KILL THE FLIES.

They Are One of The Greatest Men-

Flies are declared by expert authorities to be one of the greatest menaces to public health in our civilization, breeding and carrying the germs which cause typhoid fever, malaria, dysentery and even the dreaded white plague, taberculosis.

Health Officer J. C. Reinhar of Toledo, Ohio, an authority in the science of sanitation, says:

If one would but stop to think that the flies crawling about the house, over the food and over the person have, in every instance, been just as familiar with some disease-breeding filth, the fly would not be tolerated in the house for an instant. Yet every fly comes fresh from the filthiest things to make free with everything in the home.

Flies breed in manure piles, in garbage cans, in every place where filth and germs of disease collect. From there they fly direct to the kitchen, to the sick-room

The wonderful feet of the fly, burry, sticky and spreading, which enables him to walk on the ceiling, gather germs in myriads. A fullgrown fly, the governnent observers compute, may carry 100,000 to 5,000,000 of these disease bacilli.

The flies crawl through the butter, they get into the milk, they trail their germ-laden legs across the cake, and bread and household dainties. In each they leave a trap for the health of an entire family.

They fly around through a sick room, where tuberculosis or typhoid or other dread diseases are. Then covered with the tiny germs of those diseases, they fly to the homes of the well.

The fly speck is a danger and a menace. The microscopes of scientists have discovered in them the tubercule bacillus, which brings consumption, the typhoid germ and many others.

They used to call them house flies. The new name adopted in government bulletins is typhoid flies. That tells its own story.

Flies breed with wonderful rapidity. It takes only 11 days for a fly egg to become a full-grown fly. This makes about twelve or fourteen generations of flies during a summer. As a fly lays 120 to 150 eggs at a time you can see that the descendants of a single fly in one summer might reach into countless mil-

Much has been done in recent weeks to perfect the organization of hose who are associated in an effort to eheck and reduce the ravages of tuberculosis. The work in behalf of the victims of the disease and for the promotion of preventative measures has been rendered more systematic and practical and productive of results, says the Detroit Free Press. Almost 700 patients have been the beneficiaries of specific ameliorative effort, 150 of these patients being in straitened circumstances. The work is no longer on an experimental basis and it is planned to devote in June a day to concerted action looking to the raising of further funds on a plan similar to that employed with a great deal of success in the June of last year. A good account of their stewardship can be given by those to whom the utilization of the funds heretofore contributed was intrusted, and the worthiness of the work should prompt generous gifts of additional funds. No ameliorative work has greater appeal for the public.

The malevolent spirit that fnspired the firing of the forest reserve near Asheville, N. C., owned by George W. Questioning of the Legislature's Work Begins Promptly After Adjournment-Other Matters of Interest.

Lansing .-- Within 24 hours after the legislature adjourned one of the laws it enacted was under fire and C. P. Downey of the Hotel Downey is ready to test the act in the supreme court before he complies with its provisions. The act in question was known in legislative parlance as the Snell bill, and it prohibits the adulteration of ice cream, as well as requires manufacturers to pay an annual license of five dollars. It was given immediate effect as a law neecssary to public health, and Food Commissioner Bird, immediately it was signed, began preparations to enforce it.

One of his inspectors called at the Downey house and requested the paymnet of the fee prescribed. Mr. Downey flatly refused, declaring the law was only intended to apply to manufacturers supplying ice cream at retail or wholesale. He referred the inspector to his attorney and says he will fight. Commissioner Bird is out of the city and it is not known whether he will order the matter taken into court or not.

State Has New Liquor Law.

After refusing point blank to con sider the amendments attached to the Warner-Cramton general liquor traffic regulation bill in the senate, the house changed its mind and with 61 votes passed the measure in just the form it came from the senate.

The amendments by the senate eliminated all of the sections of the bill throwing regulations about druggists, and the definition of the word wholesaler as it is found in the federal statutes was brought into the bill instead of the rather circumscribed definition placed there by the house.

As he had promised, Representative Cramton made quite a determined fight against the elimination of the druggist clause and the new definition of what is a wholesale dealer. He said it might defeat, in a measure, the purposes of the bill. He was in favor of some regulation of druggists even in "wet" territory. But also, true to his promise, the representative from Lapeer did not carry his fight far enough to defeat the measure itself. When it became certain the house was not objection and the bill passed. It has been characterized as one of the best regulative liquor laws ever there has been a great decrease in inquiries regarding state lands as a result of the frequent statement during the legislative ssesion that the state's lands are valuable for reforestation purposes. Prospective settlers who might take up the lands have evidently gained the impression that Michigan is a poor state to start homemaking in, he declares, and he is anxious to have this impression corrected, asserting that this state can furnish as desirable homestead lands as any

Detroit county and state officials attended the funeral services for Representative Sheridan J. Colby, which took place in the Masonic temple, Detroit. Among them were Mayor Breitmeyer, Sheriff Gaston, Controller Doremus, Park Commissioner Hinchman, Assessor Plass, Alderman Heineman, Representatives Stevenson, Curtiss, Copley and others.

The services were in charge of Ashlar lodge No. 91, F. & A. M., assisted by Rev. Walter E. Burnett, who said a few words in commendation of the life and character of Representative Colby.

The casket was escorted by Ashlar lodge to the train which was to take it to Shaftsburg, where interment took place. A joint committee of the senate and house attended the interment

H.s interests in all of the corporations with which he had been identified have been placed in other hands during the past year. This step was taken in order to safeguard his properties in the event of sudden death.

Henry Haddleston Rogers was the originator of the powerful Standard Oil Co. He was "the man behind." It was in his brain the idea of a combination originated, his idea the branching out that brought to the Standard its present throttle-hold on the oil industry of the world, his scheming that led the corporation safely through the attacks in the courts; it was he who defied the federal government.

But through it all the name of Rogers seldom appeared. With all his ability, John D. Rockefeller was really the While he was speaking the innocent eyes of the detective were searching his face. The clerk wore a guilty Mike." manner, but was it the flag of guilt in this particular case, or was it the general, all-round guilt which a man of his calling and stamp is likely to show when in the presence of the law? The letective could not say. But the Relief station would answer the question, or at least throw enough light on the subject to start with. Mr. Banning would be found injured, but had the injury come innocently, from main point was that the missing man would be restored to his home and the restorer would get the reward. The manner of the injury was a minor matter, which, however, properly looked into, might serve as a whip of power to hold over the shady Hotel Northern.

Therefore, after a long look into the clerk's shifty eyes, he said abruptly: "I'll see you again about this, mebbe," and hurried to the hospital. To his inquiries an attendant answered that on Monday evening a man had been brought in unconscious, suffering from a fractured skull and bruises on the legs and arms. Two friends who were with him said his name was C. O. Banning. They couldn't give his address. In the morning, when they had patched him up and he was able to leave the station, he denied that he was Banning, though he refused to give any other name, and went away growling against somebody who had thrown him down stairs.

"Was he a gentleman?" asked Ru-

The detective's presence seemed to cow the fight all out of Ring, for he at first sat on the floor staring at him and then arose and stood sheepishly eying his adversary. Banning jumped up in a rage.

"Arrest that man!" he cried, pointing at Ring. He was a slim youth of 23, light haired and weak eyed, whose naturally pale face was now pallid from confinement except where the clerk's fingers had marked it with red. "Arrest him!" he repeated,

It would scarcely be said of Dr.

"Jove!" he exclaimed, jumping up and rushing round for his hat and coat, "science indeed! We'll untwist a strange strand of the human mind this time. I assure you. We'll' see Banning at once."

He was ready for the street almost instantly, and the two walked rapidly towards the Banning place.

They found young Banning in the library arranging some papers. He was very pale, his face lined and heavy with care, and his light eyes as he turned them on his visitors held in their depths a singular gleam, as of fear stoutly resisted, yet impossible to overcome. As soon as the greetings were done Dr. Furnivall, removing his heavy spectacles and holding the young man's eye with his own said without ceremony:

"This was a singular experience of yours, Mr. Banning. I know but litsomething unique. How did it hap-

At this startling statement the lawyer screamed out: "Courtney!" and started forward as if violently to restrain him from proceeding. Dr. Furnivall waved him back.

"Be quiet!" he said. "Let's have the story. Mr. Banning, who was your "John P. Parmenter," he answered.

"What, the druggist?" "Yes." "Why did you do it?"

Suddenly the lawyer's brow cleared. Jumping deridings to his malice, for now his up he worked the doctor's hand like telepathic communications to me, all a pump-handle. of them commands to do somethings

"Great heavens!" he shouted. "Who would believe it? Why, I saw Parmenter myself this morning, and he was as well as ever."

"Certainly. Without doubt he scarcely knows there's such a person in existence as our friend here, who is merely self-hypnotized. Put him in good sanitarium for a while, that will fix him physically. Then give him a thorough course of real philosophy, from Plato to Emerson. That will fix him mentally-if anything will."

What seemed the strangest thing of the whole strange matter to the lawyer was the fact that when Dr. Furnivall, who was well acquainted with the druggist Parmenter, brought him to the house and introduced him to Banning, the young man neither showed surprise nor would admit that his telepathic command to him to make away with himself had not been successful. Apparently thoroughly unable to realize that his thought-messages had failed to reach their object, he seemed to hold a double consciousness of the druggist while on all other matters he was perfectly sanelike a man knotted up with rheumatism who declares himself cured. To him Parmenter was dead, "I don't understand it-I don't understand it," muttered Randall.

"And you never will-until you understand the human mind, its cause and what it is," said Dr. Furnivall. "And that consummation is doubtless removed some distance into the future for us all."

"Yes, sir, gentlemen; thar's a leetle difference between farmin' out west an' back here in Old Varmount," said Uncle Si Eggmann to the cronies around the stove at the Crossroads store, on his return from a visit to his brother in Dakota. "Now, out thar in the west they don't think they've really got a farm unless it totals about three or four thousand acres; an' if they air raisin' stock they speak of 5,000 head as bein' a 'leetle bunch o' cattle.' An' takes 'em 'bout half a day to hoe one row o' corn, the rown air so long, an' they harvest corn an' wheat enough on one farm to fill our town hall. Now, that's a leetle diff'rent from what it is here in New England, where we call 20 acres of ground-a fourth of it graveyard-a couple o' dozen hens an' a rooster, six or eight keows, an' a rozberry patch, a farm! Learn to Plan Homes.

Two years ago the University of St. Petersburg decided that women might attend the lectures, as it seemed probable that this course could not contain anything that could make politicians of the students. Recently there has been an exhibition of the work of the architectural students and experts who saw it were surprised to find that the work of the women students compares so favorably with that of the men. In the work of planning homes especially the women were most original in their ideas, and carried out details that would, as a general thing, have been beyond the men students. It is predicted that especially in home architecture the women will make a success of their

Sets Law of Kitchen.

A "law of the kitchen" has been set forth in England in an opinion by a county judge. He holds that where, the mistress of a house goes to the kitchen to aid the maid of all work the two are brought on terms of equality such as would not be tolerated in larger establishments. The case was that of a cook and general maid who sought to recover a month's wages from her former mistress in lieu of notice. The mistress asserted that the servant always "answered her back," but the judge held that under the circumstances this was not sufficient to Man's Contrariness.

One of the most curious traits of that most curious creature, Man, is the fact that the very things he most admires in a sweetheart he condemns or ignores in a wife! Before they were married, when she coquettishly stuck a flower in her pretty curls he went into rhapsodies of romantic fervour. After the honeymoon, when she tries the same little Cupid's trick he most likely does not even see that she has adorned herself with a floral wreath to win a compliment or a kiss.—

What Would the World be Without Music?

It would indeed be like a dreary desert, humdrum and monotonous. Thanks to the enterprise of Musical Instrument Manufacturers and Dealers, the people who love music can have their wants supplied from a Jewsharp to a Grand Piano or Organ. Now I should like to have the music lovers of Chelsea and vicinity call on me and examine my stock of Superb Instruments before they purchase. I will prove to them that it will be to their interest to do so. Come and see the magnificent Newman Bros'. Piano just received at my store. A fine stock of Violins, Cornets, Strings, etc., on hand. Call and see them and get prices.

THINK HARD It Pays to Think About Food.

The unthinking life some people lead often causes trouble and sickness, illustrated in the experience of a lady in Fond Du Lac, Wis.

"About four years ago I suffered dreadfully from indigestion, always having eaten whatever I liked, not thinking of the digestible qualities. This indigestion caused palpitation of the heart so badly I could not walk up a flight of stairs without sitting down once or twice to regain breath and strength.

"I became alarmed and tried dieting wore my clothes very loose, and many other remedies, but found no relief.

"Hearing of the virtues of Grape-Nuts and Postum, I commenced using them in place of my usual breakfast of coffee, cakes, or hot biscuit, and in one week's time I was relieved of sour stomach and other ills attending indigestion. In a month's time my heart was performing its functions naturally and I could climb stairs and hills and walk long distances.

"I gained ten pounds in this short time, and my skin became clear and I completely regained my health and strength. I continue to use Grape-Nuts and Postum for I feel that I owe my good health entirely to their use. "There's a Reason."

"I like the delicious flavour of Grape-Nuts and by making Postum according to directions, it tastes similar to mild high grade coffee."

SYNOPSIS.

Senator Morley Vernon's visit with his Senator Morley Vernon's visit with his fiancee was interrupted by a call from his political boss at the state capital. Both regretted it, the girl more than he, because she had arranged to attend a dinner that evening with him. She said she yearned for a national office for him. On Vernon's desk in the senate he found a red rose, accompanied by a plea for suffrage for women. He met the authoress, pretty Miss Maria Greene of Chicago, who proposed to convert him into voting for house resolution No. 19. Miss Greene secured Vernon's promise to vote for the suffrage resolution. He also aided her by convincing others. He took a liking to the fair suffragette. Miss Greene consulted with the lieutenant-governor. Vernon admitted to himself that the suffragette had stirred a strange feeling within him. He forgot to read his fiancee's letter. Vernon made a great speech in favor of suffrage, aided by glances from Miss Greene. The resolution was made a special order. Vernon was enthusiastic on the prospects for the resolution. He was much in Miss Greene's company. Vernon neglected thoughts of Amelia. He took Miss Greene driving and laid out plans for the success of the resolution. Vernon's speech caused a great newspaper sensation. He was being neglected by Amelia, who had not answered his letter. Vernon is "tipped off" that his suffrage resolution may not pass. As Miss Greene was due the following morning he had no fears. Miss Greene arrived and breakfasted with Vernon. Aerost the dining room entrenched behind women opponents of suffrage resolution, he spied Amelia. He started toward her. She treated him coldly and the women opponents of suffrage reproved him for his part. Mrs. Hodge-Lathrop told Senator Vernon that his conduct with Miss Greene had been hard upon Amelia. fiancee was interrupted by a call from his political boss at the state capital.

He looked at his watch; it was halfpast nine; the senate would convene at ten; the resolution would not be reached before half-past ten at any rate; and so he determined to brave Mrs. Overman Hodge-Lathrop again. He turned back into the lobby: there she was, hobnobbing with men; she did not pass from group to group, after the manner of any other lobbyist, but by some coercion he wished he might be master of, she drew them unshop, and the flip youth who drives erringly to her side. Now she had the delivery wagon answered the Braidwood, the leader of the house, and chairman of the steering committee, and Porter, the leader of the senate. She appeared to be giving them instructions.

> She had set her committee on less important game; the ladies were scattered over the rotunda, each talking to little set of men. When Mrs. Overman Hodge-Lathrop saw Vernon coming she turned from Braidwood and Porter and stood awaiting him. Strangely enough Braidwood and Porter stayed where they were, as if she had put them there. And Vernon reflected that he had never known them, as doubtless no one else had ever known them, to do such a thing as that before.

"Where's Amelia?" he asked before she could speak.

"I have sent her upstairs," said Mrs. Overman Hodge-Lathrop, "poor child!

"What is too bad?" demanded Vernon. He had grown sulky.

Mrs. Overman Hodge-Lathrop looked at him pityingly.

"Morley," she said in a vast solemn tone that came slowly up from her great stays, " I can make allowances, of course. I know something of the nature of man; I will admit that that Greene woman is remarkably handsome, and of her cleverness there can him. be no doubt. I don't altogether blame

She paused that Vernon might comprehend to the fullest her marvelous magnanimity.

"But at the same time it has been hard on poor little Amelia. I saw no other way than to bring her down. You must go to her at once."

She turned toward Braidwood and ish and little between us." Porter, still standing where she had

And she went away. Vernon ordered the carriages, and in turning the whole matter over in his mind he came to the conclusion that Breton Peasants Ascribe Miraculous a sufferer who has placed a sou in the he must deal with these complications one at a time; Miss Greene, as events now had shaped themselves, would have to wait until he got over to the "Well, I have something to say to you." Vernon went on impetuously. "Why didn't you answer my letters? Why have you treated me this way? That's what I want to know."

- He leaned toward her. He was conscious of two emotions, two passions, struggling within him, one of anger, almost hate, the other of love, and strangely enough they had a striking similarity in their effect upon him. He felt like reproaching, yet he knew that was not the way, and he made a desperate struggle to conquer himself. He tried to look into her face, but military drills, band concerts, speeches, athletic contests and other kinds of entertainment, the one hundred and thirty-fourth anniversary of the Mecklenburg declaration has been celebrated, and all North Carolina is happy in the knowledge that its pet legend has been recognized by the president of the United States; for Mr. Taft gave the occasion the official sanction of his presence and was the chief feature of the celebration.

The carnival began Tuesday noon when the Charlotte , fire companies gave an exhibition of their skill and speed. At three o'clock there was a drill by a body of United States cavalry and a band concert at the fair grounds, followed by a league ball game. The evening was given up to a drill by the Charlotte drum corps and a concert by three bands.

Governors' Day Program. Wednesday was designated as governors' day and the main event was the delivery of addresses by Gov. Kitchin of North Carolina and the chief executives of several other states, at the fair ground. These were preceded by a big athletic meet and followed by a cavalry drill, military maneuvers and band concerts, with another ball game thrown in for good measure.

Two events made the evening notable. The first was a May musical festival at the Auditorium which enlisted the services of a number of ex-of Red Men. President Taft Arrives. Just at ten o'clock Wednesday morning the booming of a 21-gun salute by the Charlotte artillery notified the people that President Taft had arrived on his special train. Nearly all the inhabitants and the thousands of visitors were at the station, and as Mr. and Mrs. Taft alighted from their car they were greeted with a mighty foar of applause. A special reception committee took the distinguished guests in charge and conducted them to the Selwyn hotel, where they were welcomed by Gov. Kitchin, Senators Simmons and Overman and the mayor of Charlotte. After meeting all the committeemen and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Taft, together with Mrs. Stonewall Jackson. the governor and mayor and other distinguished visitors, were escorted by a guard of old soldiers to a reviewing stand and witnessed a great parade of all the military and civic organizations that could take part in the celebration.

Mr. Taft Speaks Twice. A second installment of the music festival in the Auditorium was graced by the presence of the city's guests, and then all returned to the reviewing stand, where President Taft delivered an address. His words were listened to with close attention and frequently elicited loud applause

Military drills, band concerts and other entertainments were provided for the crowds all Wednesday afternoon and evening, and the great celevation closed in a blaze of glory.

Old Controversy Renewed. The people of North Carolina, whose proudest boast has been that their ancestors were the first Americans to throw off the yoke of British rule, now rejoice in the feeling that President Taft has recognized the justice of their claim, but the century-old controversy has broken out afresh. Case for Mecklenburgers. The case for the Mecklenburgers is set forth as follows: In 1818 there arose a great rivalry between Massachusetts and Virginia as to which commonwealth should receive the credit for the Philadelphia document, and the controversy was brought up in congress. It was at this time that Davidson, a representative in congress from North Carolina, announced that Mecklenburg county had declared her independence 13 months before the promulgation of the document in Philadelphia. While the statement created some surprise it resulted in an investigation into the facts as to the Mecklenburg declaration. This inquiry was made by Nathaniel Macon, who preresented North Carolina in the senate, and through Gen, Joseph Graham and Representative Davidson, Senator Macon received from Dr. Joseph McKnitt Alexander, the son of John McKnitt Alexander, a full account of "the event," which Dr. Alexander said he had "copied from papers left by his father." Thi statement, which included the May 20th declaration, Senator Macon sent to Raleigh, N. C., and it was published in the Register on Friday, April 30, 1819.

Dr. Alexander's Story. Dr. Alexander related at length how the farmers of Mecklenburg county in the spring of 1775 had called a convention to be composed of two delegates from each settlement in the county to meet May 19 to devise means for the assistance of the "suffering people of Boston and to extricate themselves from the impending storm." "Official news, by express, arrived of the battle of Lexington," according to Dr. Alexander's report to Senator Macon, and the influence of the news from Lexington, he added, resulted in the unanimous adoption of the Mecklenburg declaration of independence.

The declaration, as written by Dr. Brevard, and approved by the convention on May 20, 1775, reads: "1. Resolved, That whosoever directly or indirectly abetted or in any way, form or manner countenanced the unchartered and dangerous invasion of our rights, as claimed by Great Britain, is an enemy to this country-America-and to the inherent and inalienable rights of man. "2. Resolved, That we, the citizens of Mecklenburg county, do hereby dissolve the political bands which have connected us to the mother country, and hereby absolve ourselves from all allegiance to the British crown and abjure all political connection, contract or association with that nation. who have wantonly trampled on our rights and liberties and inhumanly shed the innocent blood of American patriots at Lexington.

Declared Themselves Free.

"3. Resolved, That we do herely declare ourselves a free and independent people, are, and of right ought to be, a sovereign and self-governing association under the control of no power other than that of our God and the general government of the congress to the maintenance of which independence we solemnly pledge to each other our mutual co-operation, our lives, our fortunes and our most sacred honor.

"4. Resolved, That as we now acknowledge the existence and control of no law or legal officer, civil or military, within this county, we do hereby ordain and adopt, as a rule of life, each and every one of our former laws, wherein, nevertheless, the crown of Great Britain never can be considered as holding privileges, immunities or authority therein. "5. Resolved. That it is also further decreed that all, each and every military officer in this county is hereby reinstated in his former command and authority, he acting conformably to these regulations. And that every member present of this delegation shall henceforth be a civil officer, viz., a justice of the peace, in the character of a 'committeeman,' to issue process, hear and determine all matters of controversy, according to said adopted laws, and to preserve peace and union and harmony in said county. and to use every exertica to spread the love of the country and fire of freedom throughout America, until a more general and organized government be established in this province."

He was indeed a handsome and dignified young man, whose frank geniality and courtly manners had already made a stanch ally of Aunt Mary and at once made an agreeable impression on the colonel. He was a budding young lawver of unimpeachable Virginia stock, who had recently established himself in Poplarville for the practice of his profession and had bounded at once nto popular favor.

In the course of the evening Col. Brant and young Challoner retired to the library on the second floor of the house to indulge in a quiet smoke and a private interview. Here Challoner broached the subject of his love for Dorothy, and soon gained the consent of the grizzled old father to the proposed marriage. When they were leaving the room, after finishing their the Poplarville band discoursed pacigars, Challoner's attention was attracted to a picture on the wall, and he stopped to look at it. In a moment he seemed deeply interested. Then he caught his breath sharply, and gripped a chair to steady himself. The picture was a painting in oils, evidently the work of an artist of more than ordinary talent. It was a wartime scene, representing a battlefield in perspective, with troops engaged in foreground were the figures of two in- fense, and closed with this apfantry officers who had crossed swords | peal; in a duel to the death. in a secluded part of the cemetery that afternoon Richard Challoner stood alone beside a grave which was marked by a granite headstone bearing the name of his father. So occupied was he with his own gloomy thoughts that he did not notice the timid, hesitating approach of Dorothy Brant until she was within a few feet of him. He straightened up then, and greeted her with a solemn, courtly bow, while his cheek flushed. The girl was very pale, and her eyes were red with weeping. She carried an armful of roses, which she silently and reverently deposited on the dead confederate's grave. Then, facing the man opposite with a look of pitying appeal, she took from her bosom a letter and handed it across to him.

"Read this, Richard," she said, in a frightened, quivering voice. "It was written by your father to my mother many years ago, before I was born. Mr. Bryan has long contemplated improving a place in the South, and it is not surprising that his selection should be made in the heart of the Gulf Coast Country, whose climate is almost ideal and whose soil is so wonderfully productive.

William Volz, from ten acres in the same neighborhood, shipped 5,000 crates of Bermuda Onions from 10 acres at an average price—after all expenses paid—of $1.00 per crate: $500 an acre. Think of it!

On a small tract of land in the Gulf Coast Country you should be able to make a good living and lay away a snug sum each year.

Can't Use 'Em. There are just three prisoners in the history of the county that so small a number has been confined there. This state of affairs, says the officer, is due entirely to the abolishment of the saloons in the county by the adoption of the local option law.

"The records show," he says, "that for several years past the jail has averaged 45 prisoners, and as most of them served sentences for being drunk the amount paid for their board was large.

To show that he believes that the good work will continue, he is selling a large quantity of potatoes which would be left over with only a few prisoners in the jail. He has also advertised his driving team for sale. "It will be cheaper to hire a rig to make the few than to feed a team," he says.
