs and roots, and trenches have been dug to a depth of several feet. The earth taken from these trenches has been piled in and near the factory and is being turned into the finished fuel. A draining ditch will connect these trenches next spring and carry the water off to a near by lake, the marsh being well suited for draining.

The raw material when dug from the ground is allowed to dry in the open air for a few days. It is then passed through a disintegrator, which tears it in small pieces. From the disintegrator the earth passes through a sifter which throws off all roots and refuse matter, the balance being carried by conveyors into the dryer. The dryer is an immense cylinder, over 50 feet in length, imbedded in brickwork and placed over a furnace fire. This cylinder revolves and the raw peat passes through the entire cylinder, going through a temperature ranging from 200 degrees of heat to 350 degrees. After passing through this cylinder the moisture and water of the peat is almost entirely eliminated, and the dry peat is carried through another grinder and sifter, and is placed by means of conveyors in large bins.

From these bins the dry powdered material is automatically fed into the presses, which exert a pressure of 40,000 pounds on each cake, turning out small round cakes of hard polished fuel.

The entire process from the time the raw peat is fed into the dryer until it is finished fuel takes but 30 minutes.

The company has had many difficulties to overcome, the machinery being largely experimental, and requiring many alterations and changes. Several starts have been made, but breakages in minor parts of the press necessitated tedious delays in making repairs.

These repairs are now believed to be completed, and it is the intention of the company to construct several additional presses on a much heavier scale, so as to enable the factory to turn out much greater quantities of fuel. The factory is equipped with all the machinery necessary to operate eight presses, each press with a capacity of two to three tons of fuel an hour, but only one press has been installed and it is of a smaller capacity and size than the balance will be.
The officers of the company felt that they should perfect the first press at all points before ordering others, and now that they have fully demonstrated that the fuel is in great demand and that they can make it rapidly and cheaply, every effort will be made to increase the capacity of the plant up to at least 100 tons per day.

Orders for the finished fuel have been received from all points of the compass and 100,000 tons could readily be sold if they had it. Some of the peat has been shipped already to Detroit, Grand Rapids and other points, but none has been sold locally, there being such a demand for it elsewhere that the company is desirous of supplying its stockholders as far as possible.

The company has also had difficulties to overcome through lack of sufficient capital to push its factory forward as rapidly as it might have done, but credit is due to its officers, inasmuch as they have practically kept the company free of debt, have not issued any bonds or preferred stock, and have not borrowed any money from any source.

The local investment represents about $40,000, being divided into real estate $3,000, buildings $14,000, machinery $23,000. Besides this the operating expenses and other expenses will bring the actual cash investment up to about $50,000.

The indebtedness of the company does not exceed $2,000, and it is expected that this amount will be wiped out very shortly. Some additional capital is required to install more presses, build storage sheds, install a field conveyor, and such other minor improvement, and to do this will require about $5,000, which amount will be raised by the sale of the company's stock. Next spring, the officers of the company state that the company will be free and clear of debt and have all the machinery required.
They claim to have demonstrated that they have solved the manufacture of peat as a fuel, and it will certainly be of great benefit to Chelsea, both on account of the fuel being available here, and also because our town will be advertised all over the country.

Dozens of enquiries have been received from other cities, having nearby peat beds, wanting terms and plans for peat factories, and the National Company expect to install many peat plants through the United States, using the Chelsea factory as a model or sample factory. The company controls patents on its machinery, and the rights to use these patents will bring in a handsome revenue to the National Company.

In the face of many difficulties, drawbacks and delays, the officers of the National Peat Fuel Company have gone steadily ahead, step by step, and the Herald congratulates them upon their perseverance and stick-to-it-iveness, and their assured ultimate success, believing that they deserve every encouragement and praise for their efforts to place a fuel on the market that will be of benefit and profit to every fuel user in the country.

Here's wishing them every success and prosperity.

PRIMARY REFORM ESSAYS.

Prizes Offered for the Best Discussion of the Question.

A free, frank, fair, candid and popular discussion of primary reform is invited by The Detroit Tribune. That paper offers 100 yearly subscriptions to The Daily Tribune for the 100 best articles of 500 words each on primary reform received not later than Jan. 1, 1905. In addition the 10 of these adjudged the 10 best will be also given the Sunday issue of the paper. Furthermore, $100 in cash will be divided among the writers of the five articles decided to be the very best, in the following proportions: $50 to the best; $20 to the next best; $15 to the next; $10 to the next; $5 to the next.

The Tribune does not desire to invite a partisan discussion. What it wants is an honest, fair expression, in the hope that the legislature may gain advantage and light from what the people say on any and all sides of this big problem for the correct solution of which all honest people are anxious. To enter the competition the articles must not be over 500 words long, must be confined to arguments for or against direct nominations and must outline the kind of law, if any, the writer advocates. All articles must bear postmark not later than Jan. 1, 1905.
