EATING IN THE OLD DAYS

Then Guests at Banquets Used Their Own Knives and

Even at so late a period as the restoration, in 1660, the London Chronicle says, it was the custom for guests to take their own knives and forks to an English banquet. Pepys records that he did this when he went to the lord mayor's feast in the Guildhall. In the previous reign the lord chamberlain had found it necessary to issue regulations for the benefit of officers invited to dine at the royal table. They were required to wear clean boots not to drink more than one goblet to every two dishes, not to throw the bones under the table nor to lick

The Stuarts undonbtedly did much to refine English table manners, for it was one of the points admired in Mary Queen of Scots that the customs she introduced from France made her court and royal banquets more exquisite and genteel than those of her rival, Queen Elizabeth. As forks came into use the old-time importance of the table napkin began to wane. From being a necessity it became a luxury, on the fastidious use of which etiquette has at various times placed strange values.

Under the third empire in France St. Beuve brought disgrace upon himself because at breakfast at the Tuileries he carelessly opened his napkin and placed it over his two knees. To this he added the crime of cutting his egg in two at the middle. Court etiquette prescribed that the half folded napkin should lie on the left knee and the top of the egg was to be merely broken with the edge of the spoon and drained with the tip of

For his failings in these respects St. Beuve's name was struck off the imperial visiting list.

BILLBOARD AN ANACHRONISM

The development of aesthetic ideas in recent years in America, particularly in connection with the beautification of cities, has made the bill- thickness through one night and the Thoard an anachronism, as Commissioner Marfarland declares. We had on board 22 Eskimo men, 17 women, and 10 children, 226 dogs, and some forty odd wairus.

We encountered the ice a short distance from the mouth of the harbor, but it was not closely packed, and was negotiated by the Roosevelt without serious difficulty.

From here we drifted south somewhat and then got aslant to the northward out of the current. We worked a little westward and northward till reached-a series of lakes, coming to a stop a few miles south of the Windward's winter quarters at Cape Durville.

From here, after some delay, we slowly worked a way northeastward through fog and broken ice of medium forenoon of the next day, only emerging into open water and clear weather

Ship Forced Aground.

We lay for some time in a lake of water and then, to prevent being drifted south again, took refuge under the north shore of Lincoln bay, in nearly the identical place where we had our unpleasant experiences three years beore. Here we remained for severeal days during a period of constant and Twice we were forced aground by the heavy ice; we had our port quar ter rail broken and a hole stove in the bulwarks, and twice we pushed out in an attempt to get north, but were forced back each time to our precarious shelter.

Heavy Running Ice.

Finally on September 2 we squeezed around Cape Union and made fast n a shallow niche in the ice, but after some hours we made another short run to Black cape and hung on to a grounded bit of ice. At last, a little after midnight of September 5, we passed through extremely heavy running ice into stream of open water, rounded Cape Rawson and passed Cape Sheridan. Within a quarter of an hour of the same time we arrived three years before -seven a. m., September 5-we reached open water extending beyond Cape Sheridan.

We steamed up to the end of it and it appeared practicable at first to reach Forter bay, near Cape Joseph Henly, which I had for my winter quarters, but the outlook being unsatisfactory, I went back and put the Roosevelt into the only opening in the floe, being barred close to the mouth of the Sheridan river a little north of our position three

> The work of hunting and transporting supplies was prosecuted continuously by the members of the party and the Eskimos until November 5, when the supplies for the spring sledge trip had been removed from winter quarters and deposited at various places from Cape Colan to Cape Columbia.

The latter part of September the move ment of the ice subjected the ship to a pressure which listed it to port some eight or ten degrees, and it did not re cover till the following spring.
On October 1 I went on a hunt with two Eskimos across the field and Pass bay and the peninsula, made the circuit of Clemants Markham inlet, and returned to the ship in seven days with 15 musk oxen, a bear and a deer, Later in October I repeated the trip, obtaining five musk oxen, and hunting parties secured some 40 deer.

Supplies Moved to Base.

In the February moon Bartlett went to Cape Hecla, Goodsall moved some more supplies from Hecla to Cape Colan, and Borup went to Markham inlet on a hunting trip. On February 15 Bartlett left the Roosevelt with his division for Cape umbia and Parr bay. Goodsall, Borup, MacMillan and Hansen followed on successive days with provisions. Marvin returned from Cape Bryant on February 17 and left for Cape Columbia on February 21. I brought the rear on February 22. The total of all divisions leaving the Roosevelt was seven members of the party, 59 Eskimos, 40 dogs and 23 sledges.

Make Ready for Dash.

By February 27 such of the Cape Colan depot as was needed had been brought up to Cape Columbia, the dogs were rested and double rationed and harnessed, and the sledges and other gear over-

Four months of northerly winds during the fall and winter instead of southerly ones, as during the previous season, led me to expect less open water than before, but a great deal of rough ice, and I was prepared to hew a road through the jagged ice for the first hundred miles or so, then cross the big lead.

Bartlett Leads the Way.

On the last day of February Bartlett, with his pioneer division, accomplished his division got away due north over the ice on March 1. The rest of the party got away on Bartlett's trail, and I followed an hour later. The party now comprised seven members of the expedition, 17 Eskimos, 133 dogs and 19 sledges. One Eskimo and seven dogs had gone to pieces. strong easterly wind, drifting snow, and temperature in the minus marked our departure from the camp at Cape Columbia, which I had christened Crane City. Rough ice in the first march damaged several sledges and smashed two beyond repair, the teams going back to Columbia for other sledges in reserve

Pass British Record.

We camped ten miles from Crane City. The easterly wind and low temperature continued. In the second march we passed the British record made by Markham in May, 1876-82.20-and were stopped by open water, which had been formed by wind after Bartlett passed In this march we negotiated the lead and reached Bartlett's third camp. Borup had gone back from here, but missed his way, owing to the faulting of the trail by the movement of the ice. Marvin came back also for more fuel and alcohol. The wind continued, forming open water all about us. At the end fourth march we came upon Bartlett, who had been stopped by a wide lake of open water. We remained here from March 4 to March 11.

Gets Glimpse of Sun.

At noon of March 5 the sun, red and shaped like a football by excessed reflection, just raised itself above the horizor for a few minutes and then disappeared again. It was the first time I had seen it since October 1. I now began to feel a good deal of anxiety because there were no signs of Marvin and Borup, who should have had the alcohol and oil, which were in dispensable for us. We concluded that they had either los the trail or were imprisoned on an is land by open water, probably the latter. Fortunately, on March 11 the lead was practicable and, leaving a note for Marvin and Borup to push on after us by forced marches, we proceeded northward The sounding of the lead gave 110 fathoms. During this march we crossed the eighty-fourth parallel and traversed a succession of just frozen leads, from a few hundred yards to a mile in width. This march was really simple. On the fourteenth we got free of the leads and came on decent going. While we were making camp a courier from Marvin came and informed me he was on the march in the rear. The temperature was 59 below zero.

The following morning, March 15, I sent Hansen with his division north to picneer a trail for five marches, and Dr. Goodsell, according to the program, started back to Cape Columb MacMillan Turns Back.

At night Marvin and Forup came spirning in with their men at dogs steaming in the bitter air like a squadron of battleships. Their arrival relieved me of all anxiety as to our oil supply. In the morning I discovered that Mac-Millan's foot was badly frost bitten. The mishap had occurred two or three days before, but MacMillan had said nothing about it in the hope that it would comout all right. A glance at the injury showed me that the only thing was to send him back to Cape Columbia at once. The arrival of Marvin and Borup enabled me to spare sufficient men and dogs to go back with

Some leads were crossed, in one of which Borup and his team took a bath, and we were finally stopped by an impracticable lead opening in front of us. We camped in a temperature of 50 de-

Make Forced Marches.

The next morning I put Marvin in the tions to make two forced marches to bring up our average which had been cut down by the last two short ones. Marvin carried out his instructions implicitly. A considerable amount of young ice assisted in this.

At the end of the tenth march, latitude 85.23. Borup turned back in command of the second supporting party, having traveled a distance equivalent to Nansen's distance from this far to his farthest

I was sorry to lose this young Yale runner, with his enthusiasm and pluck. He had led his heavy sledge over the floes in a way that commanded everyone's admiration and would have made his father's eyes glisten.

Changes His Plan.

From this point the expedition comprised 20 men, 10 sledges, and 70 dogs. It was necessary for Marvin to take a sledge from here, and I put Bartlett and his division in advance to pionee the trail.

The continual daylight enabled me to make a moderation here that brought my advance and main parties closer together and reduced the likelihood of their being separated by open leads.

son and their division, Marvin and I remained with our division 20 hours long-er and then followed. When we reached Bartlett's camp he broke out and went on and we turned in. By this arrangement the advance party was traveling while the main party was asleep, and vice versa, and I was in touch with my advance party every 24 hours.

Moves Expeditiously.

I had no reason to complain of the going for the next two marches, though for a less experienced party, less adaptable sledges, or less perfect equipment it would have been an impossibility. At our position at the end of the see ond march, Marvin obtaj ed a satisfactory sight for latitude in clear weather, which placed us at 85.48. The result agreed satisfactorily with the dead reckoning of Marvin, Bartlett and myself. Up to this time, the slight attitude of the sun had made it not worth while to waste time in obser ations.

On the next two marches the going im proved, and we covered good distances. In one of these marches a lead delayed us a few hours. We finally ferried across the ice cakes.

Makes Record Run.

The next day Bartlett let himself out, evidently, for a record, and reeled off 20 miles. Here Marvin obtained another satisfactory sight on latitude, which gave the position as 86.38 (or beyond the farth est north of Nansen and Abruzzi), and showed that we had covered 50 minutes of latitude in three marches. In these three marches we had passed the Norwegian record of 86 14, by sen, and the Italian record of 86.34, by From this point Marvin turned back in command of the third supporting party. My last words to him were: "Be careful of the leads, my boy." The party from this point comprised nine men, seven sledges, and 60 dogs. The conditions at this camp and the apparently unbroken expanse of fairly level ice in every direction reminded me of Cagni's description of his farthest north.

Danger Is Encountered.

But I was not deceived by the appar ently favorable outlook, for available conditions never continue for any distance or any length of time in the arc-

The next march was over good going, but for the first time since leaving land we experienced that condition, frequent over these ice fields, of a hazy atmosphere, in which the light is equal everywhere. At the end of the march we came upon the captain camped beside a wide open lead with a dense black water sky open lead with a dense black was northwest, north and northeast. It was Bartlett's last hit. He let himself out over a series of large old floes, steadily increasing in diameter and covered with hard snow. Wind Helps Out.

During, the last few miles I walked beside him or in advance. He was solemu and anxious to go further, but the program was for him to go back from here in command of the fourth supporting party, and there were no sup-plies for an increase in the main party. Bartllett Did Good Work.

When he left I felt for a moment ninth parallel in a temperature of 40 pangs of regret as he disappeared in degrees below. Again a scant sleep tary. My work was still ahead, not in the rear.

Bartlett had done good work and had been a great help to me. Circumstances had thrust the brunt of the pioneering upon him instead of dividing it among several, as I had planned. He had reason to take pride in the fact that he had bettered the Italian record by a degree and a quarter and had covered a distance equal to the entire distance of the Italian expedition from Franz Josef's land to Cagni's farthest north.

I had given Bartlett this position and post of honor in command of my fourth and last supporting party, and for two reasons: first, because of his magnificent handling of the Roosevelt; second, because he had cheerfully stood between me and many trifling annoyances on the expeditions.

Then there was a third reason. It seemed to me appropriate in view of the magnificent British record of arctic work, covering three centuries, that it should be a British subject who could boast that, next to an American, he had been nearest the pole turned to the problem before me. This was that for which I had worked for 32 years, for which I had lived the simple life; for which I had conserved all my energy on the upward trip; for which I had trained myself as for a race, crushing down every worry about success. In spite of my years, I felt in trim fit for the demands of the coming days and eager to be on the trail.

As for my party, my equipment, and my supplies, I was in shape beyond my most sanguine dreams of earliest years. My party might be regarded as an ideal, which had now come to realization -as loyal and responsive to my will as the fingers of my right hand.

Men All Tried and True.

Four of them possess the technique of dogs, sledges, ice, and cold as their heritage. Two of them, Hansen and Ootam, three years before. Two others, Eginwuk and Sigloo, were in Clark's division, which had such a narrow escape at that time, and now were willing to go anywhere with my immediate party, and willing to risk themselves again in any supporting party.

The fifth was a young man who had never served before in any expedition, but who was, if possible, even more willing and eager than the others for the princely gifts-a boat, a rifle, a shotgun, ammunition, knives, etc.; which I had promised to each of them who reached the pole with me; for he knew that these riches would enable him to wrest from a stubborn father the girl whose image filled his hot young heart.

All Followed Him Blindly.

All had blind confidence so long as was with them, and gave no thought for the morrow, sure that whatever hap pened I should somehow get them back to land. But I dealt with the party equally. I recognized that all its im petus centered in me, and that whatever pace I set it would make good. If anyone played out, I would stop for a short time I had no fault to find with the conditions. My dogs were the best, the pick of 122 with which we left Columbia. Almost all were powerful males, hard as nails, in good flesh, but without a superfluous ounce, and, what was better yet, they were all in good spirits.

My sledges, now that the repairs were completed, were in good condition. My supplies were ample for 40 days, with the reserve represented by the dogs themselves, could be made to last 50. At a little after midnight of April 1 after a few hours of sound sleep. I hit the trail, leaving the others to break As I climbed the pressure ridge back of our igloos I set another hole in my belt, the third since I started. Every man and dog of us was lean and flat bellied as a board and as hard. Fine Morning for Start.

It was a fine morning. The wind of the last two days had subsided, and the going was the best and most equable of any I had had yet. The floes were large and old, and clear, and were surrounded by pressure riges, some of which were almost stupendous.

The biggest of them, however, were easily negotiated, either through some crevice or up some huge brink. I set a good pace for about ten hours, Twenty-five miles took me well beyond the eighty-eighth parallel. While I was building my igloos a long lead forward by the east and southwest of us at a distance of a few wished. The weather was fine and the going like that of the previous day, except at the beginning, when pickaxes were required. This and a brief stop at another lead cut down our distance. But we had made 20 miles in ten hours and were half way to the eighty-ninth parallel Going Improves on Way.

Again there was a few hours' sleep and we hit the trail before midnight. The weather and going were even better. The surface, except as interrupted by infrequent ridges. Was as level as the glacial fringe from Hecla to Columbis, and harder.

and across the eighty-ninth parallel.

This march duplicated the previous one as to weather and going. The last few hours it was on young ice and occasionally the dogs were galloping. We made twenty-five miles or more the air, the sky, and the bitter wind burning the face till it cracked. It was like the great interior ice gap of Greenland. Even the natives com-plained of the bitter air. It was as keen as frozen steel.

A little longer sleep than the previous one had to be taken here, as we were all in need of it. Then on again. Up to this time, with each successive march, our fear of an impassable lead had increased. At every inequality of the ice I found myself hurrying breathlessly forward, fearing that it marked s lead, and when I arrived at the summit would catch my breath with relief-only to find myself hurrying on in the same way at the next one.

shift of feeling, this fear fell from me completely. The weather was thick, but gave me no uneasiness. Before I turned in I took an observation which indicated our position as 89

The more sprightly ones, as they went along with tightly curled tails, frequently tossed their heads, with short, sharp barks and yelps. In 12 hours we had made 40 miles

There was no sign of a lead in the Pole Reached at Last.

I had now made my five marches, and was in time for a hasty noon observation through a temporary break in the clouds, which indicated our position as 89.57. quote an entry from my journal some hours later: The pole at last. The prize of three centuries, my dream and goal for 20 years, mine at last. I cannot bring myself to realize it. It all seems so simple and commonplace. As Bartlett said when turning back, when speaking of his being in these exclusive regions, which no mortal has ever penetrated before: "It is just like every day." Of course I had my sensations that made sleep impossible for hours, despite my utter fatigue-the sensations of a lifetime; but I have no room for them here. The first 30 hours at the pole were spent in taking observations; in going some ten miles beyond our camp and some eight miles to the right of it; in taking photographs, planting my flags, depositing my records, studying the horizon with my telescope for possible land, and searching for a practicable place to make a sounding. Ten hours after our arrival the clouds cleared before a light breeze from our and from that time until our depar ture in the afternoon of April 7 the weather was cloudless and flawless. The minimum temperature during the 30 hours was 33 below, the maximum 12. We had reached the goal, but the return was still before us. It was essential that we reach the land before the next spring tide, and we must strain every nerve to do this. I had a brief talk with my men. From now on it was to be a big travel, little sleep and a hustle every minute. We would try, I told them, to double march on the return-that is, to start and cover one of our northward marches, make tea and eat our luncheon in the igloos, then cover another march eat and sleep a few hours, and repeat this daily.

Double Speed on Return. As a matter of fact, we nearly did this, covering regularly on our return journey five outward marches in three return marches. Just as long as we could hold the trail we could double our speed, and we need waste no time in building new igloos every day, so that the time we gained on the return lessened the chances of a gale destroying the track. Just above the eighty-seventh parallel was a region some fifty miles wide which caused me considerable uneasiness. Twelve hours of strong easterly, westerly, or northerly wind would make this region an open sea. In the afternoon of the 7th we started on our return, having double fed the dogs, repaired the sledges for the last time, and discarded all our spare clothing to lighten the loads Sea 1,500 Fathoms Deep.

Five miles from the pole a narrow crack filled with recent ice, through which we were able to work a hole with a pickax, enabled me to make a sounding. All my wire, 1,500 fathoms, was sent down, but there was no bot-

The last march was in the wild sweep of a northerly gale, with drifting snow and the ice rocking under as we dashed over it. Little Trouble in Leads.

South of where Marvin had turned back we came to where his party had built several igloos while delayed by open leads. Still further south found where the captain had been held up by an open lead and obliged to camp. Fortunately the movement of these leads was simply open and shut, and it took considerable water motion to fault the trail seriously. While the captain, Marvin, and as ? found later, Borup, had been delayed by open leads, we seemed to bear a charm and with no single lead were we delayed more than a couple of hours. Sometimes the ice was fast and firm enough to carry us across; sometimes short detour, sometimes a brief halt for the lead to close, sometimes an improvised ferry on an ice cake, kept the trail without difficulty down to the tenth outward march. First Handicap on Return.

Eskimos Wild with Joy.

From here we followed the captain trail, and on April 25 our sledge passed up the vertical edge of the glacier fringe, a little west of Cape Columbia.

When the last sledge came up thought my Eskimos had gone cray. They yelled and called and danced themselves helpless. As Ootah sat down on his sledge he remsrked, in Eskimos "The devil is asleep or having trubbe with his wife."

"The devil is asleep or having trouble with his wife, or we never should have come back so easily." A few hours later we arrived at Crane City, under the bluffs of Cape Columbia, and, after putting four pounds of permission into each of the faithful dogs to keep them quiet, we had, at last, our chance to sleep.

Sleep Finally in Safety. Never shall I forget that sleep at Cape Columbia. It was sleep, sleep, then tun over and sleep again. We slept glorious with never a thought of the morror or having to walk and, too, with not thought that there was to be never a night more of blinding headache. fatigued brain and body. Two days we spent here in sleeping and Two days we spent here in sleeping and drying our clothes. Then for the ship Our dogs, like ourselves, had not been hungry when we arrived, but simply liteless with fatigue. They were different animals now, and the better ones among them swept on with tightly curied tails and uplifted heads and their hind legs treading the snow with pistonlike regularity.

Shocked by Marvin's Death.

We reached Hecla in one march and the Roosevelt in another. When we got to the Roosevelt I was staggered by the news of the fatal mishap to Marvia He had either been less cautious or less fortunate than the rest of us, and his death emphasized the risk to which we all had been subjected, for there was not one of us but had been in the sledge at some time during the journey.

The big lead, cheated of its prey three years before, had at last gained its human victim. The rest can be told quickly, McMillan and Borup had started for the Greenland coast to deposit caches for me. Before I arrived a flying Eskimo courier from me overtook them with instructions that the caches were no longer needed and they were to concentrate their energies on the ideal observations, etc., at Cape Morris K. Jesup and north from Return on Roosevelt Begins.

These instructions were carried out and after their return in the latter part of May McMillan made some further tidal observations at other points. The supplies remaining at the various caches were brought in and on July 18 the Roosevelt left its winter quarters and was driven out into the channel back of Cape Nion. It fought its way south in the center of the channel and passed Cape Sabine on August 8, or 39 days earlier than inexpedition in 1876.

We picked up Whitney and his party and stores at Etah. We killed seventy odd walrus for my Eskimos, whom ! landed at their homes. We met the Jeanie off Saunders Island and took over its coal and cleared from Cape York on August 26; one month earlier than in Praise for His Aids.

As to the personnel, I have again been particularly fortunate. Capt. Bartlett is just Bartlett—tireless, sleepless, enthusiastic, whether on the bridge or in the crow's nest or at the head of a sledge division in the field.

Dr. Goodsell, the surgeon of the expedition, not only looked after its health and his own specialty of microscopes but took his full share of the field work of the expedition as well, and was always ready for any work.

Profs. Marvin and McMillan have secured a mass of scientific data, having made all the tidal and most of the field work, and their services were invaluable in every way.

Borup Valuable in Many Ways. Borup not only made the record as tothe distance traveled during the journey, but to his asistance and his expert knowledge of photograp y is due what I believe to be the unequaled series of photographs taken by the expedition. Chief Engineer Wardwell, also of the last expedition, aided by his assistant, Scott, kept the machinery up to a high state of efficiency and has given the Roosevelt the force and pow-er which enabled it to negotiate apparently impracticable ice. Mr. Gushue, the mate, who was in charge of the Roosevelt during the absence of Capt. Bartlett and myself, and Boatswain Murphy, who was put in charge of the station at Etah for the relief of Cook, were both trustworthy and reliable men, and I count myself fortunate in having had them in my Members of Crew Lauded. The members of the crew and the firemen were a distinct improvement over those of our last expedition. Every one of them was willing and anxious to be of service in every possible way. Connors, who was promoted to be bos'n in the absence of Murphy, proved to be practically effective.

Barnes, seaman, and Wiseman and Joyce, firemen, not only assisted Mar-vin and McMillan in their tidal and meteorological observations on the Roosevelt, but Wiseman and Barnes went into the field with them on their trips to Cape Columbia, and Condon

As for my faithful Eskimos, I have left them with ample supplies of dark, rich walrus meat and blubber for their winter, with currants, sugar, biscuits, guns, rifles, ammunition, knives, hatchets, traps, etc.

en of congressmen and another even dozen of newspaper men. From the ime that they took their trip southeastward from the capital they have met together occasionally to eat and drink of the good things of earth and to live over in inemory their terrible experiences during the famine. Now those who have dug into history know that the old Jamestown colony suffered terribly from hunger and that many of the colonists died of starvation. The members of which the of congress and the newspaper men who went to Jamestown were so well provided with the good things of life that they feasted most of the time while on their journering. So it was with a touch of irony and of humor that the excursionists on their return concluded to call themselves "The Survivors of the Jamestown Famine." The Survivors meet several times during the continuance of each congressional session and they invite high officials to their feasts, and the high officials, with plates and glasses well filled before them hear the pathetic story of the terrible experience that their hosts under-went while making the round trip to Jamestown in year gone by. It is just a bit of fun, but it serves from the old its purpose of keeping companionable men together and church tower of giving the excuse for two or three moderate feasting to the site of ecasions during the time that congress is wrestling the first with legislative problems.

The Survivors have visited Jamestown and the places near it, which are laden with historical interest, built and in a number of times since their first journeying forth. They know to-day more about the old Virginia coast eities than it falls to the lot of most men who live at a distance to know.

Some of the information stored away in the breasts of the Survivors is unburdened on the guests who assemble at each successive feasting. It is real information, and perhaps it is not without its interest.

The old city of Jamestown was situated 40 miles up the broad James river. There is no village to-day at Jamestown, nor even a hamlet, but the visitor to the region who fails to make a pilgrimage to the site of the place "that once was" fails in a duty to himself and to the spirit of things ancient.

The old city of Jamestown has been turned over to the tender mercies of the government and to the tenderer mercies of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, and the mercies in evidence are mani-The government has built a breakwater to save the island from the ravages of the river and the Antiqui- 1620. Through the doorway, which is open to visitors, ties society is hard at work saving the rvins that remain the colonists led to the marriage altar the "respectable to mark the birthplace of English civilization in America.

There is a church tower on the site of the old settlement that is sturdy in its very decay and no poor monument to the builders of the early seventeenth century. Sitting in the shadow of this tower you can call up enough shades of the past to make an interesting company. Some of the shades must come from a distance, but here in the body they lived and did those things that made their memories a people's inheritance.

Close to the place where the courch ruin rises Capt. John Smith gathered the settlers about him and told them the story of the saving of his life by the Indian princess, Pocahontas. Captain John had been in the kingdom of Powhatan to beg or berrow food for his hungry fellows. He had more tales than one to tell, but the Pocahontas story was the day's prime recital.

John was a touchy man on points of honor and no doubt his story was received straight-faced by his listeners, but one would like to have been present when the captain was safely retired to the fireside. The first romantic Pocahontas episode is put aside to-day by those who make a business of destroying things in history that the sentimental world holds dearest, but it is just as well to say here that no visitor valuing his comfort of mind and body should cast a stone of doubt at the literal truth of the John Smith tale. The Virginians of to-day are as sensitive about their early history as the doughty captain was about his honor.

faith of the English church within a few rods of the crumbling tower. She had been captured by one Capt. Argall, who probably took little stock in the other captain's story that the Indian maiden had "hazarded the beating out of her own brains to save his." At any rate the Jamestown people held Pocahontas as prisoner and hostage and converted her to their faith. She was baptized in a church of which to-day there is small vestige left and afterward she was married to John Rolfe in the same sanctuary.

If you desire to bring back the shade of Pocahontas as she looked in life as a child, read Capt. Smith's deecription of her as he saw her the day he said she saved his life. Here it is: "A child of 10 years old, which for feature, countenance and proportion much exceedeth any of the rest of Powhatan's people."

Excavations have been made recently at Jamestown and the visitor will find much that was hidden from the visitor of the past. Some of the old gravestones have been resurrected and restored and one may read the will be ample justification for steam names of a few of those who died in the famine time, or sel to put it back where it belongs. who met death in the early and almost constant warfare with the Indians. The "God's acre" that outlies the old church tower is in a fair state of preservation and t holds an interest in no way second to the interest attaching to the old graveyard at Plymouth, Mass., even ugh, for reasons not thoroughly understood, the rock of Plymouth has overshadowed the island of the James ough all the years of American history.

Originally Jamestown island was a peninsula, but the fiver has carried many acres of the land down to the cutting a channel through and isolating the site the settlement. Material for the repair of history washed away to the sea, but much remains by means water-from Jamestown island to Williamsburg. James- they all sat, so fast had the spirit of the old place laid town is largely memory, while Williamsburg is both memory and reality. The past and the present meet in its streets and there is a subtle blending of the two into a midtime atmosphere. Happily the Virginians have held to the love of the old things. It is worth something to know that the main street still is known-see the corner signs—as the Duke of Gloucester street. It is a noble thoroughfare, whatever may be said of the one for whom it was named, and on it stands a courthouse designed by Sir Christopher Wren. There are things worth while in Williamsburg.

At the site of Jamestown the visitor is told that the baptismal font that held the water that washed Pocahontas' heathenism out of her had been taken to Williamsburg. There it is in the old Bruton church and it" still holds its age and water well.

Bruton church, by the way, is also on the Duke of Gloucester street, and it is an appealing structure. Whoever the architect was, he has the spirit which makes for beauty. The building is clad with the ivy of England, which grows and thrives in this latitude. The > churchyard, quiet as that of the "Elegy," lies along its walls. It is supposed that the church was named by one of the earlier secretaries of the colony, who was born in Bruton, England.

In the churchyard is a tomb with this inscription:

"Under this marble lieth the body of Thomas Ludwell, Esqr., Secretary of Virginia, who was born at Bruton, in the county of Somerset, in the Kingdom of England, and departthe year 1678."

If a loyal Williamsburger lends his sight-seeing aid you will not be allowed to leave the "oldest incorporated city in America" until you have visited the College of William and Mary, which stands at the head of the Duke of Gloucester street-you can't leave this thoroughfare in the lurch if you try-and which is the oldest college in America, barring only Harvard. The little guidebook of the place tells that among the alumni of "this ancient and honorable college" may be numbered three presidents of the United States, 12 cabinet officers, 19 members of the continental congress, among them its first president, Peyton Randolph; four justices of the supreme court of the United States, including Chief Justice Marshall, together "with a long list of senators, United States envoys and ministers, governors, military and naval officers and five signers of the declaration of independence." The thought on reading the graduate list was that the last ought to have come first.

The half hasn't been told of this old Virginia town. The blunt truth is that when you get into one of these history-teeming places you are lost in wonder that so many things worth remembering by posterity could have happened and that so many men could have had a hand in their happening. They made history fast in Virginia and they made plenty of it.

Not long ago an officer of one of the staff departments of the United States army was made a brigadiergeneral of the line. A younger officer sneered at the promotion and said that the president was recognizing hard duty done in the cracker and cheese department, while the fellows who fought were overlooked.

Some of the officers of the staff partments of the army have seen as much service a stricken fields as have many of their fellows of the rine. Col. Thomas Cruse is doing duty in the quartermaster's department, and he takes more account of shovels than he does of words, but it would be a bold man of the line who would sneer at the career of Col. Cruse.

The colonel saw all kinds of service before he made the transfer to the staff and one of his exploits is told to-day in Sibley tents and in barracks wherever United States troops are camped or quartered.

Cruse was for years an officer in the Sixth cavalry. They say to-day when he picks up a sample shovel in ed this life in the quartermaster's department he handles it as though it were a carbine. In the early summer of the year 1882 second Lieut. Cruse was serving in "K" troop of the

There is a place in Arizona called the Big Dry Wash-a curious name, but one fitting a creek bed in a rainsent out with a following of six men mercurial poison-the antidote for one day on the trail of a band of Apaches. There were not enough and commands were divided and subdivided in order to cover the greatest amount of territory possible and to the end of discovering where the reds had rendezvoused, so that the scattered soldiers, when the discovery was made, might be gathered together and a descent be made upon the enemy in a body.

reached the Big Dry Wash without finding the sign of an Apache. Beyond the basin of the Wash was a natural fortification of rocks. Cruse sent a trooper by the right flank to make a reconnoisance before ordering his men to cross the bare bed of his stomach, and he consulted two difthe gulch. The trooper made a detour and took a peep behind the bowlders. He returned and reported that there wasn't an Indian in sight.

Then the little command, Cruse leading, pushed down into the basin Two of the seven saddles were emptied at the first volley and under the sharp order of their leader the soldiers gave way and sought the shelter of the rocks to the rear. Lieut. Cruse did not obey his own order. He waited and in the face of the showering bullets he lifted a wounded trooper to his saddle and bore him back to

It was supposed that the second trooper who had fallen at the first fire of the Apaches was dead. Cruse looked out across the waste between him and the ambushed savages, the strength of whose fire told him that they outnumbered his squad 10 to one. While looking in the direction of the enemy Cruse saw the first trooper who had fallen turn himself on the sand. Then there happened one of those things which official army history disposes of in a line, but to which a chapter can scarce do justice.

Cruse, carbine in hand, stood up a fair and easy mark for a bullet. In an instant a red face showed above a rock beyond the stream bed and a rifle barrel appeared, aimed in the direction of the cavalryman. Before the weapon cracked Cruse, one of the best shots in the army, had sent a bullet through the Apache's head. Then this second lieutenant—he was little more than boy-rounded the rocks in front of him and walked straight across the open toward the wounded soldier. At every third step he fired and the bullets rattled on the rocks close to the heads of the lurking reds, who had seen their comrade's head split clean at a hundred and fifty yeards, and with that savage discretion which at times takes the place of savage courage, they did not dare show themselves sufficiently to take careful aim.

Cruse reached the wounded trooper. Then he glanced behind him. Two of his men had followed him, all unbidden. "Carry him, boys," said Cruse, "and I'll cover the retreat."

Back they went slowly. A savage braver than his fellows stood up, took careful aim at the group and fired. The bullet hit Cruse in the arm, but an ounce of lead from his carbine crashed into the Apache's chest. her general condition much improved. Cruse walked backward, while behind him his two troopers bore their stricken fellow.

Bullets marked all the pathway, but the magnificent nerve and courage of the soldier, who shot true with death staring him in the face, seemed to palsy the Apache's aim. They reached the breastworks, the officer, and the soldiers with their burden. Before taking to cover Cruse sent one last shot and it claimed a victim.

In an hour reinforcements came and a horde of savages was put to flight. Col. Cruse is in the quartermaster's department, but there are hundreds of older officers of the line who would like to have his record.

LOW COLONIST FARES TO THE WEST AND NORTHWEST.

Union Pacific Passenger Department announces that Colonist Fares will be in effect from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15, 1909, to all points in the West and Northwest.

This year the West looks more promising than ever. Now is the time to secure land at low prices, and, at the same time, to visit the many interesting points in the West and Northwest, at which liberal stopover arrangements may be made.

A better estimate of raw lands can be made now than formerly, because these lands are in proximity to new farms that are producing wonderful

"Doctors," she replied, sadly. "No, he hasn't come into a fortune." A writer in To-Day's Magazine tells the story.

> PRESSED HARD Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in North Carolina says:

"My mother since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker and had been troubled with her heart for a number of years, and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavor of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum. "I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal. The whole family liked it so well, that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us. "I know Postum has benefited my self and the other members of the famlly, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing." Read "The Road to Wellville," in

On that day in Jamestown Rev. Robert Hunt, or his successor, for history is not clear on the point, held a veritable marriage feast, and fat were the fees paid to him in the coin of the time-the longleaved Virginia tobacco. A recent visitor thought of that marriage procession as he stood under the tower and he wondered how many of the descendants of the settlers and of the "respectable maidens" have journeyed here to look on the place of their ancestors' mar-

Jamestown was deserted early as years go, but its memories never will desert it. The visitor asked if there were no tangible memorials of Pocahontas in existence and was told that the baptismal font used at her baptism is preserved in Bruton church, Williamsburg, which became the Virginia capital when Jamestown was abandoned. The Pocahontas font has served to hold the baptismal waters of generations of Virginians, and the Bruton church wardens lay great store by it, but when the old Jamestown church is restored there will be ample justification for stealing the sacred vestower. In the first story are doorways, arched windows are in one part of the second story and loopholes are in the third story, and to these last the greatest interest attaches. The loopholes appear on all sides of the tower and they were used as embrasures for protruding cannon in times of Indian attack. Figures are dry things at best, but it is worth noting that this tower remnant of an early wilderness edifice is 18 feet square and 36 feet high. The structure is crumbling at the top, but the work of the preservation society will make it all

It is not the intention to make a necrology of this writing, but it is barely possible that these two inscriptions, which appear on tablets inside the Bruton church, extolling the virtues of the dead, may have a living interest. Here is one of

"Near this marble lyes ye Honble. Danel Packe, of ye county of Essex, Esqr., who was one of his masters counsellors and sometime Secretary of the Collony of Virga. He dyed ye 6th of March, Anno 1679. His other felecityes were crowned by his happy marridg with Rebecka, the daughter of George Evelyn, of the County of Surry, Esqr. She dyed ye 2nd of January, Anno 1672, at Long Ditton, in ye County of Surry, and left behind her a most hopeful progeny."

The other tablet bears this:

"MDCCLII. Inscribed to the memory of Doctor William Cocke, an English physician, born of reputable parents MDCLXXI., at Sudbury in Suffolk, and educated at Queen's College, Cambridge. He was learned and polite, of undisputed skill in his profession and unbounded generosity in his practice, which multitudes yet alive can testify. He was many years of the Council, and Secretary of State for this Colony in the reign of Queen Anne and of King George. He died suddenly, sitting a judge upon the bench of the General Court, in the capitol, MDCCXX. His Hon. friend Alexr. Spottswood, Esgr., then Govnr., with the principal gentlemen of the country, attended his funeral, and weeping, saw the corpse interred at the west end of the alter in this

Almost in the shadow of Bruton church stands the Wythe house, for some time the headquarters of George Washington during the siege of Yorktown, which, with its historic memories, lies only a few miles away. The seeds of history were sown thick hereabouts.

Just back of the church and at a point easily reached from the Duke of Gloucester street, stands the old "Powder Horn," built by Governor Spottswood in 1714. This magazine, put up by a British governor, was used afterward by Washington to store powder, which subsequently was rammed into cannon to hurl shot at Cornwallis behind the breastworks of Yorktown. The Virginia Society for the Preservation of Antiquities has restored the Powder Horn, and it is now a museum for relics of the past."

It is hard work to get away from Williamsburg, for there is something holding interest at every turn of the streets and the lanes with the ancient and high-sounding names. A resident of the town said that five presidents had worshiped in the Bruton church and the visitor didn't want to get away until he had seen where

EROAD KING. The Funeral of Harriman Was Not

Made Ostentatious.

Edward H. Harriman, who controlled 65,000 miles of the railroads of this country, was buried from his late home on Arden Heights, N. Y., Sunday. There was a profusion of flowers sent by hundreds of his employes ranking from heavy laborers to superintendents and managers each being an individual gift. The service in St. John's church at 11 o'clock was in the nature of a memorial to Mr. Harriman. It was open to the public. Mr. McGuiness spoke in appreciation of his dead patron. Mr. Harriman's osuperintendents made all the plans to protect the procession and services from interference by the curious. The town councils of Tuxedo and Woodbury passed resolutions granting Mrs. Harriman's request to close all the roads leading to St. John's church, which lies 300 yards up the hill from Arden. Uniformed men from the Tuxedo police force came over to see to it that nobody but the friends of Mw Harriman went up to the church-

"Pernicious anaemia," which Dr. Lyle assigns as the primary cause of Mr. Harriman's death, is a disease which in nearly all recorded cases, has resulted fatally. In the earlier stages of the disease, the symptoms, lassitude, headache, palpitation and shortness of the breath, make their approach in so slow and insidious a manner that the patient is unable to fix the date of their onset and seldom seeks medical advice until he is incapacitated for mental or bodily work. The patient is usually middle-aged, and there is nothing to account for the disease.

The Tariff Commission.

President Taft has appointed the new tariff commission or board, which is to assist him in the execution of the new tariff law with especial reference to applying the maximum and minimum clauses to nations which are unfriendly or friendly in their tariff relations with the United States. The new board consists of three members, Prof. Henry C. Emery, of Yale, chairman; James B. Reynolds, of Massachusetts, now assistant secretary of the treasury, and Alvin H. Sanders, of Chicago, at present editor and proprietor of the Breeder's Gazette.

Col. Reuben E. Fox, 68, ex-secretary of the New York Republican state committee, on his way to meet ex-Gov. B. B. Odell at Harriman's residence, was killed. He fell out of his automobile while standing up to put

WHO AND WHERE IS SHE

Mrs. Muriel Frazer, Name Woman Who Abandoned Her Babe, Is Known By, And Who Is Missing.

Mrs. Muriel Fraser is the woman of mystery whom Detroit police are now eagerly seeking. She is the one person who can throw any light you the abandonment of her babe, Thursday, in the Library Park hotel, where he was found dead Friday.

Saturday the dead child was identified by physicians of the Halrad sanitarium, where he was born. But the identification served only to deepen the mystery, and now there is all sorts of speculation over the movements of the mother following the babe's advent into the world.

Who Mrs. Frazer is, what reason she had for the apparently heartless abandonment of her innocent babe, what actuated her mysterious movements following her departure from the sanitarium, are questions that are puzzling the detectives working on the case. Mrs. Frazer talked quite freely with the matron of the sanitarium, and, judging from her conversation, she was a woman of the world, who had traveled much and knew what she was about. She told the matron she was on her way to New York city, which she said was the home of her husband and herself. She declared that they lived at the Hotel Navarre in New York.

She declared that her brother was the manager of the Nova Scotia bank in Montreal. Since June 1 she had been traveling, she declared. Her husband, she said, was in Chicago. She said he is connected with a big advertising firm and is an advertising agent for Budweiser beer. This would lend some color to her statement about having been in St. Louis, where Budweiser is brewed.

There is every indication that Mrs. Frazer prepared for her flight. A telegram was received by her after she left the Griswold house; where she first registered and when she left her watch to secure her bill. On the night before her departure, Mrs. Frazer was up almost the entire night. She seemed to be engaged in writing letters. It is thought that she was then making preparations for her departure. She had told the matron that she left her husband in St. Louis some time ago and that it had been quite a time since she had seen him.

Here's a New Bear Story.

Making the rounds of his wolf traps in the Fence river district of Dickin trap and had made off with it. He followed the trail for 10 miles and was surprised to find that not only did it lead back to within a few rods of the starting point, but that the trap hung from the limb of a tree and the bear, dead with a broken back, lay beneath it. It is surmised that the bear sought safety in the tree and, becoming entangled in the trap chain, fell to the ground, the weight of the animal breaking the chain in such manner as to leave the trap suspended from the limb.

Raise Trees.

In the reforestation efforts of the public domain commission on the new reserves to be selected under the new law it is not the intention of the commissioners to attempt to establish large reserves in any of the counties, but simply plant enough young trees to furnish an object lesson to the people and furnish individual land owners with the seedlings to start beds of their own, This plan is approved by the agricultural college authorities. The state has one reserve 6x12 miles in size, and another 6x6, and that is more land for forestry than can be handled with the present appropriation.

"I have been successfully cured of dry eczema. I was inspecting the removal of noxious weeds from the edge of a river and was constantly in the dust from the weeds. At night I cleansed my limbs but felt a prickly sensation. I paid no attention to it for two years but I noticed a scum on my legs like fish scales. I did not attend to it until it came to be too itchy and sore and began getting two running sores. My ankles were all sore and scabby and I could not wear shoes. I had to use carpet and felt slippers for weeks. I got a cake of the Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment. WHAT IS PAINT?

The paint on a house is the extreme outside of the house. The wood is simply a structural under layer. That is as it should be. Unprotected wood will not well withstand weather. But paint made of pure white lead and linseed oil is an invulnerable armor against sun and rain, heat and cold. Such paint protects and preserves, fortifying the perishable wood with a complete metallic casing.

And the outside of the house is the looks of the house. A well-constructed building may be greatly depreciated by lack of painting or by poor painting.

National Lead Company have made it possible for every building owner to be absolutely sure of pure white lead paint before applying. They do this by putting upon every package of their white lead their Dutch Boy Painter trademark. That trademark is a complete guarantee.

Her This Question

"Do you know of any woman who ever received any benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

If any woman who is suffering with any ailment peculiar to her sex will ask her neighbors this question, she will be surprised at the result. There is hardly a community in this country where women cannot be found who have been restored to health by this famous old remedy, made exclusively from a simple formula of roots and herbs.

During the past 30 years we have published thousands of letters from these grateful women who have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and never in all that time have we published a testimonial without the writer's special permission. Never have we knowingly published a testimonial that was not truthful and genuine. Here is one just received a few days ago. If anyone doubts that this is a true and honest statement of a woman's experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound write and ask her.

Houston, Texas.—"When I first began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a total wreck. I had been sick for three years with female troubles, chronic dyspepsia, and a liver trouble. I had tried several doctor's medicines, but nothing did me any good.

"For three years I lived on medicines and thought I would never get well, when I read an advertisment of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and was advised to try it.

"My husband got me one bottle of the Compound, and it did me so much good I continued its use. I am now a well woman and enjoy the best of health.

"I advise all women suffering from such troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. They won't regret it, for it will surely cure you." - Mrs. Bessie L. Hicks, 819 Cleveland St., Houston.

Any woman who is sick and suffering is foolish surely not to give such a medicine as this a trial. Why should it not do her as much good as it did Mrs. Hicks.

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.) SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with a scene at a box party. Miss Henrietta Winstanley, sister of Bishop Winstanley overheard Banker Ankony propose to Barbara Hemingray, whose brother Dan was in his employ. Dan was one of the town's popular young men. He showed some nervousness when Attorney Tom Twining told him Barbara refused Ankony. Ankony the following day, summoning Twining, accused Dan of looting the bank. Twining refused to prosecute. Barbara persuaded Ankony to postpone starting prosecution.

My mind refused to conceive of the enormity of the sacrifice. I walked on stupidly, having no notion where I keep going. The avenue was filled I thought. with vehicles. It was its most fashionable hour, and several of my friends were passing; but I affected to see none of them. To save me, I dark?" could not have met their smiles with summoned ones, and I was not minded to try. But, looking straight ahead as I was, I yet felt them coming-Barbara and Ankony, and they were upon me before I could turn into a side street and avoid them.

Ankony's turnout was the smartest in the street, and it was fitting, perhaps, that the most charming girl in town should sit beside him. She wore a simple blue gown-perhaps it, too, was made-over; I reflected hastily that she would not have to wear that kind after she married Ankony-and to the casual observer she must have was something back of her smiles that startled me, something that surely looked forth in terror-the impotent terror that is vague and still and does not realize its own appeal. It was as if, unconsciously, she had put out a sudden hand to me.

I went out to the curb to speak with

"You will want to give us your blessing, Twining, if you have heard the good news," Ankony said, with great geniality.

"Yes, I have just heard," I said. I held out my hand to Barbara, and she gave me hers, a little, cold, unsteady hand. Her eyes tried not to falter beneath mine, and she smiled. I wished to heaven she had not, for I carried that smile with me for weeks. "Miss Hemingray knows that I desire nothing so much as her happiness," said I.

She pressed the tips of my fingers as I withdrew them. Ankony extended his hand, but I was stooping to fleck something from my trousers. "Well," said he, in a simulation of vast amiability, "my taste can't be denied, you will have to agree with me, no matter what may be said of

"You are right," I said heartily: "you are a fortunate man." "So I am being told on every hand But I didn't need that, to know it. I thought you would say so, Twining.'

"No one so heartily." "It's gratifying to find that one's fiancee is so generally beloved, I'm gure."

Barbara turned upon us with flush and a smile. "Oh, do stop saying nice things of me! It's horrid of you. I don't like it. You make me feel as if I were walking around my own bier." Ankony smiled at her whimsicalness, but I knew her to be on the verge of sure." "Our friends tell us they are surprised; that nothing like this was to have been expected," he observed, looking at me.

I could have throttled him: his blade was cutting both ways now, and he knew it. Barbara went very white and shut her lips with an odd fierce-

"Perhaps," he went on, in that smooth voice of his, "it has been a bit sudden-a little surprising." "Many things are surprising," I said, and met his eyes with my indignant ones. His shifted. "We are blocking the street," Barbara cried. "Let us go on." "As you please," Ankony answered. "Always as you please—dear." I saw the color splash over her white cheeks at the endearment. This was a part of the cost—the outrageous, impossible cost. CHAPTER IV.

It is queer how a changed atmosphere seems to affect the material as ingray doorsteps appeared changed something, and I don't lik as I stood on them in the dusk of the things; it makes me cross."

And now a on the three-cornered piano that had belonged to Barbara's mother, on the quaint cabinet with ormolu mounts and parquetry paneling that had been her great-grandmother's, on her grandmother's mahogany table, and on mantels and shelves and cases.

Their fragrance met me at the threshold and stopped me there as if t had been funeral fragrance. With a shiver I crossed quickly to the library. There was no light there but a dim I hate it. firelight. The library, evidently, was not receiving congratulations, and I entered with a sigh of thankfulness never possessed it. I hoped that some for something unchanged, when, mockery of mockeries, just as I was throwing myself down to wait for Barbara I discovered a great bowl of Soliel d'Or roses glowing in the middle of the table. "But I should think you'd try, at least," she urged. I looked at her speculatively.

"Perhaps not," she admitted thoughtfully; "but we have all had a great many losses of that kind."

"I never had a loss like this," I re plied seriously, and I arose to punch the fire and change the subject. Barbara, however, was both sympa thetic and interested, and also, I think, she considered this a safe and comfortable topic and she wished to avoid others that might not prove so. So she said:

"I can't see why you have given up all hope of getting this thing that you want. You say you dare not make another try at it. But I don't understand. Is it some sort of a chairmanship, and has it been given to some

She turned in her chair quite suddenly and looked at me, the question in her eyes. At the moment the fire began to flame and crackle, falling full on my unwilling face, and her eyes, meeting mine, comprehended in spite of me, wavered, and dropped.

"Oh!" she breathed very softly, "oh, why did you-did you do it?" "He isn't much of a man who goes

"Don't!" she cried. She put her face down on the arm of the chair and left it there a minute, while I stood looking helplessly down at her. Presently she lifted her head and looked at me with eyes filled with scorn.

"I hate myself when I think of what you must think of me," she flashed. 'Can you think one kindly thing?"

"Not one," said I, "but a thousand." Her smile wavered through tears, and she put out her hand to me. She ought not—it was a dangerous moment: there are times when the hardest thing in the world is to take the nothing nice whatever," I hastened to hand of the woman you love. But she didn't know it, and I took it.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

ASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First-The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information. - Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory." Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent." Dr. R. J. Hamisn, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoris extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria." GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS Bears the Signature of 35 Doses - 35 Cents The Kind You Have Always Bought In Use For Over 30 Years.
