State Wins Its Case Against Railroads Some District Will Have Large Surplus

The following was taken from the Monday morning Free Press:

"If the state wins its case against the railroads for something like $5,000,000 back taxes, many of the school districts will have more money than they will know what to do with," says Capt. J. W. Haarer, deputy state treasurer.

"Under the constitution this money could not be used for anything except primary school purposes, and this fund is already larger than the necessities of state treasurer pays out over $2,000,000 and in wishing them a happy and prosfrom the primary school fund which, together with what was distributed last life. spring, brings the total amount per capita of children of school age up to $3.15 for the year.

"This money is received from specific taxation and according to the constitupurpose or use except the school funds. It is divided upon a pro rata basis and each county gets its full share. The result is that many counties get more than they need or can possibly in the state, and of these, I believe, there are more than one-fourth which school money and cannot spend it. "If we could get a constitutional amendment along the lines suggested it would provide for the distribution of the funds upon a business basis, but 1 suppose it is impossible to get it. The moment there is any talk of that there is a cry over the little red school house and the amendment is lost. But the state needs it, just the same, and it will have to come some day. If we can get an entirely new constitution, which will be accepted by the state, it is possible that some of these changes can be made. through the old process of sending a large amount of money out where it is not all needed, but where it could be nicely used for other purposes."

Eighty acres devoted to cows where only the butter product was sold from the farm, $1.16 per year; 40 years $46.40. Forty years ago many of the farms made butter, which removed only an insignificant amount of fertility. They began to ship away milk, and the fertility went with the milk. They grew other crops, which carried off large amounts of fertility. In 40 years from 80 acres, potatoes took $22,440 worth of soil fertility; possibly the farmer replaced $2,-000 worth in the form of fertilizer. The $20,440 he probably reckons as saved but his land is ruined. Tillers of the soil cannot afford to overlook the fertility question. It is with them from the start to the finish whether the finish be bankruptcy or amassed wealth.-Hoard's Dairyman.

'At the admiralty offices in St. Petersburg, it is admitted that the revolt had been brewing for a long time, and that the sailors at Cronstadt are not the only ones in the service dissatisfied with their present condition. The news of the revolt in Russia was greeted with acclaim, and a parade was at once organized and speeches made commending the stand taken by the people against the autocracv.

The sentiments among these soldiers are said to be typical of the feeling throughout the army, with the possible exception of the Cossacks, who can be depended on to obey the wishes of the czar, except when there is loot in sight, as in the recent anti-Jewish outbreak in Odessa.

"Dear me! Haven't you got any handkerchief?" asked the little one, turning up her nose in disgust. The Indian was somewhat mystified over the name of the article, but all became clear when the little miss whipped out a piece of spotless linen from the pocket of her dress, and, stepping forward, carefully wiped away the moisture that remained. Then she noticed several beads of perspiration on the Indian's forehead-for the day was sultry, and he had traveled far-and she soothingly removed them.

"There," she remarked, retreating a step and viewing her work with satisfaction, "now you look like somebody." It is not often that a member of the Indian race betrays the emotion of mirth; but as this one looked at the little miss and understood her words his mouth moved until his even white teeth shone between coppery lips.

"What's your name?" he asked. "Dorothy-that's the name of my doll, too."

PART II.

One soft September afternoon in 1675 with alarming news.

"It will not do for you to remain another hour," were his words to the palefaced husband and wife. "King Philip and his warriors are near you,

"Whither shall we go?"

"To Deerfield. Captain Mosely is to be left there with a small force, while the rest are busy in the harvest field. The village is only a few miles off, and if you make the most of your time and are very careful you can reach it in safety. Will you do it?"

"Yes, with heaven's help. I am greatly thankful to you, Hugh, for your kindness."

"It is but a neighborly act. I must hasten."

Time was precious, and, bidding the hasband and wife goodby, the young man hurried out of the house, and, breaking into a loping trot, headed toward the camp of the brave pioneers from Ipswich.

Jacob Mayfield was too wise to disregard the warning of Hugh Lardner. Without encumbering themselves with anything in the nature of luggage, the father stepped out of the house, followed by his wife, holding the hand of Dorothy, who was now two years olderthan when she had given a drink of cold water from the spring to an unknown Indian.

The door was shut behind them, but the latchstring was left hanging out, in accordance with the hospitable custom of the border. If the Indians chose to visit this outlying cabin, they would meet with no trouble in securing entrance. It was nearly ten miles to Deerfield, the distance being greater because of the circuitous route taken by the pioneer. He was familiar with the route, and was hop Jul that by following the advice of Hugh Lardner he would avoid the hostile redmen, who were liable to be encountered at any time. All went well until the winding course through the woods, marked at times by an indistinct trail, but oftener without any mark at all, had been passed. Finally, the father stopped in front of a deep, calmly flowing stream, a dozen feet or more in width.

"We must reach the other side, somehow," he remarked, as his wife and child paused at his side. "Can't you jump it?" asked his wife, with a faint smile. "Perhaps, by taking a short run; but "I will tell you," replied the child. pearance on the New York subway.

The infection was contagious. A stranger could not help catching it, Russell Sage and "Free-Lance" Newsand within less than twenty-four hours he would be inquiring as eagerly as one of the garage attendants if Lancia, the fat, good-natured Italian, had beaten Hemery's time, or if George Heath would outstrip the speed of the Frenchman bearing the sibilant name

The seriousness and the excitability of automobile racing have never been exhibited with such intenseness in America as was the case during the days of preparation for the Vanderbilt Cup race. It needed the advent of these dare-devil foreign drivers to show how everything else dwindled into significance before the vital question of winning an automobile race. In the I nch and Italian garages nothing else was talked about, was even thought about, and more than one driver, in his humorous moments, told of dreaming of how he overcame the trials of the Guinea road and the horrible "S" turn, finishing the twenty-eight miles in miraculous time. Indeed, judging from some of the times that were doled out to credulous visitors, it is evident that some of these dreams bordered dangerously upon the realm of reality.

The French and Italian drivers were insanely jealous of their reputations; and as the cars made their reputations they were deeply solicitous regarding the welfare of their monstrous machines. It was amusing as well as interesting to watch the care bestowed upon these time annihilators. Besides the driver, who bore the same relation to his car as the jockey does to his race horse, each car had a small army of attendants, and when they all got to work preparing it for a fast trial run before daylight they looked through the grayish light that precedes the dawn like so many busy insects hovering over an elongated piece of mechanism supported on four massive low wheels.

Above the roar and pounding of the motors as the engines were tested could be heard the shrill, excited voices of the workmen as they screamed out their orders from one to another. Perhaps two men would be wriggling on the ground under the car, their arms and legs working in a frenzied effort to adjust some invisible screw or tighten up a loose bolt. Then with a quick movement their grimy faces would emerge, and perhaps four or six men would eagerly bend over the throbbing motor, listening intently for any sound that would indicate imperfect conditions.

Having thus averted the danger of their falling into the hands of followers of other religions, they addressed to the local authorities a document bearing 300 signatures, in which they begged that steps might be taken to prevent any further importation of such fans. er in Anatgonistic Identity.

A perfect pun makes good sense both ways; the edges meet with a click like the blades of a sharp pair of shears. Sometimes the very thoughts fit tight together in antagonistic identity, as when the man said of the temperance exhorter that he would be a good fellow if he would only let drink alone; or when Disraeli (if it was he) wrote to the youth who had sent him a first novel: "I thank peninsula and has located a substayou very much; I shall lose no time in reading it;" or as when a man seeing a poor piece of carpentry said: "That chicken coop looks as if some man had made it himself." Exquisite perverse literalness of thought! And the same absolute punning, the very self-dehave already been cleared and the exstruction of a proposition, was the old death thrust at a poor poet by the friend who said: "His poetry will be read when Shakespeare and Homer are forgotten." It was a fine, doubleedged blade of speech until some crude a good crop of cucumbers for pickle fellow, Heine, I think, sharpened it to a wire edge by adding, "and not till then," a banality that dulled its perfection forever.-Atlantic Monthly.

A Modest Man's Desire.

I would not care to be so rich
That all the world would envy me;
I do not crave possessions which
Would bind me down to slavery;
I merely want a little more
Than they have who live next door.

To have the worldly means whereby I might outshine my friends and not Be forced to strain would satisfy And make me happy with my lot; I merely want a little more Than they possess who live next door.

Thus favored, I would leave behind My present friends and move away And richer, prouder neighbors find And there as now still meekly pray But to possess a little more Than they might have who lived next

And, having that, how fine and fair
A planet this would be! And when
I outshone all around me there,
I'd proudly move ahead again,
And ask for nothing, as before,
Save to eclipse the ones next door.

I would not be so rich that hate Must follow everywhere I went;
As I have tried to plainly state,
With little I could be content;
All that I ask is always more
Than they may have who live next door.

The Deadly Whisky Barrel. From the experience of two or three Oklahoma men lately, a whisky barrel seems to be about as dangerous after it is emptied as when it is serving its original purpose. Two bad accidents of the sort are reported in the last week. J. H. Dent, living near Stillwater, took an empty whisky barrel to his home and lit a match to look into it. Mr. Dent and his son Lester, were both badly bruised in the explosion which followed. On the same day a Mr. Brown, living north of Woodward, received a bad scalp wound in a similar manner. It is perhaps noteworthy that both accidents happened on Sunday. dents happened on Sunday.

Girls' over-sensitiveness and modesty often puzzle their mothers and baffle physicians, as they so often withhold their confidence from their mothers and conceal the symptoms which ought to be told to their physician at this critical period.

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scot's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

We will send you a sample free. Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrap-per of every bottle of Emulsion you buy. SCOTT & BOWNE Chemists 409 Pearl St., N. Y. NEWSY NUGGETS>

GOOD REPORTS.

Reports for the fall term of school have been received at the county school commissioner's office from the teachers of 85 out of the 164 district schools in ne county. The reports show a marked decrease in tardiness and increase in attendance over past years which is very gratifying. In the 85 schools there were 120 children who were neither absent nor tardy during the term, an excellent report when the difficulties of attending school in the country are taken into consideration.—Ann Arbor Times.

WORTHLESS CHECKS. *

The following aspeared in the Ann Arbor Times of November 6: "Worthless checks have been paseed in the city by some young man, who has gone into a store, purchased some trifling article and paid for it with a small check, usually about ten dollars, received the change and walked away Today one of our city banks received six of these worthless checks sent in by six different merchants for deposit. The checks were passed several days ago, one in particular having been pased last Saturday."

AFTER THE HUNTERS.

The following is from the Pittsfield correspondent of the Ann Arbor Times of last Friday: "Farmers in these parts have been considerably annoyed by "hunters" in the past. One farmer had a sheep killed by a stray bullet, another had to kill a valuable steer on account of the animal's having a leg fractured by a rifle ball. We might extend the list. Sunday has been "the" day of sports for the would-be nimrod. Recently some of the meek and long suffering ones have put up notices on their property forbidding bunting and warning dog owners that stray dogs will be shot. The nimrods seem to have taken this as a huge joke and have already torn down some of the signs. The shooting of a dog recently by one of the farmers ought to convince all trespassers that the signs mean just what they say and if anyone is detected in the act of tearing down any of the signs they will oe severely dealt with."

BUSHEL CCLLECTION.

Sunday, November 19 at 10 o'clock the Zion Lutheran church will hold a Thanksgiving service at which a "bushel" collection will be taken up. A bushel will be reckoned in corn, potatoes, apples, vegetables, produce of all kinds, or a money equivalent of 75 cents. This is an annual function in the Lutheran church, adopted in 1902. The year before it went into effect the Thankegiving collection was $47. In 1902, with the bushel collection it was $125; in 1903, $143; in 1904, $202, showing a progressive increase.—Ann Arbor

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"I suffered terribly with heart disease. I have been treated by different physicians for my trouble without results. I went to a physician in Memphis, who claimed that I had dropsy of the heart. He put the X-ray on me, and in connection with his medicine he came near making a finish of me. Some time before this a Mr. Young, of St. Louis, was in our town. He saw my condition, and recommended Dr. Miles' Heart Cure to me. I gave it little attention until my return from Memphis, when I concluded to try it, and am pleased to say three bottles cured me.
