Telephones and Rural Mails.

The social aspect of life on the farms Washtenaw Circuit Court for matters has greatly changed in the past few connected with the Chelsea Savings years. The team broke loose liability under the bonds, the Court re- ing for companionship with the world at large is most insistent, from the old home farm into the town. And this is a agriculture-agriculture in the widest strike at the isolation of the farm life. The railway has done something t relieve the situation, but after all the railway by itself just brings the current of life past the farm without making any real distribution of the beneficent waters.

Rural free delivery gets closer to the difficulty, for daily letters and the daily newspaper keep the farmer in close contact with the world, and make him feel a part of it. And now comes the rural telephone, which promises to be the greatest reformer of all, inasmuch as the conversational facilities it provides make a mockery of milestones and turn a widely-scattered population into a compact neighborly community. The institution has its business side as well as its lighter social aspects. The farmhouse equipped with a telephone is no longer at the mercy of the raiding speculator; or, as the booklet before us tersely puts it; "While the buyer is looking over the herd you are at your telephone verifying his quoted price." The farmer is brought into direct touch with the consumer; the tendency of the innovation is to elminate the Middleman. Moreover, the telephone puts the dweller in the country on advantageous terms as a buyer as well as a seller; he can get what he wants promptly, can compare The morning subject next Sunday will prices before he buys, and all this without leaving his home, and so incurring Union evening service at the Baptist loss of time, which means loss of money.

Love Apple Lore.

It is not generally known, but nevertheless a fact, that there are people still living who can remember the time when tomatoes were raised merely for their beauty as we now raise, roses. While its beauty was admired it was considered like the poisonous oak, dangerous to even handle except by "dark complected" persons. Years of acquaintanceship, however, wore off its superstition and a few "foolhardy" actually owned up to having tasted the fruit. From this small beginning has gradually grown a use that makes today an industry with a combined capital of over thirty millions of dollars, which disburses millions of dollars to its employes each year and aggregates an output of 210,000,000 tons.

Just below the main shield hung a mammoth portrait of George Washington, 14 by 16 feet in dimensions. Red, white and blue bunting was draped from the sides of the shield to the bottom of the portrait of the "Father of His Country.'

Directly under the last shield, on each side of the Washington portrait, was suspended a portrait, one of Thomas Jefferson and the other of Andrew Jackson. On each side of these pictures a large American flag was draped. These flags are 40 by 60 feet in dimensions: Beyond these pictures, at each end of the wall, and hanging above the gallery, was suspended a pendant, ten feet in diameter, upon which bunting was draped. Upon these pendants a tiger was painted. The back of the platform was banked with palms. Twenty stuffed American eagles, with extended wings, were suspended over the platform, each bird carrying in his bill red, white and blue silk ribbons that were draped back to the wall.

circuit judge of the Sixth circuit; president of the United States Philippine Commission; civil governor of the Philippine Islands and secretary of war. In 1903 he declined the appointment as associate justice of the United States supreme court. He acted as provisional governor of Cuba, following the insurrection of 1906, and during his incumbency of the secretarial office has visited Panama, Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, returning to this country by way of Russia. The mere narration of the facts will indicate that the man who is

There is likely to be much said of the fatness of

Taft during the impending campaign. And in truth he is fat, very fat. Once when asked by a newspaper man how much he weighed, he answered with great solemnity: "No gentleman weighs over 300." This, bye-thebye, was after a six months' course of the most painstaking effort to reduce his adipose tissue. He managed to pull under the 300 mark by taking off 80 pounds and then stopped. If he is tipping the beam at less than 300 to-day he does not look the part. But the fatness of Taft is not offensive. His flesh is well distributed and I should prefer to call him an expansive man rather than a fat one. He is big of frame, wide of shoulder as well as girth and his supporting columns are well proportioned to carry his bulk. He is alert, active and carries himself very well, although it must be admitted that in a coat known to trade and commerce as a Prince Albert he is almost as wide across the back as a furniture van.

He is not sensitive concerning his weight, is the portly secretary, and will laugh as good-naturedly as the next man when the stock joke of Washington is repeated in company-and it has been repeated so many times that it should be familiar to everyone who has heard of Taft. It is, however, considered proper to repeat it whenever excuse offers, so here it is once

During the time of his service as governor of the Philippines he worked so hard that his health broke. Knowing that his friends were worried and anxious to reassure them, he cabled: "Rode 20 miles up the mountain to-day. Feeling fine." Whereupon Secretary Root wired back: "Fine, but how is the horse?"

All jokes pertaining to Taft are Gargantuan as witness the oft repeated one: "Secretary Taft rose in a street car the other day and gallantly gave his seat to two ladies." Then there is the story known as the trousers incident. It was to the effect that while in Russia an accident happened to his dress clothes and he kept the czar waiting an hour while a force of tailors mended the tear.

But the fatness of Taft is merely physical. It does not extend to his mentality. At college he was an honor man. In athletics he displayed great prowess. He was the stroke of his class crew and the best wrestler in the gymnasium. His popularity was unquestioned and his sense of honor so keen that when the regularity of his election to a class post of honor was questioned he declined the office, only to be unanimously chosen to the same place immediately afterwards. In those days he was known as "Big Bill" and "Big

The habit of hard work was already his. It was his when he went to Washington as solicitor general, during Harrison's administration. It may have been this habit of hard work which drew to him the friendship of another strenuous and energetic official, Civil Service Commissioner Roosevelt. The friendship formed at that time has strengthened with the passing of the years and to-day no man, barring, perhaps Charles P. Taft, is more eagerly enthusiastic for the success of "Big Bill" than Theodore Roosevelt.

It was in the interval between his service as solicitor general and as governor of the Philippines that, in his capacity as United States circuit judge, he rendered certain decisions affecting labor which have brought criticism from labor leaders, but even these have not

who, in the words of McKinley, was big, strong, patient, tactful yet firm, and willing to kill himself with hard work if necessary. Judge Day, then secretary of state, suggested that Taft be sent for. Taft came and when told that he was needed in the Philippines, said that he did not want to go as his ambition was for judicial, not executive work. But he accepted the post and since then has loomed big on the political horizon.

In the eight years that have passed he has shown that America can successfully pursue a colonial policy and has impressed himself upon the imagination of the people. He is very much of a reality to the general public and he bulks as large in the affections of the people who know him as he does in present day poli-

The New York correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt makes fun of Frau Ernestine Schumann-Heink for renouncing her allegiance to the emperor of Austria and becoming a citizen of the United States. She was sure of all her rights, he thinks, because of the American citizenship of her husband, Mr. Rapp. and became a citizen of the "Land of Dollars" only for the advertisement which was sure to follow. In the same letter the writer says that Schiller has also been annexed by the Americans, the great poet's tragedy, "Cabale und Liebe," having been placed on the stage in New York, slightly changed, under a new title, without credit to the author. After describing the performance the writer says: "In the royal tomb at Weimar, the body which rests in the casket decorated with the silver laurel wreath of the women of Hamburg certainly turned about.'

Baumgartner came to realize that his only hope of obtaining the property would be through the marthe property would be through the marriage of his son Sephenijah to Sarah Pressel. In a mock auction "Seffy." as Sephenijah R. Baumgartner, Jr., is populariy known, is raffled off by his father to Sarah for $1. Sarah Pressel is quite the opposite of Seffy. Baumgartner gives Seffy some lessons in courtship. Baumgartner has caused himself to be appointed guardian of Sally. She promises Seffy that she will never kiss any man but him. Sam Fritz, a drunken grocery clerk, calls on Sally and interrupts the but him. Sam Fritz, a drunken grocery clerk, calls on Sally and interrupts the kissing. Seffy goes to sleep and begins snoring. Sally leaves the room in a huff, saying: "Good night, gentlemen." Seffy tells his father of his humiliation, of how Sam Fritz had pinned to his bosom while he slept a past-board tombstone. Seffy and Sally meet at the Poison spring. She urges him to do something to redeem himself. The father advises Seffy to take Sally home from church. This would be the crucial test, according to the custom of the times. It was the rule in such a test that the one whose arm the girl accepted when leaving the church would be the favored suitor. Baumgartner curses son and strikes him powerful blow with fist, full in the face. Then the repentant father gathers the youth in his arms. His cries attract Sally and Sam Fritz. Sally rushes up to Seffy's room and finds him unconscious. In the morning Seffy has disappeared. It is a sail and lonesome disappeared. It is ta sad and lonesome winter for old Baumgartner. He thinks his son is dead, somewhere from the effects of the cruel blow. When old Baumgartner goes to Sally's home to sur-render to her his papers as her guardian he finds her haggard and worn with sorrow. She agrees to quit drinking if he will take the papers back and continue as

Biblical allusions, which permeate our literature, touch no responsive The ordinary wooden hoops from chord in the majority of college students nowadays, writes Prof. W. L. Cross, in Education. Though some of them are fairly familiar with names like Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Samson, David and Daniel, very few know anything about the lives of these men as related in the scriptures. Not long ago, to recall an extreme case, not one of 40 students under my instruction could quite place Judas Iscariot; and a venerable colleague of mine discovered a Jew among the seniors who had never heard of Moses. To lift the burden of this ignorance, several colleges have recently incorporated parts of the Old Testament into their most elementary courses in English with great success from the standpoint both of the student and of the instructor. Save the Babies.

NEANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent, or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothir g syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequent'y prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children." Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments." Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits." Dr. Norman M. Geer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "During the last twelve years I have frequently recommended your Castoria as one of the best preparations of the kind, being safe in the hands of parents and very effective in relieving children's disorders, while the ease with which such a pleasant preparation can be administered is a great advantage."
