A PRETTY JUNE WEDDING

Of One of Chelsea's Belles and an Ann Arbor Young Man.

The wedding of Miss Alice Zoe BeGole to Mr. Geo. W. Weeks, jr., of Ann Arbor, which occurred at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. BeGole Wednesday evening, June 7, was one of the largest and most charming home weddings held in Chelsea in some time, about 100 guests being present. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the decorations throughout being in pink and white.

The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. Thos. Holmes, D. D., and at the appointed time, 8:30 o'clock, the wedding party marched through an aisle formed by 10 young ladies, members of the "Dear Dozen," who held broad white ribbons trimmed with smilax, from a lace booth in the dining room to the parlor, where under a canopy of white trimmed with smilax and maiden hair ferns, with a background of white and ferns, and in front of them a white altar, festooned with smilax and ferns, the full ring ceremony was performed. The Lohengrin wedding march was played during the march by Miss Mabel Bacon. The young ladies who formed the aisle were the Misses Emilie Steinbach, Linna Mills, Lenore Curtis, Ethel Cole, Nellie Savage, Edith Bacon, Lily Wackenhut, Mabel McGuinness, Edith Boyd and Mrs. Harvey Spiegelberg. The wedding party was preceded by the ushers, Messrs. Roy Horndorf, of Rochester, N. Y., and LaMont BeGole, brother of the bride. Following them were the bridesmaids, Miss Lois Foerster, of Ypsilanti, and Miss Camilla Potts, of Chicago. They were dressed in gowns of pink silk mull over white silk and carried pink carnations. Preceding the bride came the little flower girl, Miss Marion Schmidt, strewing the bride's path with white blossoms which she plucked from a large bunch of white carnations and roses. The bride entered with her maid of honor, Miss Ethel Bacon. The bride was attired in a gown of white chiffon over white satin, an train, with pearl yoke, and wore a bridal veil caught with lilies of the valley. Her bouquet was of white roses. Miss Bacon was attired in white silk and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom's man was Mr. Charles Buris, of Ann Arbor.

After the ceremony a four course wedding supper was served which was very dainty in its details. Mr. and Mrs. Weeks were presented with many handsome gifts by their numerous friends. To his bride the groom gave a ring set with pearls, to the maid of honor and the bridesmaids, rings set with opals, to the best man and ushers stick pins with the monogram B-W engraved on them.

The couple went for a brief wedding trip and will be at home to their friends after July 5 at 841 West Washington street, Ann Arbor.

Some Useful Improvements.

The H. S. Holmes Mercantile Co. are making some decided improvements in their store that will be greatly appreciated by their customers. At the head of the stairs on the second floor they are installing toilet rooms for ladies and gentlemen, which will prove to be both a comfort and convenience to all who are in the habit of trading with them. They have also leased the whole upper floor over Freeman Bros. store, except 17 feet in the rear. This room will be connected with the second floor of the Holmes store by an archway which will be closed off at night with fireproof doors. The room will be used for the storage and display of large floor rugs, linoleums, lace curtains and shades. It will give the firm a much needed addition to their floor space which has been considerably crowded for some time past.

The Late Mrs. Elizabeth Musbach.

Mrs. Elizabeth Musbach died at her home near Francisco Tuesday, June 6, aged 62 years, 2 months and two days. She survived her husband Jacob J. Musbach just 6 weeks and 3 days. The funeral was held Thursday afternoon, June 8, at the German M. E. church, Sylvan, Rev. H. Lenz officiating, and her remains were buried beside those of her husband. Her sons-in-law bore her to her last resting place.

The deceased was born in New York City April 4, 1843, and came to Francisco with her parents at the age of 5 years. They settled on the Caroline Notten place, which was the old homestead. She was married to John Jacob Musbach Jan. 4, 1864, and they lived one year on the old farm, then moved to their late home where they lived the remainder of their lives. To her 10 children were born, eight girls and two boys, all of whom survive her. She also leaves 28 grandchildren and one sister Mrs. Philip Schweinfurth to mourn her loss. Mrs. Musbach was a devoted christian and was a member of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Buchanan-Lamb.

The marriage of Miss Luella Ione Buchanan to Mr. Jacob Lamb, of Detroit, took place Wednesday, June 7, at high noon, at the home of the bride's guardian, Homer H. Boyd. The impressive ceremony was performed by Rev. J. I. Nickerson, of Mt. Clemens. Robert Buchanan, of Dexter, grandfather of the bride, was present and gave her away. The bride was gowned in white crepe de chene and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. The house was tastefully decorated in ferns and white roses.

There were 40 relatives and friends present and an elegant lunch was served with sweet peas as place cards. Mr. and Mrs. Lamb will be at home to their friends after June 20 at 268 Merrick avenue, Detroit.

Reception and Presentation.

A very pleasant reception took place at the G. A. R. hall Friday afternoon, at which 20 ladies were present, most of them members of the W. R. C. The reception was in honor of Mrs. Clarissa Sawyer and Mrs. Lewis Winans, both of whom are about to leave Chelsea. Mrs. Sawyer is about to remove to Albion to reside with her daughter Mrs. W. B. Gildart. Mrs. Winans will next Tuesday, June 20, become the wife of Judge Harper, of Corunna. A very handsome hand painted china chop plate was presented to Mrs. Winans by the ladies of the W. R. C. together with their best wishes for her future happiness and welfare.

High School Commencement.

The commencement exercises of the Class of '05, Chelsea high school, will begin next Sunday evening with the baccalaureate sermon by Rev. F. A. Stiles at the Congregational church.

The class day exercises will be held at the opera house Wednesday evening, June 21, and the commencement exercises will be held at the same place Thursday evening, June 22.

The commencement address will be delivered by Hon. Charles E. Townsend, of Jackson, member of congress for the second district.

He'll Learn to Swim.

There was an exciting time for a few moments Sunday afternoon at Wolf Lake. The balloon in which the "professor" makes his ascent did not inflate properly, and when it got over the middle of the lake it began to descend. The "professor" cut loose his parachute and dropped—into the water. He could not swim and the way he yelled was wonderful. Before he was reached he was unconscious and it took some time to resuscitate him. The first thing he said was "I am going to learn to swim."

Manchester has 349 children of school age in its borders.

Albert Wendt, employed on the Bearinger building at Saginaw, while at work on the third floor, backed into the elevator shaft and fell 30 feet to the bottom of the shaft. The pit was full of water, which saved his life. A badly sprained arm and bruises about the head are his only injuries.

A farmer boy out in Pennfield caught a strange animal in a trap which he had set for woodchuck, and captured two young ones that were waiting around for the release of the mother. The animal proved to be a badger. Old hunters say it is the first one captured in 20 years. It was never common in Michigan.

In an address in Kalamazoo on his favorite type of woman, Sukichi Nagai, a Japanese student, said there is too much education about an American young woman, and he would not want to marry one. He said his people did not like large women with auburn hair, but preferred the dark, petite type, with dark bright eyes. He said they do not like girls to read and talk always.

Speaker Sheridan F. Master has announced that he would like the job of United States district attorney, but that Senator Burrows has not offered it to him. The appointment will not be made for two years.

PEACE NEWS

JAPAN AND RUSSIA ARE READY TO NEGOTIATE TERMS.

NOW THE RUSSIAN PEOPLE SEE THE PROSPECT OF BETTER CONDITIONS.

BOTH POWERS ACCEPT NOTE OF ROOSEVELT AND THANK HIM.

Formal and entirely satisfactory replies have been received from Russia and Japan to the president's identical note urging them to conclude peace by direct negotiations. The two powers are ready to appoint their plenipotentiaries and the only questions as to the preliminaries is how the commissioners shall be brought together and where they will meet.

Exchanges on this point are going on between Washington, Tokio and St. Petersburg and it is expected that the decision will be announced soon after President Roosevelt returns from Virginia and that an armistice will follow immediately. So far the president has not been asked to act as an intermediary in bringing the plenipotentiaries together, and the indications are that the date and place of their meeting will be arranged by the two governments.

It is considered improbable that Mr. Roosevelt will be called upon to further exercise his good offices, though it is altogether likely that he will be the avenue through which the two powers will inform each other of the appointment of their peace commissioners and arrange their meeting place. In diplomatic circles there is a decided belief that the terms of peace will be arranged on the battlefield in Manchuria. There they would be on practically neutral territory and far removed from any influence that the powers might secretly try to exert. There, too, they would be in direct communication with their governments over telegraph lines controlled by the two governments, so the negotiations could be well guarded.

All of the diplomats believe the war is over. While the possibility of a hitch even after the negotiations are well under way, is admitted, they do not think the differences as to the final terms will reach a point where hostilities will be resumed. The spirit in which Russia accepted the outline of Japan's terms, which was laid down as the basis for formal negotiations, is accepted as proof of the czar's desire to end the war, and also his belief that peace can be restored without working any humiliation or any great hardship to Russia. Immediately following the publication of the president's note it was announced from St. Petersburg in a statement apparently inspired, that Russia was ready to name her plenipotentiaries as soon as Japan selected hers.

The announcement of the president's success in bringing the warring nations together was a surprise to practically all foreign diplomats. Without any knowledge of the details they knew that the president was seeking to effect an amicable understanding that would end the war, but they expected that the preliminary negotiations would drag along for days and probably for weeks. They were wholly unprepared for such prompt results.

The Japanese minister was outspoken with regard to the move made by the president. He said: "It is the most admirable piece of statesmanship I have ever seen. It is entirely based upon the noble idea of humanity and civilization. It will be regarded as the beacon light of the civilized world to be followed in international transactions, and I am sure that the suggestion made in that manner by the president will be promptly accepted by Japan."

The Russian government has communicated to the administration at Washington its assent to the publication of Russia's reply to President Roosevelt's appeal, at the same time thanking him warmly for the friendly and lofty spirit in which it was conceived.

The Russian experiment in parliamentarism will begin in September. The emperor has already given his approval to the scheme now being finally but formally reviewed by the council of state for a bicameral legislative body consisting of a lower house called the gosudarstvennaya дума ("imperial дума"), and an upper house, gosudarstvennaya sovet, or the present council of the empire, with power to formulate legislation, discuss the budget, interpolate ministers, etc., but reserving in the emperor's own hands the final authority.

The elections will take place during the coming summer. Although the scheme clings with desperation to the essence of autocracy, it marks the beginning of the end. The die once cast there can be no retreat, and the regime which will be inaugurated will prove only to be a transitory bridge over which absolutism must cross to constitutionalism.

Peace and a constitution appear simultaneously on the Russian horizon. The proclamation of the parliament either in the form of a manifesto or as a ukase will be promulgated within a few days.

TURN ON JOHN D.

Boston Baptists Stirring Up Warm Protest.

Rev. W. P. Lovett, of the Wealthy Avenue Baptist church, of Grand Rapids, is to take charge of a propaganda in Michigan against the influence of John D. Rockefeller's "tainted money," so injurious to the entire church. The movement is headed by Rev. Herbert Johnson, of Boston, one of the most prominent young Baptist preachers of the country, and even before the Congregationalists took up the discussion of the Rockefeller gift, he had excited comment through the east by his open denunciation of Rockefeller, so that, as Mr. Lovett points out, the protests were begun in the Baptist church.

"The silence of the Baptist ministers on this question," said Mr. Lovett, "has given the people of the country the opinion that our denomination as a whole is, by reason of acceptance of gifts from Mr. Rockefeller, afraid to voice any objections."

Electric Chair in View.

Fred Castor, a noted crook who escaped from Jackson prison hospital June 23, 1904, while feigning illness, is under arrest at Columbus, O., for shooting an officer dead while resisting arrest. He now faces a charge of murder and the electric chair after a career filled with nifty deeds. The first prison record of Castor, as far as known, was his sentence to four years at Ionia reformatory from Kalamazoo in December, 1898, on a charge of breaking and entering a house in the night time. His home was at Flint and friends interceded for a parole, which was granted as a New Year's gift by Gov. Pingree December 31, 1900. His parole expired April 13, 1902, and a month later Castor was again in the toils for a dare-devil act in Bay City. He was later captured in Saginaw, after a pistol duel in the streets with the officers, and was sentenced to four years at Jackson, in June, 1902. In the spring of 1902 Castor was taken ill and for three months was in the hospital of the prison, with Fred Van Kaul, another prisoner, as his nurse. On the morning of June 23 it was discovered that Castor and Van Kaul had cleverly escaped, Castor having posed as an invalid until the opportune time, when they sawed the bars of a window and, with ropes made of bed clothes, dropped to the roof of the east wing and then to the ground.

GRAND RAPIDS SUFFERS FROM THE FLOOD AND SMALLPOX.

THE VERNON BANK ROBBED OF MONEY AND POSTAGE STAMPS.

CASTOR WHO ESCAPED FROM JACKSON, FOR THE ELECTRIC CHAIR.

Grand Rapids' Peril.

The Grand Rapids' board of health decided Monday to order closed all of the city schools and churches on account of the smallpox epidemic. The board will also act with the officials at Reed's lake and close Ramona pavilion, the summer theater, at that resort. The Holland Reformed church will refuse to close and see if the authority of the board is legally enforceable. The city has been fighting smallpox for weeks and the fifth light by the receding waters may cause a serious increase in the death list. The board of health has warned every householder in the flooded area to clean and disinfect his property. The situation is serious. The pesthouse is filled and tents are required for the overflow patients. There are deaths almost every day. There are 64 cases in the city, nearly half of these developing within a few days. Churches and schools were ordered closed in the district south of Cherry street and east of Jefferson avenue. All of these churches but one obeyed the instructions. The East Street Christian Reformed church refused to close, but policemen interfered with the services and dispersed the congregation. The consistory members declare the board of health had no right to close some of the churches and leave others open, and will sue the city.

Vernon Bank Robbery.

The Exchange bank of Garrison & Sergeant, was broken into Friday night and $110 in money and $500 in postage stamps taken. The robbers broke into the section house of the D. & M. and secured therefrom some of the tools with which the job was done. They drilled and blew open the outer door, yet strange to say, neither of the explosions was heard, and the first known of the robbery was when the store in which the bank is located was opened for business Saturday morning. Papers were scattered all over the floor, but so far as known none was taken. The bank does not lose anything, as it had recently taken out burglary insurance for $3,000. The postmaster had just deposited about $100 in money and $500 in stamps in the bank for safe keeping. After rifling the safe, the robbers stole a team of horses and a buggy from the barn of H. B. McLaughlin, with which they made their escape.

Thrilling Escape.

Leo Rathun, Geo. Lamb and Herbert Henry had a narrow escape from being burned to death on Blossom lake. They were spearing, and had aboard a five-gallon can of gasoline. In filling the jack, which held two gallons, they spilled some of the gasoline on the outside of the lamp and it took fire. One of the boys discovered that the can was open and threw it into the lake. The gasoline became ignited and the can exploded, scattering the burning fluid about on the water. To save themselves they jumped and dived down, swimming under water until they had passed the mass of burning fluid on the surface. They reached shore in safety. George Lamb had both hands severely burned, but the other two men escaped injury. The boat was burned up.

Killing Farmers' Stock.

Cattle killing, which was broken up 10 years ago, has again started in a different way. A cow belonging to Farmer James Perry, of Alpena township, was killed in the woods near the pasture. The hide was removed and sold to a local hide buyer for 50 cents. The carcass was left in the brush, where it was found by Mrs. Perry. A milch cow, valued at $50, owned by John Sezonosky, a dairy farmer adjoining, was killed in the same manner the following day. The hide was sold to another dealer. The man is described as a young stranger. Farmers of the neighborhood offer $100 reward for the slaughterer's capture.

WORK DONE

THE WORK OF THE SESSION OF STATE LEGISLATURE DONE.

RESULTS PLEASE GOVERNOR WARNER, SO HE FRANKLY STATES.

IMPORTANT MEASURES THAT BECAME LAW BRIEFLY NOTED.

With the usual horseplay in the closing hours of the forty-third legislature of Michigan concluded its work for the 1905 regular session, and while final adjournment will not take place until June 17, no further business will be transacted. The galleries of both houses were crowded with visitors almost up to the last minute of the session which lasted until 12 o'clock midnight Wednesday. "I am highly gratified at the work of the legislature of 1905," said Gov. Warner. "The appropriations are reasonably low, the railroad legislation gives the roads no advantage over the people, and the primary bill going beyond the platform, is in line with the people's wishes."

The legislature of 1905 was in session five months, and held sittings on 94 days. The house has received 905 bills, the senate 450. In the house one committee on towns and counties, Chairman Fisk, reported 55 bills, all of which passed.

The legislature has provided for two new state boards—the state board of accountancy and the securities commission. The state tax commission has been reorganized. The highway commission has been re-created. One new institution, or institutional experiment, has been established, the tuberculosis hospital.

An important addition to the judiciary of the state is provided in the bill for juvenile courts.

Another judicial change is the passage of the Brown bill, allowing trial judges to have an advisable maximum in imposing indeterminate sentence, and requiring the pardon board to look into each case upon the expiration of the minimum sentence.

Next to judiciary legislation important work has been done in tax legislation. The Read bill to change the tax on vessels from an ad valorem tax assessable locally to a tonnage tax payable to the primary school fund caused much discussion.

The tax commission now has power to equalize between railroad and general properties, and sleeping car companies are to be taxed. The state tax commission is to be reduced to three members and the attorney general has been given authority to examine the books of railroad companies.

The railroads have not fared well, while the electric railways, which are desired by the farmers, and are rivals of the railroads, have been treated royally. Two new powers of importation have been conferred on electric railway companies—under the Eichhorn bill they were given the power of eminent domain and under the Simpson bill the right to own steam boat lines. The "Q. R. & I." fare bill failed miserably, and if the Bailie bill to cut out damages for suffering of persons injured in accidents and who die from their injuries, advantages railroads, the houses were unaware of at the time, and the house has repudiated this act by voting for a repeal bill.

When it was thought that the omission of the subrogation clause in the insurance policy bill would help the railroads, the clause was promptly restored. Both in this and in the Bailie bill the railroad interest was not known at the time of passage, and when it was known things were different. The Simpson bill to make railroads common carriers of live stock passed the house, and only narrowly failed in the senate.

Corporations in general have received safe and sane treatment. This is true with regard to bills that have passed and bills that have been killed. The Smith bill releasing certain corporations from obligation to file lists of stockholders was held up in the house committee. The Lord bill, requiring patent rights, copyrights, good will, etc. to be included in company statement, passed both houses, and it is expected it will be a serious curative for overwatering of stock.

Although important because of the interest taken in the subject, the labor and liquor legislation of the session is very slight. The only labor bill to become law is the Duncan bill to prohibit women working at polishing or buffing. Legislation for or against the liquor dealers has failed, except the provision in the general primary law to close saloons on primary days. All of the anti-cigarette bills failed.

In public health and education a number of important matters have been done. The state board of health has been reorganized. The state board of education has been granted the repeal of the one mill tax, and the deaf schools of the state are brought more under its supervision. School districts may now bond themselves without asking Lansing the first real home rule bill. The powers of the state superintendent have been increased. The new compulsory attendance law makes the full year the necessary term of attendance and makes county deputies truant officers. The school legislation of 1905 is thought by the department to be the most important in years.

Since sobering up Sawalk says that he remembers nothing of the affair.

God never visits one church in order to vanquish another.

In general state affairs the bill that has attracted most attention is the Holmes bill regulating the speed of automobiles. The game and fish laws that were passed were the result of able discussion and wise compromises, and do not effect any very great changes.

The bank legislation has been toward conservatism and security. The Partlow bill, allowing state banks to organize in cities of 1,000 or less, with a capital of $10,000, was killed. Rep. Lord's bills to prevent fraudulent manipulation of bank assets, to raise the necessary capitalization of loan societies from $50,000 to $100,000, to require two examinations yearly of all banks in the state outside of reserve cities, instead of one each year, as at present, to widen the scope of investible securities and create a securities commission, all passed both houses. The house approved the administration bill for the state examination of private banks, but it failed in the senate.

The primary bill that has been passed and signed is not what everybody wanted, but it is more of what more people wanted than any other measure that was presented. Else it would not have passed. The primary bill, whatever its mechanism may prove to be, is in its terms a worthy type of the hard working, conscientious, compromising legislature of 1905. There is no doubt that at the opening of the session the majority of house and senate were in favor of a strict platform bill. The surrender of Gov. Warner, after he held to the platform for more than half the session, is only a type of many surrenders of personal wish for popular claim.

The triumph of the house figures over the senate figures makes the total appropriations by committee recommendation $5,174,794.82. The continuing appropriations provided by law amount to $1,369,951.76, and thus the total appropriation for 1905-6 will be $7,124,746.58. With two new state institutions, with all allowances for growth and extension, the total this session is only $166,991.78.

The appropriations in detail follow:

Flint's Jubilee.

The spectacular parade of soldiers, sailors, the G. A. R., Masons and other fraternities having passed into memory, and the greeting to Vice-President Fairbanks and the laying of the cornerstone of the new federal building, which proved an occasion of much enthusiasm, having also become history, Flint, in the celebration of her golden jubilee Wednesday turned to the more intellectual side of life and made the dedication of the new Carnegie library and the dedication of the new Genesee county court house the central figures in the second day's program.

The Saginaw Strike.

The street railway men's strike in Saginaw and Bay City is attended with violence, though public sympathy is with the strikers. In Saginaw Tuesday Fred Harris, a strike breaker from Chicago, shot and killed Henry Wiek, Jr., who shouted an abusive remark to him as a car passed. Two others were wounded. Terrence Kelly and Wallace A. Douglas, both were shot through the left legs and their injuries, while painful, are not likely to be serious.

LATE NEWS

NORWAY BREAKS AWAY FROM SWEDEN AND THE KING.

THE CHICAGO STRIKE STILL WORKING VIOLENCE AND DEATH.

TWO MURDERERS END THEIR ANXIETY BY COMMITTING SUICIDE.

Norway is Quiet.

A remarkable calm, accompanied by stern determination, pervades Norway. Beyond the display of the new Norwegian flags from the buildings in Christiania and portraits of the provisional governors in the shop windows, which attract small crowds, there are no visible signs that Norway is in the throes of a revolution. Norwegian and Swedish merchants continue business uninterrupted. Large interstate deals involving thousands of pounds, and providing for future payments are being signed daily as usual. The officials here express confidence that Sweden finally will accept the situation.

While, however, determination is evident everywhere, intense anxiety is apparent, and the members of the cabinet are extremely busy in organizing the new government and providing for eventualities. A member of the cabinet said it was not expected that Sweden would declare war, but in that event, he added, Norway would be prepared. The army has been mobilized for annual drill and the government has taken precautions to lay in an adequate stock of military stores at advantageous points. The minister said that the popular feeling of the country favored a republic and expressed the hope that the United States would be the first to recognize the new government. The Norwegians do not expect any difficulty abroad.

Wearing Out a Strike.

The Chicago strike resulted in another death Saturday night, when Samuel Robinson was killed by Frank Austin, a colored policeman who was guarding a wagon owned by Rothschild & Co. The wagon was passing Forty-third and State streets when one of the crowd of men shouted at the driver. No violence was offered, but, according to the statements of witnesses, the colored policeman became excited and, drawing his revolver, fired directly into the crowd of men. The bullet struck a silver coin in Robinson's vest pocket and, being deflected, passed through his abdomen. The policeman was arrested.

While Frederick Jones, a colored teamster, was unloading some lumber at an uncompleted building at West Eighteenth and Sangamon streets, a mob numbering 1,000 men, women and children gathered around him and commenced to throw stones and other missiles. Policemen Benson and Schempfer, who were guarding the wagon, drew clubs and attempted to drive back the mob, but with little effect, both officers being struck several times with stones. While the trouble was at its height, John Hince, a wagon teamster, forced his way through the crowd, and coming up to Jones when he was stooping over on some lumber, struck Jones over the head with an ax, cutting a gash in his scalp three inches long. Hince struck a second time, taking off several fingers of Jones's left hand, which he raised to protect himself. Hince then attempted to escape, and Officer Benson, who started in pursuit, was greatly hampered by the crowd, which tried to shield Hince. Hince was captured by the officer after a chase of two squares. The condition of Jones is serious.

A Murder Mystery Solved.

The mystery of the murder of Hilda Schubert on March 22, last, has been cleared, through affidavits secured by Chief of Police William M. Clemens, of Wheeling, W. Va. The two men who were responsible for her death have committed suicide, according to the story told by the wife of one of them. A four days' search for the missing Schubert girl resulted in the finding of her body hidden by brush in a gully on Chapline hill. Her rings, watch and money were missing and finger marks on her neck indicated that she had been strangled. A month after the murder, Bradford Powell, alias Dawson, shot himself through the heart on a farm back of Ravens Rock, W. Va., and a few days later Oscar Perry Devore, alias Samuel Platt, shot himself at New London, O., and after his revolver had been taken from him, went to a barn and hanged himself. Neither man made a statement. Now Sadie Devore, wife of Oscar Perry Devore, voluntarily makes an affidavit that her husband came back from Wheeling about April 1 and told her that he and another man had killed a girl on a hill back of Wheeling. He was constantly in fear of arrest and the crime preyed on his mind. When he learned that Powell had ended his life he became despondent and a few days later ended his own life.

GAS AND WATER

IS ONE AS NECESSARY AS THE OTHER?

Citizens of Large Cities Say It Is.

New York, June 13.—In the recent agitation here about the price of gas, the demand for lower rates was supported by the argument that every resident is as dependent upon a supply of gas as upon a supply of good water.

It has come to pass that the day laborer uses gas as his only fuel for cooking, because of economy, and the rich man uses gas on account of its convenience. Gas for lighting, with modern improvements in burners, is cheaper, better and more satisfactory than any other kind of light. Gas sells at $1.00 per thousand cubic feet in large cities and from that to as high as $3.00 in smaller towns.

The consumer of gas in the country uses Acetylene (pronounced a-set-a-lene), and each user makes his own gas and is independent of Gas and Electric Companies. Acetylene is a more perfect illuminant than the gas sold by the big gas companies in the cities, and the cost to the smallest user is about the equivalent of city gas at 85 cents per thousand.

Acetylene is the modern artificial light, the latest addition to the many inventions that have become daily necessities. The light from an acetylene flame is soft, steady and brilliant, and in quality is only rivaled by the sun's rays. If water and a solid material known as Calcium Carbide are brought into contact, the immediate result is the making of this wonderful gas. The generation of acetylene is so simple that experience or even apparatus is not necessary to make it. If it is desired to make it for practical lighting, and to keep it for immediate use, then a small machine called an "Acetylene Generator" is employed. There are many responsible concerns making acetylene generators. In practice, this gas is distributed in small pipes throughout buildings, grounds, or entire cities and towns, in the same manner as ordinary city gas. Acetylene is the only satisfactory means of lighting isolated buildings located in the country or suburbs at a distance from city gas or electric plants.

Floating Nests.

When mother grebe is ready to lay her eggs she searches out some retired spot, among the reeds and rushes of a lonely lake, and there she scrapes and pushes together a low heap of mud and decayed reeds, says C. William Beebe, in Recreation. Here on the water-logged islet—this merest semblance of a nest—she broods her eggs. A moose splashing among the nearby lily pads may send floods of water over the sitting bird, or the winds may disentangle the little raft of reeds, sending it scudding to the farther end of the lake, but the bright eyes of the mother bird never falter. She carefully covers her eggs with decayed leaves whenever hunger forces her to leave them. Although she does not weave the reeds, yet in some way they hold together until the last little grebe crawls to the edge and plunges off head-first. Or he may leap upon his mother's back and thus ride proudly forth into the world, exchanging the soaked, decayed leaves of his cradle for her feathers.

RAILROAD RATE LEGISLATION.

Testifying before the Senate Committee at Washington, Inter-State Commerce Commissioner Prouty said in discussing the proposition to give to that Commission the power to regulate railway rates: "I think the railways should make their own rates. I think they should be allowed to develop their own business. I have never advocated any law, and I am not now in favor of any law, which would put the rate making power into the hands of any commission or any court. While it may be necessary to do that some states at the present time, while it is done in some countries, I am opposed to it. It is all the property that the railway has got. The rest of its property is not good for anything unless it can charge a rate. Now it has always seemed to me that when a rate was fixed, if that rate was an unreasonable rate, it deprives the railroad company of its property pro tanto. It is not necessary that you should confiscate the property of a railroad; it is not necessary that you should say that it shall not earn three per cent or four per cent. When you put in a rate that is inherently unreasonable, you have deprived that company of its rights, of its property, and the Circuit Court of the United States has jurisdiction under the fourteenth amendment to restrain that. I have looked at these cases a great many times, and I can only come to the conclusion that a railroad company is entitled to charge a fair and reasonable rate, and if any order of a commission, if any statute of a state legislature takes away that rate, the fourteenth amendment protects the railway company."

Peculiarity of Swiss Lake.

Lake Morat in Switzerland, has the curious property, every tenth year, of turning red, owing to the presence of certain water plants which are not found in any other lake in the world.

Meaning of "Impeachment."

An impeachment is not a conviction. To impeach is to charge with a crime or misdemeanor; especially, to charge, as an officer, with misbehavior in office.

LIVE STOCK

Baby Beef.

The other day I was asked by a neighbor why it was, if baby beef was so much in demand by the packers and consumers, more of it was not produced by farmers. I may as well answer through the Farmers' Review. The chief reason is that most farmers have not the kind of cows that can produce calves able to grow into baby beef. You can't make baby beef out of any kind of an animal. It takes a calf of fairly good breeding—a high grade—to grow up into a good sized animal before the flesh has become beefy.

To get baby beef making conditions we must have high grade cows of the Durham, Hereford, Angus or Gallo-way breeds. If the grade is way up, say seven-eighths pure, then we can hope for a calf that will grow rapidly under good conditions of feed. At the present time I am not afraid that the market for baby beef will be overstocked, for I know that American farmers will not greatly change their ways in this generation. We have been importing improved breeds for half a life-time now, and yet most of our farmers are breeding with nothing in sight in the way of a standard.

All right, we who have the high grades will continue for some time longer putting on the market baby beef and making money out of it. Not only is there a demand for it here, but there is a great demand for it in foreign countries, and that demand is growing.—Albert Hicks, Cook Co., Ill., in Farmers' Review.

Horse Notes.

For the mare in foal a increased quantity of good food is required. Some farmers object to working a mare in foal, but if they are not worked too much the mares and subsequent colts, will do better than if the mares are left idle in the pasture. Mares in foal should be worked regularly and should not be made to do work that will require hard pulling, nor should they be kept unusually long hours at work.

Idleness is not a help to the horse at any time.

The farmer that puts his mare with foal into a box stall, leaves her without exercise, and feeds her heavily, is giving her conditions detrimental to both her and her unborn foal.

When the horse's food is abundant exercise should also be abundant.

Oats continue to be the best grain that can be given a horse in normal condition.

By intelligent feeding all horses may be kept in a state where little doctoring will be needed.

As the horse never needs to lay on fat (except to please the eye) a food rich in protein will be found more profitable than a ration even slightly overbalanced on the side of the carbohydrates.

Harper Co., Kans.

Cost of Making Beef.

It has been accepted as proved that the younger an animal the lower is the cost of putting on flesh and fat. Some experiments have been made to prove this, but the data are too meager to permit of the building of very strong arguments on them. Professor Mumford of the Illinois station has taken up the question and is making an experiment that will at least add to the volume of the data if it does not settle the question, which it probably will not. Herds of various ages are being fed at the station, and these will be marketed as fast as ready and careful reports compiled of the cost of gain made on each lot. There is a point beyond which it does not pay a farmer to keep an animal, even though that animal is all the time gaining in weight. The station is trying to find the point at which steers feeding must stop, if a profit is to be made. Every day after that point the farmer is losing money and losing the time he is putting on the care of the animal.

Average Stock Prices.

There was a time when the man that received an average price for the cattle, horse, or sheep he sent to market made money on it, but that time is not now. Then land was cheap, labor was cheap, and grain was cheap. Now all of these are high, and the average price of an animal does not often equal the cost of the labor and feed that have gone into him. This condition has grown upon us till we find ourselves facing the necessity of working out of it by producing animals that will sell for more than they do at present or discovering some combination of feeds and care that will lessen the cost of production. It is well to work along both lines.

Choice Cattle.

One of the most common expressions to be met with in the market reports is "choice cattle are in demand at top and nearly top prices. That is the kind of cattle that it pays best to raise. It does not take any more time daily to feed an animal that will make one of the choice kind than it does to feed one that will rate far down in the list. Moreover, it will not require so many days of care, for it sometimes happens that the choice animal is one that has made his growth in a year's less time than the poorer animal. The choice animal is probably always a pure bred animal or a high grade.

HUNT FOXES WITH EAGLES.

Strange Sport That is Enjoyed by Natives of Siberia.

A Siberian correspondent of London Spherer sends some photographs relating to a form of fox hunting which is probably unique. The hunting of foxes with eagles takes place among the Kirghese, in the southwest district of Siberia, known as the general government of the steppes. It is a favorite sport with the Kirghese and takes place in the autumn and early winter, when the foxes' coats are ruddy and perfect, though hunting is not always confined to this period. The eagles selected for the purpose are powerful birds, of such weight that a small wooden support is carried by the eagle bearer. A well grown bird of more than usually fierce temperament will occasionally kill a wolf. Directly any game is seen the birds make their flight and swoop down with great precision. "One of these birds has, to my knowledge," writes our correspondent, "killed seventeen foxes in the last six weeks. I can vouch for this killing of foxes by eagles, for I personally took all these photographs and saw the whole sport from beginning to end. Years ago I wrote a letter to the Field, telling how foxes swarm up small pine trees in Florida when a 'kill' appears imminent. I have frequently seen them do so, but I was politely told what an Ananias I must be. So I fear that possibly you may desire to tell me the same thing. I can only assure you that it is a fact, which arouses no astonishment out here."

The Best of Life.

Not till life's heat is cooled,
The heading rush slowed to a quiet pace,
And every purblind passion that has ruled
Our noisier years, at last
Spurs us in vain, and weary of the race,
We care no more who loses or who wins—
Ah, not till all the best of life seems past
The best of life begins.

To tell for only fame,
Handicappings, and the fickle gusts of grace,
For place or power or gold to gild a name
Above the grave where All paths will bring us, were to lose our days;
We, on whose ears youth's passing bell
has tolled,
In blowing bubbles, even as children do,
Forgetting we grow old.

But the world widens when Such hope of trivial gain that ruled us lies
Broken among our childhood's toys, for then
We win to self-control!
And mail ourselves in manhood, and there rise
Upon us from the vast and windless height
Those cleaner thoughts that are unta
the soul.

What stars are to the night,
—The Spectator.

Whale Flesh or Beef?

Whale meat at from three to six cents a pound is to be the solution of the meat trust question, according to some Newfoundland speculators who are seeking to make a market for whale meat.

It is declared that the flesh is finer flavored than beef, more nearly suggesting venison, and is capable of being prepared in a variety of ways.

Whales are not to be found in this part of the globe in sufficient numbers to make a serious inroad into the sale of beef, but it is declared by the promoters that they have already built up a successful trade in whale meat with the West Indies, and that they shortly intend placing it upon the London market.

It is to be shipped in special steamers, and even at a price of six cents a pound will return a handsome profit, while the cheaper cuts may be retailed for half that sum.

Reckoned by Years.

There is a representative in Congress from the West whose special pride it is to recount the quaint observations of his 3-year-old daughter.

Not long ago, according to the proud father, little Ethel came to him one afternoon and informed him that she had just seen the President's wife walking with one of the ladies of the cabinet circle. "And, papa," said Ethel, "she isn't anything like as old as grandma!"

"Why, my dear!" exclaimed the congressman, "of course she isn't! Mrs. Roosevelt is a young woman! How in the world did you get any other idea?" "Well, papa," replied the youngster, "you yourself once told me that she was the first lady in the land!"—New York Times.

Joke That Was On Depew.

Senator Depew had to deny himself the pleasure of being present at a recent dinner where he was an invited guest, and so he missed a joke at his expense, which he enjoyed as much as any one, however, when it was told to him several days later. Bishop Potter was the perpetrator. Senator Depew's regrets had just been read.

"I need not tell you," said the Bishop, "how we will miss the senator, he who has for so many years charmed us with the humor of his eloquence and the logic of his anecdotes."—New York Times.

Chinese in New York.

There were 6,980 Chinese inhabitants of New York, according to the last census, but the popular estimate is that the actual number of Chinese is twice as large. Though there is a rigid federal exclusion law and few births occur in the Chinese quarters, the Chinese population seems to increase.

Thibet Poor in Minerals.

The geologist who accompanied the British mission to Thibet reports that the country is strikingly poor in valuable minerals. The largest yield of gold was .28 grain a ton of gravel, and there was no trace of coal or indigenous gems.

You Must Sleep.

If you cannot, it is due to an irritated or congested state of the brain, which will soon develop into nervous prostration. Nature demands sleep, and it is as important as food; it is a part of her building and sustaining process. This period of unconsciousness relaxes the mental and physical strain, and allows nature to restore exhausted vitality.

Dr. Miles' Nervine brings refreshing sleep, because it soothes the irritation and removes the congestion.

It is also a nerve builder; it nourishes and strengthens every nerve in your body, and creates energy in all the organs. Nothing will give strength and vitality as surely and quickly as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"During the past winter I had two attacks of LaGrippe which left me very weak, and in bad condition. I was so nervous I could not sleep. My wife, after trying different remedies, went for a doctor. The doctor was out, and a neighbor recommended Dr. Miles' Nervine, and she brought home a bottle. I had not slept for some time, and had terrible pains in my head. After taking a few doses of Nervine the pain was not so severe, and I slept. I am now taking the second bottle, and am very much improved."

HENRY M. SMITH, Underhill, Vt.
Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.

Several from around here attended Mrs. J. J. Musbach's funeral last Thursday.

Miss Helen Burg, of Chelsea, is spending the week with friends in this vicinity.

Clarence Lehman spent Saturday and Sunday with his uncle Joe Waltz near Root's station.

John Howlett has moved his house and is making preparations to build a new one on the same site.

Rev. T. Swank and wife, from near Mason, visited Rev. Fowler and friends around here Saturday and Sunday.

Conrad Seckenger, who was badly injured about three weeks ago by falling down cellar, is slowly recovering.

Quarterly meeting was well attended at the U. B. church last Sunday. In the afternoon nine persons were baptised in Clear Lake.

Wm. Cassidy and wife and son Will attended graduating exercises in Dexter last Friday night. Two of the graduates were nieces of Mrs. Cassidy.

During the severe storm Tuesday evening of last week lightning struck the Methodist church doing considerable damage. This is the second time it has been struck by lightning and the steeple was blown off once.

Waterloo township was first organized in March, 1836, under the name of East Portage. In the winter of 1846-7 the name was changed to Waterloo through the influence Patrick Hubbard. At the first election held at the home of Jeremiah Riggs 14 voters cast their ballots. Andrew Carroll was elected supervisor and Earl Pierce township clerk.

Torture of a Preacher.

The story of the torture of Rev. O. G. Moore, pastor of the Baptist church of Harpersville, N. Y., will interest you. He says: "I suffered agonies because of a persistent cough resulting from grip. I had to sleep sitting up in bed. I tried many remedies without relief, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which entirely cured my cough and saved me from consumption." A grand cure for diseased conditions of the throat and lungs. Price 50c and $1.00; guaranteed at Bank Drug Store. Trial bottle free.

Henry Dancer, wife and son Clair, of Cleveland, were guests at the home of R. S. Whalian the middle of last week.

The Ladies' Aid Society will give a strawberry social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Noah Friday evening, June 13. All are very cordially invited to attend.

There will be Children's day exercises in the M. E. church next Sunday evening, June 18. The pastor will perform the ordinance of baptism on several children at 7 o'clock.

Miss Mary Whalian, teacher of the North Lake school, asked her pupils which book they enjoyed the most during the school year, and the answer was "Little Women."

Some of the others read were "The Old Fashioned Girl," "The Tory Maid," "What a Young Girl Ought to Know," by Mary Wood-Allen, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," and "Lovey Mary," besides many short poems. Nothing will so enrich the mind as the hearing or the reading of good literature. I am glad there is one teacher who values this fact.

Miss Mary E. Whalian entertained her pupils at her pleasant home Saturday afternoon, the event being the close of a very successful school year. The afternoon was spent in playing games. Although gloomy without there was plenty of sunshine within.

After a sumptuous supper a fine program was given by the pupils, consisting of piano solos, recitations and songs. Rev. G. W. Gordon, of Chelsea, was there and took a snap shot of the happy party, and pleased the children with a few selections on his phonograph. With reluctant farewells to their teacher the party finally separated for home.

Eureka Grange will give an ice cream social at their hall on Friday evening, June 16. Everybody is invited to attend.

The Lyndon cheese factory is now receiving a good supply of milk, for which 80 cents per 100 pounds is being paid this month.

Miss Margaret Young and Mrs. Lucy Stephens gave a joint picnic for their respective schools at South Lake on Tuesday last. The day was an ideal one for a picnic and the children enjoyed themselves to the limit. The parents of the children and other members of the families were also present. Tables were set and an elegant and bountiful dinner was served. In the evening several freezers of ice cream were opened and all ate ice cream until they couldn't eat any more.

The farmer is the busiest man on earth just now. The late excessive rains have put him back so in his work and caused the weeds to grow so fast in his corn. And then the beans have to be got ready for and planted, so that on the whole he has got no time to go fishing. Rain is a very necessary commodity and the success or failure of the farm crops depends almost wholly upon it, but sometimes we get too much of a good thing and the late excessive rains was an example of it.

STRICTURE AND KIDNEY DISEASE CURED.
"I had stricture for eleven years. It finally brought on Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. I had an uncomfortable shooting pain in the groin and feeling as though something was in the urethra. My back was weak and I could scarcely stoop over. Urine was full of sediment. Had a desire to urinate frequently. Family doctors, so-called specialists, patent medicines, electric belts, all failed. I was discouraged. I had spent hundreds of dollars in vain. Finally I consulted Dr. Kennedy & Kergan as the last resort. I had heard a great deal about them and concluded from the fact that they had been established over 25 years that they understood their business. I am delighted with the results. In one week I felt better, and in a few weeks was entirely cured. Have gained sixteen pounds in weight."

AN EXCHANGE OF CONFIDENCES

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The pier was deserted when Barlow and Miss Grant came strolling up the beach from the automobile races, which had proved to be a decidedly tame diversion. Barlow had many things he wanted to say to the girl, and he wanted to say them in a place where he could be sure they would be alone and uninterrupted. The pier looked promising.

"Shall we go out?" he said, halting at the pier and addressing the girl.

"It's nearly time to dress for dinner," she demurred, consulting her watch. "Still, it does look quiet and inviting out there. Perhaps we might go out for a few minutes."

"We need a few minutes rest," he laughed as they walked down the pier. They went to the end and sat down on a stringer that made a comfortable seat. The sun had gone down, and the trees of the orange grove were shapely black silhouettes against the flaming sky. Beneath them lay a tranquil, saffron sea, shading in the distance into duller hues of gray blue and violet.

The girl leaned back against a stanchion and closed her eyes. "Isn't it perfect?" she said. "Does a twilight like this set you thinking?"

"It certainly does," said he, smiling quietly.

"What about?" she asked.

"Oh, lots of things," he replied. "My sins, sometimes."

"That's the way it affects me," she said quickly. "It sets me thinking of my sins—and of Tom."

"Tom?" he repeated questioningly, leaning forward a bit.

"Yes, dear, old, prosaic Tom," she said, "who hasn't the temperament to enjoy a twilight. Indeed, he can't enjoy much of anything but silly figures about stocks and bonds and margins."

"Your brother, Miss Grant?" he asked.

She shook her head. He waited rather impatiently for further information.

"He's back there in a stuffy office," she went on, "slaving and saving. Imagine being tied to a stuffy office day in and day out, Mr. Barlow."

"I've experienced the pleasure," he said grimly.

"Tom wants to get a certain amount of money, you see," she explained carelessly, "and when he does, he'll ask me to marry him."

"I see," said Barlow, rather stiffly, looking across the water to the orange trees.

"He's such a dear, stupid, faithful creature," she said affectionately. "You know the kind, Mr. Barlow."

He eyed her narrowly. Why had she never spoken of this man before? He felt hurt, ill treated. Up the beach the crowds were cheering lustily as the last race was finished in semi-darkness. He smiled grimly. She should never know he was hurt, anyway.

"It is strange where twilight carries one's thoughts," he said evenly. "Twilight always carries me to Margaret, no matter where she is. Just now she is in Venice, but this magic twilight takes me to her."

"Yes?" said the girl with languid interest.

"I should be there with her now," said he, "if it wasn't for the fact that my affairs here won't let me get away for more than a fortnight at a time."

We'd be poking about the galleries together and invading those strange little shops, picking up odd bits of tapestry and old brasses. I spent one happy, happy winter in Venice when she and her mother were there." He paused. "It's to be in June as soon as she returns," he said quietly.

The girl sat, silently for a time, watching the saffron sea change slowly to a dull gray in the dying light. Then she arose and laughed lightly.

"Come, we must go back. It's getting very late," she said.

He arose and silently they walked together down the pier. The last red glow was fading in the West. Myriad little stars were peeping out of the purple back above them.

"I think," said the girl, "that our's will be in October."

Barlow said nothing. He strode along in moody silence, his hands thrust deep into his pockets.

"Of course you're fond of Tom?"

"He's the dearest boy that ever lived," she said with enthusiasm.

Halfway down the pier Barlow stopped short. He touched a match to the cigar between his teeth and blew out a cloud of white smoke. He watched it drift away on the still air. Then he came a step nearer the girl.

"Hang Tom!" he growled irrelevantly.

The girl drew away, a bit frightened at his vehemence.

"What?" she gasped.

"Hang Tom!" he repeated.

She stood staring at him in speechless amazement.

"I don't want you to marry Tom," he burst out, "nor anyone else, for that matter—but me. I've loved you from the first minute I laid eyes on you—and—oh, forgive me for making such an ass of myself!"

Her hands were clutching the guard-rail of the pier. He thought she shivered slightly.

"We must go back, at once." There was quiet force in his voice.

"Oh, I'm sorry—awfully sorry," she said contritely. "I didn't know about—"

"About Margaret?" He laughed harshly. "Neither did I. There isn't any Margaret. There never was. There never will be. She was an imagination to cover the wound your Tom tore in my heart. I thought I could hide my wounded pride and—"

and, yes, my love, behind her. Kindly notice how well the expedient has served," he ended with bitter irony.

Silently they finished their walk down the pier. Silently they crossed the orange grove and mounted the hotel steps. The orchestra at one end of the piazza was playing a lively march. To Barlow it sounded like a dirge. He was sick at heart and disgusted with himself.

He was aware of a vague sense of relief when the girl said good-night at the door. To his surprise, instead of going in at once, she stood looking at him with a queer light in her eyes.

"There is something I feel I really should tell you," she murmured slowly.

Barlow waited silently.

"There wasn't—that is, there isn't—"

REASON FOR WANTING RAIN.

Georgia Mountaineer Assigns a Sufficient but Peculiar Cause.

Rev. Mr. Livingston of Georgia, told this story: "A friend of mine down in one of the small towns of Georgia has many proteges among the people in the mountain country near. Several years ago there was a long dry spell in Georgia. At about the beginning of it the wife of one of the mountaineers died. The disconsolate husband followed her to the grave and was the last to leave the burying ground. His footprints remained, large and distinct, in the clay beside the grave. Six weeks afterward my friend drove out to see how the widower was doing. He was sitting in the door of his cabin staring hopelessly at the cloudless sky.

"'Ef hit would only turn in an' rain,' he said, 'I wouldn't ask nothin' of nobody.'

"The dry weather is bad for the crops," the visitor remarked.

"Tain't crops," said the widower, "hit's Miss Selmy Johnson. She swears she won't marry me until it rains."

"She lous it wouldn't be showing proper respect for my first wife to marry before my tracks in the graveyard is washed out. I shore do wish it would turn in an' rain. I been courtin' her six weeks. Good Lord, a man kaint wait on the weather forever."

THEIR FRIENDS AS TOASTS.

Witty Remark Turned Aside John Adams' Intended Rebuke. When John Adams was a young man he was invited to dine with the court and bar at the house of Judge Paine, an eminent loyalist, at Worcester.

Judge Paine gave as a toast, "The King." Some of the Whigs were about to refuse to drink it. Mr. Adams whispered to them to comply, saying, "We shall have an opportunity to return the compliment."

At length, when John Adams was desired to give a toast he gave, "The Devil." His host was about to resent the supposed indignity, but his wife calmed him, and turned the laugh upon Mr. Adams, by immediately saying, "My dear, as the gentleman has seen fit to drink to our friend, let us by no means refuse to drink to his."

"Works and Days." "Berd we now the lyre no longer; once again the dull years come; Once again, Pierian fountains waterless, on that low breeze, Hearken 'Pan is dead' re-echoes round the Isles Echinades, We melodious once enchain'd, you; now our music must be dumb."

Thus they clamor—bards who fashioned of the swooning midday sun; Maid of eve, and knew the soft conspiracies of murmuring times, Made of loves and ancient sorrow, sages of heroic times, Sang the unexhausted ocean, and red battles fought and won—

Yet not well despairing, blindly who have sought the random gleam; Beauty, following old footsteps till her track upon the hills, Left the smoke and shout of cities unremembered; roaring mills, In the valley, rosy tresses, lifted over wastes of steam.

Ab, not thus the blind old poet sang the marvels of the shield; Nor that Hebrew, things created wonderful and manifold, Chanted, nor the wise Athenian, when his Theban chorus told, All the works of man laborious only ye shall find revealed.

Common places yet more human through the furnace reddened gloom, Tones of clangorous iron, and frame a larger melody that feels, Sterner play than shepherd's piping, murmurs of relentless wheels, Songs and music of the interminable throbbing of the loom. —E. V., in the London Speaker.

Saloonkeeper's Awful Threat.

Down on the west side there is a little beer saloon run by a little old-fashioned Irishman. The saloon proper is about as big as a good-sized hall bedroom, and is furnished with a few tables and rickety chairs and a small stove. Nearly every night a lot of Irishmen of the neighborhood gather here to play forty-five and drink mixed ale. A few nights ago there was a row over a game. They broke the tables and chairs, tipped over the stove and put the place in a bad way generally.

The proprietor took the shindy quietly for about half an hour. Then when two of the bunch were in a corner trying to pound the life out of each other, he spoke up and said: "Here, now! Ye b'ys will have to quit ye'r foolin' or I'll take the cards away from ye."—New York Sun.

Explaining Norway's Handicap.

According to a recent work on Norway, the scantiness of the soil in that country is explained by some of the country people as follows: At the creation of the world the angels whose duty it was to scatter the soil forgot Norway. Seeing this, the guardian angel of the land made complaints to the Creator. What was to be done? Impossible to restart the whole of the creation for the sake of Norway. "Come, my little angels," said he, "look carefully and perhaps you may still find a little earth." The conscience-stricken angels swept the floor of heaven and the little dust they found they gathered in their draperies and scattered over the Norwegian rocks.

Height of Christ.

There is no mention in the New Testament of the height of Christ. Publius Lentulus, who was governor of Judea in the time of Christ, wrote to Tiberius Caesar describing the personal appearance of Christ. "He is a tall, well-proportioned man. He is very straight in stature. His hands are large but spreading, his arms are very beautiful. He talks little, but with great gravity, and is the handsomest man in the world."

OUT OF THE ORDINARY

Dignity of the Law. A felon and a murderer of a rather messy sort—The details were appalling, if we credit the report; But his innocence was proven, when they brought him into court, By a "lawyer in good standing."

A gentleman of pleasure wearied of domestic strife, So he hatched some petty slanders that would compromise his wife, Result: A quick divorce obtained, a woman marked for life, By a "lawyer in good standing."

A law of public justice brushed the elbows of a trust, Who did the dark and devious its energies to bust—And the man who bribed and quibbled till the right was in the dust Was a "lawyer in good standing."

A millionaire promoter who was known to be a thief, Caught gory-handed in a steal, bid fair to come to grief, So he summoned his attorney, for he knew he'd find relief In a "lawyer of good standing."

The lawyer brought the case to trial with all precaution due, The judge discerned the clink of coin and smiled as if he knew, The defendant must be innocent—you see his honor, too, Was a "lawyer in good standing." —New York Sun.

Plants as Supply Stores.

There are few plants that have not been utilized one way or another by mankind for food, paper, drugs or other purposes. Amongst many not so well known may be mentioned the Japanese wax tree, bearing bunches of fruit growing like grapes, which contain a species of wax used in making candles.

Another tree, found in the Pacific islands, and known as the candle-nut, yields a large quantity of oil, while the kernels are strung together on a stick and lighted as a candle. The fruit of the candle tree is between three and four feet in length, about an inch in diameter, and of a yellowish color. As they are seen hanging from the tree, they present the appearance of a number of wax candles, and are in such abundance as to give the idea of a chandler's shop. Some of these are grown in the Isle of Wight.

The telegraph plant, which grows in India, is a slender, erect shrub, so called because of some resemblance to signals in the motion of its trifoliate leaves—the two side ones rising and falling alternately for a time, and then resting for a period. Sometimes many of the leaves are in motion and sometimes only a few; the greatest activity being in the early morning, and not depending on the wind.—Montreal Herald.

A Prehistoric Cave Dwelling.

A prehistoric cave dwelling has recently been discovered near Wetzstein, on Lake Lucerne, in Switzerland. The entrance to this cavern has been blocked for ages by the accumulation of falling rocks and earth. Its existence being known, a party of antiquarians had the entrance passage into the cavern cleared of obstructions, and a grotto or series of caves, dating to the Stone period, was laid bare. A fine collection of stone implements, including knives, axes and spears, gigantic shells rudely ornamented, evidently drinking vessels, and dishes was discovered. In one chamber of the cavern the explorers found the remains of the bones of many extinct animals; while one section of the cave, which is believed to have been the dwelling of an important family in the Stone age, had evidently served as a workshop for the stonecutters, for here were found many stones in the process of being shaped into implements.

Tree With Interesting History.

Secretary Hitchcock recently planted in the White House grounds an oak sapling grown from an acorn taken from a George Washington oak at St. Petersburg. The Russian oak was grown from an acorn taken from a tree planted by Washington. Some Russians who were visiting the United States gathered some acorns from the Washington oak at Mount Vernon, an immense tree near the general's house, planted then in St. Petersburg, and they are now among the most splendid trees on the avenues of the Russian capital. When Secretary Hitchcock was minister to Russia, he brought home some of the acorns from these trees and planted them at his home in Missouri. It is one of the resulting saplings that he brought to Washington.

Trout That Need Ice Water.

Golden trout from an icy stream 7,000 feet up the wild sides of Mt. Whitney were one of the attractions of a fish and game show in San Francisco, says Forest and Stream. The fish were caught in Whitney creek by R. W. Requa.

With two assistants he started up the towering mountain. One of his companions turned back when a blinding snowstorm came on, but the other two proceeded.

Requa got about three dozen of the trout, which were brought down in a bucket of water and ice. Plenty of ice was kept in the tank in which the fish were shipped, and a large chunk of it floated in the water in which they lived at the pavilion.

Dwarf of the Ox Family.

One of the greatest curiosities among the domesticated animals of Ceylon is a breed of cattle known to the zoologist as the "sacred running oxen."

They are dwarfs of the whole ox family, the largest specimens of the species never exceeding 30 inches in height.—Lahore Tribune.

SET THE BURGLAR RIGHT.

Squire Was Angered at Dullness of the Intruder.

This is one of the many stories told of old Squire Latham, a Plymouth county attorney of some years back. It fully illustrates his coolness and love of method.

He was awakened one night by his wife, who told him she thought there were burglars in the house. The squire put on his dressing gown and went downstairs. In the back hall he found a rough looking man trying to open a door that led into the back yard.

The burglar had unlocked the door, and was pulling it with all his might. The squire, seeing the robber's predicament, called to him: "It don't open that way, you idiot! It slides back!"—Boston Herald.

Crab Traps a Sparrow.

On the sands near Marske-by-the-Sea, Yorkshire, England, a crab was seen running along the beach with a sparrow in his claws. The crab had caught the bird by the leg, and so much was it struggling to get free that once it lifted the crab several inches off the ground. The crab eventually let the bird go, and ran off.

It Pays to Read Newspapers.

Cox, Wis., June 12.—Frank M. Russell of this place had Kidney Disease so bad that he could not walk. He tried doctors' treatment and many different remedies, but was getting worse. He was very low.

He read in a newspaper how Dodd's Kidney Pills were curing cases of Kidney Trouble, Bright's Disease and Rheumatism, and thought he would try them. He took two boxes, and now he is quite well. He says: "I can now work all day, and not feel tired. Before using Dodd's Kidney Pills, I couldn't walk across the floor."

Mr. Russell's is the most wonderful case ever known in Chippewa county. This new remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills—is making some miraculous cures in Wisconsin.

Some Famous Sayings.

From Dryden comes "through thick and thin" and "none but the brave deserve the fair." Nathaniel Lee an English dramatist of the seventeenth century, wrote "when Greeks joined Greeks, then was a tug-of-war"—our modern "a case of Greek meet Greek." Shakespeare, of course, has showered the moderns with household phrases. Matthew Prior of the seventeenth century passed down to us "of two evils I have chosen the least"; Byron gives us "as clear as a whistle"; Goldsmith, "ask me no questions and I'll tell you no fibs," and Cowper "not much the worse for wear." "Selling a bargain" and "fast and loose" comes from "Love's Labor Lost," and Pope's prologue to "Satires" gives "go snacks." "As good as a play" originated with King Charles when in parliament attending the discussion of a divorce bill, and Cowper exclaimed, "God made the country and man made the town."

Announces the Speaker.

There is a curious little clicking instrument in the smoking room and libraries of the British house of commons called the "annunciator" because it announces the name of the member who is addressing the chamber. The instruments are worked by some electric arrangements and the name of the member speaking is put on from the press gallery.

Two-Legged Dog.

The curiosities of Vienna include a small dog, which, having been born without front legs, has learned to walk about on its hind legs.

FEED YOUNG GIRLS.

Must Have Right Food While Growing.

Great care should be taken at the critical period when the young girl is just merging into womanhood that the diet shall contain all that is up-building and nothing harmful.

At that age the structure is being formed and if formed of a healthy, sturdy character, health and happiness will follow; on the other hand unhealthy cells may be built in and a sick condition slowly supervene which, if not checked, may ripen into a chronic disease and cause life-long suffering.

A young lady says: "Coffee began to have such an effect on my stomach a few years ago, that I was compelled to quit using it. It brought on headaches, pains in my muscles and nervousness."

"I tried to use tea in its stead, but found its effects even worse than those I suffered from coffee. Then for a long time I drank milk alone at my meals, but it never helped me physically, and at last it palled on me. A friend came to the rescue with the suggestion that I try Postum Coffee.

"I did so, only to find at first, that I didn't fancy it. But I had heard of so many persons who had been benefited by its use that I persevered, and when I had it brewed right found it grateful in flavor and soothing and strengthening to my stomach. I can find no words to express my feeling of what I owe to Postum Food Coffee!"

"In every respect it has worked a wonderful improvement—the headaches, nervousness, the pains in my side and back, all the distressing symptoms yielded to the magic power of Postum. My brain seems also to share in the betterment of my physical condition; it seems keener, more alert and brighter. I am, in short, in better health now than I ever was before, and I am sure I owe it to the use of your Postum Food Coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

THREE YEARS AFTER.

Eugene E. Lario, of 751 Twentieth avenue, ticket seller in the Union Station, Denver, Col., says: "You are at liberty to repeat what I first stated through our Denver papers about Doan's Kidney Pills in the summer of 1893, for I have had no reason in the interim to change my opinion of the remedy. I was subject to severe attacks of backache, always aggravated if I sat long at a desk. Doan's Kidney Pills absolutely stopped my backache. I have never had a pain or a twinge since." Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists. Price 50 cents per box.

The Earliest Newspaper.

The first daily newspaper was a manuscript letter written by salaried correspondents and forwarded by them every twenty-four hours from London to the provinces. That was in the days of the early Stuarts. During the Commonwealth these London letters were printed in type and circulated in large numbers. Even so long ago as 1680 the law of libel was such to be characterized by Judge Scroggs as making any newspaper publication illegal and tending to provoke a breach of the peace.

Cure for Hiccoughs.

A cure for hiccoughs that gives prompt relief is to draw in as much air as the lungs will hold and retain it as long as possible. Once is generally sufficient, but if necessary it may be repeated. If this does not cure them raise the arms straight and high over your head and get some one to give you sips of water until the hiccoughs disappear.

Rubber Shrub.

THE OPPORTUNITY OF TO-DAY

The opportunity for the man with little means is probably better to-day in the prairie states of the Southwest than ever before in the history of the nation. To be sure, there is not the vast open choice of land for the homesteads that existed in the '70s. The lands then taken up under Government laws are now prosperous farms and ranches. There is need of more hands to develop the country. In the Southwest, Indian Territory, Oklahoma and Texas, are vast areas of unimproved land not yet producing the crops of wheat. It is capable, practically the same thing to be of the town. Few lines of business are adequately represented. There are openings of all sorts for wide-awake men. Are you one?

If you are interested, tell us what you want. How much you have to invest, and we will gladly furnish the information. Write for a copy of our paper, "The Coming Country." It's free. Address:  GEORGE MORTON, G. P. & T. A. BOX 911, ST. LOUIS, MO.

TWO OPEN LETTERS

IMPORTANT TO MARRIED WOMEN

Mrs. Mary Dimmick of Washington tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well.

It is with great pleasure we publish the following letters, as they convincingly prove the claim we have so many times made in our columns that Mrs.

Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., is fully qualified to give helpful advice to sick women. Read Mrs. Dimmick's letters.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham—
I have been a sufferer for the past eight years with a trouble which first originated from painful menstruation—the pains were excruciating, with inflammation and ulceration of the womb. The doctor says I must have an operation or I cannot live. I do not want to submit to an operation if I can possibly avoid it. Please help me.—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham—
You will remember my condition when I last wrote you, and that the doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I received your kind letter and followed your advice very carefully and am now entirely well. As my case was so serious it seems a miracle that I am cured. I know that I owe my life to your kind letter and to your advice. I can walk miles without an ache or a pain, and I wish every suffering woman would read this letter and realize what you can do for them.—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 5024 East Capitol Street, Washington, D. C.

How easy it was for Mrs. Dimmick to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and how little it cost her—a two-cent stamp. Yet how valuable was the reply! As Mrs. Dimmick says—it saved her life. Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of just such letters as the above, and offers ailing women helpful advice.

New York Street Specialists.
There are specialists of various sorts among the New York street merchants, men who sell collar buttons, men who sell shoe laces, and so on, but as odd a specialist as any is the man who sells small boys' "knee pants." He displays his wares in a basket on the edge of a downtown thoroughfare that leads to a big market, and relies for his trade on mothers passing that way to do the family marketing.

Olive Oil and Bruises.
In the treatment of contusions where there is extensive discoloration of the skin, if olive oil be freely applied without rubbing the discoloration quickly will disappear. If the skin be broken, a little boric acid should be applied over the abrasion. A black eye thus treated can be rendered normal in a few hours, especially if the oil be applied warm.—New York Telegram.

NAMES BEST DOCTOR

MR. BAYSSON PUBLISHES RESULTS OF VALUABLE EXPERIENCE.

A Former Pronounced Dyspeptic He Now Rejoices in Perfect Freedom from Miserable Indigestion.

Thousands of sufferers know that the reason why they are irritable and depressed and nervous and sleepless is because their food does not digest, but how to get rid of the difficulty is the puzzling question.

Good digestion calls for strong digestive organs, and strength comes from a supply of good rich blood. For this reason Mr. Baysson took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for the cure of indigestion.

"They have been my best doctor," he says. "I was suffering from dyspepsia. The pains in my stomach after meals were almost unbearable. My sleep was very irregular and my complexion was sallow. As the result of using eight boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, about the merits of which I learned from friends in France, I have escaped all these troubles, and am able again to take pleasure in eating."

A very simple story, but if it had not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills it might have been a tragic one. When discomfort begins with eating, fills up the intervals between meals with pain, and prevents sleep at night, there certainly cannot be much pleasure in living. A final general breaking down must be merely a question of time.

Mr. Joseph Baysson is a native of Aix-les-Bains, France, but now resides at No. 2439 Larkin street, San Francisco, Cal. He is one of a great number who can testify to the remarkable efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the treatment of obstinate disorders of the stomach.

If you would get rid of nausea, pain or burning in the stomach, vertigo, nervousness, insomnia, or any of the other miseries of a dyspeptic, get rid of the weakness of the digestive organs by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They are sold by druggists everywhere.

Proper diet is, of course, a great aid in forwarding recovery once begun, and a little book, "What to Eat and How to Eat," may be obtained by any one who makes a request for it by writing to the Dr. Williams Medical Co., Schenectady, N. Y. This valuable diet book contains an important chapter on the simplest means for the cure of constipation.

THE MISSING MAN

By MARY R. P. HATCH
Author of "The Bank Tragedy"

Copyright, 1892, by Lee and Shepard

CHAPTER V.

Mr. Carter Breaks the Matter Gently.

In less than two weeks the injunction was removed from the bank, which resumed active operations. The bondsmen paid the sum for which they were obligated, and matters rapidly took on their usual aspect.

Mr. Carter and his partner were doing well at the mill, but it could not be denied that the loss of money and Vane's defection were hard to bear. Plying his niece deeply, he could not bear to add to her grief by telling her of the terrible suspicions entertained now almost universally, and so he sat generally quite silent at his meals, spending his remaining time at the office, under the plea, correct enough, of press of business.

But one day he decided to tell his niece the whole matter, and so after tea one evening he sat down in his arm chair beside her and said, "Are you too busy to talk a little tonight?"

"I am always busy, for I find so much to do, and I want to get everything in order before Vane comes. But I am ready to talk with you, for you have seemed too tired lately for conversation. You have really earned a rest, and when Vane comes I am sure he will insist upon your taking it."

"Constance," he said gravely, "has it not occurred to you that your husband may never return?"

"He isn't dead! You don't mean to tell me that?" she cried in a sharp, wild voice, clasping her hands and looking at him with wide eyes and terrified gaze.

"No, no, child, I don't mean that, but maybe it is as bad."

"As bad! Nothing could be as bad as to lose my husband, uncle. I could better lose all else besides. I have thought about it a great deal since he went away, and I am convinced that to lose Vane would kill me."

"What folly is this, Constance," said her uncle, sternly. "Henderson and I held out till we could do so no longer. The proofs were overwhelming; the account you have read is true."

"But because he went away and does not return, is that criminal? He may be ill somewhere. People frequently have brain fever and cannot tell so much as their names."

"But Vane was well on the 28th of May. He was at the bank the 22d. He got five thousand dollars at the national bank in Boston on a note which he presented himself."

"But hadn't he a right to when he is the treasurer?"

"Listen, Constance," said her uncle, quite patiently, though he inwardly wondered that women could be so unreasonable. "The proofs were overwhelming before; they satisfied every one else; but when Low's letter came to the president of the bank, then a telegram stating details, we had to believe. If more proof were needed, it was supplied afterwards when another altered note, this time altered from four hundred to four thousand, came in. For a day or two it looked as if the bank must fail. The trustees issued a circular to the banks of the country to send in any deposits they might have of their paper, but there was no response, so it is likely no other notes were offered. That is exactly as the matter stands, Constance. I thought it wrong to leave you in ignorance any longer. You know how I hate unpleasantness or trouble of any sort, and that I would not have told you if it could have been avoided."

"I know, Uncle Carter, you meant to be kind," said Constance in a low, restrained voice. "I am sorry I spoke to you so sharply, but I was upset by having the matter broached when I had set it one side. I don't believe it now, and I am sorry that you do. But no matter," as he opened his mouth to speak, "you cannot help it, perhaps. You did not know him as I did. I

The hand dropped beside her and an ashen hue covered her face.

"Oh, come, now, Constance, I wouldn't go on like that. Women's husbands die every day, and they don't feel like that; the most of 'em get married again. I only wish your husband was as well off as theirs."

"As well off as theirs—dead! What do you mean, Uncle Carter?" said Constance, rising with indignant face, crimson where it was pallid before. "Are you crazy?"

"You will make me crazy, Constance, if you go on that way. Your husband is a dishonest man, there!" blurted it out and mopping his face energetically. "I meant to have broken it to you easy, but you wouldn't let me," he said in a complaining tone. But he was alarmed directly by Constance falling back in her chair. Her hand dropped beside her and an ashen hue covered her face. Her uncle thought she was dying. He flew to her side, grasped a tumbler of water and was about to deluge her with it, but she put up her hand and said weakly:

"No, not that, I am so cold." She was shivering now, and her teeth chattered audibly.

"What shall I get you?" cried her uncle.

"Nothing. I shall be better soon. I am better. You were saying, uncle," she said feebly.

"No matter what I said. Folks get mistaken. Forget it all, I would. Don't bother your head about it."

She motioned to her work basket.

"Get that paper," she said.

He looked and saw a neatly folded newspaper, the Boston Globe, containing, as Mr. Carter saw directly, a full account of the bank examination, under sensational headlines.

"Why!" gasped her uncle. "I thought you knew nothing about it."

"I did not until yesterday, and I would not believe it. The paper was over a week old, and I thought that it related to the first suspicions, but that since then all had been proved right."

"Matters were set right at the bank by his bondsmen paying the amount that was missing, Constance."

"You were one of them, uncle."

"Yes."

"Well, when Vane comes back he will pay you."

am sorry about the money, but Vane will reimburse you if he is living. If not, I will," and Constance took up some sewing, and, selecting a needle already threaded, took a few tremulous stitches.

Her uncle went out the door and down to his office ruminating.

"She has doubts, I can see that, but she won't give way to them. There are deeper feelings at work in her heart than her words show. Poor Constance! What a brave soul she has! And to think he should desert her! It is hard to believe all this of Vane Hamilton."

Hard, indeed, but how many instances like it are on record. Institutions for savings have been proved necessary. The most trustworthy men, as they are supposed to be, are placed nearest the money center. Responsible men, in most cases personal friends, are held as sureties under heavy bonds. And yet what is the result? It can be read almost any day in the newspapers in the records of men whose honesty was slowly consumed by proximity to temptation, the incident to great trusts.

Bruce, meanwhile, was pursuing his investigations in his own manner.

By strenuous endeavor Bruce succeeded in discovering the fact that the woman with the emerald-tinted hair got off the train at Mechanic Falls, although Libby professed to recollect that she bought a ticket through to Portland.

The detective further learned that she went north that night, when Conductor Stone was in charge of the train, to Island Pond. She staid all night at the Stewart House, and in the morning took train for Coaticook, ostensibly, but as he shrewdly surmised, she was quite as likely to have stopped short of her supposed destination. Thus far he was enabled to track her, but no farther. In fact, he knew nothing about her after she left Island Pond.

Bruce was at his wits' end. The fifteen hundred dollars held out by the bank president, together with professional pride, made him unwilling to relinquish the undertaking, and he set himself to finding out what he could about Hamilton's past life, the portion of it which was compressed into the two weeks in each May which, since his marriage at least, he invariably spent away from Grovedale.

As his investigations progressed, Bruce grew more and more excited, and it is not too much to say that he was completely mystified as well. For it was in the most questionable streets and among the most dishonest haunts that he found the surest traces of his presence. He had his photograph, he had the assistance of other detectives, and as the search went on, it was proved that Vane Hamilton, or his double, was the frequenter of places which the honest people of Grovedale would have shuddered to contemplate, even in imagination.

Bruce went West again, for he was in hopes to discover that Hamilton had retraced his course to the States. If involved in dishonest schemes in western towns now, as Bruce felt convinced that he had been in the past, he was likely, he thought, to return any day, for prudence is not commonly the characteristic of a rogue.

First Bruce went to Valparaiso, a new but exceedingly enterprising town in Kansas, where he fancied tidings were to be found of Hamilton's operations.

He was right. It appeared that a trio of unscrupulous men had in several instances set up a bank in new and growing towns and operated successfully until they had victimized the moneyed men, when they had closed up suddenly and decamped. As the scenes of their operations were thousands of miles apart, and their names were assumed, they escaped detection, strange as it may appear, until they came to Valparaiso. This was early in the year 1887.

But two men came at first. Their names were given as Scoville and Brown. A private bank was opened and operations begun, but for some reason the business men of the little city were shy of them. Suddenly a new member joined Scoville and Brown, as joint owner of the bank. This was in May, as Bruce easily discovered. He gave his name as Ashley, and was a genial, handsome man who won his way to public favor at once, as the others had not succeeded in doing. His wife was with him, a woman with emerald-tinted hair.

Bruce, as I have said, went to Valparaiso and to the residence of one of the principal business men, who had been deeply victimized by the bogus bank. For under cover of Ashley's pleasant fellowship and his wife's grace and beauty the good people soon had cause to abuse their own credulity. Bruce got the account from Mr. Hayes himself, who was only too glad to relate it when it might be of use in tracking the swindlers.

"We fought shy of them at first," said Mr. Hayes, "but when Ashley came it changed everything. You never would suspect him of being a scamp—never. Such an open, honest countenance, and that wife of his was a little beauty, if her hair was green!"

"Was she really his wife, do you think?"

"He introduced her as such, and she appeared to worship him. They took a handsome furnished house on Main street and went to keeping house. They gave a big party, and we all went. Such a crush! Well, after that all was plain sailing for the new bank. You can't mistrust a man after you have eaten his bread. We can't here in the West. Deposits began to pour in on them. All of the solid men banked there. Well, the upshot was in ten days after Ashley came we found we had been swindled, our notes sold or deposited in other banks as collateral security for cash paid to Scoville, Brown and Ashley, and in at least a dozen instances the figures had been altered so that the scamps got ten times the actual value of the notes. It was a gigantic swindle," and Mr. Hayes got up and paced the apartment nervously.

(To be continued.)

HE HAD THE EVIDENCE.

Hostler Knew Something About New Horse's Bad Temper.

A certain gentleman recently purchased at a rather high price a carriage horse to match an animal he already possessed.

A day or two later he asked his groom what he thought of the new arrival.

"Well, sir," said John, "he's sartainly a grand looking 'oss, but I'm afraid his temper's a bit touchy."

"What makes you think so?" asked John's master.

"He don't appear to take kindly to nobody, sir. He don't like me going into his box even to feed him."

"Oh," lightly responded the horse's owner, "he hasn't settled down yet, that's all. His surroundings are strange to him. I don't think there's anything wrong with his temper."

"I didn't at first, sir," remarked John; "but, you see, he's kicked me clean out o' the box twice, and when you comes to think about it, that's sort o' convincin'."—London Answers.

The Howling Mob.

Jones is the father of thirteen children, and lives at Widnes. Last week he took them all to one of the theaters at Liverpool. On the way to the station he headed the small procession, and his wife brought up the rear with the youngest boy.

Upon entering the station one of the porters rushed upon Jones and asked him what he had been doing.

Poor Jones, amazed, stared vacantly, and answered:

"Nothing. Why?"

"Then what's the blooming crowd follering yer for?"—Liverpool (Eng.) Mercury.

FANS BROUGHT FROM ITALY.

English Traveler of 1698 Describes Them as Curiosities.

The following description of fans by Thomas Coryat goes to prove that paper fans were not used in England at the time of his tour (1608), and that we borrowed them as well as forks from the Italians.

"Here I will mention a thing, that although perhaps it will seem but frivolous to divers readers that have already travelled in Italy, yet because unto many that neither have been there, nor ever intend to go thither while they live, it will be a mere novelty, I will not let it pass unmentioned. "The first Italian fannes that I saw in Italy did I observe in this space betwixt Pizighiton and Cremona; but afterwards I observed them common in most places of Italy where I travelled.

"These fannes both men and women of the country doe carry, to cool themselves withall in the time of heat, by the often fanning of their faces. Most of them are very elegant and pretty things.

"For whereas the fanne consisteth of a painted piece of paper and a little wooden handle; the paper, which is fastened into the top, is on both sides most curiously adorned with excellent pictures, having some witty Italian verses or fine emblems written under them; or of some notable Italian city, with a briefe description thereof added thereunto."—Exchange.

San Francisco's Destiny.

Statistics derived from the highest possible authorities are sufficient to establish the claim of San Francisco that it is the financial New York of the Pacific coast. They also point clearly to the observing person the fact that much greater things are in store financially for San Francisco. Many prominent persons in all parts of the world believe that San Francisco is destined to become eventually one of the great money centers of the world. There are sufficient facts to make interesting, and possibly instructive, a consideration of the possibilities of the future in this direction.—David H. Walker in Sunset Magazine for June.

AN ALBION LADY

Had Asthma 25 Years.

A GRASS LAKE MAN.

Had Two Cancers on His Face.

I was a great sufferer from asthma for twenty-five years. For weeks at a time I could not lie down at night to sleep. Of course I doctored with every doctor in reach and used all the patent medicines on the market, but I got only temporary relief. I commenced to treat with Dr. Wilkinson, 25 Dwight building, Jackson, Mich., several months ago, and since then I have had but very little asthma and I have had no sign of the disease for two months. No one but asthmatics know how pleased I am to get cured.

I think all people having asthma should go to Dr. Wilkinson, for he can cure the worst kind of cases. Mrs. Wm. Hark, Albion, Mich., May 6, 1905.

CANCER CURED.

R. F. D. No. 4,

Grass Lake, Mich., Feb. 28, 1904.

I had two cancers on my face—one on chin and one on left cheek—for 5 months. The one on my chin was as large as a silver dollar. I failed to get relief elsewhere so I called on Dr. Wilkinson, Jackson, Mich., Dec. 21, 1904. He removed two large cancers and today the wounds are healed up for the first time and the indications are now that I am permanently cured. GEORGE MAIN.

In 1834 one of the leading railroads of the United States printed on its time card, "The locomotive will leave the depot every day at 10 o'clock, if the weather be fair." Time cards have to be on a different basis to that these days.

A Missouri rural editor says wisely that "the woman who can make good butter, darn socks to a frazzle, cook a meal that tickles her husband clear to his waistband, and keep the children's neck and ears clean, seldom figures in a divorce case."

The dandelion question is becoming alarming to the people of the villages and farms in the country. Whole fields in places are filled with the weeds and in many lawns they have taken the place of grass. How to check the growth or get rid of them is a problem, and the continued spread is sure to almost ruin hay and pasture fields and be a drawback in others.

A small boy in a public school produced the following composition from his fertile brain: "The automobile is like a woman; it goes when you least expect it, and when you expect it to go it don't go and when you get it started you can hardly stop it. Some people buy them because they cost so much money, and others don't buy them because they cost so much. I wish I had one."

A magazine that is filled with seasonal interest for women is the July Delineator. In it the summer fashions are exquisitely pictured and described by such fashion authorities as Helen Berkeley-Loyd and Edouard La Fountain, of Paris, who write for the magazine exclusively. Entertaining stories and pastimes are provided for the little ones, a variety of articles on domestic topics will be of particular value at this season when the demands upon the housewife are exceedingly trying, and the fiction and other departments are of a most interesting nature.

Detroit's Classics.

Present indications are the largest fields that have scored for the word in the historic Merchants and Manufacturers and Chamber of Commerce stakes at Detroit, will face the starter this year.

Of the original nominations but one has been declared out, thus leaving 34 horses still eligible to the stakes. The "class" of the nominations this year excel all of the previous years, the horses being so evenly matched that horsemen will not venture an opinion as to the winner. Each horse naturally has following and loyal friends who predict their favorite the winner, but in the same breath they admit that it will be a hard race and a well earned victory. The record of both stakes, the M. and M., 2:08 1/4, and the C. of C., 2:06 1/4, will surely be beat if the weather man deals kindly and permits a dry track.

Already several of the pacers have traveled miles around 2:07; and miles in 2:10 by the trotters has been negotiated. With favorable weather a fast track is certain and the greatest trotting meeting in the history of the famous track.

NO CIRCUS PARADE.

Barnum & Bailey Have Concluded to Abandon the Street Procession.

The management of the Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth have announced that they will this season abandon the parade and relegate it to "things passe" of the circus. The tremendous expense that is incurred by the transportation of so giant an enterprise in carrying the immense paraphernalia of the show itself has handicapped this wonderful show to such an extent that it has been fully decided to withdraw the old-time, "always late" parade, and place all efforts, energies and time in the sole entertainment for the people by giving them the marvelous acts of the present age, the greatest and most wonderful that money and brains can procure. In these advanced days of circusism programs as offered by the Barnum & Bailey show, the stupendous acts presented are of such magnitude and remarkable mechanism that the time taken to place them for the exhibitions is of such value, the hurrying out of the parade would in every way interfere with the arrangements that are necessary for these unapproachable feature offerings. This new innovation by the big show will be the presentation of the most sensational, startling and stupendous free acts obtainable in the world—acts with international reputations—to entertain the people on the circus grounds before the show opens for the matinee; and these extraordinary exhibitions of unequalled excellence are to be given also, lutely free, and thus it is the new idea, "No Parade," yet something in keeping with the greatness of the Barnum & Bailey show which is to exhibit at Jackson on Tuesday, June 27.

Mortgage Sale.

WHEREAS, default having been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 7th day of February, in the year 1903, made and executed by Henry Moran and Viola Moran, his wife, and Frank D. Harrison and Marilla Harrison, his wife, all of the village of Chelsea, county of Washtenaw and state of Michigan, to the Kempf Commercial & Savings Bank, a corporation organized under the banking laws of the state of Michigan, with its banking office at Chelsea, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county of Washtenaw, in liber 101 of mortgages, on page 80, on the fifth day of October, in the year 1903, at 4:20 o'clock p. m., of said day, by reason of which default in the payment of the amount secured by said mortgage the power of sale contained therein has become operative, and no suit or proceedings at law having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, and there is now claimed to be due upon said mortgage the sum of $208.93 for principal and interest and a further sum of $35.00 as attorney fee, stipulated in said mortgage as provided by law.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder at the south front door of the court house in the City of Ann Arbor, in said county of Washtenaw (that being the place where the circuit court for the said county of Washtenaw is held), on the tenth day of August, 1905, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day. Which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows:

Commencing at the south-east corner of lot number four (4), block six (6), of the original recorded plat of the said village of Chelsea, and running thence south seventy-one (71) degrees and thirty (30) minutes west on the north side of North street, eighty-one (81) links to an iron stake; thence north eleven (11) degrees and thirty (30) minutes west, two (2) chains and ninety-seven (97) links to an iron stake on the south side of Buchanan street; thence south eighty-four (84) degrees and thirty (30) minutes east, one (1) chain and thirty-five (35) links along south line of Buchanan street to west line of Main street; thence south along west line of Main street three (3) chains and seventy-eight (78) links to the place of beginning. Dated May 5, 1905.

THE KEMPF COMMERCIAL & SAVINGS BANK, Mortgagee. TURNBULL & WITHEBELL, Attorneys for Mortgagee, Chelsea, Michigan.

Mortgage Sale.

DEFAULT having been made in the payment of the amount secured by and payable upon a certain mortgage made and executed by William Kilam and Julia Kilam, his wife, of the township of Sharon, county of Washtenaw and state of Michigan, to Harmon S. Holmes, of the village of Chelsea, in said county and state aforesaid, which said mortgage is dated April 22nd, 1890, and was duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds of Washtenaw county, Michigan, on the 24th day of April, 1890, in liber 76 of mortgages on page 88, by reason of which default in the payment of the amount secured by said mortgage the power of sale therein contained has become operative, and no suit or proceedings at law having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, and there is now claimed to be due upon said mortgage the sum of $428.60 for principal and interest thereon and a further sum of $25.00 as attorney fee, stipulated in said mortgage as provided by law.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, such mortgage premises will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder at the south front door of the court house in the City of Ann Arbor, in said county of Washtenaw (that being the place where the circuit court for the said county of Washtenaw is held) on the 3d day of August, 1905, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day. Which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: viz: All those certain pieces or parcels of land situated in the townships of Sharon and Lima, in the county of Washtenaw and state of Michigan, and described as follows:

(1) Commencing on the township line ten (10) chains east of the north quarter (1/4) section post of section number one (1), township three (3) south, range three (3) east and running thence east on the town line twelve (12) chains and sixty three (63) links, thence south twenty (20) chains and thirty four (34) links, thence west on the half (1/2) quarter (1/4) line nine (9) chains and twenty (20) links, thence north ten (10) chains and forty-six (46) links, thence west three (3) chains and forty-seven (47) links, thence north ten (10) chains to the place of beginning, containing twenty-one and ninety-six (21 96/100ths) acres of land, more or less.

(2) Also seventy (70) acres of land of the south side of the south-west quarter (1/4) of section thirty-one (31), town two (2) south of range four (4) east. The second described parcel of the above land will be sold first by reason of its being a separate parcel of land. This described parcel of land will be sold subject to a certain mortgage dated January 6th, 1887, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of said county of Washtenaw on the 6th day of January, 1887, and recorded in liber 66 of mortgages, on page 411, and a mortgage dated January 6th, 1887, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of said county of Washtenaw on the 7th day of January, 1887, in liber 66 of mortgages, on page 414.

The first described parcel of land will be sold subject to a certain mortgage dated the 8th day of September, 1868, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of said county on the 19th day of September, A. D. 1868, in liber 28 of mortgages, on page 510, also a certain mortgage dated the 2nd day of December, 1873, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of said county on the 30th day of January, 1874, in liber 49 of mortgages, on page 210. Dated May 2, 1905.
