A NEW BUSINESS FIRM.

FRANK E. STORMS & CO.

The Chelsea Lumber & Produce Co. Have Sold Out the Builders' Supply Department of Their Business.

A business change of considerable importance took place in Chelsea last week. Frank E. Storms has purchased the lumber, brick, tile, cement, salt, etc., business that the Chelsea Lumber & Produce Co. has conducted in connection with their produce business, and the new owners took charge of the business Friday.

Mr. Storms is not a stranger to the citizens of this part of Washtenaw county. For a number of years he conducted the Boynton farm, and since he became a resident of Chelsea—some two or three years ago—he has had charge of the lamp stove department of the Glazier Stove Co.

The business will be conducted under the firm name of F. E. Storms & Co., and the new firm will carry everything in stock that belongs to a first-class lumber yard and builders' materials. The new firm will use the offices and yards formerly occupied by the Chelsea Lumber & Produce Co., and they will be ready at all times to supply the wants of the public with a complete line of lumber, brick, tile, cement, lime, salt, etc. The Standard-Herald wishes the firm success.

The Chelsea Lumber & Produce Co., has changed its corporate name to the Chelsea Grain & Produce Co., and will continue to handle all kinds of farm produce. They will also continue the coal business. Both firms will use the office building formerly occupied by the Chelsea Lumber & Produce Co. O. C. Burkhardt will in the future do the street buying and those who have grain or produce to sell will always find him ready to make an offer for their products.

OFFICIAL FOOLISHNESS.

In His Zeal to Suppress Crime, Uncle Sam is Curtailing Personal Liberty—Some Recent Ratings.

To a man up a tree it looks as if this matter of mail surveillance is being pushed away beyond the limit, and instead of being a protection is becoming a positive menace to personal liberty. There is bound to be a public clamor, if the line is not drawn soon, for the great American people is not going to tamely submit to the meddling and dictation of fussy, pompous and tyrannical postoffice inspectors in their harmless amusements.

A department store in a western city recently had an opening. A register was provided and it was announced that all who entered their names would participate in a distribution of prizes. The local paper published an account of the affair and was held up at the postoffice on the ground that it was aiding and abetting a lottery.

People who are arranging series of card parties, with prizes, have been brought under the ban, as Uncle Sam has actually insinuated that the society card party, with the little cut glass pitcher, the hand-painted plates, and other little trifles, offered as prizes, is gambling.

The government employs a censor at each postoffice whose special duty it is to scrutinize the columns of newspapers for infringements of the law relative to the printing of results of games of chance or lottery. Even the church bazaar at which blushing misses dispose of their favors at so much per, all in a good cause, comes under this official's blue pencil. Therefore, the social game of cards, being a game of chance despite the decision of the German courts that it is a game of skill, may be imperiled at future day if the Government department decides that it has been too lax in its enforcement of this particular act.

In Des Moines recently the postmaster ruled that reports of prizes won at society parties were an infringement of the postal laws, and papers publishing them would not go through the mails. The department at Washington said that his interpretation was literally correct.

The department might be in better business. There is plenty of real gambling going on, not only in cities, but in the smaller villages. If Uncle Sam wants to do his country a real service, he should call off the official busybodies from interfering with the innocent amusements of respectable people and devote his attention to the real thing.

It is a hopeless undertaking, even for so big a person as Uncle Sam, to attempt to eliminate the elements of chance and competition. It is the mainspring of our national existence, and life would be a void without it. Stamp out the big lottery swindles. That's all right. But leave the people alone with their little prize competitions.—The Postmasters' Advocate.

THINK HE IS DEAD.

Wants Estate of Missing Washtenaw County Man Divided—He has Not Been Heard from in a Number of Years.

Unless John Fuchs, a former Washtenaw county resident, returns from his long and unexplained absence in a very few days, he will be declared legally dead by the Washtenaw courts. He disappeared from his home in 1884, and for many years nothing has been heard from him. His father died three years ago and left an estate of several thousand dollars, and the missing man inherited one quarter of it.

All possible efforts were made to find him, but without avail, and his share was turned over to the administrator of the estate to hold in trust until further action by the probate court.

The other heirs filed a petition in the probate court, Saturday, to have John declared legally dead and his share of the estate divided among the surviving heirs. Judge Leland has ordered the administrator to pay the quarter interest into court, and when the money is received he will make an order declaring John Fuchs a legal nonentity, and will divide his estate into three equal portions and distribute it among his three brothers.

Fuchs was a restless young fellow in 1884, and finally wandered away from his farm home. He was heard from at infrequent intervals for a while, his letters coming from widely separated post-offices, but finally the letters stopped, and the family have been unable to learn what has become of him.

FIRST MONDAY IN APRIL.

Several cities and villages throughout the state are preparing to make use of the primary election system in advance of its introduction through the provisions of the state law on that subject. No harm can come from experiments in that direction, and some helpful experience for later application will be secured; but such movements should not be permitted to lessen interest in the fact that all voters of the state who desire to take part in the decision for and against the adoption of primary reform must be enrolled as the law provides, on the first Monday in April. No other phase of the question is just now so important as this April enrollment.

WILL BE INCREASED.

Judge Leland, of the Washtenaw Probate Court, has decided upon a change in the amount of property in the Chas. E. Greene estate that will be subject to the inheritance tax. The amount is $1,500, and the heirs will pay pro rata to the estate on this additional sum.

Ex-Judge Watkins exempted $6,000 as estimated fees of the executor of the estate for taking care of $40,000 for 15 years, and Judge Leland has taken $1,500 from this amount and added it to the taxable list.

A Healing Gospel.

The Rev. J. C. Warren, pastor of the Sharon Baptist church, Belair, Ga., says of Electric Bitters: "It's a Godsend to mankind. It cured me of lame back, stiff joints, and complete physical collapse. I was so weak it took me half an hour to walk a mile. Two bottles of Electric Bitters have made me so strong I have just walked three miles in 50 minutes and feel like walking three more. It's made a new man of me."

HAS BEGUN DAMAGE SUIT

FOR TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Capt. E. L. Negus Wants That Amount for Injuries He Received by Falling into the Pit at the Water Works Plant.

A. J. Sawyer & Son, of Ann Arbor, attorneys for Capt. E. L. Negus, of Chelsea, have begun a $10,000 damage suit against the corporation of Chelsea for injuries that the captain received some time ago at the municipal electric light and water works plant.

At the time Mr. Negus met with the accident, he was replacing an elevated bridge that belongs to the Glazier Stove Co., which he had taken down a few days before to enable him to move a building along North street. As the work progressed, the captain discovered that he was in need of some tools to do the work with, and started for the stock room of the stove work plant to secure them, but instead of entering the stock room door he opened the pump room door, which is a few feet farther south, and as there was no bar across the doorway, the veteran of the civil war took a fall, landing on one of the pumps, some ten or twelve feet below, injuring one of his knee caps, shoulders and arms, and being quite bruised up. For a number of weeks he had to use crutches to get about town.

The captain during the rebellion was in several big battles, and while he was in the service, he says, he never received as severe a "knock-out blow" as the one he received at the water works plant. The attorney for the common council has entered an appearance for the local board, and the suit will be contested.

MELVIN-STAPISH.

The marriage of Miss Ella Melvin and Mr. Edward Stapish took place at the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Wednesday morning, February 21, 1906. There was a large number of friends and relatives of the contracting parties present to witness the beautiful wedding services, which were performed by their pastor, Rev. Fr. Considine. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Teresa Melvin, and Archie Stapish, a brother of the groom, acted as best man. After the ceremony the young couple returned to the home of the bride in Dexter township, where a wedding breakfast was served to a number of invited guests. The happy couple left yesterday afternoon for Detroit, where they will visit with friends for a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Stapish will make their home on a farm just west of the residence of Mrs. Clara Stapish.

Sentiment in a Court-Martial. A court-martial was held the other day at Chalons-sur-Marne on a youthful deserter. The prisoner's father, a railway clerk in Paris, asked to speak for him. Entering the courtroom, the father saluted the judges in military fashion. He made a speech urging the youth of his son, the disgrace that a long sentence would inflict upon the family—its long record of self-sacrifice and honor—and he alluded to his own military service, and finally undertook to be responsible for his son for the next four years. The court listened with deference and then sentenced the son, who was liable to death, to three months' imprisonment.—Paris Matin.

Ever Notice This?

You have looked at a clock thousands of times and yet not know that the four 1's which are in place of the usual IV, are there because of the obstinacy of a king of France. When Henry de Vick carried to Charles V, the first really accurate clock, the monarch informed him that the IV was wrong, and should be changed to III. Vick said, "You are wrong, your majesty." Whereat the king thundered out, "I am never wrong! Take it away and correct the mistake!" From that time to this day the four 1's have stood as the mark of the fourth hour.

WHITE HOUSE WEDDINGS

Recent Ceremony the Twelfth Held in the Executive Mansion—Twenty Years Since Miss Folsom Married President Cleveland.

President Jefferson's administration was the first that began and ended in the White House. He was a widower, and whatever success his administration had of a social character, was due to the presence of Mrs. Madison, wife of the Secretary of State, and the greatest social factor of Washington official life.

The election of James Madison brought this most popular of American women to the highest social position in the Republic.

There were two weddings in the White House while she was its mistress. The first wedding to occur in the President's house was that of the widow of a nephew of George Washington—Lucy Payne, Mrs. Madison's younger sister, who was married at the age of 15, in 1792, to George Step- ton Washington, and lived during her widowhood with the Madisons in Washington.

The second White House wedding took place after the War of 1812 was ended. Mrs. Madison gave her consent in a simpler but still a large wedding. The bride was a relative by marriage, Miss Anna Todd of Philadelphia, and the bridegroom was a member of Congress from Virginia, John G. Jackson, a great-uncle of Stonewall Jackson.

The third wedding was that of Miss Monroe.

The fourth marriage celebrated in the President's house was that of John Adams, the son and private secretary of President John Quincy Adams. He was married to his cousin, Mary Helen of Philadelphia.

Andrew Jackson's administration succeeded that of John Quincy Adams, and it is recalled as one during which there were three weddings and ary, 1842. Miss Tyler was in her nineteenth year.

A year later occurred the death of Mrs. Letitia Tyler, the wife of President Tyler, and from September, 1842, until the second marriage of the President, in 1844, eight months before his retirement, the life of the Executive Mansion was not gay. But when President Tyler left Washington early in the morning of June 25, 1844, to be married in New York, Washington society looked forward to another gay season. His bride was Miss Julia Gardner, a young woman of twenty.

The bridal reception at the Executive Mansion in Washington occurred on the Saturday following and was attended by the nearly every official in the city, all the foreign Ministers, army and navy officers and great throngs of women. All Washington, in fact, was represented at that reception, which was as notable an event as the wedding itself.

The wedding of Nellie Grant was the ninth to occur in the White House. It was the first to be celebrated in the east room, and Miss Grant was the third daughter of a President to be married in the Executive Mansion. The first, as has been stated, was Miss Marie Monroe; the second, Miss Elizabeth Tyler.

Miss Grant was 18 at the time, a handsome, happy and affectionate girl. Both on her own account and on account of her father and his position there was immense public interest in the marriage. The bridegroom was Algonquin C. F. Sartoris. He was in his twenty-second year and by birth an Englishman.

The wedding occurred May 21, 1874. The bridal party entered the east had been kept on the afternoon of Dec. 30, which fell upon Sunday. The Rev. Dr. McCabe, who had married them, renewed his pastoral blessing in the same words and heard the same pledges that were uttered twenty-five years before.

Following the ceremony a christening took place, the child, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heron, receiving the name of Lucy Hayes, in honor of Mrs. Hayes. Then Fanny and Scott Russell Hayes, two of the President's children, were baptized.

The tenth White House wedding was that of Miss Emily Platt, niece of President Hayes, who was married to Gen. Russell Hastings on June 19, 1878. The bride had been to the President and Mrs. Hayes as a daughter, and she had lived in their home for many years, going to the White House with them from Ohio. Gen. Hastings had been a companion in arms of the President, having been the Lieutenant Colonel of the Third Regiment of Ohio Volunteers, of which President Hayes was Colonel.

The ceremony was performed in the Blue room by Bishop Jagger of the Southern Diocese of Ohio. In deference to the wishes of both the bride and the bridegroom the wedding was a very quiet affair, the guests being limited almost exclusively to family friends and relations.

When next the Blue room was decorated for a marriage ceremony the wedding was that of a President, the first to be married in the White House. President Cleveland was the second Chief Magistrate to be married while in office.

Miss Frances Folsom, the bride, was 20 and was noted as being graceful Royalty Incognito in London.

The police of London can boast that their town entertains unknowingly more royal folk than any other in Europe, and without an accident befalling any of them. Once upon a time a German prince did sprain her ankle as she came down from the top of a bus, but that is the most serious casualty that ever befell a personage visiting the town unofficially.

Somewhat Startling.

The conversation had turned upon old-fashioned music. Smithson Jones, who was not musical, was suddenly startled by the lady at his side. Mr. Smithson Jones, did you ever attempt to play the lyre? "The lyre? Why, bless my soul, madam, not that I know of; I mean, unless, of course, positively compelled to do so."—Comic Life.

Britain's Oldest Office.

The oldest office under the crown is that of lord high steward, which was in existence before the time of Edward the Confessor; indeed, some authorities say that it was instituted by Offa in 757. For a long period this office was second only to the king, and the office was for some time hereditary in certain noble families.

Monument to Clown.

A well-supported movement is on foot to erect a handsome monument to Joe Grimaldi, the clown, who died in 1857, and whose tombstone in the graveyard of St. James', Pentonville, London, is in a dilapidated condition. Grimaldi was the originator of the clown's slogan, "Here we are again!"

AFTER MANY YEARS

CAME ACCIDENT THAT ENDED "SHOOTER'S" LIFE.

Jimmie O'Hare's Long Defiance of Death While Handling Nitroglycerin—Fatal Moment of Carelessness Bound to Arrive.

When Jimmie O'Hare was blown into fragments at Chelsea one day last week by the explosion of a wagon load of nitroglycerin a prophecy was fulfilled that was first made more than twenty years ago and was reiterated times without number in every oil district in the country. For Jimmie had worked in every district in the country where the chug of the oil drill has been heard, and in his life he handled enough explosives to have destroyed Port Arthur several times. Daily he lived in close association with hundreds of gallons of nitroglycerin. It was a common sight in the oil country to see him rattling over the hills on the seat of a wagon loaded with the deadly explosive.

"He will get it some day," the boys in the Pennsylvania oil fields began saying more than twenty years ago, and have repeated it everywhere Jimmie went.

But all these years Jimmie laughed at the prophecies and, laughing, would load up his wagon and rattle out into the country to shoot a well, taking with him from one to two hundred quarts of nitroglycerin. But the little adage of the pitcher tells the story of Jimmie's end. As is usually the case in such accidents, nobody knows or ever will know how it happened. There was an explosion that shook the country for miles around, and when an investigation was made there was little to be found except a wide, deep hole in the ground.

The man who was killed often told of incidents that illustrated the freakishness of the explosive he handled, and it may have been some freak that cost him his life. Jimmie used to tell of the runaway in the streets of Bradford, Pa., when a team dragged a glycerin wagon the whole length of a street, the cans rattling around like billiard balls, and no explosion occurred. Then of another case which occurred in the old days, when the glycerin box was located right over the springs of the wagon. There was a leaky can and three drops falling on the springs caused the loss of two lives. He told of still another case where a shooter on a spruce hurled bottles of glycerin against a rock. All of the bottles broke, but not one exploded. He would close with his story of that singular occurrence which took place in Chanute last spring, when a glycerin magazine caught fire and was entirely burned without exploding. And then he would say: "It's the friction, man, it's the friction, and that's what I'm always looking out for."

Maybe Jimmie forgot the friction for once. Jimmie had certain rules he observed when handling nitroglycerin. One day while discussing explosives he said: "A man had better quit this business when he loses his nerve. It is just like handling a nettle. Take hold of it and take hold strong. A nervous or panicky fellow had better stay away from glycerin, because something will happen, and it never happens to a shooter but once."

Jimmie was known to nearly every oil man in New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio, Kansas and California.—Cherryvale Correspondence Kansas City Star.

Novel Traveling Wood saw.

There has recently come into use in the rural districts a novel machine that almost entirely dispenses with manual labor in converting the long sticks into usable lengths. The operator can sit on the wagon-like frame of the machine, cut a cord of wood in thirty minutes, then ride on his machine to another wood pile in an adjoining lot, cut it in the same length of time, and likewise repeat the operation throughout the day.

The power by which the machine is operated is a two-horsepower vertical gasoline engine connected by a belt to a twenty-four-inch circular saw. The apparatus is mounted on an ordinary platform wagon, and so arranged that it can be transported from point to point. Parties owning the outfits have been making somewhat phenomenal records throughout the territory. A cord of wood has been sawed in a remarkably short time, but the average running throughout a day's sawing is about thirty minutes for a cord cut twice. This means very rapid work, as any one who has sawed wood by the old-fashioned method with crescent saw can readily realize.

A Song.

[With a Rose in Her Birthday.]
What the rose thought: Oh, to be one—but I am a rose that must bloom for a day.
My life is like color and perfume in May.
To-night I shall fade in her beautiful hair.
And touch with my petals her proud neck and fair.
Oh, to be one-and-twenty!

What she sang exultingly: Oh, to be one-and-twenty!
To feel that the glorious days of my youth
Are only the promise of hope, love and love.
That all joyful things in my bright future gleam,
And I am to live them, and find out my dream.
Oh, to be one-and-twenty!

What he wrote, sadly: Oh, to be one-and-twenty!
To dream that the great world is still all my own;
And cherish again the ideals that have flown.
To follow them, hiding cunning art,
And find them all sleeping within her warm heart.
Her heart that is one-and-twenty!
—Robert Bridges.

WENT THROUGH THE SCENERY.

Distinguished Actors Swung Their Swords to Good Effect.

David Higgins recalls an amusing story of Lawrence Barrett and John McCullough when they were starrings together in the west. The manager of some out of the way place in Colorado got them to play an engagement with him for "one night only." The stage of the theater was so small that there was hardly standing room for the company, the flies being about two feet above the actors' heads. The bill was "Richard III," and by the time they came to the last scene the patience of both McCullough and Barrett was exhausted. But they had their revenge. Just before they rushed on for the "wind-up" between Richard and Richmond, McCullough, who was playing Richard, turned to Barrett.

"How is thunter are we going to swing our swords in that space?" he asked.

"Never mind," replied Barrett, "cut the scenery down." And they did. They went at each other with a vengeance, and with every blow made a gash in the flies or cut a piece out of one of the wings. When the fight was finished and the victorious Richmond stood over his prostrate foe, the flies above him hung in ribbons, and the wings were total wrecks.

TERRIBLE SCALY ECZEMA.

Eruptions Appeared on Chest and Face and Neck Were All Broken Out—Cured by Cuticura.

"I had an eruption appear on my chest and body and extend upwards and downwards, so that my neck and face were all broken out; also my arms and the lower limbs as far as the knees. I at first thought it was prickly heat. But soon scales or crusts formed, where the breaking out was. Instead of going to a physician I purchased a complete treatment of the Cuticura Remedies, in which I had great faith, and all was satisfactory. A year or two later the eruption appeared again, only a little lower; but before it had time to spread I procured another supply of the Cuticura Remedies, and continued their use until the cure was complete. It is now five years since the last attack, and have not seen any signs of a return. I have more faith in Cuticura Remedies for skin diseases than anything I know of. Emma E. Wilson, Liscomb, Iowa, Oct. 1, 1905."

Woman Expert Chauffeur.

A clever housemaid employed by a family in London who took to motoring, was told by her master that if she proved as good a chauffeur as she was a housemaid he would employ her to drive his car. She took him at his word and learned motor mechanics and now, at a salary of $150 a year, she combines the two posts. She is a capital driver, can do most repairs, and after overhauling her car at the end of a day's run waits at the family dinner table.—London Mail.

America's "Good" Women.

There are many varieties of good women in the world, some passive and others active, some subjective and others aggressive. The good American woman is the most active and aggressive of her sex. She exercises the strictest discipline over her own family. She has the most decided convictions on social questions. In nine cases out of ten she is an anti-drinker, anti-smoker and anti-gambler.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Imitation Precious Stones.

It is now possible to produce in paste an imitation of almost every precious stone which is capable of deceiving the eyes of all but the most expert. Not only is there a superficial resemblance, but a skillfully prepared "paste" stone exhibits the same luster and high index of refraction and dispersion as would a diamond of the first water.

Not What He Meant.

A bashful young couple, who were evidently very much in love, entered a crowded street car in Boston the other day. "Do you suppose we can squeeze in here?" he asked, looking doubtfully at her blushing face. "Don't you think, dear, we had better wait until we get home?" was the embarrassed reply.

UNDER WHICH KING

"The More Postum the More Food—The More Coffee the More Poison."

The Pres. of the W. C. T. U. in a young giant state in the Northwest says: "I did not realize that I was a slave to coffee till I left off drinking it. For three or four years I was obliged to take a nerve tonic every day. Now I am free, thanks to Postum Food Coffee."

"After finding out that coffee will do to its victims, I could hardly stand to have my husband drink it; but he was not willing to quit. I studied for months to find a way to induce him to leave it off. Finally I told him I would make no more coffee. "I got Postum Food Coffee, and made it strong—billed it the required time, and had him read the little book, 'The Road to Wellville,' that comes in every pkg. "To-day Postum has no stronger advocate than my husband! He tells of friends how to make it, and that he got through the winter without a spell of the grip and has not had a headache for months—he used to be subject to frequent nervous headaches. "The stronger you drink Postum the more food you get; the stronger you drink coffee the more poison you get." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

RAISED FROM A DEATH-BED.

Mr. Pitts, Once Pronounced incurable, Has Been Well Three Years.

E. E. Pitts, 67 Hathaway St., Shreveport, La., says: "Seven years ago my back ached and I was run down that I was laid up four months. I had night sweats and fainting spells and passed every few minutes with intense pain and looked like a ghost. Dropsy set in and the doctors decided I could not live."

My wife got me using Doan's Kidney Pills, and as they helped me I took heart, kept on and was cured so thoroughly that I've been well three years."

Italian Women Pack Heavy Loads.

In Italy the people take it for granted that women should carry heavy loads. Horses and wagons are scarce and it is common for women to carry heavy loads of wood from the dock to the market place. Often they are so heavy the women look as if they would stagger underneath. They cart this wood all day for less than fifty cents, though the lumber is disposed of in the market at a good price.

Aid to Absent-Minded.

A Vienna society has been formed to aid persons with short memories. A card is issued, upon which the purchaser writes the date of an engagement and posts it to the society's office. By the first post on the day of his engagement the card is received by the patron, who is thus reminded of his engagement.

TWITCHING NERVES.

A Serious Hereditary Trouble Cured By Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Sufferers from ailments that have afflicted in regular succession one generation after another of their family are, as a rule, inclined to submit to them as inevitable. The case which follows proves that such hereditary difficulties are not beyond the reach of curative forces and should inspire hopefulness and a readiness to try remedies that have effected signal cures, such as that which is here given.

Mrs. Elizabeth Rannells, of No. 408 East Seventh street, Newton, Kansas, gives the following account of her ailment and her cure:

"For two years I suffered from a trying nervousness in my lower limbs from my of the age. My mother and my grandmother had suffered before me. The situation was for many years accepted as unavoidable because hereditary. But about two years ago, when my son was realizing benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I thought there might possibly be some good in them for me. My trouble had then become so serious as to make it difficult for me to sleep. I often had to walk the floor in restless sleep the whole night. After taking some six boxes the twitching disappeared and I ceased to use the remedy. I evidently stopped a little too soon for nervousness came back after a month or so and I used the pills again for a short time. Relief came at once and since I stopped using them the second time I have been free from any return of the twitchings or from any interference with my sleep."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured the worst cases of bloodlessness, indigestion, influenza, headaches, lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, nervousness, spinal weakness and the special ailments of girls and women. For further information, address the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schuetteville, V. Y.

Atlas Engines

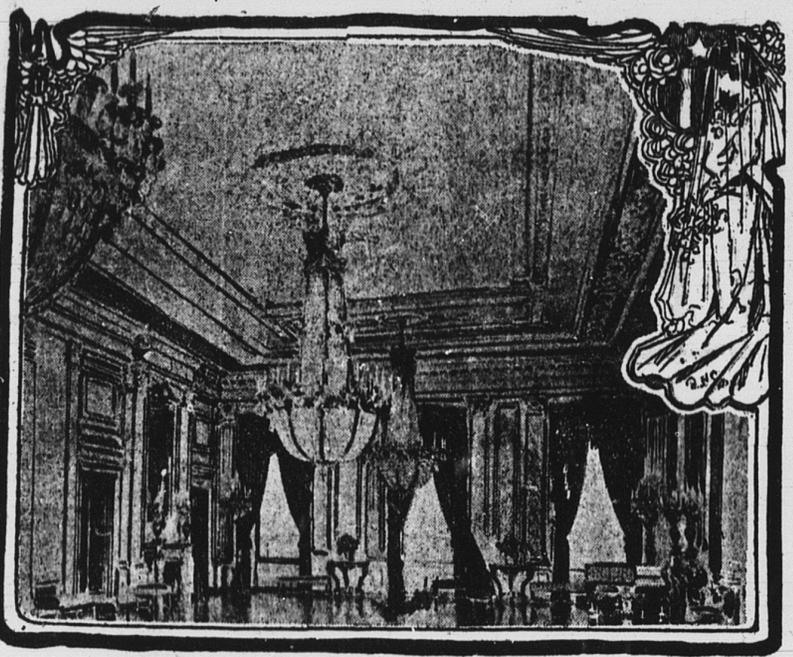

Many prospective purchasers of engines and boilers are dissatisfied because the Atlas Throttling Engine is of such high grade, and because it is fitted with a balance valve, and makes heating, such as only Collins engines of other makes contain, it is necessarily of such price that it is quite out of their reach. This is not true. An Atlas engine is no higher in price than any other engine, except, perhaps, one that is made entirely in a foundry.

For full information hereof, see the present an approximate price upon a 10-hp. Throttling Atlas Engine, range 45 to 60 Horse Power. $350.00

This includes engine complete with band wheel, governor, throttle valve, and all regular fittings and represents the price delivered to a local factory, or, if it is not at our place, at any of the following points:

THE EAST ROOM IN THE EXECUTIVE MANSION AT WASHINGTON.

wedding reception in the White House.

The fifth marriage in White House history was that of Miss Della Lewis of Nashville, Tenn., whose father, William B. Lewis, was one of President Jackson's most intimate personal friends. Miss Lewis was married to Mr. Alphonse Joseph Year Pastore, a native of Martinique, who was secretary of the French Legation at the time of his marriage.

President Jackson was intensely fond of his wife's relatives, and being a childless widower and having not a relative in the world of his own, gathered about him many young people, among whom were several of Mrs. Jackson's nieces.

Mary Easton, a Tennessee girl, was one of these nieces, and when she was married to Lucien B. Polk of Tennessee the President arranged to have the ceremony take place in the Blue room.

Another White House marriage that occurred during President Jackson's administration was that of Miss Emily Martin, a niece of Mrs. Donelson, who became the bride of Lewis Randolph, a grandson of Jefferson.

Andrew Jackson, Jr., the adopted son and private secretary of President Jackson, married, soon after the inauguration, Miss Sarah Yorke of Philadelphia, and the wedding reception was held at the White House. This was the first of several wedding receptions of the sons of Presidents which have occurred there.

The next wedding festivity to take place in the President's house was in the administration of President Martin Van Buren. He gave a very brilliant wedding reception to his son, Maj. Van Buren, whose bride was the accomplished Miss Angelica Singleton, of South Carolina.

Following the one month administration of President William Henry Harrison, Vice President John Tyler became the tenth President. The year succeeding his incumbency the eighth wedding to occur in what was now styled the Executive Mansion took place. The bride was Elizabeth Tyler, who was married to William Walter of Williamsburg, Va., in the Blue room of the Executive Mansion at Washington on the 31st day of January, 1842. Miss Tyler was in her nineteenth year.

A year later occurred the death of Mrs. Letitia Tyler, the wife of President Tyler, and from September, 1842, until the second marriage of the President, in 1844, eight months before his retirement, the life of the Executive Mansion was not gay. But when President Tyler left Washington early in the morning of June 25, 1844, to be married in New York, Washington society looked forward to another gay season. His bride was Miss Julia Gardner, a young woman of twenty.

The bridal reception at the Executive Mansion in Washington occurred on the Saturday following and was attended by the nearly every official in the city, all the foreign Ministers, army and navy officers and great throngs of women. All Washington, in fact, was represented at that reception, which was as notable an event as the wedding itself.

The wedding of Nellie Grant was the ninth to occur in the White House. It was the first to be celebrated in the east room, and Miss Grant was the third daughter of a President to be married in the Executive Mansion. The first, as has been stated, was Miss Marie Monroe; the second, Miss Elizabeth Tyler.

Miss Grant was 18 at the time, a handsome, happy and affectionate girl. Both on her own account and on account of her father and his position there was immense public interest in the marriage. The bridegroom was Algonquin C. F. Sartoris. He was in his twenty-second year and by birth an Englishman.

The wedding occurred May 21, 1874. The bridal party entered the east room through the corridor, the bridesmaids walking in couples. They were the Misses Conkling, Frelinghuysen, Drexel, Porter, Fish, Barnes, Dent and Sherman. The Rev. Dr. Tiffany led the procession, followed by the bridegroom, who was supported by his best man, Lieut. Col. Fred Grant. The bridesmaids preceded the bride, who entered the room leaning on the arm of her father. Mrs. Grant and her two younger sons followed.

On a raised platform facing the large east window and under a bell of white flowers the bridal couple stood. The service was that of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The bride's dress was of ivory white satin, covered with a skirt of rose point lace. The skirt had a very long sweeping train lined with white silk. The edges of the lace overskirt had a fringe of orange blossoms and lily of the valley sprays.

The high corsage was cut square in the neck and filled in with diagonal folds of tulle. Point lace, matching the flounces in pattern, together with orange blossoms, ornamented the bodice and adorned the sleeves. The long veil was of the thinnest tulle, with the faint edge undefined by a hem. The bridal chapel of orange flowers crossed the front of the collar, and was caught at the left side in a cluster.

The wedding breakfast was served in the State dining-room. The gifts came from a great number of donors and were valued at upward of $100,000, a great sum in those days.

The autumn succeeding the marriage of Miss Nellie Grant her brother, Col. Frederick Dent Grant, was married in Chicago on Oct. 20 to Miss Ida Honore, and on Nov. 10 the President and Mrs. Grant gave the bridal pair a reception at the White House. Col. and Mrs. Grant passed the next three winters in the White House, and it was there that their daughter, Julia Grant, was born in June, 1876. This daughter is now the Princess Cantacuzene, Countess Speraskey of Russia.

Twenty years have passed since Miss Frances Folsom became a bride at the White House, and thirty-four years have been numbered since Gen. Grant's only daughter was married in the East Room.

and winsome. Her engagement to the President was made in the summer of 1885. Soon after she went to Europe with her mother, and remained there until a few days before her wedding. That occurred on the evening of June 2, 1886, at 7 o'clock, in the Blue room. To the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," played by the Marine Band, the bridal couple, unattended, passed down the stairway and entered the Blue room from the western corridor. Dr. Sunderland met them under the glittering center chandelier and the wedding service followed.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin, with trimmings of India silk arranged in Grecian folds over the front of the high corsage and fastened in the folds of satin at the side. Orange blossoms and buds and leaves outlined this drapery and adorned the edge of the skirt.

A coronet of orange blossoms fastened the veil, and garnitures of the same blossoms were artistically arranged throughout the costume. Her veil of silk tulle enveloped her and softened the effect of the satin gown. It fell over the entire length of the long court train.

Gloves reaching to the elbow completed the costume. No jewelry save her engagement ring was worn, and no flowers were carried.

The habit of gift making had not reached its height when President Cleveland was married, and the crowned heads of Europe, the American Ministers at foreign courts, and countless other people contented themselves with sending telegrams of congratulation. The only gift the bride exhibited to her friends was a diamond necklace, composed of a single string of brilliants, the gift of the bridegroom. To this gift Mr. Bissell, the former law partner of the President, added a pendant of diamonds.

The wedding of Miss Alice Roosevelt and Congressman Nicholas Longworth in the East Room of the Executive Mansion is the twelfth to occur in the White House.

The first silver wedding to be celebrated in the White House was that of President and Mrs. Hayes. On Dec. 31, 1877, they met their friends in the Blue room. The actual anniversary had been kept on the afternoon of Dec. 30, which fell upon Sunday. The Rev. Dr. McCabe, who had married them, renewed his pastoral blessing in the same words and heard the same pledges that were uttered twenty-five years before.

Following the ceremony a christening took place, the child, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heron, receiving the name of Lucy Hayes, in honor of Mrs. Hayes. Then Fanny and Scott Russell Hayes, two of the President's children, were baptized.

The tenth White House wedding was that of Miss Emily Platt, niece of President Hayes, who was married to Gen. Russell Hastings on June 19, 1878. The bride had been to the President and Mrs. Hayes as a daughter, and she had lived in their home for many years, going to the White House with them from Ohio. Gen. Hastings had been a companion in arms of the President, having been the Lieutenant Colonel of the Third Regiment of Ohio Volunteers, of which President Hayes was Colonel.

The ceremony was performed in the Blue room by Bishop Jagger of the Southern Diocese of Ohio. In deference to the wishes of both the bride and the bridegroom the wedding was a very quiet affair, the guests being limited almost exclusively to family friends and relations.

When next the Blue room was decorated for a marriage ceremony the wedding was that of a President, the first to be married in the White House. President Cleveland was the second Chief Magistrate to be married while in office.

Miss Frances Folsom, the bride, was 20 and was noted as being graceful and winsome. Her engagement to the President was made in the summer of 1885. Soon after she went to Europe with her mother, and remained there until a few days before her wedding. That occurred on the evening of June 2, 1886, at 7 o'clock, in the Blue room. "Warrington" Drawn from Life.

A letter from Thackeray, found among the papers of the late George M. Crawford, Paris correspondent of the London Daily News, establishes the fact that Mr. Crawford was the original of Warrington. "You will find much to remind you in 'Pendennis' of old talks and faces—of William John O'Connell, Jack Sheehan and Andrew Archdean. There is something of you in Warrington, but he is not fit to hold a candle to you, for, taking you all around, you are the most genuine fellow that ever strayed from a better world into this. * * * Warrington is always gazing beer; but he has your honesty, and, like you, could not posture if he tried."

White Rainbows.
A fine rain and a strong sun are necessary for the formation of white rainbows. The phenomenon is due to the optical principle known as interference. If the drops of water be very small, the interference of the rays causes such a complete overlapping of the colors that the bow appears white. The various prismatic colors, instead of being thrown out separately, as in the ordinary prism, are thrown one on top of the other, and the light is cast by the sun on a sheet of rain. This result is still more noticeable where a fog takes the place of the rain.

Seek to Cure Deafness.
In a London hospital a wave siren is used to test what sounds a deaf person hears. When once it is discovered that a certain note is not heard or only heard indistinctly a tuning fork of this note is selected, and an attempt is made to stimulate the muscle and to arouse the nerve. If the tuning fork is not sufficient, the sound is increased by means of a resonator.

It is said that keeping the air passages open so that the breath is drawn into both nostrils equally, together with practicing deep breathing, which puts and keeps in commission the whole area of the lungs, will, as a rule, banish insomnia.

THE GREAT K&A TRAIN ROBBERY

BY PAUL LEXESTER FORD, Author of 'The Non-Parasite', 'The Non-Parasite', etc.

CHAPTER XII—Continued.

While they were engaged in this, I was trying to think out some way of letting Mr. Cullen and Albert know where the letters were. The problem was to suggest the saddle to them, without letting the cowboys understand, and by good luck I thought I had the means. Albert had complained to me the day we had ridden out to the Indian dwellings at Flagstaff that his saddle fretted some galled spots which he had chafed on his trip to Moran's point. Hoping he would "catch," I shouted to him:

"How are your sore spots, Albert?"

He looked at me in a puzzled way, and called, "Aw, I don't understand you."

"Those sore spots you complained about to me the day before yesterday," I explained.

He didn't seem any the less befogged as he replied, "I had forgotten all about them."

"I've got a touch of the same trouble," I went on; "and, if I were you, I'd look into the cause."

Albert only looked very much mystified, and I didn't dare say more, for at this point the trio, with the sheriff, came out of my car. If I hadn't known that the letters were safe, I could have read the story in their faces, for more disgusted and angry-looking men I have rarely seen.

They had a talk with the sheriff, and then Fred, Lord Ralles, and I were marched off by the official, his lordship loudly demanding sight of a warrant, and protesting against the illegality of his arrest, varied at moments by threats to appeal to the British consul, minister plenipo, her Majesty's Foreign Office, etc., all of which had about as much influence on the sheriff and his cowboy assistants as a Moqui Indian snake-dance would have in stopping a runaway engine. I confess to feeling a certain grim satisfaction in the fact that if I was to be shut off from seeing Madge, the Britisher was in the same box with me.

Ash Forks, though only six years old, had advanced far enough towards civilization to have a small jail, and into that we were shoved. Night was come by the time we were lodged there, and, being in pretty good appetite, I struck the sheriff for some grub.

"I'll git yer something," he said, good-naturedly; "but next time yer shove people, Mr. Gordon, just quit shovin' yer friends. My shoulder feels like—perhaps it's just as well not to say what his shoulder felt like. The Western vocabulary is expressive, but at times not quite fit for publication.

The moment the sheriff was gone, Fred wanted the mystery of the letters explained, and I told him all there was to tell, including as good a description of the pony as I could give him. We tried to hit on some plan to get word to those outside, but it wasn't to be done. At least it was a point gained that some one of our party besides myself knew where the letters were.

The sheriff returned presently with a loaf of canned bread and a tin of beans. If I had been alone, I should have kicked at the food and got permission for my darkies to send me up something from 97; but I thought I'd see how Lord Ralles would like genuine Western fare, so I said nothing. That, I have to state, is more or rather less—than the Britisher did.

Insomnia Easy to Banish.
It is said that keeping the air passages open so that the breath is drawn into both nostrils equally, together with practicing deep breathing, which puts and keeps in commission the whole area of the lungs, will, as a rule, banish insomnia.

was less sure of meeting you," I retorted; "and as for the cowboys, you'll have to be as tricky with them as you want to be with me before you'll get them to back you up in your dirty work."

At this point the sheriff called back to ask Camp if he was coming.

"All right," cried Camp, and went to the door. "This is the last call," he snarled, pausing for a moment on the threshold.

"I hope so," said I, more calmly in manner than in feeling, I have to acknowledge, for I didn't like the look of things. That they were in earnest I felt pretty certain, for I understood now why they had let my companions out of jail. They knew that angry cowboys were a trifle indiscriminate, and didn't care to risk hanging more than was necessary.

A long time seemed to pass after they were gone, but in reality it wasn't more than fifteen minutes before I heard some one steal up and softly unlock the door. I confess the evident endeavor to do it quietly gave me a scare, for it seemed to me it couldn't be an above-board movement. Thinking this, I picked up the box on which I had been sitting and prepared to make the best fight I could. It was a good deal of relief, therefore, when

"Well, Mr. Gordon, you've played a pretty cute game, and I suppose you think you stand to win the pot."

"I'm not complaining," I said.

"Still," snarled Camp, angrily, as if my contented manner fretted him, "our time will come presently, and we can make it pretty uncomfortable for you. Illegal proceedings put a man in jail in the long run."

"I hope you take your lesson to heart," I remarked cheerfully, which made Camp scowl worse than ever.

"Now," said Baldwin, who kept cool, "we know you are not risking loss of position and we want to know what there is in it for you?"

"I wouldn't stake my chance of State's prison against yours, gentlemen. And, while I may lose my position, I'll be a long way from starvation."

"That doesn't tell us what Cullen gives you to take the risk."

"Mr. Cullen hasn't given, or even hinted that he'll give, anything."

"And Mr. Gordon hasn't asked, and, if I know him, wouldn't take a cent for what he has done," said Fred, rising from the floor.

"You mean to say you are doing it for nothing?" exclaimed Camp, incredulously.

"That's about the truth of it," I said; though I thought of Madge as I said it, and felt guilty in suggesting that she was nothing.

"Then what is your motive?" cried Baldwin.

If there had been any use, I should have replied, "The right," but I knew that they would only think I was posing if I said it. Instead I replied:

"Mr. Cullen's party has the stock majority in their favor, and would have won a fair fight if you had played fair. Since you didn't, I'm doing my best to put things to rights."

Camp cried, "All the more fool—" but Baldwin interrupted him by saying:

"That only shows what a mean cuss Cullen is. He ought to give you ten thousand, if he gives you a cent."

"Yes," cried Camp, "those letters are worth money, whether he's offered it or not."

"Mr. Cullen never so much as hinted paying me," said I.

"Well, Mr. Gordon," said Baldwin, suavely, "we'll show you that we can be more liberal. Though the letters rightfully belong to Mr. Camp, if you'll deliver them to us we'll see that you don't lose your place, and we'll give you five thousand dollars."

I glanced at Fred, whom I found looking at me anxiously, and asked him:

"Can't you do better than that?"

"We could with any one but you," said Fred.

I should have liked to shake hands over this compliment, but I only nodded, and turning to Mr. Camp, said:

"You see how mean they are."

"You'll find we are not built that way," said Baldwin. "Five thousand isn't a bad day's work, eh?"

"No," I said, laughing; "but you just told me I ought to get ten thousand if I got a cent."

"It's worth ten to Mr. Cullen, but—" I interrupted by saying, "If it's worth ten to him, it's worth a hundred to me."

That was too much for Camp. First he said something best omitted, and then went on, "I told you it was waste of time trying to win him over."

The three stood apart for a moment whispering, and then Judge Wilson called the sheriff over, and they all went out together. The moment we were alone, Frederic held out his hand, and said:

"Gordon, it's no use saying anything, but if you can ever do—"

I merely shook hands, but I wanted the worst way to say:

"Tell Madge what I've done, and the thing's square."

CHAPTER XIII.

A Lesson in Politeness.

Within five minutes we had a big surprise, for the sheriff and Mr. Baldwin came back, and the former announced that Fred and Lord Ralles were free, having been released on bail. When we found that Baldwin had gone on the bond, I knew that there was a scheme of some sort in the move, and, taking Fred aside, I warned him against trying to recover the proxies.

"They probably think that one or the other of you knows where the letters are hidden," I whispered, "and they'll keep a watch on you; so go slow."

He nodded, and followed the sheriff and Lord Ralles out.

The moment they were gone, Mr. Camp said, "I came back to give you a last chance."

"That's very good of you," I said.

"I warn you," he muttered threateningly, "we are not men to be beaten. There are fifty cowboys of Baldwin's in this town, who think you were cerned in the holding up. By merely tipping them the wink, they'll get you out of this, and after they've got you outside I wouldn't give the toss of your life for you. Now, then, will you hand over those letters, or will you go to—inside of ten minutes?"

I lost my temper in turn. "I'd much prefer going to some place where I

BURIAL IN LABRADOR

PECULIAR CUSTOMS DATE FROM CENTURIES AGO.

Males Always Buried with Instruments of the Chase in Their Cairns—Worn-out Razors Put to Strange Use by the Survivors.

Labrador's dreary waste is peopled, generally speaking, by a few scattered tribes of Montagnais Indians, while its seaboard in the north is occupied by about 3,000 Eskimos. Each race has its peculiar burial customs, interesting if awesome. When a member of a community dies the Eskimos carry the body to the top of a hill near their settlement and there lay it, in a sitting posture, on the surface of the hard, flinty ground. Heavy stones are piled about it in the form of a cairn, completely covering it so that the wolves and bears may be unable to disturb the body. The male is buried with his weapons of the chase and the female with her domestic implements. After years, when the action of summer suns and winter snows has broken down the mount of stones, it is not uncommon for other natives to help themselves to the stone lamps, flint and ivory arrow and lance heads and other articles of value to them which are found lying beside the bodies. But in every case some substitute, even if less valuable, is placed there instead of what has been removed.

It is the idea of the pagan Eskimos that though the spirit of the dead person has reached the other world and no longer needs the articles, the ghosts who attended on him in life have to be propitiated by keeping up the number of articles originally placed in the grave, even if the material of these is deported from. The Moravian missionaries humor the natives whom they have Christianized by practicing this habit of substitution, and a favorable article to place in the graves is a rusty razor. Many years ago some admirer of the mission sent out an enormous quantity of razors in the belief that they were in general use. But the last thing one would contemplate doing on this coast in winter would be to use a razor. As no other use could be found for the razors they have been devoted to this peculiar purpose, and so it is common to see in every Eskimo grave that has been opened an appliance which no old-time Eskimo ever heard of.

These curious customs are transmitted from people to people. The Montagnais Indians have a somewhat similar practice. They bury their dead in a box or coffin made out of bark, and in this are placed a loaded gun, a horn of powder, a bag of shot, a pouch of tobacco, a flint and steel for striking fire, an ax and a pair of snowshoes. The burial place is likewise a hill-top, and stones are also used to cover the coffin. But they are so arranged that so soon as can be removed after ten days when the relatives return and take out these valuable articles. It is held that by that time the dead one has reached the happy hunting grounds and has no further use for them. But even they, too, substitute wooden sticks for the gun, ax and snowshoes, and skins for other articles.

Courtesy to Children.

Parents are never too old to learn. Courtesy from a child is expected; but in too many cases no thought is given to the duty of returning the compliment. Even the spoiled darling of the most indulgent mother is at times made the butt of her irritability of temper, or the victim of a sudden whim for discipline exhibited in public that shocks his sensibilities cruelly, says the London Mail. The wrong way to reprimand is to use rough, loud tones and sharp criticisms. The firm voice that is absolutely under control only should give orders and correct faults in the nursery. And it should be in the nursery, or, better still, in the mother's own room, that fault finding should take place. To hurt a child's sensibilities by correcting it, either by word or deed, before a stranger is a great act of unkindness on the part of the parent or nurse. A certain father, of uncertain temper and intensity of speech, whom I know, unable at all times to keep a watch upon his tongue, refrains from visiting the nursery when his anger runs high, thereby setting himself a penance, for fear worse befall, that other fathers might follow.

Unfamiliar.

It is said that a candidate who was more famous for his interest in sport than his knowledge of politics was addressing a Scotch political meeting. Just to test the candidate's ignorance, a schoolmaster sent up a slip of paper asking his opinion of the Decalogue. The candidate was utterly puzzled, and turned to some one on the platform and asked him what the Decalogue was. "The man on the platform, being something of a wag, whispered in his reply, 'Plogging in the army.' The candidate at once turned to the meeting and said, 'I would, if elected certainly go away with the Decalogue at once. But gentlemen, let me ask you to write all questions in good plain Scots language, for there are no foreigners here!'

His Part.

He wished to do some splendid thing To gain the world's applause, And spent his days endeavoring To find a worthy cause.

He longed to loom above the crowd, To gain some noble end, And never made another proud To claim him as a friend.

He wished to sway in some high sphere, And spurred the common way, In which he might have given cheer To him who might have given cheer.

And been awarded praise. —E. E. Kline.

SENTIMENT COUNTS FOR MUCH.

Wisdom in Remembering Anniversaries of the Family.

The happiest households are those that do not let die out the sentiment connected with various anniversaries. Although gift giving or recognition of such events in a suitable way may be out of the question owing to the strained circumstances of those "with-in the gates," there can yet be a little air of festivity when mother's or father's birthday comes round or some wedding anniversary is to be celebrated, says the Brooklyn Times. An extra dish, a little bunch of flowers or some special music prepared for the occasion will show the kindly spirit and the loving remembrance that count far more than the money value of any gift. As the children grow up if these festivities are encouraged they will have much to look forward to and much more to remember in the years to come when they go out to do battle with the world and find that sentiment is crushed under foot and affection is regarded only as a side issue.

Who a Cure cannot be too highly spoken of as a cough cure.—J. W. O'BRIEN, 322 Third Ave., Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 6, 1907

Most of us want to cast our bread upon the waters with a string tied to it.

Nervous Women

Their Sufferings Are Usually Due to Female Disorders Perhaps Unsuspected

A MEDICINE THAT CURES

Can we dispute the well-known fact that American women are nervous? How often do we hear the expression, "I am so nervous, it seems as if I should fly," or, "Don't speak to me." Little things annoy you and make you irritable; you can't sleep, you are unable to quietly and calmly perform your daily tasks or care for your children.

The relation of the nerves and generative organs in woman is so close that nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous debility, the blues, sleeplessness and nervous irritability arise from some derangement of the organism which makes her a woman. Fits of depression or restlessness and irritability; spirits easily affected, so that one minute she laughs, the next minute weeps; pain in the abdominal region and between the shoulders; loss of voice; nervous dyspepsia; a tendency to cry at the least provocation—all these point to nervous prostration.

Nothing will relieve this distressing condition and prevent months of prostration and suffering so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. M. E. Shotwell, of 103 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"I cannot express the wonderful relief I have experienced by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered for a long time with nervous prostration, headache, loss of appetite. I could not sleep and would walk the floor almost every night.

"I had three doctors and got no better, and life was a burden. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it did work wonders for me.

"I am a well woman, my nervousness is all gone and my friends say I look ten years younger."

Will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince all women of its virtues? Surely you cannot wish to remain sick, weak and discouraged, exhausted each day, when you can be as easily cured as other women.

Name of Thomas Jefferson One of America's Greatest

One of the first documents with which the American student becomes familiar is the Declaration of Independence. He reads it, in his childhood, upon those red-letter occasions, the village Fourth of July celebrations; he peruses it with the history of his country; and it is given him for critical study in connection with his rhetoric.

The author of this wonderful composition was a strange combination of simplicity and astuteness. In some things he was impractical and visionary in the extreme; in others his judgment was unerring and his foresight remarkable.

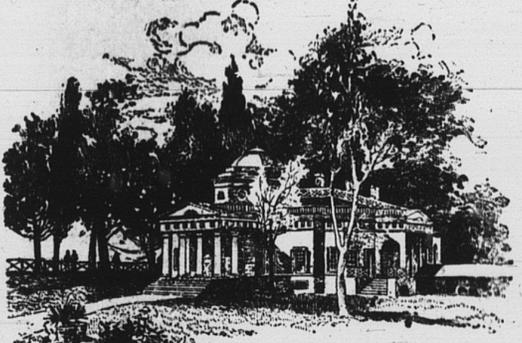

He was an opponent of slavery, contending that the continuance of the traffic in humanity would result in trouble and bloodshed. He went so far as to incorporate in the Declaration of Independence an article denouncing George III for encouraging the slave trade. This was one of the clauses that was stricken out by the revising committee. Later, when in the house of burgesses of Virginia, he attempted to secure the enactment of a law to the effect that after a certain date all negroes born of slave parents were to live, though not inactivity. It was during this period of retirement that he wrote his "Notes on Virginia." A large part of this work was done under the shelter of a peculiar rock, which still stands, and which has been known, since that time, as "Jefferson's Rock."

In 1782 death took from him his beloved wife, and to divert his mind from his sorrow he accepted a mission to France. In 1783 he returned to serve another term in congress, and later returned again to France, spending several years there as the representative of this nation. He returned to become a member of Washington's cabinet, in the capacity of secretary of state.

It is a remarkable coincidence that the close of the life of the author of the document that gave this country the Fourth to celebrate should occur on July 4, but such was the case.

His health began failing him in the winter of 1826. He continued to decline throughout the spring and the early summer months, and it was evident to all, himself included, that he was nearing his end. He expressed an earnest desire to live till July 4, the anniversary of the signing of the be free. The act was defeated. In his autobiography, written in 1821, he says:

"The day is not far distant when it must adopt it, or worse will follow. Nothing is more certainly written in the book of fate than these people are to be free."

As a contrast to these prophetic statements, listen to what he had to say relative to yellow fever:

"Most evils are the means of producing some good. The yellow fever will discourage the growth of great cities in our nation, and I view great cities as pestilential to the morals, health and liberties of man." Later he wrote:

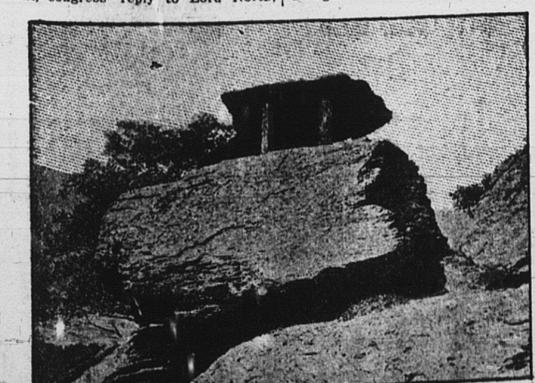

"Cultivators of the earth are the most vigorous, the most virtuous, the most independent. I consider artificers as panders of vice and the instruments by which the liberties of a country are generally overturned. Were I to indulge in my own theories, I should wish the States to practice neither commerce nor navigation."

Jefferson came from an old American family, his ancestors having preceded the Plymouth Pilgrims. He first saw the light of day April 13, 1743. He was sensibly brought up, received a fair education, and was not remiss in physical culture. He entered the William and Mary college at the age of 17, and continued therein until he graduated. He then read law in the office of George Wythe, began the practice of law in 1767, and married the young widow of Bathurst Skelton, Jan. 1, 1772. Jefferson was twice elected to the house of burgesses of Virginia, and then became a member of the Colonial congress, in which body he was chosen to draft the reply of Virginia to Lord North's conciliatory propositions. He also drafted the manifesto after the battle of Bunker Hill, congress' reply to Lord North, and later was made chairman of the committee appointed to draw up a Declaration of Independence.

After serving two terms in congress, and declining to serve a third term to which he had been elected, he attempted to retire to private life, but was persuaded to enter a third time the house of burgesses of Virginia. After serving the state in this capacity, he was elected governor of the state.

It was a turbulent period in the history of that commonwealth, and at the end of his term he again sought primost illustrious man in all the history of the modern age, or indeed since the fall of the Roman empire. "Washington, in the grand free republic which he built, has in his honor a monument which, in the magnitude of its dimensions, in the beneficence of its mission and in its ability to promote the happiness and welfare of its people, has no parallel in the entire history of human affairs. His great and glorious works, which follow and survive him, mark him as truly the grandest man of any age or period."

BIRTHPLACE OF FREEDOM

Daughters of the Revolution to Erect Historic Arch at Cambridge, Mass.

Historic arch to be erected at Cambridge by Daughters of the Revolution.

Plans for the historic arch which is to be erected at one of the entrances to the old Cambridge (Mass.) common by the national society, Daughters of the Revolution, have been approved, and the work will begin immediately.

When the plans were first presented to Mayor Daly of Cambridge the proposed site for the arch was at the entrance to the common near the historic Washington elm. However, after the various committees had been consulted in the matter the site was changed to the entrance at the intersection of Gardner street and Massachusetts avenue, very nearly opposite Christ church.

The plan for the arch is suggestive of colonial architecture, flanked on either side by low walls, that form a recess. On each of the side walls are low stone seats. Between the two large gateposts is a wrought iron arch, having in the center the seal of Massachusetts.

The arch will cover an area 30 feet in length and 10 feet in depth. The gate opening is about eight feet and the arch will be 15 feet high. Granite is to be used for the stone work, and the recess is to be paved with granolithic blocks.

On the walls at either side of the gate posts there will be two handsome bronze tablets setting forth the purpose of the memorial. On one tablet is the seal of the society and figures representing Justice and Prosperity, with the inscription: "Near this spot Washington took command of the continental army July 6th, 1775." Erected by the Daughters of the Revolution (the date to be added). The other tablet has a portrait of Washington, with the continental flag, and figures representing peace and war.

GREAT STATESMAN AS HE WAS.

Portraits of Washington Have Not Done Him Justice.

"Napoleon's cynical definition of history as 'a lie agreed upon' has a direct application to the general acceptance of a most inaccurate portrait of Washington. Whatever the father of his country may have looked like, he certainly did not resemble the popular 'Stuart.'" This rather startling assertion is made by William Curtis Taylor in the text of an interesting study in the Booklovers Magazine. His method of proof is "to secure a scientific confirmation of the agreements and comparative effacement of the disagreements of the original artists" for whom Washington actually sat. After a careful study of over 4,000 engravings and a number of original paintings and various coins at the mint, a final reference was made to composite photography, three applications being made. "The selections for the several groupings were not arbitrary, but were guided only by the point of view of the features." The resulting Washington is remarkable in its definiteness of outline and lifelike appearance. The reproductions of the original paintings which accompany the article are very helpful in following Mr. Taylor's interesting discussion of the individual conceptions of the different artists.

Washington gave at least forty-five sittings to over a score of aspirants, besides posing for several shadow silhouettes. How he regarded this tax on comfort he remarked in a letter to a friend: "I am so hackneyed to the touches of the painter's pencil that I am now altogether at their beck and sit like Patience on a monument while they are delineating the lines of my face. At first I was as impatient at the request and as restive under the operation as a colt is of the saddle; now no dray moved more readily to the mill than I to the painter's chair."

"Few distinguished men of our day," Mr. Taylor asserts, "if they were painted by so many different artists, would show without variation in such a range of portraits the kindly phases of character which are reflected from the canvases that we have been considering. We can no longer believe those historians who tell us of the habitual stateliness and reserve of Washington. When not on his professional dignity, he must have been geniality itself."

The idea of this arch was suggested to the national society, Daughters of the Revolution, by Mrs. Adeline F. Fitz, regent of the state society of Massachusetts.

The reasons presented by Mrs. Fitz were these: It was in New England the American revolution had its birth. It was in Cambridge that Washington took command of the American army, whose integrity, skill and undaunted patriotism accomplished our country's freedom.

"Again, we feel," said Mrs. Fitz, "that to place a memorial in a community where thousands would gather inspiration and thousands of visitors from all lands revert to the deeds of the founders of our republic at the birthplace of freedom would be a glorious accomplishment for our society."

This recommendation having received the approval of the general society, Mrs. Fitz brought the matter before Mayor Daly of Cambridge, asking that a site for the proposed memorial arch be granted at the entrance to the Washington elm. The matter was referred to the city council and the plans have since been under consideration by the municipal art and park commissions and other committees having jurisdiction in such matters.

Notwithstanding that up to the present time the plans have been somewhat tentative, during the past few months something over $100 was raised toward the fund of $5,000 necessary to complete the memorial.

As the members of the society in all parts of the country have undertaken to raise this sum as a part of their patriotic work the coming year, it is hoped that it will be realized early in the spring.

HOUSE OF WASHINGTON RELICS

Hasbrouck Home in Newburg, N. Y., Full of Revolution Reminders.

The beautiful city of Newburg, on the Hudson river, has honored itself and conferred a priceless boon upon the state by preserving the old Hasbrouck house, which served as Washington's headquarters from April 4, 1782 to Aug. 18, 1783.

Built by Jonathan Hasbrouck in 1750, it has the comfortable look of the unpretentious story-and-a-half house of the period, and stands finely on the sloping bank of the river. The walls of the house are of stone, two feet in thickness. An old-fashioned Dutch stoop or porch opens upon the first floor, with its six rooms in addition to the kitchen. The ceilings are low, with heavy timbers of hewn wood, which support the floors of the upper rooms, originally only four in number. The sloping roof is sustained by long timbers of roughly hewn cedar wood, which still gives out the pleasant odor peculiar to that tree.

While some changes have been necessary, the house to-day is very nearly just what it was when Gen. and Mrs. Washington occupied it with their military family.

Access to the place is gained through a gateway guarded by cannon, the lawn is bordered with fine elm and chestnut trees, the river dances brightly in front, while the mountains in all their beauty form a striking background. The old stoop, with its dull red settles, opens directly into the large room with its many doors and solitary window. The broad, worn-out planks of the floor show its age, the rough stones of the large fireplace tell of its constant use, and through the wide throat of the chimney we may gaze up at the open sky. Old kettles, shovels and waffle irons hang by heavy chains to the fireplace, and to one old shovel in particular is given the honor of never having left its post of duty during the reigns of the Hasbroucks or Washingtons, but, like a faithful sentinel, was always ready for work. This room, like the others, is now a museum. The glass cases hold the hats, vests and shoes of the continental soldiers, while the heavy boots of a Hessian cavalry officer excite wonder at their weight and enormous thickness of sole. Framed letters from Aaron Burr, Robert Morris, John Hancock, Washington and Benjamin Franklin line the walls.

Dorothy's View of Shaving.

Dorothy is a tiny maid of 4 years, whose father always gets shaved at the barber's. When on a visit recently she found an uncle who shaved himself. She watched this performance with intense, but silent astonishment for two or three mornings, but finally broke out with "What makes you do that, Uncle Will? My papa doesn't wash his face with a little broom and wipe it with a knife."

Disciplined Army of Fish.

There is a species of mullet fish found among the coral islands of the Pacific which swims about in armies, with officers and van and rear guard. Each army is also provided with scouts above and below. When danger threatens from above, the upper scouts plunge down; if the danger is from below, the lower scouts dart upward, and thus warn the army.

Indifferent Persian Debtor.

A Frenchman called on a Persian one day and asked him to pay a debt, but the indifferent debtor made answer: "I will pay you some time." "When is some time?" queried the impatient Frenchman. "It is twelve months, eighteen, or two years?" "I don't know," answered the bland son of Iran. "I guess we had better say when I am ready."

"Shopping" Once Slang Word.

"Shopping" was certainly a slang word until past the first quarter of the nineteenth century. Bee's Dictionary of Sports and Slang, published in 1825, defines the word as follows: "Shopping—Among women, going about from shop to shop, buying little articles perhaps, perhaps not, but always pulling about great quantities of goods."

To Overcome Obstacles.

Show yourself master of the situation, not its slave. Rise above the petty annoyances which destroy peace and harmony. Make up your mind that you are too large to be overcome by trifles. Resolve that you will be larger than your business, that you will overtop it with manliness and cheerfulness.

Cornstarch Clogs Spindles.

In Greece, for some reasons, climatic or other, it seems absolutely impossible to utilize cornstarch in the manufacture of cambrics and other textiles, although many trials have been made during several years past, as the spindles, especially in the case of colored textiles, clog.

D. L. Moody's Brother.

George F. Moody, the oldest brother of Dwight L. Moody, was a lifelong helper of the famous evangelist, especially in the work of the Northfield schools, and a man of genuine friendliness of feeling, and of deep, though quiet religious life.

Use Hair of Rabbits.

The hair of rabbits and other animals in Russia is converted into bowls, dishes and plates, which are valued for their strength, durability and lightness. The articles are similar in appearance to varnished leather.

Remedy for Sleeplessness.

There are few remedies for sleeplessness like a warm bath taken at bedtime and a glass of hot milk slowly sipped before lying down. If these fail there is serious trouble, which the family doctor ought to care for.

Not so Blind.

"Dis here Cupid chile may be blind," said Uncle Eben, "but it do seem to me dat he kin manage to spy out an heap 'o beauty an' loveliness dat ain visible to de disinterested bystander."—Washington Star.

Cause and Cure of Earache.

Earache may be caused by a bad tooth, the pain being transmitted, or by a foreign body in the ear, or by rheumatism. Warm fomentations of poppy heads or poultices will afford relief.

Fishes with Double Sight.

Fishes have been discovered at Guatemala with two pairs of eyes. One pair does duty above the water, the other below, the fish thus being able to see in two elements at once.

An Excellent Motto.

"A young man asks for a motto to live up to. All right. I'll give him the best he ever had or heard of—namely: Finish What You Have on Hand."—New York Press.

Feeding and Watering Poultry.

In regard to keeping water before the fowls in winter I use sanitary fountains. They can be hung up out of the dirt. On very cold days I use warm water and it will not freeze during the day, and if it should freeze before I empty the fountains in the evening I pour a little hot water on the sides and pull off the bottoms and they are all ready for the next day. It must be understood the fountain is in two parts, top and bottom. I think this is the best fountain on the market. I feed corn on all cold nights. If it comes off warm then I feed oats, wheat, buckwheat, sometimes one kind, then another, sometimes mix. In summer I feed corn about one feed a week. I go according to my own judgment, when I think a change would do good. I never use skim milk. I feed oats in a litter of scratching material, of about three or four inches deep. I throw a handful or two in each pen in the morning, when they get their mash, so as to keep them busy. All grain is thrown into the litter. In regard to green food, I use cabbages as long as I can keep them profitably. If they are kept too long they will go to waste. So I put in enough to last until the first part of January. I hang them up in the middle of the pen, so all the fowls can get a chance at them. One small head will last twelve Wyandottes a day. I think it is the best winter green food there is. The birds seem to do well on it. Sugar beet is a food I never use. But I do use mangel wurzel and fowls do enjoy them very much. I have used some turnips, but not many. As the birds don't do so well on them as on mangels and the turnip is not so large. They both make a good substitute for cabbages. I feed them raw. I put them in what I call my green food racks. They are made the same style as the old-fashioned hay rack for horses. The rods are one inch apart. The rack is six inches deep at the top and one inch deep at the bottom and can be made any width.—W. H. Shute, Middlesex Co., Conn., in Farmers' Review.

Good and Bad Eggs.

A reader asks us for some way to tell good eggs from bad ones. The method being followed in the commercial world is the one that we recommend and the only one that we believe suitable to farm work. This is the candling process. Take a box and place in it a lamp, making a hole about the size of an egg. In this box put a light, so placing the light that the gleam will stream out of the hole mentioned. The candling is done by taking this box into the gloomiest part of the room and passing the eggs between the opening in the box and the eye. A good strong light will render the egg transparent or translucent. If an electric light can be obtained, so much the better, as the inside of the egg will be that much more illuminated. The stronger the light the better can one see what is inside the egg. The good eggs will show a translucent liquid. An egg that has begun to undergo the changes noticed in incubation will show a cloudy at first and later will show veins. Later it will show dark clots at certain points, as the physical system of the unborn chick develops. For common use, it is necessary only to find out the clear eggs from the cloudy ones. The cloudy ones are not fresh, while the others are if they have not been undergoing incubation. If the eggs are in an incubator or under a hen and have been some days, the fertile eggs will be showing a cloud or streaks. The infertile eggs will still be clear and should be taken out and afterwards cooked as food for the young chicks.

The Comb of the Brown Leghorn.

The comb of the Brown Leghorn has been worked with a great deal until now it is produced in two forms, the rose comb and the single comb. In fairly warm climates it is merely a question of fancy whether one shall rear a breed with single combs or rose combs. But in cold climates it is far otherwise. When a bird has her comb frozen her value as an egg producer is destroyed. The single comb freezes easily, because it is large, thin and lopped over. This seems to produce a slow circulation of blood, and this comb easily freezes, and the frozen part drops off. The rose comb is compact to the head and the circulation of blood is facilitated thereby. Moreover, when the hen sleeps her comb is entirely hidden under her feathers instead of part of it being left outside.

Ships Eggs to New Zealand.

We ship eggs and birds all over the world. We have shipped eggs to New Zealand with a fair hatch, say about 50 per cent. The bulk of our trade is in this country. We find it is not hard to hold trade in any part of this country if we keep up our advertising strongly. Of course when we let up on space the good people think that we are falling back, so you see it requires constant advertising. From what I have said and from our catalogue you can form some idea how our trade is building up.—J. C. Fissel, Bartholomew Co., Ind.

MRS. SMITHERS AS A GRAPTER.

She Understood After Husband's Lengthy Explanation. Mrs. Smithers had been reading the evening paper for half an hour when she laid it aside and said: "Smithers, what is a grafter? I have met the word in every paper I've picked up for the last three months. It doesn't exactly seem to mean a burglar or highway robber." "No, not exactly," replied Smithers. "For instance, I go to the club."

"Yes."

"The boys press the wine on me until I have a drop too much."

"I see."

"I come home and fall into bed and sleep like a log."

"Well?"

"You get up while I sleep and go through my pockets, and the next morning I miss $5. You say I must have lost it at poker, but I know that you grafter it."

"Do you mean to say I stole it?"

"Not at all, dear, and you needn't look so red over it. Graft means to find, to sequester, to gobble, to keep, to beat the policy holder any way you can, and that's why I have been hiding my wallet under the front steps every night for the last two weeks."

"And I—?"

"You'll have to graft on the cook's wages in future. Tell her you'll have to keep out a dollar a week for the yellow dog fund."

HYPNOTIZED OVER THE PHONE.

Remarkable Performance Vouched for by Medical Men.

Some remarkable experiments in the way of hypnotizing by telephone have just been carried out in the Savoy Hotel by Mr. F. F. Abbott. The experiments were conducted in the presence of a considerable number of medical men. Mr. Abbott introduced a young Scotsman, whom he had hypnotized seven times during the previous fortnight. After passing his hand over the face of the subject, Mr. Abbott soon reduced the man to a passive state, and then, accompanied by one of the medical men, he left the building, and from a distance of two miles telephoned to the hotel in which the seance had been held. When the bell in the hotel room rang the young Scotsman went to the telephone, and, with a shudder, fell back quite unconscious. Mr. Abbott had commanded him over the telephone to go to sleep, and the subject remained in a hypnotized state until Mr. Abbott returned and awakened him.—London Tit-Bits.

Over his head is the Symbolic Tree, which bears smaller images of the Master, flowers of mother-of-pearl and other stones. The Garuda bird keeps guard over the Holy One's head, and monstrous faces can be distinguished in the foliage. The apron is made entirely of carved human bones. It is used during the Tantric rites, which are still celebrated, especially by the Red Lamas. Gy-mtse, from which place this apron came, is the center of Tibetan Tantric worship.

Peculiar Old English Inn.

At the old Chequers Inn at Slape-stones, North Yorkshire (Eng.), is a peat fire in a huge grate. The fire has been kept burning continuously for 105 years. A huge draught board-like sign hangs outside this curious old "pub," bearing the following inscription: "Step in and taste beer for nothing to-morrow." It is one of the oldest licensed houses in North Yorkshire.

Followed Old Custom.

When the parliamentary writ for the recent elections arrived at Dover, Eng., the other day it was saluted with three blasts from the ancient "burghote" horn. Why? Because such writs have had that reception at Dover for 800 years.

The Chelsea Standard-Herald

An independent local newspaper published every Thursday afternoon from its office in the Standard building, Chelsea, Michigan.

BY G. O. STIMSON.

There will be a charge of ten cents for spectators, fifty cents for the dance, and those who care to dance after the masks have been removed will be charged forty cents. Music by Burg's orchestra.

The law for automobiles is similar to that for traction engines and drivers of horses has the greater right. The law provides that automobilists on signal from the driver of a vehicle drawn by a horse or team, must turn his machine to the right of the road and then stop, and he must halt until all danger of accident is passed. Automobilists are also called on to assist the driver of badly frightened horses.

Some time ago, a trowel, symbolical in the Masonic order of the cementing of the brotherhood, was started from a New York lodge on a trip of all the lodges of the country. With the trowel is a register, in which will be recorded date of each lodge receiving it. Michigan Masons are expecting the arrival of the trowel, on its tour of the country, and before its journey is completed it will have found its way to every Masonic lodge in the United States.

It is pretty generally known that the English get the correct time from Greenwich, which has a world-wide reputation, but comparatively few people know where we get ours from. Americans get their correct time from a little room in the Naval observatory, located on Georgetown heights, in the suburbs of Washington. The observatory was originally intended to detect errors in ship chronometers and to regulate them properly. This work constitutes one department at the institution, but perhaps its most important function is that of being the nation's timekeeper.

The Yellow Fever Germ.
It has recently been discovered, it bears a close resemblance to the malaria germ. To free the system from disease germs, the most effective remedy is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Guaranteed to cure all diseases due to malaria, cholera and constipation. 25c at The Bank Drug Store.

UPERSTITIONS OF WOMEN. POT-SHAPED HATS.

By Dorothy Dix.

WHEN man proposes in the evening it may, or may not, be a binding contract, but if he proposes in the broad light of day he means business. To have your husband's mother pay you a visit is a sure sign that there is a woman coming who will cause you much trouble. To see a woman anything in confidence is a sign that it will be all over town before night. To go to a bargain sale is a sign that you will purchase many things you don't want. To lend money to another woman is a sign that you will lose both your money and your friend. To eat a lunch of ice-cream and lobster after a hard day's shopping is a sign that you will have a mysterious and inexplicable illness. To see your dear old enemy tell you you are looking well is a sign that you need to consult a complexion specialist and get a new dressmaker. To see your dear old enemy tell you you are looking well is a sign that you need to consult a complexion specialist and get a new dressmaker. To see your dear old enemy tell you you are looking well is a sign that you need to consult a complexion specialist and get a new dressmaker.

Larger Display of Gratitude and Appreciation on the Part of the Wife as a Remedy for Dissatisfaction in Domestic Bliss.

THE tenth commandment of the married woman is this: Thou shalt give thanks upon thy knees for a good man's love, and shall offer praise in the temple because thou hast never known anything else. She has never earned a dollar, she has never known the nightmare of meeting pay day with an empty purse. Everything has been soft and easy for her. She has gone from her father's good home to a husband's good home, and she takes it as no more than her due that she should be looked out for, and somebody should work for her, and it doesn't even occur to her that something in the way of spoken thanks and actual, tangible appreciation is due to the two men who devote their lives to her comfort and well being.

Of course, no man who isn't a cad wants his wife to go about blowing a horn and proclaiming that he supports his family, but a man does like to feel that his wife appreciates what he does for her—that she is not blind to the fact that he works night and day for her, nor insensible to the sacrifices he makes that she may dress as well and live as well as her neighbors, and, above all, he likes the blessed assurance that he isn't going to be dumb about it.

The average man who is married gets precious little out of all of his work and worry, but his wife's appreciation, if he misses this also he is poor, indeed, for after the family bills are paid there is a mighty little money left for the man who has made it to indulge himself in any personal taste.

Be a Bit Thankful. THE women who had good husbands and good homes and a great big, husky man to stand between them and the bill collector should be down on their knees

For Spring the Popular Hat Will Be the Dome or Pot-Shaped Hat, with Plumes.

THE fashion in hats for Spring takes a wide departure from the jaunty, turned-up affairs which have been worn for the last two seasons. They can best be described as the shape of an inverted bowl. The lines are graceful and becoming to nearly every one. These hats have for their trimming little else but plumes, though flowers may also be used. The first hat is made with a large puff crown of silk. The edge of the brim is bound with a narrow strip of fur, and a large bunch of opeyres is caught at one side. The hat itself is made of chiffon velvet, and intended for the early days of Spring. The other hat is satin straw in a beautiful biscuit shade, with deep cream-colored plumes arranged to droop well over the sides and back.

HATS TO BE WORN THIS SPRING.

Costumes Worn at New York Society Wedding.

MISS LOUNSBERY'S WEDDING DRESS. FITTED princess gown of white satin, with long panels of point lace extending the full length, two in front and two in back. The yoke with its V-shaped neck is of lace, with drapery and knot of lace where it joins the body of the gown. Two ruffles of lace also finish the elbow sleeves of satin. The veil is of old point lace, costing thousands of dollars.

GOWNS WORN BY BRIDESMAIDS. DIRECTOIRE coats of orchid silk, lined with white satin. Bands of shirring border the jacket, which opens over a draped vest trimmed with frills of white satin and rhinestone buttons. The elbow sleeves are trimmed with two ruffles of lace, beaded with mauve ribbon. The same ribbon trims the lace yokes and collar. Fastened with a rhinestone button, the skirts of the coat are turned back to show the satin lining. The underskirt is of Oriental cream lace, just touching all around. The bottom is finished with two deep lace ruffles, headed by narrow ladder lace beading. The large orchid-colored hats are tilted up on one side, along which curls an enormous orchid-lined plume with the end resting on the hair. Long streamers hang down either side of the face from under the brim. The bridesmaids carried long Directoire canes with a bow-knot of orchid ribbon.

Paris Fashions.

Princess visiting gown of violet velvet, black trimmings and gold-braid collar and cuffs of Irish lace.

Feels may our scorn, not envy, raise, For envy is a kind of praise. JOHN GAY.

RICH WIVES FOR POOR MEN.

By Dorothy Dix. THE absurd idea of the society girl has stood in the way of a deal of happiness. Many a poor, rich girl has broken her heart about the man who loved her but was afraid to ask her to share his modest salary. Yet nine times out of ten the girl who has been accustomed to wealth makes the best poor man's wife. Nor is this hard to understand. For one thing, she wouldn't exchange a satin-lined jewel box for a six-room flat, unless she was a woman of character. For another, she brings with her a certain satiety of the gay world that gives charm to a quiet life. It is not the person who fares delicately who gourmandizes at a feast. It is the poor, half-famished wretch who has been looking on with hungry eyes and who is suddenly bidden in. The women who are insatiable in their thirst for society are not those born to it, but those who have achieved it. The same thing may be said of economy. To the girl who has had nothing a year, two or three thousand seems like a purse of Fortunatus that can never be exhausted, and she starts on a career of wild extravagance. To the rich girl it seems so little that she feels she must economize and make it go as far as possible, and, as a matter of fact, a woman who is used to handling money is almost always a better economist than a poor girl. It is one of life's little ironies that only the rich can afford to learn how to economize. 'Tis expectation makes a blessing dear. POPE.

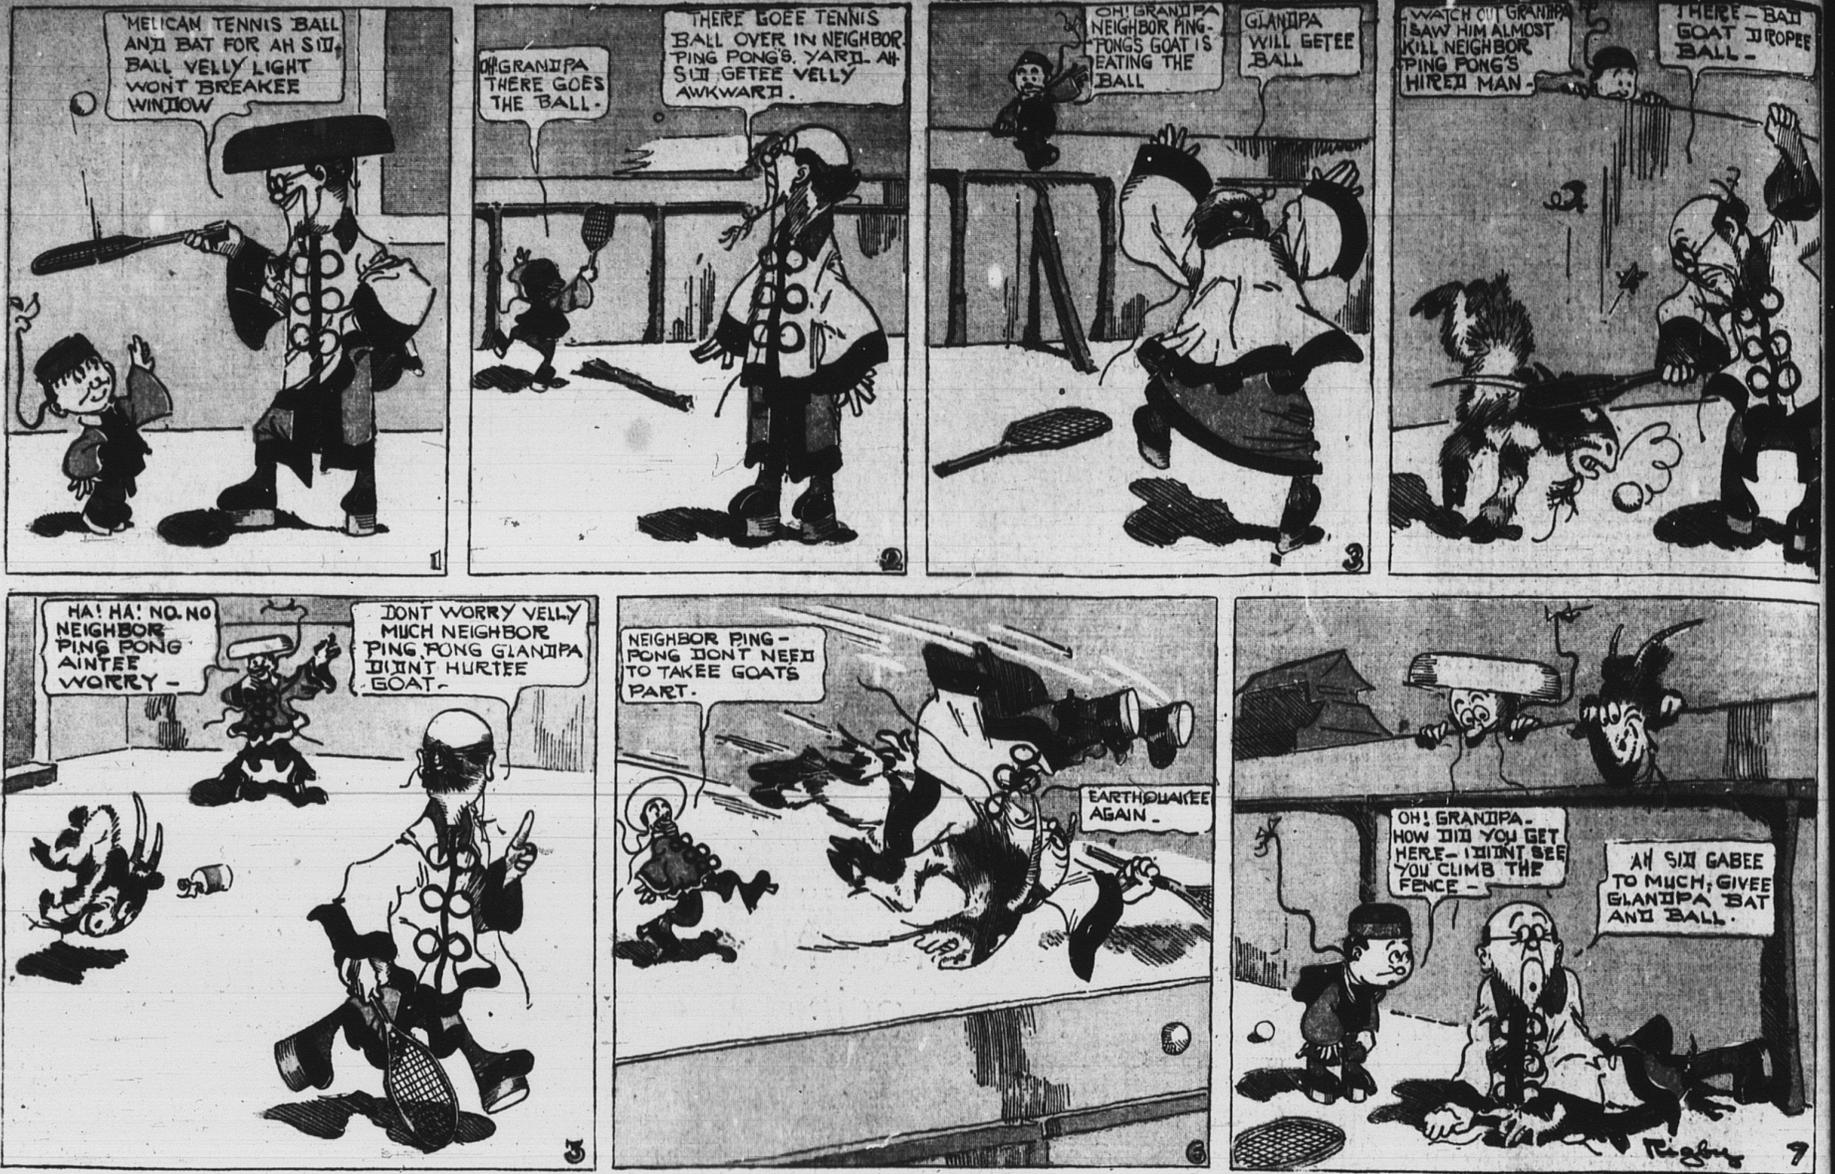

Tailored costume of bronze green cloth, long jacket, collar of a shade of velvet in harmony.

 of Mrs. Conrad Lehman last Thursday evening and gave her a surprise party.
 The time was spent playing pedro and dinnch. Light refreshments were served.

Born, Sunday, February 18, 1906, to Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Miller, of Chicago, a daughter. Mr. Miller is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Miller, of Lyndon, and is well known to many of the residents of this part of Washtenaw county.

At St. Paul's Church, next Sunday morning, Rev. A. A. Schoen will use for his subject, "Sowing the Seed." This will be for the special benefit of children. The evening subject will be the "Adaptability of the Word of God."

Last Thursday evening Chas. Currier of Grant street, met with a painful accident. As he was ascending the cellar stairs with a scuttle of coal he missed his footing and dislocated it. Drs.
 Palmer & Gulde were called and reduced the dislocation.

The L. C. B. A. will give another one of their popular pedro parties at their rooms in Woodman hall, on Friday evening of this week. The proceeds of this social is for the building fund of the new parochial school. An admission of 10 cents will be charged. The public is cordially invited to attend.

 held next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.
 Subject, Man. Golden Text: He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? Micah 6:8.
 Testimonial meeting Thursday at 7:15
 p. m.

Fully two hundred attended the pedro party given by the L. C. B. A. at their hall last Friday evening and a neat sum was added to the building fund for the new parochial school. The three best players of the evening proved to be Fred Baker, Thos. Stanfield and Albert
 Visel, who won the honors in the order named.

The Standard-Herald in its issue of last week unintentionally omitted the names of George Miller and John Farrell from the church committee of the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The committee for the ensuing year as approved by the Right Rev. Bishop Foley is as follows:
 Rev. William P. Considine, chairman,
 Chauncey Hummel, John Farrell, George
 Miller, John McKernan, Edward J.
 Foster, Charles Neuburger.

The social given by the Epworth League of the M. E. church at the home of H. G. Ives and family last Friday evening was well attended and the society cleared up $25.50. One of the laughable events of the gathering was on the young man, who had prepared a box that contained some raw potatoes and other uncooked vegetables, and when the auctioneer was selling the boxes, the young man parted with one dollar and ten cents and got his own box. We are informed that he supposed he was buying a lunch that had been prepared by one of the young ladies who was present.

The members of the parochial school committee of the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart met at the residence of Rev. Fr. Considine yesterday afternoon and opened the bids for the new school building. There were several bidders present, and the bids showed that the contractors were all anxious to secure the work, if possible. The contract was awarded to Koch Bros., of Ann Arbor, for $15,200, their price being about $400 less than the lowest bidder.
 The Messrs. Koch are, according to the terms of contract, to furnish the material and complete the work from the top of the basement walls; they are also to build the cement floors in the basement and put in the necessary flues for the heating plant. The contractors will begin work about May 1st.
