MADE A NOVEL ESCAPE

FROM THE ANN ARBOR JAIL.

Bars Sprung With Just a Common Rope Last Saturday Night--Was a Self Confessed Robber.

Bert Bartlett, the young Ann Arbor man who confessed to robbing the saloon safe of James Burke at Whitmore Lake of $58, and who would have received his sentence from the circuit court next week, escaped from jail Saturday night in a novel manner.

He was occupying a lone cell in the second story of the jail. The window of the cell is barred with iron rods. Bartlett got some rope and tying it to one bar and throwing it around another he pulled and jerked until he sprang the rod. Then he did the same thing with another rod until he got an opening large enough to get his head and shoulders through. This was sufficient to allow him to escape. He took the double woolen blanket and tying it to the bars, let himself down to the ground and got away.

Bartlett was captured early Wednesday morning by the officers, who had traced the fugitive to the hut of "Elder" Whitley, the colored preacher, living near the Huron river in Ann Arbor. The prisoner was found under a bed when the officers searched the house.

Another attempt at jail breaking was made Tuesday night. Albert Wood, who is in for burglary, and Frank Hartman, who slashed up Deputy Warner's coat with a knife, were sawing out when detected. They had eight saws, and had one bar nearly severed when discovered. Bartlett, Wood and Hartman, are now in close confinement.

REPORT OF INSURANCE COMMISSIONER.

Proportion of Fire Losses to Premiums Paid--Risks Written Last Year Nearly Half a Billion.

From the report of Insurance Commissioner Barry concerning the fire insurance business in Michigan during the past year it is apparent that the stock insurance companies made good money. It is a singular coincidence that the fire losses in the state for the past three years have been 46 per cent of the premiums received. The report of Commissioner Barry issued Saturday shows that the record of fire losses in 1904 were exactly the same proportion of the premiums received as for the two preceding years. Previously the losses had never been so low in proportion, having run all the way from 47 per cent in 1897 to 72 per cent in 1893. The records of the department go back to the time it was established 35 years ago.

The figures for 1904 are as follows: Risks written, $490,453,001; premiums received, $6,948,804; losses incurred, $3,180,990.

The losses paid during the year were only $7,000 less than the losses incurred, showing a very small amount of contested insurance. The figures show a nice increase in the volume of business, in round numbers the risks written having increased $36,000,000, the premiums received $250,000 and the losses paid $105,000.

The report shows fire risks written of $482,977,968 and inland marine risks written of $16,475,033. Michigan companies wrote $19,332,924 in fire risks and $3,152,873 in marine risks. Companies of other states wrote fire risks of $348,571,980 and marine risks of $6,409,207. Foreign companies wrote fire risks of $108,903,639 and marine risks of $6,913,003. The losses incurred were practically in the same proportion.

SEEKS MORE CAPITAL.

A deed of trust conveying the property of the Toledo Portland Cement Company at Manchester, this county, to the International Savings and Trust Company of Pittsburgh, Pa., has been sent to the register of deeds to be recorded. The company needed more money to enlarge and improve its plant and adopted this plan to secure it. The deed stipulates that the property of the plant is made over to the trust company on consideration of $500,000, said property to be held in trust pending its redemption.

The indebtedness will be covered by gold bonds bearing interest at six per cent. The deed is a printed document covering about two hundred closely type-written pages and including a minute description of the property in question. This means that with needed capital provided for the Manchester company will enlarge its business and prove a more decided benefit to the community in which it is located than it has heretofore been able because of limited capital. MISSING FOR THREE DAYS.

Warren Goodrich, Brother of L. C. Goodrich of Ann Arbor, Had Lived Where He Died 54 Years.

Breaking in the door of his home Sunday afternoon, neighbors found Warren Goodrich of Pinckney lying dead in his bed. He had not been seen since Thursday, and the condition of his body indicated that he had been dead since that day.

There were no marks of foul play, and as he was known to be suffering from heart trouble, it is supposed that was the cause of death. He had lived alone since the death of his mother last December.

The deceased was 57 years old, a bachelor, and had resided at the place where he died for the last 54 years. He was one of four brothers, the only surviving one of whom is L. C. Goodrich, of Ann Arbor, grand lecturer of the grand chapter of Royal Arch Masons. An inquest was held on Monday and the jury returned a verdict that he came to his death as the result of an epileptic attack. The funeral was held Tuesday.

HARRY VINCENT HEATLEY.

Harry V. Heatley was born in Sandusky, Ohio, and died at his home in Chicago, Illinois, Monday, February 27, 1905, in the 28th year of his age. He was a son of Mrs. Maria A. Heatley, of Lyndon. In May, 1904, he was united in marriage with Miss Ada Cohn, of Gregory.

For the past two years he has been in the employ U. S. government at Chicago as a meat inspector.

The remains were brought here Tuesday morning, and the funeral services were conducted this morning from the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart by the pastor, Rev. W. P. Conside, and a cousin, Rev. Chas. Herr, of Toledo, Ohio.

The deceased is survived by his wife, mother, eight brothers and two sisters. The interment was at Mt. Olivet cemetery, Chelsea.

DR ALBERT PRESCOTT.

The death of Dr. Albert Prescott, oldest member of the faculty of the University of Michigan, in point of service, occurred at his home on Ingalls street, Ann Arbor, Saturday morning after a long illness.

Dr. Prescott was born in Hastings, N. Y., December, 1831. In 1864 he was given a degree of M. D. from the university and the following year was made assistant professor of chemistry at the university. In 1870 his title was changed to professor of organic and applied chemistry and in 1876 he was made dean of the school of pharmacy. Eight years later he was made director of the chemical laboratory also, and in 1890 his title was again changed to professor of organic chemistry. In 1896 the degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon him by his alma mater.

C. W. MARONEY INJURED.

Last Friday morning while working on the barn of George Reade in Dexter township, C. W. Maroney met with a very painful accident that will confine him to his home for some time.

Mr. Maroney was working on a scaffold and in some manner missed his footing, falling some fourteen feet to the ground, landing on his head and shoulders. He was brought to his home here, and after an examination by Dr. S. G. Bush it was decided to take him to the hospital at Ann Arbor, which was done that same afternoon.

The hospital authorities use the X-rays on the patient and found that the collar bone was broken, the shoulder dislocated, and the ligaments of the arm badly torn.

A petition for the administration of the estate of Geo. A. Gilbert, who died February 8, has been filed by his daughter, who estimates his estate at $4,000 real estate and $1,000 personal, and a policy of $5,000 in the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York City.

INSPECTED COUNTY JAIL

BOARD MADE SEMI-ANNUAL VISIT

Reports That the Jail is Well Kept--New Heating Plant Needed--Tramps Becoming a Nuisance.

Judge of Probate Emory E. Leland, Superintendent of the Poor Frankland J. Fletcher and County Agent Wm. K. Childs have made their semi-annual inspection of the county jail and filed their report to the supervisors.

They report that since their last inspection 664 prisoners have been confined in the jail, charged with the following offenses: Assault 3, assault and battery 1, bastardy 1, burglary 2, disorderly 105, drunk 444, drunk and tipsy 5, false pretenses 2, indecent language 8, insane 2, larceny 13, non support 1, rape 1, truant 1, vagrants 80. There are now in jail 5 detained for trial, 75 serving sentence, and 1 awaiting sentence.

The condition of the bedding is fair. The cells want a coat of paint. The heating plant is in poor condition and should be overhauled in the interest of economy.

They recommend "That the cell floors should be repaired. The cell blocks should be painted, the roof should be painted and repaired, the heating plant should be overhauled and repaired, or a new plant supplied. Something should be done by the legislature for relief from the constantly growing tramp nuisance."

The report was forwarded to the state board of corrections and charities, and Saturday morning Judge Leland received an acknowledgment of the same. "The banner county for drunks, disorderlies and vagabonds, (95 per cent) product of the fee system," says Secretary Storrs of the board.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

Last Saturday evening the members of the M. E. church of this place observed the fifth anniversary of the dedication of the church and organ. The ladies served a supper in the church dining room which was followed by a program in the League room of the society.

Mrs. Geo. W. Palmer read a paper on the history of the organization of the society. The church was organized in the school house that was on the grounds now occupied by the residence of John W. Schenk, in 1853, by the Rev. Mr. Hedger, who then preached in Lima Center. Mrs. Loren Babcock of this place is the only surviving member of those who organized the present society. The program also included organ voluntary, recitations by the young children, and singing. The supper netted the society $40.

Incredible Brutality.

It would have been incredible brutality if Chas. F. Lemberger, of Syracuse, N. Y., had not done the best he could for his suffering son. A TALE OF THE CUBAN WAR

CHAPTER XX.

A Goddess of Battle.

The retreat of the Spanish troops from the scene of the dynamite wreck, back over the five or six miles separating them from the slope where the stranded ammunition car is settled, has been accomplished in an almost incredibly short space of time, for the vigor of Gomez' attacks has kept them constantly on the jump.

Jack and Smithers have hastily formed a plan of action. They are resolved to take no part in the inevitable conflict that must be fought round the carriage, unless actually forced to do so by their determination to protect the ladies, and if circumstances render it necessary for them to enter the lists against all comers, they are just as ready to meet Spanish warriors or Cuban patriots as they have stood against guerrilleros.

The first man to reach the carriage is a tall captain, whose sprinting qualities have proven of no mean order—indeed, he is so easily able to out-distance all of his comrades that Jack in secret is ready to believe his athletic abilities must have been gained in the bull-ring eluding the mad-rushes of an infuriated old toro.

As he comes up, he gasps out: "Senior, an axe—something to break open the door of the ammunition van. We have no cartridges; we will be annihilated unless our guns are made available."

So he chatters on, while gasping for breath, and continues to beg for an axe. Jack does not know where such an implement can be found, and as for Smithers, he would see the whole regiment in Guinea before he stirred a step to further their cause, an iota.

Fortunately for the soldiers, they have a friend in Senor Roblado, who hardly relishes falling into the hands of Gomez in this way, though he had planned to visit the insurgent chief in his camp, with the secret hope of betraying him to the authorities.

He has discovered an axe in the guard's den, and this he eagerly tosses to the captain.

Then ensues as remarkable a moving panorama as Jack has ever seen. While the blows of the axe sound upon the barricaded doors of the other compartments, the Spanish soldiers have gathered around the carriage, many of them wounded, and yet showing no disposition to capitulate.

So Travers, while secretly opposed to the cause for which they fight, feels himself bound to admire the way in which these almost untrained recruits, but recently from across the sea, face death as it comes swooping down the slope.

The officer in command forms his men in a phalanx. Not a shot do they fire, because few guns contain a load, but with the grim front of veterans they await the descent of the hawk.

Again the hillside is covered with a rushing throng. Men come running down in squads and singly. They have no idea of order, or discipline either, just at present, as it is every man for himself. The soldiers are on the run, and these wild followers of Gomez mean to keep them moving until they are swallowed up in the sea of fire that sweeps over the Cuban chaparral, or knelt in Havana.

Travers confesses to a tremendous interest in the outcome; he believes they will be safe once the battle is over, no matter who wins, as Smithers is surely on one side, while Senor Roblado covers the other. It is only the danger that must threaten while the warfare is on—that gives him cause for mental anxiety.

He has not long to wait for the shock.

A few shots are fired as the patriots dash down the hill, but it is possible that their ammunition has also run short, or else they determine to cleave a passage through the ranks of the foe with their gleaming and terrible machetes.

Now they engage with the soldiers. The line wavers before the furious attack and partially gives way. What follows seems to be a melee. The soldiers are divided into small groups, and fight desperately. Sometimes they chase the insurgents, and again it is the rebels who have the best of it.

Numbers of the rebels are mounted, and if the field were open, they must soon annihilate the troops. Within the narrow confines of the railway the horses are as much a hindrance as a help.

A large number of the soldiers have gathered about the lower end of the coach. Jack can readily guess their design is to guard the door where the Spanish captain is passing out packages of ammunition in frenzied haste. Just in front of Travers occurs one of the most desperate engagements. Some of the mounted rebels have cut their way through the lines, and are slashing and hewing right and left. Jack is spellbound by the sight, but he receives a greater shock presently. He grips the arm of Smithers, who crouches beside him, also watching the first fierce engagement between patriots and Spaniards that it has been his good fortune to witness.

"Look—look!" cries Jack, hoarsely, as he points into the thick of the struggling, surging mass. "See, a girl among them—on that snow-white horse—a girl with flowing hair, and wielding a machete. Look closely, Smithers. I could swear that is our charming hostess, Lola Montez."

His words reach other ears than those for whom they are intended. Jessie, hears, and wonders. She has read much of these Cuban Amazons who fight alongside their brothers and lovers in fierce engagements. Perhaps the way in which Travers unconsciously speaks of the girl as "beautiful" and "charming" has something to do with arousing her curiosity. At any rate, she, too, endeavors to see the girl on the white horse who thinks less of her life than the sacred cause to which she has devoted her existence.

Smithers in one glance sees that Jack has spoken the truth. He instantly recognizes the lovely Amazon. "You are right, sir; but please don't mention names again. Walls and rocks have ears in Cuba now. Her life might pay the penalty," is what he calls aloud in Jack's ears.

He has hardly spoken than his companion utters a cry.

"She is down—her horse tripped and has thrown her! Good heavens, she will be killed before our very eyes! See, that devil has his bayonet aimed at her—only a wounded rebel bars his way. He believes her to be the leader, and is determined to turn the tide. Smithers, I can't stand this. Let me go, I tell you."

Smithers dares not refuse when Travers roars in this tone. Perhaps he is not sorry, after all, for only that Jack bars the way, the agent would have leaped out of the door to the rescue of the beautiful Amazon.

Jack is not a second too soon.

The wounded rebel has proven no match for the muscular Spanish soldier, who has broken his hold, plunged his sword-bayonet through the poor devil's body, and then, still intent on the desperate deed that had engaged his attention when interrupted, he makes a rush for the young girl, who, still partially stunned by her fall, is stowing picking herself up from the ground, while her white steed whinnies his dismay over the disaster.

Before the furious soldier can carry out his desperate intention, Travers has seized hold of his gun—Travers, who is boiling over with indignation at the sight.

There is a brief but terrific struggle in connection with the possession of the gun, and only Jack's superior muscular power enables him to come out victor.

With a furious outburst he sends the soldier whirling down the slight embankment, having at the same time wrenched his gun out of his hands.

As Jack turns, he finds that Lola has gained her feet. She no longer appears dazed, but as her gaze fastens eagerly upon the face of the one who has saved her life, she gives him a radiant smile.

Travers cannot hear what words she utters, for guns have commenced to rattle with the distribution of ammunition among the men, but he accepts the hand she impulsively stretches out to him.

And Jessie Cameron sees it all from the carriage door just back of Smithers—sees it with a feeling she cannot comprehend—a peculiar sensation of distress in the region of her heart, as though in some unaccountable way the proximity of that Cuban beauty to her protector gives her pain.

That is how Fate takes a hand in the affairs of Squire John once more, and gives promise of great results.

Another moment and the fearless young girl has sprung upon her milk-white steed, and is in the thick of the fray.

Jack makes his way back to the shelter of the carriage, as he has no desire to become a target for the bullets that begin to whistle around so merrily.

Up to the present moment the dash and bravery of the insurgents have carried things before them; but now that the soldiers are enabled to make use of their guns, the tide seems to set the other way.

The rebels give up the advantage their pluck has wrested from the soldiers very stubbornly, and more than once turn about, as though tempted to make another dash.

It would be folly, however, since the men of Spain have an abundance of ammunition now, and can mow them down like ripe grain. Against this they can only oppose their machetes, and while these are effective weapons in a hand-to-hand encounter, they are of no use whatever at a distance.

So the revolutionists melt away, some passing up the rise and others plunging into the shelter of the woods, as yet untouched by the fingers of the fire king.

Jack heaves a sigh of relief. He has seen that the white horse and its lovely rider have been almost miraculously spared through the fierce rattle of musketry that ended the affair, and the last glimpse which he obtains of them is when, outlined against the heavens, Lola Montez, on the hilltop, waves her hat from the end of the machete she carries.

And yet Jack Travers turns from contemplating her heroic deeds to the gentle girl of Edinburgh with a positive satisfaction. One may admire a modern Joan of Arc, and be enthralled by her presence as she leads soldiers in battle; but when it comes to the choice of a wife, the average male bled is very apt to turn aside and take to his heart some loving girl who will make his home a dream of peace and cheerfulness rather than a warlike camp.

But Jessie Cameron does not know

There is a brief but terrific struggle, what Jack's thoughts are. She has sunk back behind the barricade, as if fearful lest some flying bullet might find its way through the frail side of the carriage, when in reality she desires to shut out the sight of Jack and the little Cuban beauty together.

The battle is won.

At least, the rebels have ceased to harass the troops, and the latter are enabled to take stock of their losses, which, counting dead, wounded, and missing, amount to almost half the original force.

As a further retreat to Havana is rendered utterly impossible by the blazing forest that bars their way, their only plan is to strengthen their present position and await the coming of dawn, when they may be able to figure on the future.

The rebels have not been gone more than half an hour when Smithers, who has been wandering around in his restless way, taking an observation, as he calls it, comes upon Jack as the latter sits upon the end of a railroad tie, meditating while indulging in a smoke, and the latter has only to take one quick look into the agent's sober face to realize that he carries more bad news.

No Ships of Civilized Nations Make Trips to Greenland.

"No private vessel plies between Greenland and the rest of the world, either with passengers or cargo," writes Roger Pocock. "Of the Dundee whalers very few remain and if they happen to take fresh water on the Greenland coast, their stay is limited—a matter of hours. Ten years ago some fishing schooners of Gloucester, Mass., frequented the Greenland banks, but after a couple of seasons found that the halibut catch was not to be relied on. In 1894 the Miranua, an American steamer, attempted a cruise with tourists, but was wrecked at the gate of the first harbor she tried to leave. She foundered at sea, but one of the fishing schooners brought her people home.

"Apart from arctic expeditions no other foreign visitors have risked a voyage for about two centuries. The whaling ships are handled by experienced men, yet the Vega was nipped recently, her people barely escaping. For arctic expeditions one ship lost in each twenty measures the scale of risk. Fog, ice-pack, bergs, currents and death-trap reefs bar out all casual shipping on pain of death.

"There also exists an excellent international treaty, whereby most Europeans and Americans are absolutely forbidden to enter Greenland. This treaty is enforced by Denmark on behalf of her royal trade, a government department, which is trying to save and civilize the native tribes of the country. By this means alone can the Eskimo people be shielded from disease, from alcohol and from interference with the hunting on which they depend for existence."

A Reasonable Claim.

"We'll dispense with your services, sir," said Mr. Merchant sternly. "I saw you coming out of a saloon to-day. I told you I'd discharge you for that, didn't I?"

"Why, no, sir," replied Gailey, "you said you'd discharge me if you saw me going into one. I think I deserve some credit for coming out."—Philadelphia Press.

LONDON'S MANY CABS

SMART VEHICLES FILL STREETS OF GREAT CITY.

One of the Best Methods of Seeing the "Sights" of England's Metropolis—How the Trade Is Organized and Conducted.

(Special Correspondence.)

There are 26,000 cabs in London, and nearly all of them belong to one man, and a nobleman at that, for the premier earl of England, he of Shewsbury and Talbot, has a vast income from the cab business of the largest city in the world. The earl gives his pet hobby as the "cab trade," and he is so fond of cabs that he frequently drives them, and although he is a man of vast wealth, he seeks his fares as eagerly along the Strand and Piccadilly as any coster cabby that ever cracked a whip.

It is impossible for any one who has visited London to think of that city without a background of hansom cabs looming up through the fog and smoke that still cling to the memory, for cabs are as much a part of the gloomy old city as Westminster abbey or the Parliament houses.

Next to bowling along on the top of a bus, there is nothing that the London streets has to offer quite so delightful as a ride in an easy-riding hansom. The smooth motion, the sense of freedom that the wide view before one affords, and the spice of danger ever present as the daring John of the cab grazes hubs and horses with splendid skill, go to make up the keen enjoyment of a cab drive over the asphalt pavement.

Control of the Industry.

The cab industry is in the hands of a large number of men, about 4,000, many of whom own three or four cabs which they let out, and are known by the title of "Mushers."

Before a cab is allowed to go on the street three payments have to be made—5s for a driver's license, £2 for hackney carriage license, paid by the owner to the police authorities at Scotland Yard, and 15s for carriage duty, also paid by the owner to the inland revenue.

Before, however, the owner can get his license, his vehicle must be seen and inspected by the police. Clerkenwell police station is the chief center, and here, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays, there is an official in attendance to examine cabs and issue the two number plates, one to be fastened on the inside, and the other, the larger one, to be fastened outside on the back.

Every cab is examined and licensed once a year. As a check on possible negligence, the back plate has a device on it, as well as a number. This year it is the royal arms, next year it will be a crown, and the year after that the royal arms again; so that a police officer may tell at a glance how matters stand with a cab under suspicion.

The ordeal of examining a cab is not severe. The official glances over it, and produces a pot of yellow ochre, a shaving brush and a stencil plate, and on the body of the cab at the back he marks the device of royal arms or crown and underneath the word "Approved" and the initials of the chief commissioner—"E. R. C. B." Once the stencil mark is stamped, and the number of plates fixed the cab can begin business.

When a driver first goes to Scotland Yard for his license he is put through a sort of informal examination on his knowledge of the great railway termini and the public buildings, but no test of his driving capabilities is made; those are always assumed as a foregone conclusion, and he is given a license and badge on payment of five shillings.

Then he makes his way to a cab yard, leaves his license with the proprietor, and is given a cab and a horse, with a change horse, for all of which he pays seventeen shillings a day. His whip, mackintosh cape, knee apron and oil flask are at his own expense.

Some drivers own their own hansom, which are generally of the rickety variety, and should be avoided. If a cabby drives a smart hansom he haunts clubland, and a day may bring him in a rich harvest, thirty shillings, perhaps, and only working eight hours. Some men work sixteen hours a day, but old hands never more than twelve hours if they can help it.

How the Cabbies Differ.

It takes cabbies some years, sharp as they are, to learn the way of London society, and to elude that ever vigilant person, the young "bobby"; for, before he knows it, cabby may find himself at Marlborough station charged with loitering. It may be his first offense, and he is let off with two shillings and sixpence fine, with two extra shillings for costs.

The cabby of the old school, whom one sees but very rarely, nowadays, wears the triple coachman's cape and a very rusty, out of date tie; his temper is not of the best; having been harassed by the police for years, he has grown to look upon himself in the light of a licensed buccaner, to whom every passenger is lawful prey.

The young and modern cabby is different, however. He feels friendly with the general public, and wears a stylish overcoat and a shining top hat that does much to attract fares. Sometimes he is handsome and distinguished looking, in which case one is apt to suspect him of being a crushed peer of the realm, some gentleman of fallen fortunes, who has taken to cab driving as a last resort for an honest living. Indeed, such cases are not rare, and why should one not speculate about one's cabby if he be fair to look upon?

Societies for the Cabmen.

There are in London several societies for the benefit of cabmen, the two most important being the Cab Drivers' Benevolent Association and the Southwestern Friendly Society. The former society grants annuities to aged drivers, gives legal assistance and grants loans without interest to members. The Southwestern Friendly Society on the other hand, is self-supporting, it has over 700 members and is in all respects exactly what a friendly society should be.

Cheery and happy-go-lucky in the dreariest weather, cabby never forgets the approaching rainy day, and is always prepared to help a friend in need, answering the calls upon his pocketbook manfully and paying his share without a murmur.

Then there is another body called the Shelter Friend Society, the object of which is to look after the little buildings called "cabmen's shelters," that one sees huddled up against the curbstone at intervals all through the streets of London. In these shelters there is a wholesome lunch provided with hot coffee or tea for a small sum, and here are toilet conveniences and a stove where cabby may warm his fingers and toes in severe weather.

The attendants of these shelters are usually retired cabbies. They pay a small rent and run the shelters for the general society. These places are very cozy and inviting and on pleasant summer afternoons one may hear shouts of laughter from the open windows, and then one may know that

HOW TO TELL A BOILED EGG.

Betting Man Made Money on It, but of Course No One Else Will.

The betting man said to the waiter: "Boil one egg. Cool it and put it among half a dozen raw ones. Then bring all the eggs together in to me on a plate."

"The eggs, in ten or fifteen minutes, came in. They were examined carefully by everyone in the room."

"I will bet ten dollars," said the betting man, "that no one here can pick out the one cooked from the six raw eggs."

This bet was taken.

Thereupon the man spun the eggs, toplike, on the table, one by one. All spun poorly, with a wabbling motion, save a dark egg, which spun as steadily and truly as a top.

"This dark egg is the cooked one," said the betting man. He opened it, and so it proved. "A boiled egg," he explained, "spins beautifully. An uncooked, liquid one spins in a poor, unsteady way. The difference is plain, and anyone can tell it."

Once in a While.

"Yes," said little Arthur, "since pa struck it rich and ma and the girls have gone into society we have a Frenchman to do our cookin', so we eat in French and sing in Italian and think mostly in German, but once in a while when things don't go right and pa gets mad we still get the good old English right off the bat."

CUTICURA CROWS HAIR.

Scalp Cleared of Dandruff and Hair Restored by One Box of Cuticura and One Cake of Cuticura Soap.

A. W. Taft of Independence, Va., writing under date of Sept. 15, 1904, says: "I have had falling hair and dandruff for twelve years and could get nothing to help me. Finally I bought one box of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and they cured my scalp of the dandruff and stopped the hair falling. Now my hair is growing as well as ever. I am highly pleased with Cuticura Soap as a toilet soap. (Signed) A. W. Taft, Independence, Va."

Birds' Preference in Colors.

Red will annoy a turkey cock as much as a bull, but a sparrow will not let it disturb its mind. But if one flirts a blue rag in front of a caged sparrow's eyes he will go frantic with disgust. Sparrows and linnet, too, will refuse food offered them on a piece of blue paper and dislike the appearance of any one wearing a blue dress. Medium light blue affects them most and blue serge they scarcely mind at all. Thrushes and blackbirds object to yellow, but will use red or blue dried grasses left about their haunts to build the outlayers of their nests. Yellow grasses they will not use.

First Knowledge of Galvanism.

Galvani, a natural philosopher of Italy, was dissecting a dead frog one day while a pupil was making experiments in electricity by his side. He observed that the muscles of the frog, being exposed, gave signs of motion whenever the nerves came in contact with the scalpel. Galvani discovered the existence of a new principle in this phenomenon, and originated the fertile branch of physics known by the name of galvanism.

Proper Diet for Cats.

Puss is a good deal of an epicure, and you should satisfy its peculiar tastes as far as possible, says a writer in the New York Press. To treat a cat really well a regular diet should be followed. Two meals a day are quite sufficient, but they must be substantial.

COULDN'T LIFT TEN POUNDS.

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought Strength and Health to the Sufferer, Making Him Feel Twenty-five Years Younger.

J. B. Corton, farmer and lumberman, of Deppe, N. C., says: "I suffered for years with my back. It was so bad that I could not walk any distance nor even ride in easy buggy. I do not believe I could have raised ten pounds of weight from the ground, the pain was so severe. This was my condition when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago. I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors and they have also found good results. If you can sift anything from this rambling note that will be of any service to you, or to anyone suffering from kidney trouble, you are at liberty to do so."

Victims of Poison.

People who point to the carrying of revolvers as the cause for the many murders in the United States should not forget the knife wielder and the poisoner. While it is possible more murders are committed by shooting than by any other single means, it is a fact that more persons are killed at one time by poison than by guns—Omaha Bee.

Salt a Luxury.

The greatest of all luxuries in Central Africa is salt. The long-continued use of vegetable food in that country creates so painful a longing for salt that natives deprived of it for a long period often show symptoms of insanity.

IT IS IN THE BLOOD

Neither Liniments nor Ointments Will Reach Rheumatism—How Mr. Stephenson Was Cured.

People with inflamed and aching joints, or painful muscles; people who shuffle about with the aid of a cane or a crutch and cry, Oh! at every slight jar, are constantly asking, "What is the best thing for rheumatism?"

To attempt to cure rheumatism by external applications is a foolish waste of time. The seat of the disease is in the blood, and while the sufferer is rubbing liniments and grease on the skin the poison in the circulation is increasing.

Delays in adopting a sensible treatment are dangerous because rheumatism may at any moment reach the heart and prove fatal. The only safe course for rheumatic sufferers is to get the best possible blood remedy at once.

Mr. Stephenson's experience with this obstinate and distressing affliction is that of hundreds. He says:

"About a year ago I was attacked by severe rheumatic pains in my left shoulder. The pains were worse in wet weather, and at these periods caused me the greatest suffering. I tried a number of treatments and ointments, but they failed to alleviate the pains."

Then he realized that the cause must be deeper and the pain only a surface indication. He adds:

"I had heard Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People recommended as a cure for rheumatism, and when I found that I was getting no relief from applications, I made up my mind that I would try them. Before the first box was gone I noticed that the pains were becoming less frequent, and that they were not so severe as before. After the second box had been used up I was entirely free from discomfort, and I have had no traces of rheumatism since."

The change in treatment proved by almost immediate results that Mr. Thomas Stephenson, who lives at No. 118 Greenwood street, Springfield, Mass., had found the true means for the purification and enrichment of his blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are without doubt the best of all blood remedies. They effect genuine and lasting cures in rheumatism. They do not merely deaden the ache, but they expel the poison from the blood. These pills are sold by all druggists.

BETTER AND EASIER.
To those who intend to have a well put down the coming summer do not wait until you all want them at the same time. I will receive a Steam Hydraulic Jetting Machine about the middle of March, which will enable me to put down wells using from 2 to 6 inch pipe. A four inch tubular well will cost but a little more and you can use a three inch cylinder, that will supply you with twice as much in the same length of time. Many farmers fail to get all of the water that is necessary from a two inch well and keep their windmill running all the time. A good brass cylinder in a four inch well will not have to be packed only once in two years, while the regular two inch well needs to be packed several times during the year. With this machine we will be able to make four inch wells in less than half the time that is required by any other machine in making a two inch well. We can make a four inch well work in many places where it would be impossible to use a two inch well with a screen in, because there is not sufficient screen room to pump, while a large pipe with open bottom has nothing to prevent the water from having a good flow, and you have no screen to coat over and have to be pulled up in a few years. This one item is a great saving to a farmer. Save your windmill, save your time, and have an abundance of water. Four-inch wells, 80 foot deep, have been completed in one day with these machines. Call and see me.

Millionaire Sued for Two Cents.
Because he refused to pay two cents toll, James C. Fender, a millionaire, was recently arrested. Mr. Fender drove past a tollgate on the Darby pike at Eddystone, Pa., but did not drive through it. The case will involve hundreds of dollars, for the defendant says he will carry the case to the supreme court if judgment is against him.

To this the bereaved man replied by asking, as he gazed through tear-dimmed eyes on the minister, "What's her name, Doc?"

You Must Sleep.

If you cannot, it is due to an irritated or congested state of the brain, which will soon develop into nervous prostration. Nature demands sleep, and it is as important as food; it is a part of her building and sustaining process. This period of unconsciousness relaxes the mental and physical strain, and allows nature to restore exhausted vitality.

Dr. Miles' Nervine brings refreshing sleep, because it soothes the irritation and removes the congestion. It is also a nerve builder; it nourishes and strengthens every nerve in your body, and creates energy in all the organs. Nothing will give strength and vitality as surely and quickly as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"During the past winter I had two attacks of LaGrippe which left me very weak and in bad condition. I was so nervous I could not sleep. My wife, after trying different remedies, secured a bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine, and she brought home a bottle. I did not sleep for some time, and had terrible pains in my head. After taking a few doses of Nervine the pains went away, and I am now taking the second bottle, and am very much improved."
—J. M. SMITH, Underhill, Vt.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.

NOTHING in the whole realm of fashion is more trying than to see all women dressed alike, as if they were wearing a uniform, varied only in color and small details. This assuredly is not the case today; not only are several entirely different modes equally fashionable, but women have a good deal to say for themselves on this most momentous question. The American woman is a very independent person, and looking over the array of novelties in the show-rooms of Madame she selects what pleases her, and often decries some picturesque idea which soon becomes "the rage." The Parisians are long since awake to the fact that Madame L'Americaine is a rival worth studying.

Now as to present indications for the spring and summer, hardly two designers in Paris advocate the same styles. This is delightful, as it gives us all a chance to select what individually suits us best. The 1899 styles are set aside, but although the shoulders are not cut so high and the shoulder effect is given the same, as in one of our illustrations, are many models of the sleeve and shoulder that are in one line, giving at once a long and a short effect. Thus, the leg-o-mutton sleeve is the present model, but only in a few instances is it recognizable, so much so that remains of the old idea of the fullness of the upper arm and the lower arm sleeve. In many instances the sleeve is cut much longer, and the cuff is cut the correct length, being finished at the wrist by a fall of lace. In the severe tailors suits the sleeves are, of course, straight, the decorations being of stitches, buttons, and some touch of contrast in color, as an epaulet or cuff, this in harmony with the new models.

Sleeves of the new lingerie blouses follow the same idea, the upper sleeve full, with hands and insets of lace and embroidery; some show one puff, others are drawn in by two or three bands of insertion. The lower arm has an almost fitting long-cuff effect to, or below, the elbow; much diversity of design and work in lace, embroidery and stitches being displayed here. There are, however, some simple shirtwaist sleeves, just a moderately full sleeve, gathered into a three-inch cuff. These sleeves also show decorative insets of lace and embroidery, and are the correct thing to wear under many of the suits where the voluminous sleeves would meet destruction. Many of last summer's sleeves are being turned inside down. With some fullness let out or added at the top, and drawn in below, they are all that is desirable for the coming season. In the same way necks can be turned in to admit of the pretty chemisette, and with a smartly feathered giraffe, will complete a most economical transformation. To add to the fullness of the skirt is a more difficult proposition, but lace or embroidery insertions set from the hem up, graduated to nothing in some pretty way will give good results; or flounces can be set round, on and above the hem.

Of course, vests and waists, gowns and yokes, berthes and jabots, however little or much is displayed, must harmonize with the sleeves. The surplus waist with its large or small V is so popular, that the little chemisette and stock are in evidence even in the tailor gowns, as is shown in several of the illustrations; even coats and waists that are not on a surplus order carrying out the very becoming trend.

The waistcoat is very much to the fore in the tailoring walking suits; sometimes cut away showing a smoothly fitted giraffe, such as our artist has selected for illustration, while in other models the waistcoat is continued in its legitimate point.

Paris is just now and for early spring models favoring the long fitted coat. This in another form becomes an overskirt, with slightly bloused and gathered waist, such as is shown in the handsome model of rose and black mohair. Still, where the waistcoat is continued in long embroidered panels set on each side of the deeply plaited overskirt. This coat with leg-o-mutton sleeves with black braid trimming.

Description of the New Creations

The Double Draped Veil.
Over a close fitting torpedo-turban veil entirely of ragged sailors in white and blue there is draped first veil, a rather large but simple pattern of ragged sailors, and with velvet passementerie of oval shape scattered scantily over its surface. Over this there is a second veil in black, this, too, showing ragged sailors, and the ragged sailor motif of the veil is repeated in the same colorings over the top so that it lies gracefully over the top of the hat, following the front to back line of the torpedo-turban, but otherwise it follows the usual drape of the second veil. It is bordered around with a black satin ribbon one inch wide, this, applied with stitching to the chiffon.

Green Walking Suit for Spring.
A simple Panama cloth will be greatly to the point for walking suits in the new colors. Green, however, will be the most popular shade. The novelties in the cut-a-way coat effect, and collar and military frog effect.

Black and White Woolltex Plaid.
This will undoubtedly be very popular for both as whole suitings and as a very color or combination. This woolltex suit shows a short tunic

A Picturesque Hat for Spring.
This exquisite chapeau is of pale lavender silk braid in fanciful raised design, the underbrim faced with fine tulle folds to match and five simple tie bows of purple ribbon velvet set one above the other under the brim where it turns well up from the face. Bunches of tiny shaded roses with tassels tucked into the dip in front and the closely turned-down back. This hat would be equally charming in white with black ribbons and white or colored flowers.

For the Closing Dancing School Party.
Dear little frocks of mull inset with lace are being prepared for the "big party" that closes dancing school terms. This of soft finished mull is set with many Val insertions, the skirt and waist plisse, the yoke of the waist and sleeves entirely of lace insertion and beading. A berthe of the lace finishes this yoke, and full trills mark the elbow sleeves.

Dressy Waist of Embroidered Silk.
Elegant separate waists, beautifully embroidered and artistically made up are a feature of the new spring offerings. This handsome model is of dull rose peau de cygne richly embroidered in white silk. The fronts are appliqued with white silk and medallions of fancy silk, the giraffe, also of this, draped over a waisted foundation. The front, but some over a vest of tucked white chiffon with cut work lace over and full neck trim. The puffed sleeves end in a ruffle finished with tucked hem, a double trim of the lace falling out of this.

is favored by those whose figures permit such a display, the fitting requiring extreme care. The long coat with very short front, named "Revolution," is buttoned high above the waist, showing a fitted buttoned waistcoat, and above, a high lace stock with jabot, the sleeves of these coats being comparatively plain.

Children's costumes follow the general fashions, but with the exception of party frocks, they are not nearly as fussy as those of their older sisters. The two little models selected for illustration are good examples of the general trend of the mode for little girls' frocks; they vary, of course, in materials and details, but the skirts of all are full, come just below the knees, are either plain, or trimmed flat, and gathered or plaited into the waistband. The bodices come to a natural waistline, fitted on the waistband and finished by a wide, soft giraffe, which, on wash frocks often ends in a sash at the back. Sleeves follow the general trend, full above and close below the elbow, but in the summer frocks, elbow sleeves predominate, and with these long lace mitts will be worn for walking.

Children's clothes must be first of all comfortable, and secondly childlike, only following the fashions where they are appropriate. Common sense is the best guide here as in all else. We love to see children look picturesque, and certainly more license is permitted in this respect for children than for their elders, but it is in bad taste to embarrass the poor child by an undue display of one's own fancy, making her a mark of criticism and inducing a most undesirable self-consciousness.

Party frocks are very dainty, and much befrilled. Most of these pretty garments are of washable material, which is very sensible, as they will do duty later and best summer frocks. Embroidery and lace enter largely into their make-up. Very few have the neck low, the favorite mode being a round or square neck; chemisettes, guimpes, berthes, cape collars, all of daintiest lawn, lace and embroidery, form the chief feature of the bodices, with pretty puffed and frilled elbow sleeves.

Materials selected for children's wear should always be of the best procurable; this is economy in the end, for children will be children, and accidents will happen. Fast colors, strong, durable, non-shrinkable, are some of the desirable qualities to look for in materials, both wool and linen. Linen shrinks considerably, and this must be allowed for in making; or better still, the material well shrunken before cutting, the same as one does with woollens. Mixtures of wool and cotton, as also linen and cotton, or silk, do not shrink nearly as much as the pure materials. Speaking of silks, the strong natural weaves of pongee and sarung are excellent for children's

COMFORT AND STYLE

When you try on a pair of shoes, look for two things--
comfort and style.

You must have them both!
Either one by itself is not enough. It is easy to make a stylish shoe, but it is very difficult to combine the two. To make a stylish shoe that is comfortable is the highest art.

A shoe may feel comfortable yet not fit properly.

Now it must fit or you are sure to have trouble. And the better it fits, the better it will wear.

The shoe that "fits where all others fail" is "Queen Quality." It fits because it is made in an infinite variety of sizes and styles to suit all shapes of feet and all occasions. If you want twice as many chances in selection, try Queen Quality.
