JUDGE KINNE'S DECISION

Orders Papers and Records Turned Over To Messrs. Bacon and Vogel.

Last Tuesday Judge Kinne decided the matters in controversy in the school board matters from this district, which had been argued the day before. The Judge holds that the officers elected at the adjourned annual meeting are the legal officers; that an annual adjourned school meeting may declare an office on the board vacant and fill it; that the name of an officer of a district need not appear on the tax roll as holding property in his own right provided he actually holds property; and further orders Messrs. Knapp and Schenk to immediately turn over the books and papers of the district to Messrs. Bacon and Vogel, the legal officers of the district.

Judge Kinne give respondents Knapp and Schenk a reasonable time to apply to the Supreme Court for writ of certiorari to review the proceedings. If the writ is denied, the books will be handed over, otherwise the Supreme Court will pass upon the matters in controversy.

BAD WRECK ON THE MICHIGAN CENTRAL

FREIGHT TRAIN BROKE IN TWO LAST FRIDAY.

FOURTEEN CARS' PILED UP

Fortunately No One Was Injured—The Wreck Drew a Large Crowd To Watch Wrecking Crews Work.

One of the most disastrous wrecks in this vicinity for many years occurred on the Michigan Central about three miles west of town Friday forenoon. A fast freight was coming down the grade at express train speed, when a brake-beam broke and dropped down throwing the car from the track and piling up thirteen others in great shape. In fact the entire width of the Michigan Central right of way was covered with wreckage. Fortunately no one was on the wrecked section.

Two wrecking crews were sent out, one from Jackson and the other from Detroit, and by hard work the north track was cleared by five o'clock so that traffic could once more be resumed.

The wrecked cars were mostly filled with dressed beef and flour, and considerable of it was a complete loss.

A large gang of men was kept continuously at work until Sunday morning before everything was cleared up and the south track, which had been completely wiped out, had been replaced.

The wreck drew large crowds from this place to witness the work of clearing up the wreckage.

CHORAL UNION SERIES

Will Be Opened by Mme. Sembrich On October 27.

The Choral union of Ann Arbor has announced its usual series of five concerts extending through the season. The schedule is as follows:

October 27—Mme. Sembrich.
November 17—Anatole Bronstein, cellist.

December 11—George Hamlin, tenor.
January 15—Ossip Gabrilowitsch, pianist.

February 23—The Fonzaley Quartet, chamber music.

The series has been liberally patronized in former years by Chelsea music-lovers, and the excellence of the attractions offered for this season promises an even greater attendance this year. Mme. Sembrich is one of the greatest living artists, and her recital will be a rare treat. Mr. Bronstein was for many years solo cellist with the New York Symphony orchestra, and has been well received in recital. George Hamlin is well known as the original interpreter of the songs of Richard Strauss in America; his program will doubtless be a most interesting one. Gabrilowitsch is one of the greatest of modern pianists, and on his three previous American tours has had phenomenal success. The Fonzaley string quartet was heard last year in Ann Arbor in one of the most delightful concerts of the season. The series as a whole promises much of interest and enjoyment.

Mrs. Adelaide Huehl.

The funeral was held from the Evangelical church Freedom, Monday, Rev. Schurer officiating. Interment Freedom cemetery.

Found the Charm.

Ten years ago Atty. A. J. Sawyer, sr., lost a charm with a cross and crown set with diamonds while in Howell to try a murder case. Monday the charm was found in front of the Sawyer summer residence at Cavanaugh Lake by a little girl who was passing. The diamond-set crown and cross was missing, but Mr. Sawyer's name on the part found left no doubt that it was the charm he had lost. It is believed the thief was conscience-stricken and returned what was left.

"Paid In Full."

Wagenhals and Kemper will offer at the new Whitney theater, Ann Arbor, Tuesday, September 22, the sensation of the present theatrical season, "Paid In Full," by Eugene Walter, a play of contemporary life in America which has won an unending shower of golden encomiums from the press and public. It is in its second year in New York and has to its credit a run of five months in Chicago.

Wagenhals and Kemper are not following the usual rules laid down by producing managers in keeping an attraction in New York until the outlying cities tire of hearing of its metropolitan success before it reaches their home cities. Alan Dale, the world famed New York critic, wrote one trenchant line in the starting of his review, he said: "Paid In Full is the season's sensational find," and Acton Davies in the New York Sun wrote, "It is the biggest dramatic hit of an age." The play is in four acts and the subject matter treats of incidents in the lives of everyday folks. He lays bare the ambitions, the loves, cares and joys of those we are most familiar with and his exposition is one of the most truthful the American stage has ever had. It is a play no man or woman can afford to miss. There has been an unusual demand for seats and the indications are that "Paid In Full" will be greeted there by one of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences of the season.

Prices 25, 50, 75, $1.00 $1.50. Seats go on sale Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at the box office. Mail orders will receive prompt attention.

The Brazilian Milreis Case

By CAPTAIN PATRICK D. TYRELL

How Probably the Most Wonderful Counterfeit Plot of History Was Hatched, Flourished and Was Eventually Uncovered by Sleuths.

THE OFFICERS SEARCHED THE HOUSE AND FOUND THE 900 SHEETS.

PRIOR to the year 1884 there was no law of the United States that prohibited anyone from counterfeiting in this country the money of a foreign nation. Out of the lack of legislation on this point had grown many cases of much importance to other governments, for your counterfeiter is a man usually well versed in the laws bearing on his trade and he had not been slow in perceiving the possibilities of large and quick gains in using the United States as a place for manufacturing bogus currency and coin to be circulated in other countries.

One of the most notable of these cases was that of the manufacture in this country of a large amount of the currency of China—a job that was cunningly conceived and cleverly carried to the point where the counterfeit currency was manufactured and ready for shipment to the Orient for circulation. Another plot of great international importance was that conceived by McDonald, Scott and Sheridan, who made and threw into circulation a counterfeit Bank of England note to the amount of about $5,000,000. The criminals in this case were Americans and their daring was shown by the character of the task they set for themselves.

In the late '60s the movement for a Democratic government in the empire of Brazil had taken on great strength. Stories of the marvelous resources of the country and of the unlimited possibilities for achieving power and money were reaching the United States. A political upheaval in a country of great natural wealth is always a tempting bait to soldiers of fortune the world over, and the accounts of Brazilian conditions that reached southern Texas about this time were not to be resisted by the more adventurous. A party was made up for Brazil, and in this party were two brothers, Lucius A. and Joseph A. White. Lucius was a mere lad in his teens, while Joseph was nearly 20 years his senior and more a father to the boy than a brother. Joseph was married. The Whites were the sons of Judge White, who settled in southern Texas in 1839 and who was a noted lawyer and jurist of that section. Judge White was a man who was held in the highest esteem on account of his strict integrity and learning, and his sons grew up respected in their native state. Lucius had studied civil engineering and was an engineer or a farmer. But in both the brothers there was a strong spirit of adventure, and after listening to the stories of gold and diamonds to be found and fortunes to be made easily in rubber, coffee and general agriculture, told by returned Texans, the brothers decided to join the party bound for the South American empire, which finally landed at Rio Janeiro.

While in Rio Janeiro Lucius White met a young woman who was visiting there and whose home was in Florida. He courted and married her, and three children were born to them. In 1884 he decided to return to the states to live, and brought his family to Florida, where he stayed a few months, going from there to Whitney, Tex., where he bought a 90-acre farm for $4,000 and settled down to the life of a Texas farmer.

In the early part of the summer of 1885 the United States district attorney at St. Louis received an anonymous letter stating that a certain engraving house of that city was preparing plates from which were to be engraved a large number of slips which had the appearance of being imitations of the currency of the Empire of Brazil.

The letter in question pointed out that which seemed to be a crime in process of execution, and, anonymous or signed, the letter was not to be ignored. It was turned over to me, and I went to work on the case.

I found the manager and was informed by him that he believed his firm did have a contract to engrave plates for and print some Brazilian matter; but he claimed to be ignorant of the identity of the party with whom the contract was made and of the exact character of the commodity contracted for. I was told to return later and consult with the official of the concern who had made the contract and who was conversant with all the details. This I did. This gentleman, after learning who I was, told me that a man named Lucius A. White had contracted with the firm for a plate of a "cigar label" to be used in the Brazilian trade. The work was under way at that time.

With this information the Brazilian consul was called into consultation. The appearance of the plate was described to him and he pronounced it a duplicate of the front of the Brazilian "Duzentos Milreis" note, or a treasury note of the Empire of Brazil representing 200 milreis. As a milreis of Brazilian money was equal in value to approximately 54.6 cents of United States money each one of the "labels" would be worth in Brazil $109.20.

So far as I could learn the order left in St. Louis by the mysterious Mr. White called for the engraving of but one plate. If a currency note were to be produced there would of necessity be two plates, one for the front and another for the reverse side. The spokesman for the engraving firm claimed to take this as evidence that the plate was to be used for the purpose set forth by the man who had made the contract, and in this claim the engraver may have been honest.

I immediately came to the conclusion that the men who were planning to inflate the Brazilian currency had made a contract with one firm for the front plate and impressions printed from it and with another firm, probably in another city, for the plate and impressions of the reverse side.

As the work was now about ready for delivery, I believed the time was at hand to take White into custody. In company with a deputy marshal we went to his hotel and followed him into the dining-room at dinner time. After he had taken his seat the deputy and I sat down at the same table. As soon as he had given his order I slid my chair close to his and said, in a voice that would attract no attention at the next table:

"You may consider yourself my prisoner. It will do you no good to make a scene." Great beads of perspiration stood on the man's face, but he collected himself almost instantly and said: "I don't want a scene; what do you want me to do?" "Come with us," I said. We all arose quietly and walked out of the dining-room without attracting attention. White was taken to the federal building and subjected to an informal examination. When I searched him I found documents bearing on the milreis transaction and placing the firm that did the work in a peculiar light. One of these papers was the formal bid made by the firm, offering to engrave an exact facsimile of the front of the 200 milreis bill on stone for $230 and a facsimile of the back for $210, or facsimiles of front and back on steel for $810. Another incriminating paper was a receipt from the engraving firm for payment of the "cigar labels" and for a 200-milreis Brazilian bill, to be returned to White. According to the papers found on White, he had increased the size of his order from 2,000 to 3,000 sheets of bills, four bills on a sheet. At first White denied any part in a counterfeiting plot, but later broke down and admitted his guilt. He claimed to have a partner named Lane, but refused to give detailed information concerning him further than to say that he lived in Texas.

I shall always question the propriety of the course followed by the federal attorney in making his case against Joseph White, which was as follows: A package was made of 370 of the sheets I had brought in. Attorney Bliss then wrote out a telegram to the agent at Bloom, Tex., requesting him to deliver a certain package to Joseph White, and had Lucius sign it. Deputy United States Marshal Wheeler and Assistant United States Attorney Drummond were then hastened to Texas by the first train for the purpose of "piping" Joseph White as he took the package from the express office, and, later, of arresting him with the counterfeit in his possession. The package and telegram were sent, giving Wheeler and Drummond sufficient time to reach the destination first. It seems that after all this planning to establish the fact that Joseph White received the package, he was allowed in some way to take the package from the express office without being seen by the men who had been sent to watch him commit this very act. Joseph White took them to his home on his farm near Bloom and placed them in a bureau drawer. Knowing the sheets were in his possession, although they had not seen him receive them, the officers went to White's home, placed him under arrest and searched the house.

In the meantime Lucius A. White, having seen his plan fall miserably and himself a prisoner, gave the authorities a complete confession. While in Brazil he and his brother had conceived the idea of manufacturing in the United States a large issue of Brazilian currency and returning to that country to float it. Lucius admitted that he was the originator of the idea.

Lucius A. White, after pleading guilty, was taken to Texas as a witness against his brother. Lucius was 33 years old at this time and his brother was a man of 50. As I have said, the elder brother also had stood in the relation of a father to the younger man, and the scene in the Waco courtroom when Lucius was placed on the stand and told the story that meant a penitentiary sentence for his brother was a most affecting one. "I would rather suffer than have Lucius suffer; he's only a boy to me." After the evidence was in and Lucius was being led from the courtroom by the deputies, Joseph grasped him by the hand and with tears in his eyes said:

"Good-by, Lucius. God bless you." Name Spelled in Many Ways. No fewer than 372 different ways of spelling Ypsilanti have been copied from envelopes and recorded by a postmaster of that town.

STEERS EAT DYNAMITE; BLOW UP IN PASTURE

SHOCK FROM BOWLING ANNIHILATED PRIZE STOCK IN STRANGE MANNER.

Bremen, Ind.—With a deafening crash two steers blew up in a pasture near here the other day, and so complete was their annihilation that the only trace found of them was a tail wrapped around the limb of a tree on an adjoining farm. Oscar Huff, the owner of the animals, which were both prize winners at various fairs, had been destroying stumps in a field, and carelessly left a pile of dynamite sticks lying near a dilapidated fence. The steers put their heads through an aperture in the fence, and ate every stick of the explosive. A few minutes later Huff returned from the field in quest of additional dynamite, and discovered one of the big red animals calmly licking the dirt at the very spot where the sticks had reposed. Several dollars' worth of the perfectly good explosive had unquestionably disappeared down the throats of the voracious animals. Huff, momentarily forgetting that his prize steers had become animated torpedoes, and thinking only of the loss in dollars, let go of his temper. Seizing a boulder he hurled it at the nearest of the two living bombs. In an instant the air was rent by a terrific crash, a red flame shot out, and a second explosion followed immediately. When the smoke had cleared the space was vacant, the fence was in splinters, and the grass was scorched. The dynamite in the first steer had been exploded by the shock of the boulder, and the concussion of the explosion set off the charge in the stomach of the other animal. Huff was uninjured, but was somewhat dazed by the remarkable event.

SLEPT IN A FURNACE. Terrible Experience of a Manchester Tramp.

London—"O Lord, save me!" were the startling words that greeted the ears of the men who had just fired a Staffordshire iron furnace the other morning. At first they ridiculed the voice and suspected a trick. Then the cries were repeated, and when the charging door of the furnace was opened a scorched and blackened figure leaped from the rising flames out among them. At the hospital the man gave his name as Perry, and said that he hailed from Manchester.

The furnace, which is at the works of the Midland Coal, Coke and Iron Company at Apedale, near Newcastle-Under-Lyme, is adjacent to the highway, and Perry, tramping past, thought that it would make a good resting place for the night. The furnace is used for the purpose of reducing very large pieces of iron—too large to be dealt with in an ordinary cupola oven.

It so happened that the bars in this particular furnace had been taken out. So Perry crept in, and, once inside, mounted a small dam and finally reached the melting chamber proper, where he lay down and went to sleep. At six the next morning the workmen came, loaded the furnace with coal, and the firebox with coal. Then they started the fire, which was well under way when they heard the cry: "O Lord, save me!"

In order to get out of the melting chamber Perry had to climb over the dam and jump through the scorching flames to the charging hole. Had he been five minutes later he would have been burned to death.

Cow Eats Bather's Suit. Seaford, Del.—While Victor Allen, junior partner in the Arco Company, was enjoying a refreshing swim in the lake here, an old cow was enjoying an elaborate luncheon, consisting of his clothes. Bossy chewed his underwear to pieces and, scandalized by the sight, his owner presented as he gave chase, ran a mile before her modesty and breath were so exhausted that she stopped and gave up his trousers. Hamlet's Flippancy. They asked Hamlet what he was reading. "Words, words, words," he replied. If he had known that words might be worth a dollar apiece he might not have spoken so flippantly.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Night Sweats & Cough.

E. W. Walton, Condr. S. P. By., 717 Van Ness St., San Antonio, Tex., writes: "During the summer and fall of 1902, my annoyance from catarrh reached that stage where it was actual misery and developed alarming symptoms, such as a very deep-seated cough, night sweats, and pains in the head and chest. I experimented with several so-called remedies before I finally decided to take a thorough course of Peruna. "Two of my friends had gone so far as to inform me that the thing for me to do was to resign my position and seek a higher, more congenial climate. Every one thought I had consumption and I was not expected to live very long. "Having procured some Peruna, I decided to give it a thorough test and applied myself assiduously to the task of taking it, as per instructions, in the meantime. "The effects were soon apparent, all alarming symptoms disappeared and my general health became fully as good as it had ever been in my life. "I have resorted to the use of Peruna on two or three occasions since that time to cure myself of bad colds."

Natural Error. "Halloa, Scudder; what are you building—a motor shed?" "No; just a hat box for my wife."

Shower of Sulphur. Charolles, a small town 30 miles from Macon, in France, has recently been visited by a shower of sulphur. The roofs, gardens, fields, vineyards, rivers and ponds were covered with a yellow dust, and for some time the peasants in the fields were troubled by a sulphurous biting odor which made breathing difficult.

It Came Off. The fair bather was in the greatest danger, when the heroic rescuer seized her by the hair. It came off. Puffs and coils and waves and rats it strewn the shuddering sea. For a moment the rescuer was dazed. Then he grasped the tiny knob of real hair that remained on the lady's head and drew her into shallow water. Did she thank him for saving her life? She didn't.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Two Versions. At a dinner during the recent Episcopal convention at Richmond a young lady sitting near the bishop of London said to him: "Bishop, I wish you would set my mind at rest as to the similarity or dissimilarity between your country and ours on one point. Does the butterfly because the tomato can?" The bishop laughed heartily at this vivacious sally. Not so a young Englishman of his party, who, after dinner, sought his host. "I want to know, you know," said he, "about that joke of Miss B's. She asked if the butter flew because tomatoes could. Pray tell me what the point is."—Lippincott's Magazine.

So Much Alike. A curious story went the rounds some little time ago about a lovely foreigner, one of whose verbal slips gave King Edward occasion for a hearty laugh. A very lively personage, with a delightful accent, she made such a favorable impression upon the king that he asked her to be his partner at bridge. "But, sir," she said, "I really don't know how to play." The king would take no denial, however, and she became rather embarrassed. "I assure you, sir," she said, "I don't know the difference between a king and a knave." There was an awkward silence, and then she realized what she had said, and was covered with confusion. The king, of course, laughed it off, and now tells the story with gusto.

"THE PALE GIRL." Did Not Know Coffee Was the Cause.

In cold weather some people think a cup of hot coffee good to help keep warm. So it is—for a short time but the drug—caffeine—acts on the heart to weaken the circulation and the reaction is to cause more chilliness. There is a hot wholesome drink which a Dak. girl found after a time, makes the blood warm and the heart strong.

She says: "Having lived for five years in N. Dak., I have used considerable coffee owing to the cold climate. As a result I had a dull headache regularly, suffered from indigestion, and had no life in me. "I was known as 'the pale girl,' and people thought I was just weakly. After a time I had heart trouble and became very nervous, never knew what it was to be real well. Took medicine but it never seemed to do any good. "Since being married my husband and I both have thought coffee was harming us and we would quit, only to begin again, although we felt it was the same as poison to us. "Then we got some Postum. Well, the effect was really wonderful. My complexion is clear now, headache gone, and I have a great deal of energy. I had never known while drinking coffee. "I haven't been troubled with indigestion since using Postum, am not nervous, and need no medicine. We have a little girl and boy who both love Postum and thrive on it and Grape-Nuts."

There's a Reason. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THOU SHALT NOT BELIAKE

About a year ago this time we were all building school houses in various parts of town.

Since that time, while essentials are the same, a phenomena of nature has occurred and it's different now. We ain't any of us doing so much building. However, from the vociferous zephyrs that were wafted into the court room last year, Judge Kinne concluded that the main difficulty seemed to be in the site. He was right, but spelled the word wrong.

The old board, acting under his decision and as voted for by over two-thirds of our citizens, selected a site. We're all sorry now; no one would build there or anywhere else at the present time any $50,000 temple of knowledge. About $8,000 for a ward school down on the old lot will do.

But why jump on the old board for what we as a community did ourselves? The ones who tore their clothes in getting to the front to vote last year and were followed by their calico at every semi-occasional meeting are now the loudest howlers at the action of the board that only followed their directions.

If the eminent physicians who are constantly examining one man's head to locate our troubles would turn their attention to the stomach of the entire community, more could be accomplished.

"Three Twins."

"Three Twins" direct from a four months run in Chicago and eight months triumphant sojourn at Herald Square Theatre, New York, will be the attraction at the New Whitney theatre, Ann Arbor, Thursday, September 24. Jos. M. Gaites is said to have given his great musical comedy success a superb company headed by Victor Morley, and a magnificent stage setting.

Much interest centers in this play owing to the fact of its being a revival of "Incog," which theatregoers of a decade will recognize in its new musical dress.

It is seldom that as clever a play as "Incog" finds its way into musical comedy and it was fortunate indeed that it was particularly well fitted for musical adaptation, so that unlike other changes of this nature it has improved instead of suffering by the adaptation.

"Three Twins" is equipped with some of the best lyrics and most beautiful music that has been heard for a long time. Some of the members of the old cast will be retained among them being Ruby Ray and Victor Morley. Prices, 25, 50, 75, $1.00, $1.50. Seats go on sale Tuesday morning, September 22 at 10 o'clock at the box office. Mail orders will receive prompt attention.

A recent decision of the supreme court of Michigan relative to the labelling of syrups under the pure food law is of interest to all grocers. Hereafter, according to the court, all cans containing maple syrup and other syrups must not only be labelled as such compounds, but must declare the percentage of each syrup. To sell syrup not so labelled will bring the penalty of the law upon the party making the sale.

SERIAL STORY

The Real Agatha

By Edith Huntington Mason

Illustrations by Will Waters, Frey Campbell, and Alethea Wilson.

Copyright, 1907, by A. C. McClung & Co.

Lord Wilfred Vincent and Archibald Terhune are introduced at the opening of the story. In England, the latter relating the tale. The pair on an outing miss their train and seeking recreation meet "the Honorable Agatha Wyckhoff," whose hand is much sought after, because of her wealth. Five other Agatha Wyckhoffs are introduced. The deceased stepfather, in an eccentric moment, made his will so that the real Agatha, heiress to his fortune and the estate at Wyckhoff, England, might wed her affinity. Thus Mrs. Armistead, chaperon, was in duty bound to keep the real Agatha's identity unknown. An attempt by Terhune to gather a clue from the chaperon fails. Terhune finds old books containing pictures of a former Baroness Wyckhoff, which is exactly like Agatha Sixth, whom he is courting. Agatha Fifth confesses her love for Vincent and also that she is the real heiress. He spurs her proposal. Many clues to identity of the real Agatha prove fruitless. Agatha Fifth later confesses she is not the heiress. More apparently unflinching materialize.

The next morning when she came down to breakfast I inquired with great concern as to the effects of the accident of the day previous. She replied most kindly that she felt very nearly as well as ever and thanked me earnestly for my share in her rescue. In fact, her gratitude was so profuse as to make me uncomfortable, and I protested volubly that what I had done was nothing. Nevertheless, from that day on Agatha Second clung to me in a manner that was almost touching. Vincent, to my surprise, instead of taking advantage of his part as hero, seemed rather anxious to avoid the girl, whereas, before our mutual discovery, he had seemed to be quite taken with her. Although his conduct was a puzzle to me, yet I could only rejoice that it was so, for it left the field absolutely free to me, and I felt as each day passed that now, indeed, I was hotter on the trail of that twenty millions than I had yet been.

It was the first Sunday after the accident and the fourth of our stay. We had breakfasted at eight and were sitting around aimlessly waiting until it was time to go to church.

When it was finally time to get ready my head ached from the sun, for I had been sitting without my hat, and I decided that I would not go that morning, though there was a flattering chorus of protests when I made this announcement.

"I shall go," said Vincent, positively, "just as if anyone had disputed it. I always go, don't I, Miss Marsh?" appealing to the secretary, who was present, but who, of course, had been rather left out of the conversation.

"Yes," she answered, smiling at him faintly. "You always do—ever since we've known you, that is. You're a saint, Lord Wilfred." But she laughed as she said it, and Vincent, for no reason at all, looked pleased.

Then the girls all went into the house to change their frocks, and Vincent, too, had to go and get himself rigged out in all the swiftness of his Bond street afternoon things.

"Are you going to ride or walk?" I asked him as he came downstairs ahead of the young ladies.

"Walk," he said. "It's such a ripping day the girls thought they'd like it. The phaeton is coming for us after church. What's the matter with you? We shall miss you."

"Oh, just a bit off my feed this morning. But, Vincent, my boy, do you realize that you're going to church all alone by yourself with six girls, the prettiest in England?"

"Seven," corrected Vincent, unmoved. "The secretary is going with us this morning."

I shook my head at him admiringly. "You're a wonderful fellow," I told him. "I couldn't manage seven of them at once to save my skin. It keeps me busy enough when I take 'em one at a time."

At this moment the girls trooped downstairs. They had their prettiest frocks on and were fully aware of the admiration in the eyes of Vincent and myself. And that admiration was perfectly excusable, for the six Agathas were looking unusually lovely in their flowered frocks, big white hats, and the dainty parasols to match the wide sashes, and I should have been hard put to it to say which was the handsomest. But as they filed out of the big door I saw Vincent look longest at the secretary, who walked a little behind the others, her plain, dark blue silk gown and little rough straw hat with the pink roses being a conspicuous contrast to the frills and furbelows of the six Agathas. I thought I had never seen her look so well, and she passed us men without so much as glancing in our direction, though Vincent's gaze, I thought, was a trifle rude.

They had been gone some 15 minutes when it occurred to me that it might do my head good to go out and get some fresh air. Besides which I had begun to regret that I had permitted Vincent to go to church the entire esquire of such a galaxy of beauty. So I put on my hat and strolled out over the lawn and down the long drive, and before I knew it I had reached the bottom of the hilly road and had set out over the fields. The church party had gone by the way of the path over the fields, for that was a shorter route than the main road.

As I walked quickly along the well-beaten path between the thickets I stopped suddenly and stooped to pick up a small dust-covered object which proved to be a prayer book. "One of those careless girls has dropped it," I said to myself, for they had all carried them. Opening it to find the owner's name, I was much agitated to read on the flyleaf this inscription: "To my daughter Agatha, from her father, Fletcher Boyd," and the date, 1900. It was, then, a gift which Fletcher Boyd had made to his daughter only two years before his death.

I was wild with excitement in a minute. I would keep the book, and some time when all the girls were gathered together I would announce that I had it in my possession and see if one of them did not betray herself by asking me for it. But Fate decreed that I should make my test of the prayer book more speedily, for I spied in the distance the white figure of a girl hastening back. The path was dusty and the sun was shining right in her face, so I trusted she had not seen me, and, putting the little volume down just where I had found it, I jumped behind the bushes. The owner of the book was looking for her property. On she came, running slowly and glancing eagerly from side to side of the pathway. As she came opposite me she stopped and snatched up the book, and when she had run back again the conviction that the Honorable Agatha was no other than Agatha Fourth was forced in upon me.

So roused was I by this event that I turned my steps homeward at once. Suspicion had now fallen on every one of the six Agathas, but this—this was the most convincing of proofs! That night I could hardly wait for the end of the evening, so that I could drag Vincent into my room and disclose to him my final and greatest discovery. I was so full of excitement over it, besides feeling a certain pride in my wit and sagacity which had led to the discovery of so many important clues, that I was rather disappointed when Vincent received my disclosure with indifference.

"At it again, Arch," he said, rather gloomily, as he sat cross-legged before my fire in extreme deshabille, and smoking his vile pipe. "What is the use? I should think you'd get tired of pursuing the elusive gold. I admire your patience, my boy, but I don't take any more stock in this 'clue' than I did in your others. When you think that you have how fastened suspicion upon each one of the six fair ladies who have been christened Agatha I marvel at the sanguine temperament which permits you to place so much importance on this last find of yours." He stopped, and I answered him rather sarcastically, as I didn't like the gentle ridicule of his tone or his lack of enthusiasm.

"It seems to me," I said, "that considering how you've spent your time, my dear boy, you are a very poor person to look down upon my efforts to turn this adventure of ours to some account. The fact that I have kept my eyes open and used those faculties of penetration and observation of which I am the natural possessor to discover a piece of information which might prove of great value, not only to myself, but also to you—this fact I say, Vincent, ought hardly to bring upon me your derision as well as your lack of sympathy." I don't mind admitting that I really felt hurt, and Vincent saw that I did.

He took his pipe out of his mouth and looked at me with those big, truthful eyes of his so penitently that I smiled inwardly; then he gathered up his long limbs from my hearthrug and came and ensconced himself at my feet as I sat in my easy chair.

"Well there, then," he said, patting my hand as if I'd been an old woman or a small child. "Poor old Archibald, did I make it cross? Well, it was a shame!" And he smiled at me with such a mixture of contrition and fun that I was obliged after a short struggle to laugh unconstrainedly.

"Well, I suppose you will begin operations according to your latest clew to-morrow?" he laughed at me.

I did not answer him, and silence fell upon us. I was pondering over the problem and did not look at Vincent for a long while, but when I did I saw that his face wore a troubled, hopeless look, and that his whole attitude indicated profound dejection.

"Vincent," I said, leaning over him, "what's the trouble?" I had been noticing of late that he had been subject to fits of melancholy altogether out of keeping with his character, and I had come to the conclusion that he had some trouble on his mind. I wanted to know what it was, so that I could help him. When I spoke he turned his head slowly and looked at me a moment solemnly, then smiled faintly, the very ghost of that splendid, boyish smile of his, so that it went to my heart.

"Oh, Arch," he burst out, "everything's wrong! But it's not my fault; how could I help loving her?"

I was amazed. What was the boy talking about, and what was it that he loved?

"Yes, sir," he went on; "I met her four miles from town carrying an old beggar-woman's bundle because the poor old thing had hurt her foot. And when I drew up the dogcart and asked her to get in and take the bundle too, she shook her head, and, by Jove, she wouldn't get in till I let the old beggar-woman get in, too!" Vincent turned to me positively radiant. "Ah, Terhune!" he cried, "you don't know what it is. I love her so!"

And as he stood there, his face transfigured, I grasped in a moment the meaning of the whole thing and the understanding struck like a blow at my heart and I knew how dear the welfare of this boy was to me. Somehow, Vincent represents to me the things I might have been, and am not; the things I might have won, and have lost; he represents the first flush of my own youth. And now that I had wasted those opportunities to lead the selfish existence of the average bachelor, I found a certain joy in again experiencing those first throbs of living that had been mine, in the person and life of young Vincent.

As he stood before me, glowing with feeling, I felt that it was for me to wipe that look from his face, cruel as it seemed, and my anger at the woman who had so deceived the boy by withholding from him the knowledge that she was married helped me to do the deed.

"Vincent," I said, slowly, "do you mean to do I gather from your ravings that you honestly—er—care for this person?" I had risen to my feet, and as I spoke Vincent's whole expression changed in a flash.

"Your inference is perfectly correct," he said. His face went white and there was war in his tone, for he perceived that I meant trouble.

The necessity of saving the boy I loved from the consequences of his own folly took possession of me, and I was full of rage at Vincent and at that conscienceless woman in the gray gown who had entrapped him.

"You fool," I said, putting my face close to his square, cleft chin, "why do you throw away your chance in life like that? What do you want to let yourself get entangled with an adventuress for? Don't you know the woman's married? She confessed to having one husband; she may have a dozen for all I know!"

GUARD FOR GEN. WASHINGTON.

Soldiers So Honored Chose for Their Motto "Conquer or Die."

By general order 11 dated at Valley Forge, March 17, 1778, 100 men were selected from the army to be annexed to the guard of the commander-in-chief. The guard then existing numbered 80 Virginians and for that reason it was ordered that the new members be taken from the troops of other states. It was further prescribed that the men must be Americans born, 20 to 30 years, five feet eight to five feet ten, of "robust constitution; well limbed and men of established character for sobriety and fidelity." The official designation of this force was the commander-in-chief's guard, but it was commonly known as the life guard and Washington's body guard. Its first commandant was Capt. Caleb Gibbs of Rhode Island. He was in turn succeeded by William Colfax of New Jersey, who had been made lieutenant of the corps when it was first brought into being. The motto of the life guard was "Conquer or Die." Capt. Colfax eventually attained the rank of general. His grandson was Schuyler Colfax.

WHEN "CUB" SHOWED UP LATE.

His Excuse Was One That Few of the Tribe Could Make.

The average newspaper reporter is a young man generally not possessed of too much money and who considers himself lucky if he is able to square accounts from week to week. But there is one newspaper reporter in New York who does not have to bother about financial problems. He rides down to the office of his paper every day in his own automobile. The young man is the son of a wealthy iron manufacturer. He is a reporter of the common or garden variety on an afternoon newspaper and so far has managed to hold on to his job.

He showed up so late at his office the other morning that his city editor inquired, somewhat sarcastically, whether he thought he was working on a morning newspaper.

The cub tapped his highly polished tan shoes with his slender cane, flicked a bit of dust from his clothes and struck the city editor dumb by replying:

"Well, you see, my man failed to wake me up on time."

DON'T SELL THE DAIRY HEIFERS—RAISE THEM

Use a Good Sire and Improve the Standard of Your Herd
—By Wilbur J. Fraser, Chief in Dairy Husbandry, Illinois University.

Many dairymen are not raising their heifer calves; instead the herd is replenished by buying cows. Four professional cow buyers sold about 7,000 cows in the vicinity of Elgin, Ill., alone, last year; besides this many cows were shipped in by the dairymen themselves. On many dairy farms the heifer calves, good, bad and indifferent, go for veal. Where this is done it means there is no provision for perpetuating the dairy herd or the best cows in it.

The dairyman from whom the Illinois station bought cow No. 1 with a three years' record of 405 pounds of butter fat per year, was making no effort to perpetuate her superior quality, but was selling her calves at $2.50 each. This is certainly a ruinous practice to the dairy business.

The cow buyer cannot get enough really good cows to supply his purchasers, as but few of the best cows are for sale. The dairyman himself must raise the heifer calves of his best cows and not depend on anybody's offerings to replenish his herd. He has the breeding stock, the feed—cheap feed—and the equipment. Calf-raising is a natural part of his business. It is absurd to suppose that as a rule he can buy as good cows as he can raise. The reasons are plain. He needs to retain but few calves each year and can sell the less-promising ones. He knows the parentage of the calves and need save none but those from high-producing mothers. It is far easier to sell inferior stock (to the butcher) than to buy cows that are excellent producers.

A prominent dairyman of the state says of his grade herd: "The heifers we raise from our best cows are better milk producers with their first calves than are the average mature cows we can buy." Several of our most progressive dairymen have said practically the same thing.

Yet in the face of all this, hundreds of dairymen make no effort to save their best heifer calves, and they think they have a reason. They say actual milk production of their female ancestors.

With a herd of 40 cows, as here illustrated, each cow represents one-eighth of the future herd each year, and the whole number of 40 cows represent forty-eighths of the herd, and the good cows represent one-half of the whole number of all the quality and quantities, character and characteristics, the capacity for milk production, and everything else, transmitted to the calves which are to constitute the succeeding herd.

A fine dairy sire can be bought for $150, and with 40 grade cows at $60 per head, the herd comes to $2,400. The bull costs only one-seventeenth of the investment, yet he will improve the future herd as much as the other sixteen-sevenths. The extra $100 put into a good sire is the best investment in the herd.

Forty-one animals are purchased; one animal will influence the future herd as much as the other 40. It is worth while, then, to give much extra time and study to the selection of that one, the sire.

From generation to generation the succession of well-selected sires goes on increasing and intensifying the improvement of the herd. In this way the sire becomes three-fourths, seven-eighths, fifteen-sixteenths, etc., of the herd. In fact in a few years the sire is practically "the whole thing."

So the sire may be much more than half the herd whether judged by the quantity, strength, quality or accumulated effect of the characteristics he transmits. It is literally true that the sire may thus, within a few years, at slight expense, completely transform a dairy herd and more than double its profit.

Every man who has had any extended experience or observation. In the use of a good pure-bred sire from high-producing dams at the head of a dairy herd, will agree that this sire was of peculiar value and great economy in building up the herd. The records of dairy breeding have proved it conclusively a thousand times over. No man who studies the facts can doubt it. The evidence is to be seen in the heifers of every such sire, and in their contrast with heifers lacking such parentage.

Loose Shoes.—The horse's shoes should be kept tight. A loose shoe greatly tires the horse that has to wear it, especially if he has to work on hard roads. It is often a cause of lameness. Loose shoes can be prevented by taking the horse to the blacksmith's occasionally and having him examine the shoes to see if they need tightening.

Mow the Pasture Weeds.—It is a good thing to mow the pasture weeds at the beginning of summer, so that the cows will not get a chance to eat them even if they so desire. This will help keep the milk from having a weedy flavor and will also give the grass a chance to begin to supplant the weeds.

A Paying Tree.—A New York farmer has a "Sweet Bough" apple tree that has not yielded less than three bushels each year for 19 successive years. Last year the fruit was just as delicious as the first time it bore.

Selecting a Breed.—Select a breed and stick to it. You will be just a well-regarded in improving and developing a good lot of fowls as well as you would in improving good live stock.

Exercise the Brood Mare.—The brood mare should have a few hours' exercise in the yard or on the road every day. It does not pay to keep her confined.

Provide Shade.—Shady nooks are relished by the laying hens.

The KITCHEN CABINET

SAL AND THE SAP.

IGHT up in a maple tree I had a robin trilling; Said he: "I know a bit of news That is just simply killing."

This morning, while I sat up here Right on this very limb, Who should stroll up but Johnson's girl With their next neighbor, Jim;

Jim paused and said: "This maple tree Will be just right to tap; This fall—if I had a wife to help, I'd boil some maple sap."

For chilly mornings, when a fellow Wakes up hungry-cold; I tell you, batter cakes and sirup Taste as good as gold.

I'll get the sirup, Sal, if you— But I'll not tell the rest. It wouldn't be polite— And Robin Flew back to the nest.

Food Preservatives.

The manufacturers' claim—that the preservatives used in the food products are harmless, has suffered a shock in the recent investigations of Dr. Wiley and the bureau of chemistry.

The manufacturers base their claim upon the fact (which is not disputed) that much of the acids used in food preservatives occur in the natural product—notably cranberries, which contain a large amount of benzoic acid. The proof of the pudding is in the eating and we who do not follow the chemical intricacies of the case, are inclined to call it a victory for the farmer, inasmuch as Dr. Wiley's test proved to his satisfaction that the acids were injurious. The manufacturers, however, have little to complain of since the bureau recommends changes which may be easily made. There is not a single article of food preserved by means of benzoic acid or benzoate of soda which cannot be preserved in perfect condition without the aid of chemicals. It means simply a higher quality of raw materials, and greater care and cleanliness in manufacture.

Care of the Meat-Chopper.

Never put it away until perfectly dried. Keep the pieces apart, if possible, and in a dry place. An easy way to clean it is to grind a piece of stale bread after other things, meat, vegetables, etc., have been through it.

"AND THE COCK CREW."

THIS day poultry are plentiful in Palestine, and that they were bred in the time of the apostles is generally believed. We have abundant proof of this in the touching lament of Jesus over Jerusalem, and in the allusions to "cock-crowing." That this "cock" was like the familiar barnyard fowl of to-day is the general opinion—as witness the picture of the eminent artist, James Tissot, in his life of Christ. To illustrate the words "and the cock crew," he has night scene, vague and shadowy—a misty background and the figure of a cock in the center of the picture.

But that our common fowl formed part of the old Hebrew diet is doubtful. During the earlier period of Jewish history there is silence on the subject. In Job occurs the question, "Is there any taste in the white of an egg?" But this, and other references to eggs, allude doubtless to wild fowl. The frequent allusions to the bird nesting "in any tree by chance or on the ground," would seem to prove that they were not of the tame variety.

Many think that Solomon introduced domestic poultry into Palestine, because of the "fatted fowl" brought daily to the king's table. But this is only conjecture; the truth seems to be that somewhere, between the old dispensation and the new, the domestic fowl very much as we have it now, was brought into Palestine, probably by the Romans.

Ice Vs. Paregoric.

In a list of suggestions for the care of babies in summer, is this: "Rub paregoric on the gums if they seem hot and feverish."

With this advice we beg to differ. Paregoric is a dangerous remedy in unskilled hands, and should be used rarely—in this the doctors agree. Do not have it handy so a careless nurse may dose the baby with it and quiet him while she gabs with the nearest policeman. At best paregoric should be sparingly used. With all deference to the advice above quoted we would suggest that a lump of ice on baby's irritated gums would be a relief, followed by no bad effects. Wrap a tiny piece in a linen cloth—and let him nibble on it.

Egg Plant.

This vegetable is not appreciated, and appears only too seldom on the average table. It is excellent when baked. Boil it 20 minutes, in salted water. Halve, and scoop out the centers. Chop and mix the inside with bread crumbs, raw tomato, onion juice, chopped parsley and seasoning. Refill the shells with the mixture and bake half an hour.

PLANT TRAMP BY INSTINCT.

California Cactus Blows Around the Desert for Months.

Curious among vegetable growths and one which is seldom seen of men is the rootless cactus of the California desert, says the Technical World. This plant, a round, compact growth, rolls about the level floor of the desert for some eight or nine months of the year, tossed hither and yon by the winds which blow with ferocious over all of California's sand flat during those months.

At the coming of the rains, or rather the cloudbursts, which sweep the desert in its springtime, this cactus takes root wherever it happens to have been dropped by the last wind of which it was the plaything and immediately begins to put out all around it small shoots, which in turn become cacti, exactly like the parent plant.

These young growths increase in size rapidly, sucking the moisture both from the parent plant and from the surrounding earth. The roots do not penetrate the soil deeply, but spread often over a circle whose radius is not less than ten feet. These roots, too, are small, but practically innumerable, and they get every bit of moisture and plant food to be had in the territory they cover.

EYESIGHT WAS IN DANGER

From Terrible Eczema—Baby's Head a Mass of Itching Rash and Sores—Disease Cured by Cuticura.

"Our little girl was two months old when she got a rash on her face and within five days her face and head were all one sore. We used different remedies but it got worse instead of better and we thought she would turn blind and that her ears would fall off. She suffered terribly, and would scratch until the blood came. This went on until she was five months old, then I had her under our family doctor's care, but she continued to grow worse. He said it was eczema. When she was seven months old I started to use the Cuticura Remedies and in two months our baby was a different girl. You could not see a sign of a sore and she was as fair as a newborn baby. She has not had a sign of the eczema since. Mrs. H. F. Butler, LeSueur, Minn., Apr. 15 and May 1, 1907."

SO LOGICAL.

Mrs. Sparker—Do you think she really prefers a horse to the motor car?

Mrs. Tyre—Well, any one must admit that a horse is more becoming to a woman with such hay-colored hair.

The Sign of Power.

It is the greatest manifestation of power to be calm. It is easy to be active. Let the reins go, and the horses will drag you down. Anyone can do that; but he who can stop the plunging horses is the strong man. "Which requires the greater strength—letting go, or restraining?" The calm man is not the man who is dull. You must not mistake calmness for dullness or laziness. Activity is the manifestation of the lower strength, calmness of the superior strength.—Swami Vivekananda.

BATHING AN INDIAN IDOL.

Curious Ceremony Attended by Thousands of Devout Pilgrims.

Thousands of pilgrims from the various outlying villages and other parts of the Hooghly district poured in from an early hour in the morning to the temples of Jagannath, says the Calcutta Statesman.

The image of the god is placed on a conspicuous part of the temple, so that it can be viewed at an advantage by the immense crowd of pilgrims, and there at a certain fixed hour the bathing ceremony commences.

The most curious part of the festival is that water is not poured on the image of the god until a certain small altar is found sitting on the topmost banner of the temple. There is a popular belief that the bird comes from the famous place of Hindu pilgrimage, to Mahesh on the day of this festival, and his very presence is an indication that the ceremony should commence. Immediately after the bath the bird disappears.

IN THE OLD MILITIA DAYS.

"Captain, you will appear on the parade ground with your company at ten o'clock for inspection."

"Sorry, colonel, but you'll have to postpone it till to-morrow! I promised my wife that she could use the cannon to lay for a church!"

An Artist's Generosity. The famous painter Corot and his sister were joint owners of some house property in the Faubourg Poissonniere. One day one of the tenants—a tailor—came to Corot and said he could not pay his rent.

"What can I do for you?" asked Corot. "I cannot intercede for you with my sister, because I am not on good terms with my family." (As a matter of fact, Corot was regarded as a "failure" by his family.) "However," he added, "here is the money to pay the rent, don't let anyone know I have given it to you."

The tailor after this used to return periodically when his rent was due and obtain the money from Corot, who remarked on one occasion, "I appear to be very generous, but I am not, because I get half of it back from my sister as my share of the rent."

Marine Insurance. Marine insurance is the oldest kind of modern insurance. Its principles were first employed in the fourteenth century by the merchants of Barcelona, in Spain, when that city was the capital of the kingdom of Catalonia and when its hardy mariners were second to none in the world. About the same time, and also at Barcelona, the famous code of maritime laws known as the "consulado del mar" was promulgated, which is the foundation of the present shipping laws of every country.

Too Hard to Answer? "Look here, my friend," said a traveling man to the hotel clerk, "I want to ask you something."

"What is it?"

"Why is it that you people always holler 'front' whenever you want a bell boy?"

"Why do we holler 'front'? Why, because—er—simply because it's—er—Looky here, young feller, do you want to know more about this business than I do?"

FUTURE WEST POINT

IMPORTANT ADDITION TO GOVERNMENT MILITARY SCHOOL.

Army Officers Recommend the Purchase of Constitution Island Adjacent to the Present Grounds for Enlarged Work.

If the advice of the commander of West Point Military academy, Col. H. L. Scott, of numerous other high officers of the army and of prominent members of congress and heads of patriotic organizations is accepted Constitution Island, lying in the Hudson just at the point where the river breaks through the highlands, will soon pass into the ownership of the United States and thereafter become a most important part in the scheme that plans to make the United States military academy, already the world's greatest military training school, an even greater institution.

That it is of vital importance to the United States that Constitution Island be acquired there is no doubt in the minds of those familiar with the situation. Gen. Schofield, when he was superintendent of the military academy, suggested that the government acquire title to the property at the earliest possible moment and that on its magnificent rocky eminence there be erected a series of buildings, architecturally harmonizing with those of West Point proper, where the boys of this country, so fortunate as to receive appointments to cadetships at West Point, might report in order to be properly prepared for their entrance into the academy proper.

In other words, the scheme of Gen. Schofield was to establish on this island, which is so close to West Point that you can throw a rock from one place to the other, the United States preparatory school to West Point, which was to be as perfect in its own sphere as the West Point of to-day is in its. But it was not until Col. Hugh L. Scott, the present superintendent of the military academy, was sent to West Point by President Roosevelt that the plan so long the dream of army officers began to take definite shape, and when the next congress convenes a determined effort will be made to have the purchase price of the island, which is between $150,000 and $250,000, included in the military academy bill, and there is every reason to believe that the action of congress will be favorable.

The preparatory school idea is the one that is uppermost in the minds of the officers who are interested in the future of Constitution Island, and that such a school will fill a long felt need at West Point and result in the training of an even better lot of officers than is now possible there seems little doubt.

CLEVELAND FOREST

NATIONAL RESERVATION RENAMED FOR EX-PRESIDENT.

Action of President Most Fitting in View of Fact That It Was Cleveland Who Signed Proclamation Creating the Forest.

A most fitting memorial to the late ex-President Grover Cleveland, is that of renaming the San Jacinto National forest in Southern California the Cleveland National forest, for it was the proclamation of President Cleveland which made of this splendid tract of over twenty-five and a half million acres a government reservation. It is located in Southern California and the same act of President Roosevelt by which it was renamed also enlarged its borders so as to include also the Trabuco Canyon National forest.

The letter of President at the time the forest was renamed is of interest, inasmuch as it places Mr. Cleveland in the front rank of those who have been instrumental in conserving the natural resources of the country.

Natural Resources says: "My Dear Mrs. Cleveland: It has recently been my privilege to sign a proclamation changing the name of the Jacinto National Forest to the Cleveland National Forest. May I express to you the very great pleasure it gave me to take that action—a pleasure mingled with a keen sense of the loss to our country and to our citizens in the death of President Cleveland."

"On February 22, 1897, President Cleveland signed the proclamation creating the San Jacinto Forest Reserve, in Southern California. The date, February 22, was no mere accident, since the signature of the proclamation was timed to coincide with the birthday of our first president."

"President Cleveland was one of the first to recognize the need of forest preservation, and the creation of the San Jacinto and other forest reserves with a total area of 25,686,320 acres, was one of the results of his foresight in this direction."

"Throughout his life he took great interest in conserving the natural resources of the nation, and I particularly regretted his inability to attend the meeting of governors in May, because the meeting was in part the fruit of the seed he had sown years before."

"The name of Grover Cleveland will always be prominently identified with the movement to protect the forests of the United States, and it seems to me eminently fitting that one of the forests which he created should bear his name throughout all time."

"Sincerely yours, 'THEODORE ROOSEVELT.'"

The San Jacinto National Forest, to gether with 12 others, was created by President Cleveland on February 22, 1897. The recommendation of Hon. David R. Francis, secretary of the interior under President Cleveland, reads as follows:

"I respectfully suggest that the one hundred and sixty-fifth anniversary (February 22, 1897) of the birth of the Father of Our Country could be no more appropriately commemorated than by the promulgation by yourself of proclamations establishing these grand forest reservations."

Eleven of these "reserves," as they then were called, were opposed in the west, and the proclamation creating them was suspended. But investigation showed their necessity and the proclamation was in due time confirmed.

When created the San Jacinto National Forest embraced 737,250 acres. It has, however, been enlarged since and now contains 1,904,826 acres. It is located in Orange, San Diego and Riverside counties. The supervisor in charge is H. A. E. Marshall, whose headquarters are at San Diego.

The summer outing hats have been unusually attractive and the new fall models bid fair to maintain the standard.

Many of the new models in soft felt repeat shapes that have grown familiar to us in Panama and other straws, but there are occasional new notes too, especially among the small motor hats.

Take, for example, the little soft turban of the sketch, with its bowl shaped crown of white felt, its close rolled brim faced with emerald green, its green scarf and fluffy green pompon. This would not be becoming to every woman, but it is pretty, piquant and may be had in other color schemes besides the white and green.

There are other little motor turbans, more exclusively dedicated to the car. One of these models is made in felt or in suede and has a low broad crown around which a motor veil matching the hat in color is draped, the long ends falling loose in the back. The narrow, rolled brim is fastened up to the crown by little straps which hold the veil in place, but which may be unfastened so that the veil may be drawn down over the face.

Felt hats in white, mode, gray, etc., shaped like the popular Panamas and trimmed like the latter with plain or fancy silk scarfs, will be worn through the autumn, and wider brimmed, larger crowned shapes in similar soft felt, but echoing the shapes so common in white chip throughout the summer, are trimmed simply in big swathing scarfs or in an enveloping scarf with one big bird or a couple of wings.

Another scarf trimmed felt hat has a large crown and wide brim rolling at the edges and the scarf runs through six slits cut in the side of the crown and is knotted at the left back.

TO USE OLD SKIRTS

The Economical Woman Can Find Here a Chance for Great Saving.

Many are the schemes of the economical woman, who tries to make the most of everything. The advent of the tunic, or overskirt, gives the saving woman another chance to practice economy.

This is using up a well-cut silk or satin foundation skirt to give an "air" to an overskirt and bodice of a simple striped material.

A woman who owned a smoke-gray silk foundation skirt had it carefully sponged, pressed out and left untrimmed. She bought at the shops a remnant of gray and white striped cotton velvet at a small price and made an overskirt and bodice of it.

For the latter she used a piece of the gray silk body lining, cutting it low-necked, taking out the sleeves and finishing the edges with a tiny point of lace.

The tunic was opened up the side, cut to points, put into a box plait at back, and its edges were bound with a three-inch bias fold of the material.

The bodice was simply draped over a gimp of lace and was drawn into a five-inch empire belt of gray silk fastened with old silver buttons at the back.

How to Train a New Maid. It is a good plan in the average sized house for the mistress herself to show the new maid the ways of the house. If she is the parlor maid, to take her to the dining room and herself lay the table for the first meal, explaining exactly where she likes the various things placed. If the maid is inexperienced, show her exactly how the dishes should be handled and all other details which will help her in carrying out her various duties. She will be more likely to remember her instructions if she receives them direct from her mistress than if a fellow servant told her.—Home Chat.

Bleaching Linen.

Half a pound of chlorinated lime. Half a gallon of boiling water. Two tablespoonfuls of washing soda. Put the lime into a basin and pour the boiling water over it, add the soda, stir to break up all the lumps, and enable the water to extract all the chlorine. Strain carefully to remove all the powder. Bottle and keep ready for use. The solution should never be stronger than one part of the liquor to four parts of hot water. Bleach the linen in this.

Luncheons in Colors. Luncheons in colors are very popular, and one of the prettiest of them is the lavender luncheon. A very effective desert for this luncheon may be frozen custard that has been tinted with unfermented grape juice. Candied violets may decorate the custard, and the dish in which it is placed be garnished with plumbago clusters.

WITH LACE BRETTELES

A Pretty Waist—Combining Embroidery, Medallions and Lace.

One way of combining embroidery medallions with all over lace is illustrated in this pleasing waist. The bretteles, with their scalloped edges, are becoming to most women, and, despite their simplicity, they impart quite an air to almost any costume. For this reason the design is suggested for a gown that is to be freshened up to last out the season, or, for one that is being remodeled altogether. It requires so little of the dress material, for even the sleeves can be made of chiffon cloth, if liked, or of plain net.

The bretteles are bordered with a half-inch strip of satin, either cut on the bias so that it will fit around the curves, or else cut out of a larger piece of material and shaped with precision. The medallions are applied before the bretteles are fastened in position. There is no definite place for them to go through. When oval ornaments are selected and they are fairly large, three will be found enough to use on each half of a brettele.

They stood before the reproduction of the Venus of Melos.

"Her hands must have been beautiful," said one.

"Very," assented the other. "I wonder what position they were in?"

"And the other a powder puff, eh? But that theory won't work."

"And why not?"

"Had she been at her toilet her mouth would have been full of hairpins!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.
