Soon after their marriage they removed to Niagara Falls, Canada, where they resided until the death of Mr. Duncan in 1867. In the year 1873 she was married to S. G. Ives and resided near Unadilla until 1876 when they took up their residence in Chelsea and continued to live there until the death of Mr. Ives in 1894. Earns A Good Salary.

Miss Frances Caspari, an Ann Arbor girl, known as Mme. Schumann-Heink's protegee, is earning what will approximate $10,000 a year in New York city, where she went recently. She has also been engaged to sing for musicales given by both the Goulds and Vanderbilts and other prominent society leaders. Her fees from these vary from $100 to $500. ACCEPTED A NEW CHARGE

A UNANIMOUS CALL

Extended to Rev. F. A. Stiles, Former Chelsea Pastor to Large Church in Chicago.

Rev. Franklin A. Stiles, pastor of the First Baptist church of Hudson, and former pastor of the First Baptist church of Chelsea, has occupied the pulpit in one of the large Baptist churches of Chicago, (the First Baptist church of Ravenswood) for the last two Sundays. At the close of the services last Sunday morning the society called a special business meeting and the members of the church extended a unanimous call to Mr. Stiles to become pastor of the church.

The call was extended to Rev. Stiles unsolicited by him and he was the first choice of the pulpit committee out of a list of twenty-one applicants. R. W. Boyden and family, former residents of Sharon, were the only members of the society who were acquainted with the successful work of the popular young pastor in his former charges.

The many Chelsea friends of Rev. and Mrs. Stiles, extend to them their hearty congratulations and wish them success in their new field of labor.

Thomas Michael Fallen.

Thomas Michael Fallen, a popular young man of this city, both in business and social circles, died at his home at No. 18 Eleventh street, at 9:20 o'clock Wednesday morning of last week in the thirty-fifth year of his age. Mr. Fallen had been ill for about two weeks with stomach trouble, which superinduced heart failure, which was the direct cause of death. Mr. Fallen was born in Chelsea, Mich., and was the son of the late Timothy J. and Rose Fallen. He is also survived by three brothers, Geo. Fallen, of Hollidaysburg, Pa., Edward Fallen, of Chelsea, Mich., Arthur J. Fallen, superintendent of the corrugating department of the Wheeling Corrugating company's plant at Martin Ferry, and one sister in North Yakima, Washington state. Mr. Fallen came to this city from his former home in Chelsea, Mich., nine years ago last December. He had learned the trade of an umbrella manufacturer, and shortly after his arrival here took charge of the Discher Umbrella company's works on Eleventh street. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Discher, daughter of Elizabeth Discher and the late Philip Discher of No. 18 Eleventh street, February 14, 1899. He was an expert in the umbrella business, and success followed his efforts in that direction while in Wheeling. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus and also an office holder in that order, a member of Wheeling Aerie No. 344, F. O. Eagles, the Carrell Club and of St. Joseph's parish. In all of these orders he was active and progressive, while in his social connections he was a jovial, affable young man, and one whom to know was to have the highest esteem. He will therefore be greatly missed in both commercial and social circles of the city, and his loss to the community has brought profound sorrow over his many friends. The funeral took place from the late residence on Eleventh street at 8:30 o'clock Saturday morning, with requiem high mass at St. Joseph's Cathedral at 9 a. m. The interment was in Mt. Calvary cemetery—Wheeling Register.

An Old Deed.

Emory Chipman, of Lima, has in his possession a deed of 120 acres of land in Unadilla, which was granted to his grandfather, Abraham Abbott, by president Martin VanBuren, August 12, 1837. The land came into Mr. Chipman's possession upon the death of his mother and he sold it a few years ago to the present owner, Howard Conk. During the time the farm was in the possession of Mr. Chipman and his ancestors there was never a claim of any nature against the land. Mr. Chipman has also several letters written to his grandfather from Sheldon, N. Y., and one of them shows that it cost his grandfather 75 cents for the postage, which he had to pay when the mail was delivered to him.

From the State Capital

Information and Gossip Furnished by Special Correspondent at Lansing.

Lansing.—The next Michigan legislature will be asked to consider a plan to take over the Mount Pleasant Indian school as a state institution. Representative Darragh, in whose district the school is located, thinks any session of congress in the future might take up the abolition of the non-reservation schools, and a Democratic majority would be very likely to pass it. The friends of the schools amended the clause in the bill by which the Indian commissioner is empowered to negotiate for the sale of the schools to the states. Under the amendment he is empowered only to inquire as to what possibility there is of disposing of the schools. The only state which has shown any disposition to take up the work is Kansas. The Mount Pleasant school property is estimated as worth about $200,000. Maintenance costs the government about $50,000 a year. Mr. Darragh thinks the state could operate the school for 75 per cent of this cost. There are enough Michigan Indians of school age not only to supply this school, but also various other schools, which solicit pupils in Michigan. There were no less than five other schools, some of them having as many as six or eight representatives, working for the pupils in Michigan in 1906, according to Superintendent Cochran's report for that year.

Snow Brings No Relief.
A peculiar condition of affairs exists among upper peninsula lumbermen and they are beginning to think that the fates are conspiring against them to make it impossible to carry on their operations on a basis where they will get a fair profit. Earlier in the winter the loggers were up against a hard proposition for snow with which to make their roads. Along came a substantial fall of snow and they regarded their troubles at an end. But with the snow came a congested condition in railroad yards, and, as a consequence, there are few camps which can get cars enough to ship their logs where desired. The recent storms made it impossible for railroads to clear their tracks and continue regular operations. For instance, in the local railroad yards there are scores of flat cars loaded with timber awaiting the time when they can be relieved of their burden and returned to the camps for further service. Copper country contractors are not finding it difficult to get all the men desired for work in the camps. The wage scale remains fixed and will probably continue at the present rate for the remainder of the season. There is a noticeable falling off in the production in the copper country as far as timber is concerned. It is believed that the product of the forests this year will be about two-thirds what it was a year ago, and may even fall below this estimate. This is due to the gradual falling off in the demand for the timber, not especially in this district, but the country over. Prices have also taken a drop to some extent.

"Have You Been Subpenaed?"
"Have you been subpenaed?" was the proper form of salutation in state capitol circles since the grand jury had been investigating matters at Mason with a view to "giving Ingham county a clean bill," as Judge Wiest expressed it. State officers and employees, as a rule, have not been served with subpoenas, but have gone before the grand jury upon invitation, there being a universal desire at the capitol to assist the grand jury in getting at the truth of many rumors in circulation. Subpenas are now coming more generally into vogue. Several prominent senators were subpoenaed to come before the grand jury and divulge what they know about any efforts that may have been made to defeat the binder twine plant bill.

Suggest Judge Streeter.
Announcement having been made that Judge Claudius B. Grant would leave the Michigan supreme court this spring, Judge Streeter of this judicial circuit is suggested as a candidate for the vacancy. Judge Streeter has been a resident of the copper country for many years. He at one time practiced law at Calumet and was postmaster at that place. In 1892 he was elected prosecuting attorney for Houghton county, in which position he served for two terms, after which he was elected to his present position. Attorney Allen F. Rees has been mentioned as a possible successor to Judge Grant, but he has stated that he would not find it possible to accept, owing to pressure of business.

Harrish on Active List.
Orders have been issued from the military department placing Brig. Gen. Charles W. Harrish, retired, on the active list and assigning him to duty in the ordnance department. Capt. Henry Schwellenbach, of Menominee has been assigned to duty on the staff of the brigadier commander as inspector. Maj. Ellery D. Preston of Detroit has been detailed on the staff of the brigadier commander as quartermaster. Capt. Daniel J. McDonald of Cheboygan has been promoted to major and assigned to duty on the brigade staff.

Millis Goes to Cleveland.
Lieut. Col. Millis, who will assume the duties of United States engineer at Lansing, will be succeeded by Lieut. Col. Townsend to Detroit to succeed Brig. Gen. Davis, is a Michigan man and comes from Hillsdale county. After a competitive examination Millis was appointed as cadet to West Point military academy, in 1877. He was head of his class when he graduated in 1881. This '81 class was a "great lakes" class, anyway, for John Biddle of Detroit stood second among the members, and a Wisconsin man was third. Biddle now is in San Francisco. Hardly had young Millis left the academy than he achieved distinction through his knowledge of electricity, in which he is an expert. For seven years he was assistant engineer with Gen. Duane, then in charge of the third light house district, which is one of the most important districts in the country, with headquarters at Staten Island. During this period young Millis conducted experiments in electric lighting.

Smith Withdraws Candidacy.
Senator Smith took the Lincoln club banqueters by storm at Grand Rapids recently when he withdrew as a candidate for delegate-at-large to the national convention and asked his friends of western Michigan to support John W. Blodgett, national committeeman. He invested the incident with all the dramatic surroundings that he knows so well how to produce, making the declination the subject of his address as toastmaster. It was another evidence of Senator Smith's prowess as a strategist and met with unanimous approval. Also, it served to unravel a tangle that was fast becoming very serious and threatened to cause a state wide disruption. Something along these lines was looked for after it became known that the senator had had a conference with Mr. Blodgett.

Warner Opposes Clause.
Gov. Warner is strongly opposed to the property qualification clause in the home rule provision of the new constitution and believes that unless it is eliminated it will seriously endanger the acceptance of the constitution by the people. "It is a wrong principle entirely," said the governor. "It is distinctly distasteful to the people and class of voters, even the property owners. Why, on the theory of only allowing taxpayers to vote on the expenditure of money you might as well carry disfranchisement further and say that no man who does not pay taxes cannot vote for a legislator or an alderman or any other official on the ground that officials appropriate and spend public money, and therefore the voters are indirectly voting on the expenditure money."

Sausage Test Is Denied.
Attorneys for the Chicago sausage makers who are engaged in a lawsuit with the state to determine what ingredients may lawfully be used in the manufacture of sausage are desirous of having the attorney general's department join them in taking testimony in various states of the union as to the popular understanding of what sausage is. It is also desired that the attorney general's department cause a suspension of prosecutions for violating the pure food laws until the case can be finally disposed of. Attorney General Bird will not consent to either arrangement. He advises the dairy and food department to continue its prosecutions of local dealers for selling sausages containing cereals and added water.

Attempt at Arbitration.
The Lilles Cigar company refuses to treat with the striking cigarmakers. Two members of the state board of arbitration, who were here, were expected again, when another effort was to be made to bring the company and strikers together. There was a persistent rumor that the company figured on removing from Kalamazoo and consolidating the plant there and the one at Detroit in the latter city.

Reprint Basic Law.
The committee on arrangement and phraseology of the state constitutional convention completed its work, and the revised constitution reprinted for the use of the convention when it reassembled. The committee on submission and address worked for a long time upon its report to the convention.

Remits $50,000 to State.
The American Bond and Surety company of New York has notified Attorney General Bird that it has remitted $50,000 to the state on its bond that amount guaranteeing the deposits of the state in the Chelsea Savings bank.

For New Weather Station.
Before leaving Lansing Chief Willis L. Moore of the United States weather bureau officially designated the Agricultural college as one of the five places for establishing stations.

Cadillac has nearly 500 cords of stone heaped up for use on streets next summer.

Guy Dilley, of Charlotte, whose lungs were pierced by a saw in a portable mill, is dead.

Major Harrison Soule, former treasurer of the U. of M., is seriously ill from a complication of ailments.

Congressman McLaughlin will organize corn clubs and offer prizes to the farmer boys who raise the best crops.

William Downing, a Pentwater barber, slipped under a Pere Marquette train while running to catch it, and was killed.

Grand Rapids factories, who were forced to shorten their hours due to the financial conditions, are again running on normal time.

A Bay City paper asks the question, "Is the story true that tribute is being collected from gambling joints and immoral places in this city?" They then partly answer their question by saying that Prosecuting Attorney Hitchcock has received an inkling of the alleged grafting and is looking into the matter.

W. J. Daint, manager of a Bay City theater, was acquitted on the charge of keeping his amusement house open on Sunday. The case was tried under the new ordinance on Sunday and was made a test case. His attorney attacked the legality of the ordinance. The fact that there was but one witness to swear the theater was open leaves the test up in the air.

NOW THE ELECTORS HAVE A CHANCE

THE REVISED CONSTITUTION IS NOW READY FOR THE PEOPLE.

WHEN SHALL THEY VOTE?

The Question of Submission For the Vote of the People Goes to the Supreme Court at Once With a Sundry Tag.

The revision of the constitution is now as much a fact as the convention can make it and final judgment rests with the electors of the state Saturday the revision as a whole will be placed on passage and unanimously adopted, the vote standing 88 to 0.

Instead of adjourning sine die the convention adjourned until March 3, but further business was suspended and all employees discharged except those on the secretary's staff, as the latter will continue on the payroll until that time. During the term they will be kept busy getting the addresses ready for mailing.

There were several reasons for adjourning with date. A contract had been made with the stenographers giving them $1,200 additional to make an index of the debates. The auditor general refused to pay this on the advice of the attorney-general's department, where it was held that the convention had no right to contract debt beyond the life of the convention. Then Secretary King's friends got busy and he was voted $750 additional compensation, which was paid in the form of a contract, so as to give him a claim against the state.

Although the convention decided to submit the revision in the fall instead of at the spring election the committee on permanent organization recommended that action be taken to secure a judicial decision from the supreme court as to the right of the convention to act independently of the legislature. To bring this about a provision was added to the schedule ordering the secretary of state to forthwith notify the sheriffs of the various counties of the submission of the revision at the fall election. By agreement they will refuse to do this and an order to show cause will be asked for. The matter was placed in charge of a subcommittee consisting of Delegates Campbell, Pratt, A. L. Moore, Gore and Wickes. The order to show cause will be secured from the supreme court and the matter will be heard Thursday, so that a decision can be had in plenty of time, in the event that the court holds against the convention. Delegate Kykes will prepare the case for the convention.

If the convention wins, the result will mean that it has authority to vote money to whomsoever it pleases ad libitum and the claims of the secretary and official stenographer will be presented to the state board of auditors for payment. As a matter of fact the continuation of the convention and the payment of extra compensation is nothing more than a species of petty graft that for many years has been subjected to the state legislature. There is absolutely no need for an index to the journal, and the indexing of the debates should have been made a part of the original contract with the official stenographer, who has received $500 a week for the work.

Who is the Liar?
The scandal in the committee on naval affairs of the house over the rejection of the administration's naval program for more battleships and a voluntary increase of four submarines, followed so speedily by the demand of Representative Lilly (Rep. Conn.) for an investigation, threatens to turn the lower branch of congress upside down.

It reached the "you're a liar" stage Saturday. Representative Lilly being placed in hot water because of published reports that he had charged the Electric Boat Co., of New Jersey, with having "ripped" both the Republican and Democratic congressional committees. He got it from Democratic Chairman Griggs and Republican Chairman Sherman, and passed it on to several newspaper men with interest and all kinds of vituperative flourishes.

Lilly denies that he made any charges against the chairman and in their presence accused a correspondent with having "maliciously lied." Griggs accepted the explanation in "bad spirit."

"Suffice it to say," he exclaimed, "that either the person who wrote the charge or said it is a common liar."

Sherman declared that if Lilly said what has been attributed to him he was "a mendacious liar," but he said he felt sure that Lilly would not say any such thing.

After a conference with Speaker Cannon, Lilly announced that he had agreed to put his charges against the submarine company into writing at an early date and submit it to the committee on rules, which has the matter under consideration.

Game Warden Pierce has received a report from Marquette that a test case is to be tried in the circuit court there of the law which forbids hunters having in their possession venison 30 days after the close of the season.

Arnold Van Derplasche, of Kalamazoo, who shot Miss Lora Cole and her escort, Harvey Keefe, in a fit of jealousy, has been formally charged with assault with intent to murder.

Capt. James Wilcox, mine superintendent, at C. H. Emmens, of Ontonagon, and Prosecutor W. R. Adams have been appointed a committee by the supervisors to investigate the report that the Ontonagon county clerk paid out money without legal authority.

The Painful Truth.

A charming anonymous bachelor, writing of woman, says, "A man of intellectual tastes is unduly disposed, as a rule, to value frankness, and this quality is not one that women rate very high." If one looks closely into the slight feminine aversion to frankness it is seen to rest on the idea that a frank statement is bound to be a disagreeable one. If I have a stoop, my French friend tells me of it. If my French accent is bad, my soap too salt, my new wall paper too vivid, or my spring gown unbecoming, I learn these facts from the various folk who believe in speaking out what they think. On the other hand, my complexion or my preserves are praised by those gentle souls who are not possessed by any lofty sense of duty toward social truthfulness, and who whisper their commendations apologetically, as if they feared their own enthusiasms for being less useful than the fault-finders of their critical neighbor. Women—nice women—have been taught for centuries that approval may be mistaken for pursuit. So they restrict approval to glance and smile. They may speak their free minds in that gloomy region where condemnation awaits the shrinking victim, but not in the sunshine, even if that does fall on the just and the unjust. Until we can separate frankness from pain-giving in the thought of women, says Youth's Companion, their masculine friends must continue to bewail the woman's lack of frankness. The truer and deeper the womanliness of the woman, the more she shrinks from inflicting suffering. Even when it might be wholesome, she avoids it; and to give pain in the interest of an abstract ideal of frankness seems to her little less than an outrage. Is she wrong?

The Taste of Tin.

A man may live in the city and buy a squash and eat it. That is all he can do with a boughten squash, for a squash that he cannot raise he cannot store, nor take delight in outside of a pie. And can a man live where his garden is a grocery; his storehouse a grocery; his bins, cribs, mows and attics so many pasteboard boxes, bottles and tin cans? Tinned squash in pie may taste like any squash pie, but it is no longer squash, and is, a squash nothing if not pie? Oh, but he gets a lithograph squash upon the can to show him how the pulp looked or God made it. This is a sop to his higher sensibilities, writes Dallas Lore Sharp in the Atlantic; it is a commercial reminder, too, that life even in the city should be more than pie—it is also the commercial way of preserving the flavor of the canned squash, else he would not know whether he were eating squash or pumpkin or sweet potato. But then it makes little difference, all things taste the same in the city—all taste of tin.

That Cupid Is Fully up-to-date Is Attended by a Marriage Just Reported.

The bridegroom is the manager of a large telephone company and the bride was lately chief operator in one of the offices. The gentleman, in the line of his official duty, had occasion to talk with the lady and was so impressed by her voice that he sought an introduction, and the romance has culminated in providing him with a charming partner for life. And telephone girls, who are bright and quick, will instantly see the point. A soft, low voice is a good thing in woman at all times, and not infrequently one of the first aids to matrimony.

Wonder stories come out of the east from time to time about the price per word paid to Mark Twain for whatever he writes, the average rumor regarding somewhere around 35 cents. Being thus equipped with a market, Mark need not care though he lost $50,000 in the Knickerbocker bank. If he got hungry all he would have to do would be to reach for his trusty fountain pen, dash off a couple of words and have enough for a modest breakfast and one of his celebrated banness two-for-a-nickel cigars. That is better than having an uncle to whom one may write.

There is more humiliation in store for the proud and haughty auto which has taken possession of the public streets and put even the most prancing of steeds in the second class. A pound has been started in New York for autos left in the streets unattended and to rob it in, the pound is under the control of the street-cleaning department.

A mountain settled in New Jersey, causing an earthquake, the other day. If New Yorkers who summer in Newport were to settle it would cause something fully as wonderful in the minds of shopkeepers of that home of haughtiness.

A New York man has been sentenced to prison for "not longer than his natural life." It must be a relief to him to know that he will not be expected to hang around the place after death.

WINTER TALES OF STORM AND SUFFERING THAT ARE NOTEWORTHY.

MAN COMES TO LIFE

Strenuous Work of Life Savers—Hunter Had a Narrow Escape—Chased By Wolves—An Isolated Town.

Meeting a tragic death in the woods by freezing came near being the fate of "Corporal" Gustafson, a woodsman employed near Granite luff, Dickinson county. The fact that the man survived his harrowing experience was due only to the timely arrival of fellow-workers and the heroic methods of resuscitation to which the rescuers resorted. Gustafson was discovered in a standing posture, leaning against a pile of ties alongside the railroad track. His hands were clasped and his head was resting on his arms. An empty whisky flask lay nearby in the snow. When the men spoke, Gustafson failed to answer. The rescuers gave him up for dead and removed his apparently lifeless form to the camp, whence a message was sent to Iron Mountain for an undertaker. When the latter arrived, Gustafson had thawed out after two men had worked over him all day, applying snow and kerosene oil. He was removed to a hospital, and the morgue had been cheated of a victim.

A Narrow Chance.

Lying for hours in a snow bank with a terrible gunshot wound in his leg was the experience which Daniel Curry, aged 22 years, passed through and which may result in the amputation of his leg. When he was rescued by other members of a hunting party he was with, he had lost a good deal of blood. Had the discovery of his condition been made later he would have died. Curry went with the party to shoot squirrels in a deep woods between Standish and Sterling. They started early this morning, and Curry started for a section of the woods, where he believed the animals to be abundant. It is thought that while climbing over a fallen log the trigger of his weapon caught. The shot entered the fleshy part of his leg between the hip and the knee. When discovered he was lying on his side, partly covered by a light fall of snow, and the wound was exposed to the weather. His body was numb and the blood in the wound was frozen. It is this fact that undoubtedly saved his life. He was carried to Sterling, where he is in a serious condition.

Wolves Were Fierce.

Edward S. Wise, bookkeeper for the Noble-Corwin Lumber Co., of Ontonagon, had a terrifying experience while driving to the company's camp, southwest of Ontonagon, a few nights ago, when he was pursued by a pack of wolves, which only gave up the chase when the light of the camp was in sight. Mr. Wise was taking a supply of fresh meat to the camp and when a short distance out was surrounded by a howling pack of large timber wolves. Having no weapons along, Mr. Wise urged his team forward, hoping the wolves would abandon the chase, but they continued to surround the team for some miles, until the close proximity of the camp caused them to lose interest in the rig, and its contents. Mr. Wise did not get over the shock for many hours.

A Deserted Village.

Forsaken of all save the caretaker appointed by the receivers, the village of Marlborough, the million-dollar plant of the Great Northern Portland Cement Co., and thousands of acres of land will be sold under the hammer March 3. Whether the village will again become the habitat of several hundred busy breadwinners and their families or whether it will be torn down and moved piecemeal to some other site is now unknown.

The failure of the town and the big concern which promoted it was due to innovations in the manufacture of Portland cement which followed directly on the building and opening of the magnificent plant, and to the fact that the raw material was unsuited to the wet process which the plant was built to use. The cost of changing the entire system and the expense of securing rock for the dry process were too great for the capitalization of the company and the plant was closed. With the passing of their only means of support the residents of the village drifted to other fields of activity and the windows were boarded up and the place became truly a deserted village.

Blockade Broken.

Five locomotives, driving one of the largest snowplows on the Pere Marquette, arrived in Harbor Beach Saturday, the first semblance of a railroad train that had come in for five days. Shortly after the arrival of the plow, the train which arrived Tuesday afternoon, was sent out toward Port Huron. Many traveling men who had been in the village all the week were passengers. The line between Harbor Beach and Palms was covered with many lifts, some 12 feet deep.

During the year of 1907 the Saginaw valley lumber mills cut 114,800,000 feet of timber.

F. W. Lyle, the Dowagiac banker, is in Chicago and through Attorney Cantwell has made the statement that his leaving was not to avoid creditors.

The injunction of the Bay City Traction, Electric Light and Gas companies to prevent the city from opening a municipal lighting plant will be argued February 25. In the city's answer it is declared the companies knew that the city had a right to do a commercial business, when they accepted the franchises.

From the State Capital

Information and Gossip Furnished by Special Correspondent at Lansing.

Lansing.—The next Michigan legislature will be asked to consider a plan to take over the Mount Pleasant Indian school as a state institution. Representative Darragh, in whose district the school is located, thinks any session of congress in the future might take up the abolition of the non-reservation schools, and a Democratic majority would be very likely to pass it. The friends of the schools amended the clause in the bill by which the Indian commissioner is empowered to negotiate for the sale of the schools to the states. Under the amendment he is empowered only to inquire as to what possibility there is of disposing of the schools. The only state which has shown any disposition to take up the work is Kansas. The Mount Pleasant school property is estimated as worth about $200,000. Maintenance costs the government about $50,000 a year. Mr. Darragh thinks the state could operate the school for 75 per cent of this cost. There are enough Michigan Indians of school age not only to supply this school, but also various other schools, which solicit pupils in Michigan. There were no less than five other schools, some of them having as many as six or eight representatives, working for the pupils in Michigan in 1906, according to Superintendent Cochran's report for that year.

Snow Brings No Relief.
A peculiar condition of affairs exists among upper peninsula lumbermen and they are beginning to think that the fates are conspiring against them to make it impossible to carry on their operations on a basis where they will get a fair profit. Earlier in the winter the loggers were up against a hard proposition for snow with which to make their roads. Along came a substantial fall of snow and they regarded their troubles at an end. But with the snow came a congested condition in railroad yards, and, as a consequence, there are few camps which can get cars enough to ship their logs where desired. The recent storms made it impossible for railroads to clear their tracks and continue regular operations. For instance, in the local railroad yards there are scores of flat cars loaded with timber awaiting the time when they can be relieved of their burden and returned to the camps for further service. Copper country contractors are not finding it difficult to get all the men desired for work in the camps. The wage scale remains fixed and will probably continue at the present rate for the remainder of the season. There is a noticeable falling off in the production in the copper country as far as timber is concerned. It is believed that the product of the forests this year will be about two-thirds what it was a year ago, and may even fall below this estimate. This is due to the gradual falling off in the demand for the timber, not especially in this district, but the country over. Prices have also taken a drop to some extent.

"Have You Been Subpenaed?"
"Have you been subpenaed?" was the proper form of salutation in state capitol circles since the grand jury had been investigating matters at Mason with a view to "giving Ingham county a clean bill," as Judge Wiest expressed it. State officers and employees, as a rule, have not been served with subpoenas, but have gone before the grand jury upon invitation, there being a universal desire at the capitol to assist the grand jury in getting at the truth of many rumors in circulation. Subpenas are now coming more generally into vogue. Several prominent senators were subpoenaed to come before the grand jury and divulge what they know about any efforts that may have been made to defeat the binder twine plant bill.

Suggest Judge Streeter.
Announcement having been made that Judge Claudius B. Grant would leave the Michigan supreme court this spring, Judge Streeter of this judicial circuit is suggested as a candidate for the vacancy. Judge Streeter has been a resident of the copper country for many years. He at one time practiced law at Calumet and was postmaster at that place. In 1892 he was elected prosecuting attorney for Houghton county, in which position he served for two terms, after which he was elected to his present position. Attorney Allen F. Rees has been mentioned as a possible successor to Judge Grant, but he has stated that he would not find it possible to accept, owing to pressure of business.

Harrish on Active List.
Orders have been issued from the military department placing Brig. Gen. Charles W. Harrish, retired, on the active list and assigning him to duty in the ordnance department. Capt. Henry Schwellenbach, of Menominee has been assigned to duty on the staff of the brigadier commander as inspector. Maj. Ellery D. Preston of Detroit has been detailed on the staff of the brigadier commander as quartermaster. Capt. Daniel J. McDonald of Cheboygan has been promoted to major and assigned to duty on the brigade staff.

Millis Goes to Cleveland.
Lieut. Col. Millis, who will assume the duties of United States engineer at Lansing, will be succeeded by Lieut. Col. Townsend to Detroit to succeed Brig. Gen. Davis, is a Michigan man and comes from Hillsdale county. After a competitive examination Millis was appointed as cadet to West Point military academy, in 1877. He was head of his class when he graduated in 1881. This '81 class was a "great lakes" class, anyway, for John Biddle of Detroit stood second among the members, and a Wisconsin man was third. Biddle now is in San Francisco. Hardly had young Millis left the academy than he achieved distinction through his knowledge of electricity, in which he is an expert. For seven years he was assistant engineer with Gen. Duane, then in charge of the third light house district, which is one of the most important districts in the country, with headquarters at Staten Island. During this period young Millis conducted experiments in electric lighting.

LAYING BARE THE SECRETS OF HYPNOTISM

Dr. John D. Quackenbos.

NEW YORK.—Dr. Jekyll drank a chemical reagent and became the bad Mr. Hyde. He changed himself back to the good Dr. Jekyll by the same means. Eminent scientists to-day are experimenting with a reagent for which they claim the power to perform the miracle of converting Mr. Hyde into Dr. Jekyll. By this mysterious power they are making bad men good, weak men powerful, mediocre men talented. And the beautiful thing about this reagent, they say, is that every one has it in his own possession, to command at will. Only when he lacks the will to use it, after learning the simple processes of its application, need he employ others, skilled in the art of handling it, to administer it to him. This is the claim now made for hypnotic suggestion, that it is the one reagent by which a man can transform himself into the ideal of what in his best moments he aspires to be. For 25 years Dr. John D. Quackenbos, former professor of psychology in Columbia university, has been studying and practicing the art of curing and reforming persons by this process. He has treated 7,000 cases by suggestion given during hypnotic sleep. What he has accomplished, often seeming to approach the miraculous, and the exact processes by which he and other skilled suggestionists operate, Dr. Quackenbos is now to make public, in a book to be issued from the press of Harper & Bros. Dr. Quackenbos gives to the New York Sunday World, in anticipation of its forthcoming exposition, the revelations of his discoveries and remarkable experiences. As a few instances of the power of hypnotic suggestion, as he has proved it, Dr. Quackenbos cites the following: A leading lady in a Broadway theatrical company owes her rise to fame to inspiration given during hypnotic sleep. "At the time of her visit to me she was adjudged to possess but a slender mediocrity of talent," says Dr. Quackenbos. "Two treatments evoked the realistic touch of Bernhardt. It was in her. She was only inspired to express it on the instant, and the people of New York have for months given singular evidence of their wonder and delight."

returned and to-day the young lady is perfectly well, filling an important position in the musical world. "Numbers of men and women with musical gifts have applied to me," said Dr. Quackenbos, "for the translation of latent into actual talent. In such cases an appeal is made to the self-reliant along the lines of fearless utterance, without thought of extraneous criticism, with force and feeling and dramatic power. "Of all the good work possible to a suggestionist, that which is inspiring in its nature is by far the most thrilling—the evocation of genius from the subconscious to the conscious life in response to the dynamogenic voice of him who is in rapport. "Leaders of thought are becoming conscious of superphysical world," said Dr. Quackenbos, "which men have sought to apprehend since man began to think. Every human being is now conceived of by students of mind as existing simultaneously in two worlds, described as the objective, supraliminal, or world of waking life—in which he communicates through his senses with the phenomenal universe—and the subjective or transliminal, or world of sleep, of an all-comprehensive, extra-planetary or outside existence, of which the earth-life is but a fractional expression. "The Process Explained. "In a state of sleep, natural or induced, the objective consciousness is in shadow, and the individual is practically exanimate by reason of suspended sense-activity. Hence he is transliminally focussed in all the phases of his personality and all the infinity of his powers. It is then that the dynamogenic touch that may work a miracle of heating or reform or inspiration to the quick development of hidden genius may be imparted— "I, by a fellow being who, owing to the existence of mutual sympathy and confidence, is in rapport with the sleeping subject. This is Suggestion. "If, by the man objective to his own subjective self, this is Auto or Self Suggestion. "Various methods are in vogue of inducing the suggestible state. The technic adopted by myself involves arrest of the visual attention by a brilliant jewel or some object in the room, the concurrent establishment of the patient's confidence in his desire and ability to extend aid (rapport must be consensual), and monotonous sleeping suggestions as an accompaniment of impression by his personality—the several steps being relaxed eye-muscles, vacant stare, indolent audience, passive brain, blank objective mind, reverie, sleep. "Inspiration communicated in this negative state of animal being calls forth adequacy dormant in the ego, to regulate physical function, enhance faculty, or modify character. "The directions imparted by emphatic declaration may not be objectively heard by the sleeper; but in some mysterious way they pass the sentinels of his world-consciousness unchallenged, to rivet the attention and launch the spiritual energies of the transliminal man. "Employed by Physicians. "Reputable physicians in this country and abroad are employing the suggestional appeal extensively in the relief or cure of functional disorders of digestion, absorption, and circulation; of nervous conditions represented by hysteria, hystero-epilepsy, pseudo-meningitis, petit mal, chorea, habit spasms, occupation neuroses (like telegrapher's arm, writer's, violinist's and ballet dancer's cramp), psychogenic cardiac arrhythmia, pseudo-agnosia, speech defects, intractable insomnia and neurasthenia or nervous exhaustion; even of diseases characterized by severe pain, like sciatica and other forms of neuritis, locomotor ataxia, tuberculosis and carcinoma. Indeed, there is no rational sufferer who may not be benefited in some degree by such treatment. "In treatment of moral diseases truly awe-inspiring results of transliminal domination are manifested. "A moral defective may be compelled to take upon himself a changed nature in response to appropriate suggestions. The bad may be made good even in the face of their deliberate determination to continue in the clutches of sin. "As a rule, however, the success of suggestional methods depends largely on the desire of the subject to be cured and his faith in the power of the suggestion selected. "Dipsomaniacs are generally easy subjects, in that they yield readily to the hypnotic influence, and accept unconditionally the suggestions communicated by the operator. "Morphine Habit Cured. "All the great suggestionists have successfully treated morphinomania by inducing hypnosis and implanting a fixed idea against the use of the drug in question either by hypodermic syringe or mouth. Morphine cannot be suddenly cut off from the patient, as there is danger of collapse in such heretofore treatment; it must be gradually withdrawn. Hypnotic suggestion renders such reduction absolutely painless to the subject. "The method pursued with confirmed cigarette smokers has been to deprive them gradually of the dele-

By Dr. John D. Quackenbos. An alcoholic addict, actuated by a sincere desire to break the shackles of the despotism and go forth with capacity for the higher joys of life, is urged to think persistently as he is falling asleep in lines like these: "Whisky is unnecessary to my physical well-being; it is creating structural changes in vital organs; it is destroying my mentality and blunting my moral sensibility. I do not need it, and shall no longer use it either in mere bravado or to hide from my vision conditions that are insufferable. I shall depend absolutely on the units of energy legitimately manufactured out of nutritious food, good air, exercise, and sleep. I am done with alcohol once and forever. The appetite for it is destroyed in my being, and I no longer admit capacity for temptation. From this hour it shall be impossible for me either to desire or to take a drink for any conceivable reason. I do not want it. I do not need it. I shall not miss it."

EUROPE IS GROWING COLDER.

Temperature of the Continent Constantly Becoming Lower. Some months ago there appeared in these columns some tables worked up by Camille Flammarion to show changes of a meteorological character which seem to have taken place in Europe, says the Philadelphia Record. Writing again, he states that from the past six years he has become certain that the temperature of Europe has been falling. France has been suffering for a long time from an excess of cold weather, the thermometrical readings at Paris having been one degree below the normal height. Other readings show even less favorable results. The fall is more noticeable during the spring than during other periods of the year. Similar phenomena are recorded in Great Britain, Belgium, Spain, Italy, Austria and Germany. In the days of Phillip Augustus, in the thirteenth century, the wines of Etampes and Beauvais were the favorite beverages at court. Henry IV, a pronounced bon vivant, frequently expressed his fondness for the product of the Suresnes grape. At the present day there is not a vineyard

TURNING VANITY INTO MONEY

By JOHN R. THOMPSON, Treasurer Cook County, Illinois.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.) Why is it that thousands of intelligent men working for salaries or for wages are investing their savings in the stocks of wildcat companies against the advice of friends competent to advise them and in the face of their own better judgment? The obvious answer is: Because they expect to profit greatly by the investment—to "get rich quick," as the common saying puts it. This is only half the answer, and the other half—often the more powerful—is seldom brought out. It can be stated in one small word—Vanity.

This is not flattering to the investor who has defied the sober counsel of experienced men of affairs and who have stifled their own natural forebodings and sense of caution, but the fact remains that vanity has, in hundreds of thousands of cases, been the one factor which has turned the tables against reason, judgment and good counsel and emptied the pockets of the wage earner and the salary worker into the coffers of the fake investment shark. When the bait thrown out is equally attractive to the cupid and the vanity of human nature the catch is almost certain—and the clearness with which the latter human weakness is understood by the sharpers who lie in wait for the surplus savings of those who do the world's hand work, is evidenced by the fact that the letters are sent out to lure the unwary is full of phrases like this: "Why not become an associate of men who are doing things? We want your influence in your community. The men who are in this enterprise are known in the business world and they desire cooperation of others who are capable of broad and independent judgment, of men like yourself who can see beyond the rim of a silver dollar and appreciate large opportunities, men of constructive abilities who are ready to take a hand in the development of one of the greatest enterprises of the present day. Your advice, influence and cooperation are more valuable to us than your money." When this appeal is put to a man who has always worked under others, who has never been consulted by a business man, whose opinions on business matters have never been asked by any person outside his own family circle, the temptation to a new and delightful feeling of self-importance is almost inevitable. There is not a clerk bending over a desk or a counter, a mechanic working at his lathe or bench, or a laborer toiling in street or field who has not at times felt that he has had ideas about some feature of business worth considering, who has not harbored a secret longing to have a place and standing among the men who pull the wires which move the machinery of business. When such a man—and his kind is legion—receives one of these artful and insinuating appeals to his vanity he is rarely poised and gifted with common sense above his fellows if he does not feel that at last he has come into his own; that his abilities have finally been appreciated and that the stranger in the business world has understood him better than his associates, his neighbors, his familiar friends and those under whom he works. The flattery of this appeal outweighs its shallow rawness and its obvious and cheap insincerity. But the real cunning of this attack upon his vanity is the fact that it appeals to his "independent judgment" and classes him among the men who see things shrewdly and in a big way and who scorn timidity. If he listens to this argument—and generally he does—he feels a new sense of self-importance and of independence and a corresponding disinclination to listen to the advice of those whose familiarity with business and finance would enable him to steer clear of the rocks of disaster. His judgment is pitted against theirs and he is aroused to a determination to "show them" that his opinion is better than theirs. This antagonism against the reception of advice from men of experience is the one thing which an investment sharper most desires to awaken in the prospective victim, for it will prevent him not only from seeking sound advice but from acting upon it when it is put in his way. The schemers who have learned how irresistibly the argument of "manage for yourself" appeals to the man who has never had a chance to try his hand at managing a business have not stopped at this point; they have also learned that men in the humbler walks of life are clamorous and inclined to think and act together. Along with this they have realized that it is easier and cheaper to hunt their game in flocks and droves than singly. When the sportsman wishes to get a big bag of game and get it quickly he goes after the birds which travel in flocks. So with these gunners who are adepts in the use of decoys and "calls." They arrange their hunts in line with this idea of clamor, of mass movement, and use the ammunition of "act for yourself" so that every shot will be a "pot shot." Here is an example of how this kind of financial sportsmanship is prosecuted: Some time ago an inventor brought out a machine for the making of print paper from the pith of corn-stalks. So far as making an impressive, scientific demonstration was concerned, the device was admirable, but when it came to its ability to compete commercially with wood pulp mills and their products, that was a problem that did not greatly concern the promoters with whom the inventor

MODERN LOVE-MAKING.

Scientists have discovered that first love is due to a commotion in the brain.—News Item. When first I learned that love was not The mere ecstatic notion That I was fond of Tot or Dot, But came from the commotion Within the brain, I sought said girls By turns, and tried to tell 'em About the amatory whirl That stirred my cerebellum.

To Tot I said: "Although no pain My heart can feel without you. The convulsions of my brain Are simply mad about you. I'm sure that I'm in love, for I discovered that I've got a Feeling for you deep in my Medulla oblongata."

The maiden viewed-me with a stare That chilled me to the marrow. Proceeding coldly then and there My tender soul to harrow "With other girls, perhaps," said she, "That sort of language may go, But if you'd make a hit with me, Don't spoon in Esperanto!"

Then, seeking fair-haired Dot, I said: "Oh, lovely little blossom, For you a yearn runs through my head From mastoid to colicium; Whenever your sweet face I see A sweet and tender thrill is Communicated straight to the Funiculus gracilis."

The maid looked up in some surprise Her lashes long and unblinking. And eagerly I sought her eyes. To see what she was thinking. And then she tossed her pretty head. And whispered: "I'd be very Hard up for husbands if I wed A human dictionary!"

Amply Protected. "Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" asked the insistent reformer. "Here you are day in and day out in a state of intoxication? You know what such dissipation leads to. Already you show the symptoms of a man who is on the verge of delirium tremens. And I understand that some weak girl is foolish enough to have accepted your proposal of matrimony. I shudder for her, and for you!" "New min', ol' fell," replied the hopeless case. "The lady I'm go' to marry, ish a snake sharter."

Accidental. "Has the man any money?" queried the older surgeon. "Not a cent," replied the younger man. "His only asset is an accident insurance policy." "Then," answered the more experienced operator, "your only salvation lies in performing an unsuccessful operation." —Judge.

Gentility. "Oh, yes, they are among our most aristocratic people." "But I thought her father was a butcher." "What of that? They spent $140,000 on flowers alone when their daughter had her coming-out party." —Chicago Record-Herald.

"Two Treatments Evoked the Realistic Touch of Bernhardt!"

hopeless dishonesty, mania for swindling and gambling all yield to suggestional treatment. "Every mother in the land can make her children what she wishes them to be, provided she is a woman of high moral principle, gentle and patient, apprehensive of the power of transliminal appeal, possessed of courage to apply it with intelligent persistence, and having ardent faith in its effectiveness. "Asked to state the care of auto-suggestion and the process by which a person applies it to himself, Dr. Quackenbos said: "The transliminal self of an individual is as amenable to suggestion by his own objective mind as by the objective mind of an outside person. Self-treatment of this kind, or auto-suggestion, is open to all who would enable their lives by cultivating a closer relationship between the supraliminal and the transliminal nature. "The state of mental abstraction called 'reverie,' immediately preceding natural sleep, is most appropriate for self-suggestion. As one is about yielding to slumber for the night, let him say to himself, for instance, that he will no longer be a slave of the imperative conception or the evil habit that is crippling his best expression—that he will develop talent along specified lines—that he will draw spontaneously upon the resources treasured in his higher being for creative work in the normal sphere. "Prerequisite of Success. "Lapse into sleep with the transliminal thus invoked, to employ itself as instructed, is all but equivalent to suggestion given by another. The prerequisite of success is earnest, intelligent, persistent application of the self-given suggestions. "It is in accordance with psychological law, now well tested and proved, that if the active intervention of one's own richly endowed spirit be honestly and earnestly invoked, adequate power of importance north of Paris, and as for the petit vin now made at Suresnes, it has become the drink only of the poorer classes. In the middle of the sixteenth century, Macon was celebrated for its muscated wines, whereas the muscated grape at this moment can scarcely be made to thrive there. Ancient chronicles mention the cultivation of the vine in northern Brittany, where now even apples are not plentiful. Again, it is to be remarked that trees which once flourished in the north of France are at present found in the extreme south, and a considerable number have disappeared altogether. Languedoc no longer grows the lemon; there is not an orange left in Roussillon. The Lombardy poplar, so familiar and picturesque in old French line engravings, is now nowhere to be found on French soil. These are facts which, putting statistics out of the question, serve to illustrate the changes wrought by temperature in the great fruit-producing country of France.

The new postal cards recently issued by the postal department will soon be on sale. The feature of the new card is that the address side is divided in the center by a line in the same manner as the souvenir cards permitting a message to be written on this side. Manufacturers of souvenir cards may now use these cards in the manufacture of their products, and thus do away with the necessity of affixing a stamp as is the case with the ordinary souvenir card.

SERIAL STORY

Mr. Barnes, American

By Archibald Clavering Guster
A Sequel to Mr. Barnes of New York

Author of "Mr. Barnes of New York," "Mr. Potter of Texas," "The Frenchman," Etc.

Copyright, 1907, Dodd Mead & Co., N. Y.

SYNOPSIS.

Burton H. Barnes, a wealthy American touring Corsica, rescues the young English Lieutenant Edward Gerard Anstruther, and his Corsican bride, Marina, daughter of the Baron, from the murderous vendetta, understanding that his reward is to be the hand of the girl he loves. End Anstruther, sister of the English Lieutenant. The four fly from Ajaccio to Marseilles on board the French steamer Constantine. The vendetta pursues and the fugitives are about to board the train for London at Marseilles. Marina is handed a mysterious note which causes her to collapse and necessitates a postponement of the journey. Barnes gets part of the mysterious note and receives letters which inform him that he is marked by the vendetta. He employs an American detective and plans to beat the vendetta at their own game. For the purpose of securing the safety of the women Barnes arranges to have Lady Charris, a wealthy English noblewoman, to which the party is to be taken in a yacht. Barnes and End make arrangements for their marriage. They get tickets about Barnes. He receives a note from La Belle Blackwood, the American adventuress. Barnes learns that the man supposed to be the vendetta, who follows the party on their way to the boat, was Salotto, a nephew of the count and that Count Coraggio had been in Nice for some time prior to the party's arrival. The count warns Barnes not to marry End unless he would have her also involved in the murderous feud. Barnes and End are married. Soon after their wedding Barnes' bride disappears. Barnes discovers she has been kidnapped and taken to Corsica. The groom secures a fishing vessel and is about to start in pursuit of his bride-captors when he hears a scream from the villa and rushes back to hear that Anstruther's wife, Marina, is also missing. Barnes is compelled to depart for Corsica without delay, and so he leaves the search for Marina to her husband while he goes to hunt for End. Just before Barnes' boat lands on Corsica's shore Marina is discovered hiding in a corner of the vessel. She explains her action by saying she has come to help Barnes rescue his wife from the Corsicans. When Barnes and Marina arrive in Corsica he is given a note written by End informing him that the kidnapping is for the purpose of entrapping Barnes so the vendetta may kill him. Barnes and Marina have unusual adventures in their search for End.

They dash up the gorge for half a mile and she says sharply, "It is here," pointing to a steep ascent that, cumbered by ferns and wild flowers, makes a most unpromising roadway. Then she catches her breath and whispers: "You expect an ambush?" for the American has now his rifle on the saddle in front of him, western fashion, and his pistols ready in his belt.

"I do," answered Barnes and relates the words of the shepherd.

"Quick!" cries the girl. "This trail will take you right up Del Oro, where you can look down on Bocogano. By it you will get between your enemies and your destination."

"My destination is my wife. She is in this valley with those men."

"Oh, I think not, Saliceti is too crafty. He is still conveying End to Bocogano and has left only some of his followers to slay you. Come on."

Barnes follows his guide up the steep little path, that covered with vines and wild flowers is difficult to discern, but after they had gone a few hundred yards, the rocks growing larger, the trail more precipitous, Marina says: "Here we must leave our ponies and climb on foot. So they pasture the two hardy little brutes in a vale full of soft grasses and leave them munching contentedly, Barnes, slinging his haversack over his shoulder, Marina having nothing to carry with her.

Before her now strides the American, his alert eyes always glancing down the steep declivities to their left, for the almost unused trail they are following is hundreds of feet above the travelled bridge path that keeps to the torrent, dashing through the bottom of the valley. After nearly an hour of this, the noise of a waterfall strikes their ears, gradually growing louder.

Five minutes later, Barnes holds up his hand cautiously. Marina's glance follows his; far below them, concealed in the big rocks that skirt the stream at the little bridge near the waterfall, are several crouching, armed men. A little farther down the rapid, in the top of a big beech tree, is perched another, his hand shading his eyes from the rays of the declining sun that shines in his face as he looks down the pathway coming from the east.

"These gentlemen are waiting for me," remarks the American, in his face the supreme joy of a sportsman who will bag not only one head, but a battue. He puts his rifle on the ground, loosens both revolvers in his belt and asks: "The way to descend the precipice from here?"

"Why?" falters the girl.

"Why? Because I am now the hunter," answers Barnes. "Do you think I am going to spare the wretches who have stolen my wife? None of them!

Concealed in the Big Rocks That Skirt the Stream Are Several Crouching Men.

The delicate shoulders of his fragile companion, already shivering in her light summer garment under the icy mist about her. "I am thinking of some shelter for you, for we must pass the night upon the mountain," he says tenderly; then asks anxiously: "Do you know one?"

"Yes," she replies, her teeth chattering, "if we can reach it in this storm. The little chalet where poor old Tomasso sometimes took me when he brought me here as a child to pluck the flowers of the mountain."

With this she turns abruptly to the left, and Barnes following her, they struggle up a couloir filled with massive boulders, but nearing the summit she mist becomes colder, the wind sharper and the gloom more deep. Surrounded, as they are, by frightful precipices, this is appalling.

"I've lost my way," mutters Marina, her voice low with faintness, but a moment after she cries: "Ah, see the granite cliff. Follow its wall! The cabin is beneath it. But beware! beyond the cabin there is a very deep crevice."

The wind howls about them. The night is even blacker, but keeping the sheen of the cliff close at his left, Barnes stumbles over the granite slabs, almost carrying the exhausted girl. Finally, compelled by the howling of the wind, he calls into her ear: "Courage! I see the hut. Thank God, someone has a fire inside it."

"Perhaps it is made by the awful bandits, the Rochini and Romano who murder so many poor travellers," shudders Marina.

But undeterred by this, using the light as a beacon, her escort rapidly approaches the open door of the little cabin, from which issues a cheerful gleam.

Suddenly they pause, for a deep tone issues threateningly from its interior: "Hola, if you are gendarmes, beware of me!"

"Madre mia," gasps Marina, with a low scream, "that voice."

"Bandit or no bandit, you shall give us warmth and shelter!" calls Barnes in answer. Then he too, stands astounded, as from the rough door strides a man, and outlined by the flickering flames and surrounded by the mists of the mountains is a face that makes Marina tremble and shrink: "Holy Mother of God, a ghost!"

For it is the countenance of her foster father, old Tomasso Monaldi, whom everyone had thought dead from the night of her wedding.

But now the goblin recognizes her; it cries: "Marina! daughter of my heart! you have come to succor your poor old hunted Tomasso," and sinking on his knees, it, catches the half fainting girl's hand, and kisses it reverently.

"You, alive, dear old Tomasso? Impossible!" half shudders, half sobs the girl, sinking down beside the spirit and looking into his deep, dark eyes that gleam so lovingly upon her.

"Two weeks ago, on the morning of the tragedy, De Belloc's soldiers reported to that officer in my presence that they'd killed you," says Barnes impressively.

"Bah!" sneers the ghost; "the sergeant, I suppose, told his officer they shot me. The soldiers fired. It was easier for me to fall down behind a granite boulder than stand up and let them shoot again, though it was the darkness of the early morning. Then I came up on the mountain here, and fearing the soldiers would again pursue me, I have been a hermit, descending at night to the lower valleys to garner chickens and steal sheep."

"Holy smoke," grins the American, "here's the fellow for whose death they have vendicated me, alive and talking!"

CHAPTER XIII.

"Glorious Bandits."

The storm fairly howls about them, but Marina forgets it as Tomasso half sobs: "Your coming here, dear mistress, shows you forgive me for the killing of the Englishman, your husband, the one who murdered Antonio in the duel," and the flickering light revealing Barnes' face, he exclaims: "The American who saw your brother slain. Ah, now you agree with me this accused Anstruther's death was just."

"Thank God, you didn't murder him!" cries the girl. "Your stiletto entered the heart of Musso Danella, who deserved death for his lies."

"I killed poor Musso Danella," stammers the old Corsican. Then he mutters as if he can't believe: "No, no, I heard his groan as I struck through the curtains."

"'Twas the groan of Musso Danella," answers Marina. "That you killed the right man proves my husband innocent. 'Twas the hand of God directed you." The girl's voice is very reverent.

"Then if it was the hand of God, Danella's death is sure proof your husband killed not Antonio," says Tomasso solemnly, making the sign of the cross; but again breaks forth: "No, no—the proofs Musso gave to both you and me made us believe this Anstruther, your spouse, shot your brother. The things he held up to our very eyes—"

"Were the property of another English officer—one killed in action on a British warship under the Egyptian guns at Alexandria! Do you think I'd live in the arms of a man with my brother's blood upon him?" cries the young wife fervidly.

"No, that is not possible, also," agrees old Monaldi.

"But," interjects Barnes, "while you jabber here, your darling mistress dries of cold."

"Oh, my heart is warm enough with joy at seeing Tomasso live to make me forget the icy wind," and the enthusiastic girl kisses the rugged face of her old servant.

"Nevertheless, I have not forgotten supper," suggests the common-sense American, and half drags Marina into the cabin. "Eating first and affection afterward."

EFFECTS OF THE FOG.

Even Blind Men Lose Their Way—The Ground "Sounds Different."

Nothing has such a bewildering effect as fog. Only animals which find their way by scent can get about in their way with any certainty, says Chums. Birds are entirely confused by it. Tame pigeons remain all day motionless in or just outside their houses. Chickens remain motionless for hours during heavy fogs. No bird sings or utters a call, perhaps because it fears to betray its whereabouts to an unseen foe. During one very thick fog a blind man was found wandering about a certain district of London. This man was in the habit of carrying over his head a cane, and had recently lost his way before. Asked why he had gone astray, for he was quite blind, and it was supposed that weather would have made no difference, he said that in a fog the ground "sounded quite differently."

Duration of Animal Life.

A great variance as to length of life appears among different animals. Some insects live only for a few hours, while fish, elephants and turtles are frequently centenarians. The average life of the mosquito is three days. Toads usually live to the age of about 15 years, while carp have been known to reach a hundred and fifty. Chickens live from 12 to 15 years; dogs to the age of 10 and occasionally 15, and parrots to extreme age. These birds have been known to pass the age of 200 years. Turtles are also frequently centenarians, as are storks, and elephants are said to reach the age of 300 years.

Oldest Bank in Maine.

The oldest bank in Maine is the Lincoln National, in Bath. It was started as a state bank in 1813, was incorporated as a national bank in 1864, and has conducted business for almost a century.

Walking Dresses

The first costume is a very pretty dress in pastel blue face cloth; the skirt has a pleat each side front stitched nearly the whole length; from this two rows of silk oriental embroidery are carried quite round. The bodice has embroidery up each side, and a pointed vest of white silk embroidered with blue and gold tinsel thread. The tight fitting under part of sleeve is tucked; the upper part, which is full, is tucked horizontally on the front. Hat of pale blue felt trimmed with bows of brown velvet and ostrich feathers.

Materials required: Nine yards 46 inches wide, nine yards embroidery, seven yards satin for lining.

The second has a skirt of gray plaid cloth with flounce of plain cloth at foot, above which is one of plaid. The coat is of the plaid cloth with revers and under sleeves of plaid. As will be seen the cut is quite new; the front being only fastened on bust, shows a smart blouse beneath. Hat of gray straw trimmed with silk ruffles and damask roses.

Materials required: Five yards plaid 46 inches wide, four yards plain cloth 46 inches wide, six yards silk for lining coat.

HUCKABACK WORK LENDS ITSELF WELL TO FANCY DESIGNS.

Huckaback is again as popular, if not more so, than ever before with the fancy needle workers. No wonder, after one sees the lovely bits of fancy work made with huckaback and tinsel. Some very pretty bags are made by using silver or gold thread to interlace the little huckaback threads and often the work is more artistically outlined with gold or silver beads threaded while the worker is outlining the pattern. Every style imaginable is seen in this work and many oriental patterns show a variety of colors with gold plentifully used in outlines. A dresser scarf was made with three tabs at each end, each end buttonhole stitched with pale blue silk and worked with eyelet. Above this was a six-inch band of pale blue mosaic design, outlined with gold. In the center was a triangle of gold and blue. Pin-cushions, chair cushions and practically everything in a cover design can be fashioned this way. Little opera bags are woven with silver threads and hung with long pendant silver threads and gold interwoven, with gold threads and gold beads, or black thread and gold beads. The heavy silk-like floss is best for the purpose and can be threaded with finer gold threads.

TO BE ATTRACTIVE.

Hair Must Be Kept in Perfect Condition—Arrange It to Best Advantage.

The secret of beautiful hair is in knowing how to make the most of it, how to coax and coddle it into growing, and to arrange it to the best possible advantage.

It is the natural frame for the face, and whether or not this frame is becoming remains with the woman herself.

A horrid, untidy, slipshod way of twisting up one's crown of glory will make the most adorable woman look like a cartoon.

Arrange it in fluffy, pretty, neat coils and it will change the cartoon into a picture worth photographing.

It is wonderful what terrible things a woman can do with her own head. You think this when you go to a matinee and view the sea of mussed pompadours and crooked parts and wispy locks spread out before you.

Hairpins are falling, hair ribbons are dusty and soiled, straggly ends of hair are looking out to see what they can observe, while here and there is displayed the business end of a switch that has not been properly concealed.

Combs are set in crooked, and in many cases a head of hair looks more like a bird's nest than a culture.

To have pretty hair you first of all must have clean hair.

This means that you should shampoo it every two weeks.

The hair catches even more dust than the face.

It has a thousand little arms reaching out for it.

The Bordered Gown.

An original white frock of the "youthful simplicity" order struck a new note the other day, being worn by a golden-haired girl in slight mourning. It was a soft flimminy of very fine white net resembling tulle, and both the upper skirt (short to the knees in front and apparently caught up at the back of the waist to fall in irregularly edged box pleats) and the lower one were bordered with a deep hem of black velvet, above which was embroidered in a jet-running design of round garlands and ribbons, looping over and under a band of silver tissue 'd beneath the net.

This idea could be varied and carried out in all sorts of colors, or in one or two shades combined with a white or ivory gown, or all in one pale hue.

The difference in material is often sufficient contrast; velvet on chiffon or crepe de chine, for instance.

Lace Gowns.

The majority of lace gowns are carried out in white, for a great deal of white is worn at the southern resorts, both in regard to toilettes and millinery, with ivory as its chief rival, but the lace gown is also conspicuous in colors such as raspberry pink and mole brown, a frock of the latter carried out in punched lace having been 'd a slip of ivory satin.

Serge Cutaway Coat. A successor to the covert coat, which long ago had its deathblow so far as smart dressmaking is concerned, is a serge cutaway with long basques, fastening with three buttons, and in either black or blue. This is a separate coat and will be distinctly modish with either tub frocks or tweeds and chevots.

HOW DO THEY GET IN? Physiological Problem That Nora Could Not Solve.

A Philadelphia physician tells of an amusing conversation between two Irish girls in domestic service who, while on the board walk at Atlantic City one day not long ago, were exchanging views as to their various physical ailments.

"It's a strange thing, ain't it, Nora," asked one of the girls, "how many new kinds of diseases people get these days. Only this mornin' I were readin' an advertisement of a new medicine. It said it were wonderful for a sluggish liver."

"Gwan!" exclaimed the other girl, scornfully. "Liver trouble ain't no new disease. Me own grandfather was havin' liver trouble when I were not more'n tin years old."

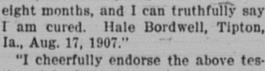

"Maybe," was the laconic response. "But," added Nora, "what I want to know is: how do thim slugs get inside the liver, anyhow?"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

ECZEMA FOR 55 YEARS. Suffered Torments from Birth—In Frightful Condition—Got No Help Until Cuticura Cured Him.

"I had an itching, tormenting eczema ever since I came into the world, and I am now a man 55 years old. I tried all kinds of medicines I heard of, but found no relief. I was truly in a frightful condition. At last I broke out all over with red and white boils, which kept growing until they were as big as walnuts, causing great pain and misery, but I kept from scratching as well as I could. I was so run down that I could hardly do my work. I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent, and Pills for about eight months, and I can truthfully say I am cured. Hale Bordwell, Tipton, Ia., Aug. 17, 1907."

"I cheerfully endorse the above testimonial. It is the truth. I know Mr. Bordwell and know the condition he was in. Nelson B. Burnett, Tipton, Ia."

Power of Deceiving.

There is a Brooklyn woman who possesses a servant who is a model in all respects save one—in that she is none too truthful.

Lately the mistress has been using all her eloquence to make Nora see the error of her deceitfulness. But at last she had to own herself beaten when Nora, with a beaming Irish smile, turned and in a most cajoling tone said:

"Sure, now, mun, an' 'wot de ye suppose the power of deavin' was given us fer?"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Dogs to Watch Churches.

Ever since the robbery of a valuable Van Dyck at Courtauld's churches of Bruges, which contain so many treasures, have taken extraordinary measures to prevent similar losses.

At the Church of Notre Dame, Bruges, a watchman perambulates the church at night accompanied by a dog. A similar course is adopted at the Cathedral of St. Saviour and other churches.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

WOMAN'S BACKACHE

The back is the mainspring of woman's organism. It quickly calls attention to trouble by aching. It tells, with other symptoms, such as nervousness, headache, pains in the loins, weight in the lower part of the body, that a woman's feminine organism needs immediate attention.

In such cases the one sure remedy which speedily removes the cause, and restores the feminine organism to a healthy, normal condition is

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Mrs. Will Young, of 6 Columbia Ave., Rockland, Me., says:

I read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and decided to try it; after taking three bottles I can truly say that I never felt so well in my life."

Mrs. Augustus Lyon, of East Earl, Pa., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I had very severe backaches, and pressing-down pains. I could not sleep, and had no appetite. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me and made me feel like a new woman."

GREATNESS.

The man who has greatness thrust upon him is always sure that he could have achieved it if that had been necessary.

To refuse to yield to others when reason or a special cause require it is a mark of pride and stiffness.—Thomas a Kempis.
