EXPLOSION IN LAUNDRY.

W. E. SNYDER PAINFULLY BURNED.

Accumulation of Gas Ignited by Soldering Iron. Injuries Though Painful Not Dangerous.

About 10 o'clock Sunday morning the quietness of Main street was interrupted by the sound of an explosion coming from the direction of the Chelsea laundry. The few people within hearing distance who rushed into the building found Mr. Snyder badly burned but conscious and he was extinguishing his burning clothing. Dr. H. W. Schmidt was immediately summoned and at once put on applications for the relief of the man, and Mr. Snyder was taken to his home in a carriage about an hour later.

At first it was thought his eyesight was destroyed as the eyebrows, lids and eyeballs were badly burned. The eyes were swollen shut, but it has happily developed since that sight is retained. Mr. Snyder's face was badly burned and his hair singed, but the physician in attendance thinks he will be out again in ten days or two weeks.

In repairing a gasoline lighting plant Mr. Snyder was making use of a soldering iron which touched off some inflammable excelsior and this in turn was responsible for the explosion of gas which had collected unknown to him during the night.

Pioneer Passed Away.

Mrs. S. J. Chase passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. W. Chapman, last Saturday afternoon, in her 83rd year. The funeral was held from the home, Tuesday, at 2 p. m. The sermon was delivered by Rev. Carl Jones, of Detroit. Rev. Grant and Dr. Holmes assisted. Interment in Vermont cemetery.

Harriet Cook was born near Newark, N. Y., February 14, 1824. In 1881—seven years after her birth—she came with her parents to Michigan, where they settled in York township of this county. It was there she grew to womanhood, and was married to George Kanouse in 1841, then going to Ypsilanti. She was the mother of two daughters, one of whom died some years ago at the age of seventeen years; the other, Mrs. A. W. Chapman, with whom she resided at the time of her death. In 1868 she was again married to Stephen J. Chase, living on a farm a number of years; then, in 1873, they moved to Chelsea, where they resided until his death in 1890, she then going to live with her daughter. In her early age she united with the Presbyterian Church of Saline; but, after going to Ypsilanti, united with the Episcopal Church, of which she was still a member.

CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP

LAST OF "YPSI-ANN."

The Detroit United Railways Are Now in Control of the Jackson-Detroit Line.

The Detroit, Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor & Jackson railroad last week passed into the hands of the Detroit United Railways company, pursuant to a deal consummated on January 17, when the D. Y. A. & J. directors were authorized to sell the property.

The "Ypsi-Ann," as it has been called between Detroit and Ann Arbor is one of the pioneer electric railroads of Michigan. On the whole it has been a good money-maker, though it was over-capitalized. After the road was completed to Jackson the capital stock was $2,000,000. The earnings for the year ended December 31, 1905, were: Gross, $406,583; net, $172,718, and for the year 1906 were in excess of $500,000.

No changes in the management have as yet been announced.

The Detroit United now control every interurban railroad in operation out of Detroit. While considerable improvements have been made in the Jackson line within the past few years, much remains to be done to place it in first-class condition.—Patriot.

Reform in Police Department.

Like Lewis', the Jackson murderer's, words, "I'm going to clean house," which referred to his intention of shooting Capt. Holzapfel at the police station, contained more truth than Lewis guessed.

Since the murder the attention of the officials and the public has been directed to the condition of affairs in the police department. It is now said nearly half the force are drinking men. There have been two factions—the drinkers and the temperate men—and something of a strife has been on between them, but the sober officers were generally those who received promotions.

Now that "the horse has been stolen," the barn will be looked. A general cleaning up will be undertaken soon.

Officers Elected.

At the monthly meeting of St. Joseph's Sodality, held last Sunday, February 3, the following officers were chosen for the year 1907:

Prefect—John Kelly.
1st Assistant—Peter Merkel.
2nd Assistant—Charles Neuburger.
Secretary—Max M. Kelly.
Ass't. Secretary—Francis McKune.
Treasurer—William Wheeler, jr.
Marshals—Leo Merkel and Galbraith Gorman.
Consultors—John Walsh, John L. Clark, Gottfried Weick, Philip Kusch, Hubert Schweikert and Wm. Wheeler, sr.

Rural Carriers' Meeting.

The quarterly meeting of the Washtenaw Rural Letter Carriers' Association was held in Chelsea last Sunday. They were entertained at the Chelsea postoffice. At this meeting the following officers were elected: President, Edward Krapp, of Ann Arbor; vice-president, Ed. Weiss, of Chelsea; secretary, S. P. Foster, of Chelsea; treasurer, Foster Ostrander, of Ypsilanti. The next meeting of the association will be held in Ann Arbor the second week of May.

Slim Fire Protection.

Manchester's steam engine "Romeo" which was purchased second hand some time ago, has given out entirely and the only fire protection the village has is a hand engine, which would be of little avail in fighting a fire in the business portion of the village. Lonier & Hoffer the millers, offer to let the village erect a building at the east end of their dam which could be provided with a water wheel and pump, and will also give the use of the water for fire protection free. —Tecumseh News.

"Doan's Ointment cured me of eczema that had annoyed me a long time. The cure was permanent."—Hon. S. W. Matthews, Commissioner Labor Statistics, Augusta, Maine.

POLICE CAPTAIN IS SHOT

MURDER AT JACKSON.

Captain Holzapfel Shot and Killed While Sitting at His Desk in the Police Station Last Tuesday.

Tuesday morning about 8:30 Jackson was shocked by a murder in the police station. Captain John Holzapfel was seated at the desk in his private office when Isaac Lewis, a surly patrol driver, walked straight up to him, flashed out a revolver and shot him through the heart. Two other policemen, who were chatting in the room, rushed upon the murderer and overpowered him, literally dragging him into a cell. Lewis fired several shots, only one taking effect, however. It was done so quickly that no one scarcely realized what was taking place until it was all over. Court reporters for both the Citizen and Patriot were at Capt. Holzapfel's elbow when the shots were fired, but could not intervene to prevent the tragedy, and fled to a barn in the rear.

The captain, on receiving the fatal wound, gasped once or twice, fell back in his chair and died almost immediately, the physician who was summoned being unable to do anything for the man. After shooting Holzapfel, Lewis wheeled about and discharged the revolver at Chief Boyle, but missed him.

Holzapfel had been connected with the police department for fourteen years, was a model officer and was not known to have an enemy.

Lewis also was considered a good man for his place when he was sober, but of late had given way to excessive drinking and violent outbursts of temper.

Tuesday morning he was in a rage before leaving his son's, Harry Lewis', home and made threats. Harry, a young man of 23, feared something would happen and hastened to the station to warn Chief Boyle. While he was talking to the chief, the father came in and shot Capt. Holzapfel.

The murderer's only excuse for killing so good a man was that the captain had asked him to wipe the dust from his desk. "I will get even with him for ordering me around like that," he said.

Relatives of the murdered man live in Lima, near here, and were greatly affected at receiving the news.

Seven Horses Burned.

Early Sunday morning about 2 o'clock fire destroyed the barn and contents on the John Gutakunst farm about 5 miles northeast of Chelsea in Dexter township. Insurance to the amount of $325 was carried but this was little more than a sixth of the loss. Nothing has as yet been learned of the origin of the blaze, excepting the fact that a sleighing party of eight young people from Ann Arbor had put their four-horse team in the barn about midnight and gone into the house where they were to remain over Sunday as guests. About an hour later the barn was in flames and nothing could be saved. Mr. Hodson, of Ann Arbor, who drove the four-horse team calculates his loss at $1,000. Two cows, three other horses, hay, tools, etc. also were burned.

Ypsilanti Follows.

The police commission of Ypsilanti, made a tour of the different saloons of the city in order to ascertain if they have, in any way, been violating the law. They discovered a number of slot machines and other gambling devices in their places of business which will have to be taken out. The proprietors were also notified that they must not keep open after hours or pay the penalty. They promised to obey the law.—Saline Observer.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to those who so kindly aided and sympathized with us during our recent bereavement.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength for building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

SERIAL STORY

DUKE OF DEVIL-MAY-CARE

By HARRIS DICKSON

Author of "The Black Wolf's Head," Etc.

(Copyright, 1901, by D. Appleton & Co.)

Anita looked up at him steadily, her lips half parted, but dumb and expressionless as if she had not heard. "There's another thing I wanted to tell you," he blurted out, desperately afraid that his courage might fail him before he told it all. "When they arrested me this morning I knew nothing about Mrs. Ashton, and thought, of course, it was on this charge from Vicksburg. I made up my mind at once not to talk until you went home—it might drag your name through the newspapers. They would be saying that I came down here to see you, coupling your name with that of a fugitive from justice, and I could not endure that."

"I was standing in front of Pedro's cafe that night when you and Alice and Mrs. Ashton got out of the cab; I saw you go into the hotel. After that I walked the street all night. That's how I happened to see the ambulance—but thought nothing of it in connection with your party. Early that morning I tried to get that pig-headed Frenchman to take you a note, or to arrange it so I could see you. He said it would ruin the reputation of his house, and we nearly had a row about it. Of course I could not afford a brawl with him, so I went away. I think now he must have been suspicious of everybody because he had sent Mrs. Ashton to the post-house."

Anita looked away a moment, and the tears began to crowd into her eyes.

"Now," he stood up very straight, for he had cast the burden from his conscience, "that is all, everything. Let me sit here a minute and try to forget; I am very tired."

He took a seat wearily. Anita saw his head droop forward, saw him cover his face with his hands.

"Anita," his voice was very low, but she heard it; "I ought not to have come to you, and troubled you with this. I have nothing now to offer you, not even myself. But I did want to see you, just this once before—before I go—back."

Without a moment's hesitation she slipped over and knelt beside him. This was her place, beside him; out of all the world he had come to her; he was hers, and she had the right.

She knelt beside and comforted him as naturally as if she had been his wife for half a lifetime; she kissed his forehead so gently that he was scarcely conscious of it. He only felt the purity, the sanctification of her love, was only conscious of his soul's redemption.

He drew her closer to him, kissed the lips that quivered and did not turn away, kissed the eyes that had only sympathy and pardon in them.

"You mustn't make a coward of me," he murmured, and gently untwined her arms. Then he rose and stood for a moment looking down upon her as she knelt beside the vacant chair.

"Good-by," he said, moving toward the door.

"No, no, no," she sprang up with a cry, almost a scream. He turned and caught her as she came flying to him. Vainly she battled to control herself; her whole tense body relaxed and gave way in his arms.

"You must go, go," she whispered—"go, and take me—"

Once she had formed the determination, once she dared breathe it to him, she pleaded desperately, boldly, defiantly—pleaded for a woman's very life.

"Yes, yes, you must take me. I could not bear to stay here while you were wandering in that dreadful country. I wouldn't even know where you were; you might be ill—no one to nurse you—you might die. I can't let you go; I can't, I can't."

The slender fingers were clasped like cords of brass behind his neck, so unyieldingly she held him. The round young arms touched his throat, and the throbbing of her pulses maddened him.

His heart stood still, then bounded upward with one great burst of exultation.

"Take me, Noel; I'll be no trouble, indeed I won't, I promise—"

And the blinding mist swam before her.

A new and boundless world stretched out suddenly before him. He saw a new land, a new life—vast mountains, the surging seas, the wild free birds—and love. He grew stronger, his brain cleared, and life glittered with a new glory. The strength of his arms crushed her to him, and Anita knew that she had won.

He loosened her slowly, led her to a chair and took his seat beside her. It could be done, of course it could be done; but he must think.

"Yes, yes," he began, excitedly, "it can be done, easily done. But we could not smuggle your trunk out of this house. If you haven't a bag I'll borrow Joe's without letting him know it."

"I have one," she nodded. He seemed to steady himself, and became quieter under this precious responsibility.

"Then pack it at once, just the things you need most, nothing more, a few trinkets maybe. I'll come for it myself, to-night, to this door."

"Now let me see," he went on, more calmly, "to-morrow is Monday. You've never been here at Mardi Gras? No? Everybody will be on Canal street at 12 o'clock watching the arrival of Rex. Where were you going to see the parade from? Club gallery? Boston, of course? All right. I'll meet you at the corner of Baronne and Canal, just as you get off the car. You must manage to give them the slip some way—a girl can be clever enough for that; we will get lost in the crowd, and take a cab as far as the levee. You know I can. A lot of people have seen me in New Orleans, and I might be arrested. This morning I did not care, but—"

Suddenly there came a knock on the door. He turned pale to his very lips, and sprang erect. Every knock on the door and every step on the street would frighten him now.

"Come in," Anita called.

Duke could feel himself trembling as the door opened. Mrs. Chaudron stood on the threshold and smiled.

"Anita, you must ask Mr. Duke to dine with us this evening at seven. Just the family, no company; we are all so tired."

She smiled again and vanished.

Duke turned to Anita and laughed recklessly. "All right, I'll do it; we might as well die game." Then he sat down again, completely unnerved, as one who has passed through a moment of terror. For a few minutes he sat there silently, thinking.

"Yes," he said, half to himself, "I believe I'll do it; it would be much safer. There are thousands of masks on the street; I'll get me a black domino."

"Good! Good!" Anita clapped her hands gleefully, as the April sun that burst out through a storm.

Duke looked at the girl and wondered at such childish effervescence mingled with so much of resolution and courage. But he did not even smile.

"It would be safer," he said, rising quietly from his chair, "and we will take no unnecessary risks. Good-by, I must go now, I have a lot of things to do—find the ship's captain, make all arrangements, and get back here by seven. Oh, by the way," he turned from the door, "as I'm coming here to dinner, maybe I'd better take your things with me when I leave. Then we'll have nothing to hamper us to-morrow. Hide them right here, under this sofa."

He had kissed her good-by for the last time, and the last time after that, then for the very last time, and had opened the door. She stood looking at him so smilingly that he closed the door again.

"Anita," he held the girl's face tightly between both his hands, "Anita, look at me, child, do you realize what this is that you are going to do?"

She did look at him, fairly, honestly, bravely.

"What else could I do?"

CHAPTER XIX.

WHEN WOMAN'S COURAGE FAILS.

During the most turbulent period of his life in South America Duke had never known what it was to feel uneasy or apprehensive. But this precious hope, new-born into his heart, brought fear and prudence with it.

At every turn he had been vigilant and suspicious. His eyes had roved warily about the levee as he searched for Capt. Paturo; he had watched every man who entered John's House while he talked with his seafaring friend; he had peered cautiously through the windows of several barber shops before venturing to shave; he had taken his car at an out-of-the-way corner, instead of on Canal street.

Then, after running the gauntlet to the end, he found his hand trembling nervously as he laid it on the latch of Mrs. Chaudron's gate. He stopped and laughed at himself. Even if he were a few minutes late there was no necessity for such a panic.

Anita contrived to meet him and have the first word; it was done so carelessly and unexpectedly that Joe, who was coming down the stair, thought it an accident.

"It's all right," Duke whispered to Anita, "we sail to-morrow at two o'clock."

"The things are packed—back yonder—in a bag," Anita answered with a nod toward the little room; and the man understood.

Joe met them as they were entering the drawing-room.

"Hello, Noel," he said, "where have you been all day?"

"Loading around; getting rested." He tried not to laugh outright, but he could not help thinking how dumfounded Joe would be to-morrow.

Duke glanced about the Chaudrons' dining-table, glittering with glass and silver, redolent of pink carnations, sweet with the intangible atmosphere of home.

He chatted with Mrs. Chaudron, spoke naturally as he could to Alice; he sent back a laughing retort to pretty little Miss Deroset, talked frankly with Woodford Vance and smiled at sober-sided Joe across the table.

But he felt nothing, he thought of nothing, he cared for nothing except the girl beside him, the girl with the black lace gown and the throat of dazzling white—the girl whose eyes sparkled and snapped—the girl who had the single jonquil hidden in the midnight of her hair.

"I wanted to wear this gown—just once," she whispered, eagerly. "Everything else is ready."

"Ready," Duke's heart beat gloriously at the word. She was ready to follow him into the unknown wilderness of the world; ready to follow him beyond the seas, out of the shadow of her flag, beyond the sound of her mother tongue; she was ready to forsake her native land, her kin, the companionship of her friends; ready to renounce them all, and fly with a fugitive from her country's justice. The man's reverent soul bowed itself in hurrying at the altar of a woman's sacrifice.

Anita had balanced every refinement of this life around her upon the tip of her slender fingers. Love and exile had outweighed them all. He turned his head slowly toward her as he might have done homage to a saint. She laughed an excited little laugh, and touched his hand beneath the table. Anita was very happy.

Duke's tongue unloosed. Joe thought the wine had exhilarated him, he talked so brilliantly, but he noticed that the claret went untasted, his cheeks were untouched, and he had turned down his champagne glass. Joe wondered at the color in his face, the infectious enthusiasm in his voice, his buoyant spirits.

Chancellor Day's Ambitions.

James Roscoe Day, chancellor of Syracuse university, is the largest man in Syracuse, standing six feet four inches in his stockings and weighing 260 pounds. He has been at the head of Syracuse university for 12 years, in which time he has met with marked success, the institution having grown under his guidance from a small college with a handful of students to a great university with over 3,000. His ambition is to make it a rival of the University of Chicago.

WHERE PEOPLE BELIEVE IN OMENS

Washington, self-admitted center of culture and enlightenment, looks upon superstition as a form of devil worship that vanished with witch burning. Yet within two hours' ride of the capitol are communities that, despite public schools and church choir factions and problems and things, are as deeply saturated with superstition as the scholarly bats that flitted through the intellectual twilight of the middle ages.

In the upper reaches of the Virginia counties that flank the Blue Ridge on the east and climb the mountain shoulders until they look down over the summit into the Shenandoah valley, the daily life of the hill dweller is hedged in with countless signs and omens, all portents of evil. Through them he walks gingerly, fearful lest in propitiating one genius of disaster he offend against another.

A religious and church-going folk are these—on Sunday. The rest of the week they devote to keeping out of the clutches of "bad luck," the modern form of that disagreeable and uncomfortable old god of the Zidonians, Baal, who visited them with dire and original punishments when he didn't get his regular allowance of broiled baby. They don't broil babies, these latter day worshippers, but they keep themselves in perpetual hot water.

"Hance," said a sturdy old farmer of Big Clobber mountain to his son, as the boy started out on a June morning to hoe the weed choked corn, "el meen's in the secon' quarter, an' el yer chop 'em down, then weeds 'll grow worser' ever. Better wait 'll nex' week."

"Sides, I want yer ter go fer ther doctor. Yer ma's allin' this mawnin', an' 'er durned whippo' will set on ther horse block an' holler las' night 'tel I cloddid him off. Yer know what that means!"

Whippo'wills, that the ignorant may know as much as Hance, mean early and sudden death. For years they had made that block a rendezvous for their nightly chorals, while the family remained healthy as hostlers. But it shook not the old man's belief in the faith of his fathers. The doctor was hurriedly fetched, only to find ma recovered "as peart as a cricket."

"Don't yer put that sassafras wood in ther kitchen fire!" cried the old lady to her helping hand one day, a 12-year-old girl, as yet unlearned in the lore of the hills. "Every single cow on ther place 'll go dry of yer do. Go an' put it in pa's fire."

A listening city man wondered at this fine distinction.

"Law, chile," sagely explained the old lady, "it's jes' puttin' sassafras in ther kitchen fire what makes cows go dry; it don't make no diffrence in no other fire. Why, when I wuz er gal over'n Rappahannock—" and wise saws and ancient instances were copiously cited to sustain the theory of interrelation of sassafras, kitchen fire, and cow.

Sometimes they hit it. One day the city man bent on a little exercise in wood chopping, strolled through the house with an ax on his shoulder.

"Git outer hyah 'ith that," roared the old man in pallid terror. "Don't yer know it's ther wors' luck in ther worl' ter tote er ax 'thro er house? What yer thinkin' 'bout, anyhow?"

An hour later, as the city man approached the dwelling, his ears were flooded with a torrent of high treble recriminations mingled with a deep flow of apologies. They gushed from the door and window. The city man betook himself back to the placid forest, where he abode until the gusty Niagara had subsided. As he emerged the old man met him.

"I knowed yer'd make trouble 'ith ther ax," he said accusingly. "Yer hadn't got fer ex ther barn 'fo' ther old 'oman foun' er jug er moonshine hid under ther bed, an' I'd done swore off las' Cris'mas fer er year. Let this be er lesson ter yer, m' son, an' don't never tote er ax thro er house no mo'."

The city man began to believe there was something in it.

"Peacocks won't stay 'ith us," explained the old lady when the city man suggested them as an ornament to the velvety blue grass lawn. "They won't stay 'ith po' folks."

"We used ter have er beautiful pair of 'em. They stayed here fere years 'til we los' that law suit 'ith ther Cyarters an' got po'. Ther very nex' night them peacocks went down ther moun'n, pas' Dorse Hebbin's place an' ole man Cosser's, who's both po' folks, an' didn't stop 'tel they got plum' ter Colonel Waller's, ther owns 'bout half o' Warren county."

"They've been ther ever since, an' they'll stay ther 'tel ther Wallers gits po', and then they'll move on. No, 'taint no use ter git peacocks hyah."

One sign the sexes split on. The men hold it is worse to drink whiskey on the waxing, the women on the waning, moon. They agree, however, that a given and sufficient amount will make a man twice as drunk and twice as long when the moon is on the wane. So it is simply a question for dialecticians and prohibitionists.

"That fool put 'em on ther barn or ther dark of ther moon," complained the old man when he saw the shingles curling up like the bow of a toboggan; "an' he laid ther rail fence in ther pasture on the dark, too—time I wuz sick, an' couldn't git out an' learn him some sense. That's why it's sunk two rails deep in ther groun' already. It'll go plum' out er sight in ther earth in er couple er years. 'Co's 'twus ther moon!"

AILING WOMEN.

Keep the Kidneys Well and the Kidneys Will Keep You Well.

Sick, suffering, languid women are learning the true cause of bad backs and how to cure them. Mrs. W. G. Davis, of Groesbeck, Texas, says: "Back-aches hurt-me so I could hardly stand. Spells of dizziness and sick-headaches were frequent and the action of the kidneys was irregular. Soon after I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills I passed several gravel stones. I got well and the trouble has not returned. My back is good and strong and my general health better."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Thinks Little of Chinese Army.

Dr. Morrison, the well-known correspondent of the London Times at Peking, went to see the recent maneuvers of the modernized Chinese army in the neighborhood of Chang-tu. He describes them as a repetition of the performance of 1905—a set piece carefully prepared long beforehand by a number of Japanese advisers. The inefficiency of the officers is still conspicuous and the field training of the men inadequate, but the material is good. Dr. Morrison hints that without Japanese officers to direct affairs the contending armies would have been little better than a rabble.

His Practical Idea.

A benevolent old man who lived on his farm in Iowa never refused shelter to any who might ask it of him. His many friends remonstrated with him about this characteristic, knowing that many unscrupulous hoboes would avail themselves of the opportunity, and that there was great danger of the old man being robbed. To these remonstrances the old man replied that he believed in "practical Christianity."

"But," said one of his friends, "this seems very impractical. Suppose one of these men took it into his head to rob you one night?"

"My dear young friend," was the reply, "I bid all enter in the name of God, but I prove my belief in practical Christianity by looking up their pants during the night."

POTENT LIQUOR IS SAKE.

Lafacadio Hearn's Testimony as to Strength of Japanese Wine.

There is no liquor in the world upon which a man becomes so quickly intoxicated as Japanese sake (rice wine), and yet none of which the effects last so short a time. The intoxication is pleasant as the effect of opium or hashish. It is soft, pleasant, luminous exhilaration, everything becoming brighter, happier, lighter; then you get very sleepy.

At Japanese dinners it is the rule to become slightly exhilarated, but not to drink enough to talk thickly or walk crooked. The ability to drink at banquets requires practice—long practice.

There are banquets of many kinds, and the man who is invited to one at which extensive drinking may be expected is careful to start in upon an empty or almost empty stomach. By not eating one can drink a good deal. The cups are very small and of many curious shapes. One may be expected to empty 50. A quart of sake is a good deal; two quarts require iron nerves to stand. But among the Japanese there are wonderful drinkers. At a military officer's banquet a captain offered me a tumbler holding a good pint of sake. I almost fainted at the sight of it, for it was only the first. But a friend said to me: "Only drink a little and pass it back," which I did. Stronger heads emptied cup after cup like water.—Letters of Lafacadio Hearn.

MAY BE COFFEE

That Causes all the Trouble.

When the house is afire, it's like a body when disease begins to show, it's no time to talk but time to act—delay is dangerous—remove the cause of the trouble at once.

"For a number of years," says a Kansas lady, "I felt sure that coffee was hurting me, and yet, I was so fond of it, I could not give it up. I paltered with my appetite and of course yielded to the temptation to drink more. At last I got so bad that I made up my mind I must either quit the use of coffee or die."

"Everything I ate distressed me, and I suffered severely almost all the time with palpitation of the heart. I frequently woke up in the night with the feeling that I was almost gone—my heart seemed so smothered and weak in its action that I feared it would stop beating. My breath grew short and the least exertion set me to panting. I slept but little and suffered from rheumatism."

"Two years ago I stopped using the old kind of coffee and began to use Postum Food Coffee, and from the very first a miracle to improve. I worked a miracle! Now I can eat anything and digest it without trouble. I sleep like a baby, and my heart beats full, strong and easily. My breathing has become steady and normal, and my rheumatism has left me. I feel like another person, and it is all due to quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee, for I haven't used any medicine and none would have done any good as long as I kept drinking with coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a Reason." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. All grocers.

A cheerful life is often better than the solemn truth.

FILES CURED IN 6 TO 16 DAYS.

Men never fully appreciate the blessings of poverty until after they break into the millionaire class.

Garfield Tea, an unusually practical household remedy: take 4 for constipation, to keep the liver normal, to purify the blood, to dispel colds, to cure rheumatism, to keep well.

Tannic Acid for the Skin.

One of the most annoying results of eye strain is the baggy condition under the eyes, which is very disfiguring. To restore the condition of the skin tannic acid is generally effectual, using 20 grains to an ounce of glycerine. It is applied to the puffiness with a soft camel's hair brush night and morning.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only catarrhal cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. It offers one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists.

Jews in Senate Chamber.

Simon Guggenheim will be the sixth Jew to sit as a member in the United States senate. The first Jew chosen to that honor was David Yule, who represented Florida from March, 1840, to March, 1853. He was born in the West Indies and his name was David Levy, by which he was known when he was elected as a member of the house of representatives in 1841. The second Jew in the senate was Judah P. Benjamin, who served from 1852 to 1857. He also was born in the West Indies. He represented Louisiana. Benjamin P. Jonas was born in Kentucky and represented Louisiana in the senate. Joseph Simon was a senator from Oregon from 1898 to 1903. Isidor Rayner was chosen as a senator from Maryland in 1904.

PROFESSOR HAD LAST LAUGH.

Final Erasure Neatly Turned Joke on Students.

President Hadley, of Yale, was talking about his student days. "I remember a stately and venerable professor," he said, "upon whom some sophomores once tried to play a trick."

"The professor, one morning, being unable to attend to his class on account of a cold, wrote on the black-board:

"Dr. Dash, through indisposition, is unable to attend to his classes to-day."

"The students erased one letter in this notice, making it read:

"Dr. Dash, through indisposition, is unable to attend to his lasses to-day."

"But it happened a few minutes later that the professor returned for a box he had forgotten. Amid a roar of laughter he detected the change in his notice, and, approaching the black-board calmly erased one letter in his turn."

"Now the notice read:

"Dr. Dash, through indisposition, is unable to attend to his asses to-day."

NERVOUS HEADACHES

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Will Cure Most Cases and Should Interest Every Sufferer.

Nobody who has not endured the suffering caused by nervous headache can realize the awful agony of its victims. Worst of all, the ordinary treatment cannot be relied upon to cure nor even to give relief. Some doctors will say that if a person is subject to these headaches there is nothing that can be done to prevent their recurrence.

Nervous headaches, as well as neuralgia, are caused by lack of nutrition—the nerves are starved. The only way to feed the nerves is through the blood and it is in this way that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have accomplished so many remarkable cures.

Mrs. Addie Merrill, of 39 Union Street, Auburn, Me., says: "For years I suffered from nervous headaches, which would come on me every five or six weeks and continue for several days. The pain was so severe that I would be obliged to go to bed for three or four days each time. It was particularly intense over my right eye. I tried medicines but got no relief. I had no appetite and when the headache passed away I felt as if I had been sick for a month. My blood was thin and I was pale, weak and reduced in weight."

"I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in a paper and decided to try them. I first noticed that they began to give me an appetite and I commenced to gain in weight and color. My headaches stopped and have not returned and I have never felt so well as I do now."

MARCUS AURELIUS

BY HAROLD AVERY

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

It was while a large party of us were staying one summer at a farm-house—that the boy picked him up—little, sad-faced, lop-sided, mongrel pup.

The old sheep-dog, who had long been treated with that arrogant contempt with which Age, that may be said to have learnt words of one's life, habitually regards poor youth, still struggling with the alphabet, and in consequence the unfortunate juvenile was forced to seek amusement in the society of a litter of small pigs. Whenever you crossed the farmyard you were sure to catch sight of him trotting about with his snout buried in the trough of a pig.

Whether, under the circumstances, would have been fair to have named the pup for his choice of friends, or to have judged him by the company he kept, are questions which the reader can decide, but I know at the time he certainly seemed to me to be from an intellectual standpoint, far above all superior to his companions.

When you called him he promptly came away, and if you pursued he would follow you down and grovel on his back in the dust, and as often as you set him on his feet he instantly fell down again.

That little mind he had appeared to be attracted towards medical research, and having no one else to practice on he freely administered to himself the most strange garbage with all that disregard of personal risk which characterizes a true martyr of science.

A penchant for preëscribing for his real or fancied ailments seemed to attend him all through life, and even now, though well advanced in years, it is hardly possible to take him for a run round the garden without being startled by his suddenly commencing to cough and choke in an alarmingly noisy manner over some particularly long blade of grass which he has rashly undertaken to swallow.

The boy, however, with the same careful confidence which caused him to believe that the vile little imitation perscham that he smoked clandestinely behind the hay-rack would some day "color," averred that the pup had future before him, and when full grown, would be in some way or other remarkable animal. So firmly did he believe in the pup's future that he had finally determined to carry his top-hat as a chest protector—on hearing his name called, awoke with a start from his reverie, and after a moment's hesitation, as though he forgot exactly how the trick began, turned slowly over and "died."

Many years have slipped away since I first saw Marcus Aurelius meditating on the sun-lit lawn, and though I knew him as a baby, I find him to be quite a gray-haired old man. No top-hat appears rakishly perched upon his shapely head, and he stretches himself with perfect confidence upon the sacred hearthrug and suffers no rebuke.

"Marc," says mother, with a slight tremble in her voice, "where's your master?"

The dog wags his stumpy tail, but it is a heartless proceeding, and he does not even raise his head. Perhaps he knows as well as we do that wide seas roll between himself and Australia, and long before the boy will ever think of crossing them again.

Marcus Aurelius will have performed his old trick in sober earnest and shambled off down that dusty pathway (trodden years ago by the family of juvenile porkers, the old sheep-dog, and all the other friends of his youth.

His Sage Conclusion.

"Well, sah, if yo' please, dess go ahead and hung in yo' predestined pro-ratty, and be done wid it!" a trifle impatiently said good Brother Shinnaw, who was passing the hat.

"I 'snt got all day to linger whilst yo' premeditates over the mattah. Dess recollect dat de Lawd loves a churful giver, and proffawn accawdin'."

"Yessah! Toe be sho'!" pleasantly replied old Brother Bimmelick, who was hesitatingly coming over a 25-cent piece, a dime, a nickel and a copper cent, reposing in the palm of his hand. "Well, uh, den, muh brudder, if I kahn't no-ways contribute cis yuh quawtah as churfully as I kin dis injun-headed peppy, I dess suits de action to de words, as dey sez in stories, and chucks de cent piece into de clection dat am bein' took up for de heathen, uh-way off yonder some'r, I dunneh wuhh."—Woman's Home Companion.

Precoit of the Modern Child.

There is no doubt that the thoughtful child of to-day would have been the much-punished child of the past, says the London Chronicle. At the same time the witty child does add to the gaiety of life, besides enforcing a higher standard of conversation among her reproving elders. It was a mistake, for instance, on the part of the reproving elder to tell one of these wits of the nursery that if she was so naughty she would not go to heaven.

The little culprit seemed impressed for a brief moment and then she gave a resigned sigh. "Oh, well," she remarked, "I've been to two theaters and a party and a circus. I can't expect to go everywhere."

Lost in Deep Reverie.

Unaccountable belief take root in the heart that he secretly purchased the object of it from the farmer's son, the price paid being a dime and the bottom joints of a fishing rod.

This happened the day before we left, and on the following morning, when returning in an open wagonette, I caused us to glance in the direction of the box seat, and we were surprised to observe a small, brown, peering down at us from under the boy's elbow, with a quaint, apologetic look which seemed to say, "I'm not, but don't blame me."

"You don't mean to say you've bought that little beast with you?" "Of course I have," answered the boy, "taking the mongrel up in his arms. 'He's mine; and he's not a little beast. Are you my duty?'" "Ugh! you dirty thing!" exclaimed the pretty cousin. "How can you let that little beast kiss me?"

"Well, don't let him do it." "Go on!" answered the boy, with a warning impudence. "You're jealous." "Ugh!" cried the girl, a dimple coming in her soft cheek and adorning it as never before. "Very well, I'll never kiss him again."

"Won't you? Just wait till we get to the train." "Ah, boy, that was long ago now, and I was changed."

It must have been nearly 18 months before I saw the pup again. On this occasion, having called at the boy's home, and strolled out into the garden, I saw, sitting in the sunshine, out at the very center of the lawn, an unrecognizable, disreputable looking dog, au-parently lost in a deep reverie, and wearing on his head an absurd model of a top-hat. On hearing my footsteps he rose and shambled across the grass to meet me, his hat (which was secured with an elastic band) cocked knowingly over one eye.

"Why, you remember him!" cried the boy. "This is the dog I bought at the farm. We call him Marcus Aurelius because he's always meditating. He's awfully clever; I've taught him heaps of tricks."

The animal sauntered up and wiped his paws on my trousers by way of a greeting.

"Hello Marc!" said his master. "Sit up!"

The dog promptly flopped down full length on the grass.

"I didn't tell you to die," cried the boy. "Sit up you little blackguard!"

Marc, with his top-hat hanging under his chin like a nose-bag, rolled over and entertained us by "dying" on his back.

"That's just like him," said the boy; "it's the easiest trick he's got; and whenever I tell him to do anything else he always will 'die'; he won't sit up or run round after his tail."

Marc having "died" for what he considered a reasonable length of time, now rose to his feet and sauntered back to his meditations, this time wearing his top-hat on the back of his neck, as though it was a soldier's knapsack.

"What's he got that on for?" "Why, I want him to get accustomed to it, because I'm going to teach him to wear it when he goes out into the street."

"What can he do besides die?" "Well," answered the boy, "I think he'd make a good sporting dog because he's always digging holes in the garden, and I think he's kill rats if he had the chance. I tried him once with a mofste that I caught in the stable. I let it loose on the kitchen floor, and somehow Marc lost it, and it ran away somewhere, and we couldn't find it, and mother made an awful fuss. She doesn't like Marc, I'm sure she doesn't, and he isn't allowed even to lie in front of the dining room fire, but always has to go into a basket. Women never value a good dog; they don't know one when they see him. Do they, Marc?"

The dog—who appeared now to have finally determined to carry his top-hat as a chest protector—on hearing his name called, awoke with a start from his reverie, and after a moment's hesitation, as though he forgot exactly how the trick began, turned slowly over and "died."

A LAND PRODUCING

TWO CROPS PER YEAR

Marvelously Rich; Enormous Yield; Farmers Flocking to It.

Brownsville, Tex., Feb. 5.—Brownsville is the southern terminus of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico railway. This line was completed in 1904, and has opened up to development a section of the richest and most productive land to be found anywhere in the United States—California not excepted.

There is no more fertile region in all this broad land of ours than that between the Nueces and the Rio Grande. None will produce a greater variety of fruits and vegetables, or produce them more abundantly; and what counts for more, the Gulf coast country will produce them at times when no other region can. Two crops per year of the staple vegetables is the regular programme. And yet up to the fall of 1904 comparatively little was known of this marvelous fertility. The region has heretofore been given over to cattle raising—ranches of thousands of acres—thus tying up all this vast natural "Winter Vegetable Garden" under the merciless hoof of Texas beef producers.

But this is all changing and changing fast. Eastern and northern farmers and fruit growers are flocking into this country. Towns are springing up—ranches have been cut up into farms—on every hand is the evidence of a new era of prosperity and of development along the line of extensive irrigated farming.

There is an underlying sheet of clear artesian water which has been tapped by hundreds of wells, and more are being sunk daily. This provides a never-failing source of supply for the one element needed to make this country a veritable garden, and there are those who predict great things for this Gulf coast of Texas. I am advised that 16 car loads of people were brought down from different points along the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico railway by the Rock Island trains alone on January 15, which was the date of a low-rate excursion.

At this pace the country bids fair to be peopled in short order. And all it needs is people.

In another part of this paper will be found an interesting advertisement regarding this country and how to learn more about it.

MOUNTAIN GUIDES FAIL HER.

Miss Peck Will Make Another Attempt Upon the Highest Andean Peak.

Miss Annie Peck, whose chief pleasure is climbing mountains, has returned to New York from Peru, beaten in her attempt to climb the highest of the Andes, beaten not by the mountain itself, but the worthlessness of the men she employed as guides and porters on the expedition. She is convinced that she would have reached the summit but for the faults of her men and says she is going back with Swiss mountain men to make another attempt.

As it was she reached a height of 18,000 feet, being then about 2,000 feet above the summit. This was at her first attempt. One of her men deserted and the rest got drunk on the alcohol which was carried as fuel for cooking. Besides they were all afraid of the trip and especially as they approached the top of the mountain, of which they have a superstitious dread.

The second attempt was like the first, except that the men gave out sooner and so less progress was made before the attempt had to be abandoned.

FEARFUL BURNING SORES.

Boy in Misery 12 Years—Eczema in Rough Scales, Itching and Inflamed—Cured by Cuticura.

"I wish to inform you that your wonderful Cuticura has put a stop to twelve years of misery I passed with my son. As an infant I noticed on his body a red spot and treated same with different remedies for about five years, but when the spot began to get larger I put him under the care of doctors. Under their treatment the disease spread to four different parts of his body. The longer the doctors treated him the worse it became. During the day it would get rough and form like scales. At night it would be cracked, inflamed, and badly swollen, with terrible burning and itching. When I think of his suffering, it nearly breaks my heart. His screams could be heard downstairs. The suffering of my son made me full of misery. I had no ambition to work, to eat, nor could I sleep. One doctor told me that my son's eczema was incurable, and gave it up for a bad job. One evening I saw an article in the paper about the wonderful Cuticura and decided to give it a trial. I tell you that Cuticura Ointment is worth its weight in gold, and when I had used the first box of Ointment there was a great improvement, and by the time I had used the second set of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent, my child was cured. He is now twelve years old, and his skin is as fine and smooth as silk. Michael Steinman, 7 Sumner Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., April 16, 1905."

Universal Atmosphere.

The Swedish avant Ryberg has suggested that the discovery of the element metargon in the air strengthens the theory of the existence of a universal atmosphere extending between the planets and throughout the solar system. This, it is said, was already known to exist in the sun before its discovery, some eight or nine years ago—that is, in the immediate surroundings of the sun, in all comets and in meteorites—from which facts the Swedish scientist infers that it constitutes a common atmosphere for our system.

Cautious.

Imitations have been placed upon the market so closely resembling Allcock's Plasters in general appearance as to be well calculated to deceive. It is, however, in general appearance only that they compare with Allcock's, for they are not only lacking in the best elements which have made Allcock's so efficient, but are often harmful in their effects. Remember that Allcock's are the original and only genuine porous plasters—the best external remedy known—and when purchasing, plasters the only safe way is to always insist upon having Allcock's.

RHEUMATISM BADLY CRIPPLES A BALDWIN- VILLE FARMER

URIC-O QUICKLY CURED HIM

Mr. Frank Howe, a prominent farmer of the Town of Van Buren, says: "During a siege of the most painful form of Rheumatism, which lasted two years, I did everything that was possible with the aid of money to find relief. I spent several hundred dollars, and seemed to grow worse instead of better each day. Being on crutches and forced to drive to the train and then hobbling to the doctor's office, became very discouraging, let alone the sleepless nights and fearful hours of pain. Being advised by a friend to try Uric-O, I purchased a bottle and began its use as directed. In less than 24 hours these fearful sciatic pains left me, my blood seemed to flow and flow freely. I felt different, and knew at once that I had found a cure, as I slept and rested all that night, something I had not done before in two years. I used in all six bottles of Uric-O, and can truthfully say that I have never felt a return of the disease, and have had no use for crutches or cane since the first day's treatment. I invite all Rheumatics to write me and learn further truth concerning this wonderful remedy."

A notable Axminster carpet has just been completed at the Royal carpet factory, Wilton, England, for a well known London club. It is entirely hand made, and although woven in one piece measures over 62 feet in length and 35 feet in breadth. An immense loom over 40 feet long had to be especially erected to make it, and 13 workers were continuously engaged for more than four months in its manufacture.

HOW TO FORGIVE AN INJURY.

True Spirit in Which Apology Should Be Accepted.

How do we forgive? I am sure we hope that we always forgive as we would wish to be forgiven. The Lord loveth a cheerful giver. He who gives pardons has need of both love and cheerfulness.

Perhaps we do not appreciate how hard it is for some persons to say "I am sorry." Perhaps there is a vindictive streak in many of us that holds out against our better impulses. To apologize is rarely if ever a pleasant task. One may feel that a certain angry speech was wrong, but it takes great moral and spiritual courage to go to the person with whom one has been irritated and say, humbly: "I was angry just now; I spoke hastily. Will you forgive me?" It should not require superhuman grace for the person who has been offered to accept such an apology in the same spirit in which it has been offered. But too often the speech of pardon is cold and has a ring that is not sincere. Once in a great while it is accompanied by an acknowledgment that the sufferer for forgiveness has been disagreeable and that while he is forgiven he must remember that an unkind speech cannot always be forgotten at will.

He who thus receives an apology is farther from the right path than he who has acknowledged his fault. The one is conscious of his wrong and admits it and seeks to make amends; the other is wrapped about with a mantle of self-conceit and self-righteousness.—Chicago Tribune.

THOUGHT OF HER CARPETS.

Housewifely Instincts Aroused by Visit of Burglar.

A Massachusetts man tells a story illustrating the ruling spirit of a Yankee housewife.

Late one night her husband was awakened by mysterious sounds on the lower floor of their house. Jumping out of bed, the husband took his revolver from a drawer and crept noiselessly to the head of the stairs. Presently the wife herself was awakened by a loud report, followed by a mad scurrying of feet. Much agitated she in turn sprang from bed and went to the door, where she met her husband returning from the scene of the disturbance and wearing a very disappointed expression.

"Richard," she stammered, "was it—was it—"

"Yes, it was a burglar."

"Did he—did he—"

"Yes, he got away."

"Oh, I don't care about that," was the wife's rejoinder. "What I want to know is, did he wipe his feet before he started upstairs?"

NATURE'S WARNING.

People Must Recognize and Heed It.

Kidney ills come quietly, mysteriously. But nature always warns you through the urine.

Notice the kidney secretions. See if the color is unhealthy. If there are settlements and sediments, passages too frequent, scanty, painful. It's time then to use Don's Kidney Pills.

To ward off bright's disease or diabetes.

Lawrence O'Toole, of 1825 Hill street, Ann Arbor, Mich., says: "The pains across my back were almost constant, and were so severe at times that I was often obliged to get my back against the wall before I could straighten. I could hardly rest in any position and was as tired in the morning as the night before. I could not stoop to pick anything off the ground and was, generally speaking, used up. The kidney secretions deposited a heavy sediment and were too frequent, greatly disturbing my rest at night. I was bothered much with headache and spells of dizziness. I wore plasters until I was tired of them, and took a lot of medicine, but it did me no good. When I saw Don's Kidney Pills advertised, I felt confident they would help me, and I got a box. They helped at once, and in a short time thoroughly cured me."

THE STRANGE CASE OF AUGUST KROENIG, WHOSE MIND IS BLANK.

BLACK HAND SENTENCED.

Is Michigan to Be the Seat of a New "Zion"?—Voliva's Movements Seem to Look That Way.

Leaving his home in Port Huron without apprising friends or relatives, August Kroenig was picked up ragged and unkempt on the streets of Denver, Col. He was unable to tell anything about himself or his family.

From papers in his possession it was possible to identify him but because his name was misspelled the epistle failed to reach his relatives in that city. When discovered Kroenig was found to be suffering from a lapse of memory and had no recollection of his past life. He said he was working in a brewery and gave an address that could not be located. When picked up by the police he was hungry and destitute.

Kroenig gave up his position with the Kern Brewing Co., of Port Huron, to accept one in a Denver brewery. At the time he had $50 in his pocket and was not afflicted until he reached Denver. The doctors hold hopes of his recovering his mind but say his past life will always be a blank.

Hart's "Black Hand" Man.

A New "Zion"?

Is General Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva, of Dowle's Zion City, about to establish his new colony at Gull Lake?

Naïves of the lake region believe such a thing is about to happen because of doings of a mysterious stranger who had papers addressed to Voliva.

As the man gave no name, housewives were anxious and when he threw away the cover of some papers they picked up fragments and read the address of the ex-overseer of Zion.

Whoever the man was, he took notes on the acreage, the ownership, the prices desired, and nature of the soil, and quietly went away.

The suspicions of the natives have been increased by the announcement in Chicago papers that Voliva is making arrangements to take the colony away from Chicago.

General Shakespeare Dead.

The direct cause of death was heart trouble, brought on by suffering from wounds received in the civil war. He lived six hours before the end. Shakespeare's mind was clear and he talked with members of the family about him.

Representative Hepburn, made his annual speech against the river and harbor bill. This is probably the twentieth time he has risen to protest against an appropriation for the improvement of the rivers and harbors. He represents an agricultural district and his constituents are not interested in navigation. In all these years his speeches have not had much influence. They have been of the same kind and have been regarded as of a political character.

Now the representative from the river valley counties are beginning to clamor for improvements for their own navigable and semi-navigable waterways. They are not selfishly opposed to what is going for the great lakes, and for the coasts, but they want the Missouri, the Mississippi, the Ohio, and other rivers to be more largely represented in the big appropriation bill. The congressmen interested in this inland transportation are organizing to get their share of the millions and millions which go for these improvements. They are not in sympathy with the speech (and the speeches) of Mr. Hepburn as he is opposed to the principle, but they are out for their share.

Representative Clark voiced their feelings when he said that the representatives of the Mississippi valley soon would be strong enough to measure strength with others interested in river and harbor improvements. The "splashes" which greeted this threat showed that he knew the men on the floor of the house who were in sympathy with him. He followed this with "You treat us right now and we will treat you right when we boss the job."

Saves Millions.

The house committee on postoffices and post roads incorporated a provision in the postoffice appropriation bill which, it is said, will save the government $5,000,000 a year in the amount paid to the railroads for hauling mail matter.

The action was taken after an explanation by Representative Murdock, of Kansas, who said the department was using a false "divisor" in that it weighed the mail for seven days and divided the amount by six to ascertain the amount on which to base the compensation of the road.

The provision agreed on requires that weighing shall be done for seven days and the amount divided by seven.

The Brownsville Inquiry.

The senate committee on military affairs will begin the hearings, authorized by the Brownsville investigation resolution, for the purpose of getting at the merits of the Brownsville fracas of last summer.

It develops that the hearings at this time may prove very tame, because of the difficulty of finding the needed witnesses. The members of the three discharged companies of negro troops have become widely scattered and the committee is finding great difficulty in locating them.

It is now believed that all the men who were actual participants in the Brownsville shooting affray have got themselves out of reach of process servers for the senate, and that the men who will be brought forward to testify will be unable to do much more than tell their own stories in proof of their individual innocence.

Treated as Criminals.

The Oklahoma constitutional convention passed the following resolution:

"Trusts and monopolies shall be treated as criminals and be prohibited. The prohibition question did not come up again, as had been expected. Delegate Hughes failing to offer his proposal for the separate submission of local option. It is now conceded that this means state wide prohibition.

Canal Laborers.

Signor Gusmini, contractor of Milan, Italy, left Kingston for Colon on the steamer Ellet Frederich. He interviewed before his departure. Signor Gusmini said he had arranged contracts with 30,000 Italian and Spanish laborers to work in the isthmian canal at reasonable wages, and that he was prepared to land this number of men on the isthmus within six months.

He believes that the undertaking can be completed with the labor at his disposal. His object in visiting the isthmus is to offer to Chief Engineer Stevens the services of his army of contract workmen.

The love correspondence of a woman is digested and remembered no matter how foolish it may seem to others.

The bequest of $20,000 to the Y. M. C. A. of Saginaw in the will of the late Gov. A. T. Bliss will revert to his estate. The old board of directors has voted to take no action to try to secure the money. It was contingent upon the association raising several thousand to carry on the work.

The Roseland Park Cemetery association, of Royal Oak, has been organized by Detroit capitalists with $300,000 common stock and $100,000 preferred stock and taken options on 300 acres in that township. It lies along the Detroit United railway, north of the village. It is planned to lay out wide driveways and walks.

NEGRO AS COLLECTOR.

President Roosevelt has picked Ralph Tyler, a negro, of Columbia, for a fat federal appointment in Ohio. While the place has not definitely been settled upon, the tentative arrangement is to make him surveyor of the port of Cincinnati, which pays $5,000, and is now held by Amos Smith, Jr.

Tyler has been selected on the recommendation of Booker T. Washington, but without consulting the two Ohio senators, Foraker and Dick, particularly Foraker. It was one argument in favor of Tyler's availability for this experiment, however, that indorsements by Senators Foraker and Dick for his appointment to the consular service are on file at the state department.

Jokers in the Bill.

Before the senate has completed the trimming of the Indian appropriation bill the measure looked like a fugitive tattered and torn. Objectionable provisions in the bill included the order that tribal funds of several tribes should be distributed among members, instead of the usual order that the income on these funds should be distributed.

Then there was a remarkable provision under which the secretary of the interior was authorized to grant, in his discretion, permits to people or corporations to enter upon Indian reservations, construct canals and ditches for irrigation of power works, build dams, erect electric wires to convey power, erect timber, etc.

These provisions were regarded as doubtful propriety, in some cases it being alleged that the lobbyists would secure fees of millions if the proposition became law.

One senator after another objected to these various provisions on the ground that they were general legislation engrafted on an appropriation measure. Some of them were stricken out on a point of order; others were passed over for consideration later.

Waging a Hot Campaign.

The campaign to save London from bankruptcy at the hands of the Socialist majority in the county council has now developed into the hottest political struggle in the modern history of the metropolis. The issue is solely the question of the further municipalization of local industries.

The present majority has been in unbroken control since the creation of the council in 1889, and they are so confident of their strength that they have by adopting an electrification scheme on an even larger scale than was at first planned.

The enterprise as now outlined calls for a capitalization of not $47,000,000, as at first stated, but for the gigantic sum of $120,000,000, and the plan contemplates the buying up of nearly all existing undertakings. McKinnon Wood, the leader of the Progressive Socialist majority, in the council, in a speech on Thursday, affirmed that his party would make tramways the issue of the campaign and proceeded to argue that they had paid a handsome profit.

Japan War Scare.

Declaring that Japan is seeking a pretext to begin war with the United States, Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson insisted in an interview that he had personally seen an ultimatum sent by the Japanese government to Washington, in which this country is directed to take back into the public schools the children barred by California "or take the consequences." This ultimatum, he said, has been delivered by Japan's ambassador to Secretary Root.

After talk with the president, Senator Culbourn, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, said: "This war scare is all bush. I'd like to go to war with Senator Perkins for talking the way he did. There is no more chance of our going to war with Japan over this little school question," said the senator, "than there is of fighting China, Russia or Great Britain."

After the Czar.

A plot evidently directed against the czar came to light Saturday through orders issued to the secret police to use every effort to identify the purchaser of a uniform of his majesty's own Cossacks' escort which was captured during a recent raid.

Detectives have been directed to visit every tailor in St. Petersburg and the researchers may be extended to the provinces. The use of regulation uniforms is a favorite device of the terrorist. It was employed in the attempt against the life of Premier Stolypin and in the assassination of Military Prosecutor Pavloff.

The Cossack garb is an open sesame to the precincts of the palaces at Tsarkoe Selo and Peterhof.

Socialist Vote Increased.

It is now possible to analyze the recent vote so as to arrive at its true significance and it will be seen that Emperor William can derive no comfort from the expression of popular opinion at the polls. The Social Democrats, although they have heavily increased their total vote from 2,010,000 in 1903 to 3,251,000 this year and their vote heads the list. Every party increased its vote.

W. H. Lindsley, of Lansing, ex-city auditor, has been unable to secure bail since his arrest on a charge of embezzlement. The evidence against him is said to be only circumstantial.

The county clerk of Grand Rapids has compiled divorce statistics for 1906 showing that there were 376 applications for divorce, compared with 323 in 1905, and 624 decrees were granted; compared with 211 in the previous year.

SIDE LIGHTS ON MICHIGAN

HARD LABOR FOR LIFE IS THE SENTENCE GIVEN JOSEPH EHRLICH, JR.

CASH IS WANTED NOW

Allegan's Grange Store Case Results in Verdict of Not Guilty—To Purchase the Fish Hatcheries—Various Matters.

Leola Kelley's Murderer.

"Guilty of murder in the first degree." This verdict, delivered before a packed courtroom Saturday afternoon, brought the climax to a day filled with impressive scenes. It was some time before Joseph Ehrlich, Jr., the convicted murderer of Leola Kelley of Adrian, found his voice to answer to the question of the court: "Have you anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon you?"

"I have not," he finally replied in a low tone.

"The sentence of this court is that you be imprisoned at Jackson in solitary confinement at hard labor for life."

The prisoner received the sentence apparently unmoved. Trembling with fear, his eyes riveted on the immense crowd which followed, Ehrlich was led to the jail across the street from the courthouse. The jury was out only half an hour. Two ballots were taken, the first resulting 11 to 1 for a verdict of first degree murder.

Fighting County Treasurer.

The fight between the board of supervisors of Gratiot county and Harvey R. Munson, county treasurer, has reached the supreme court. The board has demanded that Munson file a surety bond, and has designated the bank in which he shall deposit county funds. It has refused to accept the bond he submitted signed by a number of wealthy residents of the county.

Judge Wisner, of Flint, who heard the case in the circuit court, refused to interfere with the orders issued by the supervisors. Munson has now secured an order for the board to show cause February 12 why Munson's bonds should not be accepted and why he should not choose his own depository.

It has been the custom for Gratiot county treasurers to deposit the county funds so that the county got no interest. If any interest was paid it went to the treasurers. It is to break up this practice that the present fight is instituted.

Not Guilty.

"Not guilty," was the verdict of the jury in the Allegan Grange store conspiracy case in which M. V. B. McAlpine, Edward Horen, A. P. Holmes and Dante Webster were defendants. The jury was out eight hours, returning the verdict at 1:30 Saturday morning. The charge against the four men was that they conspired to defraud the store out of several thousand dollars.

Judge Searl, in his charge, instructed the jury to, if possible, find a verdict of guilty or not guilty and avoid a disagreement, owing to the heavy expense of the trial to the county. The prosecution, which was conducted by Charles B. Ward, former assistant prosecuting attorney of Grand Rapids, who prosecuted the Grand Rapids bottle water deal cases, was weakened by the confession of Henry A. Dibble, its leading witness, who turned state's evidence, that he was a perjurer.

Tax Non-Resident Fishermen.

Rep. Charles E. Ward, of Shiawassee, believes it would be a good scheme for Michigan to require non-resident fishermen to pay a license fee for permission to angle in the lakes and streams of the state. He has just returned from a visit to the several fish hatcheries of the state.

"It costs about $40,000 a year to operate those hatcheries," said Mr. Ward, "and I do not think any reason can be advanced as to why fishermen coming here from other states should not bear a portion of the expense the people of the state are put to in order to keep the streams and lakes stocked with fish. The fisherman is really more reason why a fisherman should pay a license than a hunter. We may do something along that line during the session."

To Purchase Michigan Hatcheries.

Representative Grosvenor reported favorably from the committee on merchant marine and fisheries, an omnibus bill for the establishment of fish hatcheries in several states. It contains a provision authorizing the secretary of commerce and labor to purchase the fish hatchery of the state of Michigan at Sault Ste. Marie, for $12,000. It also provides for another fish hatchery and fish culture station at Charlevoix to cost $10,000. A third provision is made providing for a fish hatchery in Michigan, the site of which is to be selected by the secretary of commerce and labor. For this $20,000 is appropriated.

F. W. Pierce's three-story building in Owosso was unroofed Saturday night.

The proposed bill limiting boards of education, from five to nine members, according to the size of the city, is opposed by some members of the local board of education of Lansing, which has twelve members. The state superintendent of public instruction favors the new measure.

St. Clair county has presented a bill for $650 to the board of supervisors for caring for a smallpox patient. It is claimed that the man ought to have been kept quarantined in that county, but escaped, and several persons in St. Clair county contracted the disease. The bill was referred to the judiciary committee.

CHARLES L. STEVENS.

Charles L. Stevens, grand master of the grand lodge, F. & A. M., of Michigan, past grand high priest of the grand chapter, R. A. M., and one of the most prominent Masons in the state, collapsed in the street about 6 o'clock Wednesday night, and died in the home of Mrs. Mary Edington, 80 High street west, 20 minutes later.

Kent county Pomona Grange has approved the juvenile court bill now before the legislature. They also ask the Kent delegation to use all methods to secure the submission of the proposed legislative amendment allowing the people the right of referendum, initiative and recall.

"It is a very dangerous practice for parents to purposely expose their children to measles," said Secretary Shumway, of the state board of health. "Death from measles is chiefly among children under five years of age. Complications such as broncho-pneumonia, tuberculosis and bronchitis sometimes develop. It is wanton brutality to expose children needlessly."

Of the Universities of America, the U. of M. ranks third in number of students, being closely in the rear of Harvard and Chicago.

The editor of the Fowlerville Standard is urging those in authority to put the "lid" down tight in that village, and is out in his paper against gambling devices.

The engineering department at the U. of M. has grown more rapidly than any other department. In 1890 the number of students was 245 while now it is 1210.

The record of railroad wrecks in the United States for the past three months is something appalling. Fourteen fearful wrecks and approximately 500 passengers killed is the result of the desperate efforts of the railroad companies to make more money.—Tumecah News.

An offer comes from a Wisconsin company to this paper stating it wishes to exchange diamonds for advertising. Stop, gentlemen, not one word more! We might in a moment of weakness give in to so great temptation, and accept a half bushel of brilliant, sparkling home-grown diamonds in exchange for fifty cents' worth of advertising and then we would have to carry an uneasy conscience around with us all the rest of our days.

While local excitement over the recent smashing of the slot machines is naturally growing less each day, yet from the four quarters of newspaperdom come press reports commending the actions of a gentleman, who is an exponent of the right and who dares attack a public wrong at its very threshold and put it out of its accursed business. Good people everywhere wish to see right and justice prevail, but few there are who dare meet injustice so courageously as did this gentleman.

All over the United States the proportion of male teachers is steadily decreasing. In 1872 the male teachers of the entire country were about 43 per cent of the whole number of persons engaged in that calling. By 1903 the per cent of male teachers had decreased to 25, and at the present time it is probable that not one-fifth of the teachers of the entire country are males. This is one of the pleasant and highly honorable callings in which the ladies are certainly taking a leading part.

Willard Stearns, of Adrian, in an editorial in the Weekly Press with respect to congress increasing the salary of members of the House from $5,000 to $7,500, waxed warm upon the fallacy of it, and says these same members, who are so liberal in raising their own salaries, often, "grow red in the face and purple under the gills, opposing a pension of $144 a year to helpless, crippled old soldiers and invest a commissioner of pensions with power to harass the applicant and spend $500 to prevent an increase of $5 per month." There is some grim truth in what Stearns says.

Wednesday morning he did not appear and the landlord called in the marshall. The suicide was found in his room dead, grasping a revolver in one hand and in the other a knife. ## He Told Too Much.

Sing-Lung, a California laundryman, who went home last year after making $1,000 at his trade, happened to live in a village where the people knew little of the outside world. When Sing-Lung told them of the trolley cars in America they said to one another that he was crazy.

When he told them of the telephone they called him a liar. When he told them of the electric light it was decided that he was a dangerous man to have around, and so he was arrested and beheaded. In China they believe only what they see, and sometimes not then.

Administration of Justice in Morocco.

The penal code in Morocco, or whatever may go by the name of a code, is a good deal more Draconian than Draco. Two terrible instances in point are quoted as of quite recent occurrence.

In one case a native prowler was sentenced to a thrashing with 300 blows of a stick for stealing three fleeces. In another case a young fellow who had stolen a sum in silver equal to about one pound sterling, was punished with a rope's ending of 3,000 stripes, from the effect of which he died in a few hours.

Rising from the Grave.

A prominent manufacturer, William A. Feltwell, of Lucama, N. C., relates a most remarkable experience. He says: "After taking less than three bottles of Electric Bitters, I feel like one rising from the grave. My trouble is Bright's disease, in the Diabetes stage. I fully believe Electric Bitters will cure me permanently, for it has already stopped the liver and bladder complications which have troubled me for years." Guaranteed at the Bank Drug Store. ## Honor Among Engineers.

It must be confessed that, with some engineers, this is a very occasionally not been thought unworthy or improper which, although not in themselves dishonest, would be impossible among lawyers or doctors, which ought to be impossible among gentlemen, and which would be impossible among engineers if their organization were as complete and their etiquette as strict as in the older professions.—Engineering.

The Chelsea Standard-Herald

An independent local newspaper published every Thursday afternoon from its office in the Standard building, Chelsea, Michigan.

BY G. C. STIMSON.

Terms:—$1.00 per year; six months, fifty cents; three months, twenty-five cents. Advertising rates reasonable and made known on application.

Entered as second-class matter, January 11, 1906, at the postoffice at Chelsea, Michigan, under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

EDITORIAL

Of the Universities of America, the U. of M. ranks third in number of students, being closely in the rear of Harvard and Chicago.

The editor of the Fowlerville Standard is urging those in authority to put the "lid" down tight in that village, and is out in his paper against gambling devices.

The engineering department at the U. of M. has grown more rapidly than any other department. In 1899 the number of students was 245 while now it is 1210.

Congress has again recognized Jacob T. Wise, of Ypsilanti, hero of two wars, with an increase of pension. Mr. Wise is one of the few remaining veterans of the Mexican war who followed Gen. Winfield Scott.

The record of railroad wrecks in the United States for the past three months is something appalling. Fourteen fearful wrecks and approximately 500 passengers killed is the result of the desperate efforts of the railroad companies to make more money.—Tecomseh News.

An offer comes from a Wisconsin company to this paper stating it wishes to exchange diamonds for advertising. Stop, gentlemen, not one word more! We might in a moment of weakness give in to so great temptation; and accept a half bushel of brilliant, sparkling home-grown diamonds in exchange for fifty cents' worth of advertising and then we would have to carry an uneasy conscience around with us all the rest of our days.

While local excitement over the recent smashing of the slot machines is naturally growing less each day, yet from the four quarters of newspaperdom come press reports commending the actions of a gentleman, who is an exponent of the right and who dares attack a public wrong at its very threshold and put it out of its accursed business. Good people everywhere wish to see right and justice prevail, but few there are who dare meet injustice so courageously as did this gentleman.

All over the United States the proportion of male teachers is steadily decreasing. In 1872 the male teachers of the entire country were about 45 percent of the whole number of persons engaged in that calling. By 1903 the percent of male teachers had decreased to 55, and at the present time it is probable that not one-fifth of the teachers of the entire country are males. This is one of the pleasant and highly honorable callings in which the ladies are certainly taking a leading part.

Willard Stearns, of Adrian, in an editorial in the Weekly Press with respect to congress increasing the salary of members of the House from $5,000 to $7,500, waxed warm upon the fallacy of it, and says these same members, who are so liberal in raising their own salaries, often, "grow red in the face and purple under the gills, opposing a pension of $144 a year to helpless, crippled old soldiers and invest a commissioner of pensions with power to harass the applicant and spend $500 to prevent an increase of $5 per month." There is some grim truth in what Stearns says.

When items of interest come under your notice communicate them to The Standard-Herald. We answer the phone promptly.

SOME NEW BRACELETS

In these days to display a wrist guileless of ornament is to confess oneself oblivious of fashion. The bracelet fad, so long dormant, has come to life with more than old-time vigor, and it appears to have come to stay.

The newest bracelets are, paradoxically, exceedingly old. That is to say, the designs most in favor are nearly all modeled after the antique, some of them even after the barbaric. There are, for instance, bracelets whose Egyptian prototypes were found in the sarcophagi unearthed at Thebes, and there are others, of Roman pattern, which are perfect replicas of ornaments discovered among the ruins of Pompeii. The orient, too, has been ransacked for models.

Some of them are beautified with precious and semi-precious stones, while others are exquisite specimens of filigree work and beaten metal which need no gems to enhance their quaint beauty. The oriental jade bracelets, mounted in gold or silver filigree, are at once curious and costly.

The snake bracelet is one of the most popular of the new models, and, incidentally, it is one of the most becoming. These bracelets are especially useful for keeping in place the

FASCINATING WRAPS FOR EVENING WEAR.

Any and every sort of material has been pressed into service for the new wraps—velvet and serge, broadcloth and chiffon, and fascinating things made of lace piled upon other lace, both of them mounted upon chiffon and then upon some heavier stuff—most likely, broadcloth.

And fur! If you're wealthy enough to go in for fur wraps, there are beautiful caps of chinchilla and stunning coats of every sort of fur up to a royal one of true Russian sable, fit (and costly enough) for a princess to wear. Incidentally, if you've laid aside that will do for collars and cuffs, it's a pretty soft touch to give your cloth coat.

But the cape-idea dominates everything in evening wraps—not the voluminous, bulky thing that a cape used to be, but charming affairs, deftly shaped on the most circular of circular lines, with every bit of unnecessary fulness about the shoulders got rid of by that very cut.

Revers are back of all sorts of coats, some of the prettiest evening coats showing them, yet more of the coats are made in collarless fashions, giving a chance to display a collar of lace, or a separate neckpiece that turns out to be a fluffy thing of marabout feathers or of white fox.

Braid is on everything—the flat plain silk braids that match the material exactly, little soutache braids, or the interesting new braids which may be composed of two or three colors, blended or combined so skillfully that the result is a pretty harmony. These combination braids are, in the most part, used for the inside of coat or cape—run along the edge of the coat, so that when it is opened and thrown back, the touch of color shows prettily.

A new shade of old blue with more life in it than old blue usually boasts, is growing in popularity—there's so much service in it; yet it's light enough and cheery enough to be worn at night.

And buttons! It looks as though anybody and everybody had conspired to make this season notable for its use of buttons, for every sort of wrap displays them, often no more than two or three great handsome ones, as often a row of them set down the left side, and made to render service in addition to their beauty. Some of them are enameled in colors, and a mighty pretty effect is got when the wrap is lined with one of the new, beautiful brocades, the colors in the buttons matching those in the brocade.

NEW TAFFETA EFFECTS.

White taffeta forms an interesting background for much of the new colored embroidery, which, by the way, is more strikingly beautiful than ever before. One trimming in a large and small scalloped figure has its edge of gold dots, from pin to pin in size, with wreaths of colored flowers couched in gold, alternating with raised silk embroidered white roses, with a circle of green leaves. A touch of black and much outlining in gold adds much to the beauty. The same pattern is seen in silver with deep blue flowers.

A NEW LINGERIE WAIST ARRIVAL.

VERY pretty new model for a lingerie waist is this, made of sheer cotton mull and worn over a lining of canary-colored seed silk. The yoke is fashioned of all-over embroidery inset with medallions of machine-made Irish crochet lace and Valenciennes. The yoke outlines are defined in graceful curves by the use of insertions of Valenciennes extra deux below which clusters of fine tucks are introduced.

THE BEST USE OF DYES

Simple of construction and yet marvelously pretty is a soft raspberry colored gown of chiffon velvet. The waist is a happy blending of the same color and bits of the velvet laid over an underblouse of white valenciennes. Of course it is a pinaflore frock—all fanciful gowns are—and the part which slips over it is a simple cheap lace with raised thread, but looking costly enough when dyed the lovely raspberry color. It is attached to a narrow round, low cut yoke of the velvet, the plain velvet is full all the way around and reaches the floor, and the girle is also of the wrinkled velvet.

The white lace underwaist is mounted on thin Swiss or chiffon, keeping the airy effect, and the collar and front are elaborated with dainty Honiton braid scrolled over the pattern.

A bit of the colored lace edged with the velvet forms a bretelle over the sleeve. The whole gown, while exquisite and seemingly laborate, is simple in construction, as the skirt is simply gathered and the blouses are of the simple cut which the amateur dressmaker uses every day in other materials.

More intricate is a Paquin gown of soft heliotrope mousseline de sole trimmed through the skirt with motifs and curved bands of lace dyed to match the mousseline and emplacement of softest chiffon satin. The corsage is a mingling of beautiful embroideries and lace, the former done in floss silk, and chenille with tiny rouleau of mauve chenille introduced here and there.

Lace dyed morocco green, formed epaulettes and other trimming to a broadcloth going away coat worn by a pretty English bride.

BEef STEW—A good dish is beef stew, with dumplings made of flour, sweet milk, salt, pepper and salt. Drop in by teaspoonfuls, and do not lift the cover until they are about twenty minutes.

COCKLE A BOILED LOBSTER—Wipe shell, break off large claws, separate tail and body, take body from shell, leaving tail and claws on shell, put into green water from body, break latter through middle and pick out meat from joints. Crush of tail and pick out meat from joints. Crush of tail and pick out meat from joints. Crush of tail and pick out meat from joints.

LITTLE HELPS—Here's a bunch of chives and parsley growing in pots through the window. Chives are more delicate than onions and a delicious addition to a potato or brown hash. It must be chopped. A little mixed with shredded cabbage, makes a delicious salad; also little canned Pars and corn red apples, all with mayonnaise and tucked into each a blanched top of celery.

EAST FROSTING—I can't understand why people continue to make boiled frosting or cake or a frosting made with the whites of eggs, when a much more delicious frosting can be made with much less trouble and expense by simply using rich milk and confectionery sugar with flavoring, beating with a spoon. Frosting made this way is soft and creamy.

Care of Trunks.

A good trunk can be saved many a hard knock, or rather many a bad scar, when going on a long journey, by covering with ordinary coarse canvas. Sew it securely with twine, leaving only the handles of the trunk out.

A piece of flannel dampened with spirits of camphor will remove stains from mirrors or window glass.

It is a wise thing to throw out old medicine. Keeping it is rash economy.

Gardens and roadsides are full of herbs of which the juice or leaves afford remedies or palliatives for almost every disease to which humanity is heir.

Salt is one of the best preservatives known for certain foods. In the form of a strong brine it will serve as a medium for keeping butter, eggs, meat and various kinds of vegetables almost indefinitely.

Take a small handful of tobacco, and steep it in boiling water till the water looks like weak tea. When the water is cool it is fit for use, with a sponge or soft cloth. Afterwards reduce the strength of the infusion with more water, and thoroughly wet the earth round the roots. This is one of the best ways for keeping a plant healthy and destroying insects.

When linoleum begins to show wear, paint the surface with a good quality floor varnish and allow it a longer time to dry than would be necessary for wooden boards.

An apple kept in the cake box will, it is said, keep a moderately rich cake moist.

And fresh for a considerable length of time. The apple should be renewed from time to time when it becomes withered.

There is nothing to beat rhubarb juice as a cure for gout or rheumatism, except water from medicinal springs. All kinds of scurvy and blood poisoning yield to the juice of lemons or of limes, which are the greatest blood purifiers in existence.

A simple and effective way of shrinking a heavy cloth is to hang it on the clothes line with the fold on the line and sprinkle it with the garden hose. It can then be left hanging until it is dry and will need no further pressing. This method is not good for light or loosely woven cloth as the weight of the water will make it sag, but it is a safe and rapid treatment for Scotch tweeds or heavy broadcloths.

If you are a wise woman you will try and gratify some of your husband's little whims instead of opposing them.

Don't nag.

The point that cannot be gained without gentleness is not worth gaining.

For Baby's Cot:

A very nice quilt may be made for baby's cot from some old shawls. Cut all worn pairs away. Join the pieces together flat, and cover both sides with cretonne; then put tapes at each corner to tie to sides of cot, and you will have a very warm and exceedingly light quilt.

As good a test of the right sort of house-keeper as the old-time one of looking in corners and under beds for dust, is that of passing a cloth over the tops of doors and windows.

Your true housewife will look to it that they are dusted as regularly as the furniture is, and every sweeping day will see them wiped off with a damp rag.

FOR PLANTS IN THE HOME

The cyclamens are among the most charming flowers for winter culture, seeds sown now will give nice blooming plants for next winter, and florists recommend growing this plant as an annual, throwing the old ones away as soon as they have finished blooming.

If the plants seem to have stopped growing after being transferred to the living rooms do not try to stimulate them with fertilizers and copious watering, as such treatment will only make matters worse.

On mild days it is very easy to completely change the air in the rooms. During the process screens may be made useful in keeping currents of cold air away from the extra precautions must be taken. Seeds of annual vines may be sown in windows that need their drapery. Nasturtiums are among the brightest and most picturesque of flowers and they will bloom freely all winter through.

A small jardiniere filled with mixed ferns, vines and mosses makes a pretty table centerpiece. Or some small plants, such as a primula or a cyclamen, anything in this line having flowers not too strongly scented or leaves too clumsy, will be found very useful.
