Supreme Court

OF MICHIGAN
LANSING, January 15, 1907.

My dear Mr. Glazier:

I notice in the paper your action against the slot machines in Chelsea. The people of the State are indebted to you for such action. I think it is a beginning of the end of these demoralizing things. Washtenaw county has been about as bad as any place in the State,—the very county where the law should be strictly enforced.

I write simply to let you know that good people admire your action, and good people are yet in the majority. I have heard many speak of it.

Sincerely yours,

C. B. Grant.

Hon. Frank P. Glazier,
Chelsea, Mich.

FIFTY DOLLARS REWARD!

A Reward of $50.00 will be paid to the person, or persons, furnishing information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of any one violating the laws of the State of Michigan, regarding gambling and the proper conduction of saloons.

FRANK P. GLAZIER.

This reward is in addition to the reward offered by the Village Council, and will hold good for the next forty years. Boys, get to work; this reward, together with the one offered by the Village Council, means $100.00 to you every time you furnish information that will lead to the conviction of any person violating the liquor laws or laws governing gambling in the State of Michigan.

A Word to the Wise.

The Standard-Herald is preparing a biography of several Chelsea gamblers, in which we will show that the man who gambles in wheat options or stocks is a greater menace to society, his partners and associates, and to good government, than the gambler who plays poker or other games of chance.

Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.—Galatians vi, 7.

Wreck 15 Slot Machines.

Hon. Frank P. Glazier, president of the village of Chelsea, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Leach and Marshal Young raided the saloons and billiard halls of the village last Saturday and seized every slot machine that they could find. The officers were followed by about 250 townsmen who formed a procession, and the machines were carried to the four corners of the principal streets and smashed with sledgehammers and then a bonfire was started of the debris.

There were 15 machines in all and it is estimated that each one has been good for at least $2,000 a year to the saloonmen and the owner of the machines who put them in on shares. This would mean that $30,000 a year was taken from the people in this way each year.

But little money was found in the machines, for the reason that the village authorities took possession of them and notified the owners to remove all money before 11:30 o'clock when they were to be destroyed. When the officers called to remove and destroy the gambling devices promptly at 11:30 a. m., they found that three of the saloonists, Mr. Val and Lehman, had removed their machines. When they saw the penalty for such action, he got a move on and produced the two missing machines.

Emmer hid his machines and resisted the officers in removing them.

Moe, who recently came from Jackson and has run the most disreputable joint ever known in Chelsea, deliberately lied about the matter, denying any knowledge of where the machines were concealed, but later was found with the goods. Monday the common council revoked the licenses of Moe, Emmer and Parker.

One of the eye-sores to the good people of this community has been the manner in which Henry Pullen has conducted his billiard-room for the past several months. He has allowed boys ranging in age from 11 years up to frequent his establishment and spend hours playing pool, and in every instance it has not only been a detriment to the boys but to their school duties. Pullen has been closed up and will never run a billiard-room in Chelsea again.

Kalkaska, Mich., Jan. 15.—Ten members of the W. C. T. U. and four pastors attended a council meeting Monday night. Slot machines must go. The ordinance was passed. The curfew ordinance is to be enforced at 8 o'clock in the winter and 9 in the summer. The village confiscated 22 slot machines this morning.

Pledge Support.

The members of the Congregational church assembled at the annual meeting of the church wish to express their profound satisfaction to the members of the council of the village of Chelsea for the successful efforts that are being made to enforce the laws of the state of Michigan. We pledge our united support to every movement directed against gambling and intemperance. We believe that the purpose of true government is to make it as hard as possible to do wrong and as easy as possible to do right. We hope that the present movement toward civic righteousness may continue and that Chelsea may become a model village and city not only in material prosperity, but also in true morality.

The above resolution was enthusiastically and unanimously adopted by a rising vote. The meeting was large representing practically the entire congregation.

William J. White, has again secured full possession of the cement works at Four Mile Lake. The property was in the hands of a trustee, and was recently sold on a mechanics' lien of $7,500 and it was bid in for Mr. White. The Trust Company has agreed to surrender the plant to Mr. White's representative. This does not affect the bankruptcy proceedings which are pending against the company.

Her Original Scheme. She was very proud of her first bank book, and determined to make none of the silly mistakes she had read about in the joke columns of newspapers. There was no danger of overdrawing her account. Every check was duly recorded on the stub, and after every four checks a balance was correctly struck.

"But how is it?" asked the man one day when looking over the book; "how is it that your checks always come out in even dollars? Do you never have a sum like $5.11 to pay?" "Yes, often; but I have a famous scheme," she explained, gleefully. "It's such a bother to add up the cents that I just make the check out for five dollars, and send the 11 cents in postage stamps."

Fresh Air for Pneumonia. Dr. Northrup, professor of children's diseases in Columbia university, was the first to break away from the tradition of the close, warm room and to take his pneumonia patients to the roof. In the cold and snow and winter winds he placed his patient on the housetop, clothed and bedded against the cold, and gave the first dose of cold, pure air to the lungs of the sufferer. Success has been spreading until outdoor winter for the pneumonia victim promises to be as widely accepted as it is becoming for the tuberculous patient.

An Unprogressive Institution. "One of the most successful clergymen in Philadelphia," remarked a college professor, "was proud of the fact that he was always addressed as plain 'mister,' and that he possessed no degree which entitled him to the honorable name of 'doctor.'"

"An elder entered the clergyman's study one morning and handed him a marked paper. The item stated that the minister had been honored by his old college and that now he could attach D. D. to his name. "Well, well," muttered the pastor, "not without feeling, for he loved his college. 'my old school is a little behind the times, and still believes in capital punishment.'"

Resources of the Sudan. There is talk in England of the proposed development of the natural resources of the Sudan through scientific exploration. Immense forests line the banks of the Blue Nile along its upper reaches, extending to the Abyssinian frontier. The ebony tree is met with along that river and also near the Sobat. Along the White Nile the India rubber creeper, a valuable source of rubber, abounds. There are large forests in the Bah-el-Ghazal province, and gold has been mined in some of the mountains of the Sudan. Search will be made for fuel.

European Marriage Figures. It is estimated that the women of Great Britain have nearly twice as many chances of being married as the women of any other nation in Europe. This is one of the facts shown in the annual statistical abstract from the principal nations of the world issued by the English board of trade recently. The period covered by the figures is from 1893 to 1903. In each of those ten years there have been 14 or 16 marriages per thousand of the population in Great Britain, while in other countries the rate has remained steadily at between seven and eight per thousand.

SERIAL STORY

DUKE OF DEVIL-MAY-CARE

By HARRIS DICKSON

Author of "The Black Wolf's Street," etc.

CHAPTER XVI.—Continued.

"Joe," the other looked up suddenly from the table, "where did she go? I saw her drive off that morning in a carriage, and don't know whether she came back to the hotel or not. I searched everywhere. I have not seen her since—since—this happened." "She is at Mrs. Chaudron's with her cousin."

"Miss Ashton was taken ill, wasn't she?"

"Yes."

"I thought that must be the reason. She did not look well when they drove away. He dropped his head in his hands; after all it did not matter very much, not now; nothing mattered."

"Does she know where I am?" He did not raise his head.

"Yes; she was here just now; she saw you when you came into that room."

Duke tottered to his feet, leaning heavily with one hand on the table. "Why did she come to this place?"

"You would not give your name, and the police wanted to identify you. No, it wasn't exactly that way, but—"

"Anita! Come to identify me! My God!" he sank back into his chair again.

"Yes, both the girls are at the Chaudrons," Joe repeated, almost; "Mrs. Chaudron took them home with her after Mrs. Ashton disappeared. Of course they couldn't stay at the hotel alone. They are completely crushed and heart-broken."

"Mrs. Ashton? Disappeared?" Duke looked up blankly. "What are you talking about? What are you talking about?"

"We've never found her, you know; we don't know a thing—"

"Don't know a thing about what?"

"Don't know what became of Mrs. Ashton. She's been missing now since last Thursday, about 11 o'clock. We have about come to the conclusion that she has been—"

Duke was staring at Joe, so steadily in the face, that Joe scarcely knew how he finished the sentence; "—we have come to the conclusion that she has been murdered."

"So that's it! That's it!" Duke exclaimed, and sprang excitedly to his feet—the man's eyes were terrible to look at. "By God, Joe Balfour, you don't mean to tell me that I am here in jail under suspicion of murdering a woman—a woman? I thought those police were asking me a lot of fool questions—couldn't make out what they were driving at. That old porter said those hotel doors were not opened on Thursday night—did he? He's a liar, a feather-brained liar. And that other Frenchman, the one with the black mustache—he's a liar, too. They carried somebody away from that place about daylight the next morning. Let me out of here—let me get out. No, no, I forgot."

Joe caught him firmly by the arm and sat him down at the table again. Joe was now much more excited than the other man.

"Tell me, Noel, tell me! You say those doors were opened on Thursday night, that they carried somebody out of there the next morning. What do you know about it?"

"I saw it myself—stood right there and watched the whole thing. I walked up and down that street all night long. An ambulance from the hospital came there about daylight—men with uniforms on—yellow flag. They took somebody out of there on a stretcher. I don't know how, but I got the idea that it was a woman. Both of those lying bouncers helped to lift the stretcher into the ambulance."

"At the words 'hospital,' 'stretcher,' 'yellow flag,' Joe bounded to his feet. He stopped, listened to a few more sentences, then tore open the door and rushed like a madman through the corridor."

It was done so quickly that he got away before Duke could understand what had happened. When he ran out of the cell and reached the jailer's door he heard Joe's excited voice in the room.

"Look here, Mr. Fitzgerald, he says that some one was taken away from that hotel in an ambulance."

Jimmy Fitz and the jailer were already on their feet, standing close together for protection—they had heard Joe coming. Baker tried to slip out through the door, but Joe blocked it, and the man took refuge behind a desk. Fitz and Baker and the jailer glanced uneasily at each other.

"Yes, Mr. Balfour—"

Jimmy Fitz began.

"In a hospital ambulance on Friday morning—"

"Well, you see, Mr. Balfour, it was this way—"

"Those two Frenchmen helped to put a stretcher in the ambulance."

"Yes, Mr. Balfour. Jimmy had now caught his breath; he spoke in the most conciliatory tone, spreading out his hands as if he were pouring oil on the troubled waters. "Yes, Mr. Balfour, you see it was reported by a physician that Mrs. Ashton had the smallpox, and we wanted to keep it quiet until after Mardi Gras—"

Joe stopped, perfectly still, and stared at the officer. He could not comprehend.

Jimmy Fitz nodded, without a glimmer of surprise on his face. Joe looked at the jailer, at Baker—neither of them were surprised.

"Then, then," he commenced rather vaguely, but his voice began to rise; "then—you—knew—this—all—the—time?" Then you were lying to us and sending us off on all sorts of fool errands—keeping us amused like a lot of children?"

Jimmy Fitz smiled blandly. "Of course, Mr. Balfour, you appreciate the necessity for keeping it quiet—"

"For keep—ing quiet? For keep—ing quiet—"

"Yes, sir, you see it would not do—"

The jailer burst. Joe furiously denounced the detectives, denounced the police, denounced their whole infernal system.

Once Jimmy's voice piped out, weak and apologetic: "But the board of health—"

"Damn your board of health, damn your board of health, damn you and all your pack of liars—"

Joe advanced farther and farther into the room until he drove the three men into a corner where they had to listen. He overwhelmed their explanations in a whirlwind of impetuous wrath.

Duke stood in the doorway, listening.

There was perhaps never another instance in his career when he failed to assume his full share of such an argument. But this discussion presented no openings; there were no crevices, no joints, no pauses for breath or punctuation. There was only one side to the argument, and Joe was taking good care of that. There were no gaps in the argument, and Joe was taking good care of that. There were no gaps

The monotonous thump! thump! thump! of the horse's hoofs up that long street of never-ending asphalt seemed to beat in upon her brain and deaden it.

She wondered vaguely if men suffered when stricken with a mortal wound. Did a woman ever suffer? Could a woman suffer? Was it very queer that she should sit dumbly, with her hands folded? Was it so very selfish that she did not consider her aunt, that she thought of something else? Why did she not scream? Was it because she did not care?

On, on, on the street ran, past row after row of stupid-looking houses, their windows blinking at her in the sun. On, on it ran, far—farther than she could see—beyond the boundaries of the world, into the narrow lane of eternity.

Houses and banquettes crept by on either side; a never-diminishing stream of human life crawled on black-coated men lifted their shining hats to every simper in petticoats—how she hated them all!

Father of Mercy, would she never get home, never get beyond the reach of prying eyes? Would she never be able to close her own door, and be alone with herself—alone for one moment when she might let go. Anita felt that she was clinging tightly to something that she could not let go—of which she dared not let go. If she could only break down and weep. No, no, no, she could not do that. There would be Mrs. Chaudron and Alice—perhaps Felix Chaudron and Woodford Vance—they would ask her a thousand questions. How could she tell them? How could she stand it? Yet she must hold up her head and face it all. There was no hovel all the city wherein she might hide.

Thump! thump! thump! went the horse's hoofs; beat! beat! beating in upon her soul. The cab rolled on, and stopped at Mrs. Chaudron's.

Anita paid the man mechanically, and glanced up that interminable walk which led to the front door. Oh, if she only dared slip round the house and go into the conservatory where she could be alone.

She thought of a sheltered spot upon the mountain side at home, where she used to go and sit, where nobody came to ask her questions, where she could let go, let go. It was there she went in the evenings after her brother's death, and her father's. Evening after evening she sat gazing through the trees, past the winding roads and tiny creeks, across the fatwood country to the far-lying ribbon of the James. There was silence in the mountains, there was companionship on the plains; God's peace was everywhere. The city stifled her, she could not breathe; she could not think.

Mrs. Chaudron tapped on the upper window and beckoned her to hurry.

"Yes, yes," Anita nodded. She must go into the house; she must tell Mrs. Chaudron something; she must hold up her head.

Celeste opened the front door.

"Why, Miss Anita, are you ill? Let me bring a glass of wine—some water?"

"No, thank you, Celeste; you are very good."

Anita bore herself erect, yet she felt that she was staggering, feeling her way through the hall. She laid her hand upon the newel post; how could she ever get to the top of those terrible stairs? The girl halted, steadied herself for the effort, and—the telephone rang. The bell startled her; she dreaded to answer.

Agreeable Surprise.

"Hello, Smith!" exclaimed the near-sighted man. "I'm delighted to see you. By the way—"

"My name isn't Smith, sir," interrupted the other man. "It's Robinson."

LAMB STEW WITH DUMPLINGS.

Economical, Simple and Delicious Dish For Dinner.

Stewing is, without question, the most economical and simplest mode of cooking meats, says the Woman's Home Companion. Meat which is not capable of being satisfactorily prepared by other processes of cooking is most acceptable when dealt with in this way. Stews are very common among the so-called working-classes of Europe, and oftentimes different kinds of meat enter into their composition. Let us make ours of but one kind, namely, Lamb.

Buy three pounds of lamb cut from the forequarters. Wipe meat with a piece of cheese cloth wrung out of cold water, remove superfluous fat and the meat in one-and-one-half-inch cubes. Put in a granite-ware kettle, cover with boiling water, bring gradually to the boiling point and let simmer (that means, you know, to let boil very, very slowly) until meat is tender, the time required being about two hours. After the first hour of the cooking add one small onion, from which the skin has been removed, then thinly sliced, and half a cupful each of carrot and turnip cut in half-inch cubes. Remember that the best flavor and the brightest color of a carrot lies very near the skin; therefore, carrots should be washed and scraped for the cooking, never pared. On the other hand, turnips should be pared after washing. To obtain the cubes of which I write, cut the vegetables in half-inch slices, then cut the slices in cubes. Wash and pare potatoes, and cut in one-fourth-inch slices; there should be three and one-half cupfuls. Cook five minutes in boiling salted water to cover drain and add to stew 15 minutes before serving time to finish the cooking. Melt three table-spoonfuls of butter, add four table-spoonfuls of flour, and stir until well blended; then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, one cupful of the hot liquid in the stew. As soon as the boiling point is reached pour slowly into the stew. Season with salt and pepper, turn on a hot platter and surround with dumplings.

Dumplings, when properly made, are light and delicious and perfectly easy of digestion; if improperly made just the reverse is true. Failures sometimes occur from not cooking the mixture as soon as it is mixed, and again, from cooking the mixture over water that falls below the boiling point.

Braising.

This is a particularly good way to treat dry meats like veal, lean beef from the under part of the round or the face of the rump, the shoulder of mutton, heart, liver, tough fowls, pigeons, or other dry game. The method of braising is like the old-time pot roast, only the braising is far easier in that the water in which it is cooked does not need replenishing, and there is much less danger of the kettle burning dry. In each case the meat is rolled in flour, seasoned with salt, pepper and just a dusting of sugar to assist in the quick browning. Then it is browned in the bottom of a kettle or frying pan, using some of its own fat, drippings or butter, as preferred. After this browning process it is put into a stew pan or braising kettle, covered with well flavored soup stock, gravy, or even hot water, with herbs and seasonings, then covered tightly and left to simmer gently for several hours.

Apple Cups.

Sift together one pint of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, two table-spoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cream tartar. Beat one egg, add four table-spoonfuls of sweet milk, and stir into the dry mixture, adding more milk as necessary to make a thick batter. Add two table-spoonfuls of butter (melted) and beat hard. Butter some baking cups and put in each a spoonful of the batter. Add one-half apple cut in quarters, add more batter to cover and two-thirds fill the cup. Steam or bake 30 minutes and serve with milk or a sauce.

Boiled Beets.

Old beets require great care in boiling. Four hours' slow cooking will, as a rule, make them tender. If they are wilted and tough, soak them in cold water over night. Next morning wash, put them into boiling water, and cook slowly. When done remove the skin by rubbing with a towel; cut into thin slices, dish in a hot dish, dust with salt and pepper and pour over a little melted butter. Those left over may be put in vinegar and used as a garnish for potato or carrot salad.

New Idea for Quilts.

The shops are showing wool wadding for quilts. It comes in sheets two yards wide and two yards and a quarter long, and costs about two dollars a yard. The most sanitary way to make these quilts is to cover them with cheese cloth, tacking with soft cotton. They are very pretty when dainty shades of cheese cloth are used. The ventilation through these quilts is as good as with woolen blankets.

Hand-Dipped Candles in Favor.

Hand-dipped candles have reached the dimensions of a fad, for who in a day when old-time styles and ways are copied to the letter, can countenance a molded candle in a colonial stick?

The latest fancy of this kind is the hand-dipped tallow candle, flavored with spearmint, which is said to give out a minty fragrance as it burns. The candle has the interesting irregularity of hand-made things and is greenish-white in color.

Some Hats of the Moment

All Wear Short Gowns

for the Afternoon

The most remarkable thing about Paris fashions at the moment is the fad for wearing short gowns in the New York Tribune. It must be looked on as a fad, for the greater part of the women so dressed are enjoying the comfort of their carriage or automobile, and therefore the short skirt is unnecessary. The great middle class, who must walk while on shopping trips, is still too conservative to wear anything save a skirt which would drag if it were not carefully held up. Perhaps the idea will filter down to this class some day, but, then, alas! it will no longer be a fashion.

Nevertheless, for the moment the French tailors are making afternoon costumes along these lines, and furnish suggestions of particular value to Americans who have long adopted—in fact, started—the fashion of dressy short skirt costumes. A costume just finished by Francis is very French, because it uses a delicate silk embroidery on a plaid, and the jacket appears original at the moment, because it is neither a fitted habit nor a short waisted veste. The material is broadcloth in dull plaid, in which there are mauve, blue and stone gray. The skirt clears the ground and is full at the hem, but close about the hips, where some of the fullness is stitched down into plaits. Between the plaits about the hips are little bias pieces beautifully cut and stitched—one of the small stamps of good tailoring. There are two narrow bias bands at the hem. The jacket hangs invisibly in the middle, but hangs straight like a box front to about four inches below the waist. The sides of the crossing are embroidered in lavender silk in a heavy arabesque design, and some of the embroidery is used on the coat collar. This is high in the back than has been the custom, and of a dark gray velvet. In the back the coat is shorter than in the front, and is slashed up to above the waist line. It is easy, but by no means suggests a coat that can be comfortably worn over a waistcoat when the weather demands it. The changeable Paris winters make the waistcoat a most popular garment. There are woven ones, embroidered ones, but most popular of all are those of fine suede or chamols.

Character and Object.

Try this little game and see how amusing it is. Send two persons out of the room, then select a character and an object which are closely related to each other—for instance, "George Washington and his hatchet," "Sir Walter Raleigh and his cloak," "Cleopatra and the Asp." Then call in the persons and tell one to be the "character" and the other the "object." Questions must be asked by either "yes" or "no." After much adroit questioning they usually ascertain "who" and "what" they are. Persons and objects may be of local fame, and provoke much good-natured merriment.

Old Lady's Birthday Party.

A correspondent asks for suggestions regarding a birthday party for a dear old lady who will soon pass the eightieth milestone on life's journey. She has celebrated her golden and pearl weddings and bids fair to welcome her guests at the celebration of the wonderful diamond anniversary.

Surely this eightieth birthday must be observed, and I would suggest having letters and messages from as many of her old friends as can be notified of the event, to be read at the party. This will be a great surprise. Then if possible get a picture taken many years ago of the honored guest and have prints made of it for the place cards. Have the guests guess how old she is.

Have a birthday cake with a circle containing 80 candles around it, each guest to make a wish and blow one out. A bouquet containing 80 roses would make an appropriate centerpiece and afterwards give it to the birthday guest. Serve a real old-fashioned supper: cold meats, hot biscuit, jelly, chicken salad, coffee and tea, ice cream, and you might add baked custard. A short programme of old-time songs would be an agreeable finish to this delightful afternoon.

THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILROAD AND WESTERN CANADA.

Will Open Up Immense Area of Free Homestead Lands.

The railway facilities of Western Canada have been taxed to the utmost in recent years to transfer the surplus grain crop to the eastern markets and the seaboard. The large influx of settlers and the additional area set under crop have added largely to the grain product, and notwithstanding the increased railway facilities that have been placed at the disposal of the public, the question of transportation has proved to be a serious one.

It will, therefore, be good news to everyone interested in Western Canada to know that an authoritative statement has been given out by C. M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, that that railway will do its share towards moving the crop of 1907 from Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba to tide water, and thus assist in removing a serious obstacle which has faced the settlers during recent years. Mr. Hays, who has just completed a trip from Portage la Prairie to Edmonton in a prairie schooner, a distance of 735 miles, which was covered in eighteen days, is enthusiastic about the country.

This is gratifying to settlers in the Canadian West, even if Mr. Hays declines to be bound to a time limit with the exactitude of a stop-watch. The Grand Trunk Pacific road will be in a position to take part in the transportation of the crop of 1907, and that will be satisfactory to the settlers in that country when the harvest is garnered.

The wheat crop of 1906 in Western Canada was about 90,000,000 bushels, and, with the increased acreage which is confidently expected to be put under crop next year, it is safely calculated that fully 125,000,000 bushels will be harvested in 1907. The necessity for increased transportation facilities are, therefore, apparent, and the statement made by Mr. Hays will bring encouragement to the farmers of the Canadian West, new and old. The opening up of additional thousands of free homesteads is thus assured by the agent of the Canadian Government, whose address appears elsewhere.

Most people find fault with their neighbors if they get even with neighbors who find fault with them.

SCALY ERUPTION ON BODY.

Doctors and Remedies Fruitless—Suffered 10 Years—Completely Cured by Cuticura.

"When I was about nine years old small sores appeared on each of my lower limbs. I scratched them with a brass pin and shortly afterwards both of those limbs became so sore that I could scarcely walk. When I had been suffering for about a month the sores began to heal, but small scaly eruptions appeared where the sores had been. From that time onward I was troubled by such severe itching that, until I became accustomed to it, I would scratch the sores until the blood began to flow. This would stop the itching for a few days, but scaly places would appear again and the itching would accompany them. After I suffered about ten years I made a renewed effort to effect a cure. The eruptions by this time had appeared on every part of my body except my face and hands. The best doctors in my native county advised me to use arsenic in small doses and a salve. I then used to bathe the sores in a mixture which gave almost intolerable pain. In addition I used other remedies, such as iodine, sulphur, zinc salve, —s Salve, — Ointment, and in fact I was continually giving some remedy a fair trial, never using less than one or two boxes or bottles. All this was fruitless. Finally my hair began to fall out and I was rapidly becoming bald. I used —s —s, but it did no good. A few months after, having used almost everything else, I thought I would try Cuticura Ointment, having previously used Cuticura Soap and being pleased with it. After using three boxes I was completely cured, and my hair was restored, after fourteen years of suffering and an expenditure of at least $50 or $60 in vainly endeavoring to find a cure. I shall be glad to write to any one who may be interested in my cure. B. Hiram Mattingly, Vermillion, S. Dak., Aug. 18, 1906."

Origin of Starch.

The art of starching was not introduced into England until the ingenuity of Dutch women in starching ruffs induced Queen Elizabeth to turn to them when she took to wearing cambric and linen cuffs. In 1564 Mistress Dingheva van den Plasse, the refugee daughter of a Flemish knight, came with her husband to London, according to an old writer, and set up an establishment for starching, where she not only plied her trade, but instructed English classes in her art.

THE END OF THE WORLD

BY WILLIAM HAMILTON OSBORNE

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

I found Von Minden on that humid, sultry night—the 21st of June—pacing the floor of his observatory, a huge boxlike room that reared itself on steel legs far above his house. He was in a suppressed state of excitement, which he attempted to conceal as I entered.

"It's no use," I said to him, "I cannot work to-night. And, anyway, I'm going to the strikers' meeting. I want you to come along, if you can."

He sprang to his feet and opened the window. "Look! Put your hand out here!" he exclaimed. I did so. When I drew it in, it was sprinkled with a few small specks of what resembled soft coal soot.

"Rub your hands together," said Von Minden. "Now look at them." Where I had rubbed and where each speck had been there was a small greasy smear of a bright red color. I glanced up at him, inquiringly. "What are these?" I asked. He laughed a strange laugh.

"Those," he responded, "are the germs of lunacy. That's all." He laughed again. I looked at him anxiously. I thought his mind was wandering under the terrific heat. I glanced involuntarily out of the window. It had become dark singularly early for the 21st day of June. The moon was high in the heavens. As I glanced at it I leaped from my chair.

"Von Minden," I cried aloud, "look at that!"

Von Minden sprang to the window. The moon was full and large—and red as fire. That was not all. The whole town seemed to be on fire. A thick haze had settled down upon the housetops, and like the moon, the haze was red as flame.

Von Minden stood with outstretched arm. "It's come!" he exclaimed. "The great epidemic of lunacy has come!" He pointed far out into the night beyond.

The strikers met that night in an old, abandoned skating rink—a large, rambling wooden structure. It was filled to overflowing. A loud-voiced, red-faced demagogue stood in the rostrum, surrounded by an excited mass of humanity. We were late—Von Minden and myself. The speaker had had time to rouse his hearers to a pitch of fury.

"It's a good time," he cried, "a good time to be here, restin' easy an' quiet. What the h—d'ye mean by it? D'ye know what's happenin' up-town

UTTERLY WORN OUT.
Vitality Sapped by Years of Suffering with Kidney Trouble.

Capt. J. W. Hogan, former postmaster of Indianapolis, now living at Austin, Tex., writes: "I was afflicted for years with pains across the loins and in the hips and shoulders. I had headache also and neuralgia. My right eye, from pain, was of little use to me for years. The constant flow of urine kept my system depleted, causing nervous chills and night sweats. After trying seven different climates and using all kinds of medicine I had the good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills. This remedy has cured me. I am as well to-day as I was twenty years ago, and my eyesight is perfect."

So you show a moose, did yew? Well, that's real fine, but I kind o' hoped if yew was goin' to have an accident yew'd shoot Hen Pussley, yewr guide. I ain't vindictive, or anything of the kind, but he's been ownin' me five shillin' for I d'know how long, and I kind o' think I c'd'lect it easier out o' his estate than I can out o' Hen."—Smart Set.

Always to Be Depended Upon. When a person gets up in the morning with a dull headache and a tired, stretchy feeling, it's an almost certain indication that the liver, or bowels, or both, are decidedly out of order. At such times Nature, the wisest and best of doctors, takes this means to give warning that she needs the help and gentle assistance which can best be obtained from that old family remedy, Brandreth's Pills, which has been in use for over a century. They are the same fine laxative tonic pill your grandparents used when doctors were few and far between, and when people had to have a remedy that could absolutely be depended upon. Brandreth's Pills can be depended upon, and are sold in every drug and medicine store, plain or sugar-coated.

HEADS SHAPED TO ORDER.
German Doctor Explains Causes of Various Formations.

At a recent convention of German naturalists and doctors Dr. Walcher, of Stuttgart, in an instructive paper put forth a sensational theory to explain the formation of the shape of the head of infants. He maintained that the head of a child could be molded artificially. He found by experience that when a medium-shaped head is placed in a soft cushion the child turns on its back, or rests on the back of its head, in order to free mouth, nose and face. In this manner the head rests smoothly, and a short head is developed. But if the medium-shaped head of a child is placed on a hard under-rest, like a half mattress or rolled carpet, the child's head turns aside, as it cannot stand any more on its head than an egg, for the muscle of the back is weakened. Therefore, with continued resting on the side a long head is developed. To prove his assertions the lecturer presented a child whose mother and sister are short-headed. The child at its birth had a short head, now after 18 months it is long skulled. If the child had been placed on its back, according to other experiences its head would have been short-shaped. Dr. Walcher did not deny that the shape of the head was inherited, but asserted that it could be greatly influenced by the way the child rested.

COSTLY PRESSURE.
Heart and Nerves Fall on Coffee.

A resident of a great western state puts the case regarding stimulants with a comprehensive brevity that is admirable. He says: "I am 56 years old and have had considerable experience with stimulants. They are all alike—a mortgage on reserved energy at ruinous interest. As the whip stimulates but does not strengthen the horse, so stimulants act upon the human system. Feeling this way, I gave up coffee and all other stimulants and began the use of Postum Food coffee some months ago. The beneficial results have been apparent from the first. The rheumatism that I used to suffer from has left me. I sleep sounder, my nerves are steadier and my brain clearer. And I bear testimony also to the food value of Postum—something that is lacking in coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. There's a reason. Read "The Road to Wellville," the quaint little book in pkgs.

THE DISCOVERER

Of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the Great Woman's Remedy for Woman's Ills.

No other medicine for Woman's ills in the world has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female illnesses or such hosts of grateful friends as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been curing all forms of Female Complaints, Inflammation and Ulceration, and consequent Spinal Weakness. It has cured more cases of Backache and Local Weakness than any other remedy. It dissolves and expels tumors in an early stage of development. Irregularities and periodical pains, Weakness of the Stomach, Indigestion, Bloating, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility quickly yield to it; also deranged organs, causing pain, dragging sensations and backache. Under all circumstances it acts in harmony with the female system. It removes that wearing feeling, extreme lassitude, "don't care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling; excitability, irritability, nervousness, dizziness, faintness, sleeplessness, flatulency, melancholy or the "blues". These are indications of Female Weakness, or some derangement of the organs, which this medicine cures as well as Chronic Kidney Complaints and Backache, of either sex. Those women who refuse to accept anything else are rewarded a hundred thousand times, for they get what they want—a cure. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Refuse all substitutes.

And the Men Went with Him.

whiles we're sweeterin' down here, you white-livered hounds? D'ye know that McDevitt, the oppressor—McDevitt, that calls himself your boss an' mine—d'ye know that McDevitt holds open house to-night for the silk stockin' crowd, whiles you an' me is starvin' an' cookin'? His house is ablaze wit' light—wine is flowin' like water. The sky is rainin' blood to-night!" he cried. "Let those stay who will. I'm goin' to McDevitt's ball. Who'll come where Mullien leads the way?"

He leaped to the floor and plunged through the crowd and out of the door, a wild cheer greeting him as he went. And the men went with him, pulling guns and knives from their pockets, picking up stones and staves as they went along, with Mullien at their head. We followed them. McDevitt's was ablaze with lights—but not for long. As we approached the house, it suddenly became dark. Some one produced a torch and fired the house, filled as it was with horror-stricken guests. The flames spread, curling up on all sides. Suddenly the clanging of many bells was heard upon the night air. Von Minden and I looked in the direction from whence the sound came. It was help! Half a dozen horseless fire engines were charging down the hill. They drew up on the outskirts of the crowd. The water-butts were near where Von Minden and I stood—the crowd had forgotten it. Now they surged 'round it, and we were caught.

The firemen tried to get their machines through the throng. "Let us through!" they cried. "No!" yelled the crowd.

At the water-butts near which I stood, one of the crowd, a burly fellow, was waving a crowbar round and round his head. The firemen with their hose tried to get near, but time

Moved by Knapp, seconded by Burkhardt, that sections 5365, 5366, 5367 and 5368 of Compiled Laws of 1897 in regard to gambling and the conducting of saloons be published in the minutes of this meeting, also 3,000 copies of same, to be distributed among the citizens, and that the Village of Chelsea offer the following reward: A reward of $50.00 will be paid to the person or persons furnishing information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of any persons violating the laws of the State of Michigan, regarding gambling and the proper conduct of saloons. Carried.

(5365) Sec. 15. Any person who shall for hire, gain, or reward, keep or maintain a gaming room or a gaming table, or any game of skill or chance, or partly of skill and partly of chance, used for gaming, or who shall knowingly suffer a gaming room, or gaming table, or any such game to be kept, maintained or played on any premises occupied or controlled by him, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding three months, or both in the discretion of the court.

(5366) Sec. 16. If any person shall keep, or knowingly suffer to be kept, in any house, building, yard, garden, or dependency thereof, or in any field by him owned or occupied, any nine-pin alley, or any alley to be used in the playing of nine-pins, or any other like game, whether to be played with one or more balls, or with nine or any other number of pins, for hire, gain, or reward, or shall, for hire, gain, or reward, suffer any person to resort to the same for the purpose of playing at any such game, every such person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit a sum not exceeding fifty dollars, and shall further recognize for his good behavior, in like manner as is required of a person convicted of any offence mentioned in the preceding section of this act.

(5367) Sec. 17. If any person shall play at billiards, cards, dice, nine-pins, or any other unlawful game, at any such table or alley kept or used as mentioned in the two last preceding sections, or shall play at cards or dice, for the purpose of gaming or betting upon such cards or dice, at any place within this state, he shall forfeit a sum not less than two dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each offence.

(5368) Sec. 18. If any person shall make oath before any justice of the peace that he suspects, or has probable cause to suspect, that any house or other building is unlawfully used as and for a common gaming house, for the purpose of gaming for money or other property, and that idle and dissolute persons resort to the same for that purpose, such justice, whether the names of the persons last mentioned are known to the complainant or not, shall issue a warrant, commanding the sheriff or any constable to enter into such house or building, and there to arrest all persons who shall be there found playing for money, or otherwise, and also the keepers of the same, and to take into their custody all the implements of gaming the same, and to bring the said persons and implements before such justice, to be dealt with according to law.

(236) Sec. 1. Section two of act number two hundred sixty of the public acts of eighteen hundred eighty-one, entitled "An act to provide for the protection of children," being compiler's section five hundred fifty-five of the Compiled Laws of eighteen hundred ninety-seven, is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 2. No minor child under seven years of age, nor any minor who is a student in any public, private or parochial schools in the State of Michigan shall be permitted to remain in any saloon, bar-room, or other place where any spirituous or intoxicating liquor, or any wine or beer, or any beverage, liquor or liquors containing any spirituous or intoxicating liquor, beer or malt liquor, is sold, given away, or furnished for a beverage; or in any place of amusement known as dance houses, concert saloons, variety theaters; or in any house of prostitution; or in any room or hall occupied or used for hire, gain, or reward, for the purpose of playing billiard, pool, nine-pins, cards, dice, or any other unlawful game, or in any room or hall used or occupied for gaming, pool-selling, or betting in any manner whatever. Any proprietor, keeper, or manager of any such place who shall permit such child to remain in any such place, and any person who shall encourage or induce in any way such child to enter such place or to remain therein, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than fifty dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than ten days nor more than thirty days, or both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

Approved June 16, 1905.
W. J. Knapp, president pro tem, was called to the chair, and F. P. Glazier vacated.

Moved by Schenk, seconded by W. J. Knapp—

To Be Fat: Drink Chocolate.
In an obscure but picturesque little village of far off Germany there is a place called "Chocolate Cure," where thin people go to become stout. The patients eat and drink cocoa and chocolate all the time while they rest, admire the scenery, gossip and grow fatter every day. The true secret of the great success of this treatment is the happy way chocolate has of fattening just the right places, settling in the hands, the arms, the neck and the shoulders, making the fat patient prettier and plumper all the time. The really effective part of this cure may be tried at home by any persevering woman, and the medicine is as palatable and the method so simple that there is actually, it seems no reason why all should not be just the desired weight.

Doan's Kidney Pills Have Done Great Service for People Who Work.
Most people work every day in some strained, unnatural position bending constantly over a desk—riding on jitting wagons or cars—doing laborious household work; lifting, reaching or pulling, or trying the back in a hundred and one other ways. All these strains tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they fall behind in their work of filtering the poisons from the blood. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, put new strength in bad backs.
G. B. Foster, of South Sprague street, Coldwater, Mich., says: "For three years I was annoyed by the action of the kidney secretions and suffered from a severe pain in the small of my back. After a hard days work or a long drive which I often had to do the pain in my back was very severe. At night it was painful to turn or to move and the secretions were thick and unnatural in color. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills I got a box and I was pleased with their prompt beneficial effect. That was some time ago and I have not had a pain or ache in my back during the interval and the kidney secretions are normal. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to others who in turn have been greatly benefited by them."
For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McIlhenny Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Prof Felix Adler, in his address before the National Child Labor Convention at Cincinnati on "The Attitude of Society Towards the Child as an Index of Civilization," pointed out that, historically, there have been three views of the child in society. There is the primitive view which regarded the child as the essential factor in the system of ancestor worship; the later view, which made him the inheritor and continuator of the family honors and prerogatives; and the modern view, which looks upon the child as so much living material for the society of the future. The classification serves as a basis for the protest against the wastage of child life under the present system of production. Essentially, however, the three historical views are identical, in that they agree in looking upon the child as bearing within himself the seed of the ideal future, whether that ideal be to live in extra-terrestrial bliss and in the memory of man, or the feudal ideal of family, or the contemporary altruistic ideal of the perfect state. And it is by no means certain that the last ideal is not the hardest on the child. It is not only that some of us, in the name of progress, are content to send the child into that industrial slavery against which Prof. Adler pleads his case, says the New York Post; but that most of us, in recognizing the high mission of the young, persist in placing on their tender shoulders a heavy burden of responsibility. If we were ancestor-worshippers or medieval barons, we should be quite content to leave our children in undisturbed enjoyment of their right to liberty and the pursuit of happiness; since in merely being they would fulfill their purpose. But the modern child must not be left alone, because there is no such thing as a child in the same sense that there is a cat or a pony or a picture-book. He is a "potentiality," and there are pedagogical principles.

A great popular demonstration took place recently in Belgium. Over 60,000 persons marched through the streets of Brussels to the city hall to ask for obligatory education. The petition presented to the mayor was signed by 200,000 names. Nearly one-fourth of the population of Belgium is illiterate, although the law offers free education to those who cannot pay for it. There is supposed to be a primary school for every commune over 6,500, but only a meager grant is allowed, and the teaching is often of the poorest. The schools are managed by the commune and not by the government, and any private place of instruction may be selected as the communal school. Education practically ceases at the age of 12; what was learned is soon forgotten, and the relapse into illiteracy and ignorance is inevitable. The schools are inspected once a year. Although the technical schools of Belgium are fine, the primary system of this most crowded country in Europe is wholly bad.

The name of bridge probably grew out of the Russian word "britch," which is called out when the player declares no trumps, says Scribner's. The appearance in England between 1833 and 1886 of a pamphlet on "britch," or Russian whist, failed to attract much attention at that period, but during the ensuing ten years the present natural offshoot of the Russian form of play—one variety of which is called leralasch, teralache, yelarsch, by Sir Horace Rumbold—became everywhere quite a favorite pastime. The game is said by some to have originated at Athens, although it is known to have been played, practically in its present form, throughout Turkey, Greece, Egypt and along the Maritime Alps for actually more than 30 years under the name of khedive.

The dean of Canterbury relates this anecdote of his own school days: In the schoolhouse at Rugby, when he was there, new boys in the first winter term had to stand on a table and sing the "Brave Old Oak" before all the boys of the house. If they sang to the satisfaction of the house they were taken into its good-fellowship. Otherwise they had to drink half a glass of salt and water, made so thick that they could stand a ruler up in it. He was very sorry to make the confession that he had to drink the salt and water.

SIDE LIGHTS ON MICHIGAN

INAUGURATION OF GOVERNOR WARNER FOR SECOND TERM.

A BRIEF, MANLY ADDRESS.

The Oath Administered to the Governor, Propped Up in Bed, Made An Impressive Scene.

With No Display.

While his aged father, whose hair is whitened by the snows of eighty-six winters, stood looking proudly on, Gov. Fred M. Warner took the oath of office at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, sitting in bed supported by pillows. An invalid mother whose hands are palsied with age, but whose affection for her son is as strong and ardent as in the springtime of life, directed her gaze steadily towards the sick chamber where the governor was taking the oath to fulfill to the best of his ability the duties of the office of governor of the state of Michigan.

It was a remarkable scene. It is the first time a governor of Michigan has ever qualified for office while upon a bed of sickness. It was like the gathering of a little family circle. There was no pretense of a state function. It suggested a little home ceremony that might be of no significance, even to the neighbor in the next block.

Instead of the boom of cannon to proclaim to the world that the chief executive of the commonwealth of Michigan had qualified for the office of high honor, there was only silence.

Instead of the tramp of soldiers' feet, there were soft gliding footsteps and no one made a noise that could be avoided, for fear that the balance might be turned unfavorably to the governor's condition. When the ceremony was concluded the governor said: "I have no prepared speech, but I will always do the best I can, and try to do the right thing at the right time."

A Rare Battle.

Thomas Traynor, of Battle Creek, sold Glen Bowers a horse for $140, and threw in a jug of whisky to bind the sale. The horse balked and when Bowers demanded his money back, Traynor said: "All right, where's the whisky?" Bowers could not produce the whisky, as it had already coursed through his system, and Traynor would accept no other liquor than his own, construing the law to read that having accepted part of the goods sold and consumed them, Bowers was in no position to demand the return of his money.

The unique case has been tried in justice court and in the circuit court, where a jury disagreed. For the past week it has kept the local circuit jury busy night and day, and still is unfinished. Each litigant has spent hundreds of dollars for counsel.

Both Were Drowned.

In attempting to rescue Harry Valance, aged 14, from drowning E. R. Gibson, aged 42, principal of the school in Riverdale, was drowned with the boy in Pine River. With Bradley Adams, Valance was playing on the ice and broke through. Adams ran to the residence of Prof. Gibson for help. The professor in stocking feet and shirt sleeves, rushed to the river and broke through the thin ice, as he neared the drowning boy. The current is swift there and the two were carried under the ice. Their bodies were recovered at once, but all efforts at resuscitation failed. Harry Valance was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Valance. Prof. Gibson had been teaching in Riverdale three years and was very popular. He leaves a widow and six small children.

Soldiers Dig.

It is claimed that the contractors who have the construction of the M. C. R. tunnel on the Canadian side of the river, have secured a number of men formerly enlisted in the United States army and stationed at Fort Wayne, Detroit. A soldier, who deserted, made the remark that since October 6 there had been 126 desertions of soldiers from the fort. After the first ones got away safely they were followed by others and every day the number is added to.

Scalp and Ear Torn Off.

Clinging to a beam near the roof of a barn, the 9-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Worcester, of Munith, screamed in agony while the shafting of a wind-powder feed mill tore off her scalp and one ear. In play the child had climbed up among the rafters. Her head came in contact with the shafting before she was aware of its presence. The little girl was taken to Jackson hospital, after receiving temporary surgical attendance. An effort is being made at the hospital to induce the scalp to grow again over the skull. The skin was torn off from the bridge of the nose backward, including portions of both eyelids and one ear. Doctors fear she will die.

Heart failure caused the instant death of William Fuller, a farmer of Augusta, as he was driving to his home from Ann Arbor.

Fire in the Ellsworth mine, No. 3, Cokesburg, Pa., owned by the Lackawanna Coal Co., yesterday, caused $400,000 loss.

New rural carriers: George J. Angell, Alden, Mich., route No. 1; James F. Slusang, Carleton, route No. 2; Edward A. Halligan, Clio, route No. 2.

The will of Henry A. Hall, of Augusta, who died a month ago, leaves $1,000 in cash for his servant, Mrs. Wealthy J. Burse, who was connected with the family for nearly 25 years.

Crime Unspeakable.

There was an affecting scene at the Saginaw police headquarters when Hattie Jubbe's father, a respected farmer of Brant township, called to see his wayward daughter who, in company with Bertha Konecick, is alleged to have been sent to Detroit from a Saginaw resort as a "white slave." The girl broke down at the sight of her father, who bowed his head in silence, and her sobbing could be heard throughout the cell rooms. She lay ill upon her couch and the grief-stricken parent lifted her in his arms, too overcome to say anything for some time, and merely stroking her hair. The hardened characters surrounding the pair as well as the police attendants turned their heads.

The girl wanted to be taken home and her father came for that purpose, but her physical condition is so serious that she could not be moved. She has been subjected to such treatment that her condition is truly shocking and she may never entirely recover.

Miss Jubbe, her father said, is but 16 years old and had always lived an upright life until she came to Saginaw for employment. Gradually her visits home became less frequent and finally she ceased coming altogether and for some time her whereabouts were unknown. In fact, her discovery in Detroit was the first intimation her father had of the real character of the life she was living.

Miss Jubbe's name is assumed, and to protect the family her real name has been withheld. She says Mrs. Smith, the keeper of the local resort who is accused of accomplishing the downfall of the girls, paid their fares to Detroit, and that they were sent to the resort kept by the daughter of Mrs. Smith, who is said to keep the former supplied with girls from Saginaw. The Detroit woman has fled and the authorities here are on the lookout for her.

Both girls, that Mrs. Smith threatened to expose them to their parents if they disobeyed her and that she held all of their clothes except what they wore until they arrived penniless in Detroit, and were taken to her daughter's place.

Counterfeiters Caught.

Another arrest was made in Port Huron Thursday in the alleged counterfeit plot owing to investigation by United States secret service officers. Fred Black, aged 35, a hay buyer at Goodells, and well known throughout the county, is the latest prisoner. He declares, however, that he had nothing to do with the alleged counterfeiting. Officers believe they have the leader of the gang in custody. The den in the "flats" district was searched and every article in the place was overturned by detectives. More tools and implements were found and more light was added when another can containing several dollar pieces was found. Marshal Mahone expects to corral a big gang before he lets up, and several more may be implicated before night, self-defense.

Conklin Talks.

Melvin Conklin, the Lansing tobacco fiend, who is under arrest charged with shooting to death his brother recently, and who had maintained a stubborn silence ever since the crime, talked to the officers for the first time Wednesday. He told a wild story about a woman having committed the crime, and says he knew nothing about it. He had started to commit suicide, he declares, and was insensible from the effects of poison.

Girl Missing.

Iva Oberlin, aged 13, has mysteriously disappeared from the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Samuel Oberlin, in Ovid. The sheriff has been asked to try to locate her.

Roof Fell In.

The roof of the Shawansee coal mine at Carr's Landing, six miles from Saginaw, caved in, burying two miners, Harry O. Price and James Rodgers, under 25 tons of slate. Price, who is a married man, was dug out a half hour later dead, while Rodgers was rescued almost dead and brought to the city. He has small chance for recovery.

Kaiser's Threat.

It is reported in court circles that the Kaiser threatens to boycott Berlin and take up his residence at Potsdam if the Social Democrats carry the district in which the Kaiser lives. The Socialists are making a hot fight to carry the district because they want to fount the Kaiser and it is the only district in Berlin which they do not control.

Won't Disarm.

The declaration of the French premier, M. Clemenceau, regarding the necessity that France be prepared for instant war is considered by the German government as sufficient reason for Germans to refuse to join in any movement for disarmament. The question is one that can scarcely be discussed by responsible German statesmen without impatience.

Out of Coal.

Unless the coal situation is relieved San Francisco will suffer seriously. There is at present in the city little more than seven days' supply of fuel. There is talk of a movement to ask the Southern Pacific Co. to sell half of its reserve supply of coal to relieve the situation. The railroad company has stored away somewhere about 200,000 tons.

Governor Warner was a trifle better Thursday morning. Acting Secretary Frank S. Neal says. His temperature was nearly normal through the night, pulse good and the affected lung continues to improve.

Governor Warner feels that his official duties would not permit him to leave for the southern recuperation trip, the physicians have recommended.

He feels that he should be in Lansing during the sessions of the legislature and he hopes to be there within a week or two.

TILLMAN BREAKS OUT AGAIN IN A FIERCE ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT.

CANAL CONTRACTS OPEN.

How the Contractor Proposes to Get Laborers for the Great Work and Rush to Completion.

Race Prejudice.

Senator Benjamin R. Tillman's bitter speech Saturday attacking President Roosevelt for his ruling on the Brownsville affair, drew a reply from Senator Patterson, of Colorado, and a lively cross-fire of verbal protechals in the senate chamber. Senator Tillman was heckled into hotly repudiating the northern democratic party, branding them as "a lot of dirty, low creatures." Senator Tillman in his speech accused President Roosevelt of illegal action and race prejudice in punishing the 23d regiment of Negroes for the action of a few of its members in creating a riot in Brownsville, Tex.; declared the president guilty of fomenting race feeling by arguing for social equality of Negroes and whites; said the nation was on the brink of a bloody struggle for race supremacy, and declared his personal readiness to do battle beside his fellow southerners for this principle.

The Canal Work.

The opening of construction bids by the Panama Canal Commission today revealed the fact that the president's canal plans have not gone awry and that the canal will be constructed in the shortest possible time if it takes every southern Negro who can be induced to go to Panama to do it. J. Oliver, of Knoxville, Tenn., is the man who about a month ago was negotiating with the president relative to the contract, and who proposed to the president that if other labor failed he would build the canal with American Negroes. Oliver, who with his partner, Bangs, of Soo canal construction fame, is the low bidder, is expected to get the contract.

Oliver's plan as outlined by himself is this: If he finds that he has to use southern Negroes, he will draft them by armies, and in taking them to the isthmus, he will follow the same method which he has followed in all the large contracts he has carried out in the south and allow them to take along their women. Also, he will permit them to gamble and have the amusements necessary to keep them contented and at work.

Trains Are Snow Bound.

As yet there is no relief in sight for the western railroads. Continued snowstorms and heavy winds are piling the tracks in North Dakota and Montana with such drifts that it is almost impossible to get trains through. Drifts are ten feet high on each side, and the snow accumulates faster than it can be shoveled away. All of the roads have special crews and snow plows working night and day to clear the tracks, but as high winds continue, it is at present impossible to get the tracks clear.

Considerable anxiety is expressed in St. Paul for the passing of trains which have been stalled three days in North Dakota. Fuel and provisions are being provided by the neighboring villages and also by relief trains. There has been no report of suffering.

And They Shook Hands.

The hearty shaking of hands amid the applause of the members of the house of representatives was the closing incident in the threatened fight between Rep. Gaines, of Tennessee, and Rep. Mahon, of Pennsylvania.

The row started during the discussion over the bill to dock members for being absent from the house. While speaking in favor of the bill Mr. Gaines pointed out Mr. Mahon as a member who was absent from his seat 95 per cent of the time.

Mr. Mahon was on his feet in an instant. "Any man who charges me with being away from this house 95 per cent of the time tells an untruth."

Mr. Gaines started down the aisle from his seat. "No man can tell me I lie," exclaimed the Tennesseean. The men were prevented by friends from coming to a clinch. They were surrounded and an effort made to bring about a reconciliation, which was successful.

Mr. Mahon rose to a question of personal privilege. He said that he did not desire to impugn the motives which prompted Mr. Gaines to utter what was an untruth about his absence from the house, but he desired to say that his informant was incorrect.

Not to be outdone in chivalry, Mr. Gaines immediately arose, and, showing deep feeling, said that the gentleman from Pennsylvania had always been his friend, but that he had been goaded beyond endurance, not only today but on a former occasion. He regretted extremely the turn affairs had taken.

"Are you satisfied with that?" he asked, pointing to Mr. Mahon. For answer Mr. Mahon rushed to him, and a touching love scene followed.

The Terra Cotta Wreck.

The coroner's inquest in Washington over the Terra Cotta wreck of Sunday night, December 29, in which 53 people were either killed or injured, held the grand jury held by Harry H. Hildebrand, engineer of boiler, "dead" train 2120; Frank F. Hoffmeyer, conductor of that train; P. E. Dent, night train dispatcher at Baltimore; William E. McCann, division operator of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad; B. L. Vermillion, engineer of local train No. 66, into which 2,120 crashed; George W. Nagle, conductor of train No. 66; J. W. Kelly Jr., trainmaster of the Baltimore & Ohio, and William M. Dutton, the telegraph operator at Silver Spring. All the men have been arrested. Operator Dutton is held most to blame, but the others are held as responsible in a lesser degree for the deaths.

Who Owns Cuba?

Brig-Gen. Crozier, chief of ordnance, who returned to the war department from a personal visit in Cuba, said a singular feature of the situation in Cuba was that at least 90 per cent of the property is owned by foreigners who insist on retaining their foreign citizenship.

American, English, Germans and Spaniards practically control the business affairs of the island. To give up their citizenship in their own countries and identify themselves with Cuba would deprive them of that security of protection which they feel necessary to reserve.

This, it was stated, makes Cuban self-government more difficult.

The Cubans themselves, Gen. Crozier declared, were as a rule for law and order and peaceful industry.

The New Shah.

The enthronement of the new shah of Persia, Mohammed Ali Mirza, has been fixed for the Chadir festival, the festival of the lake, which will be celebrated on February 2. The selection of this date is regarded as very auspicious, it being the anniversary of the day upon which the prophet, standing by the side of the lake, proclaimed that Mohammed Ali Mirza was his own flesh and blood.

The Army Bill.

By a vote of 27 to 50, the house, in committee of the whole, refused to strike out an item of $1,000,000 for the purpose of paying the expenses of regiments, battalions, squadrons and batteries of the organized militia to participate in such brigade or division encampments as may be established for the field instruction of the troops of the regular army.

Amidon Acquitted.

Worthington Amidon, of Crump, Bay county, was acquitted at Roscomon of shooting and killing Manley Evans. He was arrested under the law which makes it a felony for a hunter to accidentally kill a person.

Several witnesses testified that they saw Amidon shoot Evans. The defense combated this testimony by accounting for every bullet that Amidon had fired; Evans was a section hand.

Cut It Out.

As reported to the senate the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill does not contain a provision for an increase of the salaries of the vice-president, the speaker and members of the cabinet. The house increased the salaries of each of these officials to $12,000 a year, but the senate committee on appropriations has eliminated the provision.

The death at Watersmeet, Gogebic county, of Mr. John Kolinski, who was 72 years of age, has brought to light the fact that the mother of the deceased—Mrs. Mary Cycharz—is still living in Germany, and is one of the very oldest women in the world. Her age is 110. Her son, Andrew Cycharz, is a resident of Ashland, Wis.

Gas Works Blown Up.

At 6 o'clock Friday the plant of the Petoskey & Bay Shore Gas Co., situated on the bay front in the western part of the city, was blown up. The explosion shook buildings for half a mile around. The building was wrecked, except a part of the retort room, and the loss is estimated at $6,000 to $10,000. Ed. Bush, sloper, and Harry A. Eck, shoveler, were hurled to the air but not dangerously hurt. One of the supply pipes was cut and gas leaked into the tanks.

MICHIGAN EVENTS NOTED

WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH WILL BE MICHIGAN'S NEXT SENATOR.

McMILLAN IS SATISFIED

Features of the Caucus Which Made the Nomination, With Expressions of the Candidates.

Congressman William Alden Smith was nominated for United States senator to succeed Russell A. Alger by the Republican legislative caucus Thursday night. It required but one ballot, which was the sixth, five without result having been taken last week.

It stood thus: William Alden Smith 28 Charles E. Townsend 26 Charles Smith 2 Arthur Hill 1

Mr. Smith's success was brought about by the McMillan supporters, who went to him in a body, after a conference in which the situation was gone over, and it was decided to throw their support to the Grand Rapids man, who had conducted a clean campaign and whose attitude had always been that of a friend. Mr. Smith subsequently made grateful acknowledgment of the McMillan support in his speech to the members of the legislature.

Before the caucus the result was announced Senator Tuttle, who had been the choice of the caucus and the motion was carried.

Then came the cheering. Committees were appointed to escort the nominee and the defeated candidates to the speaker's platform, former Gov. Rich representing W. C. McMillan.

Senator-elect Smith was given an ovation when he appeared and was introduced by Senator Pyfe. It was several minutes before he could proceed. He said: "This splendid compliment of my friends, I can only say to you that from the bottom of my heart I thank you for this great honor. Looking into your faces, surveying the countenances of sympathetic friends, I wish to return to each and every one my grateful appreciation. In the presence of my wife and son (applause) I see faces that are very dear to me, and looking over them all I see sitting in a window of an humble cottage 3,000 miles away the sweet faces of my father and my mother, made happier by this triumph of mine. (Applause.)"

"To my distinguished friends I return my grateful appreciation for the many character of your campaign. To Mr. McMillan, who is detained, not from desire, but because the hand of circumstance has laid him for the time being under the care of his physician, I wish to express my sincerest admiration, my genuine respect and my undying affection as the result of his generosity and kindness to me in this contest." (Applause.)

A veritable love feast followed and addresses were made by Hon. John T. Rich, Candidates Townsend and Hill. Following are statements made after the battle:

William C. McMillan received the reports from Lansing last night over a special wire. He had retired when the news came, but was advised of the final outcome and heard the speeches following the nomination by means of the telephone.

"I am very well satisfied with the result and have every reason to believe that the people of the state of Michigan also will be," said Mr. McMillan. "As far as I, personally, am concerned I believe that Mr. Smith is well qualified and will prove himself as valuable a man to the state in his office as a senator as he has been in his district as a congressman."

Governor Warner said: "I am perfectly satisfied with the result. I was confident that the members of the legislature would do that which was for the interests of the party and the state."

"I believe the best backing in any contest is good true friends, and that Congressman Smith certainly had his share is shown by the result.

"No doubt he feels as highly honored because of that fact as he does in securing the nomination."

Mr. Hill: "We kept friendship; that is a happy outcome of a rather lively campaign."

Mr. Townsend: "I am glad to join in the triumph of a man who I believe, will do his duty to all the people without fear or favor."

Not For Mr. Hill.

The alleged boom for Arthur Hill for governor is not regarded as a serious proposition in Saginaw. Mr. Hill has firmly and flatly refused at every juncture to have his name even considered in connection with the gubernatorial nomination, either two years hence or any other time. He is not and will not be a candidate for governor.

Wants His Boy.

Left $5,000 by the death of a brother in Grayling, Mich., Capt. Walter H. Young, an old and well known resident of Port Huron, is now willing to devote the entire sum to secure the liberty of his son, who is now serving three years in the state prison for some petty theft.

The authorities of the University of Chicago have announced that affiliation with smaller colleges is at an end that ruling.

Another Russian General Killed.

Lieut-Gen. Vladimir Pavloff, the military procurator or advocate general, generally known since the days of the late parliament as "Hangman Pavloff," from the epithet constantly applied to him by the radical deputies, was shot and killed at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning while walking in the garden near the chief military court building near the Mokli canal.

The assassin, who was disguised as a workman, was captured after a long chase through the crowded city streets, during which he fired about 40 shots from two revolvers which he carried, killing a policeman and wounding a small boy.

The crime was executed deliberately and showed evidence of the same careful preparation which was characteristic of the murders of Gen. Staff and Von Der Launitz and undoubtedly was carried out by the same organization which it is reported has sentenced Emperor Nicholas and several of his ministers to death.

Shot Striking Rioters.

The Mexican government announces that it has the situation well in hand at Orizaba, where strikers burned a factory store and looted business places and private residences on Monday.

The seriousness of the affair is shown, however, by the fact that the main body of strikers before they would disperse, killing 200 outright and wounding 80 more. This conflict took place at Nogales, near Orizaba. One body of strikers numbering 700 gathered on the railroad track and held up the Vera Cruz train for several hours, dispersing only when the cavalry arrived and charged them with broadswords. The jails and armories are filled with imprisoned strikers.

The value of the property destroyed is estimated at $1,500,000, all belonging to Eduardo Garcia, a citizen of France.

Three Hundred Drowned.

A tidal wave has devastated some of the Dutch East Indian islands south of Achin. The loss is very great. According to a brief official dispatch 300 persons perished on the island of Tana, while 40 are known to have been drowned at the island of Simahu.

Achin, or Acheen, is the capital of Sumatra, and the islands mentioned are presumably small ones, as they are not shown on the standard maps of Oceania.

A few days ago European seismographs were reported as indicating a great earthquake at a great distance. It was then stated that the disturbance was probably in the South Pacific. It is quite likely that the shock caused the tidal wave which has caused so much damage.

But the day worker acquires more coin than the day dreamer.

ON SECRET SERVICE

True Stories of Experiences in the State, War, Treasury and Postoffice Departments.

By COL. JASPER EWING BRADY

(Late Censor of Telegraphs and Chief Signal Officer, U. S. A., Santiago de Cuba.)

Capture of Jim Fleishman, Moonshiner

In the early 70's moonshining was rampant, especially in Kentucky, Arkansas and Missouri and the working of the secret service branch of the government had been at times far from satisfactory. The district of Kentucky, Arkansas and Missouri was in charge of a general superintendent, who in turn divided his district into smaller ones each in charge of a supervisor. These supervisors had individual staffs of operatives and on their shoulders devolved the work of arresting moonshiners.

Moonshining was a crime against federal law and as such was punishable by United States courts. In the summer of '71 the federal court sitting at St. Louis was especially active in investigations; grand juries worked daily and many indictments were returned and warrants issued. The serving of these warrants was no easy matter because the moonshiners maintained a pretty good "look out" in St. Louis that tipped off all offenders. The culprits generally lived down in the interior of Missouri and Arkansas and when the secret service men arrived, "the bird had flown" and the warrant would be returned non est inventus—not found.

Jim Fleishman, a native of North Carolina, but an active Arkansas moonshiner, was one of the most flagrant offenders. Numerous warrants had been issued for his arrest, but not an officer had been able to bring him in. Judge Treat, presiding judge of the federal district court sitting in St. Louis, was a great stickler for action in his court; when a warrant was issued he wanted it served; if it was a United States warrant, and if one officer could not serve it—get two, get three; if necessary, get troops, were his commands. Particularly wroth was the judge over the failure to secure Mr. Jim Fleishman. It was rumored Fleishman had been in St. Louis and had made slighting remarks about the United States authorities in general and Judge Treat's court in particular. Again Mr. Fleishman would appear down in southern Missouri or northern Arkansas. It was told he even played poker with an officer on a Mississippi river boat while that dicitary was on his way to arrest him (Fleishman).

Gen. John W. Noble, afterwards in Harrison's cabinet, and at that time United States district attorney for Missouri, also was greatly exasperated over the secret service's inability to land Fleishman. Judge Treat and Gen. Noble had a consultation one day and sent for Capt. Jacob Morgan, acting United States marshal, to come into court, and when he arrived the judge raked him over the coals in good shape. In substance his honor said: "This court does not propose to be trifled with any longer. Warrants have been issued time and again for the arrest of Jim Fleishman, but never served. Now I want one served."

The court was informed that diligent efforts had been made to land Fleishman; money had been spent freely and men killed in the attempt. The judges admitted that all this might be true, but the fact remained Fleishman was still at large defying the government and bringing the courts into disrepute. "Get more men; spend more money; call in the army if necessary; get Fleishman," said the judge. "I don't care how you do it; just get him."

Capt. Morgan was a gallant old soldier, not afraid of man, beast or devil; the judge's words stung him and he resolved to get Fleishman or quit his place. He assembled his staff and sent for Capt. Val Pruitt, deputy United States marshal at Poplar Bluff, near the Arkansas line.

Val Pruitt had been a "forty-niner," a bull-whacker, scout, shotgun messenger for Wells-Fargo, and was absolutely without fear. When the civil war broke out Pruitt came east, enlisted in the First Missouri cavalry, served four years honorably and had a most distinguished record for gallantry. He was known as "the silent man" on account of his extreme reticence.

When Pruitt reached St. Louis a pow wow was held in Capt. Morgan's office and plans devised to capture Fleishman.

"Can you get him, Pruitt?" asked Morgan.

"Yep; if he doesn't kill me," laconically replied Pruitt.

"Well, go ahead and get him. Here's your warrant. Use your own methods as to men and money; don't be niggardly, only 'get him,'" snapped Morgan, remembering Judge Treat's harsh admonition.

"Won't take many men or much money," said Pruitt, glancing around the room. His eye lit on Jack Cheney. "I'll take Cheney, there; that'll be enough."

"Don't be a damned fool, Pruitt," replied Morgan. "I'll take more than two men."

"Didn't you tell me to use my own methods as to men and means? Well, I'll take Cheney and get Fleishman, unless Cheney doesn't want the job." This last with a drawl while his eyes looked two sparks of fire through narrow cracks.

Cheney had his smile and said: "I'm with you, Pruitt—till hell freezes and then if necessary I'll cross over on the ice."

"That's all I want," said Pruitt. "I'll meet you at two this afternoon at Leibold's place and tell you what to do. So long, Morgan. So long everybody," and Pruitt was gone.

Morgan knew Pruitt well enough to know he meant just what he said. Still he was somewhat dubious about his getting Fleishman with only one man, even if that man was Cheney.

At two o'clock Cheney and Pruitt met at Leibold's place on the levee. Pruitt's one weakness was dress, and in the interim between the meeting in Morgan's office and two o'clock he had rigged himself out like a fashion plate. He would hardly be taken for a deputy United States marshal out after a moonshiner. His plans were matured and his instructions very brief.

"Cheney, I want you to meet me at Point Pleasant one week from to-day. I will leave on the steamboat 'Belle of St. Louis' and go to Memphis. Stay there a day and keep dark, and then take the boat next morning back to Point Pleasant. You ought to reach there about dusk the same evening. I will be on or near the dock. Don't you recognize me at all. Just keep your eyes open and follow me after the boat has left. Understand?"

"Sure thing, Pruitt. I understand and I'll be there all right."

"I don't have to tell you to come well armed. Jim Fleishman is a crack shot and we've got to trap him like a bear—snap his claws first." Again the old Missouri "Slong, Jack," and Pruitt was gone.

Cheney made his preparations and when the "Belle of St. Louis" left on her next trip he was a passenger. Dolph Zeigler, the boat's captain, knew Cheney and made him comfortable in his cabin. The trip was uneventful and at Memphis Cheney debarked. He kept under cover all day and early the next morning he was a passenger on the "Vicksburg" bound up. About seven p. m. three long blasts announced the approach to Point Pleasant. When the gang-plank was swung out Cheney leisurely walked ashore, keeping his eye out for Pruitt. Finally he saw him seated on a pile of lumber carelessly whittling a stick. Pruitt's fine clothes had been laid aside, and at that time he was dressed in homespun and held a cob pipe between his teeth. He looked for all the world like an Arkansas cracker. The boat discharged a few passengers and a small amount of freight, and then poking her nose into the muddy current, proceeded on her way to St. Louis.

Pruitt got up from his resting place, stretched and yawned, and then slowly walked up the muddy street. Cheney, too, was dressed as a native, and followed Pruitt. Near the edge of the settlement (it could hardly be dignified by the name of city or town) Pruitt disappeared in the woods. Cheney followed, and had not gone far when the two men met.

"Howdy, Cheney. Got here all right, I see. Are you ready for a bunch of excitement?"

"Hello, Val. Yes, I'm ready. What's the lay?"

"I've located Jim Fleishman about 20 miles back in the woods. He's got a pretty good place, and evidently thinks he's secure. He's living with his wife and two children. I've blazed the trail out so we won't get lost. It's not a very good road, but we can get out all right. It's now nearly eight o'clock, and we ought to get out there by 11:30. Then, if all goes well, we will pull Fleishman and be back here by daylight and take the first boat north."

"Going to walk 20 miles between now and 11:30?" asked Cheney, with just a faint suspicion of sarcasm in his voice.

"Nope," replied Pruitt, not noticing the shaft. "Come on." He set out at a good pace, and Cheney followed. A short distance ahead and they came to a small clearing in which were hitched three horses, saddled and bridled. Pruitt didn't have any doubt that he would bring back Fleishman; hence the third horse.

It was quite dark when the men rode out on the winding trail. Silently they continued on their way. There was no moon and heavy clouds obscured the stars, and presently it began to rain, gently at first, and then a downpour. A pretty strong wind sprang up, and it was mighty slow traveling to follow the trail. The horses were sure-footed enough, but this pushing on through the almost impenetrable darkness was a bit unimpressive. The animals became nervous. The flashes of lightning were blinding and the constantly rolling thunder reverberated in Cheney's ears. He was reminded of a vigorous bombardment of the great guns of the Potomac. Several times the trail was lost, the storm having washed or blown away the blazing, and valuable moments were slipping by. Instead of reaching Fleishman's at 11:30, as originally planned, it was one o'clock when Pruitt drew rein and said:

"About 100 yards further and we come to his house. We'll hitch these animals here, then you go to the front door and rap. Fleishman will suspect something wrong, and come out the back way. He'll try to get back about half a mile, where there are a number of moonshiners living. I'll nab him, and then we'll hike for the river. If he comes your way, however, and tries to break, let him have it. Don't kill him, because I want to turn him over to Jake Morgan alive." All this was said in a low voice, and the two men moved forward. Sure enough, there was the cabin dimly outlined in the darkness.

Cheney waited until Pruitt got around the house, and then quickly, but silently advancing, gave a sharp rap on the door. He stepped to one side, pistol in hand, and waited. Five, ten, fifteen, twenty seconds, and then he rapped again. Shortly afterwards he heard Pruitt's voice say:

"Throw up your hands, Fleishman, or you're a dead one!" Cheney went around the house, and there was Pruitt with the drop on Fleishman, who had sense enough to know it. His hands were up, and Cheney came up from behind and in a minute he had them down and securely pinioned behind his back.

"Come on, now, and be quick about it," growled Pruitt. "We've got to get back."

Fleishman was put on the third horse, his feet bound under him, and the three started back on the trail. The storm had grown worse; the rain was now falling in torrents, and all blazing was completely gone, but Pruitt rode on, trusting to bull luck and horse sense.

Fleishman was the coolest man of the three. The trail was lost completely, and Pruitt tried to make the prisoner indicate the way, but he only grinned and said nothing. Once they stopped to listen, and above the roar of the storm Cheney fancied he heard horses approaching. Pruitt heard it, too, but said nothing. They floundered through the woods, and once more picked up the trail. The horses were becoming fagged, but they were pushed to their limit. Suddenly from all sides appeared armed and mounted men. There were about 20 of them. They had lived for years in these Arkansas woods, and knew every foot of the ground. Fleishman's 12-year-old son had come over after his capture and told them about it. Quickly they saddled up and followed the two officers and Fleishman. The storm worked to their advantage.

"Hold up your hands, Pruitt, we've got you cornered; also your partner. We don't want to kill you. You're too damn brave a man to be shot down like a dog. All we want is Fleishman, and then you can go on your way."

Pruitt's nerve never forsook him for a minute, nor did Cheney's; but he knew the other fellows held the trump cards; "the biter was bitten!" The flashes of lightning revealed his face to Cheney, and it was a perfect study. He hated to give up, but he also knew that a number of shot-guns were pointed at him and Cheney, and his first move would mean death for both of them. He gave up Fleishman, and after a little rough badinage about "keeping away from these parts and minding their own business" the cavalcade rode away with Fleishman.

For once the sobriquet of "silent man" was a misnomer as applied to Pruitt. He drew a long breath, and then swore a blue streak. He ended his outburst with an oath that he would get Jim Fleishman before 48 hours rolled over his head.

Cheney and Pruitt were a sorry looking pair when they rode into Point Pleasant that morning. The Belle of St. Louis was just tied up at the dock as they rode in. They went aboard and Capt. Zeigler made them comfortable. In the confines of his roomy cabin Cheney said:

"Well, Pruitt, we didn't get Fleishman, after all. Won't Morgan raise the devil with you and me when that warrant's returned non est inventus?"

Pruitt got up, took the warrant out of an oil skin case, and said:

"Cheney, that warrant don't go back unserved. Fleishman's got the laugh on us now, but wait. Some of the gang followed us here, saw us come on this boat. Hang them, they're watching now. They'll tell Fleishman and the gang that we've left for St. Louis. Zeigler will put us ashore in a small boat up the river a piece, and we'll come back. Fleishman will think no 'revenue' can get here again for a week, and he and his family will begin to celebrate. That's where we get him. Remember, Judge Treat, Gen. Noble and Jack Morgan said, 'get Fleishman,' and we get him!"

In due time the Belle of St. Louis proceeded up stream. About four miles above Point Pleasant Capt. Zeigler let them ashore in a small boat, which they kept. He gave them provisions enough for a couple of days, and said "he would charge the boat to the government."

They pulled the boat up a small bayou, and finding a secluded spot, rested for the day. The sun came out and dried their clothing. They slept, ate and smoked, and by dark were as well rested as could be. They showed the boat into the bayou and slowly drifted down stream. Just above Point Pleasant they went ashore, pulled the boat in under some willows, and crept toward the town. Just up from the levee was a big saloon, and about 8:30 it began to fill up. Every one in that country knew Fleishman, and was afraid of him and his gang.

Pruitt had called the turn, and by nine o'clock the gang were there. Fleishman was a leading spirit and treated everybody. Derisively he told them "how Val Pruitt had gotten left." But Val Pruitt and Jack Cheney were right outside the saloon waiting for an opportune time. Fleishman came out for a breath of air.

As quickly and silently as a panther Pruitt was on him, one big hand over his mouth and the other holding his throat. Cheney had his arms, and he hadn't a chance. They quickly bore him to the boat, tied his hands and feet, gagged him, and threw him in. Fleishman's eyes blazed. Slowly and silently they drifted by the town. Fleishman could hear the songs of his companions, and writhed at the thought of his position. When they were a safe distance below town, Pruitt removed the gag from the prisoner's mouth. Then Fleishman stormed and swore, but Pruitt and Cheney grinned and taunted him.

"What are you going to do with me?" asked Fleishman.

"Deliver you to Judge Treat, at St. Louis, three days from now," answered Pruitt.

"Well, you're going the wrong way, all right."

"Wait," laconically said Pruitt. About two o'clock in the morning they met the Vicksburg coming up. They succeeded in attracting attention, and were taken aboard. The captain knew both Pruitt and Cheney, and had heard of Fleishman. He agreed to pass Point Pleasant this trip. One or two of the passengers kicked, but he promised to put them ashore at Bird's Point, so they could come down on the evening boat. Pruitt wasn't taking any chances of another rescue.

St. Louis was reached about nine a. m. the third day. Pruitt and Cheney gave their prisoner a good breakfast, and at ten o'clock took him to the court house. Judge Treat's court had just convened. Gen. Noble and Jack Morgan were there when Pruitt and Cheney came in with the handcuffed prisoner.

"What does this mean?" said Judge Treat. Morgan started, scarcely believing his eyes.

"Judge Treat," said Pruitt, "you said you wanted Jim Fleishman. Here he is."

Judge Treat wiped his glasses, adjusted them on his aristocratic nose, looked at the prisoner, then at Cheney, then at Pruitt; and quite forgot his judicial dignity as he said, under his breath:

"Well, I'll be damned!"

NEW ONE TO TILLIE.

Scandinavian Cook Had Her Own Troubles With the Eggplant.

Mrs. Lane, engaged with her daily shopping, could not resist purchasing the beautiful purple eggplant that showed up so alluringly against a background of snowy cauliflower, so she told the grocer to send it up. Mrs. Lane had other things than housekeeping on her mind that day. Besides, Tillie, the Scandinavian cook, was rapidly becoming so competent that her young mistress was growing a little lax. By the time Mrs. Lane reached home the eggplant had vanished from her mind.

"The following morning the eggplant, its purple exterior polished to mirror-like luster, appeared whole and uncooked on the lanes' breakfast table.

"O, Tillie," cried Mrs. Lane, carrying the vegetable, still intact, to the kitchen after breakfast was over, "I want this for dinner tonight. See, you must slice it so, and soak the pieces in salted water."

"Skall I peel heem?" asked interested Tillie, whose English was so restricted that it was impossible to provide her with advance instructions.

"Yes, cut the rind off this way and let the pieces soak all the morning." There was company for luncheon that noon. All went well until Mrs. Lane rang for Tillie, and requested her to bring the dessert.

A moment later Tillie reappeared, placed a glass dish containing a number of odd greenish white disks on the table and disappeared.

"Why," exclaimed surprised Mrs. Lane, "it's that eggplant again! She has fished the slices out of the brine and served them raw, like cucumbers."

After luncheon Mrs. Lane returned to the egg plant to the kitchen.

"It must be cooked," she explained, patiently.

"Yaw, I cuke heem," said willing Tillie, seizing the vegetable.

"No, no. Let it soak until six. Then I'll show you how to fix it."

Visitors detained Mrs. Lane that afternoon, however, and it was five minutes after six when she went to the kitchen to fry the eggplant. She was just in time to rescue the victim of Tillie's misdirected zeal from certain destruction. Tillie had it boiling briskly on the stove.

"Goodness me!" exclaimed Mrs. Lane, hastily removing the eggplant to safety. "The only way to cook this vegetable is to roll the slices in egg and bread crumbs and then fry them."

"Vell," said Tillie, good naturedly, "I tank he ver foinnest apple my ever how saw; but on America she's hev very foinny eats, anyway."

"Sometimes I think we do," agreed Mrs. Lane.—Youth's Companion.

Comparison of Life.

Attorney General Bird has furnished the governor with an opinion to the effect that the state law requiring the governor to appoint two members of the state board of agriculture before the third Wednesday of January is merely directory, not mandatory, and that the present members will hold office under the general statute until their successors are elected and qualified. The appointments may be made after the third Wednesday in the month of January.

About 44,000 square miles of arable land are available in Cuba for sugar culture.

From the State Capital

Information and Gossip Furnished by Special Correspondent at Lansing.

Lansing.—Gov. Warner is not to be sued by Senatorial Candidate Arthur Hill for the alleged slander contained in the executive's statement that issued from Farmington. Though this course has been suggested, Mr. Hill will not take any such action, and in explanation of his attitude he gave these reasons:

"Because he is our governor, lying on a sick bed unable to attend to ordinary business, and therefore entitled not to be seriously disturbed while in that condition.

"Because the governor may have had information in the form of rumors which justifies him in his original announcement. There remains, however, this for his friends to do, namely, to file with the attorney general at once specific charges which affect the method of my candidacy, in order that they may be legally investigated in season to permit my reputation to stand unchallenged before the Republican caucus.

Sickness Among Statesmen.

The reports to the state department of health show an extraordinary and alarming increase of la grippe and pneumonia," said Dr. Shumway, state health officer. "The recent weather has been extremely favorable to such ailments, and when men are exhausted or excited and are exposed to such weather their danger is especially great. The diseases have not yet spread to the magnitude of an epidemic, but conditions are heading that way."

Not only were Gov. Warner and W. C. McMillan stricken down, the one with pneumonia, the other with la grippe, but Representative James D. Jerome, of the Wayne delegation, Representative Woodruff and Senator Traver are reported ill among the McMillan men, Representative Benton among the Townsend men, and others, like Representative Erickson, will be kept away from the caucus by other causes.

Auditor General Bradley is the most prominent of the victims to bronchial pneumonia. He is at home in Eaton Rapids, very ill, unable to speak, according to reports received here.

La grippe is mildly communicable, pneumonia extremely so. The conditions in Lansing have been just as would produce considerable spread of such diseases, for the great crowds that have gathered here have been both excited and exhausted, and likewise exposed to the inclement weather. Although some think the crowd of visitors to Lansing may be greatest seen since the laying of the capitol corner stone, others have figured that from 20 to 30 members of the legislature may be prevented by illness from attending. No candidate is expected to be cheerful if this prospect develops, and unless some of the patients get well rapidly or are constrained to come here anyway, there may be another postponement.

The crowds, as already stated, will be very great. From both Saginaw and Grand Rapids big crowds are looked for. The Grand Rapids traveling men will be here in big numbers, and the delegation from Saginaw will be much larger than that which came a week ago.

William Aiden Smith is Senator. Congressman William Aiden Smith of Grand Rapids received the nomination for the senatorship after the most exciting contest in many years.

Mr. Smith received 98 votes, Congressman Townsend had 26, Arthur Hill of Saginaw had 1 vote, Charles Smith of Hubbell had 2, and William C. McMillan of Detroit, son of the late Senator James McMillan, withdrew. Congressman Smith's nomination was made unanimous amid great cheering.

The formal election of the senator will take place January 15.

Following the announcement of the result, Congressman Smith spoke, and each of the defeated candidates, except W. C. McMillan, who is ill and has not been at the capital, followed in addresses.

William Aiden Smith was born at Dowagiac, Mich., May 12, 1859. He received a common school education and removed with his parents to Grand Rapids in 1872. He was appointed a page in the Michigan house of representatives in 1879. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1883. He was elected to the Forty-fourth, Forty-fifth, Fifty-sixth, Fifty-seventh and Fifty-eighth congresses, and reelected to the Fifty-ninth congress. He was unopposed for a seventh term and unannouncedly reelected to the Sixtieth congress. He graduated from Dartmouth and received the degree of M. A. in 1901. Mr. Smith is owner of the Grand Rapids Herald.

Seeks Change in Law. A bill providing for the repeal of the Bailie limited liability law was introduced by Senator Russell, of Kent. The Bailie law makes it impossible for one to collect for the pain and suffering of another killed by an accident but merely for the actual loss to the plaintiff by the death of the victim.

State Supervisors' Association. The annual meeting of the State Supervisor's association will be held in this city February 8. Charles H. Kimmerle is a leading member of the association, and it is expected there will be another railroad assessment to be discussed by the date of the meeting.

Good Birth for Pierce. It is not unlikely that Charles S. Pierce, now clerk of the house, will have an important position in the state government at the end of the legislative session. The impression prevailed in the appointment of C. J. Means of deputy secretary of state that he would hold the office only while former Deputy Pierce is engaged as clerk of the house. This, however, is declared to be false, Means' appointment having all the indications of permanency.

Attorney General Bird has furnished the governor with an opinion to the effect that the state law requiring the governor to appoint two members of the state board of agriculture before the third Wednesday of January is merely directory, not mandatory, and that the present members will hold office under the general statute until their successors are elected and qualified. The appointments may be made after the third Wednesday in the month of January.

INDUSTRY STOPS TEMPORARILY

MICHIGAN STOVE WORKS SWEEPED BY FIRE WHICH DESTROYS THE PLANT.

ONE KILLED, SIX INJURED

Twenty-Two Hundred Men out of Work and a Loss of Over Five Hundred Thousand Dollars.

Cause Unknown.

Fire, fierce, spectacular and devastating, invaded the plant of the Michigan Stove Company, Jefferson avenue and Adair street, early Tuesday night, and within a few hours the immense building, with its costly contents, was reduced to a great heap of smoldering and blackened ruins, with here and there a charred and broken wall to mark the path of the flames.

The plant, the main part of which was six stories in height, and extended from Jefferson avenue toward the river to Wight street—a distance of three blocks, with half a block frontage—was practically destroyed, the main office being the only part of the structure left intact at the time the fire was gotten under control.

George H. Harbour, general manager of the company, estimates the loss at considerably beyond $400,000, the amount of the insurance. It may be more than $500,000.

Through the burning of the plant 2,200 men are thrown out of employment, and the fire removes from Detroit's municipal map one of its oldest and most honored business institutions.

Death in violent form came to one man and several other persons were more or less seriously injured. The dead man's body lies unidentified at the county morgue—the others are being cared for at various institutions.

Despite the fact that their great plant was almost swept away by fire, the officials of the Michigan Stove Co. immediately began preparations to rebuild and resume operations. General Manager Harbour said, as he stood by the smoldering ruins: "Our engineer informs me that the power of the plant remains intact. The engines and boilers are practically unharmed, and we shall go to work to rebuild as rapidly as possible. The main office fronting on Jefferson avenue, the display room, the foundry and one storage building remain in very good shape. It is difficult at this time to estimate the loss. It may be anywhere from $500,000 to $750,000. In exact figures our insurance is $380,000."

There is absolutely no clue as to the origin of the fire. It started at a most inopportune time of the day; at a time when a great many of the firemen were at supper.

Educated Himself.

William D. Riley, the negro, who is serving a life sentence in Jackson prison for holding up J. D. Light and shooting Fred Williams, in March, 1895, has issued a neat leather-bound booklet, giving a history of his life and crime. He says that he went to Jackson 12 years ago, a low, vicious, black robber, but continues:

"So long as a prisoner who is guilty falls to make any advancement above his condition at time of sentence he should stay in prison. Have I made any advancement? I have become a fairly good mathematician, am now in Sheldon's Complete Algebra and Wentworth's Plane and Solid Geometry. I can read understandingly my first and second Spanish readers and have read the best books of our library. Early in life I had a liking for poetry; since my imprisonment I have cultivated that love, and now have a book of over 300 poems, and am writing a book on the folly and ignorance of my race."

Delivered the Coal.

Benton Harbor's fighting constable, Richard C. Sinsbaugh, is breaking up a threatened coal famine in the city. The Benton Fuel Co. had several cars of coal on the Pere Marquette tracks for several days, but delivery was refused. The Pere Marquette owes the fuel company for sand to the amount of several hundred dollars and in order to get even the coal company has been refusing to pay freight, and the railroad refused to deliver the coal.

The constable spent his time Friday delivering coal from cars to fuel wagons under a writ of replevin.

No Reason Known.

No reason can be ascribed by the family of Ad Fuller, Ogden residents, for their 15-year-old daughter Hazel leaping from the bridge into Black creek in an apparent attempt to take her life Thursday. George Wietor and Clarence Bruce rescued her from deep water.

Hazel was excused from school on the plea that she wished to go home as she told that her mother was ill. Her sister, Gladys, tells that Hazel had no trouble at school or at home.

Survived the Pressure.

Buried under a mass of two or three tons of slates, Conrad Kuepinger, a miner employed at the Washburn shaft, Bay City, could scarcely breathe, and could not talk out. He lay for 45 minutes pinned to the earth until discovered by a coal driver. It required 15 minutes to release him. Not a bone was broken and he will recover.

After Bailley.

Twenty-eight members of the Texas legislature signed a resolution calling for a sweeping investigation into the conduct of U. S. Senator Bailley, whose term expires on March 4. The charges recite that while a representative of congress and a candidate for the senate, he accepted many favors from the Waters-Pierce Oil Co., a branch of the Standard Oil Co., in return for his political influence in securing the re-admission of said company to do business in Texas, after its charter had been taken away.

tendance will be able to gain some idea of the elegant new abode that is in the course of construction for the aged people.
 A special car leaving Detroit at 10:40 o'clock a. m. reached the grounds at 1 p. m. At 2 p. m. the corner stone was laid by Mrs. F. P. Glazier with a silver trowel, which was properly engraved and given to Mrs. Glazier as a memento of the important occasion. Mrs. Glazier, in laying the stone, said: "I lay this corner-stone of the Emily Glazier Old People's Home of the Detroit Conference in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost."
 The Rev. E. W. Baldwin had charge of the ritual.
 After the ceremonies the people returned to the church, where the ladies served a lunch to those who came from a distance. After the lunch a public service was held in the church in the following order:

 J. L. Hudson, of Detroit, chairman.
 Address of welcome, Rev. Jos. Ryerson.
 Organ voluntary, Mrs. S. W. Horner, Detroit.
 Prayer, Rev. Johns, of Wyandotte.
 Solo, Homer Warren, Detroit.
 Address by Rev. Clarence Allen, of Flint, which was followed by eight five-minute addresses by Rev. John Sweet, Mrs. Jane Bancroft Robinson, Rev. S. W. Forner, Rev. George Elliott, Mr. J. establishment of the beautiful home that is being erected for the aged people.

 Homer Warren, at the close of the services, by special request, sang the "Sword of Bunker Hill."
 The ceremonies at the grounds and the services in the church were both attended by a large number of our citizens and many prominent church workers from the state.
Annual Meeting.
 The annual meeting of the Congregational church last Monday was a large and enthusiastic gathering. Encouraging reports were presented from every department of the church. The missionary offering for the year amounted to $315. The report of the minister, Rev. M. Lee Grant showed that he had made 649 pastoral calls during the year. Seventeen members have been added to the church, three have died, and four dismissed by letter, making a net increase of ten. The present membership of the church is 236. The total amount of money raised for all purposes during the year is $1661.

 A resolution commending the present attitude of the village authorities was passed enthusiastically. It was formally decided to purchase a pipe organ and a committee was authorized to take charge of the matter.
 Dennis Spaulding was elected to succeed himself as deacon. Also Mrs. C. M. Davis as deaconess and Mrs. H. S. Holmes as clerk.

PINKIE PRIM

"Why, what's the matter, Pinkie?"
Inquired her Uncle Tim.
"I've got an awful tooth-ache!"
Responded Finkie Prim.

"Why, goodness me!" said Uncle,
"A shame, — without a doubt!
I'll take you to the dentist
And have him yank it out!"

So, Pinkie put her hood on,
And Uncle took her where
The man had lots of steel things
And a pneumatic chair.

"Now, be a little soldier!"
Said Uncle. "Promise! Try!
A dollar I will give you
If only you won't cry."

The dentist worked so quickly,
Almost ere Pinkie knew,
The tooth was yanked completely,
And ev'rything was through.

"Now, don't eat too much candy!
And keep your teeth brushed clean!"
The dentist man told Pinkie.

PALE SHADES OF YELLOW NOW IN FAVOR

Yellow in all its shades is in high favor this season, and in some of the newer tones is wonderfully beautiful. It is a color that is always at its best in rich materials, and in such as velvet, silk and fine cloth make favorite materials the results of the fashion are altogether satisfactory.

Yellow is always an attractive color, and shades can be found to suit almost all complexions, there being wide range from the pale corn colors to the deep orange.

For dinner and reception wear chignon velvet and chiffon cloth appear to share the honors almost equally. Two costumes noted within the week serve to illustrate the possibilities of both, and also to demonstrate how yellow is used with an effect. Both are made with the new empire skirts, the later modification of which are so graceful and becoming, and are in round length. The velvet gown was in the beautiful shade known as banana, which is peculiarly lustrous in that material, and was made with two plaits at each side of the front and with embroidery on the panel so formed, but otherwise was plain. There was a skeleton or overwaist with the big armholes that are characteristic of the season, and which was cut out to form a very deep yoke at back and front. All the edges were edged with the embroidery in which heavy gold thread was used, while the guimpe was of Irish lace.

The second costume was of the cloth combined with chiffon and trimmed after an altogether novel manner with lace crocheted from heavy silk thread in the exact color of the cloth, the shade being a deep, rich one that is almost an orange. The skirt was made with a narrow front panel onto which the circular sides were overlapped, and these overlapping edges held by crocheted buttons that were set rather close together from the belt for a distance of about ten to twelve inches. There were double inverted plaits at the back, and these, too, were held by buttons, otherwise the skirt was plain. The blouse was an entirely novel one, with one of the double chemisettes that are so well liked and so often to be noted, and which combined orange colored chiffon with tucked white net. The little waist itself was cut out very low and made with tiny, fancy, loose sleeves, finished with the crocheted edging. The guimpe was made of a yoke of tucked white net and lower portion of tucked chiffon, with full sleeves of the tucked chiffon, with tiny little under ones of the white net.

CARE OF CUT GLASS.

Even when not in use, cut glass should be washed at least once a week, as the dust so easily accumulates in the cuttings, hardening very quickly. If very dirty, the glass should be washed in warm, not hot, water, softened by a little ammonia or borax, rinsed in warm water, and buried while still wet in fine sawdust for several hours.

While in the warm water a few small shot should be rolled in the slim-necked vases, bottles and decanters to clean the inside.

PRINCESS EMPIRE IN SHELMA CLOTH.

ONE of the smartest adaptations of the princess-Empire mode is here depicted, made of cream-colored shelma cloth, the skirt portion fitted and finished in tailor style with machine stitching in heavy rope silk instead of the usual machine silk thread. The corset effect of the blouse is gained by a wonderfully pretty embroidered design of peacock eyes done in old blue and gold on brown velvet and outlined with heavy black silk. A smart, new chemisette, banded with brown

THE KITCHEN

WELSH RABBIT—Half a pound of soft grated cheese, one gill of ale, two eggs, one tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and the same of Worcestershire sauce and a half spoonful of celery salt. A pinch of cayenne and one of mustard.

Put a broad saucepan over the fire and melt the butter. When it hisses, stir in the cheese, then, still stirring, the dry seasoning. Have ready the eggs beaten separately and very light before you stir them together in a bowl with a few swift strokes. Add three spoonfuls of the hot mixture to these, rapidly; then pour the eggs (now warmed by the hot cheese) into the saucepan, never letting the spoon rest. In one minute more add the sauce and lemon juice and put upon rounds of hot buttered toast.

TOMATO SAUCE—Pare and cut up eight fine tomatoes. Cook soft and run through your vegetable press. Pour into a saucepan and season with salt, pepper, sugar and a teaspoonful of onion juice. Simmer for five minutes, stir in a tablespoonful of butter cooked to a "roux" with one of flour. Simmer for a minute and serve.

Maple Caramels.
Break into small pieces 1 pound of maple sugar, and mix with it a pint of cream. Cook until it sugars around the edge of the kettle and hardens on ice. Stir constantly. Pour into flat tins and cut in squares.

BUYING AND COOKING FISH.

Fish forms a very prominent article of food in the dietary of people in all countries, and is good and wholesome. It is more easily digested than any other meats and is rich in albuminoids.

In Japan fish takes the place of meats almost entirely on the menu; rice, dried fish with pickles, are the ration of their army.

There is a general rule in choosing fish. If the gills are red, the eyes clear and plump, and the body firm, it is fresh. Crabs should only be used when fresh. The shell of the oyster is firmly closed when fresh.

Fish for boiling or broiling is best on the day or the day after it is caught. Sprinkle the inside with a little salt and pepper and keep in a cool place. When the fish is to be broiled the bars of the gridiron should be rubbed over with a little butter; do not turn until nearly cooked, then butter both inside and out. Fish for frying should be dipped in flour before putting in the frying pan. When fish is to be boiled it should be sewed up in a cloth, or laid on a strainer to prevent it breaking to pieces when taken from the vessel.

CHAPERON QUESTION.

Of course, the chaperon question, as it is generally understood, is a middle-class one; but Father Vaughn perfectly understood what he was saying when he alluded to the lack of surveillance of a properly dignified and perfectly agreeable kind from which so many girls really suffers nowadays. This is due partly to the fact that mothers do not seem to want to be bothered about looking after their girls, and partly to the fact that hostesses seem to resent much "mothering." But, even allowing for the fact that the preacher has not spared his colors in orders to make his picture sufficiently striking, one knows perfectly well that far too much latitude is given to girls, not only in country houses but in town as well. It would not be at all a bad thing for English society if we could go back to the days when people kept almost absurdly watchful eyes on the proprieties. Their vigilance may sometimes have provoked ridicule; but at least it conveyed the idea that mothers set a high standard for their daughters and were at some pains to see that they came somewhere near it.

Another use for old newspapers comes with cherry time. Tear a paper up into long strips, tie these in the middle with a piece of string, and hang in the cherry tree. The slightest breeze will cause the streamers to wave like long, threatening arms—very terrifying to the feathered host of cherry lovers.

To remove a rusty screw, hold a red-hot iron to the head of the screw

A Necklace of Dying Pearls

In the Louvre Museum at Paris is to be seen a pearl necklace on its deathbed. Not literally on a bed, but on a velvet cushion. It is the great necklace left by the great diplomat and statesman, Thiers, which once belonged to this prominent statesman's deceased wife. It is mounted in an unostentatious style and has no value as an article de vertu beyond the former value of the pearls, which was $60,000. It consists of 145 pearls in three rows, which weigh altogether 2097 grains. The largest three pearls weigh 36, 39 and 51 grains.

The pearls of this necklace are destined to die, says the Deutsche Goldschmiede Zeitung, as they are gradually losing their luster from day to day and will, during the next few decades, turn as black as the faded roses of the much handled wreath. But why? Because pearls will only retain their original luster when they are worn and come in frequent contact with the warm

WASHING BLANKETS.

A bright, sunny-day should always be selected for washing blankets. To prepare the water, make a strong suds in a tub as hot as the hand will bear, then shake the blankets out and plunge them endwise into the suds.

Have another tub of hot water ready, without soap, and rinse them thoroughly in this after washing in the suds. A second rinsing in warm water is desirable, after which the blankets should be hung on a taut line without wringing, well stretched and made fast with clothespins. The sun and air will dry them as the water runs from the lower edges.

After several hours turn them. At night fold them and the next day in the same manner complete the drying process.

MAKING CANDLES FIT.

When your candle is just a little too large to fit into your candlestick, don't shove it down, for you are apt to shave away a little too much and be no better off than before. Instead, hold the candle end to a lighted match and when the wax has softened a little you will have no difficulty in fitting it into its socket.

Sometimes the candle is just a trifle too small and wobbles ungracefully when put into the stick. The melting process works almost as well in this case, but it may be necessary to borrow a little wax from the end of a discarded candle, melt it and press it around the new one to help skin of the wearer.

When a pearl necklace is removed from the neck, where it has been exposed to a high temperature, and is placed in a cold marble tablet, which is of about one-half of such high temperature, it may be justly inferred that the scales of the pearls will contract and lose some of their brilliancy. When pearl necklaces are habitually worn this circumstance may also well contribute to the detriment of the beauty of a pearl, while the chemical composition of the color may be an additional factor in this direction, not to overlook the effects of a strong light.

How long pearls do live—that is, retain their luster—has not been determined. Examples do exist where pearls have retained their beauty for several hundred years. On the other hand, it has also been demonstrated that under adverse treatment pearls will die quickly.

A simple way of cleaning ivory is as follows: Get some bicarbonate of soda and some hot water. Dip a brush into the water and then into the soda, and rub the ivory with it.

Lingerie waists will be worn throughout the winter.

VELVET CHAPEAU IN HIGH FAVOR.

NOTHING is so becoming to the pretty face and softens the lines of an unattractive one as does the velvet hat. The undulating brim, with its soft Tam O'Shanter crown, is one of the most modish of these velvet hats, and is trimmed as are most of our dressy hats this season, with a beautiful ostrich plume placed at one side of the crown and

DEBUTANTES' GOWNS GROW MORE FILMY AND LIGHTER

Just how materials for debutantes and evening frocks can grow lighter and more diaphanous is a problem that the great manufacturers must dream out. For, with an ever increasing tendency toward everything of the sort, and an insistent demand all the while for something new, the ones now existing, many and varied as they are, are sure to be eclipsed by some wonderful new creation, so filmy that it will seem as much more ethereal than chiffon as chiffon is than silk.

Mousselines—things tinted as delicately as a soap bubble and printed with shadowy flowers that blur softly into the background—and chiffons, and the whole tribe of milfs, make the prettiest of the receiving gowns worn by debutantes. There's nothing radically new in them, but the way they're made is as new and as interesting as can be.

Whatever the gown is to be made of—whatever, rather, for it's moderately certain to be of a variant of one of the three—it is lined and interlined, the slip ruffled and flounced with chiffon—chiffon used so lavishly that the only question seems to be how to pile more on.

If a colored lining is used, chiffon covers it, softening the color into something ethereal. If white is used, chiffon robs it of any chance of seeming bare. And chiffon ruffles—wee ones—insidiously bring out the edges of the lace.

For Pneumonia Patients.

In cases of pneumonia many patients succumb from "heart failure" or weakness, which is no more than lack of nourishment. The constant giving of stimulants increases the action of the heart without strengthening the body. A specialist in the dread disease ascribes his success to beef juice or strong beef tea and rich milk. A full cup of the beef tea (that as can be ascertained) should alternate every two hours with a tumbler of rich milk just cool enough to drink without chilling the patient. The physician suggests seasoning both the beef tea and the milk generously with salt and pepper, as a preventive of nausea.

A set of three combs for the hair, pale straw color; the tops set with baroque pearls.

A so-called "White Mice" earthenware comes in a variety of odd pieces, such as bowls, vases, etc., and is named from the decorative motif of white mice fleeing from an owl. This is newer than it is desirable, one is inclined to think.

A long handled curved brush such as is used for cleaning silver will do much to lighten the disagreeableness of dishwashing. It perfectly displaces the dish cloth and does twice as effective service in every way as a mop. After a little practice it will be found that one need not put the hands in the water at all.

Plain silk collars to silk shirt waists with neat turnovers of white always are good style. A scrap bag of odd inches of ribbon and lace or velvet and a clever hand with careful study of the models shown in the fashion journals enables the home dress maker to have unusual coats. They should not be too elaborate. Simplicity and fit is the hall mark of good taste. A bulging stock will spoil the prettiest neck.

A discreet use of buttons may give a chic air to a modest costume. Economical people who have treasured button bags may take out designs that are unmatchable now and be in style. Artistic buttons are a natural outcome of the popularity of tailored styles. Designs in fantastic colorings give a striking touch to plain boero jackets or loose sack coats.

It is shortsighted policy to use old rags for dish or cleaning cloths. The lint and thread clog up waste pipes in short order. For the dishwasher there is nothing better than two or three thicknesses of cheese-cloth or old muslin sewed together, then quilted diagonally from corner to corner. These are soft and shed no "frazzles." Old sheets are fine for this purpose when properly quilted. There should be a good supply of these and they should be rinsed and scalded daily.

Among the annoyances of housekeeping is the one that however carefully plate may be cleaned before putting away in the course of a week or so it becomes dull and tarnished. This may be avoided by the following simple means. After thoroughly cleaning the plate and polishing it with whiting wrap up each piece in tinfoil such as is used for wrapping up chocolate, tea, etc., then put it in a dry cupboard or drawer.

Walls and ceilings that are spotted by a smoky lamp or stove can be cleaned by making bags or pads of cheesecloth folded double and filled with a mixture of equal parts of cornmeal and corn starch. Rub the walls straight down and up the color will be black with the soot and the walls fresh and clean; never use a moist cleaner for soot or smoke, as it will make a bad matter worse.

A good way to keep salt pork nice is by making a brine of salt and water in a bowl and keep pork in it.

Paris has certainly taken kindly to ribbons this year, and it is a charming old fashion revived. A new type of sash is an arrangement by which the ribbon, instead of flowing in free "ends" at the back, was made to form a series of short, overlapping loops down the skirt for the distance of about a foot, the loops increasing in size till at length the ends were allowed to escape and fall to the hem of the skirt.

Outstanding ears are far from beautiful, and are usually the cause of careless dressing in babyhood. A thoughtful nurse will put the child's bonnet on without pausing to see if the ears are perfectly flat against the sides of the head, and unless care is taken in this respect, the ears get all doubled up and protrude in an ugly manner, which becomes quite a disfigurement as the child grows older. If the ears of a young child have a wayward tendency to protrude, a bandage should be tied round the head at night, not too tightly, but just to prevent the ears from doubling over when the little one is laid down to sleep.

WALL PAPER FOR THE BATHROOM.

It has been said that a well-equipped bathroom is the hallmark of respectability, and the color and condition of a bathroom's walls go a long way toward making or marring that equipment.

Blessed is the housekeeper who can afford to have her walls tiled from floor to ceiling! For less favored mortals, who put up with tiling and paper, wainscoting and paper, or even paper all the way, that paper is of paramount importance!

Some persons like tiled paper. Others say that its place is the kitchen, not the bathroom; but whatever our preferences along this line, make the color light. Get a glazed paper, and if from lack of wainscot or tile it must stand the splash of water, give it a coat of white varnish.

Avoid elaborate patterns. A white background is always good. Designs of long-stemmed, long-leaved flowers, running lengthwise, are effective, especially when carried over the ceiling. Confine yourself to blues, greens or purples in the coloring of your designs, and you will find the effect cooler, cleaner and more suggestive of the water.

CRETONNE BAG.

A new form of handbag to be used either for fancy work or stockings of cretonne. It is made in two pieces cut out to the shape of the letter U, that is, curved around the bottom and flat across the top. Sew the pieces together, leaving the top open.

Gather in two embroidery rings in a part of the circumference and run drawing-strings with tassels around the entire opening in the usual manner.

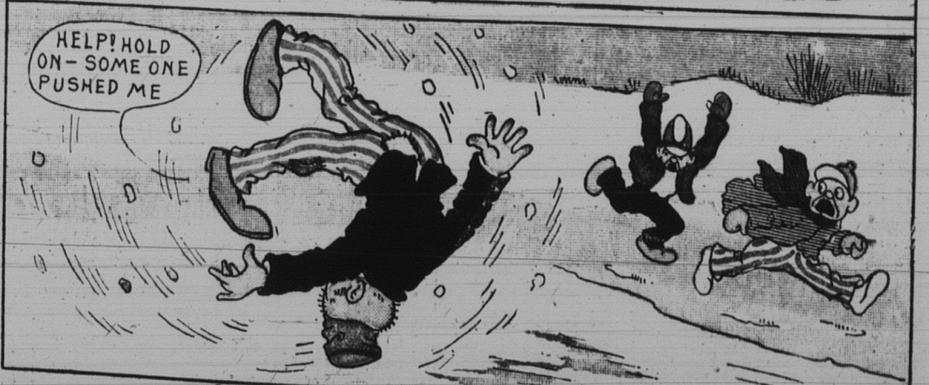

When intended for light fancy work an odd piece of figured silk makes a dainty bag. Larger bags in the same general design may be used for laundry, though they should be of stouter material and with heavier rings.

When the bag is hung up the rings serve to take the strain from the cords which, when used to suspend a bag from, cut through the goods

WILL NOT BE CRIPPLED TREATMENT SUCCESSFUL

The Maddening Disease, Rheumatism, Easily Cured With URIC-O.

It might interest Rheumatic sufferers of this country to learn the wonderful work that URIC-O is doing towards the relief and cure of this dread disease. 100,000 of praise are received daily from men and women who have used the remedy with the greatest success.

The manufacturer of this wonderful Specific have never solicited a testimonial or a word of praise from people who have used the remedy. Yet, letters like the one given below are being received from both old and young.

Mr. Reuben Whipple, grocery clerk, of Glens Falls, N. Y., writes: "I was laid up with severe form of Rheumatism, and was confined to my room for nine weeks. A sample bottle of URIC-O, and one regular bottle has worked a wonderful change in me. It has entirely cured my Rheumatism, and I am now able to go about my work again. I recommended the remedy to Mr. John Harris, of East Lake George, who was unable to walk. He had taken every possible treatment, had spent hundreds of dollars, and had found no relief. He is taking URIC-O, and is improving rapidly, and able to be out around. I will continue to recommend URIC-O, as it is certainly a merited remedy."

URIC-O is sold by Druggists generally at $1.00 per bottle, or it will be sent by the SMITH DRUG COMPANY, of SYRACUSE, N. Y., upon receipt of price. Liberal size samples and circulars will be mailed free to all who apply for same.

URIC-O is sold and recommended in Chelsea by L. T. FREEMAN.

An Unprogressive Institution. One of the most successful clergymen in Philadelphia, remarked a college professor, "was proud of the fact that he was always addressed as plain 'mister,' and that he possessed no degree which entitled him to the honorable name of 'doctor.' "An elder entered the clergyman's study one morning and handed him a marked paper. The item stated that the minister had been honored by his old college and that now he could attach D. D. to his name. "Well, well," muttered the pastor, "not without feeling, for he loved his college. 'my old school is a little behind the times, and still believes in capital punishment.' expedition. Immense forests line the banks of the Blue Nile along its upper reaches extending to the Abyssinian frontiers. The ebony tree is met with along that river and also near the Sobat. Along the White Nile the India rubber creeper, a valuable source of rubber, abounds. There are large forests in the Bah-el-Ghazal province, and gold has been mined in some of the mountains of the Sudan. Search will be made for fuel.

This is one of the facts shown in the annual statistical abstract from the principal nations of the world issued by the English board of trade recently. The period covered by the figures is from 1893 to 1903. In each of those ten years there have been 14 or 16 marriages per thousand of the population in Great Britain, while in other countries the rate has remained steadily at between seven and eight per thousand.
