REMEMBERED EMPLOYEES

GLAZIER STOVE COMPANY

Made Their Annual Christmas Present of a Fine Turkey to the Men in the Stove Works on Monday Evening.

Some years ago the Glazier Stove Co. adopted the policy of presenting their employees on Christmas evening with turkeys, and this year each man connected with Chelsea's chief industry was the recipient of a fine turkey for his Christmas dinner.

It required three hundred turkeys this season to supply the numerous employees of the Glazier Stove Co. Each man, as he was paid off Monday evening, received a market basket, containing a turkey and one of the handsome calendars for 1907 the company had printed, and which they are also mailing to their numerous customers throughout the continent.

The famous line of B & B Stoves manufactured by the Glazier Stove Co. has made the name of Chelsea well known in many households throughout the United States, and the employees of the Stove Works fully appreciate the generous remembrance of their employers.

Will Vote for two Justices.

For the first time at a regular spring election the people of Michigan will vote next spring for two justices of the state supreme court. This is because of the law which enlarged the court from five to eight members and reduced the term of the justices from ten years to eight. Another feature about the election will be that if Aaron V. McAlvay and William L. Carpenter, whose terms next expire, are renominated and re-elected, as seems entirely probable, it will be the first election of each for a full term. Judge McAlvay has been a member of the court only since his election in November, 1903, to one of the three newly-created seats. Justices Blair and Ostrander were the other two elected at that time. Judge Carpenter is now chief justice of the court, in which position he will be succeeded on January 1 by Judge McAlvay. Under the old law a judge was chief justice for the last two years of his term, but now, when two judges' terms will expire at the same time, each judge will serve but one year of his eight as chief justice. Judge Carpenter is now serving his fifth year on the supreme bench. He was elected in 1902 to fill the unexpired term of Judge Charles D. Long, who died June 27, 1902, while other five years of his term remained.

Society Officers.

At the regular meeting of the members of St. Agnes' Sodality, held Sunday, December 16, the following officers were chosen for the coming year, 1907. The society is in a flourishing condition and has a substantial sum in the treasury. The Sodality also made a handsome donation for furnishing the Sisters' house.

Spiritual Director—Rev. William P. Considine.

Prefect—Miss Helen Burg.

First Assistant—Miss Nellie Savage.

Second Assistant—Miss Sabine Barthel.

Secretary—Miss Josephine Foster.

Assistant Secretary—Miss Mabel Rattrey.

Treasurer—Miss Genevieve Hummel.

Organist—Miss Mary A. Clark.

Reader—Miss Alais Savage.

Marshals—Misses Anna Eisele and Helen Wade.

Consultors—Misses Amelia Miller, Margaret Haggerty, Barbara Schwiekerath, Rose McIntee, Maud Carner, and Nellie Walsh.

The Farmers and the Law.

Farmers who do their own butchering should post themselves on the terms of the new federal law regarding shipments of meat. It is necessary, before a carcass can be shipped outside the state where it is killed, for the farmer to make a formal certificate setting forth the date of the killing, the condition of the animal when killed, and giving various other data. Otherwise no express company nor railroad freight dare carry it over the state line. It is necessary to get regular government blanks for these certificates from some meat inspection office.

Christmas Gathering.

The home of H. W. Watts and wife, of Lyndon, was the place of a happy Christmas gathering. The guests began assembling about 10 a. m. until the number of eighteen had entered the hospitable abode. The time until dinner was announced was spent in visiting and various ways that young people know so well to bring about.

When the guests entered the dining room, the table, tastily decorated and freighted with the good things that satisfy the inner man, greeted the eyes, and our regret was that our capacity was not large enough to assimilate more, than we did. After the bountiful repast, all repaired to the parlor to see what Santa had left on the Christmas tree, and lo, and behold! sure enough each one present received a gift, grandpa Beeman acting as St. Nicholas' agent in distributing the gifts.

Those present to enjoy the festivities were Francis Beeman and wife, of Chelsea, parents of the hostess, P. W. Watts father of the host, Lewis Chamberlain and wife, of Webster, C. D. Johnson and wife, Cyrenus Watts and daughter, of Dexter, Geo. W. Beeman and family, of Lyndon, and Geo. E. Jackson and family, of Chelsea. As the day drew to a close we all departed to our homes, of one mind, and accord that the day had been happily and profitably spent.

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

THOUGHT IT TIME TO STOP.

Wonders of the Telephone Too Much for Sitting Bull.

C. J. H. Woodbury, the engineering expert of the telephone company, told the boot and shoe men the other night the true version of the Sitting Bull and telephone story, says the Boston Herald. Sitting Bull had been captured by the United States troops and was held in close confinement. So also was another obstreperous Indian, held in confinement at a post about 100 miles away. The officer in charge of Sitting Bull had been chasing the Indians for two months, and was wondering what he would do with the captive. In an inspired moment he decided to arrange an interview between the two Indians over the telephone. After the necessary ringing up Sitting Bull was asked if he cared to talk into the machine. He talked into it for several minutes and did a heap of listening also.

He put down the instrument finally, and for hours was even more gloomy than usual, at last beginning to talk to himself, something very rare for the Indian. Asked if he was dissatisfied with his accommodations or if there was anything they could do for him he broke forth at last:

"No. I'm finished. It's all right when the white man's plaything talks the white man's language; but when it learns to talk the red man's tongue it's time to stop."

It is believed in the west, where the incident is fairly well known, that this talk over the telephone between the two Indians had a considerable influence in shortening the Indian wars.

Lafayette Grange.

The following are the newly elected officers of Lafayette Grange:

Master—Geo. T. English.

Overseer—F. H. Sweetland.

Lecturer—Mrs. F. H. Sweetland.

Assistant Steward—Mason Whipple.

Chaplain—Truman Baldwin.

Treasurer—Mrs. Olive Winslow.

Secretary—Mrs. J. F. McMillen.

Gatekeeper—H. A. Wilson.

Pomona—Mrs. W. McLaren.

Flora—Mrs. E. Keyes.

Coros—Mrs. Herman Fletcher.

Lady Assistant Steward—Mrs. Geo. T. English.

Chicken's Long Fast.

A New Orleans man has proved that a chicken can live 23 days without food or water. He makes affidavit that when his family moved recently a chicken securely nailed in a box was in the cellar of the new house, having been forgotten by the former tenants. Twenty-three days later the cook was moved to explore the cellar and discovered the chicken, emaciated, but still much alive.

Where We Lead Them.

"After all," said the British manufacturer, on a visit to America, "there's nothing you make here that we do not make in England."

"You're mistaken," replied the native; "there's one thing you don't seem able to make in England."

"What is that, pray?"

"Haste."

Hasty Reassurance.

"I was so glad to meet your mother," said Mr. Newcomer. "By the way, I didn't think she was—er—so very stout—"

"Oh," interrupted Miss Yerner. "I'm sure I'll never grow to be like her. I take after pa, you know."

Following the Flag.

When our soldiers went to Cuba and the Philippines, health was the most important consideration. Willis T. Morgan, retired Commissary Sergeant, U. S. A., of Rural Route 1, Concord, N. H., says: "I was two years in Cuba and two years in the Philippines, and being subject to colds, I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which kept me in perfect health. And now, in New Hampshire, we find it the best medicine in the world for coughs, colds, bronchial troubles and all lung diseases." Guaranteed at the Bank Drug Store. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Lyndon Taxpayers.

The taxes for 1906 for Lyndon are now due, and I will be at the town hall, Lyndon Center, Friday, January 4, and at the Chelsea Savings Bank Saturday, January 5, for the purpose of receiving the same. EUGENE A. HEATLEY, Treasurer.

A FINE BUSINESS PLACE

THE NEW CENTRAL MARKET.

Adam Eppler Moved Into His New Location Last Week—Has the Best Market in the County.

Adam Eppler moved into his new place of business last Friday night and when his customers greeted him Saturday morning he had the new place ready for business.

Mr. Eppler opened up in the store he has just vacated some 14 years ago and by his close application to supplying the wants of his customers he has succeeded in building up a very fine business.

The new market is the finest in the county and has been equipped with the most modern line of machinery that is used by the leading butcher in this country and by the end of this week Mr. Eppler expects to have every thing in its proper place and running as it should. A large boiler is one of the new additions that will be used for operating the machinery and heating the building and another is a fine slicing machine.

His Christmas display was fine, he had on exhibition four two-year-old dressed beefs that weighed 800 pounds each, two hogs that averaged 700 pounds, 400 turkeys, poultry of all kinds and his usual fine display of veal and mutton.

Mr. Eppler has a market that he can well feel proud of and one that is second to none in Washtenaw county.

Resolutions.

Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father to take from among our number our brother, John Runciman, and of a still heavier loss sustained by those who were nearer and dearer to him, therefore be it

Resolved, by Cavanaugh Lake Grange, No. 998, that while we bow with humble submission to the will of the Most High, we do not less mourn for our brother, who has been taken from us.

Resolved, That in his death this Grange shall sadly miss one who has been an active member since its organization, and who, as the first Master, did much to assure its success.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of our Order, and a copy of the same be sent to our bereaved sister and children.

MRS. P. H. RIEMENSCHNEIDER.

PHILIP SCHWEINFURTH.

JOHN MILLER.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to return our sincere thanks for the kindness shown to us by our many friends during our very sad bereavement, and for the beautiful flowers sent, especially by the Woman's Relief Corps, the National Protective Legion, and the Sunday school classes of Mr. Nathaniel Laird and Mr. Jay Everett.

ANDREW SAWYER AND FAMILY.

MRS. ELIZA COLGROVE AND FAMILY.

MRS. HENRIETTA GILDART AND FAMILY.

Trees That Grow in Sandhills.

Trees that will grow in sandhills and without irrigation are the latest discovery of the government bureau of forestry. In the course of half a century forests are expected to cover the waste regions of the west.

Measure Your Ice.

If you would know whether your dealer gives you full weight when you order ice, use your tape measure. A 50-pound block should be 15 inches long, ten inches deep and ten inches broad.—Popular Mechanics.

Ignorant Jurymen.

Five of 13 jurymen present at the Southwark (England) coroner's court the other day were unable to sign their names, one of the number remarking that he did not believe in such "new-fangled notions."

Off on the Pronunciation.

Ascum—I hear he actually made a speech in German to some of his constituents. And it was quite a success, too, I'm told.

Wise—Well, yes, but it wasn't exactly a pronounced success.

Deadly Serpent Bites

are as common in India as are stomach and liver disorders with us. For the latter, however, there is a sure remedy: Electric Bitters; the great restorative medicine, of which S. A. Brown, of Benetaville, S. C., says: "They restored my wife to perfect health, after years of suffering with dyspepsia and a chronically torpid liver." Electric Bitters cure chills and fever, malaria, biliousness, lame back, kidney troubles and bladder disorders. Sold on guarantee by the Bank Drug Store. Price, 50c.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our thanks to the relatives, friends and neighbors, the North Sharon church and the Francisco choir, who so kindly rendered aid and sympathy during the illness and death of our little boy.

DUKE OF DEVIL-MAY-CARE

By HARRIS DICKSON
Author of "The Black Wolf's Breed," Etc.

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued.

The queer little mirthless smile on Joe's question with one of those "Which room do you mean?" "The first door on your right as you enter the hall. There is one lady as is that one, and one as says it is I searched 'em hall—hours yesterday in the room. Not think there but shoes, old clothes, and have you made?" Chaudron took her hands. "Who could we have done a thing, of a time kept it until we could Chaudron's and he myself." "For his her go, away." "Right; you he hotel." "Of you; I for my." "Anade car street, and to the hotel." "They passed side; Joe wanted idea of the locality. He number of questions about neighborhood; the different who lived in them." "Come down this street in a Chaudron explained. "Mrs. Chaudron in the gutter as she the cab when they reached from the French maid bathed here?" "But she insists that it was of the young ladies whose foot she had." "Joe was not to be troubled, but this thing was to be done to grate on his nerves. They passed through the entry, under the stairs, and came out into the courtyard.

"He no come open, he—how you say 'im in Anglist'—he rus'. Come zis way, Monsieur Balfour." The Frenchman led them round by way of the hall and into the adjoining room: it was an ordinary sitting room which had formerly served to throw the two rooms into one. But it had evidently not been opened for many years, and there was a four-post bed backed up against it. "Who occupied this room that night?" Victor cocked his head on one side, like the parrot, and thought. "Oul, oul, it was Monsieur Champenois; he go away vary early ze nex' morning." "Monsieur Etienne Champenois?" Chaudron inquired. "Oul, oul, he come zat night from Calcasien, an go down to his river plantation on boat, vary soon." "Do you know him?" Joe asked of Chaudron. "Quite well." "Has he been interviewed?" "Not yet, he has not yet returned to the city." "Send a man to him at once; he may know something." "Who are in these other rooms?" Joe asked. "Visitors; ze city is much crowd." "May I see the rooms?" "Certainment." Victor opened them patiently, one by one. "There's no use in looking through them again," whispered Chaudron; "they have all been searched a dozen times, everything from garret to cellar." But Joe was stubborn; he had his way, going through the entire house again. Then he walked out and stood on the edge of the banquet, hands in his pockets, thinking. "Well, what do you think of it now?" Chaudron asked. "Don't know." Joe never gave what the lawyers term a "horse-hair opinion"; he always wanted time for reflection. He stood there for some minutes, looking down into the black gutter. "Damned—if I—do—know," he came to the deliberate conclusion. "Well, let's go around to police headquarters," suggested Chaudron, "and see what has turned up." "CHAPTER XIV. THE COLLISION IN PEDRO'S PLACE. If Joseph Balfour and Felix Chaudron had been ten minutes later in leaving the Hotel Louis le Grande, they would have met Woodford Vance. If Noel Duke had reached Pedro's Place ten minutes earlier, he would have seen Joe Balfour coming out of the hotel instead of seeing Woodford Vance go in. "Has Mr. Chaudron been here?" Vance burst into the hotel entry and stopped Artemis as she came tripping down the stairs with a feather duster in her hand. "Hip!lest! Hip!lest!" she called. Vance could not make heads nor tails of the inextricable jumble which Artemis flung at the unoffending Hippolyte when the old man finally appeared from some dim recess in the courtyard. "Oul, m'm'selle, il s'en est alle. Yes, monsieur, Monsieur Chaudron he here—one more gentleman, two, ten minutes, half hour, gone; zat way." "Thanks," said Vance, ironically. He walked out to the edge of the banquet and stood there for several minutes. Something must be done, something had to be done, and done right away. He couldn't stand it; the appealing glance which Anita gave him when he left the house was enough to drive a fellow to desperation. At this moment Henry Baker came strutting down the street twisting a pipe and carefully adjusting a pair of eye-glasses which did not seem contented on his nose. "What's the matter," he spoke to Vance, pointing with his cane as if he were asking a direction. Vance turned, and Baker whispered: "Follow me around the corner. No, not so fast; wait a minute. Ah, HI see," he said aloud. "Thank you, sir." The Englishman sauntered on, turned the first corner, and waited in the apothecary's shop until Vance came in behind him. "Out with it, Baker—out with it, quick; what has happened?" "Sh! That man is in Pedro's Place right now; HI saw 'im go in just a minute ago. The one HI told you about last night; 'e's been prowling around 'ere for two or three days." "Come on, let's get him." Vance started to rush out, but Baker held him back. "No, wait a minute; telephone the station—He might get away; you and I can take him." "But HI can't let those chaps at the hotel know who HI am; we'd better—I'll go get him myself." Before Baker could interfere Vance had rounded the corner again with his head down, charging like the bull yearling he had mentioned, towards Pedro's Place. Noel Duke was in no amiable frame of mind himself when he came back to Pedro's Place. He certainly had none of that Christian spirit which prompts a man to turn the other cheek. Why he had fallen again into this wretched little den, he scarcely knew. He had drifted about the crowded streets, tossed hither and thither as the human currents flowed, until the surf had cast him up. And here he was again. Miguel, the waiter, nodded genially as to an old acquaintance, and pulled back a chair. Duke shook his head, speaking a few words in Spanish. "Si, senor," the man replied deferentially, bustling around to find the morning paper, which he smoothed out carefully on his knee before handing it over. But Duke did not look at the paper after he got it. He leaned his elbow on the window and gazed at the hotel entrance, not as if he were watching it, but in utter weariness of soul and body. Suddenly he straightened up and clenched his hand. "By God, there's Vance! So she did come here to meet him; and he knows where she is right now. I'll make him tell me." He sprang up, and one bound took him to the door; there he stopped. He still had enough discretion to know that he could not afford a brawl—publicly—drawing attention to himself. Duke had opened the door, then closed it, changing his mind back and forth. "No, it won't do," he decided, coming back and taking up the paper again. "I'm a damned coward—a—" He crumpled the paper savagely in his hand and dashed it to the floor. Quick vigorous steps rang along the banquet; the café door was swung open so impetuously that glasses rattled on the table. Woodford Vance stepped in. He glanced around the room, singled his man out, and marched directly to him. "What are you doing, sitting there watching that house?" Duke did not reply. It took him so thoroughly by surprise that any man should speak in such a tone to him—particularly this man. "Come with me." Vance caught him roughly by the arm and had made one step toward the door when Duke struck him. He stumbled over a chair and fell, but, trained athlete as he was, came up instantly. Duke saw the gleam of a pistol, and his hand flew to his hip. In such emergency men think with the swiftness of inspiration, and even the man from Devil-May-Care had had enough of turmoil.

When pigtails and school were his fashion, Penelope was always awakened from indolence by the possession of a new text-book, its resplendent cover, its crisp, clean pages the incentives to an ambition that the discarded old volume could never have called forth. In just such manner the Great Teacher stimulates the grown-up Penelope to new thought, new purpose, new endeavor, by again and again placing a brazen new year in her eager hands. The new-year idea is almost as old and universal as the instinct of immortality, but the first of January has not always been the starting point for the procession of months, and even now by no means the whole world follows the Gregorian calendar. The ancient Egyptians, Phoenicians and Persians began their year on September 22, the Greeks of Solon's time on December 21, and the Greeks of the Pericles period on June 21. From Julius Caesar on, the Roman civil year commenced January 1, but the Jewish ecclesiastical year had always begun at the vernal equinox, March 25, and this spring opening day—of bud and blossom and universal hopefulness—became the honored one with Christian nations generally throughout the medieval period. In the latter end of the eleventh century, England, which had strangely enough been starting its annual records on December 25, began quite accidentally to pay homage to the old Roman divinity Janus, for by chance William the Conqueror's coronation took place on the first of January, and the birthday of the Norman rule became the birthday of the year as well. Remembering the loyal old Saxon spirit—conquered but not tamed—we are not surprised to learn, however, that soon the inhabitants of England fell into the more general habit of indulging in new-year festivities upon the 25th of March. The Gregorian calendar, formulated in 1582, restored January 1 as New Year's day. The Catholic countries enthusiastically accepted it, but the Protestant ones adopted it slowly, and it was not until 1752 that conservative England fell into line. The ancient Romans honored the whole of January by offering sacrifices on 12 altars to the god with two faces, whose namesake the month was. "Janus am I; oldest of potatoes; Forward I look, and backward, and below me, as god of avenues and gates, The years that through my portals come and go." While the whole month was kept, the first day was the gala occasion. Litigation was suspended, reconciliations effected, impressive processions made to the capitol, offerings laid on the altars, the emperor surprised by magnificent gifts, visits exchanged everywhere, feasts spread in hospitable houses, streets ringing with laughter and music of masqueraders. The giving of New Year's gifts was not confined to old Rome. The Persians always exchanged New Year's eggs, and it was the pretty custom of the Druids to give a sacred sprig of mistletoe to the faithful on their New Year's morning, while the bestowing of presents upon the monarch became an absolute obligation. Queen Elizabeth, the people's favorite, was simply showered with New Year's contributions—"gold for her purse, chains, necklaces, bracelets, rings, embroidered gowns and mantles, petticoats, smocks, stockings and garters; and for the royal larger fat oxen, sheep, geese, turkeys, swans, capons, fruit, preserves, marchpans and sweetmeats." But soon this custom was regarded as a tax rather than a privilege, and during the rule of the austere Cromwell it died a natural death—never bobbing up again to make a popular bow, as sometimes happens to a dead stage hero recalled to life by the audience's applause. Closely associated with the new year season is the wassail bowl, its name derived from the old Saxon phrase: Wass Hael—"To your health!" Until Queen Elizabeth's reign, one wassail love-cup was handed about the charmed circle gathered round the great bowl, but afterward the health was more hygienically, if less picturesque, drunk in individual cups. The poor carried an immense wooden bowl, decorated with gay ribbons, around the neighborhood, begging small coin to pay for the precious ingredients that made up the festive concoction.

THE NEW YEAR AND ITS CUSTOMS

NEW YEAR'S DANCES IN A SPANISH VILLAGE. TURKISH CHILDREN WITH NEW YEAR'S GIFTS FOR A TURKISH NEGROEMAN.

"Wassail! wassail! over the town. Our toast is white, our ale it is brown. Our bowl it is made of the mapin tree. We be good fellows all; I drink to thee!" In Scotland, on New Year's eve—for some unknown reason called hogmany day—the doors of the houses were thrown open at midnight to let the old year out, and the new year in, while in some of the towns, early in the evening poor children—"swaddled" in sheets so folded up in front as to form an inviting pocket—went from door to door after bread and small coin, announcing their arrival by some naive song, shrilly given in childish treble and enthusiasm. "Rise up, gude-wife, and shake your feathers; Dinna think that we be beggars; We are bairns come to play. And to seek our hogmany." Much excitement was manifested over another Scottish custom. The first person who entered a house after the clock struck midnight New Year's eve was called a "first footer," and often parties of first footers went about calling on friends and making merry generally. In striking contrast to this frivolity was the habit the next morning of opening the Scotch Bible at random, a verse in the chapter read containing a prophecy to be made good by fate during that New Year. At all the courts of present-day Europe the New Year is celebrated with great impressiveness, it being the official feast, just as Christmas is a family one. In Belgium, on New Year's eve, the children have a special frolic tingling with the thrill of suspense. Early in the day, all the door keys in the house are spirited away from their locks into small boys' pockets. A pet riddle, called a "sugar aunt" or "sugar uncle," is then beguiled into a room, and while her or his attention is diverted, a key is whisked out from its hiding place and click-a-ty-click the door is locked! Of course the prisoner, confronted by a hard-hearted, giggling jailer, is glad to negotiate freedom at any price—a ransom's possibilities no doubt ranging from a candy cane to a rocking horse, according to auntie's indulgent humor or the size of uncle's pocketbook. The Germans have a very impressive old custom. At Frankfort-on-the-Main in almost every house is a family party, and at the first strike of midnight from the cathedral all open wide the windows, and—filled glasses lifted in their hands—cry: "Prosit Neujahr!"—"Happy New Year." France practically makes a Christmas of New Year's day. All Paris is on feet, and the Latin Quarter jubilant with song, fiddling, and droll farces, while the poor, starved art student splurges in all sorts of culinary extravagances. In fact, even the beggars are merry, singing instead of whining their appeals for charity, and "dancing a jig for a sou." The French children find their stockings filled by good St. Nicholas, who in his Christmas rush must have thanked his lucky star that these young clients would not expect a professional call until seven days after he had attended to the impatient American youngsters over the sea. After a midday dejeuner a la fourchette, the younger members of the family call on the older, and in the evening there is a grand reunion for dinner. Amid all this French gaiety there is that one pathetic little touch that so often creeps into this rainbow world of ours, where tears mingle with the sunshine of our smiles. If a member of the family has died during the past 12 months, early on New Year's morning the near relatives meet at the grave and lay upon it their offerings of love and remembrance. The Russians, following the Julian calendar, do not celebrate their New Year's day until January 13. The grown-up, not to be outdone by the small fry, now form a gorgeous procession to pass under the critical nose of the nobleman's upper window. Oxen, cows, goats and hogs, adorned with evergreens and red berries, are driven past, while old women bring up the rear bearing gayly decorated barnyard fowls as presents. In our own country we Americans, "half-pagan, half-Puritan," take our New Year characteristically. With flashing eyes and smiling lips we greet its dawn; dancing, feasting, uproariously blowing our little tin horns. And at the same time in our secret hearts—the curtains of pride and conventionality closely drawn—we sadly sit beside the dying embers of the past year's hopes and shiver at the prospects of the unknown future at the door.

SECRET OF GOOD COFFEE.

Best Ingredients and Proper Making Are Necessary.

The secret of good coffee lies in having the best ingredients and in the proper making, says a writer in the New York World. By the best ingredients are meant those delightful coffees grown on well-watered mountain slopes, such as the famous Java and Mocha coffees, the Mocha and Java mixed half and half. It is best to parch the coffee grains just before making the coffee, but if this is not convenient the coffee can be bought parched in the grain, but never ground. It should be ground immediately before using, in order to preserve the delicious flavor. Good coffee should never be boiled. Bear this in mind. The good Creole cook never boils coffee, but insists on dripping it in a covered strainer, slowly, slowly, drip, drip, till all the flavor is extracted. The water must be freshly boiled, and must never be poured upon the grounds until it has reached the boiling point. It is of the greatest importance that the coffee-pot be kept perfectly clean. This point is only too often overlooked, and yet the coffee-pot requires more than ordinary care, for the reason that the chemical action of the coffee upon the tin or agate tends to create a substance which collects and clings to every crevice and seam, and, naturally, in the course of time will affect the flavor of the coffee. Very often the fact that the coffee tastes bitter or muddy arises from this.

DESSERT FOR THE LUNCHEON.

New Way in Which Apples Can Be Cooked and Served.

A change in a luncheon dessert may be made by cooking apples in this way and using them on occasion: Allow to every pound of peeled and cored fruit three-fourths of a pound of sugar, the first of one lemon and the juice of half a lemon. Put the apples into a stone jar in a pan of boiling water, and boil until the apples are tender. Then put them into the preserving pan with the sugar, lemon juice and the rinds grated. Let these simmer gently for half an hour, remove the scum, and put into jars, covering when cold. Good Housekeeping says: Oysters seldom are breaded and fried at home successfully. The mistake which most cooks make is to encase them in egg and bread crumbs. This rarely is a success. The coating comes off, giving to the oysters a plebeian appearance, and they usually are overcooked in the attempt to brown them evenly. Select sound oysters which have just been opened. Flatten each slightly and lay them in fresh milk. Prepare a mixture of equal parts of flour and sifted cracker crumbs. Oyster or rich butter crackers are good for this purpose. Let the fat be very hot. Drain the oysters one by one and dip them in the cracker mixture. Lay them in a wire basket and fry in deep hot fat two or three minutes. Drain on brown paper. Garnish with parsley and lemon.

Fruit and Cheese Together.

It is said that a little cheese at the end of a dinner acts as a digestive agent, but whether or not this is true, no well-appointed dinner is without it. In many homes a bit of cheese with an accompanying fruit or jelly, is used as a dessert instead of some pudding or pie. It is just a sufficient finish to a family dinner without dessert. If there is a dessert, the cheese is frequently served with the salad, roquefort cheese with lettuce or tomatoes. Connoisseurs do not cut a roquefort cheese until it is well advanced in decay and therefore it is not well to set before a man of this sort a new bit of the cheese. It is more advisable to leave it out altogether and give him brie or cheddar, both of which are favored cheeses with men.

Lemon Sponge.

Soak one-half ounce good gelatine in one-fourth pint of cold water; dissolve it in another one-fourth pint of boiling water, add one-fourth pound lump sugar and the peel of half a lemon; pour into an enameled saucepan, and let simmer for one-half hour, then strain and allow it to stand until cool, but not so that it sets. Add to it the juice of one large lemon, and whisk or beat the mixture until it is perfectly white and thick. Dip a mould in cold water, drain it, put in the sponge-mixture, and stand aside in a cool place until the next day. When required for table, dip the mould into tepid water for one-half minute, loosen the edges carefully with the top of a spoon, and turn out on to a glass dish.

Deviled Sweet Potatoes.

Bake six or eight medium-sized sweet potatoes. They must be dry and mealy; scoop them out of the shell and mash finely, then add one tablespoonful melted butter, a little cinnamon, or nutmeg, a rounding teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper, two tablespoonfuls of cream and one beaten egg. Beat all together until light, then heap roughly into the shells and bake to a rich brown.

Brown Bread.

One cupful of sour cream, one cupful sweet milk, one cupful molasses, one teaspoonful each of soda and baking powder, and one teaspoonful of salt. Add enough graham flour to make a stiff batter. Lastly add one-half cupful each of seeded raisins and chopped walnuts. Turn into pound baking powder cans and steam two and one-half hours.

THE RUNAWAY ENGINE

By LLEWELLYN LORD

"I never, never will marry you unless papa consents." She said this so often that I began to fear that she meant it, and her father was one of those hard-headed men who take pride in the fact that they never change their minds.

"Then I'm going away," said I, desperately. "Where?" she asked. Her incredulous tone maddened me. "You think it an idle threat, Nell, but unless you decide by this day week to become my wife, either with or without your father's consent, I will go to the farthest place in the world—to New Zealand." Her eyes filled with tears. She beseeched me to have patience, but I refused.

When the week was up she still was obdurate, and I made all my arrangements to go to New Zealand. Her father was glad to see me go, I believe.

Nell was at the station the day I left. Once more I pleaded with her, but in vain. She loved me, but she could not believe that any happiness would come to our marriage unless she obtained her father's blessing.

It happened that the train was late. We waited at the station with other passengers, including her mother and father. I think the old man had come down to be sure Nell did not weaken and go away with me the last minute. But I began to think that his adorable daughter was as obdurate as her father.

As we waited on the platform for the train that was to bear me away from the girl I loved a switch engine pulled up on one of the farther tracks and my wandering eyes noticed that the engineer and fireman left the locomotive alone while they went into the restaurant for their dinners.

"Oh, Will," murmured Nell, in my ear. "I always have wanted to get in an engine. Do you suppose they would care if we should look at that one while the man is away?"

"Yes, they would be sure to care," I said, gloomily. "Besides, it is against the rules for passengers to be on the tracks."

"Couldn't you get permission for us to look at it?" she asked. "Come on, we'll not ask for permission," I said. It occurred to me that the engine cab would give me an opportunity for one final and tender good-bye.

We went to the locomotive and inspected its drivers and cylinders, and at last I helped Nell into the cab. She looked at the quivering monster with little exclamations of delight and amazement.

"I'm going to make it whistle," she cried, daringly as she climbed upon the engineer's seat. "If they arrest us and send us to jail, then you can't go away."

She seized hold of the lever and gave it a jerk. Instead of whistling the engine coughed. She laughed like a pleased child. "Why, it's moving," she cried. "So it was. I saw the engineer running from the restaurant door and wildly waving his arms."

"Oh, I can't stop it," cried Nell, in dismay. I looked at her and saw that she was pulling and pushing at all the levers within reach. Presently she struck the whistling apparatus, and the engine gave two short, sharp whistles, the starting signal.

We ran off the sidetrack to the main line and the switch engine was picking up speed amazingly. Nell was about to leap out, when I caught her and held her.

"It is too late for that," I said, as I pressed her in my arms. She clung to me in fright. As I looked back toward the station I saw her father was shaking his fist.

"Don't you know how to stop it, Will?" she sobbed. "No, indeed. But don't be frightened. They will telegraph ahead and clear the track for us, and it will stop when the steam dies down." "Isn't it dreadful!" she exclaimed. "Father and mother will think we are running away. They will believe I did it on purpose." "Didn't you?" I asked, innocently. "You know I didn't," she declared, withdrawing from my arms. "It looks much like you are running away with me," I said. "If you are, I can't help it, can I?" "You are ridiculous," she laughed. "Any way, you can't start to New Zealand to-day."

"Unless you go with me," said I. By this time the engine was going so rapidly and the racket was so great that we could not converse. I made Nell sit on the engineer's seat and to be sure that she did not fall out I held my arm about her waist. There was a crowd of people lined up at the first station to see us go and now I had no further fear of a collision. The train dispatcher would be sure to clear the track. I saw by the gauge that the steam was dying out, and after we had passed the third station the engine ran perceptibly slower. It stopped dead still on the outskirts of Cherrydale. I helped Nell from the engine and we walked to the station house. The telegraph operator met us at the end of the platform. He had a condescending grin on his face. "It's all right," he said, as he thrust a yellow envelope in Nell's hands. I looked over her shoulder and read the message. "Come back home and be married with our blessing. All is forgiven." Cubans Register Them and Demand Royalties from Owners.

Americans who seek to do business in Cuba are confronted with a peculiar variety of pecculation—appropriation of trademarks. The department of commerce and labor issues a warning to all manufacturers who have any thought of exporting goods to Cuba. If they do not immediately register their trademarks, others will.

Speculators are using the trademarks of popular American goods, and the manufacturer of the genuine article when he enters the Cuban market finds himself compelled to buy out the speculator if he wishes to market his wares under the proper name. When the speculator registers a trademark he has a hold on the American manufacturer, and he may demand and collect any price.

In some instances speculators holding the Cuban rights to trademarks of American manufacturers have compelled the manufacturer to pay them a royalty.

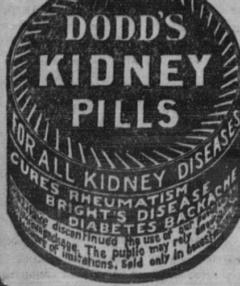

It is therefore essential that Americans protect themselves by paying the $12.50 required for registration and thus prevent the confiscation of their trademarks.

The American Adder.

A full-grown adder may measure two feet in length and about six inches around the thickest part of its body. Its movements are sluggish, and of course the universal idea prevailing among the natives of this country that it is capable of transferring its head from one extremity to the other once every six months is due simply to superstition. The fact is that the tail of this snake does not terminate in a point as with ophidians generally, but is stumpy and resembles the head so much that it is difficult for an observer situated at a distance of a few yards to distinguish the one from the other, hence the story of its being two-headed, the fallacy of which no intelligent observer could fail to detect.—The Pioneer.

MONSIEUR SARDOU

By PAUL C. WILLARD

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

A plenitude of posters had proclaimed the coming of the Hood Repertoire company, "headed by the young romantic actor Robert Wayne." Petticoats rustled, lingeries switched and swirled, and fans waved; the orchestra played, and, at length, the curtain rose on "The Charity Ball." It was the opening matinee and every woman present waited anxiously for the appearance of the star as "Rev. John Van Buren." Would he be handsome, or had the lithographs lied? A door opened. The leading man appeared, garbed in simple black, and, in a quiet, modest manner, entered upon the role of the heroic clergyman. Nods, smiles and nudges of approval passed from one maid to another as the actor's fine profile, erect figure and clear voice were noted, but Wayne seemed oblivious to it all and pursued his even way with the utmost ingenuousness. Near the stage sat a dozen young ladies from Miss Hard's seminary, fresh with the gauzy loveliness that clings round sweet girlhood in summer days. In the second act Wayne chanced to glance in the direction of Miss Hard's young ladies and, as a penalty, almost missed one of his cues. For, with all his clerical make-up, his heroism and self sacrifice, while treading the mimic stage, Robert Wayne was a man, a very susceptible young man at that; and Miss Mary Porter's admiring blue eyes had oozed into his in a way that was positively startling. "What a remarkably pretty face!"

Between acts two and three Wayne studied the girl's face through a peep hole. "Who is she?" he asked the theater manager. "Name is Porter, ain't she?" In the third act he determined to attend strictly to his work, but, somehow, he fell from this resolve and was rewarded with another warm glance of admiration that quickened his heart. His hitherto absorbing ambition to reach the top of his profession began to fade and another, a new, desire took possession of his throbbing brain. What were evanescent fame or sordid fortune compared to the vision that had suddenly gripped his heart as nothing had ever done before? He must, he would, possess this girl.

The play was over and Rev. John Van Buren hurried to his dressing room and threw off his ministerial chrysalis. In a few moments Robert Wayne emerged, stick in hand, and set off for a walk. He saw a group of ladies waiting for a street car and wondered if she might be among them. Sure enough! As he passed he saw her and, better still, she saw him! She knew him!—yes, she smiled upon him! The shackles were complete; Wayne boarded the next car and followed her.

The polished door plate and knocker at Miss Hard's looked stern and forbidding. Wayne stood on the opposite side of the street for fully ten minutes and gazed across, while he reviewed the events that had brought him there and considered what would be the best course to pursue. How might he communicate with the young lady? He had an idea that boarding schools for girls were governed by strict regulations and this would probably make the task difficult. He might write her, but, doubtless, the mail was inspected and this might lead to trouble. Or he might transmit a note by bribing a servant. He rejected this plan with indignation. Why should he resort to any deception whatever? "I have found," he remarked to himself, "that the best way to obtain what one wants is to ask for it," and, with this observation, he crossed the street and lifted the knocker.

The maid opened her eyes when the young man inquired for the "manager" and left him for five minutes to trace the figures in the library carpet with his cane; then Miss Hard appeared. Wayne rose and in the coldness of Miss Hard's spectacled blue eyes he read a lack of sympathy for any appeal like his. Miss Hard glanced at his card, then raised her eyes to his inquiringly.

"I should like, if there is no objection," he began, "to have a few minutes conversation with Miss Porter."

"Upon what business?" Miss Hard scrutinized him keenly. She had ward off many attempts to approach Miss Porter.

"Pardon me," explained Wayne, "but it is about a private—a personal matter."

Miss Hard glanced at the card again. "You are an actor?"

Wayne flushed at her tone. "I am proud to say that I am."

"When and where did you meet Miss Porter?"

"I regret," responded Wayne, his anger rising, "that I have never had the pleasure of meeting her. May I see her?"

Miss Hard's thin lips compressed themselves into a knowing smile. "Unless you can give me some good reason for wishing to see Miss Porter, to whom you confess you are an utter stranger, as you are also to me, I cannot grant your request."

"Very well!" Wayne grasped his hat and came and moved toward the door. "I suppose you will doubt me when I say that I am a gentleman, but I am one, I believe, and I hoped to be received as such when I came here to frankly ask an interview that I might have sought clandestinely.

But it seems that this sort of conduct is not appreciated. Good day."

For an hour he tramped aimlessly, his mind full of plans by which to defeat his recent obstructionist, and that night he slept little. He rose early and set off in the direction of the seminary and, when he returned, towards noon, he wore the expression of one who has solved a perplexing problem. The company was to close its season on the coming Saturday and now Wayne announced his wish to finish his work on Wednesday.

"I don't like to let you go," pleaded the manager, but Wayne insisted and he had his way.

For Miss Hard Wednesday brought two distinct annoyances: In the first place, Miss Porter wished to attend the matinee, and, when permission was refused, she said something pointed. In the second place, Adolph, the chef, suddenly resigned. At this Miss Hard announced a sick headache, and, after sending advertisements to the papers for another cook, retired to her room.

The next morning, after a memorable breakfast, prepared by the laundress and second girl, Miss Hard almost smiled when the maid announced that a man had applied for the position of chef.

"Show him in," she commanded, and a moment later he stood before her, tall and swarthy, with a small black mustache and imperial. "A Frenchman!" she exclaimed to herself and it struck her that a "chef de cuisine" straight from Paris would add to the sum of the school's attractions.

"Your name?" she asked.

"Emile Sardou," he replied with a kingly bow.

"Sardou! You are not related to the great dramatist?"

"Oui, oui, madame; he es my grandfather."

Miss Hard gazed at him almost with reverence. She was thinking how she would point out her chef to visitors as the grandchild of genius.

"You are a good cook, a good chef? You understand it all?"

"Oui, oui, madame." He let fly a volley of assurances. "I cook anything, anything at all. Eet oes delectous."

"You can make pies?"

He rolled his eyes ecstatically.

"Ah, madame, eet ees ze pattie zat I make more best zan all. Ah, ze pattie, he shall be so grand, so beautiful, so—what you call—so magnificent." After this outburst Miss Hard lost no time in securing Monsieur Sardou.

At lunch there was a dearth of eatables but Miss Hard reflected that Monsieur Sardou had scarcely had time to prepare anything. At dinner the roast was burned and the coffee weak enough for a nursery but she made allowances and carved deeper. The other servants wondered at Emile. He talked French when they asked him about himself, yet, when he burned his hand he swore in perfect English; and he seemed possessed to leave the kitchen and wander through the halls. The "magnifique" pastries came and went unnoted, for they were unspeakable, and then Monsieur Sardou blamed the range. "Een my countess," he told Miss Hard, "eet ees not I. I must have ze brick oven." Thenceforth all pastries were purchased from the bakery.

So for a week Monsieur Sardou reigned, amid smoke and culinary calamities unnumbered; then he departed, and, about the same time, Miss Porter disappeared. Three days later Miss Hard sat in the library reading this letter:

"My Dear Miss Hard—Forgive me for causing you dyspepsia; but, really, it was all your fault. When you refused my frank request I was obliged to fall back upon my art and I next appeared to you in one of my favorite characters—Beauciare. It seems that I am a much better actor than cook, but I intend to abandon both occupations and go into business now that I have found the best girl in the world for a wife, and, as Beauciare says at the close of the play, her name is the sweetest name in all the world—just Mary. Robert Wayne."

Fearful Loss by Chinese Floods.

Thousands of men work all their lives at securing the banks of the great Yellow River in China. Yet every now and then the tide sweeps away all opposition and the loss in human life is greater than any war ever caused. Nineteen years ago the river burst its bonds. Day after day the torrent flowed, 20 miles to the hour, 30 miles wide and ten feet deep. The flood has been described as that of five Danubes pouring from a height for two months on end. For 2,000 years the Chinese have been embanking this river. The silt which the waters bring down from the mountains builds up the bed and raises the surface of the water. The banks are raised higher and higher to keep in the water and for mile after mile the river runs over a bed whose level is far above that of the fields through which it takes its way. But the weak part of the embankment is always found out. The river always breaks through. And then a province is swept out of existence and people die by millions. The death roll 19 years ago was estimated at from 2,000,000 to 7,000,000.

SHOCK FOR THE HUSBAND.

Wifely Anxiety Had Considerable Motive.

Anthony Comstock was talking in New York about certain information that had been lodged with him.

"It is perhaps helpful information," he said, "but I confess that I mistrust its motive."

"It suggests to me an incident that occurred last month in Matawan."

"A young woman of Matawan said to her husband one night:

"My dear, there is a gentleman in the parlor. He wants to speak to you."

"Who is it, do you know?" the husband asked.

"Dear," said his wife, "you must forgive me—but that cough has bothered you so much of late—and though winter is coming on it still clings to you—and oh, if you knew how worried I've been about you!" And she threw her arms around his neck.

"What would I do if I were to lose you?" the man moaned.

"Come, come," said the young man, patting her shoulder tenderly; "men don't die of a slight cold. So you've called in the doctor, eh? Well, I'll see him gladly if it will make you feel easier. Which one is it? Squills?"

"It isn't the doctor," was the answer. "It's the life insurance agent."

DISFIGURING SKIN HUMOR.

Impossible to Get Employment, as Face and Body Were Covered with Sores—Cured by Cuticura.

"Since the year 1894 I have been troubled with a very bad case of eczema which I have spent hundreds of dollars trying to cure, and I went to the hospital, but they failed to cure me, and it was getting worse all the time. Five weeks ago my wife bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and I am pleased to say that I am now completely cured and well. It was impossible for me to get employment, as my face, head and body were covered with it. The eczema first appeared on the top of my head, and it had worked all the way around down the back of my neck and around to my throat, down my body and around the hips. It itched so I would be obliged to scratch it, and the flesh was raw. I am now all well, and I will be pleased to recommend the Cuticura Remedies to all persons who wish a speedy and permanent cure of skin diseases." Thomas M. Rossiter, 290 Prospect Street, East Orange, N. J., Mar. 30, 1905.

Claim Nearly Cost Life.

Fred McNulty, of this city, had a terrible experience while holding down a claim which he has several miles east of here. He went to the claim just before the big blizzard of last week. The weather previously had been mild, and McNulty had no store of fuel in the shack. The storm was so fierce that he could not make his way home, so he went to bed in order to keep from freezing to death. For three days the storm raged, and McNulty lay covered up to his ears, without a bite to eat and only a small quantity of water. When at last the storm subsided he made his way to a neighbor's, a mile distant, freezing his face and ears while en route. When he finally reached Minot he was compelled to take to his bed as a result of his experience.—Minot Correspondence Duluth Herald.

The Sunny South.

Now when all outdoor farm work has ceased in the north, the term "sunny south" and all that it means, appeals with full force to the northern farmer as he realizes that with him it is a case of remaining indoors for the next several months consuming everything that has been produced during the growing season. In the "sunny south" something can be raised every month in the year, and practically every day can be spent out doors. No blizzards. No sunstrokes. Cattle-raising is very profitable. Large profits are made with little labor in growing fruits, vegetables, etc., for northern markets. Strawberries and cantaloupes are great revenue getters. Water unsurpassed. Work plentiful. Lands cheap and productive. For reliable information, address G. A. Park, General Immigration and Industrial Agent, Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, Louisville, Ky.

Come to Congressman's Idea.

Some years ago Lemuel Ely Quigg, then a congressman, expressed the opinion that the police commissioner of New York city should be "an intelligent despot." The idea was ridiculed then, but Mr. Quigg derives some satisfaction from the knowledge that the grand jury of New York county has made a recommendation approaching somewhat closely to his view. The commissioner, says the jury, should hold office for at least ten years and should be removable only upon proof of charges which he has had opportunity to meet.

Why German Ship Was Favored.

Sir West Ridgway, until lately governor of Ceylon, returned to England from that country in a German steamship. The question was raised in the house of commons why he had not traveled on a British vessel. The colonial secretary explained that Sir West was allowed to take his pet dog with him on the German ship, a privilege the English ships had denied him.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Healthful cream of tartar, derived solely from grapes, refined to absolute purity, is the active principle of every pound of Royal Baking Powder.

Hence it is that Royal Baking Powder renders the food remarkable both for its fine flavor and healthfulness.

No alum, no phosphate—which are the principal elements of the so-called cheap baking powders—and which are derived from bones, rock and sulphuric acid.

A gigantic rabbit hunt is being arranged between rival clubs of 14 men from Howell and Handy townships, Livingston county. The event will be held off in the near future and the side having the smallest bag at the end of the day will buy supper for the winning team.

One evening last week a short young gentleman of the village and a very tall young lady were walking down the street. On catching sight of them a young American in front of the post office exclaimed, "Hello! there's a twenty two long and a twenty two short." —Fowlerville Standard.

News was received in Ann Arbor Thursday of last week of the death of Jacob Volland, one of the pioneer business men of Ann Arbor. The death occurred at the home of his son Prof. Albert Volland in Grand Rapids, and was the result of pneumonia. Mr. Volland came to Ann Arbor from Germany in 1828 at the age of 8 years. He started in business in that city in 1842 and continued until last March, making a period of some sixty four years. He leaves a number of nephews and nieces who are residents of this vicinity.

A few years since a citizen of Monroe had sent to him from near Washington, D. C. a few red squirrels. These were given their freedom in the public park and secured protection from the gun and hunter. Today the squirrel family has grown to nearly five hundred and are the attraction of all lovers of nature study. Even our small village could have squirrels and even songbirds if the public spirited citizens would unite in a demand that these be given protection. Teach your boys to love birds and small pets and they will get pleasure in the same sports now so common.

DANGER IN DELAY.

Kidney Diseases are too Dangerous For People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined: Headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills.

H. W. Garrison, of 1121 Shiawassee street, Owosso, Mich., retired farmer, says: "For many years I suffered severely with my kidneys, the pains at times being frequently so severe I could scarcely get up or down from a chair. The kidney secretions were irregular, distressing and annoying. I had also spells of dizziness and had to hold on to something to keep from falling. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and procuring a box I used it. I felt benefited after a few doses. My wife was relieved of similar trouble by their use and we cannot speak in too high praise of this valuable preparation."

ADDITIONAL LOCAL EVENTS.

Clarence Schaufele, who is attending the Northwestern College in Naperville, Illinois, is spending his Christmas vacation at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Schaufele, of Chelsea.

Jacob Schultz and family, of Ann Arbor, Henry Schieferstein and family and John Schaufele and family, of Chelsea, spent Christmas at the home of John Spiegelberg and family, of Lima.

This morning D. C. McLaren reports that he has placed on the M. C. side-tracks fourteen cars to be loaded with hay. The cars are placed at every station between Ann Arbor and Leoni, both included in the number given. This is an unusual happening in these days of car-shortage.

Mrs. Elizabeth Riemenschneider, widow of the late John Riemenschneider of Sylvan, died at the home of her son, Phillip H. Riemenschneider, of Cavanaugh Lake, Friday, December 21, 1906, aged 81 years. The deceased was born in Germany, and has been a resident of Sylvan for many years. She is survived by four sons and two daughters. The funeral was held from the German M. E. Church of Sylvan, Tuesday forenoon, the Rev. H. W. Lenz officiating.

Mrs. Helen A. Martin died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. E. Johnson, Monday, December 24, 1906. Deceased was born September 16, 1853, and for a number of years has been a resident of this vicinity. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Elmer Beach, of this place, is a sister of the deceased. The funeral was held from the Congregational church, Wednesday afternoon, Rev. M. Lee Grant, officiating. Interment in Oak Grove cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Walker on Christmas entertained thirty of their relatives and friends at their home. The house was nicely decorated with holly, mistletoe, Christmas bells and a tree for the children. Among the guests from out-of-town were R. H. Holmes and family of Battle Creek, R. P. Copeland and wife, of Dexter, Miss Cornelia Copeland, of Detroit, Charles Martin, wife and son, of Dexter, Wm. Martin, wife and son, Frank of Webster, and Edward McNamara of Traverse City.

David Kelly, of Dexter, died at his home in that village Tuesday morning, December 25, 1906. About a week before his death he moved into one of the hotels in that place and, in opening a can of salmon, he scratched one of his wrists, but not deep enough to draw blood. A few days after the accident blood poisoning set in and resulted in his death. He leaves a wife and four small children, the eldest of whom is but 10 years of age. The deceased was a brother of John Kelly of Chelsea.

Very appropriate Christmas exercises closed the successful term of school in the Red School House on the Manchester road last Friday evening. The school has been in charge of Miss Mabel Rafferty, of Chelsea, and each of the scholars who took part in the program was well trained and fitted for the exercises which had been assigned to them. A Santa Claus distributed to each scholar a suitable gift, and the students presented their instructor with two pieces of hand-painted china. The school building was handsomely decorated for the occasion and the Misses Edna Rafferty and Margaret Elder, of Chelsea, rendered several vocal selections.

Easy Way to Get Rid of Stumps. A method of getting rid of stumps which has been highly recommended, and which is to be effected should be done now, is as follows:

Bore a hole one or two inches in diameter and about 18 inches deep into the center of the stump. Then put into this hole one or two ounces of saltpeter. Fill the hole with water and plug it up. In the spring take out the plug, pour in about one-half gallon of kerosene oil and light it. The stump will smolder away to the very extremities of the roots, leaving nothing but the ashes.—Farming.

Off on the Pronunciation. Ascum—I hear he actually made a speech in German to some of his constituents. And it was quite a success, too, I'm told.

May Consider Himself Immune. A Pottsville, Pa., man fell 400 feet down the shaft of an abandoned mine and was rescued without a broken bone. If he carries an accident insurance policy he must feel now that he is wasting his money.

Charms for Evil Spirits. In order to keep evil spirits away from granaries, charms, such as skulls and horns of animals, are hung on a tree nearby in India.

At the Top. The trouble with many a man is that when he reaches the top he wants to cut the fastenings of the ladder at that end.

The Cynic Again. We always dislike a man who has grasped an opportunity we failed to see. When we say of a man that he won't listen to reason he is probably saying the same of us.—The Tatler.

Accidents will happen, but the best regulated families keep Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil for such emergencies. It subdues the pain and heals the hurts.

Mr. Cooper closed his series of meetings here Sunday evening, he goes to Unadilla where meeting will be held. He refused to take money for his work but the people gave a small purse as a Christmas present.

All Doubt About the Pineapple Forever Set at Rest.

William C. Whitney, Jr., who has spent a year in Indian Territory learning practical mining at Quapaw, described at a dinner party in New York a Quapaw restaurant.

"At this restaurant one evening," he said at his description's end, "two miners near me got into a botanical argument about the pineapple, one claiming that it was a fruit and the other that it was a vegetable."

"In the midst of their argument the waiter entered in his shirt-sleeves and looked about to see what was the cause of the loud talking."

"The miners decided to let the waiter settle their argument, and accordingly one of them said:

"Pete, what is a pineapple? Is it a fruit or a vegetable?"

"The waiter, flicking the ashes from his cigar, smiled at the two men with pity.

"It's neither, gents," he said. "It's an extra."

Foolish Dietetic Fads.

"If men grimly eat to live, they will not live long," says Dr. Thomas Lathrop Stedman, in a protest against the desperate seriousness with which the present generation regards its food. Dr. Stedman suggests that people should eat what they like. "Appetite," he says, "is as necessary to digestion as is mastication, and what is eaten without relish is with difficulty, if at all, assimilated, for the stomach despoils unsavory stuff and refuses to secrete sufficient fluid for its digestion."

The dietetic crank, he adds, is saved from the otherwise inevitable results of his folly by the fact that his enthusiastic appreciation of the unsavory food which he is persuaded will assure him strength and long life gives him a taste for it, and so the motherly stomach provides an abundance of gastric juice of the proper composition.

Earth Becoming a Desert.

That the earth is becoming a desert and that it is only a matter of time when it will be a desolate waste, was the statement made by Prof. Lowell in a lecture before the Lowell institute at the Massachusetts institute of technology.

The water contained by the earth is passing gradually off into inter-stellar space, and the great deserts such as the Sahara and those in Arizona are increasing in size much more rapidly than most people think.

According to Prof. Lowell, what were once well populated valleys in the region of the Sahara, is now a dry, sandy waste. In Mars similar changes have been taking place, and the planet is now about three-eighths desert.—Boston Globe.

RHEUMATISM IS CURABLE IF URIC-O IS USED

ALL OTHER TREATMENTS FAIL

Is it the unhealthy foods we eat or the rapid pace in which we live that cause such an endless amount of Rheumatism nowadays? The disease has certainly reached an alarming point, as nine-tenths of the adult population in this country are more or less afflicted with some form of this maddening disease. Recent investigation has proven the fact that Rheumatism is a blood disease, therefore, many bright chemists and physicians have had good ground to work upon, and they have succeeded in compounding a remedy, which, if used as advised, cannot fail to drive and eliminate from the blood and muscles all traces of man's greatest evil, Poison Rheumatic Acid. URIC-O is the name of this remedy. It is a liquid treatment, made and designed to cure all forms of Rheumatism and good for no other disease. There is no poison, no alcohol or whiskey entered into the composition of URIC-O. It is simply a powerful solvent of Uric Acid and other deposits which seriously affect the kidneys.

URIC-O is sold at $1.00 per bottle by druggists generally, or can be obtained by addressing the SMITH DRUG COMPANY, SYRACUSE, N. Y. Samples and literature will be forwarded to all who apply for same. Our advice is use URIC-O. It may be the means of saving your life or may prevent you from being crippled for life.

URIC-O is sold and recommended in Chelsea by L. T. FREEMAN.

PINKIE PRIM

Ain't it awful! Pinkie's sick!
Poor, little Pinkie Prim.
"Whooping-cough", the doctor says.
"With chances rather slim."

Doctor says to swab her throat
With nasty iodine.
Grandma says, "Well, I'd object,
If she were child of mine."

Doctor says, "I quit a case
When Grandmas interfere."
Grandma says, "Then quit it quick!
I'll save the little Dear!"

Pinkie's Maw is "scandalized";
Tells Grandma to shut up.
Grandma takes no notice, though,
But goes and gets a cup.

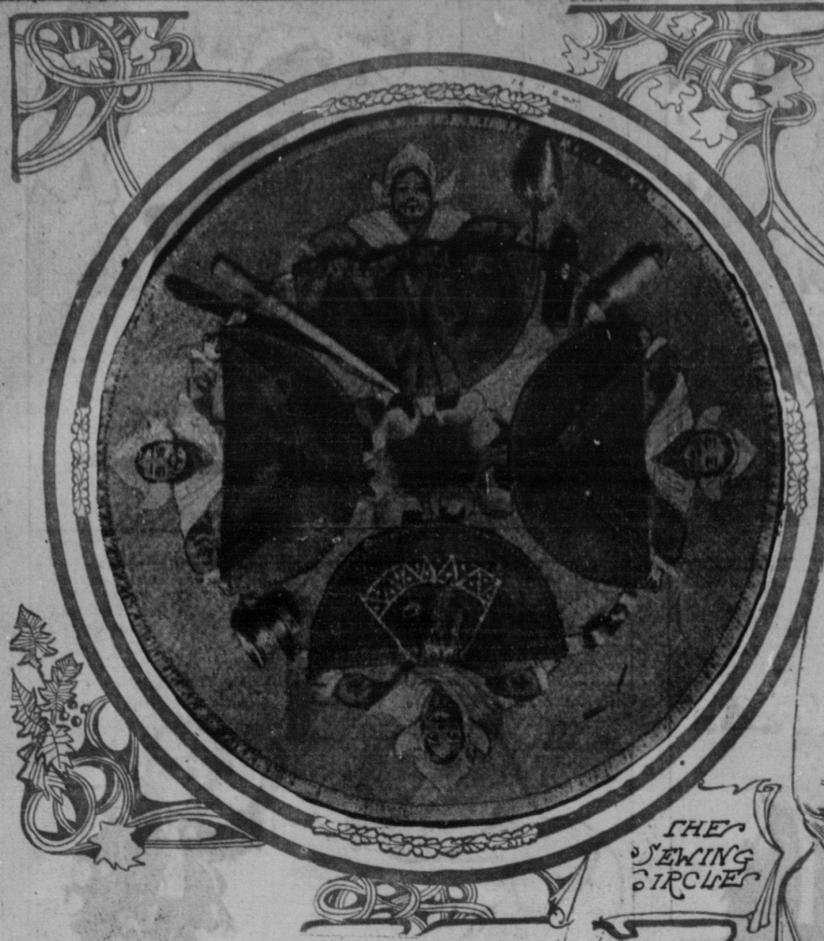

Fills it full of steaming tea
Composed of simple herbs.
Pinkie drinks it, — sinks to sleep,
Which coughing not disturbs.

Not once more does Pinkie cough;
She slumbers till the dawn.
"Iodine!" Proud Grandma sniffs,
"The whooping-cough is gone!"

The Drift of Mid-Winter Fashions

In forecasting the mid-winter fashions it was predicted that the unexpected run of ostrich feathers would give way to a demand for coque and bird feathers and various manufactured ornaments; but it is evident now that the prophecy will not be fulfilled. Nine out of ten hats that one sees on display, somewhere an ostrich feather even if it be only a tiny one scarcely visible as it peeps over the brim on the side under a mass of aigrettes and motley plumage or tucked away in the folds of velvet.

In characterizing the season's chapeaux it would be a wrong usage to apply the adjective "simple." Some of them combine color and shape that makes little short of a gorgeous effect. To this general truth there is probably but one exception. This shape, the "Sweeney," is noticeable, principally on account of its simplicity. It has a crown of web velvet arranged somewhat in a Tam O'Shanter effect over a brim which widens and droops slightly over the ears. There is not a vestige of trimming on it except a single aigrette which falls over the left ear and a single bunch of roses under the brim.

The seal of approval has certainly been set upon the wearing of furs for all occasions and in all possible ways. It is many years since fur has been popular as a trimming for gowns, but if there has heretofore been any question as to its usage this season, the horse show has settled the matter. It will even be seen on evening gowns. As this is a period of extravagance, it is unnecessary to say that imitation furs will have no place. Further than that, it is difficult to declare one fur more of a favorite than another. Black fox is the newest fad, and as its gloss renders it very becoming, we may expect to see a good deal of it.

An afternoon gown of rich dark wine cloth has a wide band of lynx around the bottom—of course for this purpose an inferior pelt may be utilized, and even preferably so, as the long hairs of the best quality would soon wear off as a foot trampling—and a narrower band as a cuff for the three-quarter sleeves. To complete the effect there is a long pelerine, pointed in the back, coming out well over the shoulders, and a huge and perfectly square muff.

Millinery shows even more of a craze for queer combinations than do the gowns, and it is many a year since there have appeared so many hats stamped with the mark of individuality. For afternoon and evening wear hats are large, but never exaggeratedly so, and in both cases take on considerable height. Velvet is used chiefly, to match the gown for afternoon wear and of light, delicate tones and tints for evening, the latter often made up with gold or silver tissue or some rich oriental stuffs. One hat of palest blue is bound with silver cloth and trimmed with masses of tulle, with large silver pink roses and two small ostrich tips curling over the brim. Fur-trimmed hats are extremely smart, and most of them are rather small and in close shape. They are made up with feathers, lace and ribbon, and are quite the dressiest sort of headgear for afternoon wear, particularly with a fur coat or fur-trimmed costume.

A garment very much admired is the fur pony coat. This little coat comes just below the waistline, and, if made of striped fur, has the stripes perfectly matched. Then there is another style bound to be generally liked, and that is the perfectly tight-fitting jacket, with three-quarter sleeves and very short and very narrow revers. This, too, barely reaches the hips, but its chief beauty lies in its cut, in the way it curves to the lines of the figure. One feature of the styles in furs is the clever way in which they are combined with rich laces, velvets and other materials. A long, shaped stole may have little panels of lace let in here and there around the shoulders, or a shorter one may be finished with ends of lace and ribbon. Still another fancy is to have the fastening of these fur wraps concealed underneath a jabot of deep creamy lace, always creamy, by the way, very little dead white lace being used.

A NEW LAUNDRY BAG.

A useful pantry article is a laundry bag for table linen. A capacious one may be quickly and easily made of two circular or square pieces of cretonne, fancy ticking or other strong material. In the center of one piece cut an X, turning down and binding the points thus formed. This gives a square opening. Attach a fancy cord to each corner of the opening by which to handle the bag. Sew the two pieces together in a seam and turn through the opening. Hang it on the back of the kitchen door and drop in soiled towels when passing.

MISSIS' PONY-COAT SUIT.

AMONG the many handsome misses' trotteur models seen this winter is that of the illustration, showing the newest side-plaited skirt, strapped and button trimmed in the most fetching manner. The pony jacket is one of the latest models, having a long sleeve trimmed with velvet. The flat collar and straps of the same velvet are button trimmed like the cloth straps used upon the skirt. The skirt is made with a separate lining of orked silk, finished with a series of six narrow ruffles.

THE TEDDY BEAR

The Teddy Bear has, apparently, come to stay; they are more in evidence each day and seem to give universal happiness to the young people. The prices are still high for those shown in the shops, and many children have been deprived of them for this reason.

This need not be the case, however, for these fascinating toys may be easily made at home, as the patterns shown today is very explicit in its directions, and the necessary materials may be had for very little.

No one can explain the intense love the children have for Bruin, but more than likely the cause lies in his softness and flexibility; he seems to respond to all the tight hugs and the impassioned kisses he receives. The coldness of the most dearly loved doll has been a thorn in the rose-leaf of happiness since the world began (the doll world, of course), and the little bear fills a long-felt want.

In the illustration, long-haired white plush is used, but the cinnamon bear is just as popular as the polar, and much more durable. The bear is made with movable arms, legs and head, like those sold in the shops, and is sufficiently realistic to please the most exacting child.

The trouble of making is small, but the radiant little faces will amply repay the maker of any amount of labor.

There are circular discs of cardboard attached to the body openings for arms, legs and head, and corresponding discs fastened to these members. These are fastened together with small wooden pins and are strong and indestructible, while they may be moved with ease.

Sir Bruin seems delightfully human when dressed, and so the clothing has become such an important factor that patterns are given for one costume.

His fascinations are increased in this way, but the clothes serve another purpose, for they keep the plush of his coat quite clean.

The garments may be taken off and sent to the laundry, and every child should provide herself with an outfit for her pet.

There are many attractive ways of clothing him.

Dressed as a sailor he is captivating. The list includes soldier, hunter, chauffeur, policeman, but perhaps the best of all is when he is put into a dress, cap, apron and kerchief, when the children pretend that he is Nanna, of "Peter Pan" fame, "dressed up" as a regular old-time nurse.

THE KITCHEN

RICE CREAM—Boil 1 cupful of rice (washed) until light and flaky. Let cool and separate. Whip a half-pint jar of cream, add one tablespoonful of sugar and a little vanilla. Mix the cream with the rice. Serve with canned raspberries or any fruit preferred. This makes a delicious dessert when served with ladyfinger or any dainty cakes.

RICE MERINGUE PUDDING—Four tablespoons of rice, wash and add 1 quart of milk. Let it stand to soak 1/2 hour, then put on to boil; when it begins to boil set on the back of range and simmer one hour or until cooked; then drop in 4 eggs, one at a time (use only the yolks, reserve the whites in a bowl for the meringue), add the grated rind and juice of half a lemon, a piece of butter the size of a walnut, 1/2 cup of granulated sugar, a pinch of salt, and flavor with nutmeg; grease a pudding dish, pour in the mixture, after well beating it, then beat the whites to a stiff froth, add two tablespoons of powdered sugar, spread over the top of pudding, set in oven to brown.

SHRIMP WIGGLE—Two cans of dry shrimp, broken fine, 1 cup of boiled rice, 1 cup of tomato juice, 1 cup of cream, salt, pepper and a grating of onion juice, butter size of walnut; heat all to boiling point, leaving the salt out until the last thing.

LEMON PIE—One cup seeded raisins, chopped fine, juice and pulp of 1 lemon, 1 cup sugar, 1 egg, 3 tablespoons of water, bake with 2 crusts.

Use Your

It isn't easy to apparently more newspaper—torn looking only fit for as a matter of fact lots of ways to make thing.

When sweeping there is no supply of ready (and in families drink coffee exclusively often be the case), an torn up into shreds and with water will prove substitute for collecting When housecleaning time away and carpets are lifted en, it is a good plan to lay thicknesses of newspapers under either in place of or above the brown paper sold for the pur The reason for placing the newspaper above, next to the carpet, is that printer's ink is a splendid moth ventive. Talking of printers' ink as a moth destroyer, our grandmothers well knew the value of printed paper for wrapping around furs, woolens, etc., before being put away for the summer; experience taught them that something in the ink made a newspaper wrapped parcel peculiarly abhorrent to Mrs. Moth, who keeps at a respectful distance from all such packages. For lining trunks, bureau drawers, etc., our grandmothers esteemed newspapers most highly, no doubt because of this very property of destroying, or at least resisting the moth.

It has been said that newspapers torn into shreds, make a good stuffing for a "headache pillow"—just as hops are supposed to cure sleeplessness. If the household pet happens to be a cat who will curl up on the sofa and chairs, leaving traces of fur behind her to the annoyance of yourself and your guests, pussy may easily be weaned from the forbidden places if a flat basket with a crumpled newspaper inside is placed in such corner. Almost every cat loves to sit on a newspaper; she likes to knead it with her paws before curling up to doze, and as the paper goes "crunch," she purrs from pure pleasure. So if pussy is introduced to the basket and the paper it is very unlikely she will go back to the chairs as long as the basket remains. Don't, however, let the paper get too flat—change it frequently. It is its "crunching" property that seems to charm pussy most.

TO CLEAN A STOVE.

How many housewives weary themselves by the unnecessary cleaning of the stove? Their steps at least could be saved by a little care and ingenuity. It is frying food that soils the top of the stove the most. So guard against the spluttering of grease from the frying pan. A small tin screen, such as those of paper or bamboo used in large size to keep off draughts, could be placed around the pan and the spluttering would be caught and held from the stove while the screen itself can be easily cleaned under the hot water spigot.

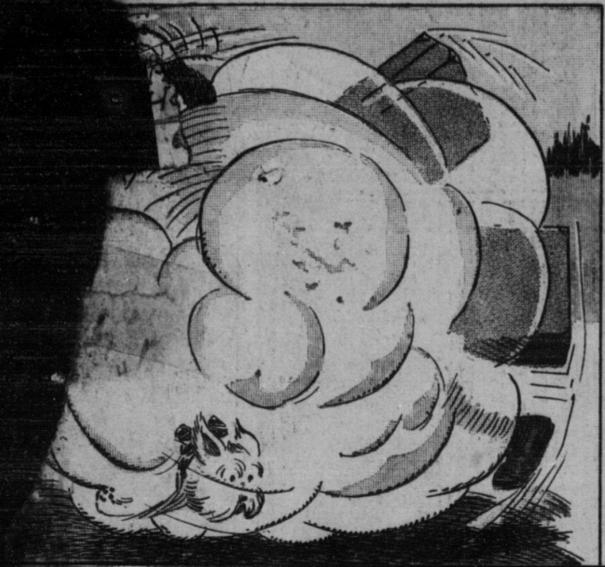

The bed should never stand against the wall. It should be pulled out a little on all sides in order that there may be a free circulation of air.

AND NOW IT'S THE "COLLEGE" HAT.

THIS winter marks the reign of the christened hat. Hardly a tailored hat seen but bears the name of some celebrity standing sponsor for it, while the number of shapes equipped with fanciful cognomens are legion. The illustrated "college" hat is one of the fads of the debutante, almost every girl who wishes to be considered up-to-date possessing one of these hats that resemble, rather suspiciously, the old "Teddy" sombrero. It is considered a smart thing to wear your college colors picked out in the colorings of the quills thrust through the upturned front brim.
