If you contemplate redecorating your house it will pay to think twice before you begin. New and original ideas are the proper thing this season; no set rule or particular style, but your own ideas properly carried out is what will please you best. We have the material of the right kind, quality, style and colors; let us help you; we will be glad to show you what we have and tell you what we know about wall paper, wood finishes, tints, stains, and paint, water color wall finish, mouldings, etc., also the new floor finishes.

The wall paper season is just begun but we have found it necessary to purchase a large line of New Papers to supply the demands of our customers.

These New Patterns are just in and we can truly say that they are very handsome. We can show you colored plates, designs and drawings of some very popular styles of wall decorations.

OUR EXPORT TRADE.

Henry Clews says: Our foreign trade shows a tendency-that of increasing imports and decreasing exports-which will bear watching. In February our imports reached $103,000,000-the highest on record in spite of being a short month. Our exports were $109,000,000, or about $6,000,000 in excess of imports. Compared with the same month last year, these figures show an increase of $13,000,000 in imports and a decrease of over $9,000,000 in exports. The gain of imports is easily attributable to good business conditions here, while the loss in exports was chiefly due to diminished shipments of wheat and the lower price of cotton. This tendency of imports to rise and exports to fall, it continued, must soon exert an important influence upon our international exchanges. During the twelve months ending February 29, the excess of exports was only $257,000,000, the smallsupervisor by 34 majority and David E. est amount of the last six years. The Doherty bill to exempt all credits and mortgages from taxation is still meeting fierce opposition m the senate. Mr. Doherty made an effort Tuesday to have the bill passed in the senate, but opposition to immediate action developed, and he moved to table. The opposition comes from Banking Commissioner Moore's influence, the force of Mr. Atwood and the tax commissioners. The latter say the removal of the tax would take $54,000,000 from the tax rolls, and the supporters of the bill say that the more double tax there is on the books the more it should be taken off.

His last most important act was the reorganization of the isthmian canal commission. The matters on which he will probably keep an eye during his absence are: The status in San Domingo, the Bowen-Castro feud in Venezuela, the expected invitation that the United States be the mediator between Russia and Japan, the ruffle between the United States and Haiti, and the American interest in the open door in Morocco, at which door Kaiser Wilhelm is also looking askance.

Horses' Shoes Get Hot.

Popular Mechanics says that a horse shod with metal shoes should not be driven rapidly on an asphalt pavement. The heat produced is painful to the animal and may be injurious. It cites an instance where two men indulged in a friendly horse race on asphalt. One of the horses cast a shoe and when the rider picked it up it blistered his hand and did not cool off for several minutes. At each step the horse slips a little and this constant friction of the metal shoe under weight upon the sand in the pavement generates a high degree of heat.

If we but take an account of the situation we find that the mortality among the poultry is something enormous. What would we think if half of our calves died off before they were six months old, or if we should habitually have steers drop down and die or perish from the numerous causes that cause losses in the feathered flocks?

It has been said that we can make a profit of $1 a hen easily, and so we can on the hens that live. But the unfortunate fact is that we make less than nothing on the hens that die before having laid the eggs they are supposed to lay in a year.

I think this is the source of much of the discouragement in poultry raising. However it may be said that most of the mortality among the fowls comes from things that can be prevented by a little care and forethought.

Second-Class Beet Seed.

It appears that there is "shoddy" in every kind of business. There is no exception in beet seed, says a circular of the United States Department of Agriculture. The responsible beetseed growers of Europe furnish the standard "A" or "elite" seed to those who call for it. It is much more expensive, but it is the seed that should be used in all cases. The closer akin the seed is to the selected mothers the higher will be the quality of the beets. There is another class of growers, however, who plant out this "elite" seed and grow another crop of pasket. ANOTHER WAR STORY.

Personal recollections by one of the 1st Michigan Cavalry, setting forth some of the principal fights, raids and expeditions of the famous Michigan

My object in writing these recollections is to contribute to the history of the Civil war certain facts that might otherwise be forgotten and to give to the coming generation a glimpse of some of the battles and fights as I

After the charge the regiment made at Gettysburg the regiment and brigade held the ground it had gained until about six o'clock when the brigade was relieved by part of Gen. Gregg's command. Gen. Custer, commanding the Michigan Cavalry Brigade, had received orders from the commanding general, Kilpatrick, to report to him, who with the rest of his divison was on the extreme left of the Union line of battle near Big Round Top. On being reorganized Sunday with the following lieved Gen. Custer marched his command back to two taverns on the Balti assistant superintendent, Mrs. A. L. more Pike where it remained for the Drawing five days' rations for both man and horse early on the morning of the 4th of July the Brigade broke camp and marched toward Emmettsburg by the way of Big Round Top. On the way we overtook Gen. Kilpatrick with the rest of his division. Gen. Custer reported to Kilpatrick and the Michigan Brigade of Cavalry was put in the advance with orders to intercept the enemy who was retreating along the South Mountain road towards Williamsport, which road led through a pass in South Mountain by the way of Monteray. Before reaching Monteray the enemy was found in force upon the tills on each side of the road. The 1st Michigan Cavalry was ordered up to the front with orders to take the road leading to Fairfield Gap and drive the enemy from the gap. The regiment moved forward driving everything before it until we came to the foot of South Mountain. There we found the enemy in large force, both infantry and cavalry, with two mountain Howitzers placed in the gap well up on the side of the mountain, and by this time it had become quite dark and was raining. The only way we could tell where the enemy was was by the flash of their guns, but it did not make any difference, rain or shine we had orders to clear the road and drive the "rebs" back-which we proceeded to do. Part of the regiment was dismounted and placed on either side of the road with orders to move forward which they did through the woods and underbrush, over stones and boulders with nothing but the flash of the enemy's guns to direct their course. When the dismounted men had got well up the side of the mountain driving the enemy before then that part of the regiment which had re mained mounted was brought up and ordered to charge and then is when i musketry and the flash of the two mountain Howitzers belching forth shot and canister at close range, it was scene never to be forgotten. The bugle sounded the charge and the mer gave a yell, as they slapped their spurs into the flanks of their horses and mov ed forward on that midnight charge facing that storm of lead and iron hail.

One short moment and it was all over We were upon them cutting and slash ing all who had not fled or surrendered capturing the two guns and many pris oners, but this was not all done withou great loss. We had two officers killed, Captain William R, Elliott of Detroit and Lieutenant James S. McElhenny, besides several other officers and many men wounded. The regiment held the gap until the entire command had pass ed through. As the roar of battle died away we could distinctly hear moving down the road on the western slope of the mountain towards Williamsport the enemy's wagon train. The command led by the 5th Michigan Cavalry, charged down upon the rebel wagon train which extended from the top to the base of the mountain The train was guarded by over a thousand of the enemy's infantry and cavalry. The whole command charged down the mountain side spreading terror to all that came before them, each man doing his best to outyell his comrade. Shoot ing right and left the whole wagon train was thrown into a panic. Mules teamsters and guard was thrown into the wildest confusion. Upwards of four hundred army wagons with their mule teams were strewn along the sides of that mountain road n one struggling mass. The wagon train stretched out over five miles. We captured over five hundred wagons and a large number of mules. The wagons were mostly burned; the mules were sent back to the rear with the prisoners of which there was about fifteen hundred. By the time we had gathered to gether all the prisoners and mules and midday of the 5th of July. # COMFORT AND STYLE

When you try on a pair of shoes, look for two things-comfort and style.

You must have them both! Either one by itself is not enough. It is easy to make a stylish shoe, but it is very difficult to combine the two. To make a stylish shoe that is comfortable is the highest art.

A shoe may feel comfortable yet not fit properly.

Now it must fit or you are sure to have trouble. And the better it fits, the better it will wear.

The shoe that "fits where all others fail" is "Queen Quality." It fits because it is made in an infinite variety of sizes and styles to suit all shapes of feet and all occasions. If you want twice as many chances in selection, try Queen Quality.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Senor Toro's Little Game. What Smithers says is exactly to the point.

Around the quarter where the head of the military forces in Cuba is receiving those who desire to shake his hand the scene is indeed a brilliant Looking in every direction the same bewildering crush meets the eye; banners wave in the electric glow, and when the band temporarily ceases for a breathing spell, the murmur of thousands of voices can be heard.

Suddenly Travers utters an exelamation.

"You have seen her, too. I just discovered her presence. Something must have drawn our eyes there at the same time," says Smithers.

"Yes, I could tell Lola Montez even at this distance. She is looking unusually beautiful to-night," remarks his companion, keeping his eyes upon the further side of the ring below. Smithers smiles grimly.

"Yes, but Lola is hardly as beautiful as her ill-fated mother. I doubt whether a being ever existed with a face and form more perfect," is what he says in a half-meditative way.

"You knew her, then, Smithers?" Well, yes. She was my brother's wife.

"Ah, then this girl is really your niece! "It is true. I promised you the story, Senor Jack. It concerns one of the blackest spots in the history of Cuba's last war for independence.

The girl favors her mother altogether, and as you see, has adopted her name also. Although my name, I frankly tell you, is a little more classical than Smithers, she prefers the Spanish.

"She has much wealth, which came to her in a remarkable manner since you met her out in Santa Fe. New Mexico. At that time she was living with some relatives; but when For- by the beast. ture poured riches in her lap in the shape of gold mines in Mexico, the girl gave herself wholly over to the cause of Cuban liberty, and since that day she has spent her income for those who fight under the flag of the Lain Star. Ah! I could talk to you for hours, telling all she has done. Cuba owes her much, and the name of Lola Montez will never be forgotten by those for whom she has la-have read her secret, my dear sir, and I realize that it is impossible. You must not think badly of her because she looks upon you as little less than a god. Remember how on several occasions you have appeared to her in the role of a hero-twice you saved her life. It would be very strange indeed if she did not regard you as one far above other men." "I am sorry it is so. Perhaps, if I had never met Jessie Cameron--" "You would have madly adored Lola-you could not have helped it.

sir. Look yonder, Jack; they meet face to face:"

Travers holds his breath.

He sees that what Smithers says is true. Over yonder, among those who saunter about the arena, listening to the band discourse national airs, Jessie and Lola have been brought to-

And Jack stands there and watches them pass each other haughtilystands there and even experiences a miserable feeling of exultation at noting the manner of the woman he adores, since it tells him plainly she has not escaped unscathed when the little god was sending his arrows about.

All this, however, is suddenly forgotten.

Jack and Smithers know better. They see the shattered boards that formed the door of the bull-pen fly in every direction and a great black ob- tan bark under his feet than he takes ject lumber into view. Taurus has done it.

Frenzied shouts burst out from scores-yes, hundreds of throats. The indeed, he may liken it to the clamorous applause which accompanied his victory of the afternoon, so that he is cnly spurred on to do his best.

As his especial hatred seems to be aroused in the direction of the band, he turns his attention toward that quarter first.

While the horrified people are struggling to leave the ring-and, as is quite natural under such conditions, blocking the only means of exit so that no one is able to utilize itthe black beast makes his charge upon the unfortunate drummer, who has the misfortune to be so attached to his instrument that he cannot part

A couple of heart beats, then comes the crash

Man and drum ascended togetherin adversity as well as in prosperity they still refuse to be separated. It is really a comical sight, and

Jack would laugh only that the danger is great. All this in less than a minute of

The bull has apparently mapped out his duty, which is to clear the arena of all specimens of the genus homo, and this he sets out to perform with amazing zeal.

Having disposed of the most obnoxious performer, in the military band, he proceeds to chase the other wretched members hither and thither around the limits of the ring.

Ah Sin usually manages to have a hand in most things as they come to pass, though in this case it is much against his will that he is made acquainted with the raging beast.

Instead of attempting to escape by means of climbing the barrier, he has made for the common exit, and finding that blocked by the half-crazed mob, the Chinaman runs along the fence, seeking a refuge in one of the little niches placed at intervals to afford the toreadors a haven of safety as it lies there upon the tan bark, poor of other nations.—Montreal Herin case of being too hotly pressed

Every niche he looks into seems to already have an occupant. His confusion increases, and he darts hither and thither, much after the fashion of a chicken with its head cut off.

And his eccentric movements speedily attract the very attention he would avoid, so that almost before he realizes his danger Ah Sin has a rise in the world.

Perhaps he clings to the long horn of the animal, thus destroying the which may count for something ere charm of the arch his body might have described. At any rate, to the astonishment of the crowd, and doubtless to his own consternation, Ah Sin lands plump upon the back of the raging terror, straddling the beast as a cavalryman might a horse.

One action follows another with such lightning-like rapidity that almost before the mustitude can realize that the terror of the arena has a rider on his back, Ah Sin, finding himself near the barrier, makes a desperate lunge and throws his form half-way over the fence, having escaped destruction in a miraculous manner.

What next?

The bull is not at all weary of well doing-in fact, he appears to have only made a start, and having finished the Celestial, as he believes, surveys the field for new victims.

There are plenty left.

Alas! most of them are of the gentler sex. Sad to relate, in this tremendous excitement, the gallant beaux who promenaded with their sweethearts in the arena have been horrified to discover the entire absence of suitable weapons among them. At least, it would be charitable to believe that the frenzied rush these noble cavaliers make to secure weapons, and be the first to face Monsieur

Some scramble up the palisade; others fill the niches that might better have given shelter to helpless women; and not a few, urged on by this heroic desire to save the poor creatures in danger of being trampled and gored, finding the exit blocked, climb over the heads of those who fill the gateway. Their ardor and gallantry may not be balked by trifles

Alas! for the helpless women thus left to the mercy of a maddened beast. The sight is enough to stir the blood in the veins of any man worthy of the name.

Senor Jack has seen it all.

He suddenly remembers his words to his companions when discussing the same matter. The time has come for him to make his boast good-the time when helpless ones are in deadly peril, with no man's arm to stand between them and destruction.

It flashes upon him that when last he saw Jessie Cameron she was in the arena. He arouses himself-he clambers over the seats in front, and while all other men have been leaving the bull-ring in mad haste, Jack comes a fearful crash that reaches Travers drops from the barrier into of one poor woman whom he has gored and tossed aside.

Again he turns to bear down upon the defenseless flock, huddled yonder, like sheep without a shepherd, capable only of uttering piercing shricks of terror.

Jack's heart almost freezes within him as in front of all the others he discovers the one in whom his life's happiness is bound up.

Yes, it is the maid of Scotlandpale as death, yet not betraying her deadly fear in any other way; facing the onrushing bull with the calm, unflinching heroism that might have been shown by Christian martyrs at the stake.

Horrors! before he can cover half the ground, the onrushing beast must reach her, and the tragedy be made Straddling the beast.

Ah, a grain of good luck-rather factor from a merciful Providence. The distracted trombone player's shining instrument chances to attract the attention of the charging beast and he halts long enough to send it whirling after its gifted owner, as if to emphasize his utter contempt for all military bands in general, and this one which had endeavored to play his funeral march that afternoon in particular.

Even this small thing is a point in favor of the runner. The time is too limited for Jack to head the animal as is his earnest desire; but he has been able to cut down the brute's lead considerably, this scene in the exciting drama has

Straight on gallops the beast, with Jack straining every nerve to throw himself to the fore.

Perhaps Jessie sees his brave effort-perhaps she realizes that it is on account of her he would willingly face that monster before whom all others have fled in dire dismay. If so, her heart must be touched by this evidence of his devotion.

Edison Dined Without Dress Suit. Thomas A. Edison was riding on the cars the other day in New Jersey. The train was passing the country residence of H. McK. Twombley. Just previously the inventor had been reading a part of the printed controversy going on about the right of a $15-a-week-man to wear a dress suit.

"Once I was a great guest over here," he said, pointing his finger over toward the big house. "That stable there looks like a high school building. But, as I was saying, I was especially invited to a dinner there one evening. When I appeared without a dress suit case, the butler who received me stood aghast.

"My host showed me to a room and then summoned a valet. He stood before me, obsequious, smiling. Will you have your bath now, sir, he asked, 'and dress, or will you wait?'

"'Dress!' I answered, 'ain't I dressed now? How many more clothes would you have me put on? And I have had a bath once to-day, and that is quite a sufficiency-quite.' And I sat down to dinner in my old Prince

EFFECTS OF PROSPERITY.

In the six years of the country's greatest prosperity, from 1897 to 1903 average prices of breadstuffs advanced 65 per cent., meats 23.1 per cent, dairy and garden products 50.1 per cent, and clothing 24.1. All these were products of the farmer and stockman who profited more than any other class of the community by these advances. The miner benefited 42.1 per cent by that advance in the average price of metals. The only decrease in the average prices of commodities in that period was in railway freight rates which decreased from .798 per tonmile in 1897 to .763 in 1903, a loss of 4.4 per cent. And the whole blooming country was going to smash: "Envied her? With all you've got!" "I've got things, but I ain't - endowed. Jane Anne was. I'd give everything I possess if I could stand out on my front steps and ask people in the way she could!"

"She did make you feel kind of pleased with yourself and everybody else," Mrs. Thomas admitted.

They stitched on silently for a while, then Mary Martin spoke with the authority of a shy woman roused. "If Jane Anne seemed airy to you,"

she said, "it was because you couldn't see her without her mean surroundings. I could."

"I never claimed to have a fancy infagination!" Mrs. Thomas retorted 'And I never knew you had."

"Jane Anne was never where she'd ought to have been," Mary continued 'I've always thought that like as not her rightful place in the world was filled by some woman without a single pretty way or lively thought. And she must have known all her life how much better she could have done than that other-for a woman isn't gifted with agreeableness like hers, without realizing it and longing to have it well set off. Yet she wasn't bitter or envious, but just went on as if the poorhouse was her own home and those feeble, wretched creatures the pick of the country!"

Mary's voice died away in a sobbing whisper, but presently she said. 'There!" in an even tone, and relinquished her hold on the gray garment. Lucy Thomas drew all its soft length into her lap and folded her hands their feet on the same "I don't see Jane Anne in just your colors," she said, "but I know now why she never touched your funnybone. And if it is as you think, and she couldn't find her way here, it's all straightened out by this time, and Thomas remarked, a smile broadening Jane Anne's stepped into the place she

One night recently a prowler came. tle thought he of the danger, of the alert and ferocious terrier guarding its master and ready to sink its fangs in any one who might seek to trespass upon the sacred domain. Cautiously the burglar crept into the room and flashed his dark lantern about in the darkness until he located a pair of ample trousers, and not wishing to disturb the sleeping dog, which looked so deliciously comfortable on its master's feet, went into a near-by bathroom and extracted Mr. Mears' coin therefrom. After which the intruder left the place by the way he had entered.

Thus Mr. Mears lost his confidence in his dog and his pocketbook at one fell swoop. And while he still thinks it is a pretty tolerable sort of a pup he is not in the least averse to nailing down the windows, bolting the doors and taking other precautions against burglars .- Portland Oregonian.

Welcome, Nora, Jr. Miss Nora Lake, Jr., arrived in the home of the editor of the News last Saturday morning at 2.40 o'clock. Her mother's name is Nora, and we have wanted to name one of the girls after their mother, but she has objected. For fear that we might not have another chance we this time insisted and now we have Nora Lake, Jr., and W. F. Lake, Jr., one named after the head of the house and one after the mother. And the new arrival is one of the prettiest little girl babies that one ever saw in a week's travel, and she resembles her mother very much. Well, how time flies. If this little speck of humanity that has come into our home shall live to be twenty years old the editor of the News will be a little over sixty years of age-an old man-and she will be the one to remain with the old folks and take care of them as they sit in the chimney corner and contemplate the years that shall have made up their lives. SEED CORN.

The corn which was saved for seed ast fall all through the western country was unusually full of water-nearly one-third water-when gathered. Uness special pains were taken to thoroughly dry out this corn before cold weather there will be found this spring large per cent of defective seed.

A lot of selected ears taken from a rib of what would be called well matured corn in southern Iowa, in the very heart of the corn belt, gave when ested recently a germinating power of nly 10 per cent.

The fact is that the intensely cold weather of this winter-has about ruined the seed corn where it was either not previously well dried or kept where it would not freeze. This matter should be attended to right now. Better find out now whether the seed is poor than do it on the 15th of next May, after it s planted.

All pain in any disease is nerve pain, the result of a turbulent condition of the nerves. The stabbing, lacerating, darting, burning, agonizing pain that comes from the prominent nerve branches, or sensory nerves, is neuralgia, and is the "big brother" of all the other pains.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills rarely ever fail to relieve these pains by soothing these larger nerves, and restoring their tranquility.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills leave no bad after-effects, and are a reliable remedy for every kind of pain, such as headache, backache, stomachache, sciatica, rheumatism and neuralgia. They also relieve Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Car-Sickness, and Distress after eating.
