Product of Plants to be Increased.

Company Manufactures Novo Steel Ranges, Oil Cooks and Heaters, Gasoline, Alcohol and Lamp Stoves—Their Stoves Have a World Wide Reputation.

On Tuesday, April 2, the stockholders of the Glazier Stove Company decided by a unanimous vote of those present to increase the capitalization to five hundred thousand dollars of preferred stock and one million dollars of common stock. Practically all the stock of the company was represented at the meeting and voted.

It was decided to sell both common and preferred stock at par and practically the entire amount of the new issue of nine hundred thousand dollars was subscribed for at the meeting. Arrangements have since been made for placing the stock unsubscribed at that time.

The stock reorganization is an important part of the new policy of development which has now been in progress for more than a year. The funds which are thus placed at the disposal of the company put it in first class condition to compete with the other leading stove plants of the country, both in economy of manufacture and volume of output. The officials of the company state that very satisfactory headway is being made

Who Saw Bacon's Canons Notices?

The following was taken from the Ann Arbor Daily News of March 30:

I notice that the Times in its issue of yesterday does a great amount of crowing over the fact that the so-called Union ticket for Sylvan township was allowed to go into the voting machine for Monday's election. As it was by my vote that it was allowed to go in I feel that I should state some of the facts. The first that was known of this ticket was Tuesday morning when it was noised around that there was such a ticket placed in nomination the night before when the clerk of the alleged caucus handed the township clerk the ticket. It was of course a surprise to him (the township clerk) as it had been talked that there was to be no opposition to the regular republican ticket and the township clerk asked Mr. Avery who gave him the ticket; if it was a regularly called caucus and Mr. Avery said that being a new party, did not have to have notices posted. Later Mr. Bacon made the same statement to Mr. Hummel in the presence of Martin Wackenhut. Mr. Bacon claims that what he said was that no publication was necessary. This claim is far fetched as it is well known that no publication is necessary where there is no daily paper. The law, as most people know, only requires that there shall be notices posted in three public places in the precinct. When Mr. Bacon found that his posting such notices was necessary, or at least it looks that way, he immediately went to Ann Arbor and made oath that he had so posted notices on Guthrie's corners, which is three miles west of Chelsea; on Guerin's corners, 3 of a mile northwest; on the corner of the school house grounds in Chelsea, and on his office. No person has so far been found who saw any of these notices. Mr. Bacon's office is on Main street and is very conspicuous. No notices are ever posted there and a single notice would be very prominent. Mr. Bacon passes by it every time he comes up town, several times daily, at least. As Mr. Bacon puts it, 170 men pass there three times every working day besides the regular village travel. Not one so far as is known ever saw the notice. Now all this goes to show that if they were posted at all, they were designedly posted so as not to be noticeable, possibly on the inside of the fences and inside his office.

Thursday the town board had a meeting to act on the matter. Mr. Bacon was asked to be present and was. He was pressed with questions as to his posting these notices and said he did so himself; that he took the car to Guthrie's crossing and went cross lots to Guerin's corners, in the mud, I suppose. After considerable talk and wrangling, I made the motion that the ticket be placed in the voting machine and explained that I had very little doubt that the ticket was illegal, but was in favor of giving Mr. Bacon the benefit of what doubt there was. Mr. Chapman voted yes, and the ticket goes in.

I write this to explain my own position as well as to show you that you were justified in the editorial which the Times so jubilantly criticizes.

A GLORIOUS VICTORY

FOR THE REPUBLICANS, MONDAY.

Sylvan Polled the Largest Vote of Any Precinct in Washtenaw County—The Road Amendment Carried.

Incomplete returns from many sections of the State indicate that the Republicans have swept Michigan with a majority that will total from 80,000 to 100,000. The constitutional amendments were carried in the county by a small majority.

Returns are not yet sufficiently complete to give the majorities on the county ticket, but Geo. Fischer is re-elected auditor by from four to six hundred majority over George Mann, and Evan Essery has two or three hundred over A. M. Smith for school commissioner.

The election in Sylvan, Monday, was a glorious victory for the Republicans. The electors, both in Chelsea and the residents of the farms, were on hand to exercise the right of franchise, and when the polls closed 733 of the 815 registered electors had cast their votes. The result shows that 495 Republican votes were cast, 69 Democratic, 5 Prohibition, 4 Labor-Social and 2 Socialists on the State ticket.

On the county ticket 497 Republicans and 79 Democrats voted their party tickets.

In the township 495 Republican ballots were cast, and the combined opposition tickets received 231 votes.

The State amendments were all carried by small majorities.

The amendment for the township road system was carried by a majority of about 180. This amendment will do away with the pathmaster system, and the township will be divided into four road districts, and the town board will appoint four commissioners who will have charge of the road work. Next year the four officers will be elected by ballot.

Following is the result of the election on the state, county and township tickets:

SERIAL STORY

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Author of "THE MAIN CHANCE," "ZELDA DANERSON," ETC.

"I beg you not to mention it, Mr. Glenarm."

"But it was a little queer. If you should gain any light on the subject, let me know."

"Certainly, sir."

"And I believe, Bates, that we'd better keep the blinds down at night. These duck hunters hereabouts are apparently reckless. You might attend to them now—and every evening hereafter."

He gravely bade me good night and I followed him to the outer door and watched his departing figure, lighted by a single candle that he had produced from his pocket.

I stood for several minutes listening to his step, tracing it through the hall below—as far as my knowledge of the house would permit. Then, in unknown regions, I could hear the closing of doors and drawing of bolts. Verily, my father was a person of painstaking habits.

I opened my traveling case and distributed its contents on the dressing table. I had carried through all my adventures a folding leather photograph holder, containing portraits of my father and mother and of John Marshall Glenarm, my grandfather, and this I set up on the mantel in the little sitting-room. It was with a new and curious interest that I peered into my grandfather's shadowed eyes. He used to come and go fitfully at my father's house, but my father had disapproved him in various ways that I need not recite, and my father's death had left me with an estrangement which I had widened by my own acts.

Now that I had reached Glenarm, my mind reverted to Pickering's estimate of the value of my grandfather's estate. Although John Marshall Glenarm was an eccentric man, he had been able to accumulate a large fortune; and yet I had tamely permitted the executor to tell me that he had died comparatively poor. In so readily accepting the terms of the will and burying myself in a region of which I knew nothing, I had cut myself off from the usual channels of counsel. If I left the place to return to New York I should simply disinherit myself. At Glenarm I was, and there I must remain to the end of the year. I grew bitter against Pickering as I reflected upon the ease with which he had got rid of me. I had always satisfied myself that my wits were as keen as his, but I felt now that I had stupidly put myself in his power.

CHAPTER V.

A Red Tarn's Shanter.

I looked out on the bright October morning with a renewed sense of isolation. Trees crowded about my windows, many of them still wearing their festive colors, scarlet and brown and gold, with the bright green of some stubborn companion standing out here and there with startling vividness. I put on an old corduroy outfit and heavy shoes, ready for a tramp abroad and went below.

The great library seemed larger than ever when I beheld it in the morning light. I opened one of the French windows and stepped out on a stone terrace, where I gained a fair view of the exterior of the house, which proved to be a modified Tudor, with battlements and two towers. One of the latter was only half-finished, and to it and to other parts of the house the workmen's scaffolding still clung. Hoops of stone and piles of lumber were scattered about in great disorder. The house extended partly along the edge of a ravine, through which a slender creek ran toward the lake. The terrace became a broad balcony immediately outside the library, and beneath it the water bubbled pleasantly around heavy stone pillars. Two pretty rustic bridges spanned the ravine, one near the front entrance, the other at the rear. My grandfather had projected his house on a generous plan, but buried as it was among the trees, it suffered the lack of perspective. However, on one side toward the lake was a fair meadow, broken by a water-tower, and just beyond the west dividing wall I saw a little chapel; and still farther, in the same direction, the outlines of the buildings of St. Agatha's were vaguely perceptible in another strip of woodland.

The thought of gentle nuns and schoolgirls as neighbors amused me. All I asked was that they should keep to their own side of the wall.

I heard a sound and the careful step of Bates.

"Good morning, Mr. Glenarm. I trust you rested quite well, sir."

His figure was as austere, his tone as respectful and colorless as by night. The morning light gave him a pallid cast. He suffered my examination coolly enough; his eyes were, indeed, the best thing about him.

"You may breakfast when you like, sir,"—and thus admonished I went into the refectory.

A newspaper lay at my plate; it was the morning's issue of a Chicago daily. I was, then, not wholly out of the world, I reflected, scanning the headlines.

Bates had placed me so that I faced the windows, an attention to my comfort and safety that I appreciated. The broken pane told the tale of the shot that had so narrowly missed me the night before.

"I'll repair that to-day, sir," Bates remarked, seeing my eyes upon the window.

"You know that I'm to spend a year on this place; I assume that you are acquainted with the circumstances," I said, feeling it wise that we should understand each other.

"Quite so, Mr. Glenarm."

"I'm a student, you know, and all I want is to be let alone."

"This I threw in to reassure myself rather than for his information. It was just as well, I reflected, to assert a little authority, even though the fellow undoubtedly represented Pickering and received orders from him.

"In a day or two, or as soon as I have got used to the place, I shall settle down to work in the library. You may give me breakfast at seven-thirty; luncheon at one-thirty and dinner at seven."

"Those were my late master's hours, sir."

"Very well. And I'll eat anything you please, except mutton broth, meat pie and canned strawberries. Strawberries in this, Bates, are not well calculated to lift the spirit of man."

"I quite agree with you, sir, if you will pardon my opinion."

"And the bills—"

"They are provided for by Mr. Pickering. He sends me an allowance for the household expenses."

"So you are to report to him, are you, as heretofore?"

I blew out a match with which I had lighted a cigar and watched the smoking end intently.

"I believe that's the idea, sir."

It is not pleasant to be under com-

"I suppose you all knew my grandfather hereabouts."

"Well, yes; you might say as we did, or you might say as we didn't. He wasn't just the sort that you got next to in a hurry. He kept pretty much to himself. He built a wall there to keep us out, but he needn't have troubled himself. We're not the kind around here to meddle, and you may be sure the summer people never bothered him."

There was a tone of resentment in his voice, and I hastened to say:

"I'm sure you're mistaken about the purposes of that wall. My grandfather was a student of architecture. It was a hobby of his. The house and wall were in the line of his experiments, and to please his whims. I hope the people of the village won't hold any hard feelings against his memory or against me. Why, the labor there must have been a good thing for the people hereabouts."

"It ought to have been," said the man gruffly; "but that's where the trouble comes in. He brought a lot of queer fellows here under contract to work for him,—Italians, or Greeks, or some sort of foreigners. They built the wall, and he had 'em at work inside for half a year. He didn't even let 'em out for air; and when they finished his job he loaded 'em on to a train one day and hauled 'em away."

"That was quite like him, I'm sure," I said, remembering with amusement my grandfather's secretive ways.

"I guess he was a crank all right," said the man conclusively.

It was evident that he did not care to establish friendly relations with the resident of Glenarm. He was about 40, light, with a yellow beard and pale blue eyes. He was dressed roughly and wore a shabby soft hat.

"Well, I suppose I'll have to assume responsibility for him and his acts," I remarked, piqued by the fellow's surlyness.

"We're not the kind around here to meddle."

pulsion,—to feel your freedom curtailed, to be conscious of espionage. I arose without a word and went into the hall.

"You may like to have the keys," said Bates, following me. "There's two for the gates in the outer wall and one for the St. Agatha's gate; they're marked, as you see. And here's the hall door key and the boat house key that you asked for last night."

After an hour spent in unpacking I went out into the grounds. I thought it well to wire Pickering of my arrival, and I set out for Annandale to send him a telegram.

I found the gate through which we had entered the grounds the night before without difficulty, and started off in an amiable state of mind. My perplexity over the mysterious shot was passing away under the benign influences of blue sky and warm sunshine. A few farm folk passed me in the highway and saluted me in the fashion of the country, inspecting my knickerbockers at the same time with frank disapproval. When I reached the lake I gazed out upon its quiet waters with satisfaction. At the foot of Annandale's main street was a dock where several small steam craft and a number of catboats were being dismantled for the winter. As I passed a man approached the dock in a skiff, landed and tied his boat. He passed at a quick pace, then turned and eyed me with rustic directness.

"Good morning!" I said. "Any ducks about?"

He paused, nodded and fell into step with me.

"No,—not enough to pay for the trouble."

"I'm sorry for that. I'd hoped to pick up a few."

"I guess you're a stranger in these parts," he remarked, eyeing me again,—my knickerbockers no doubt marking me as an alien.

"Quite so. My name is Glenarm, and I've just come."

"I thought you might be him. We've rather been expecting you here in the village. I'm John Morgan, caretaker of the resorters' houses up the lake."

We had reached the center of the village, and he left me abruptly, crossing the street to one of the shops. I continued on to the railway station, where I wrote and paid for my message. The station master inspected me carefully as I searched my pockets for change.

"You want your telegrams delivered at the house?" he asked.

"Yes, please," I answered, and he turned away to his desk of clicking instruments, without looking at me again.

It seemed wise to establish relations with the postoffice, so I made myself known to the girl who stood at the delivery window.

"You already have a box," she advised me. "There's a boy carries the mail to your house; Mr. Bates hires him."

Bates had himself given me this information, but the girl seemed to find pleasure in imparting it with a certain severity. I then bought a cake of soap at the principal drug store and purchased a package of smoking tobacco, which I did not need, at a grocery.

News of my arrival had evidently reached the villagers; I was conceded enough to imagine that my presence was probably of interest to them; but the station master, the girl at the post-office and the clerks in the shops treated me with an unmistakable cold reserve. There was a certain evenness of the chill with which they visited me, as though a particular degree of frigidity had been agreed on in advance.

MATTERS FEMININE.

NECKWEAR IN FAVOR

SMART STYLES FOR THE COMING SUMMER.

Handkerchief Stocks Will Be Largely Used—Some of the Most Dressy Kind—Bows of Embroidery and Lace.

Much of the smartest neckwear designed for spring and summer is made from handkerchiefs, and it is so simple to fashion that any needlewoman of taste can make it for herself. For a dressy stock take not quite half of a sheer handkerchief with a scalloped buttonhole edge, run several fine tucks to form the collar, which can be finished around the top and down the back with narrow Valenciennes lace. The average sized handkerchief just goes around the average neck. For the bow, or jabot, use the remainder of the handkerchief; plait the material from the center, making a sort of fan affair; after it is pressed, gather the part slightly to make it narrower, and tack it onto the collar. Another style of handkerchief which can be converted into pretty neck pieces and worn a shabby soft hat.

"Well, I suppose I'll have to assume responsibility for him and his acts," I remarked, piqued by the fellow's surlyness.

handy with a needle. Take a piece of fine lawn or sheer linen about four inches wide and eight inches long, roll a hem and whip a narrow lace on the sides. Baste the tiny plants firmly and then press them under a damp cloth. Twist a heavy thread around the center of the plaiting several times (do not try to sew it) and then cover the center with a piece of insertion to match the lace edging. These little bow affairs need not necessarily be plaited—a piece of material edged with a fulling of lace and gathered several times in the middle will give a pretty fluffy effect. Tiny pieces of all-over embroidery can be used up in the same way. Round clasp pins found at the notions counters can be sewed on to the backs of these bows, making them safer and more convenient to wear.

But the new neckwear is not confined to white or wash goods. Little bows to match the belts seem equally the thing. If one wears a blue belt with a gilt buckle, a quarter of a yard of blue ribbon four inches wide, a tiny gold buckle or two gilt buttons will make the smartest kind of neck arrangement to match. Run two rows of gathering down the ribbon, about half an inch apart, gather it up firmly and cover the shirrings with a narrow strap of ribbon, and on this use the little gold buckle of the buttons. A piece of plaid silk bound with a strip of plain silk and drawn together in the center with a piece of eyelet embroidery insertion makes a pretty addition to a plain white waist.

CASE FOR THE SCISSORS.

Here is One That Can Be Quickly Cut Out and Sewn Together.

For keeping scissors nice and bright and in good condition a little case of some kind is almost a necessity, and the case we illustrate can be quickly cut out and sewn together. It must of course be made to fit the scissors. It is intended for, and can be cut out in one piece and sewn together at the side.

If an extra little piece of material should be sewn on to cover the point of the case, it will strengthen it and prevent the points of the scissors from wearing through. Soft wash-leather is a very good material to use, as it will keep the scissors bright and in good condition. The tops of old suede gloves may also be utilized. There is a flap at the top which bends over to close the case, and fastens by means of a button.

The small diagram illustrates the shape in which the material should be cut out, the dotted line showing where it folds over, and it is sewn together on the right hand side. It is a good plan to bind the edges with ribbon of the same color as the case, ends of which might be used for fastening

Instead of the button and buttonhole. The monogram or initials of the owner worked on the flap would add to its value.

USE FOR PICTURE POST CARDS.

Pretty Decoration on the Walls of a Nursery.

A pretty and simple way of utilizing picture post cards for the decoration of the walls of a nursery is illustrated in the accompanying sketch. To suspend them from the wall in the manner shown is very little trouble, and they make a nice bright decoration, and are easily added to or changed, thus making them always a new source of interest.

The cards may be fastened on a piece of fine twine or strong cotton, or for preference, narrow ribbon by means of little pieces of stamp paper over the top of the card. They can then be hung up in large or small festoons round the room. Humorous cards mixed with views of places that perhaps the little ones have visited will always amuse them; and as they are very light in weight, they can be pinned to the wall with ordinary drawing pins, and are easily taken down when not required.

A Novel Way of Choosing Partners.

The most troublesome feature of most parties is the choosing of partners for games. This grows especially hard when the party celebrates some special occasion, such as Valentine's day.

At a last year affair each lady was presented with a small mounted picture of the one-cent size now so easily obtainable. These pictures were all different, but each referred in some way to love. No two subjects were the same. To each of the gentlemen was given the same picture, also mounted, that some one of the ladies possessed, with the exception that his had been cut up into five or six irregular pieces, and then pasted in any position on the card, which made it hard to discern just what its subject was. Of course, the gentlemen were supposed to search for the cards identical with their own, and to claim the lady holding them as their partners. This searching created a great deal of laughter and discussion, and effectually broke the ice.

CURED OF GRAVEL.

Not a Single Stone Has Formed Since Using Doan's Kidney Pills.

J. D. Daughtrey, music publisher, of Suffolk, Va., says: "During two or three years that I had kidney trouble I passed 2 1/2 pounds of gravel and sandy sediment in the urine. I haven't passed a stone since using Doan's Kidney Pills, however, and that was three years ago. I used to suffer the most acute agony during a gravel attack, and had the other usual symptoms of kidney trouble—lassitude, headache, pain in the back, urinary disorders, rheumatic pain, etc. I have a box containing 14 gravel stones that I passed, but that is not one-quarter of the whole number. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a fine kidney tonic."

OLD CANNON CAN'T BE BROKEN.

Armament of Old Craft Was Made to Last.

A good story is being told at the Mare Island navy yard concerning a San Francisco contractor who bought all the old obsolete cannon which were sold at the local yard some time ago. The cannon were all of the smooth bore kind, and in order that they might be easily handled for shipment to the city all sorts of schemes were tried to endeavor to break them with dynamite and blasting powder, but they were unsuccessful.

An electric drill machine was even set up at the yards and the cannon were drilled full of holes in order to weaken them for breaking open with wedges, but this was also unsuccessful. The cannon were then taken away and the last heard of them they were corralled in the hills near Point Richmond, where an effort was being made to break them open with dynamite again.

The cannon which proved to be so strong were among the armament of the war craft which sailed the seas in 1812.

FURIOUS HUMOR ON CHILD.

Itching, Bleeding Sores Covered Body—Nothing Helped Her—Cuticura Cures Her in Five Days.

"After my granddaughter of about seven years had been cured of the measles, she was attacked about a fortnight later by a furious itching and painful eruption all over her body, especially the upper part of it, forming watery and bleeding sores, especially under the arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We tried the Cuticura Remedies and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for the long time. TONIC FOR MOTHERS

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Are Safe and Reliable—A Favorite Household Remedy.

Motherhood may be the crowning blessing of a woman's life or it may bring grief and sorrow. Mrs. M. J. Wright, of 170 Seventh Street, Auburn, Maine, relates her experience after the birth of her daughter in 1901, as follows: "I was all run down at the time the baby came and did not improve in health rapidly after. I was pale, thin and bloodless. My stomach distressed me being full of gas all the time and my heart fluttered so that I could scarcely breathe."

"Finally I remembered that a friend had recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to me so I commenced using them. I gained in strength rapidly while the baby thrived also. When I expected my next child I started taking the pills again as a tonic and strengthener and had no such difficulty as before. I got up better and my strength came back much sooner."

A year ago last winter I had an attack of rheumatism in the hands which went from one hand to the other. The joints swelled up and were so stiff I could not move them. The pain extended up through my arms and shoulders. I felt sick enough to go to bed but did not do so. This attack lasted for several months. I tried several remedies but finally came back to using the pills which had done me so much good before and found that they benefited me almost at once. I have not been troubled since."

How Patrick Saved the Bank

An Irish Folk Tale

By Seumas MacManus

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

It's mighty wonderful if you have ever heard tell of how Patrick saved the bank.

Ye see it was this way. The Bank of Ireland was at that time owned by a man named O'Toole, who was a great grandson of King O'Toole. He was a mean fellow, who didn't take after his ancestors; and the devil tempted him to do a great deal of mischief. He was making a tremendous pile of money, all at one haul. So he employed a sea captain and sent him off on a voyage round the whole known world, to find where and how the most money was to be made, upon a speculation of any particular description.

And this sea captain sailed for the bank of Ireland and three days, returning back at the end of it, to tell his master that, in the South Sea Islands, the natives would give him one eye—if he had only one—for scallops (called mackerels), and he said that there was loads of money to be made by sending out a venture of that commodity there.

O'Toole he jumped with joy when he heard this, and he not only gathered every penny he owned himself, but likewise every penny that was invested in the bank with him; but moreover, he sent messengers east and west in Ireland, for to notify every man who had a shilling of money put by in old stockings, for to fetch it to him, and lend it to him for a year and a day, and at the end of that time he would pay them back double.

And the amount of money he took in, on loans, in three weeks, was a marvellous sight.

Well, the year and a day were round, and every man, woman and child in Ireland that had a penny invested in the Bank of Ireland walked up to Dublin, at the end of the time, to draw their money and their interest; but lo and behold ye, the sea captain and his fleet hadn't returned.

And O'Toole he asked of the people to give just ten days' sparin', and his fleet would be in. What to do he didn't know, for he was sore afraid that the fleet would not be in within the ten days.

So he sent private messengers throughout all the land, and gathered up to Dublin at once every great and clever man that could be found, and here and there offered each man his weight in gold, when the boats would come home, if they could invent some plan of saving himself and saving his bank till the arrival of the fleet.

But all of the plans put together, if they were tried, couldn't save two states on the bank.

Now there was at this time in the far parts of Donegal a poor man who went by the name of Dark Patrick, by reason that he was dark visaged, and had a black head and a black beard, and he was noted for sound sense.

Now it was on the very last day of the Bank of Ireland's sparin' that Dark Patrick arrived in Dublin, and finding it was so late, didn't even wait to look for lodgings or get a place to eat, but inquired his way to the Bank of Ireland, and to the council chamber in it.

O'Toole welcomed Dark Patrick, and told him that, as all the others had failed him, and as the worst had come to the worst, it was no harm for him to have his try.

Dark Patrick bowed gravely, and he looked at O'Toole, and satisfied himself that the fleet was, sure enough, safely on its way, and couldn't be far from the coast of Ireland now, and that it carried loads and loads of money to pay, and double pay, all claims. And when he was contented on this point, he asked O'Toole what was the most money, in gold and silver, he could, by any means, obtain, borrow, or in any ways come honestly by.

O'Toole said that he owed a hundred thousand pounds, and that the most money he could now obtain, borrow, or pay off his debt, would be £1,000.

"What," says Dark Patrick, says he, proceeding to the window, and looking at the houses opposite, "what is that establishment that I see opposite me?"

"That establishment," says O'Toole, says he, "is a manufactory of horny buttons."

"Well an' good," says Dark Patrick, "I now want you to do three things."

"Name them," says O'Toole.

"They are," says Dark Patrick, "in the first place, you'll hire—at any money—for this day that manufactory opposite, and have it completely cleared out instantaneously at once 50 trustworthy men, with picks and shovels, whom you can rely upon to dig out the ten herring barrels, get me ten herring barrels. Can you do all these things?" says Dark Patrick.

O'Toole could red with himself for a minute, and then he says desperately: "I'm prepared to do as you direct."

At short time O'Toole had engaged the manufactory opposite and turned it inside out. He had brought Dark Patrick the 50 men with the 50 picks and shovels, and the ten herring barrels, and he stood by to see what in the name of wonder the next move was going to be.

"Now," said Dark Patrick, says he, "I want you to start 20 of these men in the cellar of this bank, and 20 more in the cellar of the manufactory opposite, working for life and death, cutting a passage under the street from the one cellar to the other cellar, and they are to fill the ten barrels to within half an inch of the lip with the clay they take out. The thousand pounds in gold and silver, and the other ten men," says he, "is to come with me."

Then across the street he started, and while the men in the cellars below were working like the fury, cutting their way under the street from house to house, Dark Patrick got the other ten men to start the fires in the factory, and he got ten frying pans and put them on the fires, and he got hammers and anvils, and he set them on a bench that ran along the window looking into the street.

On the frying pans he emptied the bags of gold and silver, making the men blow the bellows like murder till the coals were red hot, and he then started them carrying the frying pans, full of coals, to the bench and beating lightly, with little hammers, opening the windows at the same time so that the noise would get properly into the street—where the crowd now was gathering at a tremendous rate in front of the bank, and instructing the beaters that they were to make all the clatter and clang and jingle that they could.

The passage underneath the street was soon completed. Then ten herring barrels filled within an inch of lip were fetched up; they were filled up with a couple of layers of hot coals—some of the barrels with gold coins and others of them with silver—and while some of the men went on with the frying of the coals, and some with the beating upon the anvils at the window, the remainder were started in pairs, with hand sticks, to carry the barrels as fast as they could across the street to the bank.

And as fast as the men entered the bank with the barrels of money they carried them back just as fast as the underground passage, so that when the last barrel was going in of the bank door the first was coming out again out of the door of the manufactory, and there was one continual string of barrels of fresh gold and silver.

The best strings for violins are of Italian make and are from the intestines of spring lambs, killed in September. The process of drying and bleaching of the woods and strings by the hot Italian sun, rather than by the artificial method used in other countries, accounts in a great measure for the superior quality of both materials. This intense heat was also the reason for the slow distillation of the oils used by the Italian makers, which always remained at a high temperature, and the varnish, slowly soaking into the woods of the violins beneath the heat of those Italian summers, produced, in part, the mellowness of tone that gives to a Cremona instrument its value, after a lapse of 200 or more years.—March Circle.

Autographs in Demand.

At the present time the greatest demand is for autographs of the English literary celebrities, some of which bring thousands of dollars. Keats and Shelley command such high prices that they sell best abroad, where there are more collections. In London, Berlin and Paris there are continual autograph sales during the season.—The Circle.

A FRIENDLY GROCER.

Dropped a Valuable Hint About Coffee.

"For about eight years," writes a Mich. woman, "I suffered from nervousness—part of the time down in bed with nervous prostration.

"Sometimes I would get numb and it would be almost impossible for me to speak for a spell. At others, I would have severe bilious attacks, and my heart would flutter painfully when I would walk fast or sweep.

"I have taken enough medicine to start a small drug store, without any benefit. One evening our grocer was asking husband how I was and he urged that I quit coffee and use Postum, so he brought home a pkg. and I made it according to directions and we were both delighted with it.

"So we quit coffee altogether and used only Postum. I began to get better in a month's time and look like another person, the color came back to my cheeks, I began to sleep well, my appetite was good and I commenced to take on flesh and become interested in everything about the house.

"Finally I was able to do all my own work without the least sign of my old trouble. I am so thankful for the little book, 'The Road to Wellville,' I have done me so much good. I haven't taken medicine of any kind for six months and don't need any.

"A friend of ours who did not like Postum as she made it, liked mine, and when she learned to boil it long enough, her's was as good as mine. It's easy if you follow directions." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, 'The Road to Wellville,' in pkgs. "There's a reason."

One of the Important Duties of Physicians and the Well-Informed of the World is to learn as to the relative standing and reliability of the leading manufacturers of medicinal agents, as the most eminent physicians are the most careful as to the uniform quality and perfect purity of remedies prescribed by them, and it is well known to physicians and the Well-Informed generally that the California Fig Syrup Co., by reason of its correct methods and perfect equipment and the ethical character of its product has attained to the high standing in scientific and commercial circles which is accorded to successful and reliable houses only, and, therefore, that the name of the Company has become a guarantee of the excellence of its remedy.

TRUTH AND QUALITY

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing, therefore we wish to call the attention of all who would enjoy good health, with its blessings, to the fact that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and the use of medicines dispensed with generally to great advantage, but as in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time, the California Fig Syrup Co. feels that it is alike important to present truthfully the subject and to supply the one perfect laxative remedy which has won the approval of physicians and the world-wide acceptance of the Well-Informed because of the excellence of the combination, known to all, and the original method of manufacture, which is known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. and the same heretofore known by the name—Syrup of Figs—which has given satisfaction to millions. The genuine is for sale by all leading druggists throughout the United States in original packages of one size only, the regular price of which is fifty cents per bottle.

Every bottle is sold under the general guarantee of the Company, filed with the Secretary of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., that the remedy is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1906.

MEN ADMIRE

a pretty face, a good figure, but sooner or later learn that the healthy, happy, contented woman is most of all to be admired.

Women troubled with fainting spells, irregularities, nervous irritability, backache, the "blues," and those dreadful dragging sensations, cannot hope to be happy or popular, and advancement in either home, business or social life is impossible.

The cause of these troubles, however, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs. It acts at once upon the organ afflicted and the nerve centers, dispelling effectually all those distressing symptoms. No other medicine in the country has received such unqualified endorsement or has such a record of cures of female ills as has

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Miss Emma Runtzler, of 631 State St., Schenectady, N. Y., writes:—"For a long time I was troubled with weakness which seemed to drain all my strength away. I had dull headaches, was nervous, irritable, and all worn out. Chancing to read one of your advertisements of a case similar to mine cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I decided to try it and I cannot express my gratitude for the benefit received. I am entirely well and feel like a new person."

Magnetic Pole Not Stationary.
Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, in Paris, where he has been lionized, made a Commander of the Legion of Honor and brought before various scientific bodies. In his interesting talks he tells much about his experiences in the polar region, including his discovery of the northwest passage, through which he sailed, although that was a secondary consideration. Amundsen spent three years in the north, 19 months of which were devoted to making careful observations, day and night, of the magnetic pole. He finds that the pole is not stationary, but while he has a vast amount of data on hand the exact results have not yet been completely figured out. At all events, says the Troy Times, new scientific knowledge has been gained which will be of much value to the world, even if the northwest passage shall prove impracticable for ordinary commercial purposes. And if the pole is an oscillating point there may be an explanation as to the failure of so many seekers to find that elusive object.

Getting the First Thousand.
Get the first $1,000. After that money making is easy. This is the old-time sage advice of the hard-headed, self-made man. That axiom has set many men to saving. They fix upon that sum as the glittering, far-off herald of a fortune some time to be made. To a man on a small salary, say out of which something can be saved weekly without too much deprivation—the advice is good. There is something in it that acts as a stimulus to economy, declares the Denver Republican. And who will deny that economy is a good thing or that any truth that lights the way to it should not be known? Many men, therefore, have been buoyed up in their economies by the belief that the first $1,000 is the hardest to get, and that afterward all the rest would be easy and the good things of the world that follow a bounteous supply of money would be within easy reach.

A hundred square miles of country around Mount Kosciuszko, one of the highest peaks of the Australian Alps, have been proclaimed a reserve by the government, with a view to formation of a national park. "Freedom shrieked when Kosciuszko fell," according to the poet Campbell, and this peak was so named by a brother Polish patriot, the late Count de Strzelecki, a political refugee, who spent several years in Australia, and did some valuable exploring and geological work. He was probably the first discoverer of gold in Australia, but at the request of the local government, which feared an outbreak of the convict population if the news became known, he made no public announcement of the fact. He spent the closing years of his life in London, and was knighted by Queen Victoria.

Although the "eternal-city" figures so extensively in ancient and modern history, it has been the capital of Italy for less than 50 years, a fact that will probably surprise many persons. The Italian government dates the acquisition of Rome as the capital city from March 27, 1861, and is preparing to observe the semi-centennial anniversary in 1911. One of the projects in contemplation in connection with the observance is to create a new port which will be Rome's exit to the sea. The idea is to make this port one of the largest and best equipped in the world. Italy is growing as a commercial war, and Rome itself is getting into the swing of modern trade. The new and improved facilities no doubt will be of much importance in promoting the material interests of the nation and city.

It will certainly be news to most people, says the London Globe, that New York is a short cut for telegrams between London and Paris and London and Berlin. However, the fact is vouched for. The messages are received at an agreed address in New York and are immediately passed on for London, Paris or Berlin, as the case may be. The reason for this amazing roundabout to save time is curious. New York time being about six hours behind European time, its wire connections with Europe are almost unoccupied during the London forenoon, while during the same time European wires are oft congested. Via New York, therefore, is a "short cut," but an expensive one.

The telegraph messenger boys over in New York who are worried because a girl has been hired by a telegraph company to deliver dispatches in Hoboken, may be comforted. Boston had a supply of telegraph messenger girls a few years ago, but they didn't last.

Finding that stone-breaking and oakum-picking were not profitable enough, the authorities of Horsham, England, decided to put able-bodied paupers to work at grinding corn.

DIVISION OF SCHOOL MONEY IS SAID TO BE ON WRONG BASIS.

BABE BORN IN SNOWBANK
Horse Bit Off Man's Ear—Things That Have Happened During the Past Few Days.

A New Basis Asked.
The department of public instruction is urging the passage of a bill now before the legislature providing for a division according to the number of teachers employed rather than the number of pupils, as at present. A statement issued says:

"The present law limits the use of the school interest money to the payment of teachers' wages and there are 1,300 districts in the state which receive more money from this fund than is used for teachers' wages, and the balance tied up at the end of the year in the treasuries of these districts amounts to over $300,000.

"At the same time there are 1,000 districts in the state with less than 15 children, and 850 districts in the state unable to maintain school for more than six months. If this surplus could be distributed to these small districts the state would be doing its full duty toward the education of all the children. The present system of apportionment makes it impossible to relieve the people in the sparsely settled and poorer portions of the state.

The following conclusions are drawn from statistics which are quoted in the statement:

"Nearly 1,300 districts receive more primary money than they need.

"That 2,600 districts received less than they need for teachers' wages.

"The cost of schools does not depend upon the number of children, therefore, the number of children is an unfair basis for state aid."

A Pitiful Story.
Miss Britta Hautigari, aged 23, a Finn girl who has been in this country but three months and can speak no English, was arrested at Painesdale on the charge of infanticide, it being alleged that she was the mother of the babe found dead in a pile of rubbish near the business part of Hancock. The girl confessed and told a most pitiful tale. She said she recently secured employment in the home of a Hancock family, but on the very night that she was delivered of the child she had been turned out of the house into the cold and the babe was born in a snowbank. When the friendless mother became conscious of her circumstances she says the babe was dead from cold and exposure and she wrapped the body in some old clothes she found and putting it in an old basket she picked up she left it on the pile of debris where it was found.

Lost an Ear.
Luke Manning, of Grand Rapids, was the victim of a most peculiar and painful accident Saturday morning. He went to his barn to take care of his horses, and when he entered the stall he found one lying down. As he passed between the two, one of them reached out and bit off his ear and dropped it on the ground. Manning quickly picked it up and rushed for the doctor, holding the severed member in his hand. The ear was taken off as cleanly as it would have been if an operation had been done on a surgeon's knife. An attempt is being made to graft it to his head again.

Missing Canoeists.
The probable drowning of two of Bay City's best known people has caused a search for the bodies that had not proved successful up to Sunday. Roser Cathcart, a young student, Saginaw Canoe club at Saginaw, and was the last seen of them, and when they did not reach the home city that night a search revealed their overturned canoe floating in the river. Every effort is being made to locate their bodies. Mr. Wheeler is the wife of Maurice Wheeler, a bookkeeper for John Godkin, lumberman. Young Cathcart is a cousin of Mr. Wheeler.

Tea Pot Exploded.
Heating tea in an air-tight syrup can was disastrous to Herbert Mohart, of Grand Rapids. Mohart was at work at the Lewis mill and carried his lunch. He set the syrup can on the stove to heat the tea. When he thought it was near the boiling point, he took a nail and pried on the cover. Imprisoned steam shot the cover into the air and a large quantity of the liquid struck Mohart in the face. Dr. Spooner fears the man's sight has been destroyed. Mohart's face is swollen beyond recognition. Mohart's mother, who lives with him, is almost helpless as the result of breaking her arm.

The University Tax.
The senate and house committees on the university will accord a hearing soon to a pleader of unusual dignity, when President J. B. Angell, of Ann Arbor, will come to ask that the university tax be doubled, that is, raised from the present one-quarter mill on each $1,000 of total valuation to one-half a mill, making a total per year of about $70,000.

Mrs. Hiram K. Cooper, of Oxford, killed her largest and finest rooster, and when preparing it for dinner found in its gizzard 27 pins.

As seven glasses of beer was no load for them at all, two Saginaw young men claim they were dragged when they came to Midland to have a good time. They awoke next morning in a barn minus cash and jewelry.

WOMAN'S SUSPICIOUS DEATH IN LANSING REVIVES OLD STORY.

RECLUSE LOST FORTUNE

Major and Minor Happenings in the State During the Past Few Days Briefly Told.

Darline Herney.

The sudden death of Darline Herney, formerly of Hastings and Charlotte, but later from Fowlerville, aroused the suspicions of the Lansing coroner and caused an investigation. The woman had been living in Lansing but three weeks. She was taken with fainting spells Tuesday night and died Wednesday in rooms over a restaurant.

Before the death was reported a policeman discovered the body being removed by a rear door, and when he asked questions he was given no satisfaction. The chief of police then ordered an investigation. An autopsy showed that death was due to rupture of a cystic tumor.

Charlotte dispatches recall that Darline Herney was the woman who was brought prominently into public notice there about a year ago by the story of Ed. Dyer, her sweetheart, that she had shot him while he was sleeping in the office of a local livery barn. Miss Herney was arrested by Sheriff Sloan, but was later released, and Dyer confessed that he had shot himself. Dyer never returned to Charlotte, going back to his former home in Indiana from the University hospital, where he remained several weeks. The Herney woman was married to a man by the name of Blakely during her residence in Lansing, but they separated.

Two Were Killed.

Numerous farm houses and barns were destroyed by the electric storm which swept a portion of Ottawa county Tuesday. Mrs. Clyde Welton, in Robinson township, 15 miles from Grand Haven, was killed by lightning. She was found by her husband about two hours later lying dead on the floor. Two little children were on the floor trying to awaken their mother. A six-month-old babe in a crib was severely shocked. During the period between the shock and finding of the body the house was burning and it was with difficulty that Mr. Welton rescued his children and wife's body from the blazing dwelling.

During a severe electrical storm which passed over Centerville J. Maxwell Major, a farmer living one mile south of that place, was struck by lightning and instantly killed. Mr. Major was 70 years old.

Homestead Lands.

Land Commissioner Rose reports that during the five years the present tax homestead law has been in effect his department has sold 73,721 acres of tax homestead lands, from which $860,340 was realized. About three-quarters of this sum, says Mr. Rose, was returned to the counties for local taxes.

The statement has been prepared in view of proposed amendatory legislation, the commissioner favoring no important changes. He has consented to a provision that sales of tax homestead lands shall be held in the counties where the land is located, but believes it is better to have them at the land office, as at present.

Recluse Copland Dead.

J. V. Copland was found dead in the upper rooms of his home near Benton Harbor. The cause of death is not known. Persons living below Copland's room say they heard a commotion upstairs and when they investigated found him on the floor gasping for breath. It is said that Copland carried considerable life insurance. Papers found in Copland's room show that he was a literary genius, and that he had lost a fortune in speculating and had retired to the country to recuperate. He held a large tract of land near Ludington, and was a large stockholder in a paying western mine.

Mrs. Kruger's Victim.

Frank Van Houten, aged 34, who died in Cheboygan as a result of a shot fired by Mrs. Jessie Kruger, has been identified as a resident of Detroit and was in the employ of the Michigan Contracting Co., of Detroit, and said to have had two sisters living there. His relatives cannot be located, however, and his remains are in Little's undertaking rooms while efforts are being made to find his friends. He was working in the woods for the Michigan Contracting Co. and in the summer was employed in Detroit.

Ice Going.

The Straits ice fields have decreased greatly the past few days. In many places large areas of ice are so weak that a man could not cross.

The lake east of Mackinac is again filled with broken ice fields, but the channel between Mackinac Island and Bois Blanc remains open. To the west and in the south passage the ice fields still remain unbroken, but is badly rotted. From present indications boats will have no difficulty in passing through the straits early in April.

Isaac H. Lewis, a Metamora pioneer, died of Bright's disease, after a short illness. He leaves a wife and nine children.

The body of Mrs. Charles Baker, Sr., aged 77, was carried to the grave by her six grandsons. She was a pioneer of Burton township and is survived by her husband and 12 children.

Gov. Warner had just 12 hours grace in which to sign the bill making the charter amendments a law. Otherwise Battle Creek could not have voted this spring on raising the mayor's salary to $500, the aldermen's to $300 and putting the justices on a salary.

Lightning struck a barn in which William Kimes, a Hesperia farmer, had driven a load of hay. The hay ignited, and but for Fred Mansfield, the owner of the barn, who drove horses and Kimes would have perished. Kimes was stunned by the flash and didn't remember a thing.

Two Saginaw boys, A. C. Stuart and E. W. Wisner, are to appear at the Jamestown exposition in an aerial bicycle act, their contract calling for seven months' work. Their act is one of two free attractions, the other being Knabenshue's airship. Their stunt is a double diving act, riding down an inclined plane, leaping a gap and a dive into a tank of water.

The friends of Nancy Flood, who is now serving a life sentence in the Detroit house of correction for killing John London, are about to reopen the famous case. Her attorney has secured new facts and data and will present these to the pardon board.

"Grandma" Sarah Kirk Austin, of Vermontville, is 104 years old. Her birthday, which has just passed, was observed by nearly the whole village. A big reception was given in her honor. She is not obliged to wear glasses to read. Her father was a shipbuilder in New Barbadoes, N. J., where she was born. She was married 81 years ago.

STRANGE CASE.

Brady, the Auto-Hypnotized Boy Is Recovering.

The condition of the 17-year-old Brady boy, the victim of auto-hypnotism, at St. Mary's hospital, took a sudden change for the better today, when the lad suddenly opened his eyes, sat up in bed and recognized his mother, and said, "Mother, where have you been all the time?"

He spoke a few other words incoherently and then went to sleep again. For several days he shown signs of improvement, and not since Sunday has he uttered the old exclamation, "I am dead."

His body is losing some of the rigidity of his remarkable catleptic state, but he is still motionless, with every appearance of death. The pulse and respiration are still so faint that they can scarcely be detected. When given food or treatment he is apparently wholly unconscious of what is going on, the liquid nourishment being poured down his throat.

Dr. Bradley is receiving letters of inquiry from medical men and hospitals all over the country and numerous doctors from Michigan towns have come there to see the patient. The case is attracting very wide attention and will be discussed at length by Dr. Bradley in medical publications within a short time. The doctors are still at a loss for an explanation of the cause of the trouble save that the boy hypnotized himself while experiencing the delusion that his room was haunted by a woman.

Compton Arraigned.

Silas Compton, the aged blacksmith accused by John Butcher, who has served 14 years in Jackson prison, of the murder of Miser William Lampman, of Grand Ledge, in November, 1892, was arraigned immediately upon his arrival in Charlotte. He was taken before Justice J. C. Nichols and was bound over to the April term of circuit court, making the fourth murder trial on call for that term. The Tubbs brothers are out on bail. Mrs. Del McBride is in custody.

Compton proves to be an agreeable old fellow and at once became popular with the other prisoners. He was willing to talk of his own case and said:

"I am not guilty and don't propose to let John Butcher fasten the crime on me and step out of prison himself, a free man. I cannot say as much about the matter now as I would like to, but before the trial of the case is concluded, I am certain that every one will be satisfied that I had nothing to do with the crime. I see Butcher says that we drove to the house together and that I did the killing while he was out in the yard watching a neighbor, at my suggestion."

STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

Mrs. Catherine Hallock, aged 101, a pioneer of the war, died in Galesburg this week.

Henry Mortimer, aged 60, of Flint, was kicked in the head by a horse he was leading to water and killed.

Gov. Warner has allowed a requisition to issue for Norma Burns, charged with larceny of jewelry at Battle Creek, and under arrest at Omaha, Neb.

Lightning overturned the stove and stirred up the dishes on the table at the home of W. T. Ross, in Jasper township, Monday night. Mr. Ross saved the house from burning.

Harry Service, a young factory employe, drove over to Amy, got into a row and "licked" five men, among them Deputy Sheriff Frank Smith. Service was fined $5 for each man he punished.

Reports from the fruit belt are very favorable to an abundant crop of fruit this year. Many trees which were thought to be killed are showing signs of life as the sap-mounts higher, and are loaded with buds.

Scores of bridges are washed away and numerous washouts are reported along the railroads in the "Thumb" as a result of the equinoctial storm, which raged for 48 hours. Rural mail carriers are unable to get through the country.

Wm. Draves, of Cumberland, Md., examined the sand on his brother's farm in Midland and says it contains 85 per cent of glassmaking qualities, or twice that of Cumberland sand. A local company to manufacture glass is being talked of.

Death has taken four members of the family of John Lansing, of Lapeer, within one year, and a son, John, Jr., is dying with dropsy. The father and one daughter are all that is left.

Saginaw public schools are to try the experiment of a school physician, and Dr. Fiske Wood has been appointed to officiate for the balance of the school year.

Lightning struck a barn in which William Kimes, a Hesperia farmer, had driven a load of hay. The hay ignited, and but for Fred Mansfield, the owner of the barn, who drove horses and Kimes would have perished. Kimes was stunned by the flash and didn't remember a thing.

Two Saginaw boys, A. C. Stuart and E. W. Wisner, are to appear at the Jamestown exposition in an aerial bicycle act, their contract calling for seven months' work. Their act is one of two free attractions, the other being Knabenshue's airship. Their stunt is a double diving act, riding down an inclined plane, leaping a gap and a dive into a tank of water.

The friends of Nancy Flood, who is now serving a life sentence in the Detroit house of correction for killing John London, are about to reopen the famous case. Her attorney has secured new facts and data and will present these to the pardon board.

"Grandma" Sarah Kirk Austin, of Vermontville, is 104 years old. Her birthday, which has just passed, was observed by nearly the whole village. A big reception was given in her honor. EXAMINED BY JEROME

THAW CROSS - EXAMINED WITH RESULTS FAVORABLE TO HIMSELF.

EXAMINATION NOT HARD.

Work of the Commission Not Finished as Jerome's Experts Are to Be Heard.

On the Stand Three Hours.

The examination of Harry K. Thaw by the commission which is to decide whether or not he is now able to rationally advise with his counsel, was finished. Thaw was on the stand for over three hours and during that time he was not only questioned by the members of the commission, but by District Attorney Jerome. As on Thursday, Thaw's examination was in private, only the three commissioners, Dan McClure, Peter B. Olney and Dr. Putzel, District Attorney Jerome, his assistant, Mr. Garvan, the lawyers for the defense and officers of the court, being present.

From what could be learned from those who attended Thaw's private examination, he went through the ordeal very well. Even Mr. Jerome's cross-examination, which lasted about three-quarters of an hour, did not hurt Thaw to any extent. It was not expected that the commission would allow Mr. Jerome to get at Thaw, and it had been hinted that if he did, Thaw would appear in a very different light before the commission.

As it turned out, it was said that Thaw carried himself well and showed little or no indication that he was not possessed of his mental faculties, at least so far as anything could be judged from his answers.

Mr. Jerome's examination was not a severe one. He did not go at Thaw aggressively or in any way to anger him or make him lose his temper. He stood very close to Thaw and the examination was carried on in something of a conversational tone. Thaw showed no bitterness towards Mr. Jerome, nor resented anything he did or any questions he asked.

For one thing, Mr. Jerome was not allowed to ask Thaw anything about delusions he had at the time he killed White. He was also barred from inquiring into Thaw's belief that there was a conspiracy on the part of the district attorney and influential friends of White to railroad him to an insane asylum. The commission ruled that it had nothing to do with Thaw's condition at the time he killed White.

DANGER.

The Impending Strike of Railroad Men May Be Settled.

So great has become the danger

The Chelsea Standard-Herald

An independent local newspaper published every Thursday afternoon from its office in the Standard building, Chelsea, Michigan.

BY G. C. STIMSON.

Terms:—$1.00 per year; six months, fifty cents; three months, twenty-five cents. Advertising rates reasonable and made known on application.

Entered as second-class matter, January 11, 1906, at the postoffice at Chelsea, Michigan, under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

SYLVAN is the banner single voting precinct in the lower peninsular of Michigan.

THE re-election of Supervisor Hummel by 214 majority over Bacon is the greatest victory that Mr. Hummel has ever won in this township.

ALTHOUGH Sylvan was shamefully treated by the convention that nominated the county ticket voted on Monday, she went home and rolled up the Republican majority that saved the county to the Republicans.

Now, notwithstanding Sylvan gives Messrs. Essery and Fischer majorities larger than those given any candidates on any ticket in any one precinct in the whole State of Michigan, the official organ of the Republican county officials continues to abuse Sylvan and her citizens, as it has done almost daily for the past eighteen months. And for what? Simply loyalty to the Republican party.

If the gentlemen who furnish the financial lungs for that sheet cannot control their spleen, created by the comparison of our loyalty with their impotence and non-influence in their own precincts, but allow it to ooze out through the pores of that to the edification of our friends, the enemy, then the Republicans of Sylvan will no longer oppress said gentlemen with their favors, and so remove the cause of their outbursts which only ensure to the benefit of the Democratic party.

Yes. 100,000 times each day. Does it send out good blood or bad blood? You know, for good blood is good health; bad blood, bad health. And you know precisely what to take for bad blood—Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Doctors have endorsed it for 60 years.

One frequent cause of bad blood is a sluggish liver. This produces constipation. Poisonous substances are then absorbed into the blood, instead of being removed from the body daily as nature intended. Keep the bowels open with Ayer's Pills, liver pills. All vegetable.

PINKIE PRIM

God Bless Our Home

No Cross No Crown

With very many mottoes
Was Pinkie Prim, "acquaint."
"God bless our home," "No cross, no crown"
But Pinkie said, "There ain't"

"One motto that I know of,
Applies to Uncle Tim.
I've perforated cardboard; I'll Embroider one for him!"

She studied, and she studied,
Until she cried in glee,
"I've heard of Special Guidance; and A bachelor is he!"

She worked it out in zephyrs,
And when "Rich Uncle" came,
She handed him the motto, in
A very pretty frame.

When Uncle took the motto,
He bent his gaze to see;
And read this: "Special Guidance
For Bachelors." "That's me!"

Said Uncle Tim, contritely,
"Believe I'll take a wife,
To be my "Special Guidance" through
What should be "Useful Life."
