THE PRIMARY ELECTION.

A VERY LIGHT VOTE.

Sylvan Cast the Lightest Vote in Many Years on Tuesday - But Very Interest Taken by the Electors.

But very little interest was taken by electors of Sylvan in the primary election Tuesday. The farmers and a large majority of the workmen remained away from the voting place. The vote was probably the lightest one cast in the township for many years past, yet Sylvan polled more votes than any other precinct in this county.

Throughout Washtenaw county the returns indicate a very light vote, and with possibly a few exceptions, but little attention was given to the election by the electors over the entire state.

The result in Sylvan was as follows: Whole number of votes 99, of which 93 were republican and 6 democratic. Three of the number were not properly marked.

Daniel P. Sagendorph, r.....35
John F. Lawrence, r.....57
John C. Sharp, r.....16
Lewis F. Wood, r.....3
John K. Campbell, r.....15
Charles J. DeLand, r.....23
F. W. McKinzie, r.....3
Irving R. Rich, r.....1
John H. Kingsley, r.....25
John A. Fairlie, r.....36
E. P. Allen, r.....59
Frank Maynard, d.....3
Martid J. Cavanaugh, d.....8

The complete returns from Washtenaw and Jackson counties are not all in, but from present indications, the republican nominees will be Charles J. DeLand, of Jackson, John A. Fairlie and John F. Lawrence, of Ann Arbor. The democrat nominees are Frank Maynard, of Jackson and M. J. Cavanaugh, of Ann Arbor.

ALL LOSSES ADJUSTED.

Directors of German Mutual Fire Insurance Co. Met and Adjusted Losses Last Saturday.

The directors of the German Mutual Fire Insurance Co. met Saturday afternoon, in the German-American Savings Bank of Ann Arbor, and adjusted losses all by lightning, amounting to $101,071, as follows:

Fred Bruestle, Sharon, barn and contents, $653.05.
John Bruestle produce in same barn, $153.25.
Milton Steffe, Northfield, granary, damaged, $16.45.
John G. Huehl, Freedom, sheep killed, $18.50.
Herman Haas, Freedom, colt killed, $150.00.
Chris. Schlee, Lodi, windmill damaged, $3.46.
George Rothfuss, Sharon, hog killed, $10.00.
Fred Lambarth, Lodi, barn damaged, $6.00.

The loss on the Geo. Wagner barn in Scio was not adjusted but was permitted to go over to the next meeting. The fact that every loss adjusted was occasioned by lightning naturally caused some comment. Not one of the buildings injured was protected by lightning rods and the statement was general that no losses had been known to occur by the directors where buildings were thus protected.

A Good Thing, But Dormant.

Michigan has a law which provides that the highway commissioner may require twenty-five per cent of each person's highway tax to be paid in money to be used to plant and care for trees along the roadside. Also that any person may require twenty-five cents for each tree planted along the highway, provided that sum be not more than twenty-five per cent of his highway tax. Also that each town ship commissioner may himself plant fifty trees this year, fifty next year, and so on till all roads in the township are planted.

This law further provides that any person bringing to the roadside a living stream for the use of man and beast shall receive ten dollars for the first year's work, and five dollars for each year in which it is kept in order. If those commissioners had done their duty for the past ten years, what a Michigan we would have today! And if we do our duty, what a state we may have in the next ten years!—Ex.

A Pleasant Reunion.

Last Sunday, August 11th, was a day that will long be remembered by all who were present. Sixty-two relatives and friends met at that day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. ## BIRTHDAY GATHERING.

CAVANAUGH LAKE FRIDAY.

The members of the Old People's Home by mutual agreement united the anniversary of their births, and last Friday was chosen as the common birthday of all and every member of the home enjoyed a day's outing as guests of Rev. and Mrs. Seth Reed at the Glazier cottage, Cavanaugh Lake.

O. C. Burkhardt and others supplied conveyances for the members of the home and a number of the citizens of Chelsea were also in attendance and enjoyed the day with the party.

The Rev. J. I. Nickerson and family, of Mt. Clemens, Revs. Thos. Holmes, T. D. Denman and A. A. Schoen were present.

After a picnic dinner all with musical talent turned in and rendered a fine picnic program. Mrs. J. T. Woods and Miss Cora Nickerson delivered a song. Miss McLean a little Miss from Ontario, recited and sang Scotch pieces and airs in a charming manner.

Harold Glazier took the party for a boat ride. It was the first time many of them were ever in a gasoline launch.

Mrs. Mary A. Durand.

Miss Mary A. Field was born at Seneca Falls, New York, on the 12th of October, 1818. On the 27th of February, 1839, she was married to Stephen A. Easton. They made their home on a farm in the town of Seneca Falls, where they enjoyed a happy and prosperous life until March 8, 1873, when Mr. Easton passed through the veil that separates the present from the future life. The fruit of this marriage was three children—a son, who died in childhood, and two daughters; Emma Louise (Mrs. George Mitchell), who is still living, and Ida Isabel (Mrs. Thomas Godkin), who passed away two years ago.

On December 15, 1876, Mrs. Easton was married to Joseph H. Durand, of this place, and this has been her home since that time. Mr. Durand died in 1887. In 1897 her daughter, Mrs. Mitchell, with her husband, removed from their farm in Lima to Chelsea, under whose faithful, loving care Mrs. Durand spent the remnant of her days, which was completed on Thursday, August 8, 1907, when she passed without a struggle through the valley of the shadow of death, fearing no evil, into the life eternal, having numbered in this life 88 years, 9 months, and 27 days.

Early in life Mrs. Durand experienced conversion and became a member of the Presbyterian church. In this experience there were implanted in her soul principles of truth and righteousness that formed the basis of a worthy and admirable character during all her protracted years. During the thirty years that she has resided in Chelsea, she has never had a "falling out" with a neighbor, and the uniform kindness shown her by her neighbors during the few days of her final sickness, in the preparations for her burial, and the flowers that covered the casket, were practical testimonials of the esteem in which she was held by those who knew her best; for which, as well as for the appropriate hymns so beautifully rendered at the funeral services, her daughter and son-in-law are very grateful.

Funeral services were held at her late home Sunday afternoon, at which Rev. Dr. Holmes delivered a very appropriate discourse from 2 Tim. 4:7, 8; and her remains were deposited in Oak Grove cemetery. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." **

The Limit of Life.

The most eminent medical scientists are unanimous in the conclusion that the generally accepted limitation of human life is many years below the attainment possible, with the advanced knowledge of which the race is now possessed. The critical period, that determines its duration, seems to be between 50 and 60; the proper care of the body during this decade cannot be too strongly urged; carelessness then being fatal to longevity. Nature's best helper after 50 is Electric Bitters, the scientific tonic medicine that revitalizes every organ of the body. Guaranteed at Freeman & Cummings Co. 50c.

The Stabler heirs will sell at public auction at the Stabler residence on south Main street, Chelsea, on Saturday afternoon, August 17th, commencing at 1 o'clock, household goods, consisting of stoves, bedroom suits, bedding, sewing machine, carpets, tables, chairs and other small articles. E. W. Daniels, auctioneer.

It flows like electricity through your veins; it does the work. If you are wasting away, take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents. Tea or Tablets, Freeman & Cummings Co.

The greatest catch of fish for this season is reported by D. R. Morford and W. J. For, who were at Four Mile Lake one day this week "just watching the cork bob." It is rumored that it required a farm team to draw the great number of fish they caught to their respective homes.

The Misses Carrie Bareis, of Lima, and Carrie and Sarah Taylor, of Dexter, left Tuesday for a month's visit with friends in New York City, Philadelphia, Washington, D. C., Norfolk, Va., and Buffalo.

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Author of "THE MAIN CHANCE," "ZELDA DAMEON," Etc.

Copyright 1906 by Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Good! but this is just wall here—earth with a layer of bricks and a thin coat of cement. A nice job it must have been to do the work,—and it cost the price of a tiger hunt," I grumbled.

"Take heart, lad, and listen," and Larry began pounding the wall with a hammer, exactly under the north gatepost. "We had sounded everything in and about the house until the process bored me.

"Hurry up and get through with it," I jerked impatiently, holding the lantern at the level of his head. "It was sharply cold under the posts and I was anxious to prove the worthlessness of his idea and be done.

"Thump! thump!"

"There's a place here that sounds a trifle off the key. You try it."

I snatched the hammer and repeated the soundings.

"Thump! thump!"

There was a space about four feet square in the wall that certainly gave forth a hollow sound.

"Stand back!" exclaimed Larry eagerly. "Here goes with the ax."

He struck into the wall sharply and the cement chipped off in rough pieces, disclosing bricks beneath. Larry paused when he had uncovered a foot of the inner layer, and examined the surface.

"They're loose—these bricks are loose, and there's something beside earth behind them!"

The bricks were set up without mortar, and I plucked them out and rapped with my knuckles on a wooden surface.

Even Larry grew excited as we flung the bricks out into the tunnel.

"Ah, lad," he said, "the old gentleman had a way with him—he had a way with him!" A brick dropped on his foot and he howled in pain.

"Bless the old gentleman's heart! He made it as easy for us as he could. Now, for the Glenarm millions,—red money all piled up for the ease of counting it,—a thousand pounds in every pile."

"Don't be a fool, Larry," I coughed at him, for the brick dust and the smoke of Larry's pipe made breathing difficult.

"That's all the loose bricks,—bring the lantern closer,"—and we peered through the aperture upon a wooden door, in which strips of iron were deep-set. It was fastened with a padlock and Larry reached down for the ax.

"Wait!" I called, drawing closer with the lantern. "What's this?"

The wood of the door was fresh and white, but burned deep on the surface, in this order, were the words:

The Door of Bewilderment

"There are dead men inside, I dare say! Here, my lad, it's not for me to turn loose the skeletons!"—and Larry stood aside while I swung the ax and brought it down with a crash on the padlock. It was of no flimsy stuff and the remaining bricks cramped me, but half a dozen blows broke it off.

"The house of a thousand ghosts," chanted Larry, as I pushed the door open, crawled through and dropped down inside.

Whatever the place was it had a floor and I set my feet firmly upon it and turned to take the lantern.

"Hold a bit!" he exclaimed. "Some one's coming!"—and bending toward the opening I heard the sound of steps down the corridor. In a moment Bates ran up, calling my name with more spirit than I imagined possible in him.

"What is it?" I demanded through the opening.

"It's Mr. Pickering. The sheriff has come with him, sir."

As he spoke his glance fell upon the broken wall and open door. The light of Larry's lantern struck full upon him. Amusement, and I thought, a certain satisfaction, were marked upon his countenance.

"Run along, Jack,—I'll be up a little later," said Larry. "If the fellow has come in daylight with the sheriff, he isn't dangerous. It's his friends that shoot in the dark that give us the trouble."

I crawled out and stood upright. Bates, staring at the opening, seemed reluctant to leave the spot.

"You seem to have found it, sir," he said, "I thought a little chinking. His interest in the matter nettled me; it was none of his affair, for one thing; and my first business was to go above for an interview with the executor,—a matter of immediate importance, as should have been clear to any one."

"Of course we have found it!" I ejaculated, brushing the dust from my clothes.

"Is Mr. Stoddard in the library?"

"Oh, yes, sir; I left him entertaining the gentlemen."

"Their visit is certainly most inopportune," said Larry. "Give them my compliments and tell them I'll be up as soon as I've articulated the bones of my friend's ancestors."

Bates strode on ahead, and me with his lantern, and I left Larry crawling through the new-found door as I hurried toward the house. I knew him well enough to be sure he would not leave the spot until we had found what lay behind the Door of Bewilderment.

"You didn't tell the callers where you expected to find me, did you?" I asked Bates, as he brushed me off in the kitchen.

"No, sir. Mr. Stoddard received the gentlemen. He rang the bell for me and when I went into the library he was saying, 'Mr. Glenarm is at his studies. Bates,'—he says—'kindly tell Mr. Glenarm that I'm sorry to interrupt him, but won't he please come down?' I thought it rather neat, sir, considering his clerical office. I knew you were below somewhere, sir; the trap door was open and I found you easily enough."

Bates' eyes were brighter than I had ever seen them. A certain buoyant note gave an entirely new tone to his voice. He walked ahead of me to the library door, threw it open and stood aside.

"Ah, here you are, Glenarm," said Stoddard. Pickering and a stranger stood near the fireplace in their overcoats.

Pickering advanced and offered his hand, but I turned away from him without taking it. His companion, a burly countryman, stood staring, a paper in his hand.

"The sheriff," Pickering explained, "and our business is rather personal—" He glanced at Stoddard, who looked at me.

"Mr. Stoddard will do me the kindness to remain," I said and took my stand beside the chaplain.

"Oh!" Pickering ejaculated scornfully. "I didn't understand that your relations with the neighboring clergy were so intimate. Your taste is improving, Glenarm."

"Mr. Glenarm is a friend of mine," remarked Stoddard quietly. "A very particular friend," he added.

"I congratulate you—both."

I laughed. Pickering was surveying the room as he spoke, and Stoddard suddenly stepped toward him, merely, I think, to draw up a chair for the sheriff; but Pickering, not hearing Stoddard's step on the soft rug until the clergyman was close beside him, started perceptibly and reddened.

It was certainly ludicrous, and when Stoddard faced me again he was biting his lip.

"Pardon me!" he murmured.

"Now gentlemen, will you kindly state your business? My own affairs press me."

Pickering was studying the cartridge boxes on the library table. The sheriff, too, was viewing these effects with interest not, I think, unmixed with awe.

"Glenarm, I don't like to invoke the law to eject you from this property, but I am left with no alternative, and I want to know what's in it to expect."

"That is a fair question," I replied. "If it were merely a matter of following the terms of the will I should not hesitate or be here now. But it isn't the will, or my grandfather, that keeps me, it's the determination to give you all the annoyance possible,—to make it hard and mighty hard for you to get hold of this house until I have found why you are so much interested in it."

"You always had a grand way in money matters. As I told you before you came out here, it's a poor stake. The assets consist wholly of this land and this house, whose quality you have had an excellent opportunity to test. You have doubtless heard that the country people believe there is money concealed here,—but I dare say you have exhausted the possibilities. This is not the first time a rich man has died, leaving precious little behind him."

"You seem very anxious to get possession of a property that you call a poor stake," I said. "A few acres of land, a half-finished house and an uncertain claim upon a school teacher!"

"I had no idea you would understand my position," he replied. "The seriousness of a man's oath to perform the solemn duties imposed upon him by law would hardly appeal to you. But I haven't come here to debate this question. When am I to have possession?"

"Not till I'm ready,—thanks!"

"Mr. Sheriff, will you serve your writ?" he said, and I looked to Stoddard for any hint from him as to what I should do.

"I believe Mr. Glenarm is quite willing to hear whatever the sheriff has to say to him," said Stoddard. He stepped nearer to me, as though to emphasize the fact that he belonged to my side of the controversy, and the sheriff read an order of the Wabana county circuit court directing me, immediately, to deliver the house and grounds into the keeping of the executor of the will of the estate of John Marshall Glenarm.

The sheriff rather enjoyed holding the center of the stage, and I listened quietly to the unfamiliar phraseology. Before he had quite finished I heard a step in the hall and Larry appeared at the door, pipe in mouth. Pickering turned toward him frowning, but Larry paid not the slightest attention to the executor, but leaned against the door with his usual tranquil unconcern.

"I advise you not to trifle with the law, Glenarm," said Pickering, as the sheriff folded his paper. "You have absolutely no right whatever to be here. And these other gentlemen—your guests, I suppose—are equally trespassers under the law."

He stared at Larry, who crossed his legs for greater ease in adjusting his lean frame to the door.

"Well, Mr. Pickering, what is the next step?" asked the sheriff.

"Mr. Pickering," said Larry, straightening up and taking his pipe from his mouth. "I'm Mr. Glenarm's counsel. If you will do me the kindness to ask the sheriff to retire for a moment I should like to say a few words to you that you might prefer to keep between ourselves."

I had usually found it wise to take any cue Larry threw me, and I said: "Pickering, this is Mr. Donovan, who has every authority to act for me in the matter."

Pickering looked impatiently from one to the other of us.

"You seem to have the guns, the ammunition and the numbers on your side," he observed dryly.

"The sheriff may wait within call," said Larry, and at a word from Pickering the man left the room.

"Now, Mr. Pickering,"—Larry spoke slowly,—"as my friend has explained the case to me, the assets of his grandfather's estate are all accounted for,—the land hereabouts, this house, ten thousand dollars in securities and a somewhat vague claim against a lady known as Sister Theresa, who conducts St. Agatha's school. Is that correct?"

"I don't ask you to take my word for it, sir," rejoined Pickering hotly. "I have filed an inventory of the estate, so far as found, with the proper authorities."

"Certainly. But I merely wish to be sure of my facts for the purpose of this interview, to save me the trouble of going to the records. And, moreover, I am somewhat unfamiliar with your procedure in this country. I am a member, sir, of the Irish bar. Pardon me, but I repeat my question."

"I have made oath,—that, I trust, is sufficient even for a member of the Irish bar."

"Quite," said Larry, nodding his head gravely.

He was not, to be sure, a presentable member of any bar, for a smudge detracted considerably from the appearance of one side of his face, his clothes were rumpled and covered with brick dust, and his hands were black. But I had rarely seen him so calm. He recrossed his legs, peered into the bowl of his pipe for a moment, then asked, as quietly as though he were soliciting an opinion of the weather.

"Will you tell me, Mr. Pickering, whether you yourself are a debtor of John Marshall Glenarm's estate?"

Two of Life's Tricks.

It takes us half our lives to learn who our friends are, and the other half to keep them.

FINALLY ROUSED UP UNCLE.

How a Crowd of Villagers Stirred the Sage of the Cracker Barrel.

There was the usual crowd of villagers sitting on the postoffice steps waiting for the mail to be distributed, and among them was Uncle John. He had joined the sitters without saying a word, and at the end of fifteen minutes one of the men winked at the crowd and said:

"Well, Uncle John, have you heard about the big earthquake in Vermont, with 10,000 people killed?"

Uncle John looked at him in a weary way and shook his head.

And the cyclone in Connecticut yesterday and 500 houses blown down?" continued the man.

Uncle John yawned and was not the least interested.

"The Ohio river rose 200 feet of a sudden the other day and carried the city of Cincinnati down stream. Tens of thousands of people lost their lives. Any of your relatives down there, Uncle John?"

The old man slowly shook his head and reached down to pick up a sliver and pick his teeth with it.

"And the whole state of Pennsylvania is caving in," said the joker, "and by to-morrow there will be a great lake where 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 people have lived."

Uncle John took the news without a word. In fact, he yawned and stretched over it.

"By thunder, but there goes a rat under that pile of lumber across the street," exclaimed the joker as he rose up. "Say, you fellows—"

But he got no further. Uncle John was across the street and had a club in his hand, and within the next ten minutes he had done a half day's work tearing down the pile to get at the rat. He had been aroused at last.—Kansas City Journal.

TWO WAYS OF LOOKING AT IT.

Wife's Sneering Comment Met with Sharp Answer.

Gelett Burgess at the recent dinner of the American Booksellers' Association of New York said: "I once knew a San Franciscan who married a girl for her money. She was not a pretty girl, and as time passed and love cooled, she developed a rather tart tongue.

"One day her husband bought with his quarter's allowance a 20-horse-power automobile. He took the car home gayly and brought his wife out to the front door to look at it. She gave one sneering glance, and then said:

"It's very fine, but if it hadn't been for my money, it wouldn't be here."

"Well, Mamie," said the husband, quickly, "if it hadn't been for your money you wouldn't be here yourself."

USED BY THE DOCTORS.

Ninety Per Cent of the Drugs Prescribed Are Patent Medicines.

Despite the opposition of physicians, especially of those whose experience has been neither far reaching nor profitable, to "patent" medicines, ninety per cent of all drugs that physicians use are put up and compounded by manufacturing concerns,—are, in fact, "patent" medicines just as truly as if they were advertised in the newspapers.

The average doctor knows little or nothing of pharmacy and is, therefore, glad to depend on the very medicines, which in public he condemns, just as he is obliged in many cases to depend on the diagnosis of the patient himself, even while publicly declaring what he calls "self-diagnosis."

How rapid has been the growth of the professional use of "patent" or "proprietary" medicines is shown in an article written for the Journal of the American Medical Association for September 29, 1906, by A. Jacobl, M. D., LL. D. He relates that 50,000 prescriptions, compounded in several drug stores were carefully examined. From 1850 to 1870 no prescription was found for "patent" or "proprietary" medicines. In 1874 but one prescription in 1,500 called for ready-to-use remedies. Between 1875 and 1880 the number calling for "patent" or "proprietary" medicines equalled two per cent of the total. This increased to 5 per cent in the period between 1880 and 1890. In 1895 it was 12 per cent, in 1898 it was 15 per cent, and in 1902-1903 was from 20 to 25 per cent.

Dr. Jacobl says that in a large store he was assured that 70 per cent of the prescriptions were for "patent" or "proprietary" medicines, and this probably is approximately the correct proportion at the present time. From this it would seem that if the "patent" and "proprietary" medicines are good enough for physicians to prescribe in seven cases out of ten they are good enough for family use in cases of necessity and where the symptoms are well known and as easily understood by the people as by the doctors.

Always the Politeness.

A Germantown woman was not long ago watching a workman as he put up new window fixtures in her house. "Don't you think that you have placed those fixtures too high?" asked she, having reference to the curtain rolls last put in place. The workman, a stolid German, made no reply, but continued to adjust the fixtures. "Didn't you hear my question?" demanded the lady of the house. "Whereupon the German gulped convulsively, and then replied in the gentlest of voices: 'I had my mouth full of screws, and I could not speak till I swallow some!'"—Harris's Weekly.

CHEAP AND DAINTY

PINCUSHION WORKED IN BRODERIE ANGLAISE.

Material Just at This Moment Has Great Popularity—Can Be Utilized in Many Ways—For Trifles.

Though the craze for broderie Anglaise has somewhat abated in the realm of dress, it is more than ever rampant in the decoration of household affairs, says a correspondent.

The fact is scarcely surprising when one considers what delightful little articles can be made from this beautiful embroidery—articles which have the great merit of returning from the wash tub, just as pretty and dainty as they went into it. The work is pleasant and easy, and the materials are so inexpensive that even the tiniest allowance will permit of the purchase of all the necessities without ever feeling the cost. All sorts of charming little affairs can be thus adorned. I saw a little time ago in the chintz-hung bedroom of a friend's week-end cottage a really lovely and most original pincushion made of a piece of needlework. The pincushion was almost heart-shaped, and was fashioned of heavy "antique" linen completely covered with a conventional design of broderie anglaise worked in glossy mercerized embroidery cotton. Beneath came a lining of pale rose pink, which showed through the open pattern in most enticing fashion. A wee double frill of linen edged the cushion all round, and made a pretty finish. To the two top corners were stitched the ends of a loop of pale pink ribbon, the sewing being concealed beneath two smart bows of the ribbon, a similar bow ornamenting the top of the loop. This loop, by the way, was intended to suspend the cushion from the side of the mirror, and thus save valuable space on the small dressing table.

MILK FOR THE COMPLEXION.

Daily Application Will Be Found to Work Wonders.

New milk, skimmed milk and buttermilk, each possessing properties peculiar to itself, are the secret recipes of a famous belle and beauty of antebellum days.

After washing her face in the morning with pure soap and water and wiping it dry, she bathed it in new sweet milk for several minutes, going over neck and shoulders and hands.

She repeated this before going out into cold, raw air or cutting winds.

At night she slept in a simple cloth mask smeared with buttermilk, after rubbing as much into the skin as possible, and she never in her life had a pimple or a black head on her face. Her skin at 85 was as soft and fair as a baby's. The buttermilk bleach was only used at various times of the year, necessary to whiten and tone up the skin.

The milk exerts a general emollient action on the skin and its daily application tends to make it soft, smooth and white and preserve it from drying winds, vivid sunshine and the like.

Buttermilk not only bleaches but is an excellent remedy for pimples and freckles and has power to relieve a morbid condition of the skin.

Sweet cream taken internally allays the irritability produced by an excessive use of tea and spirituous liquors. It is also a laxative, is fattening and excellent for chapped hands and lips, or to allay the redness caused by standing over the fire.—Montreal Herald.

To Get Touch of Color.

Pale blue seems to be first choice when a bit of color is needed, but khaki is also popular. Khaki linen, braided or embroidered in white, makes an excellent trimming for a white linen, and there are some pretty striped stuffs showing white stripes on a khaki ground.

THE RAGE FOR KHAKI.

This Shade Has Taken Hold of Feminine Fancy.

Khaki has taken an entirely new hold upon the woman of fashion—a hold that is as strong as was that of the golden browns at the beginning of the season. In fact, there is a sort of frenzy for khaki, despite the fact that it is not always pretty. Sometimes raw, sometimes brazen and again indistinct of tone, it takes expert handling to be made into the creations that one raves over in the French salons. The shade, however, is peculiarly becoming to reddish blondes, of whom there are so many among the smart set of Paris and London. One of the smartest specimens of khaki silk is shown by Worth, the skirt being plain, save for an inch-wide band of its own material piped with delicate green silk and running around the skirt above the hem. With it is worn a pretty short coat with full sleeves, held with cuffs to match, these turning back quite deep over the sleeves.

Kimono coats of khaki silk stitched with fancy embroideries are very smart indeed for summer wear, and some of the long models are taken as an excuse for the employment of quantities after quantities of handsome lace in white and neutral tints. Shorter models have long since assumed styles of their own, many of which are truly delightful. In one of Laterriere's designs the coat is draped over the shoulders in bertha effect from a semi-fitting back and outlined with silk ball fringe.

FOR YOUR PRIZED PHOTOS.

Frame of White Cardboard That Will Hold Five Pictures.

We give a design of a photograph frame for holding five portraits, which can be made out of white cardboard. The space for the photographs should be marked out in pencil on the board, and then cut out with a sharp penknife. The edges should be bound round with colored paper fastened on with gum; this should be very carefully and evenly done if we wish to make the frame look neat. Some pretty little floral designs may be painted on the spaces between the portraits.

The photographs are held in their places by means of thin strips of paper pasted across the back.

The support at the back is merely a piece of cloth glued at the top and lower edge. The frame can also be made to hang up on the wall, and when this is desired a small ring on a piece of tape is easily attached at the back.

Spiders Injure Carnation.

If those who complain of trouble with carnations will take the pains to examine the foliage, particularly the under side of it, they will discover hundreds of tiny creatures of a dark red color moving actively about among little webs almost undistinguishable by the ordinary observation. These are red spiders. Unless kept in check or got rid of they will ruin the plants. The way to prevent them from taking possession of the plants is to give daily showerings all over the foliage. If this is persisted in the spider will stay away. But if it has come already the best thing to do is to heat a tub of water to 120 degrees and immerse the plant in it. Allow it to remain in the bath about half a minute. Then remove it and after a little give it another dip. This generally kills the spider, but a third bath may be necessary. After getting the plant free from the pest keep it away by the liberal use of water.

Loose Coat Much Liked.

The loose coat, sleeveless sometimes, three-quarter length, simple in outline and eminently picturesque, is beloved of Parisiennes nowadays, and is largely braided, not only with big motifs of soutache, but all over, in a fashion now forgotten for a good many years, and very well it looks. Later on for autumn suits this style will prove effective worn with a plain skirt and now in thick corded silk, with silken braid, over a filmy gown it is very successful. Bodices of gowns are sometimes treated in the same way and little capes and coats; but the long wrap is the smartest. The soutache matches in tint.

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

How a Veteran Was Saved the Amputation of a Limb.

B. Frank Doremus, veteran, 100 Roosevelt Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., says: "I had been showing symptoms of kidney trouble from the time I was married, but in all my life I never suffered as in 1897. Headaches, dizziness, and sleeplessness, first, and then dropsy. I was weak and helpless, having run down from 180 to 125 pounds. I was having terrible pain in the kidneys, and the secretions passed almost involuntarily. My left leg swelled until it was 34 inches around, and the doctor tapped it night and morning until I could no longer stand it, and then he advised amputation. I refused, and began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The swelling subsided gradually, the urine became natural and all my pains and aches disappeared. I have been well now for nine years since using Doan's Kidney Pills."

In Extremis.

The yacht was heavily becalmed. There were but ten bottles of champagne in the lockers. Their last glimpse of distress had been sent up, without bringing any response.

"Gentlemen," exclaimed the commander, in a quivering voice, "I can no longer conceal the hideous truth from you. Sobriety stares us in the face! It was a wildly various scene which ensued. Some blasphemed, some prayed, some, in an access of frenzied wantonness, sang songs, while some sat stolidly by, awaiting their fate with at least an outward calm.—Put

Social Rank.

At a country dance in a southern town, when the fiddlers had retired their bows and taken their places on the platform, the floor manager rose. "Got yo' partners for a cotillion!" he shouted, imperiously.

"All you ladies an' gemmen dat wears shoes an' stockings take yo' places in de middle ob de room. A you ladies an' gemmen dat wear shoes an' no stockings take yo' place immejitly behin' dem. An' you bare footed crowd jest jig it roon' in de corners."—Youth's Companion.

Wouldn't Take His Place.

Hearing of the sudden taking off stage of life of a leading Theatrical while he was playing in Chicago, New York Rialto out of a job to graphed the manager as follows: "Having heard of the sad and premature demise of Mr. I'll take his place for $150 a week."

As the message was sent collected elicited the following reply: "Thank I wouldn't take his place for twice the amount."

What Caused the Lynching.

Out at Stafford the other day a group of farmers met a train, and a tall, sunburned man stepped off the car they all grabbed him and shook him warmly. The man looked over calmly and then said: "Gentlemen, I am sorry to disappoint you, know you think I am a harvest hand but you are mistaken. I am a lynching rod agent."—Kansas City Star.

Painting for Profit

No one will question the superior appearance of well-painted property. The question that the property owner asks is: "Is the appearance worth the cost?"

Poor paint is for temporary appearance only. Paint made from Pure Linseed Oil and Pure White Lead is for lasting appearance and for protection. It saves repairs and replacements costing many times the paint investment. The Dutch Boy brand mark is found only on cans containing Pure White Lead made by the Old Dutch Process.

The Girl in the Gallery

By Ex-Congressman W. H. (Buck) Hinrichsen

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

There were two factions in the Republican party in the Seventh Congressional district. One faction, called the Silk Stockings, contained the men of wealth and influence. The other, called the Barefoot Brigade, was made up of disappointed office seekers, men of unsettled occupation and those of anarchistic and socialistic tendencies.

For many years the Silk Stocking element had been in control. The Republican party had a large majority in the district, and all nominations were equivalent to elections. The Silk Stockings dictated the nominations and filled the offices with their own men. They had built up a machine harmonious in all its details and working perfectly in advancing the ambitions of its masters.

The Barefoot Brigade was of wavering and uncertain size. They were without organization and the attempts of any of them to assume leadership were promptly put down by the jealousies of their friends. Occasionally they caused the Silk Stockings annoyance by their meetings in which they loudly denounced machine politics and the power of wealth, but a few kegs of beer or some minor offices pacified them and their actual opposition was slight.

The congressional district was composed of five counties. Every two years each of these counties held an election, voted for the man they desired as a candidate for the congressional convention; the population of a county determined number of its delegates. These delegates were instructed to vote in the convention for the candidate chosen by their county and to use all honorable means to secure his nomination.

The conventions had heretofore been only formalities. The Silk Stockings agreed upon a candidate for congressman and the counties nominated him.

But conditions had been slowly changing. Young men of ability were growing up and in the old, conservative faction there was no place for them. They gradually formed an organization of their own, drew into it the Barefoot Brigade and those who had been drifting between the two factions, and worked out a series of plans by which they could eventually gain some recognition and power in the party.

For the first time the Barefoot Brigade had a candidate. Hiram Stevens, a wealthy lumber dealer of Sherman county, announced his desire for the nomination for congressman. He was a man of excellent standing, and had never affiliated with either faction. This was his first political experience.

The Silk Stockings chose Randolph Hardin of Allen county as their candidate.

The strength of the new group was not suspected, and election day brought a stunning surprise. The barefoot brigade had carried three counties for Stevens and the Silk Stockings two for Hardin. The returns showed: Allen, 21 for Hardin; Blaine, 10 for Stevens; Morton, 16 for Hardin; Sherman, 27 for Stevens; York, 12 for Stevens. Total: Hardin, 37; Stevens, 49.

The convention was to be held in Allendale, the county seat of Allen county, and the home of Hardin. The evening before the convention a discouraged, disheartened group of Silk Stockings sat in Hardin's library discussing their defeat. There were but two ways by which they could yet nominate their man; by persuading the other candidate to withdraw or by buying his delegates. So far all their efforts to persuade or to buy had been unsuccessful.

"It looks as if we were completely done for," said one of the men from Morton county.

"You'd better withdraw, Hardin, give Stevens your delegates, and make the nomination unanimous," advised one of the leaders.

"Not yet," said Jones, Hardin's political manager and the chairman of the Allen county delegation. "The convention does not meet until noon tomorrow. Something may turn up before then."

"It isn't possible," said one of the men. "These fellows are after our scalps, and they'll get them. Stevens has no antagonism toward us, but he wants to go to congress. We can't change his mind for him and we can't get his delegates."

"I never saw such a stubborn crowd as those Stevens delegates," grumbled a prominent Silk Stocking. "They don't know what money looks like, and they don't care to know. We can't do anything with them."

"Sherman county, Stevens' home, will stay with him, of course," said Jones, "and the chairman of the Blaine county delegation is his brother, so we can't do anything with them. York county is our only hope. If we could, by any possible chance, get it—"

"But we can't," said a Morton county man. "Jack French is chairman of that delegation, and he is practically the leader of the Barefoot Brigade. We can't do any business with him."

"Chairman Jones threw his cigar into the fire and rose from his chair. 'We'd better clear out, fellows,' he said. 'Let Hardin get some sleep. It's too late to do anything to-night.' The others left, but Jones remained. 'Hardin,' he said when they were alone, 'we must do something with York county.'

Hardin shook his head despondently. "It seems to me," said Jones, significantly, "that you ought to be able to do something with French. Isn't there a gentle influence that could be used?"

"I do not understand you?" said Hardin.

"There was a time," said Jones, "when French came to this house very often and it was said that he was engaged to your daughter."

Hardin frowned. My daughter has been in Europe for a year.

"But she returned to-day," said Jones.

"I shall not permit her to have any part in my political affairs," said Hardin, haughtily. "Besides, she and French are no longer friends. They quarreled before she went abroad."

"Have you talked to him about this nomination?" asked Jones.

"No; I knew it was a waste of time and words."

"Suppose I telephone him to come here now," said Jones. "It will do no harm."

"And no good, either," said Hardin. Jones telephoned to the hotel at which the York county delegation was staying, and in a few minutes French was in Hardin's library.

Hardin received him cordially, and explained that they had sent for him to discuss the situation and expressed a hope that a compromise between the factions might be effected.

The young man listened politely. "Mr. Hardin," he said respectfully, "there can be no question of a compromise. My county is pledged to Mr. Stevens and we shall nominate him to-morrow. I regret that this means your defeat, for personal reasons I should be glad to do anything in my power for you. But this is a political matter, and I must support Stevens."

"Mr. French," said Jones slowly, "our people can do a great deal for a young man. We are rich, and we never forget favors."

For a moment French looked at him with a cold contempt in his strong, honest face that embarrassed even the hardened politician. Then he bowed to Hardin and left the room.

The convention met in the court house at noon the next day. The great hall was filled with people assembled to witness the downfall of the Silk Stockings and the nomination of Mr. Stevens. The usual preliminaries were disposed of and the chairman ordered the secretary to call the roll of the counties.

"Allen county," called the secretary.

"Twenty-one votes for Hardin," responded the chairman of the Allen county delegation.

"Blaine county," called the secretary.

"Ten votes for Stevens," said the Blaine chairman.

"Morton county."

"Sixteen votes for Hardin."

"Sherman county."

"Twenty-seven votes for Stevens."

"York county."

Mr. French rose in his place to cast the vote of his county, the vote that was to nominate Mr. Stevens.

"Twelve votes for—"

He stopped suddenly. In the gallery above the secretary's desk sat a girl. She was leaning over the railing looking down at him. It was the girl he loved, the girl who would have been his wife had not a misunderstanding come between them, the girl he believed was in Europe.

"Vote," whispered one of his delegates excitedly. "Vote."

The room was very still but he did notice it. He saw only the girl in the gallery and unconsciously the words came from his lips.

"Twelve votes for Hardin."

The roar that went up from the entire audience showed what he had done. He realized that without intention he had nominated Hardin and betrayed his own candidate. The face of the girl told him that she knew it was a mistake, and it also told him something that made even the angry denunciations and accusations sound to him like sweetest music.

Costly Experiment.

"By Gosh, but Uncle Ezekiah is down on them Washington officials," said the old farmer with the big scythe.

"What is the trouble?" inquired the windmill repairer.

"Why, you see, the Washington folks sent out a circular saying that 'skeeters could be killed with kerosene.'"

"What happened then?"

"Most everything happened, stranger; most everything. You see, Uncle Ezekiah tried the experiment. He hunted around half the morning and broke his suspenders before he could catch a live 'skeeter. Then when he did catch one he took him out in the yard and ducked his head down in a big can of kerosene. While Uncle Ezekiah was bending over the sun reflected through the corner of his spectacles and set fire to the oil. Before Uncle Ezekiah could get away it burned half his whiskers and exploded his celluloid collar. And, worst of all, Uncle Ezekiah isn't sure whether the 'skeeter was killed or not."

MAN AND "THE BETTING GAME."

He Who "Plays a System" at the Race Track Certain to Quit Loser.

Here is an interesting letter: "I play the nags once in awhile. I think I have a pretty fair system and was just thinking of trying it when I ran across an article which caused me to hesitate. If a man sticks to his system, has control of himself and is not a hog, but satisfied with a modest wager, is there no chance of success? Do you think it impossible to win by a system? Is there any reason why a man cannot keep decent and still play the game?"

Ever since Diomed won the first derby in England system after system has been devised for "beating the races." No system—not a single one—has ever succeeded in the long run. It has been figured out that there are 27 chances to one against you always in a field of ten horses. The best system ever known is at the mercy of the betting ring. There are not bookmakers enough in the United States to lay against a system. Several years ago a man started with a five-dollar bet, doubled it after each loss and returned to the original five dollars after each winning. For awhile he prospered amazingly, playing nothing but the favorite, but in the end he went broke.

If a man with a system could bet against the United States treasury he could win. At Sheephead Bay 14 favorites lost in succession. The fifteenth started at odds of three to one and was an easy winner. Now, figure out the predicament of the man with the system. Starting with five dollars and doubling after each loss he found it necessary to go into the ring and bet the sum of $81,920. He stood then a loser of $81,945. If he could have bet on the fifteenth favorite he would have had at issue over $163,000. Now, anybody who knows the betting ring knows that it would be utterly impossible for a dozen Joe Vendigs to place practically $82,000 at three to one. But—if it could have been placed the system man would have won $246,000.

Callousness to Soldiers.

A painful case of what looks almost like needless hardship inflicted by a French colonel of cavalry on the men under his command is reported from Melan. The Eighteenth dragons from Melan had been ordered to join the Seventh dragons from Fontainebleau by a night march, and left at 2:30 a. m. Both regiments arrived about four a. m., but in a very different condition. The Seventh dragons had ridden in their great cloaks, and were comfortable enough; but the Eighteenth, by the colonel's orders, had ridden without their cloaks, and three men fell from their horses struck by congestion; two others, too humbled to stand, after dismounting, leaned against their horses and received kicks which fractured limbs, while quite a considerable number of men had to be sent to the hospital in a condition which, without being serious, necessitated rest and treatment.

Baby Rules a Street.

One of the curiosities of downtown streets is a baby in swaddling clothes, say the New York Times. An infant of tender age appeared on Nassau street the other day in the arms of its nurse. It attracted no end of attention, men and women of all ages and all conditions of life turning to look at it. In the opinion of everybody, except the immediate relatives, it was a very ordinary baby; it was the mere fact that it was a baby and was taking an airing in business streets that made it an object of general interest. Babies, no doubt, are so thick in the home neighborhoods of some of those people who turned to stare that it is hard to walk without falling over one or more of them; yet so seldom is a baby seen in downtown streets that its occasional presence there is cause for general wonderment.

One Advantage of a Club.

"They told me it would be a great advantage to join this club," he said, as he tore open an envelope. "This is the advantage it has been to me: It has circulated my name among all the grafters in the city, printed as it is in the year book among the members. My name is flooded with letters from some institution or other, begging for funds. I wish I never had heard of the old club," he said, as he flung the shreds into the wastepaper basket.

"But," she objected, "when you kick the bucket, won't your name be encircled by a nice black line among the list of the deceased members in the year book? That's why I belong to my club and pay my dues."

The Greatest of All Joys.

The serene days pass by and leave little mark on mind and character, but the days of storm and struggle mold a man's life like in the artificial combats of sport and in the actual strife of living. Conquest over difficulty and danger is the greatest of all joys. A man does not need to be a mountain-climber to learn the lesson. It is the lesson of life.—Sir Martin Conway, in the Strand Magazine.

Hint to Mother Nature.

"Nathus is a good Mother Nature," said the Kentucky colonel. "She supplies every deficiency that is lacking in the human frame. 'S soon as anything is needed she's right there with it ready in her hand.' It won't be long now, I'm thinkin', before she'll be supplyin' us with eyes in the backs of ouah heads, so's we kin see when these heah automobiles is comin'."

Excessive Athletics.

Exercise is as necessary for the human body as food and drink. It is impossible to maintain perfect health without it; but it must be taken in moderation, for excess in this respect is as harmful in its way, and sometimes in the same way, as excess in eating. The effect of exercise is to increase the tissue changes in the body. The weaker cells are destroyed and replaced by new and stronger cells, the nutrition is increased, and the waste products are thrown off. If the exercise is carried to extreme lengths it may happen that the waste products are thrown into the system in so great quantity that they cannot be disposed of in the ordinary way, and they accumulate to such an extent that the body is poisoned by its own waste. The result is the same as when an excess of food is taken; and so, exercise, which in moderation tends to counteract the evil of over-eating, in excess only increases the evil. It has always been known that excessive physical labor has a tendency to shorten life, and the attainment of old age is seldom the lot of the laboring man. But the fact is often curiously overlooked that physical labor is physical labor, whether it consists in wielding a pick and shovel or in throwing weights, rowing a boat, running or jumping. The dangers of inordinate devotion to athletics, says Youth's Companion, are that one part of the body, one set of muscles or certain organs, such as the heart, will be developed out of proportion to the other parts. This is especially the case in the young, who have not yet attained their growth. The heart is a patient organ, and when strain is put upon it it quietly increases its bulk and its strength to meet the task. So long as the strain is continued, it works along, but when the call upon it is diminished suddenly, the young man giving up his athletics and taking to a sedentary life, its muscular tissue begins to degenerate. The arteries, under strain, act in the same way, and when the tension is relaxed the condition known as arteriosclerosis develops. The tissues are poorly nourished and the man ages before his time. When devotion to athletics has been excessive, it is only by the greatest care in training down that the athlete can avoid the danger of weakened body and nerves.

Was a Great Teacher.

By the death of Kuno Fischer, Europe loses one of its really great teachers of philosophy. Like Victor Cousin, Fischer paid particular attention to the form of his lectures, which were models of clear and sometimes eloquent exposition. He spoke invariably without notes, and could quote from memory extended passages from the ancient as well as from the modern philosophers. His "History of Modern Philosophy" is remarkable for the precision of its statements and the justice of its criticisms. Although a Hegelian, Fischer never employed the peculiar terms of the school. He was a thoughtful critic of modern literature, and his lectures on Goethe's Faust, on Lessing, and on certain plays of Shakespeare attracted large audiences. A singular episode in his career, relates New York Post, was an acrimonious debate with Trendelenburg of Berlin over an interpretation of the Kantian philosophy. The animosity produced by this dispute was, according to some, the reason why Fischer never went to Berlin, but remained for more than 30 years an ornament to the University of Heidelberg and the foremost citizen of that city.

The death in New York of Prof. Angelo Hellprin deprives the world of a noted scientist. Prof. Hellprin, who was a native of Hungary, came to the United States when an infant and received his education here, rising to special eminence as a geologist, though his versatility was shown by his achievements in other fields. His explorations in various directions added greatly to the sum of human knowledge, and the results were embodied in numerous instructive volumes. One of his most notable achievements was the ascent of Mont Pelee immediately after the great and destructive eruption of that Martinique volcano in 1902. He risked his life in scientific investigation and calmly took notes of the phenomena on the very edge of the blazing crater.

The day is coming, says a prominent architect, when buildings twice as high as the Washington monument will be erected. Then the airship will be a certainty, for necessity, you know, is the mother of invention.

It is always a terrible disappointment when a little boy who has made up his mind to grow quickly in order that he may marry his teacher, finds that she has gone off and married some other fellow.

THE DOCTOR SAYS FLINT'S MILK SUPPLY IS IMPURE AND DEADLY.

DEARBORN LOSES BY FIRE

Eighth District to Hold an Early Convention—Odds and Ends of News Gathered Here and There.

Kills the Babies.

In tests made from the output of 18 dairies, Dr. J. Walter Orr, of the Flint board of health, states that he found poisonous substances, and that to date he had been unable to find a sample of pure milk in that city. "Within a radius of five blocks I found nine sick babies, and I am positive that their illness in each instance was the result of impure milk," said Dr. Orr. "The milk that is being peddled throughout the city contains millions of bacteria of the typhoid and malaria family. But the worst of it is that although the illness resulting from impure milk often manifests themselves at once, in other cases the seeds of disease are sown which are slow in developing. The maladies resulting in these cases are typhoid fever, cholera infantum and sometimes tuberculosis. Something should be done at once to bring about a better condition in Flint's milk supply. Of whatever dangers there may be threatening the city at the present time, this is the most serious."

The Jackson board of health is getting after dairymen who are not meeting the requirements of the state law and city ordinance, and will advise the public of unsanitary dairymen as fast as the inspectors find conditions to warrant it.

The Dearborn Fire.

Despite heroic efforts of the bucket brigade, the village of Dearborn suffered a serious loss by fire Saturday morning. The blaze was discovered in the rear of the Dearborn Mercantile Co.'s store, where oil and gasoline were stored, and in a few minutes had spread to adjoining buildings, and destroyed the whole row. Those burned and the losses are: Dearborn Mercantile Co., owned by J. N. and W. R. Crusoe, loss $5,000, insurance $3,000; D. P. Lapham, grocery, loss $3,000, insurance $2,500; W. J. Buford, grocery, loss $2,000; Joe Cronquist, barber shop and adjoining building, loss $1,500, small insurance, and Anthony Wagoner's large hotel barn, loss $2,000. The Michigan Telephone exchange was in the Crusoe building, and was destroyed.

Why So Early?

The eighth district congressional convention has been called to assemble at Onondaga October 10. The purpose is to name two delegates and two alternates from the eighth district to the national Republican convention—the presidential convention—not yet called, but which will probably assemble late in June, 1908. The reason for calling the eighth district convention so long in advance of the call for a state convention is not apparent. It will be the first of the congressional district conventions.

Candidate Dropped Dead.

In the midst of a hot political fight as candidate for delegate to the constitutional convention, Attorney W. Plummer, aged 65, of Benton Harbor, suddenly dropped dead Saturday morning. The deceased was probably the foremost member of the Berrien county bar. He was a former mayor and a veteran of the civil war. He leaves a widow and two children, Edith and Harry, the latter a practicing attorney.

A Superior Fish.

The biggest fish caught in Lake Superior in many years has been brought in by the tug Columbia. It is a trout weighing fifty pounds, measuring four feet in length, six inches through the body, and twelve and one-half inches in width. The head was ten and one-half inches long, the tail had a spread of fourteen inches, and the front fins were each seven and one-half inches long. The trout was netted in 120 feet of water off Standhard rock, about forty-five miles out from shore.

Lunatic Captured.

John Myquist, who with four others escaped from the Traverse City asylum, was captured at his old home in Muskegon. Myquist got away several days ago and arrived Tuesday, how no one can find out. He confided to a friend that his wife "was plotting against him and that he intended to kill her and their seven children Tuesday night. The friend informed the police, who surrounded the house and searched for several hours before landing their prisoner.

Sunfield's Fourth Fire.

Sunfield, Eaton county, suffered its fourth disastrous fire within a few years Tuesday night when the large general store of S. L. Roarbeck burned to the ground, entailing a loss on building and contents of $19,000. Roarbeck's loss is $14,000, with $5,000 insurance. L. H. Saunders, of Lansing, owned the building, and lost $5,000, with $3,000 insurance.

Thomas F. Cole, president of the Oliver Iron Mining Co., the iron ore end of the steel corporation, is having plans drawn for a handsome summer home which he intends building at Clark's Lake, a Goebie county resort.

The body of a man supposed to be Mathias Simon, of Fowler, Mich., was found on the railroad tracks near Portland by Frank Mann, a farm hand. It was cut in two. A bank certificate for $125 and $20 in cash was found in his pockets. Mann met the man a few minutes before and says he was intoxicated.

The Crop Prospects.

The only depressing features of the latest Michigan crop reports are statements of oats, apples and peaches. In the southern peach belt only 18,000 acres of orchards are bearing, the prospect being for an average yield of 27 per cent. In the central and northern counties the prospect is for a yield of 73 per cent. The southern peach belt lost over half its trees by the October freeze. Apple prospects are: Southern counties, 35; central, 56; northern, 82.

Oats are badly damaged by thrrips in all sections. Most of the crop will be harvested in August. The average estimated yield is 27 bushels. July weather was favorable to everything but wheat, rye and hay. Corn has practically made up all it lost in the backward spring and the state average is 82. Potatoes promise well, but blight appears in some sections. The state average is 86.

Wheat is badly shrunk in some sections, but the general yield is satisfactory. The average yield in the southern and northern counties is 14 bushels, and central 13. A total of 181,670 bushels was marketed in July. Practically all last year's crop has been marketed.

Sugar beets promise excellently with a state average of 89. The indications are that Michigan will produce her banner beet crop. The conditions are: Southern counties, 90; central, 88, and northern, 86.

Cost Two Lives.

It was because one of the men rocked the boat, it has developed, that Michael Neazer and Owen Filon met their deaths by drowning in Whitefish lake, Luce county, and Robert McMinn escaped a similar fate only by a very narrow margin. Slow progress being made on the voyage across the lake to Neazer's farm, it is reported by McMinn, threat was made by Filon he would tip over the frail craft unless his companions put more vigor into their work at the oars. The gait was not increased, and true to his word Filon overturned the boat. He was the first to sink. The other men clung to the craft, one of them to perish as he became exhausted.

Port of Grand Rapids.

Expert Engineer Lyman E. Cooley, of Chicago, who has been in Grand Rapids several days making a study of food conditions, addressed an open meeting of the council Thursday night and said the only way to relieve the spring food menace to the west side was to build dock line walls and scalp the river bed. Scarping, as he meant, is to blast out rock. He also put forth a scheme to build a canal from this city to Saginaw, which he says would forever remove flood troubles, as that part of the state is lower. This, too, would make an ideal waterway for large lake boats direct from Chicago to the Furniture City.

Still in Jackson.

Charles Ubbanks, sentenced to Jackson prison in March, 1904, to a minimum sentence of one year and a maximum sentence of two years, for burglary in the night time, is still in prison although he has long since completed his maximum term. The prison authorities refuse to release him because it was discovered that Ubbanks has already served two similar sentences and this makes him a third-term man and they are holding him for the five-year limit. The circuit and supreme courts have refused to release him and his case is to be carried to the United States supreme court.

Waves Cast Up the Dead.

The high-rolling combers of Lake Michigan, a few miles below Holland, gave up the dead bodies of two brothers, Herbert and Morris Von Valkenburg, aged 16 and 20 years respectively. The young men were in swimming and as no one was a witness to the drowning it is not known just how it occurred. There was a rough sea, and it is thought that one of the brothers might have given out and the other in trying to rescue him, was dragged under. They are the sons of Charles Von Valkenburg.

Want the Money.

The Michigan Corn Improvement association has asked the supreme court for a mandamus to compel the auditor general to raise the $1,000, in accordance with an act of the legislature, for the encouragement of corn culture. The attorney general advises that the act is class legislation as the corn concern is not an incorporated body. The corn people say they will raise the average of corn from 29 bushels an acre to that of 60 if given funds to further their plans.

The timely arrival of two guests from the Lake Harbor hotel saved the life of Miss Clara Christenson, a waitress who had fallen in eight feet of water in the channel leading from Mona lake to Lake Michigan.

Although Arthur Sherman, who was brought to Bay City from Detroit by Detective Craig and placed in jail on a charge of burglarizing the residence of Harry Tierney, pleads not guilty, the officer managed to locate a quantity of the stolen plunder from Detroit pawn shops.

The next big Indian camp meeting will be at Frost Lake, northwest of Standish, the last of this month. Indians will be present from all over Michigan and Canada, including Mrs. Sagatoo, the famous white lady who married two different Indians at Saginaw.

A census of Marquette is now being completed by the postoffice force. There are upwards of 12,000 people, it appears, from these returns, compared with 10,500 in the spring of 1905, thus giving Marquette the distinction of being the largest incorporated city in upper Michigan.

"Well, we just started from home, us and our old horse, to see some of the world," explained an 8-year-old daughter of John Nichols, a farmer of Henrietta township, when Deputy Sheriff John Freeman accosted three tots in a buggy about 9 o'clock Thursday night. The father was telephoned and came for his children.

Two men were injured by flying debris and several thousand dollars' worth of damage was caused when a big thirty-five ton calander crashed through the floor of the Eddy Paper Co.'s mill in Three Rivers. The mill will be shut down for some time as a result.

A census of the city is now being completed by the postoffice force. There are upwards of 12,000 people, it appears, from these returns, compared with 10,500 in the spring of 1905, thus giving Marquette the distinction of being the largest incorporated city in upper Michigan.

The Paw-Paw grape juice factory was burglarized Tuesday night. The outside door of the building was broken in, the combination knocked off the safe and an iron rod driven through the lock. There is no clue to the burglars, but it is thought the work was done by home talent.

Friendless and unattended John Cherry, an aged civil war veteran, died in a little hut near Highland, where he found refuge for a number of years. How long he was ill is not known, but when a passerby entered the hut, he had been dead for two or three days. Cherry was a curious character and known all around the section in which he lived.

Receiving word that the Bay City authorities wanted a man who would arrive in Flint on the 1:03 train, Assistant Chief Cole, who got the message at 1:02, made the train in the one minute, and captured Michael Colvert. Colvert had on two suits of clothes, the tags still on them.

"Women are my best deputies when it comes to detecting open saloons on Sunday," says Sheriff Davidson, of Port Huron. "I can't keep my eyes on every nook in the county, but just let many of them try it and some of the women are sure to tip me off, particularly if they smell liquor on their husband's breath."

The Boundary Line Resolution Was Not Signed.

Attorney-General Bird has discovered another concurrent resolution passed by the recent legislature which is defective. The resolution directed him to have a survey made of the disputed boundary line between Michigan and Wisconsin, and, if the facts warranted, to take the matter into court.

During the session, Hon. Peter White, of Marquette, came to Lansing and laid before the legislature the matter of the disputed boundary, and asked that action be taken, stating that his investigation led him to believe that Michigan was entitled to the disputed territory. After the attorney-general had commenced proceedings to investigate the state's claims, he found that the concurrent resolution had never been enrolled and sent to the governor to be signed, and is of no force or effect in consequence.

The survey may go forward just the same, however, as the contract has been let, and Mr. Bird takes the ground that he and the governor have power to act.

Hold the Fort.

Senator William Alden Smith would like to have the federal government assume control over Fort Mackinac and the military reservation, and has taken the matter up with Senator Cannon and Senator Hemenway, who are visiting there. They will assist him. The presence of so many statesmen on the island, including Congressman McKinley, of Illinois, has given rise to rumors of a political conference, which the statesmen, however, deny.

Fined $17,000.

Judge Page Morris, in the United States district court, sitting in Minneapolis, fined the Wisconsin Central Railroad Co. $17,000 for rebating, of which it was convicted last April. Burton Johnson and G. T. Huey, freight officials of the road, were fined $2,000 and $1,000 respectively for paying rebates to shippers.

Seven Drowned.

Seven Northern Pacific freight handlers were run down by a tug in Duluth harbor while going home in a rowboat and drowned. Four other men swam ashore. The tug was towing a mudscrew, and the suction was so great that the men were all drawn underneath the screw. Six never came to the surface and one who came up was so injured that he could not save himself.

DESTRUCTION WAS SUDDEN

EXPLOSION WRECKED ESSEX, KILLED TWO, WOUNDED MANY.

NITROGLYCERIN DID IT.

Carload Lots Go Shattering Nearly Every Building in the Town and Shock Is Felt for Miles.

A car of nitroglycerin was sidetracked Friday night near the freight sheds in Essex, Ontario, and was to have been taken to Amherstburg on a plug train which was due to leave Essex at 9:30 a. m. Saturday. The train was being made up and the car containing the nitroglycerin had been attached to the engine with a coal car behind it, an empty freight car and one passenger car. The train was due to leave in 15 minutes. Brakeman Joe McNary, discovered that some glycerin was leaking from the car and he started to open the car and stop the leak. Just then the explosion occurred.

With a terrific noise, and a shock that was felt as far away as Detroit, and several miles beyond, houses, churches, stores and factories reeled and collapsed. The fine, new stone depot was blown open and only the side walls and the rafters are left. The freight sheds are leveled to the ground. Green's warehouse fell flat. Maylor's mill was converted into a bunch of kindling. Laing & Ritchie's ash and door mill doubled up like a jackknife and fell on its side.

Freight cars were demolished, the engine and tender of the train were converted into scrap iron. The entire village of Essex of 2,500 people were panic-stricken. Their houses were falling about their heads. They knew not what had happened, but they did know that their homes and all they possessed were in ruins.

Men, women and children rushed into the streets cut by broken glass and falling timbers, and everywhere ruin and the shattered remnants of their town was before them. All the doctors of the city and the firemen rushed to the depot and with every step their progress grew more and more difficult over the piles of wreckage, until at the very center of the disaster, they had to stop at a great, clean hole in the ground, 50 feet across and 20 feet deep.

That was where the ill-fated car had stood. Nothing of the car or of the rails it had stood upon were left. Two hundred feet away Burt Esselty, a teamster for Laing & Ritchie, staggered up with a crushed face to find his horse lying dead close by, with a piece of railroad track shot through his body. Almost every building in the town is shattered, and within a radius of 300 yards from the depot everything is in a state of total destruction.

The reports on Sunday were that the seventeen injured people were resting as comfortably as could be expected. The town was in the hands of the police and all drinking places closed Sunday. The scene of wreck and ruin cannot be described. The water works system was destroyed. The steeples of churches were razed. Two municipal buildings were greatly damaged. Not a store on Talbot street—the main street—sustained less than half its value in damage. Jewelry, furniture, hardware, baked goods, dry goods—all were hurled into the streets and piled on the floors of the stores, while all around plate glass cracked to the step and stuck up in menacing piles in the streets.

Race War Raging. A special from Parkersburg, Va., says that reports have been received there to the effect that Garland Belote was shot and seriously wounded at Onancock of a negro named Uzzel, said to be the editor of a paper published at that place.

The reports also say that later large numbers of negroes prepared themselves for rioting and went into ambush, that the white residents at Onancock were entirely unprepared to defend themselves, and were asking aid of Olney, Parkersburg, Accoac, Tasley and other nearby towns, several of which had sent help; that four white men leaving Onancock in a hack were made the targets of fifty shots fired by negroes from a grocery store in the suburbs and that it is feared all four were killed.

Arabs Mobilizing. Advice from Casablanca are to the effect that 20,000 Arab cavalrymen are mobilizing in the interior. Gen. Drude, the commander of the French force, encamped outside of Casablanca, is awaiting a new attack.

The report that the natives lost heavily during the assault of Thursday on the French camp is confirmed. Their casualties are described as enormous. The French casualties were confined to two sharpshooters, who were wounded.

The sultan has communicated to the Italian minister his intention of paying proper indemnities for the killing of the three Italian subjects at Casablanca.

H. H. Rogers, real head of the Standard Oil Co., who has been ill for some time, is now suffering from the effects of a nervous breakdown and he will be forced to rest all summer.

Secretary Cortelyou has revised the red tape system of the treasury department and disbursing officers hereafter will have to submit balances to auditors. They must also discontinue their present practice of getting receipts in advance of payments.

Officers of the Canadian passenger boat Huronic, which arrived at Superior, Wis., from Port Arthur, are reported "invasion" of Isle Royale is a canon founded on a lark of some young Canadian enthusiasts who went over to the island in a new launch flying the union jack.

Jack London's Story Carries Strong Truth and Pathos.

"Jack London's famous definition of charity—'sharing a bone with a dog when you're as hungry as the dog'—recalls a story about charity," said magazine editor, "that I heard Mr. London tell at a farewell dinner in New York before he sailed away from the Spark."

"Mr. London said two old men were smoking and drinking together at dinner."

New York.—Thirty thousand eyes are focused upon a platform built at some elevation from the ground and supported by posts that are painted white. A solitary man stands upon the floor of the structure. He strides back and forth and gesticulates violently. Sometimes he seems to appeal in supplication. At others his gestures are those of determined command. His lips are seen to move, but the sounds of his voice are drowned in the din of the throng.

Below him is a field of high-spirited, sensitive, nervous and fractious thoroughbred horses. Mounted on them are mere wisps of boys, who jerk energetically at the bridle reins, kick with their heels and express their thoughts vehemently into the ears of the animals they are riding.

With a snap and a strumming sound, like the vibration of a string of a double bass, the barrier is suddenly released by the man on the platform, and a dozen eager colts plant their hoofs firmly into the soft soil of the track, scrambling with the instinct of their natures, which education long and patient has developed, to reach a place in front, while the monkeylike boys on their backs, their sharp faces pushed forward eagerly into the wind, peer on both sides of them to discern an opening where they may get through and improve their chances to finish first in the race.

Thirty thousand eyes, scanning intently the turn of the track, follow closely the running of the field, and 15,000 voices begin to croak, and scream, and babble. Some are the hysterical notes of a nervous woman who has wagered half her week's pin money upon the race. Some are the guttural roars of the "touts," the stable followers and the hoarse criers of wares and edibles. Some are the cackle of superheated storekeepers and possibly their clerks.

Cry for the Favorite.

Through it all, and above it all, is the note of personality, the cry for the popular jockey of the day. It is a queer phenomenon of a mighty sport. It is the slogan of the American for the individual who does things. The horses are racing. The horses are the motive for the struggle, the backbone of a pastime that was inaugurated centuries ago, but the majority of the vast mass congested within iron railings are shouting for the jockey.

Afar down the course at the field stand one hears "Come on, you Miller!" The exhortation increases in volume, and all the field stand appears to be shouting, "Come on, you Miller!" The thousands upon the lawn take up the refrain, the bookmakers and their clerks join in, if a Miller victory means a victory for them, and at last there is a Niagara-like thunder of appeal: "Come on, you Miller!" an anxious moment or two, then a wild screech of triumph, and the "Millerites" rush away to obtain their gains, if Miller happens to have won.

There is barely a day that it is possible to miss this queer chain of incident at the race course, for the racegoers rush with enthusiastic favor to the support of some jockey who, by his skill and his knowledge of men and animals, beats his fellow jockeys in the daily tumult of track sport.

Names Live Long in Memory.

Time passes and boys grow old and heavy. The idol of the present day will be only the memory of the past. Yet the names of the great riders live with racegoers even longer than the names of statesmen who were contemporaneous with them. The senator from New York of a decade ago may be forgotten by another decade, but the name of Tod Sloan will live for a century, and maybe longer. The riding of Garrison served to enrich the phraseology of the English language, for a "Garrison finish" is applicable how to more things than a horse race. Walter Miller, the leading rider of the United States at the present time, will be a memory of racing and the theme of discussion among small boys when New York has expanded so that Belmont park shall scarcely be a suburb.

For it was Miller, the "boy with the flying start," who rode more than 387 winners in 1896 and broke all records that had been heard of in this country or any other. It is a marvelous thing, so racing men think, to be able to bring various horses first to the wire more than 300 times in a season of summer and winter sport. Considering the different dispositions of all the horses that the jockey must ride, their moods, their likes and dislikes—for thoroughbreds are quite as nervous as petted belles of fashion—it is no child's play for an 18-year-old boy to beat his rivals so successfully.

Not old enough to vote, but with the shrewdness of a man of years, it is estimated that Miller will earn by his riding this year $60,000, and jockeys are not paid so handsomely as they were five or six years ago.

Services in Great Demand.

From whom does he receive it? The Newcastle stable, for which Thomas Welch is the trainer, has the first call on his services. That is, he must ride for the Newcastle stable if it has entered a horse for a certain race. James R. Keene has second call for his services. He is the jockey for the Keene stable, therefore, whenever Mr. Keene is racing a horse in some contest in which the Newcastle stable is not competing. If neither of the stables has a horse for a race and another owner desires to secure the services of Miller he may do so. Hence it is possible that the youth may ride in every race in each afternoon of sport at the metropolitan tracks. When the season is finished in and about New York he may engage himself to ride in California or in the south, wherever he chooses to locate, so that he is confident of engagements the year around if he cares to pursue his vocation without rest.

Walter Miller was born in Brooklyn, of German-Hebrew parentage. It has been asserted that he is a Russian Hebrew. His mother, a small, delicately featured woman, with snapping black eyes and a musical voice, resents this. "My boy," said she, "is of German blood. We came from Baden, Germany. He came by his love of the horse naturally, for all my family are devotedly fond of horses. I had a brother, a daring man, who was expert with horses, could handle them in all their moods and train them perfectly. I, too, am fond of horses. There is no surprise to me that Walter knows them so well. His father," she continued, "is not so much of a horseman, but he is proud of Walter's success. He likes to see his boy do so well."

Physical Characteristics.

Miller is a small, well knit, delicate boned boy, who at first gives the impression of being undersized. A closer inspection of his physique inclines one to correct the idea. Looking him over carefully from head to heels, he seems to be compactly built for his age, and his flesh is distributed evenly over the framework of bones. His racial characteristics are delineated in his facial features.

His height and weight and moderate manner of walk give the impression of delicacy, but there is none of it in his grasp nor in the steel-like hardness of his biceps. His hands are wonderfully strong and feel sensitive and full of vitality to the touch. Perhaps his hands are the most wonderful part of him physically. If nature had intended to create a jockey to order it would have been hard to equip one with a pair of hands that seem so alive as those of this youngster. Possibly it is through his hands that he gets in such close touch with his mounts.

His frame is small and that of a youth, but his face is that of a man of the thirties in some of its moods. His eyes show daring and the power of calculation, while the corners of his mouth close with the spirit of determination.

He is a money maker. He went into the business of riding race horses for a living because he wanted to acquire a fortune. He is rapidly building one. He presented his mother with a beautiful home in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn. It is in Westminister road, and cost $10,000. It is handsomely furnished and splendidly maintained.

Takes Care of His Money.

He began with the first money he received to take his money to his mother. He is not a spendthrift, and he cares little for the luxuries of society. His mother took his earnings and invested them. They were invested so well that she is proud of her work and admits that his income has been considerably increased by her prudent and foresight. Of late Miller has advised with her, as to the placing of some of his earnings, and she is as happy as the boy that he has shown good judgment and business intelligence in suggesting where certain sums could be invested to good advantage. There is little reason to doubt that his ambition to acquire a fortune by his efforts in the saddle will be realized and realized handsomely.

Scores of boys try every year to become successful jockeys. Most of them fail. Why is it, then, that Miller is a success? Is it because of his seat in the saddle, his short stirrups, or some other typical accessory to the equipment of his mount? This question has been asked time and again.

"Tom" Welch places little credit in any of these details.

Advantage in Method.

Miller says he perches himself well up on a horse's neck and rides with short stirrups because he has a greater leverage on the horse's head and can guide him more perfectly.

"I can feel the temper of the horse through his mouth when I have a stiff rein on him over his neck," said the jockey. "If I were to ride in the old fashioned English seat the horse's head would get away from me, and the chances are that I would miss some good opportunities in the race to gain distance."

It was Tod Sloan who originated the idea of riding forward. Possibly Miller carries it more to an extreme than some jockeys, but he is light, strong and has perfect confidence in himself.

For two years there has been great rivalry between Miller and Radtke. The latter has been less successful, but is nevertheless considered to be one of the best boys who ride professionally in the United States.

Radtke is of different temperament than Miller. He is a somewhat fiery little chap and rather self-willed. His sharp replies earned him punishment in 1906, but this year he has exercised better control over himself and fewer words of caution have had to be administered to him. He is considered to be very clever in making a strong finish. Like Miller, he is possessed of much physical power in his arms, and when a horse is tiring in the last strides of a hard-fought race, Radtke fairly lifts him along, as he holds up his head and gives him encouragement to make the three or four final leaps that may win a stake worth thousands of dollars.

Good Judges of Pace.

Koerner and E. Dugan are two clever lightweights who are skillful in judging pace and placing their horses to good advantage in a field of many starters. Both are able to rate the speed at which they are moving by constant association of intervals of time with the distance posts on the track. There have been harness horse drivers who were able to tell almost to the fraction of a second the speed at which they were driving. So it is with some of the jockeys. Constant devotion to their work has enabled them to gather relative ideas of time and motion, and it is a great aid to a jockey to be able to rate his horse as to have some reserve strength and power left for the finish.

Heavyweights Go Abroad.

Lightweight jockeys are so much more in demand in the United States than they are abroad that it is usually a matter of but a few years before the poor wight gives up in despair, as his finds that nature has insisted upon imposing more flesh over his skeleton than he can possibly rid himself of.

When that happens many of the best American jockeys go to the tracks of foreign lands, where the weight imposts are heavier. They usually find little trouble in obtaining employment. A number of them are abroad this year. There is "Danny" Maher, for instance, in England. He is one of the best American jockeys who ever left his native land to ride for foreign stables. He has been phenomenally successful in England—so much so that the richest owners are eager to obtain him. He is riding his second season for Lord Derby. Maher is the only jockey now riding who has won three English derbies. Of itself that is a feat of sufficient importance to establish his reputation in the turf world. It is estimated that he will earn $50,000 in the saddle this year. He commands a high price, and owners are as willing to pay it to him as they are to Miller, for they know that they are securing a competent boy and one upon whom every reliance may be placed.

Other Successful Jockeys.

Lucien Lyne, a jockey much admired in New York when he was in the heyday of his success, is riding in England. Possibly his earnings will amount to $15,000. The English turfmen are willing to pay handsomely a smart American boy.

"Fred" Tarral, whom everybody knows in America who knows about race horses, has been riding in Austria with remarkable success for the last three or four years, and is over the age again.

"Skeets" Martin rides in Hungary with a probable income of $15,000 for the year, and "Tommy" Burns has been engaged by a German stable and is likely to receive not less than $15,000 for the season's work.

France has a fine lot of American jockeys, and all of them fairly successful. Spencer is one, Turner another, and then there are Rausch, O'Connor, "Johnny" Reiff, Cormack, Henry, Shields, McIntyre and Wiley.

Prizes of Success.

The successful jockey who likes to see his reflection in mirrors, who revels in the girls and is fascinated by the glare of the myriad lamps that burn after dark, will not lack of hospitality. There will be a hundred hosts to entertain him every night if he but says the word.

The bell of a well-known trainer's cottage at Sheephead bay rang timorously, and the trainer went to the door. A mite of a boy with his cap on dangling from his fingers looked side-long at the man and said: "I'd like to see Mr. Flanner."

"I'm Mr. Flanner," was the reply.

"What is it, son?"

"Please, sir, I'd like to get a position with you as jockey. My folks will let me."

"Do you know what you will have to do?" said the trainer. "You will

From the State Capital

Information and Gossip Furnished by Special Correspondent at Lansing.

Lansing.—In order to divert a needed proportion of the desirable class of immigrants to Michigan, instead of allowing them to flock to the already overcrowded cities of the east, the federal immigration bureau will establish a new office in Detroit. The national representative will work in connection with the free state employment offices, care being taken to ship the new comers to the portion of the state where they are needed and to prevent their flocking to cities which now have an abundance of labor. The matter was arranged by State Labor Commissioner Malcolm McLeod, and it is expected that the man who will represent the government will arrive within ten days. The arrangement was made through Terence V. Powderly, commissioner of information in the federal immigration bureau. Mr. Powderly's office was created by the last congress for the purpose of spreading the thousands of immigrants who reach these shores through the various states where they are needed. Mr. Powderly has since been investigating conditions in the middle west and is about to arrange for the establishment of a number of branches in the large cities of the country. Mr. McLeod met Mr. Powderly at the convention of labor statisticians in Jamestown and promptly offered to cooperate with the government in securing a desirable class of labor for Michigan. There are now three state offices, Grand Rapids and Saginaw having offices, besides the one here, and a new one is to be opened in Kalamazoo within a few weeks, the legislature having provided the funds for its maintenance. "There are immigrants that we don't want and there are those that we do," said Mr. McLeod. "We do not desire to see the state overrun with the hordes of southern Europe, but there are large numbers of Scandinavians coming in every year, to say nothing of Germans and people from the British isles, and we want all these people that we can get, so long as there is a place for them. Within the past few years the farms and the small towns have been denuded of working people because of the influx to the large cities, and there are many places where laborers are needed. The idea is to take up the question with the state senate and other organizations and ascertain just where people are needed. In this way the labor market will not be glutted and no one will be forced out of place. The state labor bureau has accomplished a great deal in aiding both employers and working people, and in this way a great deal more can be done."

Commissioner Asks Decision.

Attorney General Bird has been called upon by the state tax commission to decide whether, under the law, attorneys for electric railway companies may make complaint of unequal assessments and secure a review of the tax rolls in the townships through which roads represented by them may run. The question becomes important in view of the provision of the law that only "resident taxpayers" may complain of assessments. The attorney general may hold that this provision of the law which is a part of the Galbraith act partially knocked out by the supreme court is not constitutional, as it does not give all taxpayers the equal benefit of the laws of the state. The state tax commission asserts that the law certainly discriminates in a most unjust manner against non-residents. The Grand Rapids, Grand Haven & Muskegon Electric Railway company is one of the complainants against assessments in several townships: The Detroit, Jackson & Chicago Interurban company complains of an over-assessment in Ypsilanti, and the Niles, South Bend & St. Joseph Interurban company also has grievances. Henry Richard, a wealthy taxpayer in Forest Home township, Antrim county, has filed a complaint and has asked for a review of the assessments in the entire township, which includes a portion of the village of Bellaire.

Proposed Model Highway.

The people of Lansing, East Lansing, Alameda, Meridian and Delhi townships, September 17 vote on the plan to make a small tax levy for the purpose of building a section of model highway designed to become part of a main traveled road across Michigan. The question of making a levy of not more than two mills in the two cities and four townships will be submitted on the day of election for delegates to the constitutional convention.

Camp Grounds in Good Shape.

Col. W. G. Rogers, assistant quartermaster general, who is at Ludington preparing for the annual encampment of the state troops, reports that the camp grounds are in good condition for the assembling of the National guard there. Assistant Adj. Gen. Cox says that on an average from 55 to 60 men will be taken to camp by each company commander. This will make about 2,200 enlisted men in camp, as there are 41 companies in all branches of the National guard.

State Fair Features.

Perhaps the notable state fair feature this year, or at least that which will first attract attention, will be the grounds themselves. All this summer a large force of men has been working on roads, walks, lawn making and shrub and floral embellishment. There are expanses of green lawn that would justify signs to keep off the grass if it were possible to so manage the crowds that past indications show will overrun the grounds this year. There has been an increase in entries in every line consequent on liberal premiums and the good results from preceding years. The race track has been worked continuously since frost went out of the ground, and is now in the finest of shape for the making of good records. The purses are bringing first-class entries and a program that will interest horse lovers throughout the week is assured. There will be a much larger exhibit than usual of machinery and agricultural implements and most of the space in this department has been taken. In the horticultural building there will be 12 additional large tables on which to spread out the more numerous displays coming; and in every other department—horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, poultry, farm products and everything else—the story is the same, a keener interest and more exhibits. A number of the northern Michigan counties, knowing they have the goods to show, have made appropriations, through the boards of supervisors, to prepare and keep on view through the fair exhibits of the products of their sections, satisfied that they can show farmers that there is plenty of good and cheap land in Michigan to warrant attention and endeavor. There will be six rest tents, one of which will be conducted by the Temple theater management, with a W. C. T. U. tent as a neighbor. The Order of the Eagles will also be about in proximity to the theater tent, and the Maccabees will have two tents. A new fire department building has been erected, and two large tents will serve as hospitals.

STATE OIL INSPECTOR.

Frank S. Neal, of Northville, appointed to succeed Charles L. Benjamin.

Binder Twine Project.

"There is a remote possibility that the supreme court may not sustain the law," said Thomas J. Navin, of Detroit, a member of the prison board of control, speaking of the bill passed by the last legislature appropriating money for the establishing of a binder twine plant at the prison. A meeting of the board was held at the prison to discuss the matter, and Gov. Warner and Atty. Gen. Bird were present. Even Mr. Bird thought the statute would be sustained. At least six months are required to secure the machinery, and unless prompt action is taken the state will not be in a position to sell any twine next year. If the law is held by the supreme court to be good, there is yet time to get the plant in operation, but immediate action is necessary, as the twine has to be delivered early in the spring.

All Qualified Electors to Vote.

Aside from the elimination of the party enrollment feature from the primary election for the nomination of candidates for delegates to the state constitutional convention, the election will be unique by reason of the fact that no registration of voters will be required. Information to this effect has been given out at the office of Attorney General Bird in the announcement that an opinion has been prepared and will be ready for publication in a day or two touching the matter of registration in connection with the forthcoming primary election.

State Legislative Candidates.

Hon. John F. Crotty has decided to become a candidate for the state legislature to succeed Stanley D. Montgomery. He will be a candidate on the Democratic ticket. In all probability the convention will be called shortly and as there is no opposition to the nomination of Mr. Crotty his selection will probably follow as a matter of course. It seems to be conceded that Alex. Cohen will be the Republican nominee, although nothing is assured until the convention meets.

CELEBRATE ON 14TH

FRENCH INDEPENDENCE DAY
ALSO IN JULY.

Anniversary Not Heralded with Firing of Pistols and Crackers as in America, But Rejoicing is General.

Independence day in France is celebrated in the same month—fervid July—as in the sister republic with whose early struggles she so cordially sympathized, but on the 14th instead of the 4th, says the Cincinnati Enquirer.

But no firing of pistols and banging of crackers arouses weary sleepers before dawn and makes the air heavy with the fumes of powder. Early in the morning, from all parts of the country, trains fairly packed with excursionists—for all the railroads offer reduced prices—bring crowds to throng the streets of Paris, which is adorned with flags for their reception.

Every shop is closed. Some of the theaters give free performances. The little tables on the sidewalks outside the cafes are crowded with people sipping wine, beer, coffee or lemonade. The cafe, the club of middle-class Frenchman, is the center of celebration. There is an atmosphere of general good humor even where the crowd is denser; rude elbowing and jostling are extremely rare and when they do occur the offender is not apt to be of French nationality.

During the afternoon, in the direction of the suburbs, dancing in the streets is frequently seen, not only by the lads and lassies, but round middle-aged and even elderly people join the couples, whirling around with genuine enjoyment, if little grace.

Here, too, are the games one would expect to find at a rustic fair. At the corner of two streets near Montmartre, at last year's celebration, rose a tall greased pole, surrounded near the top by a circle. A prize was offered to the lucky climber who touched it and comical were the frantic struggles to reach the goal as one after another made the attempt in vain. At last, when these various unsuccessful trials had doubtless rendered the pole less slippery, a slender lad of 16 came forward and slowly, but surely, worked his way upward till he touched the ring.

Peals of laughter from a neighboring group drew attention to a little party of street gamins. From a beam above their heads, hung, twisting slowly, an iron sauceman, on whose bottom, imbedded in half an inch of soot and grease, glittered small silver coins. These were the prizes of any boy who, with his hands tied behind his back, was agile enough to pull them off with his teeth. The sight of the little urchins, their faces covered with black streaks and smears, as they jumped and bobbed for the money swaying above their heads, was one of the most amusing sights of the day.

No matter how hot July 14 may be, it does not prevent the assembling of the pleasure seekers, and, as the long summer twilight began, the crowds in the streets grew greater. On this one day of the year, after a certain hour, no cabs are allowed on the boulevards, whose wide expanse of pavements is converted at short intervals into improvised ballrooms. As the evening shadows close in rows of small gaslights outline the facades of all the public buildings and, wavering in the light breeze, produce a wonderfully beautiful effect.

Now the crowd drifts in the direction of the Seine, near which there is to be a superb display of fireworks. The bridges, which would afford the most unobstructed view of the whole scene, are, unfortunately, closed to the public, but all along the banks stand crowds of people, waiting with imperturbable good nature for the commencement of the spectacle and then watching with the same unruffled patience the brilliant colors reflected from sky and river till the last tinge fades from the calm water.

Gobelin Tapestry.

How many people know that since 1791 no tapestry produced by the famous Gobelin looms has been sold? Several wonderful creations have been presented by France as gifts, but these famous works belong to the state, and a private individual may not buy, no matter how much money is in his purse.

Louis XIV. bought this great establishment in 1662, and ever since, with but short intervals of rest, these famous looms have been producing priceless treasures. A tapestry is designed to be a background and is in reality a picture woven in cloth, though not to be judged as a painting, as there is only a suggestion of perspective, the pleasing effect being in the marvelous harmonizing of colors.

Ten years is often consumed in producing a single piece, the cost being in the neighborhood of $50,000. Each tapestry is a complete picture, and there are no "set" patterns.

A Constant Menace.

"One has to be very careful in choosing friends nowadays."

"Yes. This post card crasse lays you liable to all sorts of embarrassment from people with a mistaken sense of humor."

A Proper Feeling for Style.

Uncle—Here, my boy, are a couple of chocolate cigars. But where are you going with them?

Little Johnny—Why, I am going to eat them in the smoking room.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

Miss Rose Lehman Killed by Electric Car at the Notten Crossing Wednesday Evening.

Miss Rose Lehman, daughter of J. M. Lehman, of South Main street, was instantly killed by a freight car on the D. J. & C. electric road, at the Notten crossing, about 8 o'clock last evening.

Miss Lehman and Mesdames Houser and Hoffer spent the day in the Notten whortleberry marsh and at the close of the day's berry gathering the party went to the Notten crossing to take a car and return to their homes. When a car came in sight Miss Lehman signaled it to stop. She did not know it was a freight car, which did not stop on signals and as the car came on, she endeavored to step out of the way. When too late, she found she could not step clear of the track, on account of a platform built close to the track for handling milk cans. The car struck her, throwing her under the platform and death was instant. Her left shoulder was broken, and there is a few bruises on the left side of her head.

Justice Theo. Riemschneider was called to the scene of the accident and the following were drawn to act as a coroner's jury: E. J. Notten, Fred Notten, Fred Mensing, P. Schweinfurth, Floyd Schweinfurth and B. C. Whitaker. After viewing the remains the inquest was adjourned.

The body was brought to Chelsea on the 10:10 car last evening and Undertaker Mapes took charge and moved it to the home of the parents.

The United Commercial Travelers' baseball team, of Jackson, want to play a game of baseball in Chelsea and they challenge the Freeman Bros. team, John Farrell's team or Tommy McNamara's team to meet them in a game any Saturday afternoon during the next six weeks. Every member of the Jackson team is a commercial traveler and Capt. Hague of the organization claims they can play ball. We believe that the Chelsea boys can accommodate the travelers and that they can also play the national game just a little better than the travelers.

Adam Faist last Friday shipped to Appleton, New York, a market wagon that has a capacity for carrying 150 bushel baskets of peaches. The man who bought the wagon had it specially made to his order. The vehicle weighed when crated for shipment 1,300 pounds. Mr. Faist has an order for another like the one he shipped, which he expects to have ready for delivery about September 1st. So far this season Mr. Faist has filled orders for three residents of Appleton.

The supreme court handed down a decision Tuesday morning upholding the binder twine act. The validity of the act had been questioned, chiefly because three figures of the appropriation had been left out of the body. The court held that this would not affect it. Orders have already been placed for machinery to be installed in the Jackson prison and the twine plant will be ready for operation next year.

WOMEN AND THE HOUSEHOLD

NOBBY TRAVELING SUIT FOR HOT WEATHER

JUST FROM FASHIONDOM

This season the hat brims are narrow in front and show the hair over forehead. But in the back the brims are wide and the drooping bangs hide the coiffure. This is the reverse of last year's fashion.

Black-velvet buttons are used extensively by sewing them on in little circles around a center of embroidery stitches, this design forming a yoke on a waist.

A millinery novelty is a wreath of wire, disposed not in the ordinary manner round the crown or as an ornament to the brim, but reared at side or hooped at the back.

Black lace flounces are again coming into fashion. Through the white lace was very much to the fashion and many are going to take out treasured flounces of Chantilly or English lace and get them mounted trailing skirts of taffetas or soft lin.

Feather and malleine ruffs are not worn entirely because they add a little warmth to the throat when fur is first dropped. They are so generally becoming and add such a finish to a spring toilet that their vogue is certain for this season than any of their useful qualities, which in the case of the flimsier ruffs are certainly not great.

Pale blue seems to be first choice for a bit of color is needed, but white is also popular. Khaki linen, striped or embroidered in white, makes an excellent trimming for a white linen and there are some prettily striped stuffs showing white stripes on a khaki ground.

Rather important sashes appear on some of the frocks for younger women—one in opalescent moire, with a black hem, has a black tassel each point of the forked "swallow-tail" into which the ends are drawn. Another, also of moire on a little biscuit cloth gown, is all black, and in a bow high at the back of the waist, with fringes at the hem; third, of chine-ribbon, has tiny rings at the edge in the mixed colors employed in the floral pattern. Linen suits and riding habits are keeping many needles busy, since it is evident that the fad for linen attire will continue. The handsomest of the elaborate linen suits that are reckoned sufficiently elegant to be worn to dressy functions are "embroidered" in fine soutache braiding, the braid used edgewise, in intricate patterns known as "vermicelli."

Many of these have small crocheted buttons introduced in their designs, several gross being sometimes consumed on a single costume. The inverted plaiting going all the way around the skirt and falling loose at the knees is seen again this spring. Numbers of the models have bias bands stitched down the seams; others are seen with tucks running in perpendicular lines to the bottom of the skirt. Bias bands, folds and tucks going around the skirt are in evidence on many of the untrussed garments. The heavy linen skirts, whether plaid or elaborately trimmed, are about four inches clear of the ground. The skirt to the lingerie gown is circular fashion with a slight train.

HYGIEIC VEILS

The use of veils, as mentioned some time ago, has practically passed in Paris, and hair nets, which are made of the finest human hair and are practically invisible, keep the coiffure in place and do away with the disease-breeding veil, that also injures the eyes. One might be pardoned for violently inveighing against the use of veils. As a rule they are not properly adjusted, and a veil once worn in the street is full of germs, and these are brought directly over the eyes, mouth and nose, so that if the soil be ripe for the germs they will grow and breed, and yet few people think of even brushing or shaking their veils after they have been worn.

The net veils with sprawling patterns over the face have been found very unbecoming to not a few women this winter, because they have been too often improperly adjusted by being dragged in at the base of the neck and fastened with some sort of ornamental pin. In all these cases these veils should have been drawn in and fastened at the edge of the back brim. So fastened, and with the face portion flung back of the head, or draped around its edge, as was the fashion several years ago, these veils are decorative.

The really hygienic veil, if one must wear one, is the pure white or cream-colored lace applique, which may be washed every time it is worn, or cleaned.

HATS.

What range? What variety? There are pill boxes. There are Gainsboroughs. There are odd oval mushrooms. There are hats with brims simply immense. There are crowns without any trim at all that nestle in the collar. Some brims stick straight out at the back and some others are bent over flat against the hair.

Worth Knowing.

When pressing woolen goods spread a newspaper over the material instead of a cloth and there will be no bother with making of the troublesome lint. To prevent salt from becoming damp or cracking in the shaker place a few grains of rice in shaker when filling. In favoring puddings, if the milk is rich, cream favoring is given, but if the milk is poor, vanilla makes it richer. Starched things should be rather dry for pressing. If ironed when too dry the starch really thrown away, as it does not stiffen at all.

Some women say that a lump of orris root dropped into the boiler on wash day gives a pleasant fragrance with the clothes when they have been ironed.

Potato Cleans. It is not generally known that the potato has great cleaning properties. Cold potatoes, when used instead of soap, clean the hands well and keep the skin soft. The water in which potatoes have been boiled is excellent for sponging out dirt from silk.

Care of Mirrors. Never let a mirror be hung where the sun's rays fall upon it. The light and heat produce a chemical disintegration of the silvering at the back, which injures the reflecting power and makes the glass dull.

Olives. When a large bottle of olives is opened, only a part of them used, the remainder, though left in the brine, becomes comparatively tasteless. To avoid this, pour out an inch of olive oil on the top and cork well. The olives will then retain their flavor indefinitely.

A Milk Cooler.

Take a large box, put dirt or sand in bottom; put a small box, just large enough to hold the milk, inside the large box, dirt or sand; pack dirt or sand firmly around the small box. Place the milk in small bottle, favoring, pour cool water on dirt, as it dries out. You will find this equal to any cellar or spring house for keeping milk fresh and sweet.

Place for Pan Covers.

An old asparagus crate, lined and covered without with thin fabric cloth, makes a handy place to keep the covers of stew-pans and kettles separate from pie and cake tins, as the partition in the center leaves ample space to put covers in one side and tins in the other. It helps keep the pantry in order and saves time when cooking, as one can easily place her hand on just what is needed.

Hanging Flower Baskets.

Take wire baskets that have done duty for frying croquettes, potato chips, etc. Paint them black, line them with a green moss, fill them with soil, dirt, and plant any of the quick growing vines and bright geraniums. Attach handle of basket to one of the 10 cent spiral springs used on screen doors. It is then ready to hang on porch.

To Freshen Butter.

If the butter loses its flavor, put it in a bowl of water, salt, and stir with a wooden spoon. Let it stand for about five minutes and change two or three times. You may also add a little baking soda.

THE SEWING CIRCLE

Mercerized cotton will wear much longer than ordinary darning cotton when used for mendings.

When eyelets have one end round and the other pointed, punch the round end with a stiletto, then cut to the end of the point. This gives a much better shape than cutting the whole length.

A pretty dresser or sideboard cover can be made from brown linen, the ends embroidered in scallops with white embroidered cotton, and a monogram or initial worked on one end. The sides may be hemstitched. In putting ruffles or other trimming on underwear, sew the seam on the right side. Stitch a tuck above just wide enough to cover seam, then stitch the edge of the tuck down over the seam, and you have a very neat finish.

A piece of tin about nine by eighteen inches in size is better than a board to use when basting plaits, folds or lace insertion to sheer material, as the needle slips over it more easily. Such a piece of tin is very handy for use when stamping patterns.

For a pretty table cover, crochet wheels from linen thread and sew them on a bleached or unbleached canvas foundation. Use ten to form a right angle in each corner and buttonhole them in place, then cut the canvas from under them. They may be used in a row all around the cover. Flowers having petals made of Honiton braid with French knots in the center may be used in the same way on a linen cover. Fringe the edges of the cover.

To clean leather bags peel and cut a banana, and with the cut portion rub the bag all over. Finally go over the bag with a clean sponge dipped in neat's foot. Let this soak in for three or four hours before polishing with a camels skin.

This nobby and attractive little suit is just the thing to wear when on your trip to the mountains, sight-seeing, or the seashore this season.

MAKING AND OVERCOMING HABITS

Many Become Permanent If Persisted in Too Far.

Where does it originate and why is it so difficult to break a habit of long standing?

A habit usually begins by one conscious voluntary action. Why does it so often terminate in mechanical acts and become stronger than the will power?

It belongs to the reflex actions of the nervous system—an external impression is received, a desire manifested, this impression or desire is transmitted by a group of nerves to the center and an impulse of action is sent back through another group of nerves. These impulses, when repeatedly traveling up and down the nerves, will get the nerves used to the work, and very soon the nerves begin to perform the same acts as the slightest reminder of the impulse, or even without an impulse from outside, except the usual time for the performance of the act.

It is the quality of the nervous system to organize conscious actions into unconscious ones.

Walking is a good example of reflex action, which becomes an unconscious act. At the slight stimulant of putting the foot on the ground for the purpose of walking we soon go on walking in an entirely unconscious manner, our minds being occupied at the time of thinking of anything but the act of walking.

If two acts be at first performed voluntarily in succession, and this is often repeated, the performance of the first is at once followed mechanically by the second.

Almost everyone of us can recall instances of being accustomed to put a certain article at a given place. We will mechanically go to that spot long after the article is removed to another part of the house.

Some actions are so well trained that they very often are repeated in sleep. Somnambulists can walk, or even perform on a musical instrument, without consciousness. There are some habits that we can get rid of by using our will power and training the same group of nerves to be implicated in some other action, but when the habit is too well fixed on our nerves it is beyond our will power to change the well-worn path of the nerve function.

WALNUT COOKIES—Use one cup walnut meal, chopped fine, one of sugar, one egg, well beaten, two table spoons milk, one heaped teaspoon baking powder; flour to make rather stiff dough to roll.

SAND CAKE—Use one pound butter, 1 pound sugar, pulverized, beaten to a cream. Add yolks of eight eggs well beaten, then one pound cornstarch and the whites of 8 eggs, alternately, a little at a time. Flavor and make in loaf or gem tins. The whites of eggs are not beaten separately or whipped.

LEFTOVER FISH—Fish may be used for the second meal by removing the bones and breaking into small pieces. Then put a layer on the bottom of a baking dish, over it a layer of cream sauce, and then a layer of cracker crumbs. Repeat until the fish is all used, always having the cracker crumbs on top. Place in the oven and bake to a nice brown color.

ECONOMY IN POTATO COOKING—When we intend to bake potatoes we prepare them as usual then put them on in water and bring them to the boiling point. They are then taken out and put into the oven where they bake in about twenty minutes instead of the usual three-quarters of an hour, and, besides, they seem to be done much better. We originated this scheme because we use a gas stove and wished to economize in the use of gas.

CRABAPPLES—To each pound of fruit allow a half pound of sugar and a pint of water to three pounds of sugar. When the syrup is boiling hot drop in the crabapples. They will cook quickly. When done, fill a jar with the fruit and fill up the crevices with syrup.

CANNING PEACHES—In canning peaches crack the stones and can the kernels in some of the juice. You will find them an excellent addition to fruit salad.

GRAHAM WAFERS—Two cups sugar, one cup buttermilk, one cup lard, one egg, one teaspoon soda, a little nutmeg, one cup wheat flour; mix as much graham flour as you can; roll thin, pick with fork thoroughly before cutting; cut in squares.

GRAPE SHRUB—Four quarts grapes to one quart of vinegar; let stand four days, then strain. To each pint of juice add one pound of sugar, boil twenty minutes, bottle and keep in a dry, cool place. Red raspberries or black are also nice.

CARE OF FURNITURE

All Fine Furniture Is Very Easily Scared On Account of Its High Polish

There are many little hints the following of which will prolong the life of some valued piece of furniture or article of bric-a-brac far beyond its natural period of existence.

How many persons, for instance, think that when they place a good chair or table near an open fireplace, a register, or any very warm spot, the heat will cause the wood and glue to dry, thus bringing about "dry rot," where the pieces are joined together? How many women do not lean carelessly against the back of some polished wood chair, quite oblivious of the fact that the sharp belt buckles they are wearing are making great scratches that can never be eradicated?

Then, too, there are the little suggestions on the care of ornaments, so seldom either known or carried out. For instance, probably very few persons, indeed, clean glass lamp globes, window panes, etc., properly. Especially for the former, the best thing is to place pulverized pumice stone between the layers of a folded piece of soft muslin, and stitch around the edges to prevent the powder from spilling. Wipe the glass with this dry cloth, and it will become clean and sparkle almost instantly. Enough powder will remain on the cloth to be used many times without renewing.

Another good idea is to keep a wet sponge in the cabinet with ivory curios or carvings. It will provide moisture that prevents cracking from dry heat. Of course, the sponge must be remoistened occasionally. Often even valuable china is defective in the firing, and so it would be well to keep all such acids as lemon, vinegar, etc., away from fine china, as in the event of its not being properly fired the acid will take all the paint from it.

As a guard against accident, when a valuable vase is filled with flowers, it should first be partly filled with

Moths and Rugs.

Dyed rugs, such as dog and goat skins, are not attacked by moths, because in curing and dying them poisons are put in that make them practically immune from attacks by these insects; but the contrary is true of the natural skins, such as polar bear, tiger, leopard, etc., for, though the curing process they go through contains more preservatives than are put into that used on muffs, boas, etc., they are much more likely to attract these destructive insects than those that are dyed.

sand, over which the water should be poured. This will keep the vase from toppling over, by adding to its weight.

And all these are only a few of the useful hints that might be given, and which every housewife should take well to heart.

NEW HANDBAGS.

Brown bags and purses are the fad of the season, and in alligator, pig-skin, cowhide and various other leathers tanned or colored in this fashion shade are now being carried.

Some of the purses are long, others are short, and are severely plain or artistically ornate. There is almost endless number of designs to choose from this year.

For business the plain bag of medium size in brown leather with strap handles is considered the most serviceable and practical model, while the smaller bag of dull suede or glossed kid, effectively mounted with silver, gold or artistically studded with tiny nail heads, is carried for dressy street wear.

Metal bands, plain or chased with flowers, scroll or geometric designs, are being used extensively on purses and make most attractive ornamentation for alligator or pigskin bags that are otherwise plain.

The oblong purse, with no trimming except a button like a clasp at one end, is considered fashionable in alligator, suede or any of the favorite skins. Such a model is particularly useful for shopping, because it has a strong chain handle that may be in black, imitation silver, gold or tinted in any shade to match the costume, or to correspond in tone with the leather bag.

TO CLEAN LEATHER.

To clean leather upholstery wash the leather with warm water to which is added a little good vinegar. Use an absolutely clean cloth. To restore the polish prepare the whites of two eggs with a teaspoonful of turpentine to each egg. This should be whisked briskly, then rubbed into the dry leather with a piece of clean flannel and dried off with a piece of clean linen cloth.

Cleaning Trays, Etc.

A paste of salad oil and salt is said to remove the white marks on polished trays or tables occasioned by placing upon them heated dishes. The mixture should be spread lightly over the stain, and allowed to remain an hour. It may then be removed with a soft, dry cloth and the discoloration will vanish with it.

Summer Curtains.

For summer draperies the daintiest possible curtains now come of the Swiss' muslin varicely with chine flowers in any color softly blurred in charmingly artistic effects; the border ruffle shows a slightly closer design than the body of the curtain.
