TO RESUME OPERATIONS

AT THE STOVE WORKS.

Manager Stanton Expects to Start the Plant Next Monday, But Not in Full Force.
The Detroit Trust Co., as receiver for the Glazier Stove Co., will resume operations in the stove works. This was decided on last Monday at a meeting of the creditors held in the Detroit Trust Co.'s office in Detroit.

Judge Kinne on Tuesday morning issued an order authorizing the Detroit Trust Co. to continue the business.

H. L. Stanton, manager, expects to start the plant up next Monday. The full force will not be put to work at the start, but the force will be increased as fast as the output of the plant will guarantee. The foremen who had charge of the various departments will be retained, and most of the former workmen will be given employment. This is indeed good news for Chelsea.

ACCEPTS A POSITION.

H. I. Stimson Will Organize a New Department for the Wehrle Stove Co., of Newark, Ohio.

Henry I. Stimson, secretary of the Glazier Stove Company, has accepted a position with Wehrle Stove Company of Newark, Ohio. Mr. Stimson is to organize a new department, and feels that his new work will give him a most encouraging opportunity.

The Wehrle Company has been growing very rapidly for some years and has become one of the very largest in the country. Eight hundred molders are employed and a total of 2,500 people are on the pay roll. The immense plant covers 22 acres of ground, and is a model for convenient arrangement and labor saving devices. Mr. Stimson will begin his new work about February 1st.

John A. Palmer.

John A. Palmer died suddenly at his home on Railroad street, Chelsea, Wednesday, January 22, 1908, in the 68 year of his age. Mr. Palmer was about town Tuesday, and the announcement of his demise was a great shock to his friends.

Mr. Palmer was a native of Oneida county, New York, born in 1840 and was a son of Austin and Jane (Russell) Palmer. The father came to Michigan in 1841 and settled in Monroe county, while later he took up his abode in Huron, this state and subsequently became a resident of Ann Arbor, whence he afterwards removed to Brooklyn, Michigan, passing away there in 1882. Later the family removed to Waukegan, Illinois, where they spent one year, returning thence to Grass Lake, Michigan, where they lived until 1887, when he arrived in Chelsea.

J. A. Palmer acquired his education in the public schools of the various localities in which he resided and accompanied his parents on their different removals, becoming a resident of Chelsea when a youth of eighteen. Here he learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed until 1861, when a spirit of patriotism prompted his enlistment for service in the Civil war and he joined Company D, First Michigan Infantry, for three months. On the expiration of that period he was discharged but in 1862 re-enlisted as a member of Company E, Fourth Michigan Cavalry, for three years, continuing with that regiment until the close of the war. The command was assigned to the Army of the Cumberland and he participated in all of the battles with his company but was never wounded, although he once received a scratch. He took part in the Atlanta campaign and after the capitulation of that city returned to Tennessee and joined the army under General Thomas at Nashville. Later, with his command he aided in the defeat of General Hood's forces. Mr. Palmer enlisted as a private and by meritorious and valorous conduct on the field of battle won promotion from rank to rank until he was made first lieutenant of Company B, and was later brevetted captain.

When the war was over Mr. Palmer returned to Chelsea and entered into partnership with J. P. and H. L. Wood under the firm style of Wood Brothers & Company, manufacturers of all dealers in wagons and carriages. He continued that business for three years and then sold out, after which he entered the employ of the Michigan Central Railroad Company, with which he continued until 1876. He then went into the private bank of R. Kempf & Brother as cashier and bookkeeper and when the bank was reorganized in 1898 under the name of the Kempf Commercial & Savings Bank he was made cashier which position he held until about a year ago.

In 1896 Mr. Palmer was united in marriage to Miss Jennie S. Townsend, of Chelsea, a daughter of Henry Townsend. She died in 1892 and the following year Mr. Palmer was married to Carrie Mohrlock, a daughter of John Mohrlock, of Sylvan township. They have one child, J. A. Palmer, Jr., who was born in October 1898.

In his political views Mr. Palmer was a stalwart republican and in March 1905, was elected president of the village. He had also filled that position in the '80s and he has been treasurer of his township and trustee of the village, proving a capable and efficient officer. He belonged to Olive lodge, F. & A. M., Olive chapter, R. A. M., Ann Arbor Commandery, K. T., Mystic Shrine, K. of P. and K. O. T. M. M., and was in hearty sympathy with the principals upon which these organizations are founded. He likewise belonged to R. P. Carpenter Post, G. A. R.

CELEBRATE SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

Thirty-seven of the Friends of the Couple Met at their Home Monday Evening.

Twenty-five years ago last Saturday, January 18, Frank A. Leach and Miss Emma Smith were united in marriage, and they have been residents of this community ever since they assumed the vows that united them as husband and wife.

Monday evening thirty-seven of their friends gave them a surprise party at their home in honor of the Silver Anniversary of their marriage, and it was the greatest surprise the couple have had during the quarter century of their married life.

Mr. Leach was about ready to retire for the night, when suddenly the door was opened and into the room marched their friends. Yet another surprise was in store for the couple. Some time after the arrival of the first party the friends from Cement City, with Mr. and Mrs. Leach spent Saturday and Sunday, suddenly came into the house, and the couple were compelled to acknowledge that they had got the one lasting surprise of their lives.

The evening was spent in games and music, and at the close of a very enjoyable evening refreshments were served.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. Trowbridge and James Smith, of Cement City.

GLANCES OVER THE WORLD'S NEWS

JAPANESE NEWSPAPERS ARE SAYING THINGS ABOUT HEAVY TAXES.

IT'S TIME TO CALL HALT.

A BIGGER NAVY.

Justice Harlan's View of a Coming War With Yellows.

In an address before the Navy League of the United States Saturday night, Justice John Marshall Harlan, of the United States supreme court, said:

"If I had the opportunity I would vote for an appropriation of $50,000,000 a year for a period of ten years for a large navy. The great importance of the navy is shown in the constitution, which restricts the appropriations for the army, but sets no limit for those of the navy. There is no such thing as friendship between nations as between men. Nations make no sacrifice to preserve friendships and do not forbear to do certain things because they do not meet with the approval of another nation.

"I don't care how large a navy we have, but I want to see a navy large enough to take care of the Pacific and Atlantic oceans and our ports on those oceans.

"Just across the water there is a country with an immense population whose commerce we are seeking. We refer to the people of Asia as the yellow race. There are 400,000,000 Chinese, as strong physically and mentally as we are.

"There is over there another nation whose people are progressive and ambitious. We may some day see a skilled army in Japan of from 5,000,000 to 10,000,000. They will say: 'You claim Europe is your country. This is ours. Get out.' I don't think they have any such idea now. But there will be a conflict between the yellow race and the white race that will shake the earth. When it comes I want to see this country with a navy on both oceans that will be strong enough."

To Leave Cuba.

As far as he can, Secretary Taft has committed the American government to promise to withdraw completely from Cuba in the beginning of spring 1903. This pledge is contained in a letter from the war secretary to the president transmitting the report of Gov. Magoon for the past year.

After declaring that the report from the governor shows the conditions in Cuba to be encouraging, Secretary Taft says:

"It was hoped by some that the census might be completed in September last, I did not think so, and I am not at all surprised to learn that the census has not yet been completed and probably will not be until April or May.

"This will postpone the local elections until June, the presidential election until December, and the installation of the president and congress and the turning over of the island until about March or April, 1903.

"This is in compliance with our promise when we assumed temporary control of Cuba, and it seems to me that we ought to allow nothing to interfere with carrying out that promise.

"There are important interests that would be glad to delay our stay there for years, but good faith and good policy, both, in my judgment, require us to leave at the time appointed."

Effects of Extravagance.

Now that the financial history of 1902 has been made up, the economic writers in all serious journals in Europe are expressing the gravest alarm over the threatened effects of their war and private extravagance. They warn the world, first of all, against the reckless policy of the governments of Great Britain, Germany and Japan.

Disaster worse than any yet experienced or apprehended is indicated unless retrenchment in national expenditures comes speedily. Only one-third of the Prussian loan was subscribed. Germany must reduce her naval program or pay a higher rate of interest.

The latter alternative would only be postponing the day of reckoning. Japan has been the first to recognize the plain exigencies of the situation and has begun to retrench as the only method to revive her disappearing credit.

Mine Owners Blamed.

Condemnation of the mine owners' association of Goldfield and of Gov. Sparks, of Nevada, in calling on the president for federal troops in Goldfield is contained in the report to President Roosevelt of the commission sent to Goldfield to find the real conditions here. Labor Commissioner Neill, Herbert Knox Smith, of the bureau of corporations, and Lawrence O. Murray, assistant secretary of commerce and labor, made up the commission. They have been in Goldfield nearly a month.

The commissioners declare that the mine owners could not make out a case, although given every opportunity to do so, and the union men were given only a brief formal hearing in consequence.

Nearly 200 Perish.

One hundred and seventy people were killed in the little town of Boyertown, Pa., following the explosion of a moving picture machine tank. The exact number of dead will probably never be known, as among the victims were many strangers, and the fire which followed the explosion destroyed some of the bodies.

Boyertown has a population of 2,500 and some large families. In some cases entire families were wiped out. Every house in the borough was converted into a temporary hospital for the care of the injured, and by the time assistance arrived from nearby towns there was little more that could be done.

Thousands Are Ill.

Influenza has Chicago firmly in its grasp. Nearly 650,000 people are suffering from this disease, or its "corollaries," according to the city health department's weekly bulletin.

"Not since the epidemic season of 1898-99 has influenza played such an important part in the mortality as at present," said the report. "During the last week 31 deaths from this disease were reported and in numerous instances were given as a contributing cause of death. The death rate of the week, 17.48, is the highest January rate since 1899, when it was 18.09."

Japanese Methods.
A grim story of Japanese ingenuity comes from the island of Formosa, formerly Chinese territory, but now a possession of the Japanese, who are waging war against the savages of the interior. These are represented to be of the ferocious order, the head-hunting variety of barbarians who are relentless in pursuit of enemies and to whom accordingly it is deemed useless to show mercy in time of hostilities. At least it is represented that very effective means have been taken to bring the savages to terms. As the story goes, whenever a band of the insurgents can be located a strong barbed-wire fence is constructed all around the area, and is heavily charged with electricity. Then the Japanese troops advance, the head-hunters falling back before them. The result is inevitable. If the savages face the Japanese they are killed by rifle fire. If they continue to flee until they bring up against the wire fence they are shocked to death by electricity. Certainly a few applications of that sort of medicine will be effective on the patient. Before such scientific warfare the occupation of the head hunter is gone. And if he persists the head hunter goes himself.

Revolutionists in Russia may be punished but not cured, and the aristocrats among them hold to their principles even more pertinaciously than do the representatives of lower classes. Dispatches record that Mme. Breshkovskaya, a woman 70 years old and one of the first aristocratic converts to the terrorist propaganda, has been cast into prison in St. Petersburg for distributing terrorist literature. She was sent to Siberia in the early seventies, but succeeded in escaping. The experience, however, only strengthened her revolutionary ideas. As in France in the time of the revolution, it is the fiery determination of the women that does much to keep the spirit of rebellion alive.

Princess Louise of Orleans was married to Prince Charles of Bourbon in England recently, in the presence of the king and queen of Spain and nearly 40 other members of royal families. She is the youngest daughter of the late Comte de Paris, who with his brother and uncle served on the staff of Gen. McClellan in the civil war in America. The count's history of the war has been translated into English, but he and his family have never stirred the national imagination as did Lafayette, that other Frenchman who fought with American troops.

They are shipping apples from Portland, Ore., to Vladivostok, Russia, on the opposite side of the Pacific, and the fruit brings $7.50 per bushel. Of course the apples are carefully selected and packed, but the fact that such prices can be obtained fully warrants the trouble. When an American product as perishable as apples can be shipped 10,000 miles across the water and sold at a big profit it should be encouragement to try the same process with other articles. There are hundreds of things which the United States can supply, and the field is waiting to be improved.

There will be music in the air when the big battleship fleet is not engaged in naval practice. No less than 26 pianos with pianolas were taken along on the ships, having been furnished by private subscription for the decoration of officers and men. That gives at least one instrument to each ship, and some of the vessels will have two pianos with mechanical attachments. And as a full supply of both classic and popular music goes along there isn't a doubt that the boys will have some delightful times. The pianolas will play when the guns do not.

A recent chemical investigation by the New York health department discloses the pleasing intelligence that bologna sausage and liverwurst are all that they should be. Frankfurters are uncertain, however, because some of them are seasoned with borax or sulphite. An view of the doubt that was cast on these delicacies some months ago this information will be welcomed by would-be consumers whose faith was undermined. As for a little borax, there might be worse things in sausage!

Our navy certainly is a wonder. One hundred men from each of the battleships which paused at the Island of Trinidad were given shore leave and there were no brawls. Can other nations blame us for pointing with pride?

King Leopold has sent to New York for display a large collection of what are said to be very valuable and interesting exhibits from the Congo. So far as reported no scarred and mutilated natives are among them.

Michigan's Large Crops.

Michigan's eight principal crops in 1907 were worth $115,867,000, the statistics bureau of the department of agriculture reports. Quantities and values by crops are given as follows:

Crop	Quantity	Farm Value
Wheat	51,190,000	$3,485,000
Corn	12,721,000	11,885,000

Tried to Blow Up City Hall.

A deliberate attempt is believed to have been made to blow up the city hall at Grand Rapids. When Supt. Diefenbeck arrived at the building he found the stopcock leading from the water tank to the boilers shut off, and had been turned minutes later it is possible that the boilers would have exploded.

Fought the Storm.

The car ferry Manistique was caught out in the big storm on Lake Michigan, and had a severe bath with the gale and the blizzard. She made port safely, however. The Manistique last week struck a rock outside of Manistique harbor and later sank at a dock at that port. She was then started for Milwaukee to receive repairs.

Thirty-four Railroads Accused.

The Saginaw board of trade and the Flint Improvement League have filed with the interstate commerce commission complaints against the Grand Trunk, Pere Marquette, Michigan Central and 31 other lines charging discrimination against this portion of the state in freight rates to Atlantic seaboard. It is charged Detroit enjoys 78 per cent of Chicago-New York rate, while Saginaw valley is charged 92 per cent, although the latter is only 32 miles farther from the coast. The commission is asked to establish equitable rates for Saginaw territory. About 1,000 shippers are parties to the proceedings.

Still a Mystery.

William Schimmel, found guilty of the murder of Martin Golden at the November term of circuit court, but which verdict was put aside by Judge Padghar, is now a free man. Attorney W. A. Turner, of Muskegon, asked the court to make some final decision of Schimmel's case. Schimmel was in court ready for another trial. Prosecuting Attorney Coburn stated that there was no further showing to be made, and the judge ordered the discharge of the respondent. This closes one of the most sensational murder cases in the county's history and the postmaster still a mystery.

Primary Fund Is Unchanged.

Sentiment has been so strongly expressed against any change in the primary school fund that the constitutional convention made short work of that subject, when it was taken up for consideration in committee of the whole. As agreed to, the proposal provides that all subjects of taxation now contributing to the primary school fund shall continue to so contribute.

W. W. Dean, of Traverse City, has been appointed aide-de-camp to C. O. Burton, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.

Because he says he knows too many politicians, Rep. Adam Walker, of Bay City, has given up his job in the labor commission.

The railroad commission has ordered lists of all free passes filed before February 1, 1908, except those issued to employes.

Frank Walker, 40, a farmer living near Monroe, was struck by a train, and although he was hurled twenty feet, he was not seriously injured.

Erick Game and the entire family of William Van Camp, of Marion, went to Ann Arbor to take the Pasteur treatment. They were bitten by dogs.

Edwin D. Malcolm, of Saginaw, died Sunday of tetanus following an accident to his arm. He caught the arm in a corn sheller and lockjaw followed.

Sheriff Sutton, of Washtenaw county, offered a reward of $200 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Daniel Corey.

A courtship which started in the sixth grade at school culminated at Muskegon when Miss Lena Lane and William H. Cathcart, of this city, were married.

With the transfer of John Van Fleet, who killed Charles Douglas, a fellow convict, in the Jackson prison, the Marquette branch now has nearly forty "lifers."

Capt. W. H. Welcher, of Muskegon, recently appointed a deputy in the state fish and game warden's department, started his career as an officer by "cleaning up" the violators of the game laws in this vicinity. Andrew Backstrom, 70, was the first, and was fined $15 for spearing bass.

Unless there is a severe cold snap within a very few days Menominee and Green Bay are booked for an open winter. Is the prediction of Isaac Battle, the local bridge tender who has watched Menominee weather for half a century. It has been 30 years since navigation has been possible at northern ports during the entire season. This year, however, ice has not yet formed. Car ferries and some other crafts are still running and it looks like history might repeat itself.

Harry Weller, driver of the Royal hotel bus, at Marshall, has secured a patent on an animal collar, which he claims to be sure death for fleas. The ornaments are used as cups, from which padding is saturated with poison. Weller claims that every flea makes its way once a day to the animal's eye for a drink and that the collar will prove a fatal bridge. He expects to be netted a fortune on the invention.

In the Hamilton club oratorical contest held at Chicago Saturday night, the U. of M., represented by Stephen Downey, got second prize. Wisconsin was the winner.

Lansing—According to one prophesying politician developments of the greatest interest and importance are believed to be impending in the political situation within the state.

For more than a year a most formidable sentiment in the Republican party has been convinced of the availability as a candidate for governor of John E. Bird of Adrian, present attorney-general of the state. This sentiment is said to have been held in restraint by two barriers erected by Mr. Bird himself. One barrier was found in his personal friendship for and implicit confidence in Dr. J. B. Bradley, whose candidacy for governor has already drawn to it a large following; another barrier was Mr. Bird's reluctance to believe that the demand for him was imperative and would not be satisfied as well or even better in the merits of some other candidate. This point has been most strongly emphasized.

Even if Dr. Bradley had declined to be a candidate Mr. Bird would require the most convincing evidence of the reality and positiveness of the call. It has been known to all his friends that his ambitions were wholly professional and would find gratification if the partiality of his friends should in due process of years think him worthy of a seat on the supreme bench. The sentiment that favors him as a harmony candidate for governor, capable of uniting many diverse and opposing elements in the party, is, however, reaching a point where it threatens to overwhelm the barriers he has imposed. Anything set forth at this time must be more in the nature of prophecy than positive declaration, but the possibilities of this feature of the state political situation have assumed prominence.

Work of the Convention.

"We, the people of the state of Michigan, grateful to Almighty God for the blessings of freedom and earnestly desiring to secure these blessings undiminished to ourselves and our posterity, to that end ordain and establish this constitution." This preamble to the new constitution of the state recognizing the existence of a supreme being has been adopted by the constitutional convention in committee of the whole by a vote of 30 to 9, was given the concurrence of the convention on second reading. In the present constitution there is no recognition of God and practically no preamble. The present constitution begins with a description of the boundaries of the state and continues without an expression of sentiment to the end. Many persons objected to the incorporation of the name of the Deity into the new constitution and sent in petitions and protests against any such action being taken. Delegate Taylor, who opposed the adoption of the preamble as given, did so not because he had any scruples about recognizing the existence of God, but because he thought there should be nothing but law, clear-cut, concise and understandable law in the new constitution.

Following ten hours of debate the constitutional convention, on the first reading, passed the Hemans proposal for constitutional initiative. It is a compromise. Its most important feature and the one to which the radical supporters of the initiative objected most provides that the petitions for amendments to the constitution must be signed on fixed days at the polling booths.

The core substitute on the constitutional initiative proposition providing for 20 per cent. petitions, to be introduced by a majority of the legislature in joint session and ratified by a majority vote on the proposition providing that one-third of the total vote cast at the said election must be in the affirmative, was carried in committee of the whole, 45 to 36.

State Lost Big Money.

Attorney-General Bird has dismissed the cases brought by him against the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies, the Quaker Oats company, the Crucible Steel company and other corporations to recover the penalty of $1,000 a month for their failure to file articles of incorporation in the state while transacting business here. The action was taken because of the decision of the supreme court to the effect that the amendment of the law by the legislature rendered it impossible to collect the penalty. Penalties of over $125,000 were to be collected and some of the companies proceeded against had made offers to settle for many thousand dollars of which the state will be deprived.

Live Stock Breeders Meet.

From all over Michigan live stock breeders attended the seventeenth annual meeting of the Michigan Improved Live Stock Breeders and Feeders' association, most of the sessions of which were held at the Agricultural college. Many famous experts on live stock from all over the country attended. Five hundred men were present. Various sessions of the sub-societies connected with the association were also held. They are: The Holstein-Friesian association, the Michigan Merino Sheep Breeders' association, the Berkshire association and the Guernsey Cattle club.

Quit to Avoid Penalties.

Many companies which have filed articles of incorporation during the last year, but which have failed to dispose of their stock and carry out the purposes of their organization, are now filing notices of dissolution with the secretary of state in order to avoid the penalty for failing to make annual reports. Perhaps 50 of these dead-corporations have been formally dissolved.

Stair to Be Delegate.

It was announced in Detroit through Congressman Edwin Denby that Truman H. Newberry, assistant secretary of the navy, has withdrawn his candidacy for delegate-at-large from Michigan to the Republican national convention in favor of E. D. Stair, the wealthy theatrical man. Mr. Stair is an avowed Taft man, as is Mr. Newberry.

Denies Yearbook Story.

Samuel T. Penna, secretary of the Michigan Federation of Labor, and Thomas W. Day, manager of the Federation Yearbook, repudiate the statements of Edward E. Taylor and E. Shanley regarding Day's publication methods. Mr. Penna and Mr. Day invite the investigation of the board of commerce into the methods of getting out the book and securing subscriptions toward it. They both state decidedly that $500 was not the price paid by Mr. Day to the federation for the sanction of that body.

Withdraws in Bird's Favor.

"If Attorney General J. E. Bird is a candidate for governor, I will not be in the race," said Auditor General Bradley of Eaton Rapids. I think that Bird is a good man and he and I are the best of friends. If he decides to lay aside his other plans and ambitions I will not run. However, in five days the political atmosphere of Michigan will be greatly cleared up, and then we may know just who will be candidates. If Mr. Bird will not run, you can bank on it that I will be a candidate."

Wheat Is Not Injured.

According to a large majority of the crop correspondents writing to the secretary of state, wheat suffered no damage during December.

Widens the Canal.

Secretary Taft has written a letter to the president recommending an increase of the width of the Panama canal locks from 100 feet, as at present planned, to 110 feet. The change will cost about $5,000,000 additional, but meets the naval view as to the likelihood of large battleships in the future.

A Building Difficulty.

For a second time since Lonja's new city hall project was launched, Mayor Bible is eluded to appear in the circuit court for contempt. The order was issued by Judge Davis on the application of Judge V. H. Smith on the ground that an injunction issued by Judge Sessions last fall still stands and that in accepting the gift of a lot at the corner of Main and Dexter streets, and ordering the board of public works to prepare plans for the building, the council is guilty of contempt.

Cost of the Panama Canal—Fleet to Go Round the World—Various Matters of Interest.

The Japanese Mall has a significant editorial, commenting upon the protest of the Chamber of Commerce and leading bankers against the increased taxation, as these are men who hitherto have been loyal supporters of the government policy.

The Mall quotes Baron Shibusawa and Baron Sonoda, prominent bankers, to the effect that Japan is spending more than it can afford on armaments and unproductive work. They state that it is daily becoming plainer that a large and influential party is growing up with a platform of reduced taxes and armaments, and, although the present program of expansion is to extend to 1911 only, the new party demands immediate relief.

The Mall remarks: "The time seems to be coming when the new party will be critical."

The leading Tokyo journals during the week have all been studying the cause of the remarkable change in the attitude of the western people toward Japan.

The Kokumin, a government organ, has the latest and most outspoken comments. It says: "In view of the steady change in the world's opinion of Japan, the Kokumin must remind its countrymen that, despite recent successes in all directions, owing to the fact that the government and people are still intoxicated with the glory of the recent war and empty flattery. The people should awake to their sober senses, and the government should exercise more prudence in its dealings with the powers."

This early recognition of weakness undoubtedly is largely attributable to Prince Ito, who is known to be exerting his great influence to secure sound financial policies in opposition to the military party which has hitherto controlled them.

May Cost $500,000,000.

That the Panama canal may cost the government $500,000,000 was the statement of Col. George W. Goethals, chairman of the isthmian canal commission, at a hearing before the senate committee on interoceanic canals.

The admission was brought out in response to questions from the chairman of the committee, Senator Kittredge, of South Dakota. Col. Goethals had said previously that any estimate as to the cost of the canal was guess work.

"Are you prepared to say that the canal will not cost more than $250,000,000?" inquired Senator Kittredge.

"No, I am not," was the reply. "I believe it will cost all of that."

"Are you prepared to say that it will not cost over $300,000,000?"

"No, as I said before, it is impossible at this time to say just what the cost will be," was the reply to the chairman.

"Would you be willing to say that the cost will not be above $500,000,000?" persisted Senator Kittredge.

"As I said before, it is impossible to say at this time," replied Col. Goethals. "It might even be $500,000,000."

The hearing was brief, and aside from the above admission, as to the utter futility of trying at this time to estimate the cost of the canal, it was without interest.

The Fleet's Long Voyage.

In spite of the statements in administration circles that no decision was to be made as to the return route of the Pacific fleet until it reached the Pacific coast, it has become known that the itinerary of the fleet after its departure from San Francisco contemplates a run across the Pacific to Manila bay and a return trip to the Atlantic coast of the United States.

This has hitherto been reported, but not from administration circles. What appears to be a confirmation of the foregoing fact came out Saturday in view of the necessity of the administration in asking for an additional and larger navy department appropriation for coal, the appropriation having been exhausted on a count of the heavy expenditures already incurred. Because of this it is necessary for the administration to confide in congressional leaders that the route for the return had already been determined upon and preparations under way for carrying out the program.

While Oscar Thorpe Was Working in an Engine Pit in the Grand Trunk Roundhouse at Battle Creek the engine started.

To save himself from being decapitated, he grasped the under part of the engine and was dragged for twenty feet. He will probably recover.

A Building Difficulty.

The order was issued by Judge Davis on the application of Judge V. H. Justice Harlan's View of a Coming War With Yellows.

In an address before the Navy League of the United States Saturday night, Justice John Marshall Harlan, of the United States supreme court, said:

"If I had the opportunity I would vote for an appropriation of $50,000,000 a year for a period of ten years for a large navy. The great importance of the navy is shown in the constitution, which restricts the appropriations for the army, but sets no limit for those of the navy. There is no such thing as friendship between nations as between men. Nations make no sacrifice to preserve friendships and do not forbear to do certain things because they do not meet with the approval of another nation.

"I don't care how large a navy we have, but I want to see a navy large enough to take care of the Pacific and Atlantic oceans and our ports on those oceans.

"Just across the water there is a country with an immense population whose commerce

What it means to encounter a waterspout in the South seas is described by Beatrice Grimshaw: "First of all, a black trunk, like an elephant's, began to feel blindly about in midair, hanging from a cloud. It came nearer and nearer with uncanny speed, dragging up to itself as it came a colossal cone of turbulent sea, until the two joined together in an enormous black pillar some quarter of a mile broad at the base and probably a mile broad at the top, uniting as it did the clouds and the sea below. Across the darkening sea, against the threatening copper-erubron sunset came this gigantic horror, waltzing over troughs of torn-up water in a veritable dance of death, trying to find and shatter our fragile little ship." Real Simplicity. The real simplicity is not outward, but inward. It consists in singleness of aim, clearness of vision, directness of purpose, openness of mind, cheerfulness of spirit, sincerity of taste and affection, gentle candor of speech and loyalty to the best that we know. During his last trip he and voyagers were amused by the conspicuous and odd figure of the ship's surgeon—especially by the latter's ample feet, rendered striking by white tennis shoes and by the very wide angle they formed at the heels. "Do you know," asked his lordship as the surgeon passed his group one day, "what the doctor's feet make me think of?" "What?" inquired the chorus. "Of a quarter to three."

New Girl Felt Herself Unequal to Elaborate Ceremony. The young wife was perhaps the most punctilious housekeeper in the greater city. She fairly lived for the annihilation of dust particles, and her three maids knew a degree of discipline more rigid than that of Gen. Blucher. One day her waitress departed, an exceedingly common occurrence in even a flawless establishment. A new maid came to take her place. After an elaborate inquisition, the new servant was engaged on probation. The young wife explained: "Come to the dining room with me. You will have a rehearsal. I want to see you spread the table for a dinner for four. Now go into the pantry, where you will find my table china on indexed shelves. My forks are all labeled and I shall sit here. Now you serve me—of course with blank plates. I am having oyster cocktails, soup, fish, an entree, a roast, salad, ices and coffee." The new maid groped through the weird ceremony, and the foodless feast proceeded amid silence. Finally the maid whimpered: "I guess I am going. I couldn't do this every night." She fled. Wife as a Companion. A distinguished author says that a woman who cannot read or write, but who makes her home and husband comfortable, is a far better wife than a girl who can speak six languages and does not know how to cook a dinner and keep a house clean, says a writer. Unless a bride's brains are turned to domestic account they are of very little practical use to a husband. The fact that she is a brilliant musician and a mistress of French and Italian is poor consolation for burnt chops and muddy coffee. Talent, like charity, should begin at home, and no woman can be called clever who does not use her wits first toward achieving home comfort and skilled housekeeping. At the same time I know many a bride who is ignorant of "book learning," shaky in her spelling and a shocking housewife, too! After all, to be clever and to cultivate one's mind—without neglecting cookery and the domestic arts—makes a wife a more charming companion to her husband. Need Rich Husbands. It is hoped for their own sake, that the girls who decline either to cook or to teach school have all arranged to marry millionaires.—Philadelphia Enquirer. Mankind's Dual Lives. TOOK MOSELLE AS STIMULANT.

Prince Bismarck Kept Waiters Busy During His Speeches. Speaking of the different liquids favored by great orators for refreshment during their speeches, Griffith Boscawen, in his book, "Fourteen Years in Parliament," credits Bismarck with having carried an army bill with the aid of eight lemon squashes. Never was a man and his drink so incongruous. All history protests against the idea of Bismarck even knowing what lemon squash is, for it was Bismarck who boasted to Sir William Richmond that in his young days six bottles of strong wine had no effect on him. And it was Bismarck who lamented: "Ah! English politics has suffered since statesmen have no longer strong heads for wine. They are too cautious, never make a bold stroke." It was a mixture of Moselle and seltzer that Bismarck used in the reichstag to keep his housedness down and his spirits up. The supply used to be maintained by a relay of waiters running between the chancellor's bench and the kitchen. At the zenith of his fame, ministers, secretaries of state and privy councilors were alone worthy to concoct the mixture, and when Bismarck was making his last great speeches in the reichstag they were kept busy behind him with wine bottle and seltzer siphon in composing his drink, for Bismarck required eighteen or two dozen glasses of Moselle and water during a speech. DEATH IN THEIR OCCUPATION. Makers of Mirrors Poisoned by the Vapor of Mercury. Every mirror is made at the cost of human suffering and poisoning. The silvering of the glass by applying a layer of tinfol alloyed with mercury involves so much risk of poisoning, the work people constantly breathing the mercury vapor, that numerous attempts have been made to use another metal for the purpose. It was shown by Liebig that a fine adherent deposit of metallic silver could be applied to glass by reducing a solution of a silver salt with milk sugar, so this method has been employed as a commercial process. There have been partly successful attempts to get a like deposit of copper. The mirror often lacks brilliance and is usually disfigured with stains. But it has been found by one F. D. Chattaway of England that solutions of copper salts can produce brilliant reddish films of metallic copper which are as perfect reflectors as silver mirrors. His method of coating glass with a layer of copper, it is thought, will probably be used extensively in making mirrors and other glassware articles. Plague and Fleas. The part played by fleas in the spread of plague is dealt with in an able manner by "J. W. W. S." in "Nature." A Latin writer, Avicenna, is quoted to show that about the year 1600 it was known that there was some definite connection between rats and plague. In more recent years it has been a matter of common observation in India that in times of plague a large number of dead rats are found. And these are found to contain the plague bacilli in abundance. In 1898 Simond expressed the view that in the majority of cases the plague was conveyed from the rat to man through the agency of the flea. Experiments which he tried with fleas from rats dead of the plague showed how this is possible. Other experimenters have obtained similar results, while others have been led to doubt Simond's generalization. Go Easy. "Don't holler too loud w'en things is comin' yo' way," said Brother Dickey. "De very best plan is ter take it easy. Once 'pon a time dar wuz a man got so happy he woke up de settlement ter tell it 'bout it, an' des 'bout dat time of Satah, who wuz projeklin' roun', foun' out whar dat man wuz at, an' dat wuz de las' er him!" Man's Better Nine-Tenths. A Cornell professor is endeavoring to make the point that women and men are equals. It is safe to say that the ladies will not submit to any such reduction to ranks without a bitter struggle.

SERIAL STORY

Mr. Barnes, American

By Archibald Clavering Gunter
A Sequel to Mr. Barnes of New York

Author of "Mr. Barnes of New York," "Mr. Potter of Texas," "That Frenchman," Etc.

Copyright, 1917, Dodd Mead & Co., N. Y.

SYNOPSIS.

Burton H. Barnes, a wealthy American touring Corsica, rescues the young English lieutenant, Edward Gerard Anstruther, and his Corsican bride, Marina, daughter of the Paolis, from the murderous vendetta, understanding that his reward is to be the hand of the girl he loves, Enid Anstruther, sister of the English lieutenant. The four fly from Ajaccio to Marseilles on board the French steamer "Constantine." The vendetta pursues them and the quartet are about to board the train for London at Marseilles. Marina is lured to a mysterious note which causes her to collapse, and necessitates a postponement of the journey. Barnes gets part of the mysterious note and receives letters which inform him that he is marked by the vendetta. He employs an American detective and plans to foil the vendetta at their own game. For the purpose of securing the safety of the women Barnes arranges to have Lady Chartris lease a secluded villa at Nice to which the party is to be taken in a yacht. Suspicion is created that Marina is in league with the Corsicans. A man, believed to be Coraggio Danella, is seen passing the house and Marina is thought to have given him a sign. Marina refuses to explain to Barnes which fact adds to the latest suspicions. Barnes plans for the safety of the party are learned by the Corsicans. The carriage carrying the party to the Villa de Landini is followed by two men. One of the horsemen is supposed to be Coraggio. They try to murder the Americans. The cook on the yacht is a Frenchman is suspected of complicity in the plot. They try to murder the Americans. The cook is followed by a small boat. The boat is destroyed going towards the boat. Barnes and his party are taken to the villa. The villa is surrounded by the Corsicans. The villa is surrounded by the Corsicans. The villa is surrounded by the Corsicans.

arms, to avenge her brother. As the woman my poor dead brother brought up from childhood, I feel Marina should at least have protection. Therefore I tell you what my friends in Corsica say, that you and she may have warning."

"And you can tell your friends in Corsica," answers the American, "that if they bother me, or my bride or any of us, I shall plant them with no more compunction than a western gun man would."

"Diab!e, I have heard of your wonderful precision with the pistol from my dead brother many times," remarks Cipriano, with almost a shudder. Then his eyes catching a gleam of light from the distant landing stage, pauses with a little start of triumph and adds: "But I have said all possible to warn you, Signore Americano. The rest is not my affair, though I would like to voice a few words to Madame Paoli, who was my brother's ward."

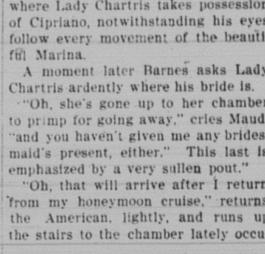

"I do not think her husband will let you," answers Burton. "At all events, he won't let you wrack her nerves by mentioning the awful tragedy."

So the two together return to the house. They reenter the supper room where Lady Chartris takes possession of Cipriano, notwithstanding his eyes follow every movement of the beautiful Marina.

A moment later Barnes asks Lady Chartris ardently where his bride is.

"Oh, she's gone up to her chamber to prep for going away," cries Maud, "and you haven't given me any bridesmaid's present, either." This last is emphasized by a very sullen pout.

"Oh, that will arrive after I return from my honeymoon cruise," returns the American, lightly, and runs up the stairs to the chamber lately occupied by Marina.

"Diab!e, I Have Heard of Your Wonderful Precision with the Pistol."

"Diab!e, I Have Heard of Your Wonderful Precision with the Pistol."

"So much so you tried to stop it," rejoins Barnes, drily, striving to keep the secret from his tones.

"Ah, Madame Blackwood told you our conversation," the Corsican laughs slightly. "I confess I should have done even better to prevent or postpone your nuptials had I seen you before and known her extreme youth, beauty and innocence."

The American is about to interrupt him, but Cipriano continues a strain of sadness in his voice: "Therefore I am very sorry that I didn't arrive before your nuptials. You were the companion of my dead brother, you went merrily shooting with him several times in Corsica. As such I wished in friendship to warn you not to make any woman your bride; at all events, not till an unhappy suspicion had been parted forever. Some of the natives of Bocognano, who loved my brother, believe that his death was in some way attributable to you, not personally, perhaps, but it would please me if you would give me the particulars of your nuptials."

"Certainly, all the particulars," replies Burton, anxious to make this man understand and the true facts of his brother's death, and thinking, perhaps, he can convince Coraggio that Musso Danella's assassination came from his own vindictive love of revenge. Therefore, concisely, yet rapidly and logically, Mr. Barnes relates the details of Musso Danella's being stabbed by the old Corsican Tommaso Mondali in mistake for Edwin Anstruther in Marina's bridal chamber nearly two weeks before.

"Yes, but our people believe that you in some way aided it," he says.

"I beg your pardon. My brother was dead almost as I dismounted from my horse at the house," sharply returns the American.

"Yes, but the natives of Bocognano declare it was by your arts—by your telegram—that I and they have been bereft."

"They say," cries the Corsican, trying to stifle an almost uncontrollable grief. "That poor Musso was done to death by the arts of foreigners, who came to the island for a nuptial fête but bringing blood with them. They say this naval officer in that house there pretends he didn't slay Antonio, the brother of Marina, because he fears Marina's vow of vendetta, and that she, my brother's ward, gave poor Musso to his assassin to save her husband from a vengeance all Corsicans think righteous. I am only repeating to you that this is what the people of Bocognano think," he says, controlling himself. "They have sworn the vendetta against you, Monsieur Barnes, also against Marina Paoli, who has forgotten, in this naval lieutenant's

But the bridegroom's awful face as he enters stops reverly. Marina with a little shriek rises from a sofa on which she has been seated beside Cipriano Danella, and Edwin, springing up, says: "What's happened?"

In all his fears and all his agony, into the venetian husband's mind as looks upon the party, one mighty consideration springs, that saves Danella's life: "By heaven, this man's remaining here indicates his innocence. If Cipriano had aught to do with the abduction of my wife, he'd scarcely dare to stand unconcerned here before me." For the count's gaze is carelessly not turned to him, but lingers admiringly upon Marina.

The easy bearing of Danella continues as Barnes briefly tells his tale, though once or twice he raises his thin Italian eyebrows and rolls his dark orbs in sympathy.

"Dio mio, it is as I feared!" exclaims the count sorrowfully. "They have seized your lovely bride."

"Oh, if they're drowning poor Enid now!" cries Maud, with a childish morbidity.

"Oh, I do not imagine any injury will come immediately to the young lady. Lately, in the vendetta, women who do not bring about the tragedy are spared," remarks Cipriano quite sympathetically, though his glance rests malevolently upon Marina till his passionate beauty seems to soften his austerity. "But in Bocognano I imagine they wish a visit from you, Mr. Barnes, to rescue your bride," he continues drily. "You see, in Corsica, a native jury would look more leniently than a continental one upon the death of the vendetta. That's only my surmise, but I am quite confident it's the correct one."

"Thank you, count," says Barnes, "you have told me just what I wanted to know—the location of my loved one!" Then his voice becomes strident; he remarks grimly: "Your friends want a visit from me in Corsica—they shall have one!" To this he adds eagerly: "Danella, come over with me to the island."

"Mon cher Monsieur Barnes," says Danella, "though I would willingly aid you, it would not be wise to go with you to Corsica. Should ill befall you in that island, you might blame me, of whom you have already had, I am sorry to say, suspicion. As I said before, my poor brother is dead, I meddle in this affair no more. I remain to soothe the Lady Chartris in Nice."

"Thank God!" ejaculates Prunella, sentimentally seizing Danella's hand.

"Yes, I will stay," remarks the count, heroically.

Suddenly Marina startles them all. She says dominantly: "No one should go to Corsica but me. In the home of my fathers and my kindred—they will believe me when I tell them there is no cause for a vendetta against my friends. I can save your bride, dear Burton, and bring her back to you. My words will have weight with all in Bocognano."

"It would be most unwise!" dissents Danella shudderingly. "Have they not declared the vendetta even against you, Marina? Does not Bernardo Saliceti swear that you, by your arts, produced the death of the father of the girl, Etheria, he is about to marry, Ed Tommaso Mondali's daughter?"

"Monstrous!" cries the girl mournfully. "Who dares to accuse me of the death of poor faithful Tommaso, my foster father who worshipped me—and whom I adored?" Tears make her dark eyes tender; but she continues enthusiastically: "Pah, they love me—they will not believe! My people even worship the name of the Paolis. I'll meet Saliceti and prove to the whole commune that he lies." Her eyes are now those of a Corsican.

"And by heaven, I'll go with you to save my sister!" cries Edwin.

"Ah, that is right—go to save your sister," answers Danella excitedly. "But Madame Anstruther should remain here with Lady Chartris. Only men should go. 'Tis a man's duty, lieutenant."

Size of Oregon Mosquitoes.

The late Col. L. L. Hawkins was fond of telling a mosquito story of his own, when Mazamas, gathered round their evening campfire, had to fight off the singing pest at the foot of snow mountains, where the "hot footed birds" are often troublesome. "You can talk about your big mosquitoes," said he, after the tale telling drifted into fairy tales, "but we (meaning Rodney Gilman and himself) can tell something about mosquitoes ourselves. We climbed Skinner's Butte, at Eugene, to see the sunset. After we had watched the sun awhile it was obscured by a dense cloud of tremendous mosquitoes. They were the biggest I ever saw." Here somebody usually asked: "How big were they, colonel?" "They were so big," was the response, "that many of them weighed a pound." Strange to say, Col. Hawkins never suffered bodily injury from telling this story.—Portland Oregonian.

Quick Changing Extraordinary.

Signorina Fatima Miris, who is creating a sensation on the Italian stage, will shortly appear in London. Single handed she has produced "The Geisha," representing herself all the 15 principal parts and changing her costume 175 times. Her performance lasts three hours, and at no time is she off the stage for more than ten seconds. She has a marvelous voice, and can sing soprano, a, to, tenor and baritone. The critics declare that Signorina Miris, who is only 24 years of age, is Siddons, Nellie Farren, Florence St. John and Fregoli rolled into one. At present she is performing at Bologna a piece entitled "La Grande Via," in which she makes over one hundred changes of costume.

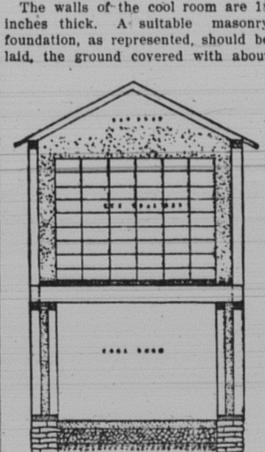

THE DAIRY

ICEHOUSE AND COOL ROOM.

Arrangement by Which Two Can Be Successfully Combined.

In the accompanying illustration is presented the construction for a small icehouse, with a cool room underneath it which is 9x9 feet square on the inside and 6½ feet square on the outside. The outside dimensions of the building are 12x12, with the ice chamber 11x11 and 8 or 9 feet from floor to plate. The plan contemplates storing the ice in a compact mass, 9x9 feet, directly over the cool room, constructing the bottom of the ice chamber and the ceiling of the cool room in such a manner that the air in the cool room will have its temperature controlled by convection currents, the warm air rising to the ceiling of the cool room, coming in contact with the floor of the ice chamber, which is made water-tight and of good conducting material.

The walls of the cool room are 18 inches thick. A suitable masonry foundation, as represented, should be laid, the ground covered with about 12 inches of cinders to serve as a non-conductor, and this covered with a cement floor 3½ inches thick. This much of cement work should be introduced in order to have a thoroughly sanitary floor. The great difficulty in the construction of an all-wood icehouse and cool room is to have it durable, the danger being the decay of the wood on account of the dampness, which is necessary from lack of strong ventilation. The walls of the cool room, as represented, are made by setting two 4x6's for a stud, sheathing inside and out with matched stuff, and filling the space between with dry sawdust. In order to prevent the woodwork from decay, and in order to render the walls strictly airtight, we should line the walls on the inside with No. 32 galvanized iron, procuring it in sheets and nailing it closely with galvanized wire nails, allowing the sheets to lap about half an inch. Such a lining would thoroughly protect the woodwork against dampness, and would make the room thoroughly tight. It would be better to lay the cement floor last, and carry the galvanized iron sheathing down past the sill, so that the cement floor comes against it, thus protecting the sill. The door of the cool room should be made on the refrigerator principle and double, one door swinging out and the other door swinging into the cool room.

Icehouse and Cool Room.

As your correspondent wishes to avoid cement work, says this writer in the Rural New Yorker, which would be better for the ice chamber floor on account of its durability and good conducting property, the plan contemplates the use of 2x10 joists placed one foot apart and then covered with No. 24 galvanized iron, turning the edges up 12 inches around the sides so as to form a water-tight tray, the galvanized iron being nailed in full sheets directly to the joists with no floor under it, and the seams and nail-heads soldered watertight. Then to protect the galvanized iron and give the necessary strength, 2x4's are laid across the joists with 1½ inch space between each as represented in the drawing. These 2x4's hold up the ice, allow the water, as the ice melts, to drop on the galvanized floor, which will be continuously ice-cold, so that the air beneath, coming in contact with the galvanized iron, will be continuously cooled as the ice settles down in its gradual melting. The walls of the ice chamber will be of 2x6 studding, with matched siding outside and matched sheathing inside, the space between the studding filled with dry sawdust. The ice will be stacked as represented 18 inches from the outside walls, so that there is space between the ice and the wall of 12 inches, which will be thoroughly filled with sawdust which is packed over the top as well, as represented in the drawing.

A cupola should be put on the roof of the building, and two small gable windows, simply latticed, to allow the change of air in the summer to cool the under side of the roof, should be provided. Should there be any difficulty in getting sufficient sawdust to cover the ice deeply on the top, the space above the ice can be filled with straw or hay, which will follow down, of course, as the ice melts. To ventilate the cool room a six-inch galvanized iron duct can be carried up against the wall of the ice chamber and out through the roof, opening into the cool room at the ceiling. A corresponding opening in the wall of the cool room opposite the ventilator should be made in order to allow air from the outside to enter. Both the ventilator and the intake should be provided with close working dampers so that only enough air is allowed to circulate to keep the air sufficiently dry.

WATERING THE COW.

It Should Be Done in the Same Place Every Day Thinks One Dairyman

For years I had the impression that a cow must be allowed in the barnyard at least an hour or more a day to do her best and kept healthy. Also, if the weather was of an extreme nature, that she should be kept in and watered inside. Close observation has taught me that a cow wants the same deal every day and should be watered the one way, either inside or outside. If cows are used to being turned out they will frequently refuse water when given them in the barn, and they will also chafe and get very uneasy when not let out at their regular time.

We have learned by close observation covering a long period, that cows give decidedly more milk when watered inside, if the barn is kept clean and comfortable. When I say comfortable, I mean warm and well ventilated and the cows confined in a manner that is not tiresome. With a good, dry, soft bed and plenty of room and freedom so they can change their position and lick themselves when they choose, a cow is comfortable providing she gets plenty of sunlight. Comfort and good feed is what they want and what makes them yield up.

When it comes to the matter of exercise, a cow that is giving a good mess of milk does not have a disposition to move about much when turned out in the yard. This is particularly true when the weather is cold. I have watched them by the hour and find that they seldom go farther than the tank unless there is something to entice them away. On the contrary they will seek the most sheltered spots in the yard and stand humped up until it is time to go back to the barn. Cows that are dry and in calf, and younger animals, need and will take more exercise. Young heifers that are to become the future dairy cows on the farm will be all the better for daily exercise, in being compelled to rustle. I do not mean being starved or neglected. On the other hand, if cows are kept in all-ventilated barns where cow comfort has never been studied, and closely confined in rigid stanchions, a barn where sunlight is unknown, better let them outside. Outdoor freedom is better than indoor suffering and discomfort.

CLEAN AND COOL.

Two Conditions Which Should Make the Handling of the Milk.

To attain success in the dairy business it is important that every branch of the work be faultless in itself. A dairyman may have a clean herd and an excellent barn built on modern principles, but if he lacks the facilities for properly handling the milk or cleaning the utensils, or if his storage is faulty—one of these things alone may cause failure.

He must have a suitable building and apparatus for cleaning and sterilizing dairy utensils, cooling and storing the milk and cream, or make butter and cheese.

It is not uncommon, says Coleman's Rural World, to find a milk cooler hung in or near the cow stable, where the air is laden with dust, dirt, foul odors, and possibly disease germs, which readily pass into the milk.

The best dairy practice requires that the milk shall be removed from the stable as quickly as possible after it is drawn, preferably to a building or room independent of the barn, where it can be aerated with pure air and cooled at once in clean surroundings.

SILAGE FOR THE DRY COW.

It Will Prove Profitable by Keeping Animal in Condition Until Fresh.

Any farmer will admit that the cow in milk will be benefited by silage, but many do not recognize its importance for the dry cow, says a writer in Kimball's Dairy Farmer. If you still cling to the old-fashioned method of dairying which finds the cows dry at Christmas time but fresh in March or April, you need silage almost as much as if you were milking the cows when the profits are greatest.

The cow that is going to give a good yield throughout the whole period of lactation must begin that period in good condition. The best way to get her in that condition is to feed her silage during the winter months. So you see you need a silo just as much when your cows are dry in the winter as you do when they are being milked in the winter.

You need a silo, anyway, concludes this writer, and you are standing in your own light as long as you do not build one.

The Average Cow.

The average cow on the American farm produces only about 150 pounds of butter per year. That will hardly pay for her food and care. The government report shows an even lower average, but it is fair to assume that some improvement has been made since the last report by the government.

REV. GEORGE A. E. TROUTMAN

"For several years I have been troubled with a peculiar spasmodic affection of the throat. It would seize me suddenly and for a few minutes I would be unable to speak audibly, and my breath would be greatly interfered with. I would be obliged to gasp for breath. I finally concluded that it was some catarrhal affection which probably excited the spasm. It interfered with my vocation as a preacher, attacking me occasionally in the pulpit.

"I had heard so much about Peruna as a catarrh remedy that I determined to try it. After taking two bottles, my trouble has disappeared. I feel sure that Peruna has greatly benefited me."

Rev. P. E. Swanson, Swedish Baptist Pastor, Box 228, Grantsburg, Wis., writes that from the use of Peruna he is perfectly well, entirely cured of chronic diarrhoea and catarrh.

Peruna in Tablet Form.

For two years Dr. Hartman and his assistants have incessantly labored to create Peruna in tablet form, and their strenuous labors have just been crowned with success. People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna Tablets, which represent the medicinal ingredients of Peruna. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

Conservation of Natural Resources. The United States has astounded the world by its spectacular rapidity of development. We came into the sisterhood of nations an evangel of liberty and a herald of better days to the nations. But we are the spendthrift, the waster, the ne'er-do-well of nations. Beginning in modern times with incomparably rich natural resources, we have ravaged a continent of its wood and coal and iron, and we smilingly face the exhaustion of our bank account in these things like a boy in the midst of his sowing of wild oats. Our forests are gone. The scattered fragments left will disappear in 20 years. The pinch of exhausting coal fields has begun; and the best authorities are computing the time of the end of our supply, trying to determine whether it will be our children or our grandchildren who will have to face a future without coal. We have vast reserves of water-power, coal, iron, and lands, capable of reclamation and reforestation, but we seem to have no adequate conception of our duties toward them, to ourselves, our country or posterity. Our soil is being washed away into the rivers, and by them carried to the sea, and our boasted fertility of soil is thereby being lessened year by year; but the irreparable drain is ignored. Our neglect is almost equal to our active waste. The vast potentialities of our waterways in bearing commerce and in furnishing power have been neglected. But a new era seems dawning. President Roosevelt is bringing these matters into the field of practical statesmanship. The Inland Waterways Commission has been constituted by him as a great agency for pointing out these national dangers and co-ordinating the governmental plans for conserving our national resources. In constructive statesmanship, the work outlined risks to the most exalted plane. It demands the attention of every American. On its success depends the future. We must make the most of what is left of our once great estate; we must stop waste; we must keep our natural resources from the grasp of monopoly, or we may sink to a status of commercial and national inferiority and subordination. The Reader Magazine.

Poetry Won Bandit's Heart. Prof. Bill Perry tells a story to illustrate the advantages of literary wisdom. A friend, he says, was traveling in French mountains when on a lonely road he was stopped by highwaymen, his life threatened, and his valuables demanded. His literary instincts were to the fore, even in his extremity, and half unconsciously he burst forth with an appropriate couplet quoted from some obscure French poet.

"Hold!" cried the leader of the highwaymen. "My comrades, this gentleman is acquainted with the works of our friend, M. So-and-So! He is, then, our brother."

The purse was returned, courtesies extended, and the traveler and three highwaymen adjourned to an inn near by and spent a pleasant evening.—Boston Herald.

This great tonic medicine and blood purifier gives quick relief in all stomach, liver and kidney complaints and the misery of lame back. Sold under guarantee at Freeman & Cummings Co. drug store.

Explosion and "Implosion." Everyone knows what an explosion is, but its opposite, an implosion, is less familiar. At greater depths in the sea the conditions are favorable for its production. WERE LOOKING TO THE FUTURE. Why Parents Could Not Be Satisfied with Ordinary Name. It is a glorious possibility that any American boy may some day become president, but, according to a story told by Senator Bailey, it sometimes causes fond parents some concern. One of his constituents was the proud father of a promising youngster, and on several occasions sought the senator's advice as to a Christian name, each time expressing himself delighted with the one suggested. One of the Texan's greatest charms is his kindly interest in the personal affairs of humble friends, and it was quite like him, upon seeing the father in question some months later, to inquire if his son and heir had finally received a satisfactory pseudonym. "Well, no, senator," the man replied. "We haven't been able to decide on one just yet."

"What's the trouble, anyway?" Mr. Bailey asked, with considerable secret amusement. "There are a good many to choose from."

"Yes, that's true," the father said, rumpiling his hair; "but we wanted to hit on a particularly good name for him, one that is pretty and has a distinguished sound, and which is not common, as there will be so many babies named after him when he is president."—World's Events Magazine.

Russia's Great Library. One of the greatest monuments to the memory of that benevolent despot, Peter the Great, is the imperial library of Russia, established by him in 1714. Present ranking places it third among the world's great libraries. It is preceded by the National library of Paris and that of the British museum of London. It contains 1,500,000 volumes and 26,000 manuscripts. The most important accession it ever received was probably at the time of the suppression of the Society of Jesus in Russia, when most of the Jesuit collections were transferred to the imperial library. Among them was the famous collection of Count Zaluski, consisting of 260,000 volumes and 10,000 manuscripts. The most important manuscript in the library is the "Codex Sinaiticus" of the Greek Bible, brought to Russia by Prof. Tischendorf in 1859 from the convent of St. Catherine on Mount Sinai.

Use Teeth to Inflict Punishment. "There has been a disturbance at Chusan," says the North China Daily News. "The mandarin tried to force the soldiers to take their pay in big 'cash.' The soldiers rebelled and, aided by their wives, nearly bit the officer to death. It appears there is no punishment for biting, so they took this method of inflicting castigation on the mandarin; had they beaten or struck the officer they would have been subject to punishment by the government."

Science at Fault.
