A BUSINESS CHANGE.

Merchant Milling Co. Takes a New Half Owner.

During the past week a change has been made in one of Chelsea's business firms which brings to our village a progressive business man and good citizen.

E. K. White, of Greensburg, Ind., has purchased the half interest of F. W. Merchant in the Chelsea Roller Mills and has already entered into possession. Mr. White is a practical miller of 35 years' experience, who will be a valuable addition to the working force of the mill, as well as to the business life of Chelsea.

The firm will still be known by the old established name of the Merchant Milling Co., the other member of the firm being Archie N. Merchant, who has been connected with the mill for several years past and is well and favorably known to the community at large.

The mill is to be divided and thoroughly overhauled and put into shape to grind spring wheat, the intention being to make a grade of flour the equal of any in the country. The mill has always made good flour, but with the new improvements the product will be better than ever.

The new firm will be in the market at all times for wheat, buckwheat, corn and oats, and will pay the highest market price for these grains.

With improved facilities and a fixed determination to make good on their intentions, the future of the Merchant Milling Co. should be a bright one and the people of Chelsea and vicinity can aid in it by showing their appreciation of having a good mill in their vicinity and patronizing it.

FAREWELL RECEPTION.

A Pleasing Function in Honor of Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Caster.

The farewell reception given to Rev. and Mrs. E. E. Caster at the parlors of the Methodist church last Friday evening on the occasion of his relinquishing the pastorate of the church, which he has held for the past four years, was an exceedingly pleasant affair. The large number of ladies and gentlemen present testified to the high esteem in which the revered gentleman and his wife are held in this community.

The editor of the Herald recalls vividly to mind the welcoming reception given to Mr. Caster and his family when they first came among us. A large number who were present on that occasion were present at this, but those who were children then are young men and women now and the older ones can perceptibly notice that they have traveled four miles further down the stream of time.

A very pleasant feature of last Friday evening's reception was the presentation to Mr. Caster by Henry I. Stimson, on behalf of the 24 boys and girls who have formed his class in the Sunday school for several months past, of a beautiful chased silver cup and saucer.

Mr. Stimson's brief speech was highly eulogistic of Mr. Caster's good qualities as a man, a minister and a teacher.

Mr. Caster was completely taken by surprise and found some difficulty in voicing his thanks and appreciation of the beautiful gift. A brother minister who was present said he had known Mr. Caster for 50 years and had never seen him speechless before. When he recovered himself he thanked the donors for their kind gift and kinder words and assured them that every time he looked at the cup and saucer he should think of them. He trusted that they might grow up useful men and women and have homes of their own so that he might visit them, and if any of them ever got in a hurry to form the relation that would make them heads of homes he hoped they would recollect that he was entirely at their service.

A pleasing program of instrumental music was rendered during the evening and dainty light refreshments and coffee was served by the ladies. Among those present was Dr. Caster's old friend Rev. H. W. Hicks, who was on his way from Grass Lake to his new field of labor at Dixboro. Both the gentlemen are crowding on their half century of work in the ministry, one having been 47 years the other 48 years an M. E. preacher.

STATE NEWS

TWO MORE ESCAPE EASILY FROM THE JACKSON PRISON.

BLOOD HOUNDS GOT MIXED UP WITH A SKUNK AND LOST TRAIL.

LONG LIST OF ESCAPES LOOK LIKE POOR MANAGEMENT BY SOMEONE.

Out of Jackson Prison.

Two more state prison convicts have been at liberty since Monday night, thanks to their freedom from surveillance, a ladder, some ropes and a friendly skunk. The latter appeared in the game some time after the escape. The prison bloodhounds had struck the trail of the two fleeing men and were working well when they made a mistake and tackled the polecat. Subsequent proceedings in the man hunt interested them no more. Then some dogs from Battle Creek were secured, and took up the scent—of the convicts—early Tuesday morning.

A ladder leaning against the north wall and ropes dangling over the outside first revealed the story of the escape of Fred Beals, alias Frank Howard, and Fleming Postel, who were missed from their cells at 6:30 last night. The alarm was given at once and every spare officer, with the prison dogs, were put on the trail which seemed to lead toward Leslie.

The two convicts had evidently laid their plans well and everything seemed to aid them. Beals was employed on special work in the box shop which kept him about an hour longer than the other convicts, and Postel was employed in the kitchen and was not under close surveillance. They probably had about an hour's start of their pursuers, but they were dressed in convict garb.

Postel, who is 27 years old, was sent up from Tuscola September 9, 1899, for 12 years, for incest. He is five feet nine inches tall, and weighs 135 pounds; light hair and sallow complexion.

Beals was received from Ottawa August 20, 1895, for 15 years for burglary. He is 41 years old, weighs 165, is 5 feet 9 3/4 inches tall, and of dark complexion.

Came From Gladstone.

A man of mystery appeared at the Wayne county morgue Saturday afternoon, asked to view the remains of the woman known as "Jennie Schneider," made a few inquiries relative to how she had been dressed and then, turning to Coroner Toepe, remarked quietly:

"I think it's the woman all right." "What woman?" asked the coroner. "Mrs. Jennie Schneider, of Gladstone, Mich."

Dr. Toepe interrogated the caller, who refused to reveal his own identity, and was informed that Mrs. Schneider came to Detroit shortly before the woman in the morgue swallowed the fatal draught of poison and disappeared from her niece's home.

"Who is the niece?" "I'll never tell you."

"Where does she live?" "In the neighborhood of Second street and Michigan avenue. That's all I'll say, but I'll come back again," was the parting remark of the man as he hurried away to tell his niece, so he said.

Killed Daughter's Assailant.

In protecting his invalid 16-year-old daughter from assault at the hands of drunken men early Thursday morning, William R. Harrington, of Detroit, fatally wounded Charles Martin, a laborer about 30 years old, and sent Ernest Bloom to Emergency hospital with a broken head. Martin died two hours after the rumpus without regaining consciousness. Both men boarded with Harrington. The trouble occurred in the rear yard attached to Harrington's cottage, and it was there the father wielded a small baseball bat with such deadly effect. Katharine, the daughter, who had been thrown to the ground by Martin, was in a delicate condition, and serious results followed as a result of the shock sustained. Her baby, which is a boy, will live. There is little probability that Harrington will be held for trial.

John Purdy, of Masonville, met with a singular accident. A tie was turned over too soon on the saw inside the mill, and was hurled through the iron-plated roof. The log flew 150 feet to where Purdy was standing and hit him in the leg, breaking the limb above the knee.

AN INSANE MOTHER BUTCHERS HER SEVEN CHILDREN AND SUICIDES.

THE NAVAL ACADEMY TAKES MEASURES TO STAMP OUT DIPHTHERIA.

Dowie Stricken.

John Alexander Dowie, "first apostle of the Christian Catholic Apostolic church in Zion," has been stricken with paralysis and is now on his way to Mexico in a condition which even he himself admits is the foreshadowing of death. His physical affliction he attributes to the sin of overwork. Standing in the very shadow of eternity, as he believes, he has decided upon his successor as head of Zion. The identity of this man, however, is withheld.

Dowie's parting from his people at Zion was full of pathos. The trip had been planned before his illness came on and he insisted on carrying it out, although filled with forebodings and with the thoughts toward the future life, rather than toward earthly matters.

Insane Mother's Awful Deed.

Mrs. Clarence Markham, of Cambridge, Ill., in a fit of temporary insanity, killed her seven children with an ax, after which she placed their bodies on a bed, saturated it with coal oil and set it on fire. She then hacked her throat with a knife and threw herself on the burning bed. Her neighbors rescued her, but she was so badly burned that she died soon after she had made her confession. The oldest child was 9 years of age, the youngest a baby in arms.

Barely able to tell her story, she at first declared the crime had been committed by a strange man, but later, when the sheriff arrived, she admitted that she had slain her children one by one and attempted to destroy their bodies and her own in the fire. Soon afterward she died. When the ruins of the home had cooled a confirmation of her story was had in the finding of the charred corpses, each with its skull crushed.

Diphtheria at Annapolis.

Heroic measures were taken Saturday at the naval academy in the effort to stamp out the diphtheria that has assumed such serious proportions among the new fourth class of midshipmen. All of the midshipmen not affected with disease were, after their clothing had been fumigated, removed to the U. S. S. Hartford, lying in the Severn river, and with new bedding served out to them, have taken up their quarters on that ship. Bancroft Hall, the source of the disease, with its vast and splendid accommodations, has been entirely deserted. As a further precaution against the spreading of the disease, the academy authorities are contemplating postponing the opening of the academy until October 15.

Confessed the Crime.

Henry A. Leonard, aged about 23, who was employed by Halle & Sliegitz, a prominent firm of New York brokers, as clerk, made a confession today that it was he who robbed the National City bank of securities worth $359,000. Leonard had been for several years a trusted employe of Halle & Sliegitz and lived quietly with his mother in Harlem. He has been regarded by his employers and by his friends as a model of propriety and honesty. His position was one of responsibility and trust. His engagement to a young woman well known in society was recently announced and he was soon to have been married. The ambitions of the young man have been great. They led him to devote the greater part of his time not given to business to the study of the law, and he would in a short time have been graduated from the Columbia law school.

Attempt to Kill Palma.

An attempt to assassinate President Palma by drowning has been made, according to a cable dispatch. Details of the plot came out by accident. The president was not using his special car to travel to and from Havana, as has been his custom, and inquiry developed that recently wedges had been found driven into a bridge over which he passed, the wedges being so arranged that had his car struck them at anything near its usual speed it would have been thrown into the water with him. When the discovery was made the car was running slowly and passed over the obstructions in safety.

Horace Greeley's advice seems to be still popular if the reports of U. S. Land Commissioner Richards can be taken. For the year ending June 30 last 16,900,000 acres of public lands and 77,000 acres of Indian lands were taken up.

The department of labor in New York state reports that there are fewer idle wage-earners in New York than there were even in 1902, and that the cost of new buildings during the second quarter of 1905 reached the total figure of $78,417,896.

John Lindsey, the heroic telegraph operator at Lake Providence, La., is dead of yellow fever. He was taken sick while at his instrument, but would not desert until he had sent off the lists of deaths and new cases.

He has many acquaintances in Japan and is on terms of intimate friendship with Maj. Gen. Fukushima. Linevitch has reached his present high position from the ranks. LATE NEWS

SOME FEATURES OF THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE OUTLINED.

SAID NO REFERENCE TO THE TARIFF WILL BE MADE IN IT.

RAILROAD RATE LEGISLATION WILL BE TREATED STRONGLY.

The Message.

President Roosevelt's first draft of his annual message to congress is completed, and unless he should change his mind before the final copy is made the message will not contain mention of or reference to the tariff. That much has been learned authoritatively.

Tariff revisionists and the "dual tariff" advocates of the recent Chicago convention have tried to prevail on the president to recommend tariff legislation to congress, but thus far they have been unable to impress him with the expediency or wisdom of their project.

It is known also that the president has prepared an especially strong section of his message on traffic rate legislation, and while the details of his new recommendation are not known, it can be said positively that he has taken "no backward step" from his recommendations of last year on that subject.

Relative to the subject of campaign contributions by corporations or other contributors, the president, it is understood, has reiterated his recommendation of last year that congress should pass an act making compulsory the publication of all campaign contributions received by all political parties. He also discusses fully the Panama canal situation, and will recommend that congress pass an act exempting canal bonds from taxation, as United States consols are exempt.

The proposed canal bond issue, it is understood, will be deferred until congress has had another opportunity of enacting this highly desirable legislation, that the bonds may bring a higher price in the market when offered.

Senator Foraker and the president agree as to the importance of some sort of rate legislation, but they are not in harmony as to methods.

As he left the White House yesterday Senator Foraker said laughingly: "Well, we had our quarrel about this railroad question, but seriously, we agree on the main question. We differ, however, as to detail."

Cassie Chadwick Breaking.

Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick has contracted incipient consumption as the result of her long confinement in the Cleveland jail. Her imprisonment is telling on her. She has aged much in the last few months. The lines on her face have grown deeper, her hair grayer and her eyes have lost their lustre. Only her nerves have remained strong.

Lately she has denied herself to callers almost entirely. Her physique shows the strain, though she professes to be satisfied and confident for the future. She chooses to think she has been persecuted and some of her old force shows in her voice and appearance when she discusses the possibilities of her confounding and confusing her persecutors.

Rockefeller's Gratitude.

Henry Wagner, of Cleveland, who, forty-eight years ago, saved the life of John D. Rockefeller, has been invited to visit the oil king at his Forest Hill home and then may be doubly rewarded. Forty-eight years ago, when Mr. Rockefeller was in the employ of the Morehouse Co., he was thrown from a horse he was riding and was dragged on the ground. He would have been killed had not Wagner rushed to the street, and, at the risk of his own life, stopped the horse and saved Rockefeller. Seven years ago Wagner was well to do. Besides having valuable oil interests he owned the Swanton and Haskell companies holding in mining property. Through the desperate competition of the Standard Oil Co. he was forced to the wall, and is now a poor man.

A Terrible Boast.

"She was no good anyway. I didn't like her. I told her that if she made me stay with the baby, I would burn her up, and I did." This is the way Leon Crambeau, of Wausau, Wis., the seven-year-old murderer of his six-months-old baby sister, whom he burned in her cradle, spoke after he had been sentenced for 14 years to the Wisconsin State industrial school for boys. Leon shows absolutely no remorse for his terrible crime. On the contrary he seems to glory in it. He talks freely of the details of the tragedy and his reasons for committing the awful deed. Criminal instincts in Leon have been inherited, and the viciousness of his early training has developed his tendency toward crime. The boy was born of a criminal father, and schooled in wickedness from his cradle. His father is now in the Marinette county jail under sentence for threatening the lives of neighbors.

Aguinado, the former chief of the Filipinos, has settled down as a farmer.

Mrs. Chadwick's assets all told were only $61,800, of which but $36,800 reached the creditors. The rest was frittered away in court and attorney fees.

The Chinese coasting steamer Hsiao-sho struck a floating mine 90 miles south of the Shantung peninsula Saturday morning, and 15 of the vessel's company went down with the ship.

The Maryland Democrats are flat-footed that the negro vote is a menace to the peace of that commonwealth, and in convention Thursday declared that the restriction of colored votes shall be their only issue in the coming campaign.

The Song of the Flyer

I throw the miles behind me with a never-ending roar.
I pant with heart impetuous for the miles
that stretch before:
With a pause I leap within the tunnel's
yawning mouth,
I stop for naught from east to west,
for naught from north to south.

The steel-blue ribbons glow with pride to bear my passing form:
The signals beckon down the line, through sunlight and in storm;
The mountain lions cower, when they hear my whistle's blast;
The mountain gorges echo as I thunder
proudly past.

I held the road by right of way, a royal
race I run,
Nor stay, until my goal is reached, beneath the setting sun.

A DESIRED END

BY MARGARET MONTIE

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The gate was open and in the long shaded path between wonderful bushes of blooming roses, the form of a white clad woman lingered.

It was very still; hardly a leaf stirred; the air was hot and heavy.
The man at the open gate paused before entering and drew the gate shut.
The woman turned at the sound and faced the man. A look of swift recognition flashed between them, but for some reason it was not openly acknowledged by either. Then there ensued a strained silence, broken at last by the woman's voice, soft, low and vibrant, truly a voice none could hear and not heed.

"You are seeking the Prospects perhaps?" she asked slowly.

"Yes—yes—" he hesitated.

"I am indeed sorry, but they are in Europe for the summer, we—we
that is—her voice sank—I have taken the house for the season; is there anything I can do for you?"

"Why, no, nothing, I think," he answered very slowly.

"You are stopping near here?" she asked suddenly.

"My place is over on the beach road, a mile east of here."

"Ah, then we are neighbors!"

"Yes; perhaps I may have the pleasure of calling some time? Or—I've a car that I will be happy to place at your service."

"I thought this country too hilly
for autos, so we—that is, I have only a team and a modest runabout. You see, I am seeking rest and absolute quiet, and I am so sorry, but I fear that I will have little inclination to receive callers, but I am grateful, and now you will pardon me?" She waited for him to turn and go and this she started to do without a word.

At the gate he stopped and wheeled round, a look of determination came into his face and the woman knew instantly the situation that she would undoubtedly have to cope with, and a fear trembled in her heart, but she met his eyes without a visible sign.

"Is he here or when do you expect him?" he asked fiercely.

"I beg your pardon, sir. Please remember I am mistress here. I have nothing more to say," and she drew herself haughtily away.

"Has it gone this far? By heaven, Lotta, you must listen to me," he cried, leaping after her and grasping her arm tightly.

"Well," she demanded, quivering in every nerve; "well, what have you to say? Did you leave any other path open to me? Was there anything else to do? Say what you have to say and say it quickly."

"Why couldn't you be satisfied?
Wasn't the allowance enough?" he asked.

At these words spoken so close to her ears, the woman broke away from him and putting her hands to her throat she shrieked at him, her breast
seemed the home of overmastering emotion.

"Had you gone and left nothing at least the dream would have been tell me where you went. Come back to me, dear, do come, I love you. I found that out, too," he pleaded.

"Come—with you? How—how?"
and she held out her arms to him. "Do you mean that you will marry me—
oh—" and she began to cry.

The man remained silent for a moment and when he spoke his tone was soft and hesitating.

"And the man at that house? If—he is not there—has not been there—but why speak of all this? I only want you, you, your own dear self—"

The woman stiffened and the tears died in her eyes, her lips formed a

"Go back to your little, narrow world of wealth!"

thin red line, her hands hung limply
at her sides, all the life that throbbed
but a moment before in her veins
seemed to be gone, chilled and killed
somehow at those few soft spoken words. There was an instant of strained silence and then the woman laughed.

"You will come and see us some time?" she asked, gayly.

The man stood in amazement, too
surprised to move, he could only stare
and gasp, "Lotta, Lotta!"

"I prefer him," she laughed back at him; "he don't preach to me."

"Whatever has passed between you,
dear, will make no difference," he began.

"Would you marry me in spite of anything?" she interrupted quickly.

"As for that—Lotta, come, be reasonable, dear," he evaded her direct questioning eyes.

"There is and never has been any one but you and there never will be,
but I no longer love you. I loved what I thought was you; I am here along with the mother of a man who has asked me to marry him; I told him of you, but he loves me, he forgives and forgets all things." Her strength suddenly deserted her. "Ah, that such a man as you should live. You thought bad of me at once. Did I ever do anything bad in my life? I thought you loved me and you trapped me—but as he is witness, was I to blame? Go back to your little, narrow world of wealth, the world where women's hearts are but to be trampled
on and crushed—go back and live!"

When the man recovered from his astonishment, he could just catch a glimpse of white down in the path that led to the vine-covered house. He stood for a moment in silence, then took himself off through the gate and out into the road. In the dusty distance he could see his auto and the Impatient wife of whose existence Lotta was ignorant. Things looked bitter to the man, but manlike he cursed the woman for her lack of faith and her cruelty. The auto drew up and the wife stormed all the way home. But the man did not care much,
his thoughts were all down in that beautiful garden with the other woman.

The Real Skipper.

The boat drifted on the clear lake.
The man and the maid were silent and a little sad. Already the leaves were turning. Summer was drawing to a close.

"Dear," he breathed softly; "dear?"

She looked up, and blushed.

"Dear," he said, "will you float with me always—down the stream of life?"

"The same as now?" she whispered.

"The same as now," said he.

"I will. Gladly," cried the young girl.

He, you see, was rowing, doing all the hard work. She had the helm.

She steered.

HOLD VAST UNCLAIMED WEALTH

Sums Held by English Banks Run
Into the Millions.

How many millions of pounds worth of property lies unclaimed to-day in the form of shares, dividends, deposits of money, plate and jewels in the hands of bankers, companies, solicitors,
auctioneers and others?

This is the fascinating question raised yesterday by the writers of a letter, who urge the Chancellor of the Exchequer to lay hands upon the spoil
and devote it to the increase of national revenues.

Unclaimed wealth in the hands of the crown and funds in chancery amount to more than £50,000,000. Is it possible that the funds in private hands amount to an equally large sum?

Some of the examples of hidden wealth given by the writers of the letter suggest that the amount must at any rate be a large one. It is not,
apparently, the custom of companies to search very far for the owners of unclaimed dividends. Occasionally the chairman of a company refers to unclaimed amounts. In the case of a building society the chairman announced at the annual meeting that certain unclaimed money had been utilized to form a reserve fund.

"In fifty-five years," explained the secretary of this society yesterday,
"we have accumulated £5,000 of unclaimed deposits. At any time we are liable to be asked to refund this and should do so with interest."—

PARIS A WELL LIGHTED CITY.

Strange Contrast With Conditions in Most American Cities.

Paris offers a strange contrast to London (and to most American cities)
in the matter of street lighting. London is woefully somber at night, except at certain points where concert halls and "gin mills" are numerous, whereas Paris is brilliantly lighted everywhere. Nothing so astonishes the American visitor as the long lines of brilliant gas lamps (incandescent burners, all of which function perfectly) reaching down each and every street
to sparkling perspectives of diamond strings. Do you feel disposed to shrug your shoulders and cry out that it is garish and unrefined? Please don't. It is a grand success and a joy forever. If you doubt it, come over here and see for yourselves. I have carefully observed the placement of lamps and find that in some places
there is one every twenty feet; in less favored localities, one every forty or fifty feet, while the little streets have them at intervals of about 200 feet.
In the case of the poor little streets
the lighting is, at the worst, admirable not to say magnificent. What does all this cost? It costs too much, from our enlightened (or unlighted) point of view. We are content to grope about in the dark streets. The Parisian abhors darkness (as he should)
and is willing to pay for light, even though he may pay pretty dearly for it.

The Late Mr. Fessenden.

Out in one of the north shore suburbs there is a negro church which besides doing good work furnishes no end of amusement for a large number of the "white folks" because of some of the eccentricities of a few of its members. One of the latest of these is in the form of a church notice
which the colored brethren inserted in a local paper not long ago.

A certain Rev. Mr. Fessenden had been dropped by his flock when they thought they had found a better man.
One Sunday the better man was unable to preach, so Rev. Mr. Fessenden, who still resided in the town, was called upon to fill the pulpit for the time.

One of the deacons, wishing to make the change known to the congregation, inserted an advertisement in the local paper, announcing that "owing to Brother Jones' poor health, the pulpit will be filled to-morrow by the late Mr. Fessenden."—Chicago Record-Herald.

That Spooky Feeling.

When you're home at dead o' night,
An' everything is still,
An' sorter heaved an' solemn an' ye feel
A kinder chill—
A-creepin' up yer back-bone an' a-fillin'
ye with fear.

Say, don't ye step right lively when th'
graveyard's near?
Th' trees, they look so ghost-like as th'
branches round they fling,
An' th' monuments seem waitin' for somebody or something.

An' th' air is damp an' cold-like an' ye
hear a mournful cry,
I'll bet ye hustle lively when th' grave-
yard's nigh.

Ye kinder look across to see if ever-
thing's all right,
An' over there, beyond th' fence, gleams
somepin' ghostly white;
Ye swaller hard—a awful lump—an' gasp
for breath an' sigh,
An' I guess ye sorter hustle till th' grave-yard's by.

Ye take a back'ard look, right quick, to see what's comin' there,
Ye thought ye heard th' rustle of a step
behin' somewhere.

An' when ye see it's nothin' an' ye're
well beyond at last,
Ye sigh with glad relief becuz th' grave-
yard's passed.

Creditable.

This story is told by a resident of Maryland, who vouches for its genuineness.

During the last session of Congress
two young ladies endeavored to gain access to the Senate gallery. The gouty old doorkeeper told them that every seat was filled and the only chance was to see some Senator they knew and get a card which would admit them to the private gallery.

"But we don't know a single Senator," answered one of the young ladies.

"Then that is to your credit, young ladies. Walk right in. It is not often we see such ladies around the Capitol."

Viking Spirit Lives To-Day

"Yes, we are peasants and fishermen, and we are proud of it," was the haughty answer of a Norwegian statesman to a Swedish slur cast upon his people, and the answer showed that the Norwegians still retain the indomitable spirit which made their ancestors a thousand years ago dreaded by the population of every coast
of Europe, says a writer in the St.
Louis Globe-Democrat. Only 2,000,000 in numbers, far exceeded in strength
and resources by the sister kingdom, Norway nevertheless still retains a spirit of sturdy independence which prompts its people, when dissatisfied
with a union, to set up for themselves
a state.

Who Were These Vikings?

The Norwegians are but one branch of the great Scandinavian family.
Long before the time when Augustus bemoaned the loss of the legions led by Varus into the wilds of the Teutoburg,
the Scandinavians ruled with undisputed sway the shores of the Baltic
and the coasts of Sweden, Norway,

They say that the Vikings were the first Europeans to cross the Atlantic,
that one after another explored the coast and returned to Greenland, thence to Iceland and home again, and thus were the Danes the first to discover the new world. Be this truth or fable, there is no doubt that the spirit of the sea kings was transferred to this side of the Atlantic as soon as the war began between the colonies
and the mother country.

For what was Paul Jones but a Viking of the genuine Danish type? His ancestry is uncertain, but John was a patron saint of Scandinavia. Jones is a derivative of John and one of the commonest of names on all the shores of the North sea. For aught we know, or for aught Jones knew, he may have been a descendant of a royal Viking family, for he was born on the Frith
of Forth, where the Danes had fortified settlements and where to the present day most of the population
give indications of Scandinavian origin. It is queer, too, in connection with his ancestry that as soon as he was

Holland and Denmark. Living as they did in an inhospitable region, for of the 124,000 square miles of Norwegian
land less than 5 per cent is arable;
the real Norsemen looked to the sea
rather than to the land for both occupation and sustenance. The astonishing fecundity of the race soon made the coast line and the islands from Friesland to the north more populous than the interior. It was impossible to expect that hardy sailors of a rug-ed race should confine themselves to the most peaceful of employments, especially when they learned, as they soon did, that to the south and west
there were rich countries, comparatively undefended. Under the leadership of the younger sons of kings and noblemen the fishing fleets were soon transformed into pirate flotillas and then the Vikings began to be a scourge along the shores of Britain and France.

Thrice, under different names, did the Scandinavians and their descendants effect the conquest of Great Britain. More than once they reached Paris, repeatedly they were seen far up the Thames. In course of time they began to winter in captured villages in Britain and France; then came permanent settlements, the acquisition of land and final attempts at cultivation of the soil.

The Viking in Trade.

Then came the era of the great
trading companies, when every maritime nation in Europe organized as footloose with a roving commission

he should make for the North sea, the original home of his Norse ancestors,
and win one of his greatest victories.
In sight of the shores which ten centuries before had been ravaged by men of his own race. And who was Perry but a Viking, and Decatur and Farragut and the rest of the long and noble line between the last great American admirals, who won at Santiago and Manila and the first who crushed an English fleet in sight of Albion's shores—what were they all but Vikings? And now the Viking spirit has overleaped the Pacific and appeared among the natives of a long string of islands, reaching almost
from the arctic circle to the tropics.
But who furnished them an example?
Who introduced them to civilization?
Who taught them that they might become rulers of the sea as well as of the land? It was Perry, the American Viking, the son of a sailor, born by the sea, the descendant of a family
many of whose representatives had seen naval service under the flag of more than one maritime nation.

Viking Spirit Worldwide.

Thus by a curious chain each historic link of which is complete the Viking spirit of Scandinavia has gone round the world. From Denmark and Norway it crossed to England, then round the coast of Europe it went into the Mediterranean; inspired alike the Christians, who won at Lepanto, and the Moslems, who lost; lingered on the southern shore of the land-locked sea, prompted the adventurous voyages
of Columbus as it did those of the Danish explorers of the northern coast, blazed out in the buccaneer war, was rekindled by the American revolution and now reigns supreme in the Sea of Japan. The Viking spirit is the development of special conditions operating in a particular region. It was early developed in the Greek islands under circumstances closely analogous to those of Norway and Denmark. It has been lost by the Greeks. Its latest inheritors are the Americans and the maritime race beyond the Pacific, which has proved itself invincible against naval attack
by the greatest, though most unwieldy, empire of continental Europe.

Descendants of the Vikings.

sociations for the purpose of fostering colonization and commerce. Dutch tried with English, Frenchmen with Spaniards, in exploring the coast of the newly discovered continent beyond
the Atlantic, in assembling fleets loaded with colonists, traders and their goods, to bring to Europe the wealth of America, of Africa, of India,
of China, of the rich islands of the southern seas. It is impossible, however, for any considerable length of time to repress the animosities of nations or the warlike spirit of individual leaders.

The fact that Spain enjoyed the lion's share of trade with America was sufficient of itself to excite the hatreds of rival nations, and the Viking spirit briefly diverted into trade, soon reverted to war.

MAFIA'S BLOODY WORK.

Broughton Brandenburg, author of
"Imported Americans" and "Our Imported Criminals," has kept a record of Mafia outrages in New York and vicinity, and says: "Not a day has passed for two months that has not furnished a genuine Black Hand or Mafia outrage in some part of this country where Italians are congregated. Eliminating the jokers, the fak-ers and the crimes of vendetta only or affairs from quarrels or grudges since June 1 of this year, the blood of 54
persons has been spilled in assassinations and murderous assaults, seven houses and stores have been blown up, endangering a total of 204 occupants, and 700 odd extortions or attempts at extortion by the Black Hand
have come to light."

"The greedy spirit of Mafia in its American forms, Black Hand, the Green Diamond Brothers, etc., is flourishing as never before, and the authorities are as helpless as ever."

Bridge Gave Way.

Weakened by the rains of last spring, the stone abutment of the bridge just west of Arthur Junction gave way under a passenger train Saturday afternoon, precipitating the engine and all the coaches but one down
a 40-foot embankment. By miraculous escapes no one was killed, and few injured. The fireman lost an ear. The engineer rolled out of his cab un-harmful. Conductor Hubert was bruised. Two rails plunged through the floor of the baggage car, narrowly missing the baggage men.

George and Edward De Kiep, of Coopersville, who have been in the vicinity of Sagola for several weeks, gathering ginseng, have secured about 100 pounds of the roots, valued at $4
a pound.

THE MARKETS.

Detroit.—The quality in the cattle yards was poor, being made up largely of light grassy stockers, very little good stuff in sight. The trade was dull, butchers' grades, bulls and steers
bringing about last week's prices.
Stockers and feeders of the common order were, however, from 10 to 15
cents lower than last week's prices.
Milch cows and springers sold fairly well and the best grades brought $5.90; fair grades, $4.60 to $5.00; mediums, $3.50 to $4.00; and commons, $2.50 to $3.00.

Periodic Pains.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are a most remarkable remedy for the relief of periodic pains, backache, nervous or sick headache, or any of the distressing aches and pains that cause women so much suffering.

As pain is weakening, and leaves the system in an exhausted condition, it is wrong to suffer a moment longer than necessary, and you should take the Anti-Pain Pills on first indication of an attack.

If taken as directed you may have entire confidence in their effectiveness, as well as in the fact that they will leave no disagreeable after-effects.

They contain no morphine, opium, chloral, cocaine or other dangerous drugs.

"For a long time I have suffered greatly with spells of backache, that seem almost more than I can endure. These attacks come on every month, and last two or three days. I have never been able to get anything that would give me much relief until I began the use of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and they always relieve me in a short time. My sister, who suffers the same way, has used them with the same results." MRS. PARK, 121 S. Michigan St., South Bend, Ind.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first package will benefit. If it fails he will return your money. 25 doses, 25 cents. Never sold in bulk. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

for $1.00 per year strictly in advance.

ADVERTISING RATES for long or short time contracts made known on application. Cards of thanks and resolutions of respect will be charged for at the rate of 5 cents per line. Announcements of entertainments, socials, etc., for which a regular admission fee is charged, 5 cents per line per insertion, unless other arrangements are made with the editor. Notices of church services free.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1905.

The Herald has always contended that the rates charged for fire insurance in Chelsea were excessive and unreasonable. Insurance Commissioner Barry's report for the fire and marine insurance business of Michigan for 1904 shows that the same conditions exist throughout the state and fully bears out the position taken by the Herald. Last year for every $100 paid by Michigan property owners to fire insurance companies, $46 were paid back in losses. During the same time the average paid back in losses in the entire United States was $61 on every $100 paid in premiums. The average premium paid in the United States was $1.15 for every $100 of insurance carried. The average paid in Michigan was $1.45. Michigan's fire losses were $15 on the $100 less than those of the United States, but it had to pay 29 cents more on each $100 of insurance than the average of the country. Truly, Michigan has to pay a heavy tribute to the fire insurance companies for its partial protection from fire losses. The rates have been steadily raised while the loss average has declined.

In sentencing a prisoner to Jackson Monday on the new indeterminate sentence plan Judge Kinne had the following to say about what is coming to be regarded as a very ridiculous piece of legislation:

"My attention has been called to a new law regarding sentences. Under it I must impose a maximum penalty, a minimum penalty, and then tell what I think the sentence should be. I think it is the most ridiculous law ever placed on our statute books. It must have been that all the wise men of Michigan were in the last legislature. Upon your plea of guilty I will sentence you to the state prison at Jackson for 15 years as a maximum; to the same place for one and one-half years as a minimum, and I will say that I think one and one-half years is about right in your case."

Cheated Death.

Kidney trouble often ends fatally, but by choosing the right medicine E. H. Wolfe, of Bear Grove, Ia., cheated death. He says, "Two years ago I had kidney trouble, which caused me great pain, suffering and anxiety, but I took Electric Bitters, which effected a complete cure. I have also found them of great benefit in general debility and nerve trouble, and keep them constantly on hand, since, as I find, they have no equal." Bank Drug Store guarantees them, price 50c a bottle.

To Build Up Good Roads.

Sidney J. King, of Detroit, who is making the trip through Michigan inspecting the roads and their conditions, in the interest of the American Road Makers, was in Chelsea Tuesday. On the automobile in which he and his wife travel is inscribed "Motor Guide and League," and on the rear end appears the legend "Blazing the way with a Reo." All the information he collects is to be turned over to the state highway commissioner for his use in building up good roads throughout the state.

While coming through Breakneck Hollow, three miles east of Grass Lake, Monday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. King met with an accident. A threshing engine had gone down a few days previous, tearing up the road so that when Mr. King's machine struck the place it was upset and he and his wife were thrown out, her wrist being broken. Dr. Lyon, of Grass Lake, attended to the injury. Mrs. King pluckily refused to go to their home in Detroit by train, preferring to ride with her husband in the touring car.

LAME EVERY MORNING.

A Bad Back is Always Worse in the Morning.

A back that aches all day and causes discomfort at night is usually worse in the morning. Makes you feel as though you hadn't slept at all.

Can't cure a bad back until you cure the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys—make you feel better, work better, rest better and sleep better.

J. H. Sheen, proprietor of the City Dairy, living just outside of Sturgis, Mich., says: "I endorse the claim made for Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know they are an excellent remedy for kidney troubles. For five years there was a dull heavy pain in the small of my back about all the time. Often it was acute and piercing, particularly if I took cold, for it always settled in my back and I felt so lame and stiff in the morning I could hardly get around. The kidney secretions were affected, very distressing at times, were of a murky nature and badly discolored. I tried a number of remedies but received no benefit. I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills curing people troubled like I was, and I got a box. They did me more good than any other remedy I ever used. They positively relieved the aching in my back and stopped the annoyance from the kidney secretions. The treatment brought relief not given by any other medicine."

"A Man Is Judged by His Clothes,"

And the secret of clothes that give you an impression of good style and being in good taste is in the design. The manufacturers of the clothes we sell pay small fortunes every year to the men who do their designing. Small manufacturers can afford only to copy designs and styles. We buy our Men's Suits, Overcoats and Cravettes mostly of Michaels, Stern & Co. and Hart, Schaffner & Marx (the latter firm employ 7,000 people making men's clothes and use only pure wool and silk cloths).

We are now on the threshold of cold weather and we are already selling a great many particular men their winter clothes. The selection is now complete and our prices are always lowest of any.

"A postage stamp is a small thing, but it has the United States government behind it." Every Suit or Overcoat we sell has our absolute guarantee back of it.

We're buying no clothes at all but what we can fully guarantee. We have given our clothing department more room this season. Everything for men's wear for fall and winter now in stock.

"Habit" is hard to overcome. If you take off the first letter it does not change "abit." If you take off another you still have a "bit" left. If you take off still another, the whole of "it" remains. If you take another, it is not "it" totally used up. All of which shows that if you wish to be rid of a "habit" you must throw it off altogether.

THE MISSING MAN

By MARY R. P. HATCH
Author of "The Bank Tragedy"

Copyright, 1892, by Lee and Shepard

CHAPTER XVII.—Continued.

"I admire no woman but my wife, sir, and as for my interests and character as Primus Edes they are of no account to me, any more than the shell of a caterpillar is to the butterfly. And now let me tell you something, my good sir. Constance knows that I am her husband."

"Has she said so?"

"Not exactly, but she might as well, and furthermore, she has never believed in this man calling himself by my name."

Rumors of this sort had come to the ears of the busy doctor as well as concerning the interest said to exist at one time between Edes and Mrs. Hamilton; but he had not thought much about the matter, believing it gossip with little or no foundation in fact. But now he saw, or fancied he saw, his mistake. This eager-faced, energetic man was a far different person than he had supposed him to be. He was a man clearly capable of making and supporting a claim of nature so astounding that, improbable as it was, it could not fail to create wide disturbance. If Mrs. Hamilton joined with him it would be far more serious still, and the results could only be guessed at, not foreseen.

The hint that he had been shot to be got out of the way was, or would be, doubtless, a strong feature in the man's case, and there were complications relating to the late bank troubles which, no doubt, could be brought to bear upon it likewise. Moreover, the man before him, Dr. Peck considered, might be Ashley himself, who by some strange mistake was believed to have died. It was not unlikely. In the light of these astounding claims it was very probable, he thought.

A man such as Ashley was proved to have been—for the story of his adventures was well known in Grovedale—was the man, if any such could be found, to prosecute such a claim like made was to go to the mill and demand to see the "man known as Vane Hamilton."

"Shall you see him?" asked Mr. Carter.

"Yes, it may as well be now as later."

Edes entered and confronted the two men. He held out his hand to Mr. Carter who, however, did not appear to see it.

"Very well, uncle. You will see your act in its true light some day," said the former workman with so much dignity that Mr. Carter stared at him.

"Oh, come now! That's all bosh, my man."

"Do you think so?" asked Edes, looking full in the face of the other man.

"I do; but I am willing to hear anything you have to say in support of your claim, for, I own, I am curious to understand it."

"You know all about it now. If you did not you would not be here. But, Victor, my brother, if you realized all, you would not do it, I know. Did you not know you were my brother, my twin brother?"

"No, I confess I did not," drily. "I always supposed that my brother died in infancy. Can you prove that he did not?"

"I prove that he did not! You are that brother and not I. Before our mother died she asked me to search for you two weeks of every year, for she would never believe you dead, although every one else did. You were stolen in infancy. She gave me the ring you wear on your finger, in trust for you. The words 'in trust' are engraved on the inside."

"Everybody in Grovedale knows that. Perhaps you will tell me how this ring came upon your finger if it was delivered into your keeping?"

"I cannot. I confess it is a mystery. It is also a mystery how you became possessed of my papers. I

"There's method in his madness, though, and it is only too evident that Constance believes his story," said Hamilton, gloomily. "But, no matter. He will learn that I am not to be trifled with."

"I don't believe he could get a lawyer in the country to take his case if he should think of bringing suit."

And Mr. Carter was right. The claimant went to nearly every lawyer in Grovedale and the adjoining town of Lincolnshire, but not one would incline his ear favorably to the suit. It was plain to be seen that they saw neither profit nor favor in it, and more than one advised him to drop the matter at once.

That night a letter reached Constance at the hotel.

"Dear Constance—I did not mean to address you or ask you for help. But what can I do? No lawyer will undertake my case. They think me poor, without credit, and an imposter. For your sake, for all our sakes, I cannot give up so. You have money. Will you risk it in making plain the mystery which enwraps our lives? I would not ask your aid if I could help it, for I know the aid will be misinterpreted by others, if not by you. Can you advise me of anything better?"

Your husband,

"VANE HAMILTON."

Constance sat a long time in deep thought, and then, with sudden resolution, dressed herself with exceeding plainness and went out on to the street, walking in the direction of the office of Morley & Stevens. Morley was the first lawyer in the county, and Stevens was scarcely less distinguished. They were the first to whom Edes had applied.

Both members of the firm were, as it chanced, in the office, and both wondered, not a little, at her errand. She did not give them long to speculate.

"I called to see you in regard to the rival claims of two men, each professing to be Vane Hamilton, my husband," she said, with much composure and dignity.

"Ah! Strange, very strange! Edes came to see us about this claim, but we dismissed him."

"I am sorry you did. You perceive the case is a very serious one. I could wish that it might be as ably conducted as it would be to have you and Mr. Stevens upon one side and Stone & Ferguson on the other."

"You have doubts, then, I conclude, which is the real Vane Hamilton?"

"I have. Even if these doubts were less slight than they are, I should wish for a thorough examination. I will even go so far as to pledge myself to pay the costs. I wish to have everything brought to light, every circumstance weighed, and to do this both sides must be well presented."

"Very true, madam."

"Do I understand that you will reconsider your refusal, Mr. Morley?"

"Undoubtedly. We will talk with the person hitherto known as Edes, and report to you later."

"Oh, thank you. You perceive, I think, that both sides of the matter concern me equally."

"Certainly. I had not looked at it in that light before, Mrs. Hamilton. Would you object to telling us which in your belief is your husband, for I perceive you are not certain?"

WAS FREE FROM PREJUDICE.

Talesman Able to Try Case Against an Indian Fairly.

In a northern California town a supposed murder had been committed.

The half-breed wife of an Indian had died, as the husband said, from natural causes, and was buried without the usual formalities being first complied with. After a lapse of two weeks the body was disinterred by the authorities at the instance of a particular enemy of the accused and marks of violence, as the informer had said, were found upon the body.

The prosecuting attorney was examining the talesmen to ascertain if any of them were prejudiced against Indians.

Talesman Taylor was upon the stand undergoing a rather stiff cross examination.

"Did an Indian do you or your family any harm at any time?" asked the prosecutor.

"No," replied Taylor.

"Did you or any of your family ever have dealings or trouble with an Indian?"

"No," replied Taylor, "except that my mother was killed by an Indian."—Lippincott's.

Too Much for Capt. Winslow.

Some years since Seaman Jack Mackin of the old Kearsarge, which was lying off Charleston after a long cruise, was brought before Capt. Winslow as an absentee of fifty-six hours. The captain, in admonishing him said:

"Mackin, don't you know you are a fool, sir?"

"Yes, sir," replied the sailor, "and the world is full of them, but being so long at sea I was taken with growing pains on shore in good company, and if this had been any other ship I'd a never come back again unless you were captain of her, sir."

Jack got a chance to be good until shore leave came around again.

For Welsh Rabbits.

He was a recent recruit from Ireland's green turf and had secured his first position in a grocery store.

One day a customer approached the new clerk and inquired for some crumbled store cheese for a Welsh rabbit. After supplying the customer with the desired cheese Pat inquired, "And, sure, is that phwat yer feed them on?"—Lippincott's Magazine.

DEPARTURE OF THE DEPARTED.

Caller Accepted Commonplace Statement Too Literally.

In many rural districts there is usually one accommodating man, who is called upon, gratuitously, too, to shave when necessary, those who depart this life. The writer remembers this custom as in vogue at Plymouth, Me., a small town off the railway in Penobscot county, and a gentleman by the name of Blanchard was usually sought at such times.

One day an old gentleman had passed away and Mr. Blanchard was sent for; the messenger, being in a hurry himself, thought the occasion demanded more signs of activity on Mr. Blanchard's part, and expressed his mind to that effect to which he received the reply: "Well, he can wait, can't he?"

Very soon, however, the shaving kit was gathered up and a start for the work was made. When the house was reached the daughter of the departed one, thinking the call was made to inquire her father's condition, came to the door and said: "Well, father has gone."

"Gone! Where in h—l has he gone? I came over to shave him," replied Mr. Blanchard.—Boston Herald.

PICTURED AN ORDINARY GIRL.

Woman Writer Explains From What Type She Drew Heroine.

Kate Jordan, the author of "Time, the Comedian," was asked by a secker after knowledge why it was that the modern school of women writers all take for their heroines a girl of backbone and of steadfast purpose.

"The girl heroine," said this critic, "never discovers that she is beautiful until she is 26."

"My heroine knew just how she looked, but she didn't care. After she fell in love she began to care a lot. That is right and natural. You seem to think women naturally are dishonest. What less could a girl do in common honesty than my heroine did? Having money that she didn't want on account of its associations, and that she was not entitled to, she labored to restore it. Hundreds of men are doing that thing every day, laboring honestly to repay their debts, and yet you seem to think it remarkable that a woman does it."

Surprised at Sight of Whale.

Olaus Magnus, bishop of Upsala, tells how a certain noble Englishman saw, on Aug. 27, 1532, "a dead beast of vast magnitude" which had been cast up on the shore at Teignmouth. It was ninety feet long and twenty-five feet in thickness, and evidently a whale from the mention of its blowholes, and the fact that instead of teeth "there grew to his palate above 1,000 plates of horn, hairy on one side." The noble Englishman noted that it had "three bellies like vast caves, and thirty throats, whereof five were very great." On Aug. 28, 1736, an Englishman with business instincts saw two flights of birds collide with such force near Preston that 180 of them fell to earth. He picked them up and sold them in Preston market forthwith.

Maid and the Dispensary.

It is commonly supposed that the persons who use the public dispensaries cannot afford to pay a doctor. If the dispensary statistics are large then (it is thought) the number out of work is very great. This is not a fair inference. A large number of the patrons of dispensaries are poor, but a large number are not. At Johns Hopkins hospital a story is told of a woman, who, after being treated, lingered in the dispensary. "Is there anything further, madam?" a young doctor asked. "Oh, no; I'm just waiting till they've treated my maid."—The World's Work.

Pew Was as Good as New.

William P. Averill, landlord of The Tavern, at New Boston, N. H., erected and formerly conducted by J. Reed Whipple, is a native of Peterboro, where his father was a leading citizen and a pillar in the church. The New Boston landlord is not so pronounced in religious activities, and, after the death of his parents and the removal of the remainder of the family from town, advertised the family pew for sale in the local paper, as follows: "For Sale—Pew No. 27 in the Congregational Church. But little used; as good as new."—Boston Herald.

Artificial Storm at Sea.

The inhabitants of Aboukir, near Alexandria, were recently treated to a wonderful spectacle. It became necessary to destroy some sixteen tons of powerful dynamite, and the explosives—sufficient to blow up a town—were taken to sea and placed below the water. Something like a submarine earthquake followed the explosion, which was heard for miles around. A waterspout shot into the air to a height of 2,000 feet, and fell back in drizzling spray. Simultaneously the sea became a whirlpool of seething water, as it agitated by a hurricane.

Heedlessness a Handicap.

Heedlessness, quite as much as lack of mentality, is responsible for errors. It is the observation of men who are in the work of directing people at large that more than half of the inquirers expect to ask directions of one or more other persons before they reach their desired place. Learn not to ask the same information twice. Let one experience lesson in a certain line last you for life. These small things of life may be capital or handicap. It is worth while to make intelligent choice.

Filth in Milk.

Were every creamery to save and exhibit the filth of all sorts removed from milk by sieves and separators, we fancy patrons would be astonished and edified thereby. It is truly wonderful how such good butter and cheese can be made from milk so evidently contaminated as is much of that delivered at certain country creameries and cheese factories. We dare not set down a complete list of the heterogeneous articles found in such milk, but it includes such common objects as hair, sticks, straw, manure, grain, chaff, hay, meal, feathers, flies, nails, staples, leather, rubber, leaves, mice, rats, chickens, and, if we remember aright, a dead cat has been found on one occasion. But the large objects are of accidental origin of course, and the chief and constant objection has to be made against the lesser, more common, but quite as deleterious foreign bodies referred to. And where solid objects are so commonly found it may be taken for granted that many soluble contaminants are present. When cows are milked with wet hands, milk becomes tainted with dissolved filth which cannot be removed; and where milking is done in filthy and dusty stables foul odors are absorbed and myriad dust particles and germs find their way into the warm milk which is one of the best possible mediums for the growth and spread of germs. Milk coming from the udder into clean pails, in a clean stable, still contains a certain proportion of foreign germs or bacteria. Where the cow inhabits a dirty stable and the milk has to pass through dust-laden air at milking time it is found to be swarming with bacterial life when examined under the microscope of the scientist. Whether milk goes to the home setting pans or to the factory it should be protected against contamination as carefully as possible and every factory manager should endeavor in every possible way to instruct his patrons by object lessons, argument and printed information to understand the importance of clean milk. Such milk means a better product from the local factory and incidentally a better reputation and price for its product so that the patron in turn will share in the reward of cleanliness.

The Farmer and the Fair.

The usual way with the great body of the American farmers of to-day is to say little, do little and hang back when preparations are being made for our autumn fairs, and then when the fair day comes and the jockeys and machine men absorb most of the space and the chief of the attractions, these same farmers are at the front looking glum, and grumbling because the fairs of the fathers are played out and the horse trots and trades people overshadow the products of the farm. Farmers need not growl in rueful regret about this state of affairs when they can so easily remedy it, and should go to work at once to bring back some of the best features of the old-fashioned country fairs. Only think what a crowding and crowning success a fair would be almost anywhere in these western prairies, if only half of the farmers and a tithe of the farmers' wives within a radius of twenty miles, instead of going empty-handed to the fair, would co-operate in exhibiting specimens of the handwork and products of the home farm. No use, brother farmers, in playing the absurd role of growly critic about these degenerate days of horse trot fairs; the earth is still yielding its fat and fourfold increase, and the will to make a simon-pure farmers' fair can very soon find a way. It would not be amiss for every grange to make this a topic of discussion at the next meeting and plan out practical ways and means to restore the interest and usefulness of country fairs, as viewed from the standpoint of the domestic home circle and every-day farm life.—Farmers' Review.

Evaporation of Soil Moisture.

There has been very little done in the investigation of soil moisture in relation to its evaporation. It has been assumed that the evaporation was from the surface, whether the places of evaporation were a body of water or on an area of soil. But some recent experiments carried on in the department of agriculture at Washington bring out an entirely new phase of the subject. They seem to show that the evaporation takes place largely within the soil itself, that is, in a soil not saturated but sufficiently moist to allow every soil particle to be covered by a film of moisture, there is a constant escape of that moisture in the air spaces lying between the particles. This greatly increases the amount of evaporation that can take place from a piece of newly turned soil, and in fact, any kind of soil lying above the water level. The experiments referred to seem to show that the evaporation is approximately proportional to the amount of water present in the soil, and not only to the amount of water at the very surface. The soil that has the largest possible amount of water above saturation gives off more evaporated water than does the soil that is short of saturation. We can therefore see that perhaps moisture from our soil is escaping much more rapidly into the air than we have previously supposed.

A DESPAIRING WOMAN.

Weak, Nervous and Wretched from Wasting Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Henry A. Reamer, Main and Garst sts., South Bend, Ind., says:

"When I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was so weak I could hardly drag myself across the room. I was wretched and nervous, and had backache, bearing-down pain, headache, dizziness and weak eyes. Dropsy set in and bloating of the chest choked me and threatened the heart. I had little hope, but to my untold surprise, Doan's Kidney Pills brought me relief and saved my life. I shall never forget it."

See Virtue in Silver Rings.

Silver rings are worn by laborers in certain European countries, the owners being firmly convinced that such a ring is a sure protection against fits. This idea has probably arisen from the fact that mercury, commonly called quicksilver, was formerly used as a remedy for epilepsy, and by an erroneous process of reasoning silver has been credited with similar virtues.

Just a Delicate Hint.

Of the eminent Leipzig surgeon Prof. Thiersch the story is related that one day a man of his own town called on him and asked his advice as to finding a specialist to operate on him. After a brief pause the professor said: "If you want to travel you might go to Bergmann in Berlin, or if that is not far enough to Nassbaum in Munich or farther still, to Billroth in Vienna. Then if you call on any of these and he asks you where you are from and you say 'Leipzig' he will retort: 'Oh, you blockhead! why didn't you go to Thiersch!'"

Bottling Lemon Juice.

To keep lemon juice ready for use squeeze out the juice in the usual manner, strain free from pulp and pits, add white powdered sugar in the proportion of one pound to a pint of the juice, stir it until the sugar is quite dissolved, then put it away in very small bottles. Put a teaspoonful of salad oil in the top and cork it close. When wanted for use take out the cork carefully and take up the oil with a bit of cotton wool. To use for lemonade, add one large tablespoonful to a gill of water.

In True American Style.

An alarm of fire in the vicinity of Harrison street in Baltimore brought out the fire department of the district. While the bells clanged and the pungent wood smoke of the engines filled the air, the merchant who occupied the first floor pushed his way through the crowd and hung a signboard over his door. It read: "No interruption to business."

If the World Were Birdless.

A naturalist declares, man could not inhabit it after nine years' time, in spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects. The insects and slugs would simply eat all the orchards and crops in that time.

NOTICED IT.

A Young Lady from New Jersey Put Her Wits to Work.

"Coffee gave me terrible spells of indigestion which, coming on every week or so, made my life wretched until some one told me that the coffee I drank was to blame. That seemed nonsense, but I noticed these attacks used to come on shortly after eating and were accompanied by such excruciating pains in the pit of the stomach that I could only find relief by loosening my clothing and lying down."

"If circumstances made it impossible for me to lie down I spent hours in great misery."

"I refused to really believe it was the coffee until finally I thought a trial would at least do no harm, so I quit coffee in 1901 and began on Postum. My troubles left entirely and convinced me of the cause."

"Postum brought no discomfort, nor did indigestion follow its use. I have had no return of the trouble since I began to drink Postum. It has built me up, restored my health and given me a new interest in life. It certainly is a joy to be well again." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"Enough! You are either mad or think I am!"

this, his adventures evincing a most daring nature and great nerve and determination. Granted he had fled to Grovedale to evade pursuit, disguised himself to appear as slightly demented and as a common workman, it was not too much to believe of such a man that he had become infatuated with Mrs. Hamilton and sought to claim her as his wife, basing his actions on her attitude toward her returned husband and his slight resemblance to the latter. Then, too, the shot fired on Mr. Hamilton's promises might well have been done by his own hand to evidence his own assertion that the design was to get rid of him and his claims, which would suggest that Hamilton did it himself.

Dr. Peck was no lawyer, nor did he reckon himself particularly astute, but as he sat there facts and deductions evolved themselves with startling force and rapidity, mingling and commingling in the wildest confusion until his brain seemed bursting. Strange how dormant ideas start into being and range themselves side by side to do battle for or against a startling assertion. A luminous path seemed open to his vision, leading straight to the time when Vane Hamilton left home in the first place, and he saw clearly the long line of events since then down to this strange declaration just made to him. Back of it all was deep, dark mystery. Villainy was there, sorrow could not be far distant, and for every one concerned in the matter there would be suspense maddening and extreme.

Indignation arose in his heart toward the man before him. It became in an instant too deep for expression, and he arose without speaking another word and left the house.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"Marvelous! Marvelous!"

In a week's time the man known as Primus Edes was up and about and professed himself well. He said little about his wound but it was well known that he had said once he knew nothing about it in any way, it having occurred before he regained his sense of identity.

Almost the first move that Edes can much easier account for your resemblance, for we are twin brothers." "I deny it. I deny that there was any reason for such a search, or that my mother believed her child to be alive. Your statements affect me very little, nor will they any one else. Still, I must warn you that when you accuse me of wearing a ring and possessing papers that belong to you, you are making a serious charge. Your other claims are too absurd to be noticed. Of course, I am now speaking of Mrs. Hamilton."

"If I were not convinced that you were my brother I should say, 'Do not dare to take that name between your lips.'"

The two men were deadly pale now and their eyes glittered with excitement. Mr. Carter seriously apprehended trouble. But he need not have feared. Each was too much engaged in the effort to maintain calmness to have a thought of harming the other.

"I think there is no use in talking any more about this matter, Mr. Edes," said Hamilton.

"Don't call me Edes. I will not deny your name is Hamilton, for I truly think it is. I believe you are Victor. I cannot doubt it. Then, in the name of brotherhood, of our mother's memory, drop this masquerading, these monstrous claims. I will overlook them all, everything, for her sake," and he held out his hand, but the other stepped coldly back and said:

"Enough! You are either mad, or you think I am. I refuse to hear another word. I am not your brother. I know nothing about you. Now leave me, and do not repeat these inquiries, I warn you."

"I will leave you, but not in quiet possession of what does not belong to you. Recollect that. I shall not charge you with attempted murder, for I hope and trust you are not responsible for the shot. It restored me to reason. But I shall regain my property, my family, and my name," and without another word or look at either, Edes left the room.

"He is as crazy as a loon," said Mr. Carter.

LOSS OF APPETITE

Cold Sweats, Twitching Nerves and Weakness Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Nature punishes every infraction of her laws, and careless habits easily lead to the condition described by Mr. William Brown, of No. 1019 Lincoln street, St. Joseph, Mo. Mr. Brown is an expert tinner in the employ of the National Biscuit Co. He gives the following account of a trying experience:

"In the spring of 1902," he says, "while I was regularly working at my trade, I grew somewhat careless in my habits of eating and drinking, and finally found that my appetite was fickle, a bad taste lingered in my mouth, my nerves twitched and were beyond my control, my kidneys were out of order and cold sweats would break out over my body at odd times. Perhaps, while I stood talking with some one, this trembling of the limbs, and profuse sweating, and a severe chill would seize me. I became alarmed at my condition and, having read an endorsement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I got a box and began to use them. They helped me at once. After I had used one box the twitching of the nerves, the trouble with the stomach and the cold sweats stopped and have not reappeared, and my appetite is good. I have told all my friends that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me and I recommend them to everybody."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured Mr. Brown because nothing can strengthen the nerves except good rich, red blood—and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. They don't act on the bowels. They drive from the blood the cause of anemia, indigestion, nervous disorders, general weakness and the troubles of growing girls and women. The pills are guaranteed to be free from opiates or harmful drugs. Sold by all druggists, or by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

SAW BRIGHT FUTURE FOR BOY.

Knew Enough to Improve His Mind in Odd Moments.

It so chanced that all the passengers that entered one of the elevators in a tall building were going about the sixth floor, so they had opportunity to glance at the book which the young elevator man had been reading, and which lay face up on his stool. He had been so intently reading it before starting with his passengers as to be almost abstracted, although very lively and handy with the actual work once the start was made.

"I'll bet that book is an Indian fighting blood-and-thunder," whispered one passenger to another he knew.

"No; he's too old for that—I'd say it was a thriller of a love romance."

"Or one of the six best sellers of the month," interjected a third.

"Everybody was interested. All were 'rubbering' at the book and when the group of passengers got out of the cage one deliberately stooped and looked at it."

"Young America forever," he said; "it is a volume of Blackstone. This kid will be sitting on the bench some day."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Cured Her Rheumatism.

Deep Valley, Pa., Oct. 24.—(Special.)—There is deep interest in Green county over the cure of the little daughter of L. N. Whippley of Rheumatism. She was a great sufferer for five or six years and nothing seemed to do her any good till she tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. She began to improve almost at once and now she is cured and can run and play as other children do. Mr. Whippley says: "I am indeed thankful for what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for my daughter; they saved her from being a cripple perhaps for life."

Dodd's Kidney Pills have proved that Rheumatism is one of the results of diseased kidneys. Rheumatism is caused by Uric Acid in the blood. If the kidneys are right there can be no Uric Acid in the blood and consequently no Rheumatism. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the kidneys right.

Then her skin started to dry up and it became so bad she could not shut her eyes to sleep. One month's treatment with Cuticura Soap and Ointment made a complete cure. Doctors and medicines had cost over $100, with baby growing worse. Then we spent less than $5 for Cuticura and cured her. (Signed) Mrs. G. H. Tucker, Jr., 325 Greenfield Ave., Milwaukee, Wis."

WHIMS OF WORLD'S GREAT ONES

Men of Genius Who Have Been Noted for Their Eccentricity.

The men of genius whose works are among the world's most precious possessions have ever been the most eccentric of the most normal of mankind, says W. H. Cotton. All readers of "Romola" will remember Pieri di Cosimo, that misanthropic painter who lived completely isolated from his fellows in his queer, squalid studio, with its garden of weeds and flowers growing rankly as they would, because he preferred them so; his only companions toads, rabbits, spiders and even more loathsome creatures; his diet consisting wholly of eggs, hard-boiled, by the dozen and eaten when required, no matter what condition. Goya, the Spanish Rembrandt, was the wildest and most irascible of men. When he was painting the portrait of the Duke of Wellington he kept the hero of Waterloo in a rigid attitude for hours, at the least movement threatening him with a dagger, and when the duke complained of weariness the painter seized a plaster cast and hurled it at his head. Michael Angelo's method of working was one of his greatest eccentricities. Often he would get up in the middle of the night to hack and hew his marble by the light of a single candle fastened to the visor of his cap, and then, worn by his great labors, he would throw himself down to sleep again without removing his clothing or his shoes—sometimes keeping the latter on so long that when they were removed the flesh came off with the stockings. It is generally credited that at one time a year passed in which he never once removed his shoes.—Leslie's Weekly.

CLOTHES FOR ALL OCCASIONS.

Woman Who Has Them a Rarity and a Relief, Says an Exchange.

She's such a relief to meet with—the woman who always has her clothes ready for any occasion she may be invited to, and she's almost as great a rarity.

When the seasons change she puts her mind upon the subject of clothes with a will, and quietly decides just what she will get to carry her through the whole season. Then as quietly, and as surely, she gets each thing, so that by the time half her world is rushing around trying to get something made in time for this affair or for that she is ready with everything—ready to accept those invitations to delightful affairs planned on the spur of the moment—that there isn't time to get something made for.

The result is she's never hurried, nor is her almost invariable accompaniment, flurried.

Probably she doesn't get many clothes, and the friends who have closets and wardrobes filled to overflowing, yet who complain so bitterly that they're nothing ready to wear, or not exactly the right thing, find her almost provoking in her serene readiness.

But it was hard work in the first place, for choosing a few things that will suit all occasions, and yet give you a few changes, isn't easy by any means, and requires a mighty clever manager.

But, she's such a relief to invite anywhere!—San Francisco, Cal.

Women and Economy.

Women, as a class, have most uncertain ideas on the subject of economy, avers M. A. P. They define the word simply as the not spending of money, and associate it chiefly with straitened circumstances. But economy means administration, the cleverest way of spending one's money, whether one's allowance is $250 or $25,000. In either case, the following rules hold good: 1. Pay ready money for everything. 2. Never spend anything without well considering if the article in question is a necessity. Will it be valued twenty-four hours after purchase? 3. Always leave a margin—that is to say, always live within your income. 4. Keep accounts; even the record of a penny account book acts as a check on one's expenditure. The secret of true economy is trouble-taking; laziness and extravagance are apt to go hand in hand.

Children Taught to Swim.

At this period of the year, when so many drowning accidents occur, the annual report of the London (Eng.) Schools Swimming Association possesses special interest. The organization, which is supported by voluntary subscriptions, is the largest swimming association in the world, having affiliated to it nearly 1,000 schools. The branches are spread all over London, and every year about 5,000 certificates are issued to boys who can swim 100 yards, and to girls who can swim fifty yards. No fewer than 60,000 children are taken to the baths every week and instructed in swimming. Life-saving is also taught. The Roll of Honor contains the names of forty-five boys and girls who have attempted to save life from drowning. All these young people have been rewarded by the Royal Humane Society.

Night Time.

The wearied sun burns low And in the dying glow The ashes of the day Are gray.

Beholding fading skies, The flowers close their eyes And sink, by dusk caressed, To rest.

The slender moon and new Flings down on fields of dew The faintly silver light Of night.

The silent shadows creep Deaf and dumb of my sleep With dreams the long night through Of you.

NOT VIOLATION OF SCRIPTURE.

Clergyman Had Sufficient Reason for Urging Divorce.

One of the witnesses called in a Chicago divorce case last year was a highly respected clergyman in the Windy City. According to one of the counsel in the case, the following conversation took place between the judge and the minister. Said His Honor:

"Dr. Blank, if you were on the bench in my stead, and you were acquainted with all the circumstances of this case, would you grant this divorce?"

"Assuredly I would, Your Honor," replied the clergyman, without the least hesitation.

"But," said the judge, "how do you reconcile this assertion with the injunction of Scripture, 'Whom God hath joined let no man put asunder'?"

"Your Honor," responded the minister, with convincing gravity, "I am quite satisfied that the Almighty never joined this couple."—Harper's Weekly.

Medicines Have Stood Test of Time.

"The leading proprietary medicines that have stood the test of time are of known therapeutic value," says a medical authority. "They are prepared in laboratories of the highest grade, under the care of skilled pharmacists, and they are made from approved formulas which, in many instances, have been the special pride and specific of some successful physician. They have been tried in the crucible of public opinion and they have been found satisfactory by the people, for otherwise the people would discontinue using them."

Jokes with Soldiers.

While some regiments of London volunteers were engaged in a sham fight in the suburbs a man on a coach, passing along a neighboring road, sounded "Cease firing" on his bugle. The call was passed along the lines and the battle was suspended till the joke was discovered.

READ THESE STATISTICS—WE CAN VERIFY THEM:

90,000 people die yearly from the results of Constipation and Stomach Troubles and their attending ills. Nine in every ten have it. Many don't know it, and a good many who do know it neglect it until it is too late. Some get so bad they think it is incurable, and then they resort to the physic or pill habit, where the real trouble begins. You and I know that Pills and Physic make us worse, we become a slave to them, and finally they lose their power and paralysis of the intestines occurs, and then slow death.

Now Constipation and Stomach Trouble are just as curable as any other disease; we have proved this fully by curing over 10,000 the last two years. Many of these were the most chronic, serious, complicated kind in which all other remedies and doctors had failed and hope had expired, but our treatment cured them quickly and to stay cured.

Mr. Thompson, of Peoria, who had suffered all his life and had given up hope, was cured by 24 bottles. Dr. Dill, of St. Louis, whose health had been broken down, claims that several bottles cured him, that it is a splendid medicine for Stomach and Bowels, and the best general tonic he ever saw. Dr. Hendrick, of Kansas City, who had constipation so badly that he verged upon nervous collapse, says to his great surprise after trying everything else was cured by Mull's Grape Tonic, he says it is the best thing for Stomach and Bowels and kindred ills, that has come to his attention in his professional career. Mrs. Alcock, of Chicago, who was a confirmed invalid for years, after taking a thorough course of Mull's Grape Tonic says she was able to leave her bed after the third bottle, and is now enjoying good health. She had tried everything that came to her notice. Mr. Crow, of St. Louis, had dyspepsia, liver and bowel trouble for 35 years, which he contracted during the Civil War. He said he never could get anything that even afforded him relief, but that a short treatment of Mull's Grape Tonic completely cured him. He recommended it to old soldiers so many of whom suffer with the same complaint. Mr. McCurdy, of Troy, Ohio, was one of the greatest sufferers that ever came to our attention. There apparently wasn't an organ of his body free from disease: Liver trouble, Stomach and Kidney trouble, terrible piles that kept him in agony.

WORKING WOMEN

Their Hard Struggle Made Easier—Interesting Statements by a Young Lady in Boston and One in Nashville, Tenn.

All women work; some in their homes, some in church, and some in the whirl of society. And in stores, mills and shops tens of thousands are on the never-ceasing treadmill, earning their daily bread.

All are subject to the same physical laws; all suffer alike from the same physical disturbance, and the nature of their duties, in many cases, quickly drifts them into the horrors of all kinds of female complaints, ovarian troubles, ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, leucorrhoea, or perhaps irregularity or suppression of "monthly periods," causing backache, nervousness, irritability and lassitude.

Women who stand on their feet all day are more susceptible to these troubles than others. They especially require an invigorating, sustaining medicine which will strengthen the female organism and enable them to bear easily the fatigues of the day, to sleep well at night, and to rise refreshed and cheerful.

How distressing to see a woman struggling to earn a livelihood or perform her household duties when her back and head are aching, she is so tired she can hardly drag about or stand up, and every movement causes pain, the origin of which is due to some derangement of the female organism.

Miss F. Orser of 14 Warrenton Street.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds Where Others Fail

Boston, tells women how to avoid such suffering; she writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— "I suffered misery for several years with irregular menstruation. My back ached, I had bearing-down pains, and frequent headaches; I could not sleep and could hardly drag around. I consulted two physicians without relief, and as a last resort, I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to my surprise, every ache and pain left me. I gained ten pounds and am in perfect health."

Miss Pearl Ackers of 327 North Summer Street, Nashville, Tenn., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— "I suffered with painful periods, severe backache, bearing-down pains, pains across the abdomen; was very nervous and irritable, and my troubles grew worse every month. My physician failed to help me and I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I soon found it was doing me good. All my pains and aches disappeared, and I no longer fear my monthly periods."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the unfailing cure for all these troubles. It strengthens the proper muscles, and displacement with all its horrors will no more crush you.

Backache, dizziness, fainting, bearing-down pains, disordered stomach, moodiness, dislike of friends and society—all symptoms of the one cause—will be quickly dispelled, and it will make you strong and well.

You can tell the story of your sufferings to a woman, and receive helpful advice free of cost. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

A Daredevil Ride

often ends in a sad accident. To heal accidental injuries use Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "A deep wound in my foot from an accident," writes Theodore Schuele, of Columbus, O., "caused me great pain. Physicians were helpless but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly healed it." Soothes and heals like magic. 25c at Bank Drug Store.

Library Organizer Appointed.

The State Board of Library Commissioners announces that through a more generous appropriation of the last legislature, it has been possible to appoint a library organizer, who will act under the direction of the Board in extending the library interests of the state. The work of this organizer will be to visit every county in the state for the purpose of investigating library conditions and getting, so far as possible, correct statistics regarding school, township and free public libraries, in order that the aid offered by the state may be better understood and more generally accepted. The organizer hopes to work with the co-operation and under the advice of the county commissioners of schools in their respective counties, whose experience and familiarity with conditions will aid greatly in the work.

The organizer will attend the teachers' institutes, and demonstrate to the teachers the help which is offered to them by the state. Traveling libraries will be exhibited and explained, all attendant expenses being paid by the board.

Roy C. Lyle, of Grand Rapids, has been appointed library organizer, and he is now actively carrying on the work. During the school year Mr. Lyle will be at the service of the county commissioners of schools, and will appreciate the valuable aid they can give him in connection with this important educational matter.
