CONVENTION AND RALLY.

Young People's Societies of the Evangelical Church to Meet Here.

Arrangements for the convention and inspiration rally of the Young People's Societies of the Evangelical churches in Washtenaw county and those of Jackson, Grand Rapids, Lansing, Albion, Battle Creek and Owosso, which is to be held in St. Paul's church, Chelsea, next Saturday and Sunday, May 20 and 21, are about completed and a large gathering of young people is expected here on those days. All of them will be entertained during their stay by the local society.

The opening session will be held Saturday afternoon commencing at 2:30 o'clock. Sunday school questions will be the subject matter for this session and papers bearing on that topic will be read and discussed, and Miss Christine Wurster, of Ann Arbor, will conduct a model Sunday school class.

Sunday morning at 10:30 there will be preaching services at the church when sermons will be delivered by Revs. W. H. Alber, of Jackson, and Eugene Spathef, of Lansing.

At 2:30 p. m. the rally of the Young People's Societies will take place, at which time a number of papers will be read and, if time allows, discussed.

The meeting will close with services at 7:30 p. m., when Revs. S. A. John, of Ann Arbor, and Robert Schreiber, of Grand Rapids, will preach. The music at this service will be furnished by the Young People's Society from Ann Arbor.

HAD A CLOSE CALL.

Russell Armstrong Got a Bad Squeeze at the Stove Yesterday.

What came near being a fatal accident happened at the Glazier stove works yesterday morning. Russell Armstrong, an old man, was on the freight elevator in the machine shop with a barrow and was ascending to the upper floor. A belt on one of the machines slipped off and as it was twisting around the shaft the machinery was all stopped until it could be put on again. A couple of minutes elapsed while this was being done and during that period Armstrong sat down on the elevator with his feet hanging over the edge.

When the elevator started on its upward trip again he still remained sitting there and the heavy iron weights caught him on the back of the neck and crushed his head down between his knees. The elevator was stopped as soon as possible and the unfortunate man was released in an unconscious condition. He was taken to the Boyd house where he boards and gradually regained consciousness. He is quite seriously injured, but is doing as well as could be expected.

EXTRA FARE ILLEGAL.

Justice of the Peace Decides Against "Special" Rates on Electric Cars.

Attorney Albert G. Widdis, of Detroit, has been given a judgment of $100 against the D. Y. A. & J. company by Justice Haley, of Woodmere, because a conductor ejected him from a car after he refused to pay more than the regular fare.

March 13 Widdis purchased a round trip ticket to Jackson and boarded a special car to make the trip. The conductor of the special demanded an extra 20 cents, which was supposed to pay for the limited service and better accommodations. Widdis refused to pay and was put off. Justice Haley held that the company has no right to charge the extra fare.

The railway people will appeal to the circuit court and the question will probably reach the supreme court.

TRI-COUNTY MEET.

Plymouth High School Carried Off First Honors This Year.

The Chelsea boys did not do so well at the Tri-County Athletic Association field day at Plymouth last Saturday as they did in the one held here last year. Then they won first honors, but this year they were the last of the bunch. It is but fair to the boys to say that they were as a whole considerably lighter than their opponents. The contests ended with Plymouth first with 71 points and 9 medals won, Wayne second, 39 points and 3 medals, Chelsea third, 22 points. The events in which Chelsea scored were:

100 yard dash—R. McGuinness 2d, W. McLaren 3d.

220 yard dash—McGuinness 2d, McLaren 3d.

440 yard run—P. Bacon 3d.

880 yard run—Bacon 4th.

1 mile run—Bacon 4th.

Discus throw—H. Lighthall 3d, B. Snyder 4th.

Pole vault—McGuinness 4th.

High jump—R. Snyder 3d.

Hurdles—McLaren 3d.

The points won by the Chelsea boys were: McGuinness 7, McLaren 6, Bacon 4, R. Snyder 2, Lighthall 2, B. Snyder 1.

At the reception given Saturday evening by the boys and girls of the Plymouth high school the medals and ribbons were presented to the successful contestants by Prof. F. E. Wilcox, of Chelsea. The visitors were royally entertained by their Plymouth friends and had a splendid time.

HAD RELATIVES IN CHELSEA.

Hiram Cronk, Last Survivor of War of 1812, Was a Cousin of Harry Shaver.

Hiram Cronk, of Ava, N. Y., an own cousin of Harry Shaver, of this place, and the last survivor of the war of 1812, died Saturday, May 13, aged 105 years. He enlisted during the Sackett Harbor campaign with his father and two brothers and was praised by his captain for his valor during this struggle. After the war with the British he served for a time in the regular army. He could distinctly remember Lafayette's memorable visit to this country and various other incidents that occurred when the United States was still in its infancy.

Mr. Cronk was buried in Cypress Hills cemetery, Brooklyn, where the remains of some 50 other veterans of the war of 1812 lie and the funeral was nearly as imposing as could be that of a general or admiral. By order of President Roosevelt a detachment of regular army troops was present to act as escort and Gov. O'Dell sent a part of the New York national guard, in addition to an imposing civic display arranged by the board of aldermen of New York City.

Wants His Own.

Charles H. Kempf, of Chelsea, has begun suit in chancery in the circuit court against John McKone et al., executors and heirs of the estate of Martin McKone, deceased. The bill of complaint sets up that the plaintiff took a mortgage on a farm belonging to Martin McKone August 1, 1895, and that in the mortgage the property was erroneously described. The amount of the principal and interest now exceeds $4,000 and the heirs are asked to appear in court and if possible come to an understanding in regard to the debt. He asks further that the court rectify the error in the description of the property and that in case of a failure to agree upon a settlement, that the mortgage be foreclosed and the property sold.

Trenton Scene of Brutal Murder.

Mrs. Michael Hemmerick, wife of a section man, 56 years old, was brutally murdered in her bed late Monday evening in her home in Trenton. Hemmerick, the husband, returning from a visit to a friend's house across the street, discovered the crime. He ran from the house, calling for help. He had been in the house only about 10 minutes, but after the coroner was called and made some inquiry, he was taken into custody by the police. Things looked black for Hemmerick until the solution of the mystery came most unexpectedly, by the statement of Frank Lessner, who had become deranged through association with the insane in the asylum for the criminal insane at Ionia. He said to a Detroit policeman: "How can I get back to Ionia? I came down to Trenton on Monday, shot my aunt and now I want to return." Taken into custody, he told this story: "Our family has had bad luck all along, and I thought that my godmother, Mrs. Hemmerick, was the cause of it. My father always said she was responsible for our trouble, and I believed him. For a year I have thought of putting her out of the way, and I decided to do it yesterday, after meeting Belle Lezette and Florence Vickery in Ionia, where I was working. I used to keep company with Belle Lezette up to a year ago, when I left Sibley, near Trenton, to work for Dr. Long at the asylum for the criminal insane at Ionia. I did farm work for him. I got $40 a month, but some how or other things didn't seem to go just right.

Belle Lezette lived in Monroe when I went to Ionia, and I noticed that she was turning against me after I left. She was a Catholic and so was I. I went to the Methodist church at Ionia, and I guess this change caused my godmother to bewitch me. Anyway, my father said she would do it if I ever left the Catholic church, and, moreover, Miss Lezette changed in her conduct toward me. I was certain that she was influenced by Mrs. Hammerick.

"After leaving Sibley I heard but little from Belle. I met her and Miss Vickery, of Trenton, in Ionia by chance on Monday. Belle didn't look a bit like herself and I scarcely knew her. I heard afterward that she was married. That worried me a great deal and I couldn't help feeling that my godmother was at the bottom of the whole thing.

"The more I thought of it the more I determined to kill Mrs. Hammerick, so I jumped on a train and got to Trenton as fast as I could. I arrived in Trenton in the afternoon of Monday and bought a revolver at a hardware store in the town and waited until after dark before going to Mrs. Hammerick's home.

"When I entered I had no fear of meeting her husband. I walked through the house until I found her alone in bed. I heard her talking in her sleep. As I entered her room she awoke and arose in bed. As she sat up I fired five shots into her head. She screamed, but said nothing. I felt that she was dead and I quietly left the house. I still carried the revolver and kept it until about a mile from the house, when I threw it away while walking along the Lake Shore tracks."

While Lessner was reciting his description of the murder and all that led up to it, he talked in one tone of voice, and never once evinced the slightest emotion. He appeared slightly demented, but insisted that he had never had any brain trouble, and resented the suggestion that he was crazy.

The Gretna Green.

With hundreds of miles of peach blossoms decorating the fruit belt, Mr. Dan Capid, of Chicago, formally inaugurated the Gretna Green season for 1905 in St. Joseph, Sunday. Twenty-one couples arrived on the early morning boat and trains, and invaded the home of County Clerk Sam B. Miners to be married. Several anxious to win honor by being the first enrolled on the marriage list at the new season's birth, came before the early breakfast hour, but the officials had made ample preparations for their reception, and there was no nerve-racking delay. The great matrimonial strike spread to this city, and in the day's list of marriages are six union teamsters and their brides.

Lost His Life.

John Stockwell was drowned in Crooked Lake, near Jennings, Saturday evening, after rescuing his two sons, aged 9 and 11. The three were out in a rowboat fishing, and by a mismove of one of the boys, they were all thrown in the water. Mr. Stockwell succeeded in getting the boys back to the boat and they clung to the edge until help came, but he was so exhausted that he could not reach up to the edge of the boat and he was drowned in eight of the boys who were powerless to help him. Mr. Stockwell was 59 years old and is survived by a widow and five children. The family is in straitened circumstances and it was the family dinner for Sunday they were in search of when Mr. Stockwell was drowned.

Killed For Money.

J. Casey, business agent of carriage and wagon workers' union, local No. 4, of Chicago, Saturday night, made a written confession to Police Inspector Lavin to the effect that Charles J. Carlstrom, who died several weeks ago, was fatally beaten by men employed by the union. Carlstrom was an old man, and one night was so fearfully pounded by three men that he died in a few days. Casey declared in his confession that the men were paid $15 for their work, the money coming from a fund known as "The educational fund." The police have arrested the following men in connection with the case: Charles J. Casey, business agent of carriage and wagonmakers' union, local No. 4; Henry J. Newman, secretary of union No. 4; George Miller, member of the executive committee of the union; Charles Gilhooley, Edward Peeley, Mark Looney, Gilhooley, Looney and Peeley are said by Casey to be the men who killed Carlstrom.

The Hazard of Life.

Fully 100 letters threatening death have been received by the half dozen men who have been given wide publicity as managers of the employers' end of the teamsters' strike in Chicago. Serious consideration is being given the letters since exposures made by a confession of a hired thug, that he and others made a business of slugging at the rate of $15 per person slugged. Bodyguards are now attending all the principals on the employers' side of the teamsters' strike, and all are accompanied day and night by guards. Secretary F. W. Job of the Employers' association and Robert J. Thorne of Montgomery Ward & Co., admit having received many threats. President Gompers is said to have issued a call to all members of the American Federation of Labor, estimated at 2,000,000, to contribute to a strike benefit for the Chicago teamsters. Forty-two branches of the teamsters' union in New York have already made contributions, it is asserted.

Shen's Incendiary Talk.

An inflammatory appeal to class passions was delivered as an oration by Cornelius P. Shea, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, at the funeral of George S. Pierce, the union man who was killed by a deputy sheriff. "Follow work ingmen," he said, "you have participated today in a remarkable demonstration in honor of our fallen comrade, our murdered brother. You have made it plain this morning what you think of the cowardly method by which the money powers are trying to beat down and crush the working classes. You have shown by your numbers and by your earnestness to day that you no longer propose to be cowed and intimidated by such disgraceful tactics. Now is the time to stand together and show the employers they cannot trample you under foot.

"I want to say to you, my fellow toilers, that when God Almighty saw fit to take away this young man in the flower of his youth, when that coward was permitted to shoot down this boy, and then was set free without a question—I want to say that when such things happen, something must be wrong."

"Yes, men; there is something wrong," shouted Shea, waving his hat. "Are you to be hunted animals to be shot down at the will of a ring of rich men, or are you going to stand up and be men and wrest your rights from your oppressors? Now, I want all of our people to understand that we can win this strike. We can win it, not through violence, but through the ordinary perseverance of free American citizens to win rights denied them."

Mayor Dunne Warns.

Mayor Dunne, for the first time during the teamsters' strike, made the definite declaration Monday that a call for state troops would promptly follow a spread of the strike accompanied by violence.

Dorringer, who is an internal revenue collector, escaped Robinson by leaping from a window. His son Harry was killed and Mrs. Dorringer dangerously wounded.

Demanding that she stop receiving attentions from a young man, and having her demand refused, Miss Edith Smith stabbed Miss Alma Callahan, aged 22, in the side, near her home in Chicago. Miss Callahan will die and Miss Smith is under arrest.

THE LEGISLATURE.

After five hours' debate at an afternoon and evening session the senate in committee of the whole agreed to the Brown-Baird primary bill best known as the "Warner bill" providing for submission to the voters the question of the direct nomination of city, county, legislative and congressional candidates and of governor and lieutenant governor. Senator John Baird presided.

It was the wish of Gov. Warner that the bill go to a third reading at once, but Senator Brown moved to adjourn when the committee rose, and on the viva voce vote Lieut. Gov. Maltland declared the motion carried. At this decision there was some uproar, and calls for "division" from all parts of the hall. But the decision had been rendered. A poll of the senate, however, did not discover a full majority. The senate adjourned without concurring in the report of the committee of the whole.

The Wayne senators succeeded in having reinstated in the bill the provision that Wayne, Kent, Muskegon and Alpena counties shall not be included in that provision as to local nominations, those counties having local acts.

The principal features of the bill are: Party enrollment; party option in all political districts if 20 per cent of party petition for submission of the question to a vote. Direct nominations follow if the vote carries in either city, county, legislative, or congressional district; submission of a proposition for direct nomination of candidates for governor and lieutenant governor to a vote in June, 1906. Candidates to be voted for at the same time. If the proposition fails to carry the state convention will nominate; to be candidate for governor or lieutenant governor one must get majority. Plurality required for nomination for lesser offices. If some candidate for the highest office fails to get a majority the state convention nominates; exception of all judicial offices from operation of any direct nomination law, except in counties with local bills.

The guiding hand of the great railroad corporations is suspected in the stopping of Senator Brown's bill intended to aid the attorney-general in his fight for the state in its suits with the Michigan Central railroad for the collection of about $4,400,000 in back taxes, and Attorney-General Bird is wrought over the matter.

The bill is to force the railroads to allow the attorney-general to examine their books at length in the collection of evidence, a right which the railroad now exercises in regard to the state's records and a right which until recently was allowed the state under a supreme court rule which has been accidentally, it is supposed, omitted from the revised rules. The bill was passed by the senate under a suspension of the rules Wednesday, but when a similar action was suggested in the house Thursday several representatives raised objections and in spite of repeated assurances that the bill was drawn only in the interests of the state and that quick action was necessary in order that the bill might be of use, the house voted to refer the measure to the judiciary committee for "examination."

The steam railroads had things almost all their own way with the senate committee on railroads, which quietly put to sleep the Simpson bill making railroads common carriers in the handling of cattle. The same treatment was accorded to Senator Cook's bill, which would have made the railroads pay demurrage to shippers when cars were not promptly delivered. On these two measures the committee was unanimous, but the steam roads lost one inning to the electrics when the committee took up the bill giving the latter the right of eminent domain. The bill was being pushed by lobbyists from Indiana and at least one Michigan man, and had been passed by the house. Senators Mortlary, Curtis, Mills and Hayden voted to report the bill favorably, while Senator MacKay opposed it. When the report came into the senate, Senator Mills moved immediate consideration, and carried his point. Senator MacKay offered an amendment providing that the right of the electrics to condemn property should not apply to Wayne county. The other Wayne men supported MacKay's amendment, but it was defeated, 15 to 8. The bill was then passed, with only five nays—Kane, MacKay, Martindale, Seeley and Traver.

Senator Baird's general game bill was passed by the senate.

The house postponed until May 17 action on the Baillie-McCarthy-Galbraith bill for the repeal of the law taxing mortgages and other credits.

The house committee on state affairs has reported favorably on the bill to create a board for the examination, registration and licensing of surveyors.

A joint resolution introduced by Rep. Galbraith, of Houghton, proposes an amendment to the constitution to vest the power of determining the salaries of the attorney-general and superintendent of public instruction in the legislature. The constitution now fixes the compensation of these officials at $800 per year.

Rep. Galbraith, of Houghton, has introduced a bill that adds sleeping car companies, express companies, car loaning companies, etc., to the class of corporations that are to be taxed on the ad valorem basis by the state tax commission sitting as a state board of assessors. It also provides that the Wisconsin plan of equalization shall be adopted.

Consideration of Rep. Manzmann's bill to abolish the contract labor system in Michigan state prisons has been "indefinitely postponed" by the house committee on state affairs. Following this action Mr. Manzmann introduced a duplicate bill to apply to Jackson prison only.

Leo Fleishman, 17, missing from his New York home for a year, for whom a reward of $1,000 was offered by his distracted parents, has been discovered serving as a cadet on board the naval receiving ship Franklin, off Norfolk, Va. He says he ran away to be independent.

Pala Fights To the Death.

Fierce fighting has been going on the last two weeks on the island of Jolo between the outlaw Moro chief Pala, with 600 well armed followers, and troops under the personal command of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood. Pala's losses thus far are 300 killed, while those of Gen. Wood are several killed and nineteen wounded. Pala and his remaining followers, in accordance with Moro tradition, prefer death to capture. Pala was a noted slave trader and warrior when the Americans occupied the islands. Later he escaped with his followers to the island of Pala Sekar, near Bornoeo. One of Pala's leaders deserted and took refuge in the British settlement at Lahad. Pala, discovering his whereabouts, landed with a following and demanded of the British magistrat that he turn the deserter over to him. The demand was not complied with and Pala ordered a massacre. Twenty-five persons, including several Britons were killed. Pala escaped to the island of Jolo and organized the present uprising.

Cyclone Caves.

As a result of the tornado at Sallisaw, Okla., inhabitants of the "new country" in Oklahoma are digging 5,000 tornado caves. City officials and town boards are urging the construction of such caves and some towns have passed ordinances requiring the digging of caves. At Hinton, Okla., the following official public notice has been published: "On nights when clouds look at all dangerous a sentry will be stationed in the bell tower, provided with a repeating shotgun. If there is apparent danger he will ring the bell and fire a number of shots in quick succession. Any person who sees a storm coming when the sentry is stationed will be expected to fire a gun."

Crocker's Death.

The Kansas City police have completed their investigation of the case of Herbert W. Crocker, son of Richard Crocker, formerly New York Tammany leader, to an opium resort and to north end saloons preceding his death in a train near Newton, Kas., Friday morning, and unless the relatives of young Crocker request it, no further action on the case will be taken by the Kansas City police. Charles Watson, negro porter at the Coates hotel, who accompanied Crocker to the opium den and later put him on a train, was released from jail. Ah Lee and George Kee, proprietors of the opium resort, are held, and they will be prosecuted in police court for conducting an illegal business.

Milo Keep's Alibi.

For the first time since Milo Keep the man charged with the murder of Bert Miller two weeks ago, was locked up, his friends and other people were permitted to see him Sunday night. When interviewed Keep declared his innocence. "I swear to God that I am not the murderer of Bert Miller," he said. "Miller was my friend and why should I take his life. We have always been the best of friends. I will prove my innocence by an alibi. I will have to bring a woman in the case which I had hoped to keep from dragging before the public. I will not call upon her to testify unless I see that I am to get a life sentence in prison. I would take a life term in Jackson first. As to my wife I married her because I thought she loved me. She proposed to me. She kept after me so long that I felt I could not live without her." The woman whom Milo Keep says he was trying to shield was with him the night of the murder.

Choked to Death.

Dorothy Tough, the 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace W. Tough of Bay City, choked to death Saturday morning, a bean or small pebble which the child had had in its throat for several days being the cause. Last Tuesday the girl, while playing, put a bean or pebble in her mouth. She was seized with a bad coughing fit, but a physician relieved her and apparently there was no further trouble, as the child was in her usual condition. This morning she was taken with a coughing fit and in ten minutes she was dead. The obstruction had evidently lodged somewhere in the throat where it did no harm until it was dislodged into the larynx.

The House

My dear house, my brown house,
Set round with living green,
Like a nest among the branches
Your loveliness is seen;
Around your fairy casements
Pink roses climb and fall—
Yet in our hearts the dream-house
Is best beloved of all!

My dear house, my brown house,
How good, when day is done,
In your shelter safe enfolded,
To feel that rest is won;
Within your walls how softly
Slumber and silence fall—
Yet in our hearts the dream-house
Is best beloved of all!

THE LANE THAT HAD A TURNING

BY LULA J. POWERS

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Miss Mary Jones was an old maid. Possibly if she had lived in an up-to-date town and been up to date herself she would have been Miss Marie Jones, a bachelor girl; but as it was she was simply an old maid. Pretty she had once been, and perhaps she was not far from it now, but who ever stops to think whether an old maid is pretty or not?

It was a bright morning. The outside world—God's world—was full of sunshine; the inside world—Miss Mary's world—was peaceful. To-day was her birthday—forty years of spring and sunshine, of cloud and shadow; and yet she did not feel old. She looked out at the beautiful brightness, past the nodding white flowers in the garden, past the dusty road.

Again she seemed a happy girl, wandering through the green woods, floating upon the bosom of the lake whose waters were just visible from her window. She had not been alone then, and every tender word he had spoken was dear to her even now. The flowers they had gathered together had withered, but their fragrance was still in her heart.

Presently the gate clicked and with a sigh, for only her God knew how lonely her life was at times, she roused from her day-dream and hurried out to meet a tall, graceful girl that was coming slowly down the garden walk.

"Why, Helen! When did you get back?" she exclaimed joyfully, taking the girl's hands in both of hers. "How good to see you again!"

The girl smiled down at her. She was tall and strong, and everybody loved Helen. "Only this morning," she said, kissing the soft cheek of the older woman and drawing her down upon the rustic bench upon the vine-covered porch.

"I have so much to tell you," she said as she loosened the strings of her hat and let it fall beside her upon the floor.

"I'll be glad to hear it, Helen," said Miss Mary, caressing her fondly. "You know that I am interested in anything that concerns you."

A smile dimpled the girl's face. "Well, we had an accident," she said slowly.

"Accident—what kind of an accident?" asked the little woman.

"Railroad," she answered seriously. "A broken rail dumped us down an embankment into a sand bed."

"Oh! Was anybody hurt?"

"Some had scratches and bruises, but we came out free, although our coach was turned upside down and I was shut in for two hours."

"Oh Helen!"

"Whom do you think was shut up in the compartment with me, Miss Mary?"

"Jack."

"Jack? Oh, no," the soft color me, assuring me that everything would be all right in a short time, and pacifying as well as he could.

"He introduced himself, and tried hard to be agreeable, and as I had nothing else to do I talked to him. I could see it was very distasteful to him, and that he was cynical and morose in his disposition, but as the circumstance was he could do no less than he did. Well, after a few attempts at conversation, he just kept silent and I talked to him and he listened. I told him about this town, and I told him lots about you, Miss Mary—how good and true you were.

"He is cynical, skeptical and lots of unnecessary things, Miss Mary."

He was so gloomy and dull that I was more than glad to hear papa's voice once more. But—you know him, don't you?"

"I did once," said Miss Mary, her eyes wistful and shining, "but that was a long, long time ago, Helen."

Helen chatted on a little, then she arose to go.

"Is—is Mr. Vaughan—did you say he was married, Helen?" asked Miss Mary, summoning all her courage to ask the question.

"Married," Helen's dark eyebrows arched themselves prettily. "No woman in her senses would marry him. He is cynical, skeptical and lots of unnecessary things, Miss Mary. Perhaps though, with a tenderness in her voice which Miss Mary felt, 'perhaps had he married the woman of his choice—the one he loved and had a home and little children—perhaps he might have been different. He was disappointed in his youth, and it soured him for all time I heard some one say.'"

Helen was looking at the passion flowers then and did not see the pitiful little quiver upon Miss Mary's face. When at last she spoke she had apparently forgotten Max Vaughan, for she said, "Helen, do you ever quarrel with Jack?"

"Oh, yes, often—or rather he quarrels with me," said the girl promptly.

Miss Mary picked Tab up in her arms. "How do you make up—that is—come to an understanding, I mean?" she asked rubbing Tab's coat vigorously.

"Oh, I always begin," said Helen vaguely, "even if he is the most to blame, and then he gets sorry and it is all right again. Somehow the making up is, is nice, Miss Mary. I like it and so does he."

Helen kissed her and then left her alone.

Miss Mary walked slowly up and down the porch, her hands clasped tightly together and her head bent. "I was to blame some," she said slowly; "I was sorry and I ought to have told him so. It has ruined his life and spoiled mine." She looked out at the birds flitting about in the sunshine. "It was not too late to tell him yet, and he would understand."

She went to her desk and took up her pen. Miss Mary always put something of herself in all she did, so she wrote the one word "forgive" and signed her name under it; then she went into the garden and slipped a white carnation in the envelope. She sealed and addressed the letter, and a fearful of a change of mood she slipped on her garden hat and went and mailed it.

Two people watched and waited that week. Miss Mary watched the mails and Helen watched Miss Mary.

At last it came. A letter containing but one sentence meant only for Miss Mary's eyes.

She smiled through her tears as she wrote her answer.

"Come. Always, your Mary."

Church was over. The notes of the organ fell lingeringly over the departing crowd. The glorious sunlight fell through the window upon a tall, handsome man, and a plump little pink-cheeked woman in gray with a soft light in her dark eyes.

Helen came down the aisle, her white dress trailing after her, and her hands full of flowers, followed closely by a stately young man, whose chief aim seemed to be to keep close to Helen.

"Miss Helen," said Max Vaughan, and there was gladness in his voice, "allow me to introduce my—wife."

"I am so glad," said Helen, kissing Miss Mary. "I like to see people find their own." Then she and Jack turned away.

There was tears in Miss Mary's eyes, but they did not dim their brightness. She was still Miss Mary even if she was Mrs. Max Vaughan, and Miss Mary she would always be. "I believe," she said looking after Helen, "that she told me of you and you of me purposely."

"Of course," said her husband, kissing her, "and thank God that she did, my—Mary."

DOG MET ODD DEATH.

Thrust Head Into Drain Pipe After Pigeon and Was Drowned.

There was mourning in the house of engine company No. 12 in Manhattan last night, says the Philadelphia North American. Percy, the collie dog, the pet of the company, is dead.

Percy came to No. 12's house four years ago in a big snowstorm. The firemen took him in fed him and gave him a bed. He never left.

The firemen taught him tricks, and he learned to know as well as the horses what the sound of the gong meant. He was always on hand and raced ahead of the horses to the fire.

Yesterday evening Percy spied a pigeon on the roof of the fire house. He ran up the steps and out on the roof to chase the intruder away. The pigeon dodged into the drain pipe. Percy put his head in after it but he couldn't reach the pigeon and his collar became wedged so that he couldn't withdraw it.

If he barked none of the men heard him, and no one saw him on the roof. After a while it began to rain. The firemen below noticed that the water was falling down over the ledge instead of coming through the pipe and one of them went up to investigate.

The water had run down about Percy's head in the pipe and drowned him. When the body was pulled away the pigeon flew out unharmed.

A Statesman and His Pipe.

Mr. Stuart Cumberland, who has made thought reading experiments with many men of note, tells in Pearson's how he had on one occasion Mr. Chamberlain as a "subject," says the Pall Mall Gazette. At the outset Mr. Cumberland found that, much as Mr. Chamberlain desired not to "his thoughts kept straying to the mantel shelf. The mental grip, the unwavering decisiveness, which had been so strikingly displayed in the previous experiments, were lacking. I begged him to concentrate his thoughts entirely upon the test in question. 'It's no good,' he said. 'My thoughts keep going to my pipe. I haven't finished my smoke, and I really cannot concentrate my thoughts without it.' The pipe was on the mantel shelf. Mr. Chamberlain took it up, placed it in his mouth, and the experiment was immediately carried to a successful conclusion."

So It Is.

A New York attorney who had tired of the smart brand of office boy finally secured one who appeared very raw looking, but seemed willing to learn and mind his own business. One of the first of the tasks given the newcomer was the copying of a letter, and the employer noticed that the lad was carefully studying the first line of the epistle. The lawyer called the boy over and asked him if he had discovered an error anywhere.

"No, sir," was the reply; "but I don't see why you use this word," and the youth pointed to the last word in the first line. The line read as follows:

"Dear Sir: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 17th ult."

"Why, don't you know what ult. means?" said the attorney.

"Yes," answered the boy. "It's what they say to soldiers when they want them to stop."

He Cheered Me Off.

"His words have cheered me off," they said. As he in peace was lying. With folded hands, upon his bed, Beyond the stress of dying. He had no art to gather gold. He loved too well his brother. But, "Much I loved him!"—thus they told. Their thought to one another.

My Father, though this life of mine Lead through the valley lowly; Though half unwell's the thought divine That 'thou hast whispered wholly, Yet when I die, and visions soft Through my long sleep are pressing, Let fond hearts say, "He cheered me off."

New Cotton Plants.

At the exposition at Melbourne, Australia, two new varieties of cotton plants were exhibited. The first variety, known as Caravonica I. produces a linen-like cotton, the estimated value of which is said to be 20 cents a pound. The other variety is known as Caravonica II. and produces a silky cotton of commercial value of 24 cents a pound.

At Irving's Grave

(Special Correspondence.)

Tarrytown-on-Hudson is but twenty-six miles from New York by the old Post road, or what is left of that memorable highway. If the boom in The Bronx continues, the subway will, by and by, hurry its passenger to the verge of Sleepy Hollow. New York is growing! Lines of transportation and factories are desecrating spots that were sacred. Tarrytown has four manufacturing, and a dozen others have been kept away by the stubborn fight of rich landlords. John D. Rockefeller owns thousands of acres adjoining the town. The four tracks of the New York Central are insufficient for the traffic from the metropolis. A quadruple track electric line is now being built by this company. It will parallel the steam road and run to Croton, ten miles up the Hudson from Tarrytown. Commercialism is on every hand.

But there is only one Sunnyside. Its ivy-grown porch is none the less attractive when all things are glorified by the snow.

"A token of friendship immortal—With Washington Irving returns—Scott's Ivy entwined o'er his portal. By the Blue-eyed Lassie of Burns."

Tramping back through the snow, I saw a great white mass fall from a wind-blown tree. It took on fantastic shapes as it whirled about in the air. Given this very influence, my thoughts shaped images of old Baltus Van Tassel and the fair Katrina and Ichabod Crane and Van Brunt. I was even prepared to hear the mad race of the Headless Horseman, but checked myself in time. It would be moonlight on the Hudson in a few hours, and I could afford to wait.

The Old Dutch House. Tommy Dean built the old Dutch house at the corner of Broadway, on the hill, in Tarrytown. He built it in 1750. Before death called him, he became one of those early millionaires, and was worth about $50,000. The Dutch Tea Room and curio store occupies the house now. You can go there, as I did, and get a delicious meal, with tea or coffee that is excellent. And after you have eaten, a typical Dutch girl, sweet and smiling, will show you through all the odd little rooms. She will try to sell you various attractive articles, but one is not pressed unduly to buy. Most people, however, come away with a package of tea, a book or something as a memento. When you have finished inside of the house, you can go out and take a snapshot as I did. There is the box hedge, crowned with snow, and the big grapevine climbing over the kitchen. The hedge and vine are 150 years old.

And now you walk a few blocks on Broadway, formerly the old Post road, and stand before the monument of John Paulding, minute man. Here the spy, Major John Andre, was captured, Sept. 23, 1780, by Paulding and others. His capture brought to light the treachery of Arnold. But however much we loathe the traitor, Benedict Arnold, let us not overlook the men that gave him gold. And let us sometimes remember kindly Quebec and Saratoga and Ticonderoga, and think with so much charity as we may of the lonely, world-acursed and self-damned old man, alone on his death-bed in the suburbs of London.

"Cowboys" in the Revolution.

Cowboys are supposed by most people to be peculiarly a product of the West. Irving tells us, however, that a chivalric order, known as Cowboys, fought the British along the Hudson.

It shows, however, that a Dutchman had the principal say about it. Katrina worked in a few frills around the cupola, and there the church stands, much like a blockhouse fort.

Irving's Plain Grave. "Washington Irving, born April 3, 1783. Died Nov. 28, 1859." I leaned over the gate in the fence that surrounds the sacred plot of ground, and read this inscription on a plain slab of marble about two feet high. A dozen other stones somewhat smaller occupy the modest enclosure. The sexton came by, and I spoke to him. He said that visitors had chipped away two other slabs, that this was the third one erected over Irving's grave. I wondered that, out of 70,000,000 people in the gentle author's country, none had seen fit to build up instead of chip away. It will be a matter of no great surprise if Englishmen some day endeavor to place a lasting shaft among the trees that surround the resting place of the man that they too love.

I do not mean that his spirit is of necessity less happy because rich bankers and brokers and brewers, in dying, have had erected tall monuments and piles of stone that hedge in our dear Irving's grave. Nor do I mean that America is unappreciative. Perhaps Americans are a little thoughtless. The struggle for the dollar is so absorbing.

Longfellow has written: "Here lies the gentle humorist, who died in the bright Indian summer of his fame. A simple stone, with but a date and name. Marks his secluded resting-place beside The river that he loved and glorified."

And so, saddened a little but full of peaceful thoughts, I took my way back to Tarrytown and to "the river that he glorified."

THE CRUELTY OF FASHION.

Snow-White Heron is Surely Doomed to Extinction. The splendid snow-white heron, known as the American egret, one of the few kinds which bear the albatross plumes of millinery and commerce, is among the warring species of America—a victim to inexorable fashion, says Herbert K. Job in Country Life in America.

In 1903 the price of plumes offered to hunters was $32 per ounce, which makes the plumes worth twice their weight in gold. There will always be men who would break any law for Sunnyside, Home of Washington Irving.

And Tarrytown was the very heart of the Revolutionary contest. The hackmen, seeing me start out again, would drive me to the Old Dutch Church and back for a dollar. One of them said he would allow me half an hour to look about. A half hour for Sleepy Hollow and Irving's grave and the church! The limitation was annoying, and besides, I wanted to be alone. I had spent many half hours with the author of the Sketch Book. So away I tramped.

The oldest church on the Hudson is only about a half mile north of Tarrytown. You are told that Frederick Filipe and his wife Katrina Van Cortlandt built it in 1690, and it looks just as if a Dutchman and his wife did erect it about that year. I think Katrina put her foot down real hard under her short skirts, when the plans were being made.

such profit. No rookery of these herons can long exist, unless it be guarded by force of arms day and night.

Mr. Job tells how he visited what is perhaps the last large remaining egret rookery in North America.

It should be understood that these plumes—which are variously called by milliners "albatrosses," "stubs" or "ospreys," and are dyed to whatever color is fashionable—are borne only during the nuptial season and can be secured only by shooting the birds when they have assembled in colonies to breed, when their usual shyness has departed, owing to the strength of the parental instinct. Returning to their nests, they are shot down and their young are left to starve.

If in doubt about a medicine a wise man tries it on his wife's dog.

Hay Most Valuable Crop.

Under the present method of collecting farm statistics the figures given out by the secretary of state are generally long overdue. A bulletin just issued gives the value of farm products in Michigan for the year 1903, but they are none the less interesting because their appearance is tardy.

No longer ago than 1898 wheat was the principal crop in Michigan, but since that time there are three crops that outrank it in value in this state. The value of the principal crops raised in the state in 1903 shows that hay is the leading product of the farms, the value of that product in the year named being $27,500,000. Corn comes second in the list with a value of $20,000,000, the oats yield for the year was worth $13,000,000, and the wheat yield was worth $11,000,000. The potato crop of the year was worth $10,000,000. The Michigan clip of wool in 1903 was worth $2,500,000 and was exactly equalled by the sugar beet crop of that year. The bean crop was worth $5,000,000 in 1903, while in 1899 it was scarcely more than one-half the value.

The value of the principal farm since 1896. In that year the total value of the crops was $46,000,000, while in 1903 the crops were worth $93,000,000. The banner year of production and prices was 1901, when the principal crops of the state sold for $104,000,000.

"Gone Board Crazy."

"The state has gone board crazy," said Representative Pettit on the floor of the house in opposition to the bill providing for an examining and registration board for trained nurses. "We have a barber's board and a horse-shoer's board and a host of other boards that are just as useless. This board would be only an added expense to the state. I am a member of the public health committee, but I never knew when this bill was reported out."

The proposition that the state buy the Alma sanitarium is the latest in connection with the bill for a hospital for consumptives.

THE MARKETS.

Detroit.—The cattle trade was active on the opening day, Thursday, prices 25c higher than a week ago. At noon everything was sold, many local butchers being unable to secure enough to supply their regular customers. Milch cows and springers were also higher. Good cows brought as high as $35. The quality, however, was poor and few good ones were on sale. Veal calves were again very plentiful and at the opening they were from 50 to 75 cents higher than they were on last Thursday. They closed dull, however, and about 25 to 50 cents lower than the opening. Best grades $5@5.50, others $4@4.50.

Hogs.—The hog trade was active and all grades 5 to 10 cents higher than on last Thursday. Light to good butchers, $5.40 to $5.50. Pigs, $5.10 to $5.25. Light Yorkers, $5.35 to $5.40. Roughs, $4.25 to $4.50.

Sheep.—Sheep and lambs were scarce and opened and closed about 25 cents higher than on last Thursday. The quality was not so good. Spring lambs were not so high and sold at $7.50 to $7.75 per hundred. Best lambs, $6.50 to $6.75. Fair to good lambs, $4.75 to $5.25. Light and common lambs, $3.75 to $4.75. Reward will be paid to any person who can find one atom of opium, chloral, morphine, cocaine, ether or chloroform in any form in any of Dr. Miles' Remedies.

This reward is offered because certain unscrupulous persons make false statements about these remedies. It is understood that this reward applies only to goods purchased in the open market, which have not been tampered with in any way.

Dr. Miles' remedies cure by their soothing, nourishing, strengthening and invigorating effects upon the nervous system, and not by paralyzing and weakening the nerves as would be the case if these drugs were used.

For this reason Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are universally considered the best pain remedy.

"I have suffered for 25 years with severe pains in my head, heart and back, and have tried everything I could get and could not find any relief until I got a box of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. I suffered as long as 12 hours at a time with such severe pains that I feared I would lose my mind. The Anti-Pain Pills gave me relief in from 10 to 20 minutes. I do not have to use Morphine any more. I wish you would publish this so that other sufferers may find relief."

Before vacating the old studio on Main street Mr. Rentschler carefully studied the requirements of the business and the plan most likely to afford the best results. The office, reception, dressing and operating rooms are on the first floor while the equipment throughout is modern and convenient. Members of the profession now frankly admit that the arrangement leaves nothing to be desired by operator or subject.

The class of work which has given Mr. Rentschler a high reputation among art critics has won the patronage of a large proportion of the people of the county. That he is now in a position to afford still greater satisfaction may be inferred. The public is cordially invited to inspect the new quarters when in Ann Arbor.

THURSDAY, MAY 18, 1905.

A bill to repeal the inheritance tax law has been introduced in the senate by Senator Peck, of this district.

The bill creating a state highway department and creating the office of state highway commissioner has passed the house and senate. The bill provides for an appropriation fund from which townships are to be paid for road improvements.

A bill has been introduced in the senate to check the use of Memorial day for all kinds of sports. It prohibits all races and baseball games on that day. Senator "Don't care a d—n" Baird moved to have it referred to the committee on gaming interests but President Glasgow refused to permit any such "joshing" and sent the bill to the committee on judiciary.

Property owners in Manchester are kicking over the excessive high rates they have to pay to get their property insured against loss by fire. Chelsea business men have equal cause for complaint. There has not been a fire in a business block in Chelsea in the six years we have lived here, but the rate of insurance paid by the editor of the Herald on his newspaper plant has been doubled. The system of rates assessed by the insurance companies is a direct steal. In our opinion the way out of it, for the business man must have fire insurance, is the establishment of mutual companies, like the farmers have. It is a rare thing for a farmers' mutual company assessment to be over $5 on $1,000, but the merchant has to pay from $11 to $20 per $1,000.

Why cannot Chelsea adopt standard time and get in line with the rest of the country, so that people would not have to become cross-eyed trying to know when to go anywhere? The official time of the state is standard, the steam and electric railroads run on standard time, and just what difference it would make to a man whether he went to work at 6:30 a.m. instead of 7 a.m., took noon hour from 11:30 to 12:30, and quit work at 5:30, we fail to see. He has to work full time any way the clock is set. All this talk about "God's time" is ridiculous. The trouble with "God's time" is that it varies one minute for every 15 miles east or west and if you set your watch at 12 o'clock by the sun today it will be exactly correct just three other days in the year. Detroit now has standard time, so has Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Manchester and Dexter. Then why not Chelsea? Let's get in line.

"I Thank the Lord!"

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE D. Y. A. A. & J. RAILWAY

Extended Its Hospitality to the Newspaper Men Along Its Line.

Last Thursday the representatives of the newspapers between Battle Creek and Detroit were invited by the officials of the D. Y. A. A. & J. to take a trip to Detroit and partake of their hospitality and meet some of the editorial fraternity from places in Ohio and Indiana, located along the electric lines centering in Detroit.

The trip was made in a private car under the management of J. L. Millsbaugh, acting superintendent, and Elmer C. Allen, general passenger and ticket agent, and was a very pleasant one despite the heavy electrical storm that prevailed and which had worked considerable mischief to the wires and other appliances belonging to the road, making all the cars behind their scheduled time of running.

At Dearborn it was learned that owing to the storm the "foreign" editors had put off their trip until the next day, so that part of the program was off. The Michiganders, however, arrived in Detroit just as the clocks were striking 6, the run from Chelsea having been made in 24 hours.

At 7 o'clock the party sat down to an elegant course dinner in a private room at the Russell House and it was just 8 o'clock when Frank Codrington, of the Ypsilanti Daily Press, rose to his feet and stated that owing to the absence of the Ohio and Indiana men no regular program could be proceeded with, so in lieu thereof they were all invited to go and see Wm. Faversham in "The Squawman" at the Detroit opera house, as the guests of the management of the D. Y. A. A. & J. The invitation was accepted by everyone present and a vote of thanks was extended to the gentlemen for their courtesy.

After witnessing the performance, which was much enjoyed, the car left on the return trip at 11 p. m. Those who made the trip were as follows:

Battle Creek—E. W. Moore, G. Dolliver, Marshall—H. Pratt, J. M. Moses. Parma—F. J. Dowd. Jackson—G. W. Scotford. E. C. Bridgman, B. J. O'Mara. Grass Lake—E. E. Brown. Chelsea—Tom W. Mingay, Geo. S. Davis. Ann Arbor—R. L. Warren, D. A. Hammond. Ypsilanti—Frank Codrington, Elmer C. Allen, J. L. Millsbaugh.

The D. Y. A. A. & J. has been making many improvements of late in its equipment and has several more in contemplation, all of which tend to work for the comfort and convenience of the traveling public. No one along its line will deny that it is one of the greatest conveniences for traveling from one place to another that has yet been inaugurated and the end of its convenience is not yet reached.

Few "Find Their Work"

The writer for the World's Work who inquired of twenty clergymen if they would choose the same occupation if they had their lives to live over, need not have been surprised to find nine who replied that they would not; nor the investigator for Leslie's Monthly who asked eleven teachers a similar question to find only one who was willing to say yes. Such expressions of disappointment can be got out of men and women of any and every vocation, says the New Bedford Standard. The person who wishes he were something else than what he actually is can be found at almost any minute of the day by any one who takes the pains to inquire. Not much is proved by it, except that, in the first place, there are too many square pegs in round holes, and that, in the second place, there are more pegs for which there are no appropriate holes than is good for the community. We have no question that the nine clergymen and the ten teachers who wish they had chosen some other manner of life were not conspicuous successes in the occupations they had selected, and it is rather to be doubted if all of them would have been successes in any of the occupations which they wish they had selected.

It is not difficult for a clergyman to dream that he would have made a great lawyer, or for a school teacher to fancy that he would have been a splendid captain of industry. But the great lawyers and the splendid captains of industry might, if they would tell some stories of disillusion about the business. They would certainly say that if unsuccessful preachers and teachers put no more effort and interest into the law or into industry than they have put into preaching and teaching, the end would be the same disappointment and the same longing for something else.

"Happy is the man who has found his work." It is a pity that so many persons have apparently not found the work that they could best do and be happy in it. But sometimes it appears to us as if those who complain because they did not choose rightly, and who give up their thought to speculations of how much better they could have done if they had done something else, are not quite doing themselves and their opportunities full justice.

The secret of happiness in an occupation is usually in the worker himself more than it is in the occupation. And it mostly comes from the disposition and the determination to do the best possible, even if a mistake or bad fortune have made a wrong choice. Not in fancying that better could have been done, but in doing the best you can where you are found the recipe of contentment with a life-work.

Cremation of Hindu Dead

Toward the upper end of the ghats is the burning ground. There are no steps here, but a slope of beaten dirt. Stop half an hour and you may see every step of the cremation rites. Sitting on stone ramparts above, to right and left, are friends and relatives of the dead ones. The figure to the right, huddled up in a bright green wrap, is of the lowest caste of Hindus and keeps the mat shed near by where the sacred fire for igniting every corpse is for sale. You hear hoarse, loud cries of "Ram! Ramana!" and behold, a burial procession is coming down the slope. Four men carry the corpse slung between two bamboo poles, and cry to the god Ram. He is the personification of filial love, and thus it is meet that they should call him to witness. They swing down to the river and immerse the corpse. It is wrapped in a white shroud stained with red blotches. They lift the head slightly out of the water and remove the shroud from the face, splashing water five times upon the mouth. Others, in the meantime, are building a wooden pyre, made of fagots sold near by, and when finished standing three feet or more above ground. The corpse, its dark color showing through the dripping shroud, is then placed on the wooden altar and covered with fagots. This done, all but two mount the ramparts and watch the final ceremony. Of the two remaining, one pours oil upon the wood from a small clay dish, while the other goes to the firehouse above. He soon returns with a long straw wisp, blazing at one end. He advances to the corpse's head, touches it with the wisp, and then circles the pyre five times, touching the head each time until the fifth, when he places the blazing wisp beneath the feet and the whole pile bursts into flame. When all is consumed the ashes are raked into the river and float away to bliss eternal.—F. J. O. Alsop in Outing.

Paris Sharpers Are Clever

The tricks adopted by sharpers to hoodwink the ever-gullible public are as ingenious as they are varied, says a Paris letter to the London Globe. The latest tried in Paris is described in the morning papers. The other afternoon in the Rue de Conde a well-dressed individual, with every appearance of a gentleman, got up on a heap of stones and, striking his hands together, gathered a crowd around him. "Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "I am not here, within two steps of the nearest police station, to sell you stolen goods or obtain your money on false pretenses. No, ladies and gentlemen, I am here for the good of humanity. I represent the famous American firm of Findem & Havem, and I am sent by them to tell you the very latest novelty, which is destined to revolutionize the world.

but with our patent mysterious pocket that in future will be rendered impossible. It has had an enormous success in America, and will defy the most ingenious pickpocket on earth. Look at it; it appears and disappears at the will of the owner. One, two, three—there it is at the back of my neck. One, two, three—now it is up my sleeve. Look at it, ladies and gentlemen. I do not ask you for a sovereign, half a sovereign, or even five shillings, although it is well worth that sum. But for the good of humanity I dispose of it for sixpence." At that moment, when fifty hands were outstretched to buy the mysterious pocket, a shrill whistle was heard and the street vender promptly disappeared. The crowd retired disappointed, when they discovered later that while they were reaching out for the great mysterious American invention their own pockets had been rifled.

The Herd Bulls

So much trouble has been experienced from infectious abortion in fine herds of cattle, and so certain is it that the herd bull is often the medium through which the disease is spread, that it becomes a matter of importance to so manage the bull that danger of this sort is prevented. When a new bull has been purchased at an auction sale or by private treaty he should be quarantined for at least ten days, during which time his generative organs should be perfectly disinfected. This is to be accomplished by means of a small hose attached to a large pail to be hoisted overhead. The free end of the hose should be furnished with a long, slim nozzle for insertion into the sheath. As a disinfectant it will suffice to use a gallon or so of a two per cent solution of any one of the coal tar disinfectants.

When such a solution has been placed in the pail the end of the nozzle should be inserted in the sheath and the skin held tightly around it to prevent the liquid from running out after the stream has been allowed to flow into the part. As soon as the sheath has been disinfected by the liquid, the fingers release their grasp, and the solution is allowed to gush forth. This operation should be repeated several times at each time of washing, and the washing should also be done before and after each service in herds where abortion has been prevalent and after each service in every herd.

The next important point is to keep the bull separate from the cows in every herd of cattle maintained upon a farm of moderate size. On the open range this plan of management can not well be followed, but it should be the rule in all ordinary herds. The cows are to be brought to the bull when in season, and but one leap should be allowed. Bulls kept up in this way must be properly fed and should be made to take ample exercise daily. The feeding should consist largely of oats and hay along with grass in season, but poor results in breeding will surely follow the free use of corn as a feed for service bulls.

Excessive fat is to be prevented by this feeding and by exercise. Where cows fail to get with calf it is not always the cow's fault. The bull in many instances is to blame, and it is heavy feeding upon corn or other rich food and lack of exercise that makes most bulls impotent. In order that the bull may take sufficient exercise he should be used in a tread power, harnessed and made to do hauling work about the farm yard or have a large lot to run in. If he will not exercise in his paddock, turn some young bulls in with him and they will make him hustle. When the bull can not be worked or turned loose in a paddock or yard or small pasture, he may be provided with an overhead cable stretching from one end of the yard to the other and upon which runs a large ring attached to a chain, which may be snapped onto the bull's halter or ring.

The bull allowed to run at large on pasture is a menace to adults and children, if inclined to be vicious, and the case is much worse where he is allowed to run on the road side or in a poorly fenced field. The objection to allowing a herd bull to run with the cows at pasture is that he is apt to overdo himself in breeding, is likely to serve a cow that has a discharge from her vagina due to retention of the afterbirth or contagious abortion, and the further fact that it is a difficult matter to keep track of the dates of breeding unless the cow is brought to the bull for service.

One of the advantages of bringing the cow to the bull is that the attendant is led to notice whether she is clean or not, and so the bull is safeguarded against contagion in that a discharging cow is not allowed to be bred. Many a good young bull is ruined by over-service when turned with cows at pasture, but by keeping him up the amount of service can be easily regulated, and in this way the best results are attained.—A. S. Alexander in Farmers' Review.

Preparing Wool for Market

While wool is not the main object for which sheep are kept in these days, yet it is important that it be properly handled so that it will go on to the market in condition to bring the highest price. Formerly it was the almost universal practice to wash the sheep before shearing, but this is little practiced now and is not a good practice to follow. If shearing is done early, as it should be, it is impossible to wash the sheep beforehand, as the weather would not be warm enough.

Washing the wool on the sheep is a very questionable practice any way, so it should not be allowed to interfere with the time of shearing. It is very difficult to do a good job of washing the wool while it is on the sheep's back. Very often such wool is more difficult to scour than similar wool that has not been so treated and it sells relatively lower on account of this fact.

It is important to keep the wool as free as possible from all kinds of litter and filth. Timothy chaff and the seed envelopes of Burdock, Cocklebur and so forth are especially objected to by the manufacturers, as they must be removed by hand, if at all. As the fleece is removed from the sheep it should be kept from being torn apart so far as possible. To facilitate this it is well to have a padded canvas on which to set the sheep while being sheared so that it will not struggle unduly.

The fleece once torn apart is very difficult to put in shape so that it can be tied into a bundle that will look well. When the fleece has been removed it should be gathered into the arms and turned over flesh side down either on the shearing mat or a table prepared for that purpose. It should then be spread out full size and drawn together into a compact mass. All litter and filth should be removed, including the heavy tags.

Next fold over first one side and then the other of the fleece, then turn the neck back upon the shoulders, then roll from the tail into as snug and neat a bundle as it is possible to make, and tie with the twine made for that purpose. This is a rather large soft twine made from bark and is called wool twine. Do not under any circumstances use binder twine, as the fiber of this twine will not take color. It cannot be removed from the wool except by hand picking and the buyer will make very severe dock because of its presence.

A box in which to tie the wool makes it possible to put it up in a nicer appearing condition, but very neat work can be done without it after a little practice. Sufficient twine should be used to hold the fleece together well, and no more. Buyers object to an excess of twine. While the fleece should be tied snugly it should not be drawn up too tightly, as this will make it seem heavy when it is handled and the buyer will make too high an estimate of the amount it will shrink in scouring.

If there is a flock of some size and there are different classes and grades of wool in the flock it will be well to assort it carefully and put each grade to itself and so that it can be examined in case it is desired to sell at home. If it is shipped to market the different grades should be kept separate in sacking. Even if the quantities are such that some of different grades must be put in the same sack it is best to put each in separately.

Worn Out Orchards

On almost every one of the old-established farms of the country one may see the relic of what was once a good and perhaps fairly profitable orchard. To-day most of these orchards have outlived their usefulness and have become eyesores. The few remaining trees are broken, shapeless, water-sprout infested, diseased and dying. They may manage now and then to bear a few indifferent, worm-eaten apples, and one or two of them, perhaps, each year bear fairly good apples that help the housewife to add variety to the meals in the fall. But taken as a whole, the antiquated orchard is an expensive investment of capital, for the land occupied is valuable, or would be valuable if devoted to some paying crop.

It serves of course as a calf pasture, but calves are usually better off if kept out of the orchard in which are sure to be found the eggs of intestinal parasites that kill calves. Vermineous bronchitis from the thread-like worm that gets into the windpipe and air passages of the lungs of calves is sure to be contracted in an orchard that has long been pastured by calves. Here, too, hogs are allowed to run and pick up some fallen apples and some grass. Giving the orchard credit for pasture value, however, we do not figure up sufficient profit to warrant keeping the old orchard uncultivated, and even if it is plowed beneath the trees, which is seldom done, comparatively speaking, the area occupied by the ancient trees still falls to return an adequate interest on the capital invested per acre.

Considering these matters, we come to the conclusion that the old trees merely cumber the ground and should be grubbed out without further loss of time. It may be possible and profitable in many districts to start a new orchard upon the site of the old one, but this can only be done by grubbing out the dead and dying trees and thorough cultivation for a season or two before setting out the new trees.

Then, too, before resetting an orchard or starting a new one on fresh ground, the modern price of land should be taken into account, to see whether orchard trees will prove profitable. Where the district is not specially adapted for apple growing, or the production of other tree fruits, the combination orchard and farm garden will pay best, but several acres may be wasted by setting them out with fruit trees. Whatever is decided upon as regards a new orchard is of little importance, however, compared with the disposition of the old profitless orchard. As most of these old plantations are useless and expensive, they should be grubbed out.

Children and Pianos.

A Berlin physick says that out of one thousand girls who played the piano before the age of 12 years he found six hundred cases of nervous diseases, whereas out of the same number who did not play the instrument he found but 100 cases. The author of these experiments states that the piano should never be used by a child before the age of six years and only two hours a day at the maximum.

Every farm should have small fruit and berries in abundance

BIGGEST CODFISH ON RECORD.

Gloucester Fishermen Recently Landed a Monster.

It will interest Maine fishermen to know that the grandfather of all codfish, the biggest one ever brought into Boston within the memory of the oldest fisherman, was lately landed at T. Hooper of Gloucester. The fish weighed eighty-five pounds after being dressed, and must have weighed about 100 pounds when captured. It was almost six feet in length. The fish was taken near Halfway Rock, off Marblehead. One of the dorymen got a terrific yank on one of his knees when the big fellow took hold, and after vainly struggling with the monster to get him up from the depths the man hailed a mate to come to his aid. The two fishermen each took a long pull and then both pulled together, and this gave the cod to the surface, and he was successfully gaffed into the dory.—Bangor (Me.) Commercial.

"HEART OF THE HOME."

In Those Words Clubwoman Aptly Describes the Kitchen.

"Domestic science seems to be the solution of several vexed questions, such as the servant problem, divorce, and temperance. If more money were expended by cities in introducing domestic science into the schools less money would need to be spent on insane asylums, poorhouses and penitentiaries," said Miss Ella G. Neave in her address on "The Progress of Domestic Science" before the department of the household economics and education of the Woman's Club. "The kitchen is the heart of the home. The woman who holds the comfort of a man battling with the world in her hands has responsibility as great as that of a commander of a battleship. The only remedy for the evils of bad cooking and lack of good homes is in the schools of domestic science which are established in the public schools."

Were Good for Both.

Paulding, Miss., May 15th.—(Special)—In this neighborhood men and women alike are telling of the great benefit they have received from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills and it frequently happens they are the means of curing members of both sexes in the same family. Take the case of Mr. and Mrs. F. Erby. The latter voices the sentiment of both when she says:

"My lips cannot express too much praise for Dodd's Kidney Pills. I suffered with Backache and Female weakness for four or five years and I feel that I have been wonderfully helped by Dodd's Kidney Pills. My husband, too, was a sufferer for five years from a weak bladder and they also cured him."

Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy kidneys. Healthy kidneys mean pure blood and good health all over the body. No woman with healthy kidneys ever had female weakness.

Full Address.

A New York retail dealer in men's attire engaged for his ill wife a German nurse. The latter asked her employer to send her new address to Berlin, so that her old mother in the German capital could send her letters to the proper place. Thinking the best way to fix matters would be to put the nurse's name on top of his business card, the merchant did this. The first letter to come from Germany made the letter-carrier giggle as he handed it out. It had the following scribbled over the envelope names and places here being changed: "Madame Julia Hampt, care of James Broome, dealer in men's clothes, underwear and hats, 2836 Bowery, New York city, N. Y.; six shirts to order, $9; strictly one price; money refunded if goods are not entirely satisfactory."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Called It Debt of Honor.

A medical man in France was asked to be present at a duel in his professional capacity. He got up early, traveled some miles, "flamed" the swords and ministered to his client, who was slightly wounded. When both honor and wound were healed, he looked for his fees and sent in a bill for 50 francs ($10). The patient replied through his wife, who wrote: "I am told that between men there is a question of delicacy which forbids even the slightest appearance of trade in such a matter. Neither the doctors nor the seconds are brought on the ground for money. If you persist in your claim I shall, to my great regret, be obliged to leave to others the duty of settling this fine point with you."

ITCHING SCALP HUMOR.

Lady Suffered Tortures Until Cured by Cuticura—Scratched Day and Night.

"My scalp was covered with little pimples and I suffered tortures from the itching. I was scratching all day and night, and I could get no rest. I washed my head with hot water and Cuticura Soap and then applied the Cuticura Ointment as a dressing. One box of the Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap cured me. Now my head is entirely clear and my hair is growing splendidly. I have used Cuticura Soap ever since, and shall never be without it. (Signed) Ada C. Smith, 309 Grand St., Jersey City, N. J."

QUICK RESULTS.

W. J. Hill, of Concord, N. C., Justice of the Peace, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills proved a very efficient remedy in my case. I used them for disordered kidneys and backache, from which I had experienced a great deal of trouble and pain. The kidney secretions were very irregular, dark colored and full of sediment. The Pills cleared it all up and I have not had an ache in my back since taking the last dose. My health generally is improved a great deal."

Brandy From Old Boots.

PAINFUL SCIATICA

EVERY SUFFERER WANTS THE VERY QUICKEST CURE.

Mr. Donovan Thinks the Remedy Used by Him with Such Remarkable Success the Best—Cured by Five Boxes.

"Men who have to do difficult and dangerous work on electric lines at any hour of day or night, can't afford to have anything the matter with their health," said Mr. Donovan. You can imagine, therefore, how much I was alarmed one winter's day in 1902, when I was seized by a pain just behind my right hip that made it difficult for me to walk home. It was so bad by the time I reached the house that I was obliged to go straight to bed."

"Did that relieve you?"
"No, the pain grew more severe and kept extending downward along my leg. I sent for a physician, and he soon decided that I had sciatica. In a few days the whole nerve was affected, and the least movement brought on terrible agony."

"Did your condition improve under the doctor's treatment?"
"Quite the contrary. At the end of two months I wasn't a bit better, and at times I feared that I would never be able to leave my bed."

"How did you get out again?"
"When I was lying in bed, unable to move and wasting away in flesh, a friend visited me and told me about the wonderful cures brought about by a great blood and nerve remedy, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He strongly urged me to try them, and I luckily had sense enough to take his advice."

"Did you mend quickly?"
"Yes, that was the astonishing thing. I noticed a slight improvement before I had quite finished the first box of the pills, I could get out of bed while I was on the third box, and I was entirely cured by the time I had taken five boxes."

Mr. Joseph A. Donovan is living at Plainfield, New Hampshire, and is line inspector for the Haverhill, Newton and Plainfield Electric Street Railway. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the remedy to use when the blood is thin, as in anæmia; or impure, as in rheumatism; or when the nerves are weak, as in neuralgia; or lifeless, as in partial paralysis; or when the body as a whole is ill-nourished, as in general debility. They are sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER I.

A Mysterious Journey.

It is the middle of May, 1879. Like a living creature the sentient earth is pulsing with the rush of vitality so long withheld by the reluctant season. The buds are ready to burst, the grass is unshathed, while white-limbed birches and brown-skinned maples are losing their distinctive Aryan and Semitic types under the green robes May is weaving for all. Contradictory elements are abroad this morning in the weather; at all events here in Grovedale, New Hampshire. There is a stiff northwest wind, a low-reaching fog with the sun struggling to look through it, and a sky that looks like rain. If the sun comes out it will not be directly, and it is nearly time for the seven o'clock train whistle. After that a half-hour, and then Mr. Hamilton must go, if he go at all this morning.

Meanwhile, his wife is trying to convince him that he would better wait until to-morrow, it looks so much like rain. A fair, handsome couple, not yet middle-aged, they stand at the window of the dining-room looking out, rather than at each other. A packed valise rests on a chair, and the breakfast table is set to the children, a boy and a girl. Mr. Hamilton carries a light overcoat on his arm, his hat and gloves in his hand, and yet his wife declines to see that he is ready to go, but talks idly about the weather. He answers in the same way, though it is evident to both that underneath their words there is deeper meaning, which neither wishes to make apparent.

"Must you, when it looks so much stance?" he asked, returning to his wife's side.

"Just yourself, and let it be soon," looking eagerly and earnestly into his face.

"I shall be back soon, never fear. Constance, you are more beautiful than you ever were, and I love you better," he whispered. "I wish I were at home again. I will be soon." And kissing her hastily he took his valise, after putting on his hat, gloves, and overcoat, and left the house.

His wife stood by the window watching him until he was out of sight, when a thrill of superstitious fear shot through her.

She had watched him out of sight. Away back in her childhood a maiden relative had so strongly impressed her mind with the malevolent influences of such an act that she could never, despite her common sense, get rid of the belief.

But she was cheered the next moment by recollecting her tower. She sped quickly upstairs, then along the corridor and to another flight. This brought her to the foot of the tower, which was built at one side of the house, and rose fifteen feet above it. There were windows in it on all sides, and it gave a commanding view of the country, romantic and unusual, for the house itself was built on high ground.

Constance went straight to the window overlooking the street which led to the station. Far down there was a spot where her husband would cross the street (unless he had crossed it already) to go to the train. Fronting the crossing was a hotel known as the Essex House. She might see him, she thought, at this point. If so, she would just take one look to counteract the malignant effect of having watched him out of sight.

With expectant eyes and half-parted lips she eagerly watched the turn in the street which he might, or might like rain?" she asks negligently, retreating the ribbon which confines her morning dress, and picking out the bows before looking up.

"It is best that I do not explain at present."

"Like rain, Constance! Why, who ever knew it to rain, with the wind in the northwest?"

"That is the way it comes lately. It has been remarked, Vane, by a great many people; and if you should get wet you would get cold, and with your weak lungs—"

"Pshaw, Constance! my lungs are as strong as a horse, and so am I."

"But your mother died with consumption."

"Very true. But it isn't going to rain, mark my words; the sun will be out in less than an hour, and, if it should rain, I am neither sugar nor salt, to dissolve with the first drop. Oh, you may depend I shall be all right."

"But you are not as well as usual. You are more nervous. You talk in your sleep, and your appetite has failed lately."

"The more reason why I need a change. The fact is, my business is too much for me this debilitating spring weather. I suspect I am a little bilious, and since Mr. Henderson and your uncle have chosen to leave the mill business so much to me, that with my duties at the bank, has worn me down. They will have to take the reins in my absence, and Tony will do very well at the bank for the two weeks I am away."

"Always two weeks," murmured his wife.

"Yes; and I am sure it seems like a year."

"Then why do you go?"

"Because I must. You would not understand. It is best that I do not explain at present. There goes the whistle. What shall I bring you, Claire?" going to his little girl's side and stooping to kiss her.

A small face, framed in golden hair, with big, dark eyes looking out from under fluffy bangs, was raised to his as she sprang to her feet.

"Oh, a ring, papa—a gold ring."

"All right. I won't forget. And you, Perley?"

"A writing book, if you please. Mine is all written through."

"Very well," kissing the boy as he had his sister.

"And what shall I bring you, Constante, you are more beautiful than you ever were, and I love you better," he whispered. "I wish I were at home again. I will be soon." And kissing her hastily he took his valise, after putting on his hat, gloves, and overcoat, and left the house.

His wife stood by the window watching him until he was out of sight, when a thrill of superstitious fear shot through her.

She had watched him out of sight. Away back in her childhood a maiden relative had so strongly impressed her mind with the malevolent influences of such an act that she could never, despite her common sense, get rid of the belief.

But she was cheered the next moment by recollecting her tower. She sped quickly upstairs, then along the corridor and to another flight. This brought her to the foot of the tower, which was built at one side of the house, and rose fifteen feet above it. There were windows in it on all sides, and it gave a commanding view of the country, romantic and unusual, for the house itself was built on high ground.

Constance went straight to the window overlooking the street which led to the station. Far down there was a spot where her husband would cross the street (unless he had crossed it already) to go to the train. Fronting the crossing was a hotel known as the Essex House. She might see him, she thought, at this point. If so, she would just take one look to counteract the malignant effect of having watched him out of sight.

With expectant eyes and half-parted lips she eagerly watched the turn in the street which he might, or might

And he stayed from home two weeks. Once he left her quite ill, though out of danger, the physician assured him. Another time she asked him to take her with him and he refused. Always there was an air of secrecy, a grave abstraction, an intangible difference in his manner, as if called about an irksome business.

Meanwhile, Claire and Perley were added to their home, and they had been happy through the eight years of their married life despite the mystery of his yearly trips. For she trusted him. She was sure that he loved her; but each time as the middle of May approached she grew nervous, and in various indirect ways tried to hinder his going.

Just at that moment the sun burst out. The most unbelieving could not call the weather into question, but still the cloud sat on Mrs. Hamilton's brow. "Some women," she whispered, for she was quite alone, "would suspect their husbands of wrong-doing, to go away as Vane does every year so mysteriously"; and then she went slowly downstairs to her own room, pausing on a stair to listen to the children's voices in the dining room. "I have them at all events," she thought.

Going straight to her mirror she gazed long at her own reflection, noting the clear, colorless complexion, the dark luminous eyes, the rich brown hair with its gleams of gold, the tall, graceful figure, and the intangible charm which blent them all together into a charming personality, her own. She loved her husband deeply, and was not insensible to the compliment he paid her when going away. Why did he go, if he did not wish to? Surely business did not demand his absence. He had no relatives. He did not go for his health; besides, his trips were yearly. A wave of color sped over her face and she clutched her hands nervously.

Just then the children came rushing in, and Perley said, clasping her hand, "I am glad you are pretty, mamma. I should hate to have a homely one, shouldn't you, Claire?"

"I should get used to it in time, I presume," said the precise little maiden.

Mrs. Hamilton took them both in her arms and hugged them tightly for a moment. Then she made them tidy for school, but instead of letting them go off alone, she put on a street dress and went with them.

"I will go with you a little way," she said.

"O mamma, will you, how far?" asked Perley.

"Perhaps as far as the Essex House. I want to see Mrs. Fry. She is at work in the laundry this week, I hear. I must see her in regard to our washing."

But most of all she wished to learn something about the woman who had spoken to her husband. How she wished she had looked at her through the field glass she had in the tower! But it had not occurred to her at the time. As it was, she had only a rather vague idea that the woman was young and pretty, and the uncomfortable conviction of jealousy on her own part, which she must try to rid herself of speedily. What better way than to learn something about the woman, and her object in speaking to her husband? She would not ask foolish questions, but if the desired information came to her, well and good.

His Reference.

In the course of a conversation between two men at the club last night one of them jokingly remarked that a man with a "cheek" could get anything he desired, and he backed up his statement with the following story:

One of his friends, a merchant, had advertised for a porter. A big, burly Irishman applied for the job. After looking him over the merchant was satisfied with his appearance; the only objection was the question of references, and the Irishman did not seem to have a very good one. "Can you get no better reference than this?" asked the merchant. "O yis, Sir; I kin git ye the very best kind of a wan, if that's all ye want, Sir; and I don't have to go far for it, either. Me father and me mother, Sir, live down the strath, and they've known me all me life—"

And he landed the job.

A Penurious Deacon.

The late Rev. Dr. Fay, once settled at Leominster, when in charge of another parish had a close fistled deacon who occasionally loaned money when he could get exorbitant rates of interest.

A poor widow who owned a small homestead applied to the deacon for a loan, and he let her have it. The interest mentioned in the note was 9 per cent.

Dr. Fay heard of the transaction and took the deacon to task for the exorbitant demand.

"When the Lord looks down from heaven, deacon, and sees that note, how can you justify your act?" he asked.

"Dr. Fay, if the Lord should look down from heaven, that 9 will look like a 6."

MOTHERHOOD

Actual Sterility in Women Is Very Rare—Healthy Mothers and Children Make Happy Homes.

Many women long for a child to bless their homes, but because of some debility or displacement of the female organs they are barren.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound more successfully than by any other medicine, because it gives tone and strength to the entire female organism, curing all displacements, ulceration and inflammation.

A woman who is in good physical condition transmits to her children the blessings of a good constitution. Is not that an incentive to prepare for a healthy maternity?

If expectant mothers would fortify themselves with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for thirty years has sustained thousands of women in this condition, there would be a great decrease in miscarriages, in suffering, and in disappointments at birth.

The following letters to Mrs. Pinkham demonstrate the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in such cases.

Mrs. L. C. Glover, Vice-President of Milwaukee Business Woman's Association, of 614 Grove Street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham— "I was married for several years and no children blessed our home. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles and I could not have any children unless I could be cured. For months I took his medicines, trying in vain for a cure, but at last my husband became disgusted and suggested that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; this I did, and I improved steadily in health, and in less than two years a beautiful child came to bless our home. Now we have something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. Mac P. Wharry, Secretary of the North Shore Oratorical Society, The Norman, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham— "I was married for five years and gave birth to two premature children. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me, and I am so glad I took it, for it changed me from a weak, nervous woman to a strong, happy and healthy one within seven months. Within two years a lovely little girl was born, which is the pride and joy of our household. Every day I bless Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for the light, health and happiness it brought to our home."

If any woman thinks she is sterile, or has doubts about her ability to carry a child to a mature birth let her write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., whose advice is free to all expectant or would-be mothers. She has helped thousands of women through this anxious period.

Women suffering with irregular or painful menstruation, leucorrhoea, displacement, ulceration or inflammation of the womb, that bearing down feeling or ovarian trouble, backache, bloating or nervous prostration, should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound holds the record for the greatest number of actual cures of woman's ills, and accept no substitute.

Many Women Have Been Benefited by Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Medicine.

Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

In each package of LION COFFEE you get one full pound of Pure Coffee. Insist upon getting the genuine. (Lion head on every package.)

The Dog and His Friends.

This little anecdote is a standing joke on one of the best known mathematics professors in Dartmouth college. One day during a recitation in trigonometry a little black dog strayed into the room. The professor suddenly looking over his glasses saw the dog, and, thinking he would make a little fun, said: "Take that dog out of here. There's dogs enough here now." A fellow in the front seat got up, and giving the dog a kick out of the door, said: "Get out of here, you, one up's enough."

HAVE YOU COWS?

If you have cream to separate a good Cream Separator is the most profitable investment you can possibly make. Delay means daily waste of time, labor and product.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS save $10.- per cow per year over all gravity setting systems and $5.- per cow over all imitating separators. They received the Grand Prize or Highest Award at St. Louis.

Buying trashy cash-in-advance separators is penny wise, dollar foolish. Such machines quickly lose their cost instead of saving it.

If you haven't the ready cash DE LAVAL machines may be bought on such liberal terms that they actually pay for themselves.

It has been suggested that there be displayed during the Jubilee in front of every residence and business place in the city, an American flag, to the end that every place may be decorated in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the incorporation of the city.

The various dry goods houses would display in front of their stores samples of all sizes of bunting flags, and take orders for them for delivery in time for the Jubilee, it is believed that hundreds of flags would be sold and the appearance of the city greatly improved, not only on this date, but on other holidays in future.

With a drill by the Detroit battalion of state troops and the Flint Union Blues; also Detroit Commandery, Knights Templar, the Naval Reserve of Detroit, an exhibition drill by Flint Canton of Odd Fellows and the Uniform Rank of Knights of Pythias; also fire department runs on both June 7th and 8th, together with the fire works, and an abundance of music by many bands, the indications point to plenty of amusement to fill in between the more solid portions of the program connected with the dedication of the court house, library, federal building, etc.

An effort will be made to have every automobile in the city in the parade in a division to be known as the "automobile division of New Flint." There is no doubt but that Geo. W. Hubbard, chairman of the committee on "Old Flint," will counteract the automobile division of New Flint, and in some manner show the contrast as representing "Old Flint."

The plans are now to have the rapid firing gun which is to be brought here in charge of a representative of the state military board, fire a salute of fifty rounds at sunrise on the morning of June 7th, and at seven o'clock to have the city bell give fifty strokes. On the arrival of the vice-president's train, every whistle in the city is to be blown and every bell to be rung.

As showing the general character of the celebration, and the co-operation that governs in all quarters, it is interesting to note that the Chinese laundries contributed fifteen dollars to the Jubilee fund, in fact C. L. East, chairman of the soliciting and finance committee, has found instances very rare indeed where contributions were withheld or refused.

Jan. A. Button, postmaster, has arranged to have an entire working postoffice, complete in the parade, having mailing machines and everything arranged on foot.
