DEMOCRATS SUCCESSFUL

Won Majority of Places in Sylvan and Surrounding Towns.

The result of the election on Monday shows a democratic landslide. It however slid from the bottom up instead of coming from the top down, as last fall.

The democrats elected their entire township ticket with the exception of two minor offices and the constables. The state ticket however went safely republican by about two hundred majority.

Our local candidate for office on the county ticket, Wm. Bacon, heads the ticket in the county, and is elected County Auditor by over 800, and carried Sylvan by 148.

The main excitement election day however centered on the vote whether the saloons should be prohibited, the wets carrying the town by three. The county went wet by 826. Ann Arbor city going wet while Ypsilanti went dry.

Sylvan polled the largest vote in her history, casting 740 votes.

The question of buying vaults for the county clerk's office was turned down good in Sylvan by a vote of 410 no to 273 yes.

The following is the result in detail:

DEXTER TOWNSHIP.

The democrats elected their entire ticket. Gilbert Madden, supervisor; Fred Stoll, clerk; George Walch, treasurer. The question of local option was carried by six majority.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

A very pleasant event occurred Friday, April 2d at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lehman, when twenty-five of their relatives gathered at their home on south Main street, and gave them a surprise in honor of their fiftieth wedding anniversary. A bountiful dinner was served by the son and daughter, and enjoyed by all present. The table was decorated with carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Lehman received a number of useful gifts, and a day was spent which will be long remembered.

Edwin A. Dancer.

Edwin A. Dancer was born in Lima, Mich., June 8, 1851, and died at his home in that township Tuesday afternoon, April 6, 1909. The deceased was a son of the late Wm. G. Dancer and has spent his entire life in the township which was his birthplace. He was united in marriage with Miss Adah Hull in 1887. To this union was born three children. He is survived by his wife, two children, his mother, one brother and three sisters.

The funeral will be held from his late home at 10 o'clock Friday morning, Rev. E. E. Caster, D. D., officiating.

Paid Third Dividend.

Friday of last week W. W. Wedemeyer, receiver of the Chelsea Savings Bank, mailed checks for a ten per cent dividend to the savings depositors, and one for five per cent to the commercial depositors. This makes sixty per cent paid to the savings depositors and forty per cent to the commercial depositors. Inasmuch as this is more than the most optimistic of depositors expected a year ago they are comparatively happy. The entire amount paid out to depositors by the receiver practically within a year of taking hold amounts to over half a million dollars.

Geo. C. Reade.

Geo. C. Reade was born in Canada, December 17, 1845, and died at his home at North Lake, Wednesday afternoon, April 7, 1909. He was married at the age of 22, and was the father of thirteen children. His wife and ten children survive him. The funeral will be held at the North Lake church, Saturday morning at 11. Interment at Webster.

INTERESTING SKETCH OF A FORMER SYLVAN RESIDENT

The following interesting article regarding one who was for many years a resident of Sylvan, was taken from a recent issue of the Jackson Patriot. Mrs. Krumm is the mother of Mrs. L. Tichenor of this place.

Few are the people who live beyond the allotted three score years and ten, and few, indeed, are they who reach the age of 95 years, consequently, when they do, it is worthy of more than passing notice. Therefore, it is with pleasure we record the ninety-fifth birthday and a passing sketch of the life of Mrs. Nathan Becker Krumm. Thursday, April 20, 1835, witnessed the departure from Schoharie county, N. Y., of a small but resolute company of adventurers, seeking home, fortune and happiness amid the hardships of frontier life. The company consisted of Nathan Becker, his wife (the subject of this sketch) and an infant daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Becker were young and ardent, blessed with good health, stimulated by an unconquerable ambition, and resolved at whatever cost of labor and hardship, to conquer the obstacles before them and wring from unsubdued and reluctant nature the object of their search—prosperity and happiness. Such articles of convenience as prudent forethought dictated for such a journey were loaded into a new lumber wagon, convenient seats were arranged for the adventurous occupants and the load was drawn by two thrifty horses. Their proposed destination was Pennsylvania. At Cobble-skil, 20 miles distant, and before night overtook them, they met with their first mishap—a broken axle-tree. Mrs. Becker's uncle, who resided at this place, advised a change of their plan, substituting Ohio for Pennsylvania, as their proposed destination, promising to follow them at no distant date. From there they proceeded to Spraker's Basin where they were detained two days by a two-foot fall of snow. Finding their load to heavy for their team they shipped from this point viz. the Erie canal, all their goods they did not need on their journey. The roads however, were impassable, and they finally at Batavia, sold their team, wagon, blankets and whips for $1,100 and took passage on the canal boat themselves for Buffalo. On reaching Buffalo some days elapsed before they could obtain passage for Cleveland. About one week was spent in Cleveland with a brother of Mrs. Becker's late husband, Jeremy Krumm. The west was now reached, and Mr. Becker looked about him to find a home for his family and employment for himself. A house was found nine miles from Cleveland, on the Ohio canal. On Saturday morning they took a canal boat for their new home and on Monday they disembarked on the towpath, in a lonely and cheerless region. A short distance away stood a log cabin of the most forbidding and forlorn appearance, and the dirtiest Mrs. Becker had ever seen, with a cellar half full of water. At last Mrs. Becker's strength and fortitude gave way and she refused to live there. Before Monday night Mr. Becker had found a good farm to let, with a respectable house, with team, wagon and implements ready for use, and moved his homestead wife and baby upon it.

Trolley Roads and Farm Values

A recent item notes that farmers in Ohio are complaining that the extension of trolley roads through the rural districts increases the facilities for the young people to leave the farms and go to the cities. . . . If the country trolley roads were taking young people away so that the farms cannot be worked as well as formerly, the natural effect would be to depreciate the value of farm property. The contrary effect has been noted, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. Only the other day it was commented on that the opening of an electric road in western Pennsylvania had enhanced the value of farms, formerly offered at $100 per acre, to an asking price of $750 to $1,000. The same result has been observed in other cases. It is quite possible that these advances may in some cases prove to be overdone, as the spread of electric roads is bringing a vast range of farm property into the market. But it is a notorious fact that this improvement of local communication increases the ability to make farm life pleasant, so that it brings a large element of new purchasers into the market and almost invariably appreciates the value of farms.

Mr. Roosevelt says that his friends will make a bit with him by just calling him "mister." There is nothing quite so clumsy as the way we speak of those who were chief executives of the nation. "Ex-president" or "former president" is about the extent of the titles that may be applied to these eminent persons, and both of them suggest a state of has-been rather than a condition of honored retirement. Even the grand mogul who goes through the chairs in a common lodge has a more exalted title and usually is known as the grand and worshipful past high kicker or something else that savors of honor. We do not know exactly what the title of an ex-president should be, says the Chicago Daily News, but if some one will donate a toothpick we will offer it as a reward for the best suggestion as to how to designate a once-upon-a-time president.

The association of life insurance presidents is apparently somewhat skeptical whether or not Prof. Irving Fisher is correct in his contention that 15 years can be added to the span of human life by the adoption of certain practical hygienic reforms, but their appointment of a human life extension committee indicates that they are not disposed to reject it altogether. They are willing to look into the subject. Why shouldn't they? One of the great life insurance companies lately showed that a death occurred among their policyholders every six minutes. What if they could extend this interval to seven or eight minutes? It would make a vast difference in their financial exhibits, to say nothing of the benefits that would thus be conferred upon mankind generally. It is well worth the effort involved.

The New York Medical Journal says that there is a decided reduction in the number of medical students as compared with the immediate past, and attributes it to "arbitrary standards in medical education." The decline is probably due to the fact that during the past decade there has been a great outpouring of young doctors from the various medical schools, with a rapid multiplication of "shingles" of practitioners and a corresponding splitting up of the business from a financial standpoint. The same has been true of the bar. There has been too great a rush to the professions, with a consequent overstocking of the markets.

Superstitions of the sea should have their edge taken off by the disaster off the coast of Malta last fall. The Sardinia was due to sail from the home port on Friday, November 13, a day which was doubly unlucky. It is even difficult to get a sailor to sail on Friday, let alone the 13th of so horrid a month as November. So the men delayed—delayed—and they sailed on November 14, and came to grief notwithstanding.

Perhaps Radcliffe college, in selecting a new dean, may follow the example of Barnard college, the trustees of which are said to be considering William T. Brewster, professor of English there, as the new incumbent of the office. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, of which Barnard is the woman's undergraduate department, is said to have recommended the election of a man.

To avoid the troubles besetting compasses on steel ships, the metal of which deflects the needle, a German inventor has devised a needleless one, in the form of a gyroscope, the axis of which always adjusts itself parallel to the earth's axis.

Wright brothers have been made doctors of flying or something of the sort by a technical school in Munich. Presumably that will help them a lot when they have to set a broken wing of a flying machine.

HUMAN MONSTER'S DESPICABLE PLOT

THE BODY OF HAROLD MOON IS FOUND IN THREAD LAKE.

FOIL EASY MONEY PLOT.

Heartless Scoundrel Attempted to Extort Money From the Grief Stricken Parents, But Failed.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Harold Moon, the 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Luman N. Moon, five weeks ago, was solved Saturday morning when the body of the missing lad was found in Thread Lake. In order to facilitate the search which had been in progress at the lake for several days, the sluices were removed from the dam and the water was lowered to a depth of two or three feet.

The discovery of the body was made by Bert Robson, one of the members of the searching party, who was in the boat alone. He immediately notified the other searchers, and they found the inanimate little form had been taken from the shallow water, it was placed in an undertaker's wagon and conveyed to the morgue.

While the search was being made Luman N. Moon, the father, had been lured to Delavan, Wisconsin, by a scoundrel who professed to be a kidnaper holding the boy for ransom, whose blackmail letter follows:

"Mr. and Mrs. Luman Moon, these few lines tell you in brief how you can get your boy Harold returned to his home before the week is at the end. The boy will be in the vicinity of this town the rest of the week, and I do this at his request as he is tired of this life and wants to come home. If you don't comply with this, you will not see him soon. This is the only way, and if you tell any person or make any attempt at arrest you surely will fail to get him alive."

"This is what you are to do. On next Friday night at 8:30 or 9 o'clock, you fix it so you can get here at 7:30 p. m. that night. At a time stated by yourself go to a street called Walden avenue to a place with a small cannon in the center. It is across from the Hotel Delavan. Put $500 in the month and return to Hotel Delavan and inside of an hour your boy will be there O. K. It is all off if you fail to do as asked. Dictated by your son."

Mr. Moon at once left for Delavan. On his arrival in Chicago he consulted with a detective agency, telling his story and showing the anonymous letter he had received. Then, accompanied by Detective Charlesworth, he hurried to the Wisconsin city. Instead of leaving the money in the cannon as directed in the letter, Mr. Moon prepared the following note:

"I know not who you are, but if you have the boy write the names of his brothers and sisters, the name of a book received at his last birthday, and who he sleeps with, when at home, and I will produce the $500 and no questions asked."

This was placed in the cannon mouth and City Marshal Fleming and Detective Charlesworth stationed themselves where they could watch unseen. About 8:30 o'clock a large man darted up to the cannon, seized the letter and vanished into the darkness.

Acting on the orders of Mr. Moon, the officers made no attempt to follow him, as the frenzied father feared such action might be discovered and result in harm to the boy.

The officers got a good look at the man, however, and are confident of his identity.

What charge may be brought against him is now being debated by the authorities. Though he sought to extort money he did not, and cannot be charged with abduction. What to do in the case is a puzzle to the authorities.

Immediately after receiving the news of the finding of his son's body Mr. Moon left for home.

Cigarettes, Then Laudanum.

"Know what's in that bottle?" asked Edward Bogardus, aged 19, son of Charles E. Bogardus, of Saginaw, to several chums late Thursday night as they stood before a rescue mission.

"Morphine, I suppose," answered one.

"No, it's laudanum," replied Bogardus, as he emptied the contents into his mouth, swallowed and with a cry of pain fell to the sidewalk.

The young man was carried into a nearby restaurant—and coffee was forced down his throat, acting as an emetic. He was removed to the hospital and after working over him nearly all night, the doctors say he will recover. The father of the lad says his suicide attempt was due to excessive cigarette smoking.

A Tariff Petition.

Blotting with the red marks of iron ore from the fingers of 5,000 miners, a monster petition bearing, in all, the names of 8,000 people protesting against the proposed Payne bill, placing iron ore on the free list, has been taken to Washington by Dr. William McBurney, a prominent upper Michigan physician of Stambaugh, and presented to the Michigan senators and congressmen. The petition, which is over 400 feet long, is the result of a recent mass meeting held at Stambaugh to protest against the passage of the iron ore clause.

George Cupp, the Ohio farmer who recently caused the arrest of Mrs. Myrtle Rebland for alleged larceny of a sum of money on the day they had set for their marriage, has forgiven his fiancée and last week in over 400 feet long, is the result of a recent mass meeting held at Stambaugh to protest against the passage of the iron ore clause.

STATE BRIEFS.

The J. B. Arney Novelty Co., one of Port Huron's new industries, has commenced operations.

August S. Snowsky, of Lansing, a Pole, whose home burned recently, says that some enemy started the fire.

At a recent meeting of the business men it was decided to hold a ten-day Chautauqua in Cadillac, beginning July 13.

The Essig Co., of Detroit, has been awarded the contract for furnishing $250 worth of shrubbery to beautify the city parks of Marshall.

D. D. Aitken goes on record as being the first open-air speaker of the season in Flint. He addressed a large crowd in favor of local option.

After illness of two weeks, Mrs. Edward Weber, of Menominee, is dead of tuberculosis. This is the fifth death from tuberculosis in the last five days.

Maurice Ostlund, a Mellen township farmer, shot the largest wildcat ever seen there. The animal measured nearly six feet from the nose to the tip of its tail.

The Dunkley Co., of Kalamazoo, which was forced into bankruptcy through the failure of the fruit crop, has been reorganized, and will reopen its six canning factories.

Miss Alice Baker, of Kalamazoo, was given a headache powder by a physician and immediately became unconscious, remaining in that state for three days despite all efforts to rouse her.

The recent mad dog scare at Menominee, during which nine persons were bitten, is over, and the mayor and council have authorized the removal of the muzzles from the canines.

Barber Moore, and George Barton, alleged yeggmen, escaped from the Greenville jail by dynamiting the floor of their cell. The drill used on the cement floor was made of an old umbrella handle.

Charles Featherstone, of Grant, died in Butterworth hospital as the result of having been struck in the eye by a splinter while he was chopping wood. A blood vessel was ruptured when the splinter struck the optic.

Samuel Decker, of Muskegon Heights, and his sister, Mrs. James Redeye, of Newark, N. J., were reunited Wednesday after a separation of 52 years. They were parted by the death of their parents.

Frank Konejewski and sister, Wlodyslava, of Menominee, are in jail in Holyoke, Mass., charged with the larceny of $3,100 from Anton Baroduk, another Pole, with whom they had started for the old country.

John Kemp, 55, a Bancroft farmer, died of shock, caused by the excitement of a runaway accident. He was thrown out of the wagon when the team ran away, but physicians say that heart failure was the cause of death.

While returning from Muskegon on a Pere Marquette train, Harold Shaw, 14, of Big Rapids, sustained injuries that will disfigure him for life. A transom broke over his head and fell in glass cut several severe gashes in his face.

The coroner's jury in the case of Alexander McCollum, who was killed by a locomotive in the local Grand Trunk shops at Battle Creek, returned a verdict blaming the railroad company for not properly protecting its employees.

Falling on a slippery sidewalk, Mrs. Caroline Laity, an old resident of Ishpeming, fractured her right forearm. The accident was peculiar in that it was the third mishap of exactly similar nature that Mrs. Laity has experienced.

Floyd Lash, 20, formerly of Camden, met a violent death at Janesville, Wis., according to word received by relatives. He was working for a railroad and the body was found in the yards with the head severed and one arm cut off.

Senator Ming has introduced a bill at the suggestion of the superintendent of public instruction, permitting the state to accept a surety bond instead of a personal bond from the treasurer of the state board of public instruction.

Samuel Hohorn asked the Grand Rapids police Thursday to aid him in a search for his daughter, Eliza, 18. He says the girl left him several days ago, and while he hears from her by note almost daily, she refuses to reveal her whereabouts.

Charles Ecklund, 60 years old, sick and mentally weakened, is wandering about somewhere in the woods of Menominee county, and searchers are fearful that he will die before they can locate him. He has been sick more than two years.

Instructors representing nearly every county in the state, about 1,500 in all, attended the forty-fourth annual meeting of the Michigan Schoolmasters' club at Ann Arbor, it being the largest convention of the kind in the history of the state.

Mass meetings are being held in different parts of Iron county by residents, to discuss the proposed placing of iron on the free list, according to the terms of the Payne bill. Several protesting petitions have already been forwarded to Washington.

While the parents were absent the 3-year-old daughter of Jacob Jonas, of Kalamazoo, attempted to remove the 7-month-old baby from a high chair, and the ribbons of the child's hood caught in such a manner that the baby was hanged, dying from strangulation.

According to a decision of the supreme court, a motorcycle is classed as a vehicle, the same as an automobile. The decision was the result of the appeal of Henry G. Smith, who had been convicted in the Wayne circuit court of violation of the law governing motor vehicles.

The question of fraternalism, that nearly separated the congregation of the German Lutheran Evangelical church of Muskegon, of which Rev. J. C. Lohman is pastor, has been settled by a vote of the church members deciding to abolish all wearing of badges in church and at funerals.

STATE LEGISLATURE; NEWS OF SOLONS

WHAT THE LAW-MAKERS AT LANSING ARE DOING—NEW BILLS UP.

COLBY LOSES FIRST ROUND

Attempt to Get Around Speaker's Ruling Affecting Primary Bills Meets with Failure—Substitute for Pending Ones.

Lansing.—Representative Colby intended to make an effort to amend the house rules so as to void the ruling of Speaker Campbell that a committee cannot report out a substitute for more than one bill, but his demand for a call of the house was defeated, 37 to 33, which postponed the fight.

The committee held another session and voted in favor of a substitute for the Dickinson and Colby bills, but it was not reported out on account of the large number of absentees. It takes a two-thirds vote of all the members-elect to amend the rules, but the committee can follow another method by reporting out the substitute and then appealing from the decision of the chair, which would only take 51 votes.

Cuts Pawnshop Licenses to $25.

Quite a lot of trouble was experienced with the provision of the new constitution providing that no bill must be altered or amended on its passage through either house so as to alter its original purpose.

A case in point is the MacKay bill amending the law relating to chattel mortgage concerns, which passed the senate. When it got to the house various police officers called attention to the fact that the bill prevented the police supervision over property that might have been stolen so long as these concerns held a mortgage on it, and suggesting that a general law should be passed placing pawnbrokers and chattel mortgage companies in the same category.

Prison Labor Bill Agreed To.

The house in committee of the whole unanimously agreed to the Clark bill which provides for the abolishment of contract labor in the prisons of the state at the expiration of the present contracts, and the employment of prisoners on state account.

Under the terms of the bill, if it becomes a law, the governor will convene the members of the boards of control of all state prisons in joint session within sixty days after the act goes into effect and choose from among the board members three to serve with him as a board of prison industries. This board is to investigate and plan a system of employment for the persons confined in state prisons, which will bring the most profit to the state without interfering in any way with Michigan industries.

Negro Students Lose.

The supreme court has refused to grant a mandamus to reinstate F. D. Booker and Wesley D. McCoy, two young negroes, as students in the Grand Rapids Medical college, they having been denied the right to complete their course at that school because of the objection of other students to them on account of their color. The decision is not based on the race question, however, the court stating that "it is the general rule that a mandamus will not lie to compel a private corporation to perform its obligations in contract with an individual."

Correct Defect in Law.

A bill was drafted in the attorney general's department for introduction in the legislature to provide a new statute to take the place of the one declared invalid by the supreme court, which authorized probate courts to allow the sale of an estate as a means of preserving the estate. Since 1897, however, there have been many transfers of real estate under the defective statute, and the proposed act will not only provide a new and proper act, but it will also provide that sales of estates made under it shall be valid.

Kelley Finds a Running Mate.

Lieut. Gov. Patrick H. Kelley, who is an avowed candidate for governor, has been conducting a quiet personal search for a running mate. The running mate whom Kelley has picked out is none other than Senator William H. Aitken of the Port Huron-Sanilac district, who is serving his first term in the senate.

For Early Adjournment.

The senate will try to adjourn May 1, if it can be brought about. No official action was taken, but Lieut. Gov. Kelley and most of the senators got together in his office for a conference to discuss the matter. It was agreed that the senate could get through, but grave doubts were expressed as to what the house will do.

Push Work in the Senate.

Lieut. Gov. Kelley has named Senators Ming, White and MacKay, as the steering committee, to push legislation in the senate and keep the important bills to the front for consideration.

Neither house had a session Friday for lack of a quorum, most of the members having gone home early for political fence-building in view of the election Monday. Not a member was left in the city for the first time since the session began.

MICHIGAN'S HALL OF FAME

JOHN HOEFFT, JR.

Representative Hoeft is the man from Presque county. When he is not at Lansing legislating he is at Rogers, Mich., which is his home town.

Minor Legislative Doings.

The Clarken bill providing for a prison industry commission to report to the legislature regarding the best system of labor to employ convicts, and prohibiting any new contracts being made for the employment of convicts by private firms, was passed by the house.

The house passed a concurrent resolution adjourning until Tuesday night. Representative Whelan of Vernon, who had been after the state highway department all season, finally won a victory when he got through a resolution calling on State Highway Commissioner Earle to appear before the house and explain why he has not filed his report.

The MacKay bill providing for two judges of probate in counties over 400,000 population, was agreed to in committee of the whole in the house, along with the Stewart bill which provides for the appointment of a commission and $1,000 appropriation for the exercise incident to the unveiling of the Custer statue in Monroe.

Senator Tuttle succeeded in calling attention to a joker he found in one of the three bills, introduced presumably for bettering the system for the inspection of illuminating oils. One clause provided that every man appointed would get a house 'phone at the expense of the state, and it was cut out in committee of the whole, 12 to 10.

The Straight bill which requires labels on all packages of cereals showing the weight of the contents was passed by the house after another change had been made in it. This is the bill which was introduced by the Michigan Millers' association.

Deficit of Two Million Likely.

Figures made by those most familiar with the financial affairs of the state indicate the deficit at the end of the present year in the state treasury will be at least $2,000,000. There has been talk among some members that it would have been wise to submit to the people this spring a proposition to bond the state or borrow sufficient money to take care of the deficit. The administration was strongly against any move of this character and timid ones feared such a policy. Chairman Rice of the ways and means committee says the budget will not exceed $10,000,000.

Michigan Women Protest Tariff.

Detroit's club women have and away a vigorous protest to Michigan representatives in the lower house of congress and Congressman Denby of Detroit, in particular, against the increase in the duty on gloves and hosiery in the Payne tariff bill. The Detroit Federation of Women's clubs with an enrollment of 3,000 women in 21 separate organizations, has instructed the chairman of its legislative committee to draft a protest to Congressman Denby. Efforts were made to have women elsewhere in the state join in the protest.

Give Commission Full Power.

The house agreed to Representative Hoeft's bill repealing the maximum carload law for short hauls. This law prescribes the rates for hauls up to 30 miles and the attorney general held that where the legislature fixed a rate the railroad commission had no power of review. It was thought best to let the commission deal with the justness of all rates.

Creates More New Jobs.

Senator Collins introduced another bill to provide for a system of uniform accounting throughout the state. This bill would establish a department of public accounting, to consist of a chief accountant at $3,500 a year; first assistant at $3,000; second assistant at $2,500, and not to exceed three clerks at $1,000, all to be appointed by the governor.

Threshers Elect Earle Secretary.

The Michigan Threshers' association met principally to urge the legislature to pass a law which will give threshers more rights on the highways and bridges with their machines. E. V. Chilson, who has been secretary of the association since it was organized, resigned at the meeting. Horatio S. Earle was chosen to fill the vacancy. The organization received reports which show that the membership is constantly increasing and its affairs are in good shape.

THE DRYS FOUGHT SUCCESSFULLY

THERE WERE MANY SURPRISES IN THE LOCAL OPTION ELECTION.

NINETEEN DRY COUNTIES

Features of the Day's Voting Are Interesting From Any Point of View.

The local option election in Michigan Monday was replete with surprises. Washtenaw county, the seat of the university, was lost to the "wets," after it was believed to be safely "dry." Calhoun, admittedly "wet" to the last moment, stood in the prohibition column when the ballots were all counted, and Jackson, believed to be undeniably "wet," drifted to the local optionists by the narrow margin of 41 votes. Monroe went "wet" in spite of a terrific fight put up by the "drys." Five hundred and eighty-six saloons are put out of business by the balloting in the state and ten breweries must close.

These are the counties of the state that were "dry" before the balloting Monday: Barry, Clinton, Gratiot, Midland, Muskegon, Oakland, Oceana, Oshtemo, St. Joseph, Van Buren and Wexford. The vote in the several counties with the number of saloons and breweries that will be put out of business follows:

Counties.	Dry	Wet	No of saloons.
Alcona	500	5	5
Alcona	974	31	31
Berrien	2,000	69	69
Benzie	650	19	19
Branch	500	23	23
Clare	430	12	12
Calhoun	124	80	80
Charlevoix	1,200	26	26
Emmet	740	27	27
Eaton	500	23	23
Genesee	1,258	56	56
Hillsdale	1,104	17	17
Huron	1,269	15	15
Ionia	1,500	312	312
Isabella	1,200	19	19
Iosco	1,000	172	172
Jackson	57	103	103
Kalamazoo	724	9	9
Montcalm	400	21	21
Meosota	152	20	20
Monroe	1,900	62	62
Newaygo	400	14	14
Ottawa	1,500	29	29
Sanilac	1,950	27	27
Tuscola	1,672	36	36
Washtenaw	826	78	78
Totals	896

The following counties have breweries: Ionia, 1; Calhoun, 2; Emmet, 1; Washtenaw, 3; Monroe, 2; Jackson, 2; Branch, 1; Genesee, 1; Huron, 1; Eaton, 1; Isabella, 1.

A recount, which began in Jackson county Tuesday, showed an increase of the dry majority.

George Morrow, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, said: "Encouraged by yesterday's triumph, in which we broke the backbone of the liquor interests in this state, we are already marching on to still greater victory. The tide is with us, and we cannot be repulsed."

"Next year will find us fighting liquor at the polls in Kent county with its big and thriving city of Grand Rapids; in Mason, with the resort and business city of Ludington, and Manistee, with its power and industrial center, Manistee."

"We will probably not be strong enough to begin a fight in Wayne county—that is, a direct onslaught—all things in time, you know. But the attack on liquor in the state has its good effect here. Every loss-out there means a weaker cildid in Wayne."

The general of the anti-saloon forces was jubilant this morning. Telegrams and telephone messages of congratulation were pouring in on him from points in Michigan and neighboring states.

He attributed the victories of local option in the big counties of Jackson and Calhoun—counties which the liquor men had counted on as safely wet—to the organization of his forces there.

"In the cities of Jackson and Battle Creek and Marshall the best business element combined with the family interest to down the liquor traffic, and the combination would not be denied," he said. "As to the loss of the city of Holland through Ottawa going wet, and the failure to carry Washtenaw, Berrien and Monroe, that was due to the lack of organization in those localities. Two years from now the battle will be fought over, and by that time we hope circumstances will permit their scoring a victory."

"One thing about this campaign has been the reversal of positions so far as shouting and noise-making were concerned. You remember that in the old days the advocates of local option used to set up a big hue and cry over their campaign, while the liquor men gum-shoed along and won out. Now, as we go to it in a businesslike way and win, leaving it to the liquor interests to shout."

"I'm sorry we couldn't win in Washtenaw. The state university and Normal school student bodies should have been relieved of the menace of the saloon. But we can only hope that the close call frightened the liquor men there, and that two years hence, we'll get that county over on our side, too."

Elusive Crazy Snake.

Crazy Snake is still at large. Everything is quiet and there are no new developments in the recent Indian uprising. Col. Roy Hoffman, in command of the state militia, sent a communication to Gov. Haskell in Guthrie, suggesting that a reward be offered for the capture of the missing chief, and urging the uselessness of further efforts to effect his capture with soldiers. Col. Hoffman will disband his command Sunday unless otherwise ordered by the governor.

Sugar Trust Called.

Reassessments of duties amounting to a total increase of $1,235,000 in sugar imported by the American Sugar Refining Co. at the refinery of Havemeyer & Elder, between December, 1901, and November, 1907, have been ordered by Collector Loeb, of the port of New York.

Of this amount, it was announced about $100,000 has been paid to the government by the American Sugar Refining Co.

Mr. Loeb ordered the reliquidation of the duties on the ground of fraud. The imposition of the increased assessments is a result of the trial of the case of the government against the American Sugar Co. in which the government was awarded $134,000.

Ex-United States Attorney Stinson and Assistant District Attorney Denison, who prosecuted the case, have been retained by the department of justice as special counsel to carry on further litigation of a similar nature.

In addition to the assessment of $1,235,000 the government also claims that it has been defrauded of about $500,000 in duties on sugar weighed at the refinery of Havemeyer & Elder, at Brooklyn, and also of $500,000 in duties on sugar weighed at the Jersey City refinery prior to 1901.

Millions Lost by Fire.

That fire which burned steadily for six and one-half hours and covered 30 acres before it was got under control, caused a loss of over $3,000,000 in Fort Worth, Texas, Saturday night. A patient whose identity is unknown perished in Walker's Sanitarium, and three men were electrocuted and their bodies burned to cinders in the Sawyer Electric plant.

Herbert Stary was fatally burned in an endeavor to save his dwelling and a fireman fell from a house-top and was killed.

Dallas had three large fires Saturday afternoon and evening. A total of about 75 dwelling houses, it is estimated, were destroyed with most of their contents. Whole blocks were swept clean in some places, and parts of blocks saved in others. Several hundred persons are homeless, but are being cared for by friends and neighbors.

SYNOPSIS.

Senator Morley Vernon's visit with his family was interrupted by a call from the state capital. He regretted it, the girl more than he, because she had arranged to attend a dinner that evening with him. She said she yearned for a national office for him.

CHAPTER II.

When Vernon went into the senate that Tuesday morning and saw the red rose lying on his desk he smiled, and picking it up, raised it eagerly to his face. But when he glanced about the chamber and saw that a rose lay on every other desk, his smile was suddenly lost in a stare of amazement. Once or twice, perhaps, flowers had been placed by constituents on the desks of certain senators, but never had a floral distribution, at once so modest and impartial, been made before. Several senators, already in their seats, saw the check this impartiality gave Vernon's vanity, and they laughed. Their laughter was of a tone with the tinkle of the crystal prisms of the chandeliers, chiming in the breeze that came through the open windows.

The lieutenant governor was just ascending to his place. He dropped the gavel to the sounding-board of his desk.

"The senate will be in order," he said.

The chaplain rose, and the hum of voices in the chamber ceased. Then, while the senators stood with bowed heads, Vernon saw the card that lay on the desk beside the rose. Two little jewels of the moisture that still sparkled on the rose's petals shone on the glazed surface of the card. Vernon read it where it lay.

"Will the Hon. Morley Vernon please to wear this rose to-day as a token of his intention to support and vote for house joint resolution No. 19 proposing an amendment to section one, article seven of the constitution?"

The noise in the chamber began again at the chaplain's "Amen."

"New way to buttonhole a man, eh?" said Vernon to Bull Burns, who had the seat next Vernon's. "What's it all about, anyway?"

Vernon took up his printed synopsis of bills and resolutions.

"Oh, yes," he said, speaking as much to himself as to Burns; "old man Ames's resolution." Then he turned to the calendar. There it was—house joint resolution No. 19. He glanced at Burns again. Burns was fastening his rose in his buttonhole.

"So you're for it, eh?" he said.

"To hell with it," Burns growled in the gruff voice that spoke for the First district. In trying to look down at his own adornment he screwed his fat neck, fold on fold, into his low collar and then, with a grunt of satisfaction, lighted a morning cigar.

"But—" Vernon began, surprises multiplying. He looked about the chamber. The secretary was reading the journal of the preceding day and the senators were variously occupied, reading newspapers, writing letters, or merely smoking; some were gathered in little groups, talking and laughing. But they all wore their roses. Vernon might have concluded that house joint resolution No. 19 was safe, had it not been for the inconsistency of Burns, though inconsistency was nothing new in Burns. Vernon ventured once more with his neighbor:

"Looks as if the resolution were as good as adopted, doesn't it?"

But Burns cast a glance of pity at him, and then growled in half-humorous contempt. The action stung Vernon. Burns seemed to resent his presence in the senate as he always resented the presence of Vernon's kind in politics.

The rose still lay on Vernon's desk; he was the only one of the 51 senators of Illinois that had not put his rose on. He opened his bill file and turned up house joint resolution No. 19. He read it carefully, as he felt a senator should before making up his mind on such an important, even revolutionary measure. He remembered that at the time it had been adopted in the house every one had laughed; no one, with the exception of its author, Dr. Ames, had taken it seriously.

Ames was known to be a crank; he was referred to as "Doc" Ames, usually as "Old Doc" Ames. He had introduced more strange bills and resolutions than any member at that session; bills to curb the homeopaths, bills to annihilate English sparrows, bills to prohibit cigarettes, bill to curtail the liquor traffic, and now this resolution providing for the submission of an amendment to the constitution that would extend the electoral franchise to women.

His other measures had received little consideration; he never got any of them out of committee. But on the female suffrage resolution he had been obdurate, and when—with a majority so bare that sick men had to be borne on cots into the house now and then to pass its measures—the party had succeeded, after weeks of agony, in framing an apportionment bill that satisfied every one, Dr. Ames had seen his chance. He had flatly refused to vote for the reapportionment act unless his woman-suffrage resolution were first adopted.

It was useless for the party managers to urge upon him the impossibility of providing the necessary two-thirds vote; Ames said he could get the remaining votes from the other side. And so the steering committee had given the word to put it through for him. Then the other side, seeing a chance to place the majority in an embarrassing attitude before the people, either as the proponents or the opponents of such a radical measure—whichever way it went in the end—had been glad enough to furnish the additional votes. The members of the steering committee had afterward whispered it about that the resolution was to die in the senate. Then every one, especially the women of Illinois, had promptly forgotten the measure.

As Vernon thought over it all he picked up the rose again, then laid it down, and idly picked up the card. Turning it over in his hand he saw that its other side was engraved, and he read:

MARIA BURLEY GREENE
Attorney and Counselor at Law.
The Rookery Chicago

Then he knew; it was the work of the woman lawyer. Vernon had heard of her often; he had never seen her. He gave a little snuff of disgust.

The senate was droning along on the order of reports from standing committees, and Vernon, growing tired of the monotony, rose and sauntered back to the lobby in search of company more congenial than that of the gruff Burns. He carried the rose as he went, raising it now and then to enjoy its cool petals and its fragrance.

On one of the leather divans that stretch themselves invitingly under the tall windows on each side of the senate chamber sat a woman, and about her was a little group of men.

The femininity of it touched him. He might have told her that he did not often appear in court himself, but he was new enough at the bar to have to practice the dissimulation of the young professional man. He indulged himself in the temptation to allow her to go undisturbed, though with a pang he remembered that her practice, from all that he had heard, must be much more lucrative than his. Something of the pretty embarrassment she felt before courts and juries was evidently on her in this her first appearance in the senate, but she put it away; her breast rose with the deep breath of resolution she drew, and she straightened to look him once more in the eyes.

The Femininity of It Touched Him.

bending deferentially. As he passed within easy distance one of the men saw him and beckoned. Vernon went over to them.

"Miss Greene," said Senator Martin, "let me present Senator Vernon of Chicago."

Miss Greene gave him the little hand that looked yet smaller in its glove of black suede. He bowed low to conceal a surprise that had sprung incautiously to his eyes. Instead of the thin, short-haired, spectacled old maid that had always, in his mind, typified Maria Burley Greene, here was a young woman who apparently conformed to every fashion, though her beauty and distinction might have made her independent of conventions.

Physically she was too nearly perfect to give at once an impression of aristocracy; but it was her expression that charmed; it was plain that her intellectuality was of the higher degrees.

As Vernon possessed himself he was able to note that this surprising young woman was clad in a black traveling gown that fitted her perfectly. From her spring hat down to the toes of her boots there was nothing in her attire that was mannish, but she was of an exquisite daintiness wholly feminine and alluring.

All these superficial things faded into their proper background when, at last, his eyes looked full in her face. Reddish brown hair that doubtless had been combed into some resemblance to the prevailing fashion of the pompadour, had fallen in a natural part on the right side and a natural swept a brow not too high, but white and thoughtful. Her other features—the delicate nose, the full lips, the perfect teeth, the fine chin—all were lost in the eyes that looked frankly at him. As he gazed he was conscious that he feared to hear her speak; surely her voice would betray her masculine quality.

She had seated herself again, and now made a movement that suggested a drawing aside of her skirts to make a place for some one at her side. And then she spoke.

"Will you sit down, Senator Vernon?" she said, with a scrupulous regard for the title unusual in a woman. "I must make a convert of Senator Vernon, you know," she smiled on the other man about her. Her accent implied that this conversion was of the utmost importance. The other men, of whom she seemed to be quite sure, evidently felt themselves under the compulsion of withdrawing, and so fell back in reluctant retreat.

CHAPTER III.

The surprise had leaped to Vernon's eyes again at the final impression of perfection made by her voice, and the surprise changed to a regret of lost and irremediable opportunity when he reflected that he had lived for years near this woman lawyer and yet never had seen her once in all that time. When Miss Greene turned to look him in the face again, after the others were gone, Vernon grew suddenly bashful, like a big boy. He felt his face flame hotly. He had been meditating some drawing-room speech; he had already turned in his mind a pretty sentence in which there was a discreet reference to Portia; Vernon was just at the age for classical allusions. But when he saw her blue eyes fixed on him and read the utter seriousness in them he knew that compliments would all be lost.

"I am one of your constituents, Senator Vernon," she began, "and I am down, frankly, lobbying for this resolution."

"And we both," he replied, "are, I believe, members of the Cook county bar. Strange, isn't it, that two Chicago lawyers should have to wait until they are in Springfield to meet?"

"Not altogether," she said. "It is not so very strange—my practice is almost wholly confined to office work; I am more of a counselor than a barrister. I have not often appeared in court; in fact I prefer not to do so; I am—well, just a little timid in that part of the work."

The femininity of it touched him. He might have told her that he did not often appear in court himself, but he was new enough at the bar to have to practice the dissimulation of the young professional man. He indulged himself in the temptation to allow her to go undisturbed, though with a pang he remembered that her practice, from all that he had heard, must be much more lucrative than his. Something of the pretty embarrassment she felt before courts and juries was evidently on her in this her first appearance in the senate, but she put it away; her breast rose with the deep breath of resolution she drew, and she straightened to look him once more in the eyes.

"But about this resolution, Senator Vernon; I must not take up too much of your time. If you will give me your objections to it perhaps I may be able to explain them away. We should very much like to have your support."

To Save Horses from Fire.

When a horse is released from his stall during a fire, says a technical paper, he will not leave the stable, for the stall is the only place in which he believes himself to be safe. A new patented device, which consists of a pipe running through the stall to the outside of the stable, is designed to cure this. In case of fire a turn of a handle brings a hose nozzle into position and a stream of water pours over the head and shoulders of the horse, which drives him into the gangway, from which it becomes a comparatively easy matter to lead him into the street.

Only Occasion on Which Casey Was Admitted to Parlor.

An old Irishman named Casey was a lot of money as a contractor and built a fine house for his children.

The sons and daughters were much ashamed of the plebeian father, and Casey was always kept in the rear of the house when they had a party or a reception. One day Casey died, and there was a great to-do about it.

The children had a fine coffin, with plenty of flowers, and Casey was laid in state in the parlor.

That evening an old Irish woman, who had known Casey when he was a laborer, came and asked to see the face of her dead friend. They conducted her to the parlor.

She walked up to the coffin, took a long look, and said: "Faith, Casey, an' they've let ye into th' parlor at last."

NEW FROCKS IN SICKROOM

Warm Weather Costumes Will Be Elaborately Ornamented.

In the new summer frocks of heavy linen, oversleeve, and sheer undergarments are considerably used, but one finds, too, long, moderately close sleeves of the linen, trimmed on the outside and at the wrist, or trimmed in cuff fashion half way to the elbow.

The Dutch neck fitted with such low, broad collars of finely hand embroidered batiste or lawn as are in vogue this winter will surely be popular for simple summer frocks with women who can successfully adopt these girlish modes, but the high transparent collar or high stock shows no sign of losing prestige.

Hand embroidery is as much in demand as ever, and the new showing of hand flouncing, allover and motif embroideries is surpassingly beautiful. English eyelet work is greatly in evidence among the choicest of the early showings, but it is of fine lace character and frequently combined with other embroidery or lace. Wide bands of this openwork embroidery in exquisite intricate and fine design are displayed in soft ecru as well as in white, and lovely effects are obtained with intermixture of delicate coloring—a groundwork of the fine openwork done in white, with scattered design of soft blue, rose, green or lavender thrown over it, or the eyelet work in color, with the other embroidery in white.

The new bordered materials of the lingerie and linen classes make frequent use of these embroidery combinations, and many of the chic bodice effects have plain wide borders of delicate color joining the sheer white material under trailing embroidery designs. One charming line of bodice batistes has a white ground over which at wide intervals are scattered small embroidered dots of color, say of pink. There is a six-inch border of plain pink headed by embroidery in soft pastel shades running up into the white and down into the pink.

Linen, too, as has been indicated, have border effect similar to that just described, only on linen the embroidery designs are bolder and heavier.

Lovely batistes and mulls with all-over embroidery design are numerous and some of these suggest delightful bouclous demanding little time and effort on the part of the maker. For instance, there is a sheer, silky white batiste which has clusters of very tiny tufts, three in a group, set at two-inch intervals, and between these groups of tufts are lines or large embroidered dots in delicate color—light blue, pink, green or lilac.

Another eyelet white batiste has little English eyelets embroidered in pink scattered all over its surface, and at intervals of about three or four inches a stripe of little ac embroidered rosebuds, clustered gracefully together.

One day small Elmer observed five funerals pass the house. After the last one had passed he said: "Mamma, if we don't hurry up and die heaven will be so crowded we can't get in."

First and Last Appearance

Only Occasion on Which Casey Was Admitted to Parlor.

An old Irishman named Casey was a lot of money as a contractor and built a fine house for his children.

The sons and daughters were much ashamed of the plebeian father, and Casey was always kept in the rear of the house when they had a party or a reception. One day Casey died, and there was a great to-do about it.

The KITCHEN

POT LUCK.

NEIGHBOR used to say to me: "Come, take 'pot luck,' Mirandy. I shan't make company of you; I'll serve up just what's handy." And so she'd give me anything—a dribble and a snippet, stale cake, left-overs, tea so weak. It wasn't worth while to sip it!

Now, I'm not very much on style. And please don't think me hateful. I know, when we're asked out to meals, we should always be grateful. And yet I think, once in a while, we should not grudge the labor of taking just a bit of pains. To nicely serve our neighbor.

We feed ourselves and family year out and season in. For extra guests, then extra pains. In solid reasoning. It is a simple way to prove our interest, you see. And so, when I'm invited out, please—no "pot luck" for me!

Care of Utensils.

Nowadays the cooking utensils are work of art, as one enthusiastic woman said. They are, certainly, not the unsightly things of years ago, and a kitchen may be made to wear a most attractive look with slight expense. But the drawback to these new earthenware pots and pans is that they need extra care to make them last. To do this, however, requires less "elbow-grease" than formerly; only forethought and attention to a few rules.

The earthenware fireproof vessel is the ideal thing in which to cook vegetables, as they retain their color better than if cooked in tin or ordinary granite. They should not be put on a fierce fire and of course, they should never be allowed to be empty of water. They should not be dropped, nor brought in contact with a rough metal any more than if they were china, and when first used they should be put on with cold water over a slow fire, and "tempered." Granted these precautions, the high grades of fireproof kitchen ware should not prove expensive.

They should be put on with cold water and brought to a boil. This tempers them and grants a few precautions, the better grades of kitchen stuff are not extravagant luxuries. Anything which beautifies the kitchen and lightens labor is worth a slight economy in other directions.

A LOBSTER.

HAT is a lobster?" asked the Prof. The student scratched his head. "Well, it walks backward; it's a fish, and mostly always red."

"You're right—in all but just three things." The teacher mildly said. "A lobster backward does not walk; 'tis not a fish—nor red."

"It is crustacean, and its limbs are well articulated. And when you say it's red, my son, you have anticipated."

"It walks, too, well—as well as you," And then, with voice melodious, He added: "Beg your pardon, sir, 'Comparisons are odious.'"

Mildew.

Mildew is alive! This very fact makes the problem more difficult, while it renders it more interesting. To take out stains of mildew seems a commonplace process until we realize that patches of mildew are aggregations of tiny living organisms whose multiplication and growth account for the so-called "stain."

This fact, however, makes it easier to understand why mildew is often eradicated merely by exposure to the air and sun. It is a process which is aided by boiling, or, in stubborn cases, they may be removed by a solution of chloride of lime. This must, though, be well rinsed as the lime will rot the material.

Mildew will sometimes yield to ammonia, the quality and color of the material determining the strength of the solution.

Among the other kinds of troublesome stains, are grease spots which are usually easily removed by pressing with a hot iron, having a piece of blotting paper between the goods and the iron. This will absorb the grease. In valuable silk or woolen materials, a few drops of ether or eau de Cologne will usually remove the grease.

For paint spots, use turpentine.

For ink, use milk.

For paint on glass, hot vinegar is good.

Tea stains may be effectively done away with by the use of glycerine, and all fruit stains may be taken from linen by pouring boiling water over them at once.

Rust spots on steel will yield to olive oil, well rubbed in; two days later, apply unsalted lime, finely powdered.

Fancy Baked Potatoes.

Select large, well-shaped vegetables, and when baked, cut in two and scoop out the centers. Mash these fine with milk, butter and salt, then return to the skin. Over the top sprinkle a few bread crumbs and brown in the oven. Add a tiny bit of chopped parsley and a dab of butter and serve.

CHILD ATE CUTICURA OINTMENT.

Spread Whole Box of It on Crackers—Not the Least Injury Resulted.

Cuticura Thus Proven Pure and Sweet.

A New York friend of Cuticura writes:

"My three year old son and heir, after being put to bed on a trip across the Atlantic, investigated the state-room and located a box of graham crackers and a box of Cuticura Ointment. When a search was made for the box, it was found empty and the kid admitted that he had eaten the contents of the entire box spread on the crackers. It cured him of a bad cold and I don't know what else."

No more conclusive evidence could be offered that every ingredient of Cuticura Ointment is absolutely pure, sweet and harmless. If it may be safely eaten by a young child, none but the most beneficial results can be expected to attend its application to even the tenderest skin or youngest infant. Potter Drug & Chem. Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed, it causes a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out of this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed, forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

is imperative as a mark of respect and remembrance for the departed, and both are best preserved by the thoughtful care which secures not only beauty of design, but quality of material and workmanship.

While the impulse what leads to the erection of a monument is one of tender sentiment, there is no reason why business sense should not be used in its purchase.

The plan on which we operate is to give our customers the best in design, in quality, and in size, that the money available will secure.

We have two complete plants equipped with all modern machinery and we treat our work as a profession and as a business as well, one member of this firm has spent years in studying monumental designing.

Our collection of designs and the finished work in our yards at Manchester and Plymouth, Mich., are open for your inspection, or if you will give us a will call with designs and estimates.

We do not urge the purchase of a monument—we merely try to get the facts about our facilities before you—then when you are ready we are at your service.

A Jackson company has been putting in and contracting to furnish gas light for several of the residents of Lima. Mr. Leander Easton was one of the first to be served. After the gas exploded and broke windows, tore the panel out of the door, set fire to some clothing, Mr. Easton as well as several others have decided they don't want gas light. —Ann Arbor News.

Miss Minnie Marrinane entertained about 15 little friends of Master Paul Marrinane Saturday afternoon in honor of the sixth anniversary of his birth. The afternoon was spent in games and music. Many beautiful presents were given to Master Paul and after a three course luncheon the little folks departed thinking Paul a royal entertainer. Misses Alice and Nell Savage and Margaret Canfield, of Chelsea, were present. —Grass Lake News.

There was a scattering of valuable merchandise and parts of the large truck used by the American Express Co. at the Michigan Central depot Monday night, when it was struck by a fast freight. The Grand Rapids train had just pulled into the station and the passengers were alighting and the express messengers were engaged in unloading the express, when a freight train came tearing through, on the south track, between the passenger train and the station. The rules of the company require, where there is a double track, an engineer to bring his train to a stop when a passenger train is in a station discharging and taking on passenger. Luckily no one was injured.

Townsend Has Big Job.

Congressman Townsend had his first conference with Gen. Wickersham and Chairman Knapp and Commissioner Prouty, of the interstate commerce commission of the proposed revision of the railroad rate law. This conference was held at the request of President Taft, and is to be followed by others with the same gentlemen and with the president. It is the plan to have Townsend work on this project all summer in order that a bill covering the matter may be ready for introduction upon the opening of congress in December.
The president intends to not only be satisfied with the bill drawn, but to see that it is passed. "I will outline what he wants done in his message to congress and will urge that body to take up the question and carry it to a finish before the session ends."
Notice.
There will be a meeting of the stockholders of the White Milling Company at the town hall, Chelsea, Wednesday, April 14, 1909, at 2 o'clock p. m., standard time. Everyone is requested to be present.

MEDAL FOR CLIMBER

TO COMMEMORATE MISS PECK'S ASCENT OF PERUVIAN MOUNT.

Scaled Huascarán, Estimated to Be 24,000 Feet High—Believes She Holds World's Record—Silver Slipper Another Gift.

New York.—Miss Annie S. Peck, who believes that she has attained the greatest height in the world by mountain climbing, has received a gold medal from President Leguia of Peru for her most notable and most recent effort, the ascent of Mount Huascarán, estimated to be 24,000 feet high. It was in this climb that Miss Peck had a hand frozen because she lost a glove, and for a time the lives of those in the party were endangered. Rudolph, one of the guides brought from Switzerland, had been keeping the heavy outer gloves for Miss Peck and he not only let one of them fall but lost one of his own. His feet and one of his hands were so badly frozen that they had finally to be amputated.

Eduardo Higginson, the Peruvian consul general in this city, presented the medal to Miss Peck. It is in the shape of a shield and is about two inches long and 1 1/4 inches wide. On the obverse is the inscription in Spanish:

The Government of Peru to Annie S. Peck. No one before her arrived at the summit of Huascarán. 2 of Sept., 1908.

The reverse bears a picture of Mount Huascarán—24,000 feet. Republic of Peru.

Miss Peck has also received a present of a silver slipper stirrup from the Lima Geographical society. Eulogio Delgado, president of the organization, said that she was the only woman who had addressed the body in its native tongue, Spanish.

Miss Peck in Mountain Climbing Costume and Medal Presented to Her.

Miss Peck has had her eye on Mount Huascarán since 1904, and a little later tried to scale its sides with native guides. It was not a success.

Four years later, accompanied by two guides Miss Peck left New York for the Huailas valley. After arriving in South America there was a 90-mile horseback ride into the interior. A start up the mountain was made on August 6.

Snow had to be melted to make soup and tea. The trip was not successful, and after 12 days the party returned. Natives in the village at the foot of the mountain thought that the party had perished. Arrangements were made to send out a searching party. The appearance of the American and her guides caused more excitement.

The next trip was started on August 28. There were many vicissitudes. More native porters made progress of the party speedier.

Miss Peck reached the summit on September 2, and the next night, while she was descending with her guides, all lashed together with a stout line, the leading guide slipped and fell into a crevasse, carrying her to the very edge. There were numerous slides and narrow escapes, but each time the guide behind braced himself with his alpenstock and saved her and his fellow countryman.

Miss Peck was born in Providence, R. I., and after finishing in the State Normal school there got a degree in the University of Michigan in 1878. For a time she taught mathematics at Bartholomew's School for Girls in Cincinnati and was professor of Latin in Purdue university and Smith college.

She climbed the Matterhorn in 1895 and Popocatepetl and Orizaba two years later. Miss Peck was the first woman to ascend the latter. Then she tackled Pungfingispitze in the Tyrol in 1900. There was the climb up Mount Sorata in Bolivia, some 20,000 feet, in 1904.

Miss Peck was the official delegate of the United States to the International Congress of Alpinism in Paris in 1900. She is a member of the National Geographical society and for years has been a writer upon the subjects of travel and mountain climbing.

When a woman looks serious and stops asking, "What is love?" it is an indication that she has found out.

THE CRACKING OF PAINT.

Property Owners Can Save Money by Learning the Cause.

Do you know what is wrong when paint peels, or cracks, or otherwise necessitates premature re-painting?

Well, sometimes it hasn't been properly applied—the surface being damp or there being too much turpentine or too much drier.

But, nine times out of ten, the trouble is caused by adulterated white lead.

To avoid all such trouble, every houseowner should know in a general way, when a surface is in proper condition to receive paint, what kind of primer and finishing coats different surfaces require, and how to avoid adulteration in materials.

A complete painting guide, including a book of color schemes, specifications for all kinds of painting work, and an instrument for detecting adulterations in painting materials, with directions for using it, can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Bldg., New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49.

This company, the largest makers of pure white lead, invite tests, by means of the blowpipe (included in outfit), or in any other way, of the purity of the white lead sold under their famous "Dutch Boy Painter" trademark. That trademark on a keg of white lead is in itself an absolute guarantee of purity and quality.

NOT A WEIGHT LIFTER.

"Is the baby strong?"
"Well, rather! You know what a tremendous voice he has?"
"Yes."
"Well, he lifts that five or six times an hour!"

The Secret of Success.

The motto of success was given in this tale, told at a banquet:
A Swede among the miners in the west was noted for always striking pay dirt. His fellows thought that there must be some secret to the unusual success of the Swede and questioned him as to how he always succeeded in finding the spot where the gold dropped out.

"Well, Ay don't know of Ay can tell anything 'bout dat," answered Ole. "Ay only know dat Ay must keep on diggin'!"—Milwaukee Free Press.

Partners in His Crime.

The hard looking customer had been arrested for stealing an umbrella.

"What do you have to say for yourself?" asked the police justice. "Are you guilty or not guilty?"

"I'm one of the guilty ones, y'r honor, I reckon," answered the prisoner. "The umbrella had the name of J. Thompson on the handle, G. H. Brickley stamped on the inside of the cover, and I stole it from a man named Quimby."

The First Word.

"That is what I call an ideal marriage," Hardy declared to his wife as they were walking homeward after an evening at the Carrolls'. "Actually, I believe both think absolutely alike."

"Yes, they are certainly charming," assented Mrs. Hardy; "but about thinking, Joe, if you will notice, she generally thinks first."—Youth's Companion.

Value of Aspirations.

An aspiration is a joy forever, a possession as solid as a landed estate, a fortune which we can never exhaust and which gives us, year by year, a revenue of pleasurable activity. To have many of these is to be spiritually rich.—R. L. Stevenson.

The Plain Facts.

"Then you were not one of Gen. Washington's body servants?"
"No, sir. I'll tell you de trufe, sir. I was jest one of his field hands."—Kansas City Journal.

SISTER'S TRICK

But It All Came Out Right.

How a sister played a trick that brought rosy health to a coffee fiend is an interesting tale:

"I was a coffee fiend—a trembling, nervous, physical wreck, yet clinging to the poison that stole away my strength. I mocked at Postum and would have none of it."

"One day my sister substituted a cup of Postum piping hot for my morning cup of coffee but did not tell me what it was. I noticed the richness of it and remarked that the coffee tasted fine but my sister did not tell me I was drinking Postum for fear I might not take any more."

"She kept the secret and kept giving me Postum instead of coffee until I grew stronger, more tireless, got a better color in my sallow cheeks and a clearness to my eyes, then she told me of the health-giving, nerve-strengthening life-saver she had given me in place of my morning coffee. From that time I became a disciple of Postum and the good this cereal drink did me. I will not try to tell it, for only after having used it can one be convinced of its merits."

Ten days' trial shows Postum's power to rebuild what coffee has destroyed. "There's a Reason."

MUST BELIEVE IT.

Every Reader Will Concede the Truth of This Statement.

One who suffers with backache or any form of kidney trouble wants a lasting cure, not merely a temporary benefit.

Profit by the example of Rev. J. M. Suffield, of 2179 S. 8th St., Lincoln, Neb., who confirms a report of his cure after several years.

"I told in a statement made for publication in 1900 how Doan's Kidney Pills had relieved me after other remedies had failed."

Said Rev. Suffield: "I have no hesitation in confirming that statement now. I have used Doan's Kidney Pills at various times and they have never failed me."

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my experience public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life.

It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

"The Last Best West"

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 1600 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1908 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

The thing which most impressed us was the magnitude of the country that is available for agricultural purposes. —National Editorial Correspondent, 1908.

Worms

"Cascarets are certainly fine. I gave a friend one when the doctor was treating him for cancer of the stomach. The next morning he passed four pieces of a tape worm. He then got a box and in three days he passed a tape-worm 45 feet long. It was Mr. Matt Freck, of Millersburg, Laupha Co., Pa. I am quite a worker for Cascarets. I use them myself and find them beneficial for most any disease caused by impure blood."
