Thos. Fletcher Injured.

Thomas Fletcher met with an accident Monday afternoon that might have resulted seriously. Mr. Fletcher was leading a span of colts, which his son-in-law, Ralph Pierce, had just purchased. As they were driving along a dog ran out and frightened the animals, and in the mix-up the buggy was overturned. Mr. Fletcher struck in such a manner that he sprained one of his arms and shoulder quite badly.

Body Was Brought Here.

Word was received here Sunday afternoon of the death of the youngest son, aged about 3 years, of Mr. and Mrs. William Foor, of Colling. Mr. and Mrs. Foor were former residents of Chelsea, and the family moved to their present home last March, where Mr. Foor is employed as station agent on the Caro branch of the Michigan Central railroad. The remains were brought here Monday evening and the funeral was held Wednesday. Interment Oak Grove cemetery, Chelsea.

Will Move Highway.

The Michigan Central has made arrangements with the property owners along its right of way about four miles west of this place, whereby it takes about twenty-five feet off their land on the north side of the road. The road at this place will be moved over, and the railroad will take possession of a corresponding amount of the present highway. The company will do all of the work, and have agreed to place the highway in excellent condition the whole distance. This work is being done in connection with the large job of filling that the company is doing for several miles along its right of way.

Storm This Week.

A storm that will cover a wide area and sweep from the Pacific to the Atlantic during the latter part of the week, leaving a cool wave in its wake, is promised in a special forecast issued by the weather bureau. The disturbance to be accompanied by general precipitation, will reach the Pacific coast about Thursday, extend over the plateau and Rocky Mountains Friday, the central valleys and the great lakes Saturday and Sunday, and reach the Atlantic seaboard about next Monday. Following this disturbance a cool wave for the season will overspread the Pacific states by the close of the week, extend over the plateau and Rocky Mountains district Sunday and the central valleys and lake regions about Monday, and reach the Atlantic states Tuesday or Wednesday.

Alber-Wallace Wedding.

A very pretty home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Alber, on south Main street, at 7 o'clock, Thursday evening, October 21, 1909, when their daughter, Miss Bertha, was united in marriage with Mr. John Wallace, of Marshalltown, Iowa. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dunning Idle, and was witnessed by the immediate relatives and a number of the intimate friends of the contracting parties.

The groom was a former employe at the stove works here, and the bride has resided in Chelsea all of her life. The many friends of the young couple wish them happiness and success in their new home. A dainty wedding supper was served, at the close of which, the couple left for Marshalltown where they commenced house-keeping in the home which the groom had furnished.

McLaughlin Will.

Fifty dollars per year is to be turned over to provide clothing for the brother, according to the provisions of the will of Daniel McLaughlin, which was filed in the probate court Tuesday afternoon.

The maker of the instrument bequeaths all of his personal property to his widow during her life-time, with the provision that $50 of the estate be devoted each year to the purchase of clothing for his brother, John. In event the revenue derived from the estate is insufficient to satisfy the demands, then the widow, who is named as executrix, is to apply to the court for a sale of property in a sufficient amount to satisfy the claims set forth in the will.

The will further provides that after the death of his widow, then the property so remaining shall be divided between the brothers, John and Hugh, and Mrs. Jane A. Perry, a sister residing in Stockbridge.

Another provision of the will sets forth the fact that in event the personal property should dwindle down to such an extent that the revenue would not be enough to provide the $50 for the brother's clothing, then the amount may be reduced by the executrix, but in no event shall it go below $30 per year.

THE TWO MORTGAGES WILL BRING $22,800

RECEIVER OF CHELSEA SAVINGS BANK WILL GET THAT SUM.

Amount received from Glazier estate by Receiver of bank through adjudication of mortgages.
On adjudication,.....	$ 5,000
Ann Arbor State Savings Bank stock,.....	2,000
Six per cent dividend on $180,000,.....	10,800
From Stove Works on account of Glazier dividend,.....	5,000
Total,.....	$22,800

Last Friday adjudication was had before Judge Swan of the United States circuit court in bankruptcy, in Detroit, as to the disposal of the proceeds derived from the sale of the Ann Arbor building and the Blodgett Terrace in Detroit, on which the Chelsea Savings Bank held mortgages to the amount of $180,000 at the time of the closing of the bank.

It will be remembered that after the adjudication of F. P. Glazier, bankrupt, the trustee in bankruptcy, the Security Trust Co., of Detroit, took charge of the Blodgett Terrace and the uncompleted Ann Arbor building. These buildings were sold under order of the court and the fund derived therefrom, amounting with interest to $76,000, was held by the U. S. court until the validity of the two mortgages held by the Chelsea Bank was determined. If the mortgages were held good this money would go to the receiver of bank for the depositors, and if not would go to bankrupt estate of F. P. Glazier. By the adjudication of last Friday, the Chelsea Savings bank gets $5,000 and stock of State Savings Bank Ann Arbor, worth $2,000 also in dispute. The bank is also allowed to prove its claim against the Glazier estate for $180,000 on which will be paid 6 per cent or better amounting to upwards of $10,000 and as the Stove Works has claim against Glazier estate on which under this arrangement over $20,000 will be realized, the receiver of the bank will get $5,000 here as one-fourth of the stock in the Stove Works is owned by the bank.

Inasmuch as the Stove Works has already paid into the bank dividends to the amount of over $19,000 this dividend of over $5,000 will make nearly twenty-five thousand dollars paid to receiver by the Stove Works for the benefit of the depositors since the starting of the Stove Works. With these nice little sums coming in, The Standard has good reason to hope that the savings depositors will soon get a dividend that will put them within reaching distance of the 76 per cent that The Standard figured they would receive, in its estimate the Thursday after the closing of the bank, nearly two years ago.

Will Vote on Local Option.

In five counties of the state which in April last year voted to go dry, sufficient signatures have been secured to petitions to have the question whether these counties shall remain dry or go wet again submitted election day next April, and the boards of supervisors have by resolution ordered resubmission. The five are Oakland, Wexford, Missaukee, Clinton and Genesee. The signatures of 30 per cent of the voters are required to resubmit the question. In the five counties named the total dry vote in April, 1908, was 13,223 and the wet 12,031. It is claimed that in the five counties 15,423 signatures appear on the petitions.

Rocky Road for Promoters.

The supreme court last Thursday handed down the decree in the case of Orlando L. Torrey against the Toledo Portland Cement Company, which organization started in Manchester several years ago but which never was completed.

According to the decree of the court Randall T. VanValkenburg is to pay $28,627.76; Charles Cooley, $6,656.94, and Dr. William Watts, of Toledo, $6,686.85. The court also ordered that in event the amounts assessed are not paid by the defendants in the cause, an execution shall be issued against their properties and the amounts collected by process of law.

This decree is taken as an indication that like judgments will be entered against two of the other promoters for about the same amounts.

Injured in Football Game.

The football game last Saturday afternoon between the Chelsea high school and the Stockbridge high school teams resulted in three of the boys of the visiting team getting injured. One of them named Berry had his left collar bone broken near the shoulder blade, another was kicked in the right groin and badly injured and the third one had his nose broken. The Chelsea team won out by a score of 26 to 0.

Teachers' Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the Washtenaw county teachers with the Ypsilanti Grange, at Cleary hall, Saturday, November 6th. The first session will be held at 10 o'clock, and the second session at 1 o'clock. There will be addresses on the health of school children and schoolroom hygiene by J. E. McDonald of the state board of health; the school library by R. D. Bailey of the state library, and the relation of the parent to the school by Prof. W. H. French of the Michigan Agricultural college.

Killed in Runaway.

Word was received here this week of the death of Clayton G. Bennett, near Wickersham, Washington, Sunday morning, October 10th. His death was caused by injuries received in a runaway. The team which he was driving became unmanageable, and the rig collided with a large log, completely wrecking the outfit, and causing the injuries from which the young man must have died almost instantly. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bennett, who left this place several years ago, and has resided in Washington since leaving here. He leaves a wife and two small children.

New Rules For Canines.

Changed rules for the transportation of dogs in Michigan seem to be near at hand, if the example of the Michigan Central is to be taken as a move to be followed later by other lines. A new order on that road requires that all dogs carried must have a chain and collar, or else they must be crated. Previously canines have had the freedom of baggage cars, but so many were lost off the cars, with a resulting lawsuit against the road, that the company has decided to protect itself and insure the safety of the dogs. Owners will pay freight rates on their animals on a hundred-pound basis.

Boosted Salaries.

At the Thursday afternoon session of the county board of supervisors salaries of some of the county officials received a substantial boost.

The wages of the drain commissioner were raised to $1,200 per year while that of the school commissioner was increased to $1,700 per year. The supervisors also allowed the county clerk $200 per year to act as the clerk of the auditors.

A change was also made at the county jail, and in the future Sheriff Sutton will receive 15 cents per meal given the prisoners instead of 12 cents as has been the case in the past year. The sheriff contended that at the present prices of foodstuffs he was unable to provide proper rations to the prisoners at the old figure.

U. Of M. Income Is $1,150,000.

A statement of the prospective income and expenditures of the year 1909-10 of the University of Michigan has been prepared. From this summary it is estimated that the total income of the university will be approximately $1,149,437, while there was in the treasurer's hands at the opening of the college year $116,799.91. The total income is divided as follows in the 1909-10 budget: Three-eighths mill tax, $650,287; students fees (basis of 1908-09), $280,000; summer session, $30,000; interest on endowment, $38,500; homeopathic account, $6,000; summer hospitals, $3,000; university hospital (1908-09), $70,000; homeopathic hospital (1908-09), $31,000; dental operating rooms, $6,500; Pasteur institute, $4,400; diplomas, $10,000; interest on deposit, $2,500; rent of houses, $1,250; miscellaneous receipts (as in 1908-09), $10,000.

The principal items in the expenditures are: General administration, $38,715; literary department, $257,000; engineering department, $191,000; medical department, $82,000; law department, $62,000; school of pharmacy, $6,000; chemical laboratory, $44,000; homeopathic college, $16,000; dental college, $20,000; summer school, $41,000; university hospital, $73,000; homeopathic hospital, $35,000; new equipment, $62,000; current shop and laboratory expenses, $115,000; fuel, $40,000; repairs, $20,000; furniture for new chemical laboratory, $24,000.

THE STORY OF Rexall Remedies

Several years ago about a thousand of the leading druggists of the United States met and organized themselves as a Co-operative Company for the production of remedies which they could manufacture and sell under their personal guarantee. The main idea was to have no secret formula preparations. The ingredients of every product would be known to every druggist. Each druggist was to be ready at any and all times to acquaint any interested person with the ingredients contained in any of the remedies, and in this way do much to combat the oft times dangerous products with which the market was formerly deluged.

This gathering of druggists appointed a committee to most thoroughly go over the thousands of prescriptions which the druggists themselves had contributed and decide upon which one would be most generally effective in the treatment of the particular ailment for which it was prescribed. After much investigation, experimenting and research, there was finally selected from this mass of prescriptions about 300, each one for some particular ailment or disease to which human flesh is heir.

To this line was applied the trade name "Rexall Remedies." The name has a basis for its being the Latin word "Rex," meaning "King" which in combination with the English word "All," you can readily see implies that the remedies are considered to be King of all Remedies.

In the meantime the executive committee appointed by these druggists had erected and equipped one of the most perfect of pharmaceutical laboratories in the country. This equipment, together with the combined capital of the druggists, made it possible for this company to purchase in large quantities the necessary drugs and ingredients for the line of preparations selected. Such methods meant the culling of every wasteful item and every unnecessary expense.

The years that these remedies have been on the market have thoroughly demonstrated that they are all that has been claimed for them. Today Rexall Remedies are familiar to the families in thousands of towns all over the United States. We personally believe these remedies are the very best that modern science can produce. The purchaser of Rexall Remedies not only gets better quality than can be otherwise obtained, but also gets more his for money.

Every package of Rexall preparations bears the following guarantee:

THE GUARANTEE

This preparation is guaranteed to give satisfaction. If it does not, come back and get your money—it belongs to you and we want you to have it.

It is not consistent to believe that a line of remedies sold to the consumer under so broad a guarantee as our Rexall guarantee could contain one poor remedy. One such remedy would injure the entire line. If you were to buy some particular Rexall remedy and that one did not substantiate the claims made for it, your confidence in the balance of the line would be in no way strengthened. In fact, your experience would probably deter you from trying any other Rexall remedy. As a consequence, it has been necessary to make each one as nearly perfect as possible.

Confidence begets confidence; and the confidence we have in Rexall Remedies you will have when you have given them a thorough trial and demonstrated to your entire satisfaction that they are what we claim them to be. Our confidence in Rexall Remedies is so great that we place our business reputation behind the broad guarantee that covers every product manufactured by the United Drug Co., in which we are stockholders.

MONARCH HAS FAMOUS JEWEL

Remarkable Emblem Recently Added to the Collection Owned by King Edward.

A famous "jewel" is now in the possession of King Edward. It is none other than the memorial locket designed by the widowed Lady Margaret Lennox to commemorate 26 years of wedded love with the regent of Scotland, the famous Matthew, earl of Lennox, who was assassinated 38 years ago. Lady Margaret was known as "his most, most sweet Madge," and through all the storms of their most stormy lives they were true to their love the one for the other. In the quaint lettering and emblems of her famous "jewel," this devotion has been impressed. It is a heart of gold two or three inches across, enriched with gems and enamel. It has hidden springs and revolving doors, angels and death's heads, clasped hands and a phoenix, flames and darts and rhyming mottoes. A London paper says: "It needs whole pages properly to describe and explain the cryptic work, and it is easy to believe that it is more quaint and curious than beautiful. But, in spite of its oddity, it clearly tells its pathetic story of Lennox's devotion and Lennox's love. Dominating all its mysterious fancies one sees the plain device, a marguerite flower turning to the setting sun." Lady Margaret wore this "jewel" till her death.

St. Paul Man Needlework Champion. Charles C. Olsen of Charles street, St. Paul, is the needlework champion at the state fair this year, for he was awarded first honors for a framed embroidery picture, an eagle perched on two American flags, exquisitely done even to the heavy padding of cotton under the bird, which gives it lifelike contour.

The entire design is in filo silk and is worked solidly. Each section of the bird is outlined in gold thread and "E Pluribus" is heavily embroidered in gold.

Mr. Olsen is not the only man who has entered needlework for competition. The exhibit shows the work of 10 men and the public interested in fancy work recognizes with pleasure centerpieces and pillow designs which it has admired at former fairs.—Minneapolis Journal.

Beginning of Bird Migration.

Flocks of migratory birds are passing over the city nightly now, going south from northern points where they have spent the summer. A great many of these birds, among them the robin and the blackbird, come to South Carolina from the Blue Ridge and other mountains, where they nest in the summer, and other birds are now en route to points further south—Florida and the islands off the coast. The journey south is begun about this time each year and the birds all leave the northern points before the severity of winter there has set in. The mild climate of the south in winter suits them better and they come here in great droves.—Anderson Mail.

Graphite Replacing Lead.

The growing exclusion of lead from paint on the ground of its poisonous character, has led to the introduction of graphite as a substitute, particularly in the place of red lead in the painting of iron. Mixed with linseed oil, graphite protects the iron well against rust, and is much cheaper than red lead. So many new uses have been found for graphite, which not long ago was employed almost exclusively for the manufacture of lead pencils, that large quantities are now made with the electric furnace, the natural deposits of the mineral not being sufficient to supply the demand.

Automatic Book Vender.

An automatic book vending machine has been devised abroad by which it is possible to hire a book for a short period or to buy it. The machine holds about a dozen or fifteen books, which are arranged so as to display their titles. Its operation is controlled by two slots, one of which represents the value of the book and the other to hire. In order to secure the volume the required amount must be placed in each slot, and when the book has been read and returned, the amount representing the value is returned automatically.

Pearl Harbor Dry Dock.

The great dry dock which the United States navy is building at Pearl harbor, in the Hawaiian islands, will be 1,152 feet long from the coping to the outer sill, 140 feet wide at the top and will have 35 feet of water over the entrance sill at mean high water level. There will be a sill at the middle of the dock, for an intermediate caisson which will divide it into two docks, 575 feet and 532 feet long, respectively.

NITROGLYCERINE AND FORGERY

POSTOFFICE AT EAST LANSING SHATTERED BY BLOWING THE SAFE.

FORGERY CHARGE MADE

Yeggs Got $340 and Used Too Much Explosive—The Hagle Case Is a Case of Find Him Now.

Yeggs for whom the police and sheriff are searching are $340 richer as a result of a safe-blowing in the postoffice at East Lansing early Sunday morning. The robbers wrecked the entire side of the building, blew out one of the walls and escaped with $140 in cash and $200 in stamps. The 1,500-pound safe was demolished, pieces of it being blown through the side of the building by the terrific impact caused by enough nitro-glycerin to wreck the national capitol.

Alfonso Smith, M. A. C. night watchman, heard the explosion and notified Postmaster Bert Rosenkrans and Deputy Sheriff Snyder. The officers found that entrance to the building had been forced with a pickaxe. The officers are of the belief that the work was done by amateurs, who used an excess of explosive when the safe could have been broken with a little pickaxe. Six weeks ago an attempt was made to blow the safe, but the men were frightened away.

Hagle Charged With Forgery.

Through a warrant which has been issued for the arrest of Mark L. Hagle, the defaulting treasurer of Oxford village, charging him with forgery, a new phase of the case has developed in the financier's numerous alleged methods of duping honest people. The warrant was issued on complaint of Mrs. Frank Verran, the widow of Hagle's former partner, who was also associated with him in the operation of the bank at Hadley. Mrs. Verran charges that Hagle came to her with a request that she buy a note for $700, ostensibly signed by M. O. Morse, to whom the banker and automobile dealer had sold an automobile. Hagle represented that he needed the money and that Morse's funds were tied up in a certificate of deposit which he did not wish to break into.

Mrs. Verran alleges that she paid him $700 for the note and too late to Morse when the revelations of Hagle's misdeeds became known. Morse, she says, told her that he had paid Hagle with a check for the auto and that the note was a forgery. The liabilities are $10,000 and the assets $5,000.

The Great Beet Crop.

The 1909 beet sugar campaign in Michigan is now in full swing. Never has the season been more favorable than this one, and the 30,000 or more farmers who have planted sugar beets and are now about to harvest are glorying in the anticipated revenues that will amply repay them for their acreage and work.

The weather is ideal, the roads are good, and everyone is hustling in the campaign. The crops of this year will be in excess of those of 1908, although in some sections of the state the drought had its effect. Notwithstanding the backward spring and the unfavorable weather conditions that existed throughout the early portion of the summer, this year will top all the previous years.

More than $7,000,000 will be paid out to the farmers alone. The total amount of money involved in the industry will reach over the $10,000,000 mark.

Refused, Shot Himself.

"If you don't marry me I'll kill myself," Avery Hitchcock informed Eva Waldron, in her home in Wheatland township.

"You have said that a number of times. Only a coward would shoot himself, and you won't," replied the girl, rejecting his suit.

In another instant a revolver report was heard, and young Hitchcock fell over dead on the porch with a bullet through his temple. The frightened girl was standing in the doorway.

Hitchcock, aged 23, had been trying to win her for some time, but she had repeatedly rejected him. Last night he called on her to make a last try.

Took Strychnine.

With apparently no reason for the act, Mrs. Edward Ferguson, aged 19, married for only a year, after eating a hearty breakfast, went to an outbuilding on her husband's farm near Lexington and, according to physicians, swallowed strychnine. An hour later she died in the arms of her husband.

The 24-year-old husband is at a loss to account for his young bride's self-destruction. He said she had seemed in her usual good spirits at the breakfast table and gave no indication of having contemplated death. The couple had lived happily since their marriage.

Saginaw board of supervisors denied the petition of residents of Cheaning township to have part of the township of St. Charles annexed. This puts an end to litigation that has been before the board for five years.

The auditor-general has received a letter from a saloonist protesting against the law which says that a keeper may not enter his saloon over Sunday. The writer declares that the state will have to pay if his water pipes and soft drinks freeze in the winter.

MICHIGAN ITEMS.

Charles Orr, a Greenville farmer, killed himself by taking chloroform. He was despondent over ill-health. He had tried to kill himself once before this year.

Three children of John Trejak were burned to death in a fire which destroyed their home in Ironwood. The father was at work and the mother visiting at the time.

The 3-year-old son of A. B. Scott, of Port Huron, was attacked by a large Russian wolf hound and may die as a result of the wounds caused by the brute's teeth.

Samuel Start, 28, was arrested as a deserter from the United States army Tuesday, when he came to Muskegon to attend the funeral of his brother, Jacob, who died Sunday.

A feature of the state Sunday school convention to open in Saginaw Nov. 17 will be a canvass of the city to learn the religious proclivities of every home in Saginaw.

A 1,500-pound switchpoint slipped from the skid while being loaded on a flat car at Kalamazoo, and Frank Hughes, a M. U. R. section hand, was crushed to death under it.

Bay City schools have held a "parents' meeting" to denounce high school fraternities. The police were also asked to enforce the law in regard to allowing minors in poolrooms.

Julia Jewett, the 16-year-old Lapeer girl who ran away to go on the stage has been found in Detroit and returned to her parents. Marjorie Clark, who disappeared with her, is still missing.

The State Baptist convention, in session in Alpena, voted to hold the next meeting in Detroit in October, 1910. There was no opposition to the City of the Straits for the next meeting.

The board of supervisors took action whereby the entire deficit of Eaton county, $36,000, will be cleared up this year. The county tax is $77,000. The debt has been running 20 years.

Realizing that he is insane over religion, Edward Carroll, aged 27, remains in his knees in the Lansing police headquarters and prays for Divine assistance in overcoming his derangement.

According to Grand Rapids potato buyers, the high prices asked by Michigan growers for their stock of tubers is bringing into the market many potatoes from Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Early Tuesday morning Aud-Gen. Fuller received from the Jackson prison a draft for $46,887.68 with a requisition that the amount be returned to be used in paying the expenses of the plant.

Curtis R. Young, of Pittsburg, who was arrested for running a gambling device and fleeing school children during the Barry county fair, was sentenced to 65 days in the Detroit house of correction.

T. H. Idles of Casco has some squash. He claims that it beats 'em all, and it probably does, for it tips the scales at 137 pounds, and various authorities say it measures nearly seven feet in circumference.

Thirty-two carloads of apples have been shipped from Eaton Rapids since the buying season opened, and at least 50 per cent of the winter apple crop is yet to be marketed. The prices range from $2 to $2.50 a barrel.

Mrs. Rosanna Lapham, 54, killed herself by taking strychnine Tuesday night. She had been ill for a long time and was mentally deranged. Her home was on a farm near Lapeer, where she resided with two of her sons.

The funeral of Hiram Smith, who died at Woodville, was held in Big Rapids. Smith's six sons acted as pallbearers. They are James, William and John, of Woodville; Hiram and Fred, of Pierston; George, of Otter Lake.

John Hanfian, wanted on a charge of larceny in Flint, was recognized by a Detroit officer, while he was cheering for the Detroit team at Bennett park, during the world series, and placed under arrest. He is in jail now, awaiting trial.

Lon Dorgan, of Alger, was arraigned in Standish on the charge of selling liquor to minors. He was assessed $205, with the alternative of spending 90 days in jail. "I'll spit the county of Aroon," he said, as he declined to pay the fine.

Ira Broughton, a 14-year-old Manton girl charged with the theft of $180 in cash and jewelry, escaped from a deputy sheriff by making a pretext of going into the depot when he arrived in Cadillac with her from Kalamazoo, where she was captured.

Alpena has filed a complaint against the Detroit & Mackinac railway, declaring that the road has charged excessive switching rates and asking that it be forced to return the alleged overcharges. The state railway commission will settle the matter.

More vigorous action to protect the state's lands from trespassers and prosecution of all cases where sufficient evidence can be secured to warrant such action is to be the policy of the new supervisor of trespass, Glen R. Munshaw. The state is to be divided into sections and looked after by county by county.

Two railway porters, from Ann Arbor and Pere Marquette roads, were arrested for selling liquor on the trains while in Livingston county and each fined $50 and 20 days in jail. They pleaded guilty on the advice of the companies' attorneys. The roads say no more liquor will be sold on the trains in the county.

Frank Brown, J. W. Hess, Ed. McAllister and E. T. Gagne, of Lansing, arrested recently for spitting on the sidewalk, were assessed $3.35 each, and paid rather than spend 10 days in the city bastille. The men were given a severe lecture by Judge Fraser and were impressed with the fact that a second offense would prove more costly to them.

Steven Hicks, a Lansing saloonist, arrested May 16 for occupying his saloon on Sunday in the company of two women relatives, was tried in the circuit court Thursday. After an hour's deliberation, the jury returned a verdict of guilty. He will appeal.

LAUDS MICHIGAN NATIONAL GUARD

Army Officer Says Troops Are Fine Lot.

CAMP GROUND IS PRAISED

Officers of State Troops Come in for Nice Bouquet—Youth of Troops Is Only Bad Feature Says Helmick.

Lansing.—"The brigade will take a very creditable standing with the guard of other states, and a few months in active service will make it an excellent organization. It is well equipped, and but for the youth of a large percentage of the enlisted men would be able to take the field and perform hard service."

This is the comment of Capt. Eli Helmick, Tenth U. S. Infantry, on the Michigan National Guard, as he saw it during the encampment at Ludington last August. Capt. Helmick was chief representative of the army at the encampment, being detailed as instructor and umpire for the ten days from the war college.

One of his associates, in his report on the ten days' field service, criticized the state authorities for holding an inspection and review on Sunday, saying the time might better be used in other ways. In speaking of this comment, Adj. Gen. McGurrin says:

"We cannot afford to lose this day, and furthermore it is the one day when there is an opportunity to let the people of the state see the troops. This is as important to us as any other work, for the people of the state support the guard, and we need their interest in its work."

Capt. Helmick praises very highly the Ludington camp ground and recommends that the general government buy the property. In speaking of the field exercises, he says:

"The officers had to work harder than the men. The officers of the Michigan Guard are generally intelligent, well educated men and anxious to learn. When one considers that all of them have to earn their livelihood and are actually engaged in business or professions, the efforts they make can be properly appreciated. They not only spend time and energy freely, but they go down into their pockets and spend money for the betterment of the guard. They certainly deserve much credit."

Special mention is made of Capt. A. C. Paek of Ann Arbor as having a "high state of cleanliness, discipline and instruction in his company." Regarding the age of the men, Capt. Helmick says they are very young, 30½ per cent, being under 21 years of age.

"U." Income Is $1,150,000.

A statement of the prospective income and expenditures of the year 1909-10 of the University of Michigan has been prepared. From this summary it is estimated that the total income of the university will be approximately $1,149,437, while there was in the treasurer's hands at the opening of the college year $116,799.91. The total income is divided as follows in the 1909-10 budget: Three eighths mill tax, $550,287; students' fees (basis of 1908-09), $280,000; summer session, $30,000; interest on endowment, $38,500; homeopathic account, $6,000; summer hospitals, $3,000; university hospital (1908-09), $70,000; homeopathic hospital (1908-09), $31,000; dental operating rooms, $6,500; Pasteur institute, $4,000; diplomas, $10,000; interest on deposits, $2,500; rent of houses, $1,250; miscellaneous receipts (as in 1908-09), $10,000.

The principal items in the expenditures are: General administration, $56,715; literary department, $257,000; engineering department, $191,000; medical department, $52,000; law department, $62,000; school of pharmacy, $6,000; chemical laboratory, $16,000; homeopathic college, $16,000; dental college, $20,000; summer school, $41,000; university hospital, $73,000; homeopathic hospital, $35,000; new equipment, $62,000; current shop and laboratory expenses, $115,000; fuel, $40,000; repairs, $20,000; furniture, for new chemical laboratory, $24,000.

Says Stock Will Freeze.

Auditor General Fuller received a letter from a proprietor of a drinking emporium in Baraga county who is confronted by a phase of the new liquor law which was evidently not intended for a northern country. He claims that under the new law he is unable to enter his saloon from 11 o'clock Saturday evening until six o'clock Monday morning, and as his building is not heated by steam, his wine and soft drinks will freeze, and he asks the auditor-general, whether or not he will be able to start suit and collect damages from the state for his loss.

Turned In; Checked Out Again.

Auditor General Fuller received from Acting Warden Wanger of Jackson prison $46,887.68 as money received from the sale of binder twine during the last two months. However, the state treasury was not enriched to any great extent by this, as the draft was accompanied by a requisition for the amount to be used in paying the expenses of the binder twine plant. This is the usual method of procedure, as a requisition invariably accompanies a deposit from that institution.

Exercise for Insane.

Patients at the Michigan asylum will soon be forced to take physical training each day according to plans that were announced by Superintendent A. I. Noble. "He believes that a regular course in physical work will serve in a wonderful way to help the mind recover."

Some time ago Dr. Noble established a kindergarten and manual training course in the asylum for the patients. This work is conducted by Miss Florence Marsh of the Western Normal.

Boom Northern Michigan Lands.

Extensive plans for booming the upper section of the lower peninsula are being framed by the people of that section for the purpose of bringing to the attention of home-seekers and farmers the opportunities there for engaging in farming in any of those counties. Assistance will be given the boomers by the state public domain commission, which is directed by the law providing for it to aid in inducing immigration to this state.

Under the proposed plan authority has been secured from the railway commission for the railways to provide a train which will be loaded with the produce and fruits of those pine-barren farms and taken to Chicago and other points as an exhibit of the possibilities of that section, and home-seekers will be shown how cheap the land can be secured in an effort to induce them to come to Michigan.

In addition the board of supervisors of each county is to appoint two delegates to attend a conference to be held to further this plan and the people of that whole section of the state are said to be thoroughly interested and enthusiastic over the matter.

3,019 Granted, Nineteen Refused.

Evidently there are some 15,000 persons in Michigan who are of the opinion that marriage is a failure, as the record of divorce cases filed at the office of the secretary of state shows that at the close of last year 15,387 divorces were pending. It is shown that 3,019 divorces were granted in Michigan during 1908 and only 19 were refused. About 260 cases were withdrawn.

In the last ten years there has been a wonderful increase in the number of divorce cases in Michigan. The records show that January 1, 1898, there were only 2,475 cases on file, while January 1, 1908, there were 10,557.

In a great many cases county clerks have failed to file a record with the secretary of state, as required by law, and the records of that officer show where persons have remarried and there is no record to show the dissolution of their first marriage.

Tax Clerk Now Accountant.

At a meeting of the state tax commission Crescent A. Parker, who for several years has been connected with the commission as a clerk, was appointed accountant to succeed Wells G. Brown, who resigned. Mr. Parker is regarded as an exceedingly competent man by the commission and he was the unanimous choice of the members.

Payette Harris of Wayne was appointed field clerk to succeed Leonard Hermann, deceased, and during his lifetime he can dispose of the property as he chooses, and the royal fortune is believed to be diminishing daily owing to gifts to favorites and their endowment.

King Leopold is credited with the intention of leaving nothing to his daughters, but it is believed now that the contemplated sale of the royal picture collection will not take place.

Leopold's Wealth.

The news of the attempt of Princess Louise, daughter of King Leopold, to obtain a loan from a Hamburg bank on the security of an inheritance exceeding $25,000,000, has caused astonishment.

According to the Belgian law King Leopold is unable to disinherit his children. Each is entitled to one-fourth of his fortune, but this right only obtains if the king makes a will. During his lifetime he can dispose of the property as he chooses, and the royal fortune is believed to be diminishing daily owing to gifts to favorites and their endowment.

The Messenger to Garcia.

Maj. Rowan, who is known popularly all over the land by reason of his feat in the spring of 1898 of penetrating Cuba to the fastnesses of Gen. Calixto Garcia, for the purpose of giving Gen. Garcia a message regarding this government and of ascertaining whether the Cuban army could cooperate with the army of the United States, has resigned.

Rowan got from the Cubans points for the available landing places for the American forces and arranged for a meeting later. His mission was perilous, the more so because news that he had been dispatched upon it somehow came to be published soon after he had started.

Drank Wood Alcohol.

His craving for drink intensified to such an extent that he drank pure wood alcohol for several days. John McGillin, prisoner at the Detroit house of correction, died Saturday morning as the result of his peculiar method of acquiring jags.

McGillin was sentenced to serve 90 days by a Traverse City court, after he had been adjudged a drunkard. He was set at work as a painter in the workhouse. Several days ago he became ill. To Dr. Ben Jacob, house physician, he readily admitted he had been drinking wood alcohol, intended for use in mixing paint.

There are now 5,000 cases in the United States.

"UNCLE JOE'S" BIG FIGHT

Various Bits of News That Have a Major or Minor Interest for All Readers.

Slight earthquake shocks were felt in southern Illinois and several nearby states Saturday morning. At about the same time a severe electrical storm swept over the same region, causing injury to 16 persons and considerable loss of property.

The storm was most violent in the neighborhood of Decatur. The loss in Macon county amounts to $35,000.

Several counties of southern Indiana suffered from the wind and lightning.

The earthquake shocks were felt about 1:05 a. m. at Alton, Ill., St. Peters, Mo., Memphis, Tenn., Evansville, Ind., Paducah and Hickman, Ky.

Speaker Cannon's Battle.

The fight now being waged by Speaker Cannon against the Republican insurgents, or those who voted against the Payne tariff bill, is being watched with the greatest interest by politicians at Washington. The declaration on the part of the speaker at Chicago recently in a speech that the 20 members of the house and seven senators who voted against the tariff bill are not Republicans, but should be placed in the Bryan column, has stirred up all sorts of trouble in the ranks of the followers of Senators Cummins and La Follette, and they are determined to fight the speaker and his policies to the finish. Whether or not "Uncle Joe" will be a candidate to succeed himself as speaker when his present term expires even his closest political lieutenants who have recently visited Washington are not prepared to say. They state that Mr. Cannon has given no intimation of his intentions in this direction.

THE RUINED CITIES OF ASIA MINOR

By ERNEST L. HARRIS

A

ASIA MINOR is the stage upon which have been enacted some of the most stupendous events in the history of mankind. Here the civilizations of the orient and the occident have ever met and struggled for supremacy. The Persian and Greek, Roman and Pontian, Byzantine and Moslem, Crusader and Saracen, Turk and Mogul, each in their turn came upon the scene, and were alternately overwhelmed by the vicissitudes of human life. Fragments of columns, arches and temples now stand as silent sentinels over the tombs of their empires and cities.

To-day these mangled ruins present a melancholy picture, yet they cannot be viewed without pleasure and regret. The pleasure consists chiefly in recalling the historical associations connected with each, while the regret is caused by the fact that nothing is done to prevent their further decay and demolition and that in all probability future generations will lay considerable blame upon the present age for not having done more toward preserving these interesting and instructive ruins from an earlier destruction, at least, than would presumably be their destiny if left alone to the silent lapse of time.

Asia Minor presents practically a boundless field for research and exploration. There are remnants of Hittite monuments still extant which date from the earliest dawn of history. Among the ruined Greek cities there are many a stately structure of Roman origin, now slowly sinking into decay. From distant hilltops medieval castles, some in a fair state of preservation, still look down upon the valleys below. The few travelers who visit the interior of Asia Minor to-day are greeted by these grim reminders of a great past. There they stand, as it were, the silent custodians of treasures and secrets which lie buried deep beneath, mutely appealing to the present age to bestir itself and rescue, before it is too late, these sinking towers, the receptacles of knowledge, which may enlighten and instruct present generations of mankind.

During the past year I have visited the sites of many ancient cities in Asia Minor. Many places described are rarely sought out by the tourist and seldom even by the archaeologist. I may state that I have visited and inspected all the places herein described and personally photographed the views here shown. I wish also to state in the beginning that I am not an archaeologist and have had no training on the subject. This must account for any inadvertencies which may crop up in the course of this narrative.

Much is being done at present in the way of excavating the ancient of communication for commercial and military enterprises, being used in turn by the armies of Xerxes, Alexander the Great, Frederick Barbarossa and many others. The ruins of Laodicea lie upon a commanding elevation, which gives a fine view of the surrounding country. About eight miles distant stands Mount Cadmus, white with snow, while at that is left of Colossae rests at its base.

On the other hand, beyond the fertile valley of the Lycus may be seen, glimmering in the sunlight, the huge cascades which plunge over the plateau where the city of Hierapolis is situated. Nestling at the foot of the hill, upon which the acropolis once stood, is the little village of Gonnelli, while away to the south, with the mountain range of Baba Dag in the background, is the larger Turkish town of Denizli. Both of these places have been practically built from the ruins of Laodicea.

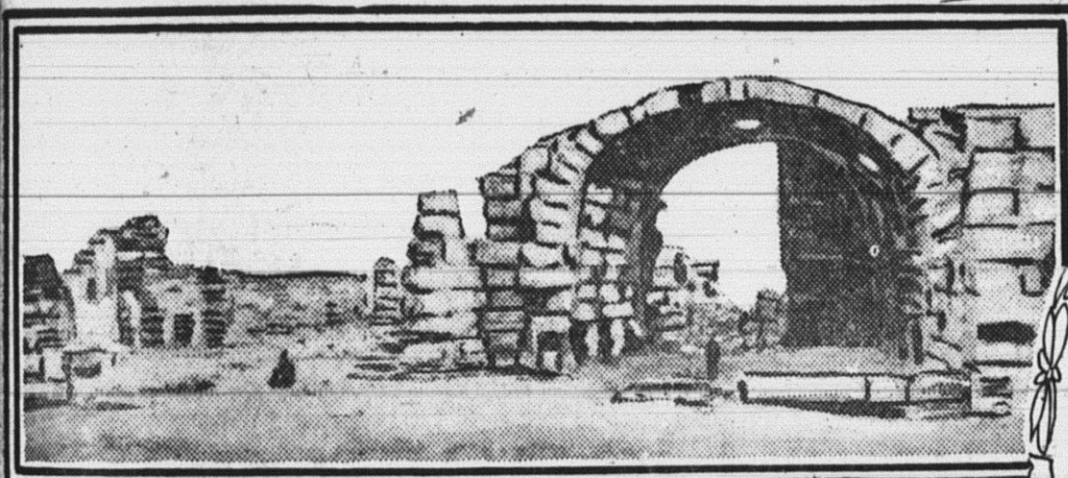

In the spring of the year the valleys and slopes about Laodicea are green with verdure and the surrounding country, as viewed from the ruins, presents a picture not unfriendly to the eye. In fact, the fields are cultivated up to the walls of the city. But within the city limits, which probably cover an area two miles square, there is not enough vegetation to feed a hungry goat. It is a scene of desolation, where only snakes, lizards, turtles and prowling jackals now seek refuge in subterranean caverns. The tombstone cutter from Denizli is a regular visitor. Occasionally a camel caravan may be seen wending its way slowly through the ruined streets. But otherwise it is a place long since rejected and shorn of every symbol of former greatness.

Yet Laodicea was once the chief emporium of central Asia Minor. It was the seat of one of the Seven Churches. For something like 1,400 years this city was deemed one of the most important to possess, not only from a military point of view, but also from the standpoint of the sciences wherewith to conduct war. The opulent citizens of Laodicea often fell a prey to the greed of Roman, Tartar and Turkish conquerors. In times of peace the hardships caused by earthquakes were felt as severely as was the pestilence of war. Yet the people were so attached to their city that they rebuilt it repeatedly out of their own means and each time in greater splendor than before. It was only when Tamerlane scarcely left one stone upon the other and when the Turks, about 1230 A. D., slaughtered or sold the inhabitants into slavery that the city became what it is to-day—one vast field studded with heaps of ruins.

Considering the ravages caused by earthquakes, time and war, Laodicea, however, even at present, is still in a remarkable state of preservation. The stadium is almost intact. The steps repose in the sides of a hill, which forms a natural base for this monument. The plan of the gymnasium is so well preserved that almost the entire building can be seen. Two theaters, one of which was devoted to music, are practically complete. Scattered over the field, in one mass of entangled ruins, are no end of temples with the base of columns still in place. The ancient aqueduct is partially preserved and shows clearly how the water was conducted from a long distance upon the hydrostatic principle of its seeking its own level. The aqueduct is not a lofty archway, such as characterize those of Roman origin throughout Asia Minor and Italy, but is built close to the ground, and the water was conducted to the city in massive stone pipes up hill and down from a distant mountain range. In the bed of the little river of Asopus stand the broken piers of a bridge which once led to a Christian cemetery on a neighboring hill opposite the city. The ancient pagan necropolis was situated just outside the city limits, near where the village of Gonnelli now stands. Many interesting sarcophagi have been found and removed to various museums. Laodicea once had three gateways which pierced the solid walls which extended around the circumference cities of Ephesus, Pergamus, Priene and Miletus. For a number of years the Austrian government has been busy at Ephesus and the German government is at present carrying on excavations at Pergamus and Miletus. On the whole, however, little has thus far been done to unearth the buried cities of Asia Minor. Superficial excavations have been made at many points. Thorough excavations, however, such as have characterized the work of the Germans at Priene, where a whole city has been brought to light, are an exception.

The ruins of ancient Tralles are situated upon a high plateau which overlooks the fertile plain of the Meander river. At the foot of the hills stands the modern town of Aidin, the second place of importance in the vilayet of Smyrna. To-day this neighborhood is considered the garden spot of Asia Minor. It is the center of the fig district and the olives and wine produced are much prized on account of their quality. This is also the region in which the best cotton in Asia Minor is grown.

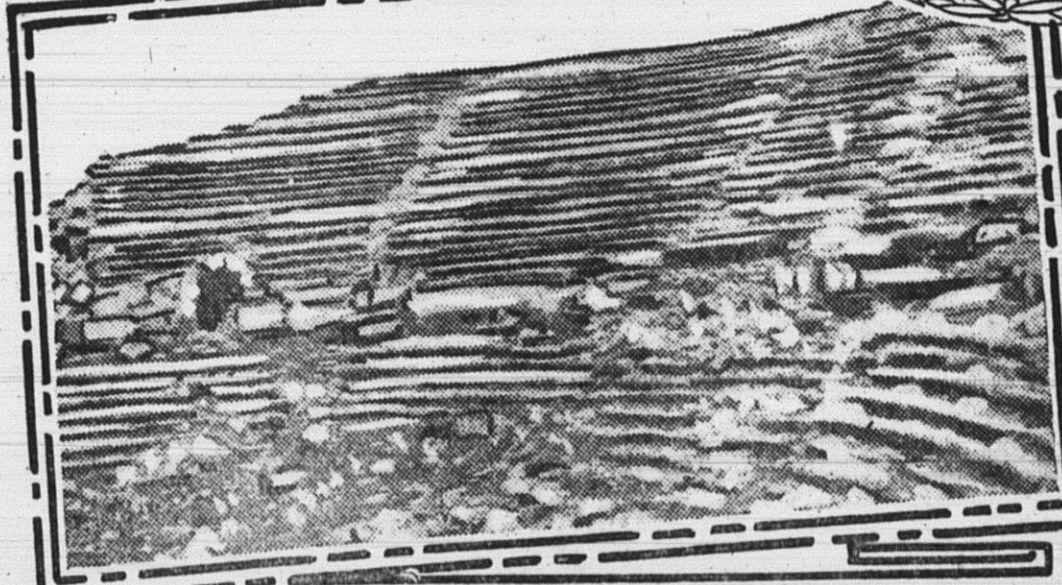

It is probable that this valley was kept in a much higher state of cultivation in ancient times. When the city surrendered to Alexander the Great the figs of Tralles were celebrated throughout the ancient world and it is a well-known fact that at that time the hills along the whole extent of the Meander were covered with forests which prevented, in a measure, the destructive inundations which characterize the river to-day.

Ancient Tralles now lies imbedded under a vast orchard of olive trees. Most of these trees are more than 200 years old. The ruins extant above the surface of the earth, some standing erect in the shape of pillars and arches, some thickly strewn among the trees, present a picturesque and unique scene. In 1858 some excavations were made, with good results. The ruins, however, have suffered much at different times from earthquakes, and especially on account of being used as building material for the houses of Aidin, and some of the finest columns have been removed and set in the public buildings of that town. Remains of the acropolis, stadium and theater may still be seen. It was from the latter that Strabo claimed that he could look across the plain of the Meander and see the people sitting in the theater of Magnesia. On the edge of the plateau still stand three enormous archways which are either a part of a Greek gymnasium or Roman bath. The slabs of marble which ornamented these arches have long since been removed.

Generally speaking, Tralles would be an easy city to excavate. There is no rock formation of a serious character. The earth covers the ruins loosely and could easily be removed. The olive orchard, with the roots of the trees extending in every direction deep into the ground, would form the greatest obstacle, not only from the point of digging, but as an item of expense, for the reason that these fruit trees would have to be purchased outright from their owners before being destroyed.

Tralles was one of the most important cities in Asia Minor. Its position, half way between the ports of Ephesus and Miletus, on the coast, and the interior cities of the country, must have been favorable always to trans-commerce. It was renowned for the wealth of its inhabitants. It was repeatedly destroyed by earthquakes and fires and as often rebuilt, until about the thirteenth century, when the last catastrophe left the city a mass of ruins. Since then the remnants have been used in constructing mosques and in shaping headstones for graves in Turkish cemeteries. For many years past the ruined site has been superficially dug and culled for sculptures and other antiquities and the fragments found show that they belong to the best period of art. On the roads approaching Aidin there are many fountains, the troughs of which have been hollowed out of the base of columns from the temple of Esculapius.

At present there is a lime kiln in operation among the ruins and many men are employed in digging up the ruins and slabs of marble with Greek columns of porphyry and slabs of marble into lime for building purposes. The Turkish governor of Aidin informed me that he had made a futile attempt to stop this work, but that it was being conducted by the military authorities, over which he had no jurisdiction.

In plowing among the olive trees the peasants find turn up innumerable coins, which they sell at trifling prices. Many valuable pieces of statuary taken from Tralles may also be seen in the houses of the better class of people in Aidin, but these are as nothing compared to the number sent to various museums in Europe. And what Tralles has yet given to the world in the way of art treasures is as nothing compared with what still remains entombed, for the city itself lies beneath the earth.

Hierapolis is probably the most interesting spot in Asia Minor. It has always been one of the most fascinating places in the Orient. As the ancients were attracted toward it on account of the matchless mineral springs and awe-inspiring Plutonium, so to-day the traveler seeks it out in order to feast his eyes upon the most perfect ruined city in the world. It is indeed a marvelous city. To the student of history it is a lesson unparalleled elsewhere; to the philosopher it is an inexhaustible mine of contemplation; to the ignorant nomad who wanders in these parts it is an actual example of the power of magic; to the archaeologist it means nothing, at least that which is visible to the eye, for the reason that what he seeks lies beneath a calca-the dead. Outside the walls there are no less than four immense necropolises in a splendid state of preservation. Naturally every mausoleum and sarcophagus has been opened and plundered centuries ago, but it was done in such a manner that the tombs were not destroyed and they may be inspected to-day in exactly the same condition and place of repose as they occupied nearly 2,000 years ago. There were two main entrances to the city.

The ruined city of Hierapolis may be reached from Laodicea after about five hours' horseback ride. In ancient times a splendid roadway connected the two cities, the only traces, however, now extant being the buttresses of a bridge which once spanned the Lycus.

The cascades of the city are visible from a long distance and as one approaches the more impressive they become. At a distance of two miles they have the appearance of some huge cataract, not unlike that of Niagara, and if seen in April, when the grass is green upon the slopes, the whole presents a wonderful picture.

The now deserted city of Laodicea was situated in ancient times upon the great Graeco-Roman highway which led from Sardis, in Lydia, through the heart of Asia Minor to the confines of Syria. This roadway, supposed to be of Persian origin, was once the chief means of the plateau. The archways of one are still well preserved, but the base lies deeply buried in the earth. Of the great double gateway which opened upon the road leading to Hierapolis nothing but the buttresses which supported it on either side of the deep ravine which formed the approach to the city may still indistinctly be traced.

As yet nothing has been done by the archaeologist in the way of excavating Laodicea. This is surprising when we take into consideration that of all the old cities in Asia Minor none has been or could be excavated with greater ease. The debris and earth which cover the city could be easily carted away and dumped at the foot of the hills. Probably no ancient city would repay the effort more than this one. As at Ephesus, an excavation would probably reveal various periods of architecture, each built upon the other. Certain it is that the buildings which now stand above the earth's surface are more or less of late Greek or Roman origin. Certain it is also that the Laodicea which was founded by Antiochus II, some 250 years before Christ, was erected upon the site of a much older city.

FORCE OF HABIT.

Hodge—Hefty had a strenuous time on his vacation. When he started he tipped the scales at 200 pounds and when he returned he only weighed 149.

Dodge—That was a drop. I suppose his best girl gave him up on the spot.

Hodge—Not at all. She accepted him right off.

Dodge—That's queer.

Hodge—No; you see she is a great bargain hunter and couldn't pass anything that was reduced.

CURED ITCHING HUMOR.

Big, Painful Swellings Broke and Did Not Heal—Suffered 3 Years.

Tortures Yield to Cuticura.

"Little black swellings were scattered over my face and neck and they would leave little black scars that would itch so I couldn't keep from scratching them. Larger swellings would appear and my clothes would stick to the sores. I went to a doctor, but the trouble only got worse. By this time it was all over my arms and the upper part of my body in swellings as large as a dollar. It was so painful that I could not bear to lie on my back. The second doctor stopped the swellings, but when they broke the places would not heal. I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies and in less than a week some of the places were nearly well. I continued until I had used three sets, and now I am sound and well. The disease lasted three years. O. L. Wilson, Puryear, Tenn., Feb. 8, 1908."

Their Advantages.

"So you have made up your mind to be a specialist. What line are you going to take up?"

"I don't know. I have been considering various advantages in different branches. A chiropodist can generally get a foothold, no matter how bad business is; a manicurist has usually something on hand; a beauty doctor can usually play a skin game and an eye and ear doctor can often get a hearing when there is anything in sight. I haven't dwelt on the possibilities of throat specialists and dentists or hair experts, because the two former always look down in the mouth and the latter may get but a bald living or be expected to dye for his patients."—Baltimore American.

United States Leads in Good Work.

In Germany there are 99 public sanatoria for adult consumptives with 10,539 beds, besides 36 private sanatoria with 2,175 beds. In 18 sanatoria for children with tuberculosis there are 837 beds, a total of less than 13,000 beds. The United States has provided over 300 sanatoria with 15,000 beds, showing that this country is in the lead in the anti-tuberculosis war. France has only 12 sanatoria for adult consumptives, with a total capacity of 148 beds. All of these institutions are private except the sanatorium at Agincourt.

A Resemblance.

Canon Hensley Henyon, at a dinner in New Haven during his Yale lectures, condemned the ugliness of the English archbishop's attire.

"One of our archbishops," he said, "preached in a Kansas church in his panoply of knee breeches, gaiters and apron, and the leading paper of the town concluded an admirable report of his sermon with the words: 'The archbishop wore Highland dress.'"

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 16 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Grading Literary Power.

Dean Shailer Mathews says that the newspaper "shapes the popular mind more by its headlines than by its editorials." By the same token, authors impress by the title of their books, not by their contents, artists by their themes, rather than by their execution—and lecturers by their platitudes more than by their sense.

Case of Loneliness.

Knicker—Why does he keep so many servants, do you know?

Bocker—He got one girl because it was so lonely for his wife, and another because it was so lonely for the cook, and the third because it was lonely for cook, and the waitress.—Puck.

Nature helps every man to become that which he desires to become. If he put forth no effort Nature assumes he wishes to be a nobody, and grants his prayer.—Elbert Hubbard.

JUDGE LANDIS of the federal district court of Chicago has decided that M. J. Daly of Chicago, the man who conspired with Armstrong to furnish the state with second-hand machinery for the prison twine plant, cannot be brought to Michigan. While the judge says that a crime against the state was committed, and Daly admits the commission of the crime, the reason for the refusal is that Daly's presence in Michigan was not an "essential ingredient of the crime." The counsel for Michigan will take an appeal, and it is to be hoped that this latest decision of Judge Landis will meet the same fate as did his famous $29,000,000 fine against the Standard Oil Co.

SAGINAW county has an almshouse that is unique among institutions of this character. Not only is it self-sustaining, but this year it has paid into the county treasury the sum of $7,000. It might be a good plan for the various counties of the state to have a gathering of officials and visit this institution and take a few lessons in the manner in which they work it.

IF THE CONDITIONS in Detroit are half as bad as the published reports of the investigation committee of the Y. M. C. A. would lead one to believe, that city is a good one to stay away from with a family of boys and girls to bring up.

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that the corn crop was a large one, they still continue to feed hands and arms into the husking machines with great regularity.

IT IS SAID that the innocent looking shoebox is now taking the place of the overworked suit case by travellers between wet and dry counties.

John W. Vogel's Big City Minstrels.

On Thursday evening, November 18, 1909, at the Sylvan theatre an excellent minstrel performance can be looked for, for on that date John W. Vogel's Big City Minstrels with upwards of fifty people will be here.

Vogel is known as the greatest manager, while Chas. Gano is conceded to be one of the most popular comedians in the minstrel world, and there is little doubt but what the organization is as claimed, the richest and costliest in existence.

The first part will be set in a new creation, entitled "The Electric Velour Palace," a magnificent affair; beautifully staged and appropriately costumed. The overture is teeming with charming up-to-date music, excellent vocalisms and graceful action.

The vocalists include the famous alto, Harry Leighton, the most wonderful æolian voiced child soprano, Master A. Newton, the Louisiana Glee Club and a host of others. Roy Peck, droll humorist, "Bill" Conroy, comic shouter, John Goss, bone soloist, and others will appear in the all-feature olio.

The Youth's Companion.

The Youth's Companion abounds in stirring stories of adventure and heroism. One may describe an escape from accidental peril, another a strange encounter with wild creatures—man or beast.

Many of these stories are true as to facts, and only disguised as to names and places. A score or more of such stories will be published during 1910 in addition to nearly 200 others—250 good stories in all, and no two alike. And this is not counting the serial stories, which it is believed will be considered by old Companion readers as the best The Companion has ever published.

Every new subscriber will find it of special advantage to send at once the $1.75 for the new 1910 volume. Not only does he get the beautiful "Venetian" Calendar for 1910, lithographed in thirteen colors and gold, but all the issues of The Companion for the remaining weeks of 1909, from the time the subscription is received.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Companion Building, Boston, Mass. New subscriptions received at this office.

"I'd Rather Die, Doctor"

Than have my feet cut off," said M. L. Bingham, of Princeville, Ill. "But you'll die from gangrene (which had eaten away eight toes) if you don't," said all doctors. Instead he used Bucklen's Arnica Salve till wholly cured. Its cures of eczema, fever sores, boils, burns and piles around the world. 25c. at H. H. Fenn Co. and L. T. Freeman Co.

Up Before The Bar.

N. H. Brown, an attorney, of Pittsfield, Vt., writes: "We have used Dr. King's New Life Pills for years and find them such a good family medicine we wouldn't be without them. For chills, constipation, biliousness or sick headache they work wonders. 25c. at H. H. Fenn Co. and L. T. Freeman Co."

AFTER THE PROPOSAL.

Dolly—So your father handled him without gloves?

Molly—Yes; and it would have been better for poor dear Cholly if he had done it without shoes!

If you have something lying around the way that you have no use for, a standard want ad. will turn it into money for you.

FOR CONSTIPATION

A Medicine That Does Not Cost Anything Unless It Gives Satisfactory Relief.

If you suffer from constipation in any form whatever, acute or chronic, we will guarantee to supply you medicine that we honestly believe will effect permanent relief if taken with regularity and according to directions for a reasonable length of time. Should the medicine fail to benefit you to your entire satisfaction we promise that it shall cost you nothing.

No other remedy can be compared with Rexall Orderlies for the easy, pleasant and successful treatment of constipation. The active medicinal ingredient of this remedy, which is odorless, tasteless and colorless, is an entirely new discovery. Combined with other valuable ingredients, it forms a preparation which is incomparable as a perfect bowel regulator, intestinal invigorator and strengthener. Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, and are notable for their gentle and agreeable action. They do not cause griping or any disagreeable effect or inconvenience, and may be taken at any time, day or night.

We particularly recommend Rexall Orderlies for children and for delicate or aged persons, because they do not contain anything injurious. Unlike other preparations, they do not create a habit, but instead they overcome the habits acquired through the use of ordinary laxatives, cathartics, and harsh physic, and remove the causes of constipation or irregular bowel action that are not of surgical variety.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. We know of nothing that will do you so much good. They are prepared in tablet form in two sizes: 36 tablets 25 cents, and 12 tablets 10 cents. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Chelsea only at our store.—The Rexall store. L. T. Freeman Co.

The Treadwell-Whitney Stock Co. is playing at the Sylvan this week to fair sized houses. The company is a good one, their costumes are fine, and an entire change of plays is given in place of those presented on their last visit here. They will be here the balance of the week, with a Saturday afternoon matinee.

The trench for the sewer that is being put in on north Main street caved in about four o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Henry Alber, one of the men at work on the job, was nearly caught by the falling earth. There were several wagon loads of the earth and it will take the men at work on the trench several hours to clear up the cave in.

The case of W. J. Knapp against school district No. 3, f. r. l., Sylvan and Lima, in the circuit court was settled Monday, the attorneys announcing that a settlement had been reached after the jury had been empaneled. HEATHER-BURNING IN AUTUMN

A SINGLE-HANDED STRUGGLE

ALTHOUGH there are nowadays few keepers and sportsmen who do not realize the importance of burning old, dead heather in order to provide food for grouse, there are nevertheless many moors, especially in the Highlands, where the system adopted to attain this end leaves much to be desired. The advantages of burning in autumn are not as a general rule appreciated, and on several moors the burning is conducted in such a haphazard fashion that valuable cover is destroyed in places where there is little or no shelter for the birds, while on other beats rank heather is much in evidence. The objects of heather-burning are twofold. In the first place, it is necessary to remove the old and rank heather through which young birds fall to find their way, being subsequently separated from their mother and lost, while it is scarcely necessary to mention that the second and principal object is to provide young shoots, tender and succulent, for the food supply of the grouse, old and young. During a long experience of the management of grouse moors, the writer has been much struck by the rapidity with which a well-burnt moor recovers from disease, and how a shooting managed systematically on modern lines often escapes the dreaded malady, while its neighbors on either side are suffering. The fact is that disease, which is in most cases caused by the eral parasites, attacks only birds which have, through some cause, become weakly, and frequently the predisposing cause is merely starvation. While the young shoots of heather on which the grouse are dependent during the spring and early summer are slow in appearing if the heather is old and rank, the tendency of young heather is to produce green vigorous shoots at an earlier period.

A keeper or sportsman, on being placed in charge or taking possession of a new moor, naturally examines the ground with some care to ascertain to what extent his predecessors have performed their duty in this respect. If he finds the moor well burnt, young, vigorous heather growing alongside the recently-burnt feeding grounds, and the whole presenting that patchwork appearance which so gladdens the heart of the grouse-reserver, his task will be fairly simple. He has now only to burn the different strips or patches in rotation, according to the quantity of cover in proportion to feeding grounds which he deems necessary. If, however, he finds that the moor has been neglected, that long, rank heather predominates, that young heather is scarce and that a dead, wiry appearance characterizes the cover on the high grounds, a more drastic method of treatment is required. Larger strips may be burnt, and these in their turn, some years later, may be divided into cover and feeding grounds. Sooner or later the bulk of the rank heather must disappear, and during his first few seasons all that is not required for cover must be got rid of. The dead heather on the high grounds may be burnt wholesale, for it is useless either as cover or food. Much of the rank heather probably will not burn clean to the ground, and a second burning in the following year, the sooner the better, will be necessary. It is on such a moor as this that the system of burning in autumn proves its value. The rank heather may be got rid of in the autumn, and the second burning will be performed the following spring. The dead heather on the high grounds, where in all probability no spring burning is possible on account of the snow may be burnt clean during the sunny days which follow the early frosts of autumn. It often happens that a snowstorm sweeps across the high grounds in October or November, and after the bulk of it has melted, the drifts frequently serve as barriers to stay the progress of the fire. The practice of firing heather, leaving it to burn unchecked towards a drift cannot, however, be recommended, unless in very exceptional circumstances when no possible change of wind may upset the calculations of the keeper.

It is no easy job heather-burning on a clear November morning, with the ground cracking in the sun like tinder beneath one's feet, and it is dangerous to work single-handed on these occasions. It is a golden rule to have plenty of hands, and a few boys, provided they can be trusted, are invaluable for watching the smoldering ashes and guarding against a fresh outbreak while the keepers are working elsewhere. In burning long strips it is customary to have two men on each side, and in a big fire with a strong wind fanning the flames these are none too many.

In former days the fire was spread over the required area by means of bunches of dead heather, and much time used to be wasted in searching for such material. The modern heather burners, as shown in one of the illustrations, have rendered this system obsolete, and this innovation is to be welcomed as lightening considerably what is probably the severest branch of the keeper's work.

That heather, when possible, should be burnt in small strips or patches is a theory which requires little proof. If a young brood are surprised by a bird or beast of prey in the middle of a large open strip, they cannot possibly escape, but in a small patch they can run to cover at the first sign of danger. As stated above, however, it is necessary to burn a neglected moor on a large scale at first before it can be brought properly into control and a system of rotation established. There are few sights more impressive than that of a big fire which has got out of control. If we see it from behind, as is probable if we are helping in the struggle, we shall see nothing but a mass of smoke ahead, in the midst of which, dimly outlined, we can distinguish the forms of the foremost workers. From each tussock or tuft of heather a spitting flame leaps cracking fiercely, breaking out again at intervals behind us as we work blindly on. It is now no question of keeping a level strip, with even edges and no jagged corners, but literally a fight to the death with the fiery monster, and a struggle for which we shall emerge with singed hair and clothes reeking with the smoke. Far ahead of us it leaps onwards, jumping rivulets in its resistless course, hurling itself from slope to slope in fierce derision at our puny efforts, perchance crossing the march into a neighbor's ground. It matters little what causes the outbreak, a sudden rise of the wind or a match thrown carelessly among the heather—there is time enough afterwards to discuss all this, and the reason why. Our only object now is to regain control of the flames, to stamp them out, and then sink exhausted beside some cool spring or streamlet. And so we fight our way forward; a broom or "besom" snaps in half, and another is snatched from a lad following behind. Till suddenly a gust of wind blowing down the corrie breaks the smoke, and we come to a halt, triumphant, on the banks of a rollicking burn, which has temporarily checked the onrush of the flames.

To realize the magnitude of such a fire one must view it from a distance, and the huge wreath of smoke billowing up towards the sky, extending over, perhaps, a mile of moorland, and varied by the tongues of yellow flame, cannot fail to inspire one with the sense of awe which fire alone among the elements can arouse. On these occasions there is always the possibility of the peat below becoming ignited, and in dry weather this is a serious danger.

Generally, however, keepers avoid all risk of such an occurrence by burning small strips to check the fire at right angles to the direction of the principal fire. This expedient should always be adopted when burning near a wood or close to a neighbor's marsh; but where it is possible to burn in small patches such precautions are no longer necessary.

The KITCHEN CABINET

MORNING glory at my window satisfies me more than the metaphysics of books.—Walt Whitman.

One impulse from a vernal wood May teach you more of man. Of moral, evil and of good Than all the sages can.—Wordsworth.

"Order is Heaven's First Law."

So many mothers find it very hard to teach children to be orderly, put away their belongings and keep their boxes neat. "The way to begin is at the beginning," when they are old enough to have playthings they should be taught to put them away when done with them. A child under two years can learn to do this. As they grow older the habit is formed of having a place for everything and putting it there. The school books and wraps should never be allowed to be dropped anywhere. We all know what a saving of nerves and temper a well-ordered household means. For in the hurry of starting to school there is no time to hunt for mislaid articles.

One mother is trying now to overcome some bad habits already formed by inspecting the belongings of her young hopefuls each day. If she finds everything in order she leaves a small piece of money on the dresser; if it is not there the aforesaid hopeful knows why.

It isn't always easy to put a thing away directly we are done with it. We want to do so many other things, but how glad we are that we may be able to put our hands upon our belongings in a hurry, only those know who have tried both ways.

Years ago there was a story published of a young lady away at a house party for a few weeks. In the party was a young man who was very much interested in this young woman and had made up his mind to ask her to share his salary and travel on his pass, but he happened to pass her room and looking in, saw such disorder and confusion that he changed his mind about wanting her. Whether true or not—the moral is plain: "Be orderly."

Seasonable Recipes.

Quinces make such a nice addition to the winter's store that we would not leave them out in the gathering in.

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Emerson.

Bread Notes.

Remove the leaves at once from the pan when baked, and place in a circulation of air. When cold put into a tin box or stone jar and keep covered closely.

Never wrap bread in a cloth, as it gives the bread an unpleasant taste. Bread jars should be washed, scalded and sunned each time before using, and often in summer.

All dry bread may be used in countless ways in cooking and a crumb should never be wasted.

Bread may be brushed over with milk to make the crust hard.

Keep bread closely covered and in a warm place while rising.

If bread is ever overbaked and the crust needs softening, sponge with sugar and water and wrap closely for a few minutes.

Boiled Rice with Chocolate Sauce. Here is something that will be new to many, and the combination is good. Take one cupful of rice, add one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water, cook until the water is absorbed, then add one and one-half cupfuls of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of butter.

Chocolate Sauce.—Make a syrup of one cupful of sugar and one-fourth of a cupful of water. Pour it over one square of melted chocolate, add one teaspoonful of butter and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of vanilla. Serve hot.

To Make Tough Steak Tender. Lay the steak in a plate in which three tablespoonfuls of oil and one and one-half of vinegar have been placed, turn often and let the meat lie at least four hours, before broiling.

Keep a microscope in the kitchen to examine dried fruits, cereals, etc., it will save much waste, as a glance will tell the condition, and anything not good may be at once returned to the grocer.

Beet Relish.

Take one quart of cabbage chopped fine, one quart of beets chopped fine, two cupfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of pepper, one-half teaspoonful of cayenne, one cupful of grated horse radish, with vinegar to mix well. Can.

Peach Sherbet.

Boil one quart of water and two cupfuls of sugar together, add one quart of peach juice, the juice of a lemon and the well-beaten whites of two eggs. Freeze as usual.

IS PLANNING QUEER FARM

Mrs. George Cornwallis West, Former British Society Leader, Will Raise Frogs.

London.—Mrs. George Cornwallis West, formerly Lady Randolph Churchill and mother of Winston Spencer Churchill, is reported to be planning a new shock for British aristocracy. This beautiful, talented American woman, whose ambition and ability made her first husband one of England's foremost statesmen, and who, as a widow, married a man about the age of her son, according to the latest report is preparing to raise bull-frogs on a large scale for the London market.

Mrs. Cornwallis-West, it is said, has leased 40 acres of marshy land near one of the London suburbs and will inclose it with a fine-meshed wire fence. A large number of bullfrogs have been ordered from France with which this place will be stocked.

There is no more interesting character in England than Mrs. Cornwallis-West, formerly Miss Jennie Jerome of New York and afterward Lady Randolph Churchill. While Lord Randolph was alive she was his most devoted and helpful aid, and contributed largely to what of success there was in that brilliant, though impulsive statesman's career. Then she was a public personage and a great social figure.

Now Mrs. West is leading the life of a recluse at Salisbury hall, St. Albans, where she is writing her reminiscences, which will doubtless form one of the most delightful books of the time. The house is both historic and beautiful, and it is splendidly furnished.

Mrs. West's four sons frequently visit her, and they and her young husband and herself make the jolliest company imaginable.

New York.—Congratulations were showered upon Miss Rose L. Fritz after she had made a new typewriting record, writing 1,425 words in 15 minutes from dictation, with no errors, at the business show in Madison Square garden. She wrote at the rate of 95 words a minute for 15 consecutive minutes. H. O. Blaisell wrote 92 words a minute, and F. H. Coombs followed with 87.15 words.

Work of Practical Joker.

The Corriere of Rome, which published some time ago a copy of a document said to have been found in the library at Bergamo containing an account of "an alship voyage across the English channel in 1751," is receiving much attention at the hands of investigators. In the Tribune's notice of this alleged achievement, in which a monk named Grimaldi, of Civita Vecchia, was the chief actor, it was stated that there was nothing in the Italian paper's article to indicate that it was not written in good faith. "Now," writes an Englishman from Rome, "the records of Civita Vecchia are being searched in vain for a Grimaldi and the papers of England for a story of the flight. The document may be in the library, but who was the practical joker who placed it there?"—New York Tribune.

Pro Bono Publico

By FRANK H. SWEET

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

The new minister had been at Roxville three months, and already the Thursday evening meeting attendance had more than doubled, and there were premonitions that several presumptive engagements would not come off. And yet Burke Ellison was not a ladies' man in any sense of the word. He was fresh from his theological course, diffident, earnest, and with his heart in the upbuilding of this, his first church. And his abilities were of so commonplace an order as to seem brilliant only in an out-country village like Roxville.

This Thursday evening the attendance was unusually large, and among the 20 or more girls there were nearly half as many boys, red, embarrassed, and waiting impatiently for the close of the service.

As they filed out, Carrie Morse, the organist, paused at the door for a leisurely buttoning of her gloves. A hand touched her arm suggestively, but she finished the buttoning calmly. Then she said, without turning: "No Sam, not to-night. I'm going to walk with Alice. We've got things to talk about. Come," to a girl who was standing with a young man just inside.

"All right, I'm ready. No," to her companion, "you can't walk home with me this afternoon, Tom. It's such a short way, and Carrie and I want to go together."

As they went down the path, a third girl joined them, running from a boy whose arm half rose in ineffectual protest. The girl was giggling.

"I guess I'll walk with you, girls," she cried. "We've just got to cold-shoulder those boys a little, or they'll begin to think they own us; and I—we don't want their company that way. But isn't he sweet?"

"Lovely," Carrie answered. She regarded the newcomer through the corner of her eyes. "Funny," she commented; "you've been keeping company with John two years."

"That's just the trouble," the girl giggled. "It's getting too settled. But you've been going with Sam most all night, Carrie, and folks do say—oh, you needn't laugh, Alice. You and Tom are pretty much in the same boat. But never mind; you're both like me, and feel it's getting too settled. The boys need a little—little more uncertainty."

"There never was anything between Sam and me," said Carrie shortly. "We're just friends."

"That's what Tom and I are," declared Alice. "It's silly the way folks talk. What are you snickering about, Lou?"

"Oh, nothing," giggled the third girl; "only I was sort of wondering if 'twas him." Then inconsequently: "He's coming over to my house Thursday. He asked if it would be convenient when I came in this evening."

"That's because you're a committee on the Easter decoration," observed Carrie indifferently, "and his head is full of that just now. He spent all last evening at my house."

"Because you're the organist, and he's trying to improve the music," said Alice. "Land knows there's room enough. I'm going to have him in to supper Friday, just as a friend."

There was some minutes of silence, during which the girls walked on, several feet apart; then they came together again, giggling. Just behind them was a neatly clad figure, alone. At first this girl had paid no attention to the conversation in front; then, as the tones grew more insistent and she understood, she fell behind, her face growing thoughtful. Three young men pushed by her, indignant and yet evidently afraid to advance, for they only went on a few steps, and then slackened their pace.

"I tell you, boys, I won't stand this much longer," she heard one of them declare hotly. "This makes two Thursdays I've been turned down, and I thought everything was all right, and I've even been on the lookout for a house. Of course I wouldn't say this to you," apologetically and lowering his voice, though not so low but the girl behind was obliged to hear, "but you two are being treated in the same way. What is the matter, do you think, him?"

"No, just girl's foolishness," answered one of his companions. "Ellison isn't a Mormon; and, besides, anybody can see he doesn't care for girls. He's afraid of them. I guess ours are only trying to see how much strain we'll bear."

"Um! maybe you're right," doubtfully; "but I feel as though I ought to be pinning the thing down somewhere and starting a row. If only he wasn't quite so—so absolutely unconscious and—"

The girl fell back still farther, beyond any possibility of hearing; then there came a quick firm step behind her, and—

"How fortunate, Miss Jessie. I was afraid I might not be able to catch up with you. I wanted—"

"To see me about the new carpet?" she anticipated.

"No, just to see you," frankly. "But I beg your pardon. I was not at all lude to it again until you had finished your schooling. One forgets so easily. I hope they are all well at home."

She did not answer for some moments. When she looked up a tremulous smile was playing about her lips, but her eyes were clear and steady.

"I withdraw what I told you that afternoon, Burke," she said, "and will answer your request as you wish, and—and you may announce the engagement at once."

He stopped short, his face joyous but incredulous. Then he caught her hands.

"Why, I—I don't understand it, Jessie," he stammered. "What does it mean? There was no intimation of it in your eyes. How came you to—to change so suddenly?"

"For the public good, perhaps," she replied thoughtfully. "But never mind; you would not understand. Maybe I will tell you sometime. Now you may walk home with me."

Are Snakes Stupid?

It is a matter of gratification, naturally, that our snake was considered to be as intelligent as his predecessors; but there was really no need of exceptional acumen to enable him to play his part successfully. If the Devil took possession of his body in order to accomplish a nefarious purpose, it was the Devil, not the snake, who framed the enticing argument for the unsuspecting Eve. If, again, it was Lillith who seized an opportunity to advance the cause of woman suffrage, clearly 'twas her keen appreciation of the power of curiosity that led to the fall. In either case the snake was a mere dupe by one more cunning than himself to further a project in which he had no personal interest and whose method of accomplishment was foreign to his shy inclinations. If he had been as crafty as he has been reputed, can one suppose for a moment that he would have assumed a role which was certain to win the everlasting hatred of mankind? No; there had been and are good snakes and bad snakes just as there have been good Eves, like Godiva, or Good-eva, of Coventry, and as there are bad Eves, some of whom we know; but there is no real ground for the common belief that snakes are endowed with peculiar sapience.—North American Review.

Mud Prevented Suicide.

Three-quarters of an hour spent in an attempt to commit suicide by drowning in a muddy pond is a prolonged effort, and it is not astonishing that an old man who tried it at Rambouillet, France, the other day, should have to be taken to the hospital in consequence. Without paying attention to a party of young people who were having a picnic on the grass the old man walked into the pond near the park, and was soon up to his neck. There is almost as much mud as water in the spot where he went in, and he was unable to sink. The persons who had been looking on realized finally what he was about, and called a park keeper, who waded in after the old man. But the would-be suicide had by this time got to the middle of the pond, where he remained for nearly three-quarters of an hour with his head barely out of water, when he was at last rescued and taken to hospital.

To Raise Level of Lake Erie.

It is understood that a majority of the Canadian and American commissioners of the international waterways commission will recommend that a dam be built on the Niagara river, opposite Buffalo and Ft. Erie, for the purpose of raising the level of Lake Erie. In the autumn of every year there is a fall of about two feet in the level of the lake. This reduction of available navigation depth seriously affects the shipping interests, and with the increase in the size of vessels it is becoming a menace to navigation. The estimated cost of the dam is about $5,000,000.

Blue Nets Catch Most Fish.

The owners of a St. Abbe's fishing boat have made the important discovery that a net dyed as nearly as possible the color of the sea catches far more fish than one of the traditional brown. The discovery has just been tested and out of a fleet of 65 boats that which had its nets dyed blue made by far the largest catch.—London Tit-Bits.

SERIAL STORY

LIPS THAT WERE SEALED

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with a scene at a box party. Miss Henrietta Winstanley, sister of Bishop Winstanley, is seated next to Ankon, who is the son of the town's popular young man. He showed some nervousness when Attorney Tom Twining told him Barbara refused Ankon. Ankon, the following day, summoning Twining, accused Dan of looting the bank. Twining refused to prosecute. Barbara persuaded Ankon to postpone starting prosecution. Twining learned of the engagement of Ankon and Barbara. He congratulated both. He visited Miss Hemingray and found her almost in tears. He told her he had loved her, but feared prematurely announcing his love. He was making a sacrifice to save her. He told her he had loved her, but feared prematurely announcing his love. He was making a sacrifice to save her. He told her he had loved her, but feared prematurely announcing his love. He was making a sacrifice to save her.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

She regarded me curiously there in the dim light of the old doorway, then bent her head distractedly until I could see only her lips and her rounded chin. That the lips trembled a little I could have sworn, but her voice was steady, although it was so low I could scarcely hear it.

"The seal was set long ago," she said. And for just an instant we stood, her fingers in mine; then she withdrew them and went in and left me.

I hailed a cab and went at once to Henrietta Winstanley. I found her going over her charity accounts in her brother's study, looking miserable and down-spirited.

"Have you heard?" I demanded at once.

"Nothing. Not a word. What is there to hear?" she cried, with kindling excitement.

"She sent you a note, too, I suppose. It must have been delayed."

"Who sent me a note? Do try to be a little lucid, won't you? What has happened?"

"Nothing yet. It all happens tomorrow. Ankon is to marry Barbara at noon and sail with her by the Deutschland in the afternoon. I have just seen her. How is Mrs. Dines? Dare we hope—"

"Dear has warned him! Don't you see? I told Hannah that he was Ankon's friend before he became her agent. You see, she sent for him yesterday and made him bring a packet of papers that she went over with him. Those papers incriminate Ankon. And Dean has warned him. If he marries Barbara, he knows that Mrs. Dines will not prosecute him. He'll be safe forever as Barbara's husband. And so he has the double motive in carrying her off; he wants her, and he wants to stop Hannah. But we'll see whether he can do it or not. We'll see. Wait for me. I must tell her at once."

She ran from the room and pattered up the stairs. I heard the excited babble of her voices from a room above, and her brisk steps as she paced the floor over my head.

I was as excited as she and impatient of any delay, but they did not keep me waiting long, and when she came again her cheeks were burning like a girl's.

"She'll stop him," she declared, in a high-pitched voice that trembled in its own elation. "She says she can do it. You leave it to her. She'll attend to it."

"But is she able? Isn't she abed?" She laughed out sharply.

"My dear, if she were dead she'd send her spirit back to outwit him. That's what she'd do."

"What has she come armed with?" I asked.

She shook her head, smiling. "Something that will do the work," she declared; "you may rely on that." And she put her hands in mine and smiled a flashing smile up at me.

With her assurance ringing in my ears and all my nerves throbbing, I left her, and went home and tried to dine, and then to sleep, but could do neither.

CHAPTER X.

At an unearthly hour the next morning Ankon sent for me to go over some last company affairs with him. He looked as if he had slept as little as I, and was exceedingly nervous.

"Miss Hemingray wrote you that we are to be married at noon," he said. "We sail by the Deutschland. This business which is taking me will admit of no delay. It is awkward, coming just at this time. There are several affairs I shall have to leave unsettled here, but I'll explain them to you, and you can keep an eye on them while I'm away. We expect to get back as quickly as possible. I tried to find you yesterday, but you were out. However, I have as much time now as I had then—which isn't a great deal, you will understand."

"You came to this decision yesterday?" I asked, looking at him with deliberate inspection.

He nodded. "Annoyingly sudden all round; but, fortunately, Miss Hemingray can make herself ready to go with me. Nothing but this very necessary business in London could make me change her plans so completely."

I looked at him curiously, and, giving me a quick glance, he moved to his desk.

"We must get to business," he said. "By all means," I answered.

Throughout the consultation he kept looking at his watch and glancing toward the door, as if he feared an interruption and wanted to put himself out of reach of it. I expected it, too, but hardly so soon as it came.

"Mrs. Dines and Miss Winstanley," the office boy announced.

My eyes fixed eagerly upon Ankon. He went as white as chalk as he turned toward the door and saw them there, and his jaw took an ugly set.

Mrs. Dines was as pale as she had been when she came down the gang-plank of the Cambria, but she was quite composed. Beside her little Miss Winstanley looked like an agitated moth beside a placid robin. I was nearer the door than Ankon, and in sweeping me with her glance Mrs. Dines bowed curtly, then let her eyes travel on at once to him.

She overlooked the hand that he extended rather hesitatingly, and, sitting down where I had sat, beside his desk, motioned him to his chair.

"I have heard of your engagement to Miss Hemingray," she said at once. He murmured a conventional reply, and I took up my hat.

"Don't go, if you please, Mr. Twining," she said, without so much as turning to me. "We shall probably require your services, if you will be so good as to remain."

The scent of battle was thick in the air. Ankon had lost his pallor and was turning gray; he is always gray or choleric under emotion. I began to believe in Mrs. Dines, even as Henrietta Winstanley did. There was that about her which seemed to denote certain victory.

Poor Miss Winstanley, however, looked decidedly uncomfortable, in spite of the fact that she felt she was about to witness the culmination of this engagement which she held to be so monstrous. She too was a general, and a good one—one whose record none could assail—but her mode of attack differed widely from that of her friend Mrs. Dines. She was a strategist, pure and simple, while one could see with half an eye that Mrs. Dines had been born to the hammer-and-tongs method. She scorned strategy as some illustrious generals scorn latter-day war tactics.

She leaned toward Ankon across his wide desk.

"I have come from Africa to tell you that you must break the engagement at once," she said, making no pretense at lowering her full, steady voice.

Over the gray of his face a dull red spread and his lip curled slowly into an ugly downward curve.

"The statement is amazing, as well as amusing, madam," he observed, meeting her eyes steadily enough.

But she refused to skirish. Her attack was to be open and direct, with no foolish beating about in the bushes.

"You know precisely why I make it, and how I can compel you to comply with it," she said.

He answered her with a smile of bravado.

"It has been a long time since this thing happened to which I refer, Mr. Ankon," she went on quickly; "but the sense of injury is not short lived. I may seem to have forgotten, as did my husband, no doubt. But he remembered, and so do I. Shall I go further?"

"We must speak in private," he said.

Miss Winstanley and I arose at once, but Mrs. Dines motioned us to remain.

"Miss Winstanley is equally interested with me in the establishment of justice," she said to him, "and Mr. Twining may be required to distinguish for you between the illegal and the merely dishonorable. They must both remain. I should have been glad to spare you this, as I think my continued inaction in the matter must prove to you. But you have forced me to act. You have violated all sense of honor and right, and you have brought upon your head precisely the thing you would most eagerly have averted. If you thought I would stand by and see you marry Barbara Hemingray, knowing you to be the sort of man you are, you greatly misjudge me. But I am inclined to believe that you did not think me to be my husband's confidante, and that you felt yourself secure, your ignominy buried with him."

Ankon arose and held open the door into the inner office.

"I must insist upon discussing this matter in private," he protested hotly, in a voice that quavered.

Mrs. Dines sat still, an imperative hand held out detainingly to us. "The time is past for that," she told him; "if you had sought me out long ago it might have been very different. But understand that I mean to make no public disclosures if you accede to my demand. It remains with you to decide whether or not the very unpleasant facts go forth."

He continued to stand across the room from her, his hand still upon the door. He did not reply, and I could feel, rather than see, that he was terribly shaken. Mrs. Dines turned her chair till she faced him.

"That we may come to an understanding at once, I think I should tell you in the beginning that I know that when you were my husband's agent some years ago you hypothesized securities that were his—not yours. You were hard pushed then, and he knew it to be the crucial period of your whole business career; so he waited, believing that his confidence in you had not been entirely misplaced and that when you could you would make good the amount you had—stolen. But you did not. And after two years, when you had become amply able to do so, and did not, he realized that you had grown secure in the belief that your peculation was not discovered, and that you were without even the semblance of honor. He admitted this with singular reluctance, Mr. Ankon, for I think you know that he trusted you as no many men trust their fellows."

She paused, her eyes on his face. His muttered reply was not coherent, and she went on at once:

"When he saw you at last as you really were, he determined to prosecute you; but there came his last long illness and his death, and afterward my heart had softened a little to you and I had not the mind beside to put shame and sorrow upon your mother, so I did nothing. But when I heard the amazing news that you had proposed to marry a girl like Barbara Hemingray, I came back to America to tell you that you must give her up or the delayed prosecution will begin at once."

Then he spoke. "You understand what this is you ask of me?" he said thickly.

"Perfectly," she nodded, and her tone was less unkindly. "If I did not know just how sweet and lovely and full of grace and innocence she is, I might perhaps have stayed away and left you to your wooing."

There was a long silence.

"You demand large interest, Mrs. Dines," he said.

"Accumulated interest is always large," she retorted. "But I do not wish to humiliate you any more than is necessary. You must, of course, bring to an immediate end this unfortunate engagement—I believe you were to have been married at noon, were you not?" She glanced at the clock. "You have not much time. Some part of the truth Miss Hemingray must know. But you may make your own explanation aside from that. I only exact that she shall be made to understand that whatever sense of obligation she may have entertained for you is dissipated."

Ankon colored painfully and made no reply.

Totem Pole Thief is Punished

The theft of an ancient totem pole from the old Tongass Indian village on Cat Island, Alaska, is what caused the arrest and imprisonment of Clarence McBeth, a resident of Ketchikan, Alaska, recently. The story of the arrest was received in detail at the office of E. T. Allen, district supervisor of government forest reserves.

With a party of friends McBeth chartered the launch Elk and went over to the island. The totem pole was stolen under cover of darkness from the Indian village, tied to the boat and towed behind on the return trip.

According to Supervisor Allen, the government's regulations concerning the protection of aboriginal antiquities are very stringent, and officials hope this case will prove an object lesson to persons who have been making a business to collect these relics and sell them. The Indians regard the action of the palefaces as nothing short of sacrilege.

Afternoon Refreshments.

I read your part of the paper before I read any other, and always find something I have wanted to know. Soon I expect to entertain about eight young ladies in the afternoon. What shall I have for refreshments? We will sit at dining room table. Shall I have the table devoid of eatables when we sit down and have everything passed?

MARY.

At this season of the year I would have coffee or chocolate, with whipped cream if the latter, and either individual charlotte russe or a salad, with nut sandwiches. Canteenous filled with vanilla ice cream are delicious. Have a centerpiece of flowers, either with or without candles, according to the day—whether dark and gloomy, or sunny. Have the refreshments at each place. You can pour the beverage or have it served from the kitchen.

Name for a Girls' Club.

I intend to entertain a club of seven girls of about 11 or 12 years of age. I am somewhat at a loss to know what to do to amuse them. Would you kindly suggest some inexpensive way? What should I have for refreshments? Could you suggest some name for this sewing club?

A SCHOOLGIRL.

If it is a sewing club, won't the girls bring their work? I have heard the names "Thimble club," "Busy Bee's," "Needle club," or how would "Scissors circle" do? And have little wee scissors made into pins for the club members. You could have nut sandwiches, with hot cocoa, and homemade candy, or if you want something more elaborate perhaps you could have ice cream and cake.

Perfectly Proper.

Is it proper to send announcements in your home town when you have a very quiet wedding?

H. R. J.

By all means send announcements to all those calling acquaintance you wish to retain.

Selecting the Engagement Ring.

Would you please inform me if it is proper for a young lady to go with her gentleman friend and select her engagement ring, or should he go unaccompanied and select it?

W. H. F.

There is nothing improper in a girl going with her fiancé to select the ring, only if he hasn't an abundance of riches it might be embarrassing to him. He could consult her, then take a selection of three or four rings for her to choose at her own home.

Order of Receiving Party.

What should constitute the receiving line and their order at the reception following a wedding when the bride party consists of two flower girls, one ring bearer, six ushers, six bridesmaids, one matron of honor, bride, father, groom?

OLGA.

The flower girls and ring bearer do not appear in the receiving line. Their responsibility ends after the ceremony. The father (and mother if there is one) stand first, then the bride and bridegroom, next the matron, then the six bridesmaids. The ushers do not receive, but make themselves generally useful, seeing that all guests are presented. If the bridegroom's father and mother are present, they stand the other side of the "maids."

MADAME MERRI.

FANCIES OF FASHION.

None of the new winter coats shows any flare at the hips.

Colored embroidery enters into much of the new neckwear.

As a rule taffeta will be the petticoat of the new season.

Hips are slightly more emphasized than in the summer styles.

A pearly gray glove is lovely with costumes in the gray shades.

Filmy ties are worn with jacket suits, and jabots of a sheer order are also in vogue.

Oxidized long chains and small pieces of the same material are worn with tailored frocks.

Castor shoes of leather and sail cloth are suitable to wear with dresses of the same color.

Roman gold pieces for brooches, hatpins, belt buckles and the like are set with very large stones.

Silk-covered cord is a special trimming that makes a gown look individual, and is thicker than what is known as rat-tail.

Rosettes of all kinds, from the tiny ones for slippers to large fluffy affairs worn as a sash, figure among novel dress accessories.

Girls' Dresses

DRESS FOR GIRL FROM SIX TO EIGHT YEARS.—This is a capital style to select when only a short length of material is available. The long-waisted bodice and skirt of our model are in blue checked fine woolen material, the yoke of piece lace; the trimming that outlines the yoke and forms straps down front is galloon of both the shades in the check. The three-quarter sleeves are in soft washing silk; of the lightest shade of the check. Waistband of leather fastened by a steel buckle.

Zephyr or linen with lawn sleeves and embroidery yoke might be used, if liked.

Materials required: Two and one-half yards 44 inches wide, three-eighths yard lace, three-fourths yard washing silk, two yards galloon.

DRESS FOR GIRL OF 14 TO 16 YEARS.—Our model of the dress shown here was in blue cassimere cloth; the skirt that is slightly full at the waist is trimmed at the foot with white muslin embroidery; above are three tucks, then a strip of insertion one and one-half inches wide.

The bodice is made with slightly cross-over fronts, trimmed with embroidery and a vest of piece embroidery. The fronts are ornamented with bows of ribbon, the waist-band being of ribbon of a wider width.

The sleeves are tucked in stripes, insertion being placed between the stripes.

Materials required for the dress: Six yards 42 inches wide, four yards embroidery, five yards insertion, three-eighths yard piece embroidery.

DRESS FOR GIRL OF TEN TO TWELVE YEARS.—Any pretty striped material makes up well in this style; the skirt is set in two flat plaits each side front and back, and is trimmed with a band of some lighter material cut on the cross and stitched at each edge.

The pinafore bodice is set in plaits each side; the shaped top is trimmed with a strap of light material; the sleeves are edged with a similar strap. The little under-slip is of white spotted muslin.

Materials required for the dress: Four yards 40 inches wide, one and one-half yard muslin for underslip, one-half yard 40 inches wide for straps.

Try This In November.

Thousands upon thousands of families who have not been regular eaters of Quaker Oats will begin on the first of November and eat Quaker Oats once or twice every day for thirty days of this month; the result in good health and more strength and vigor will mean that every other month in the year will find them doing the same thing.

Try it! Serve Quaker Oats plentifully and frequently for the thirty days of November and leave off a corresponding amount of meat and greasy foods. You'll get more health, more vigor and strength than you ever got in thirty days of any other kind of eating.

While you are trying this see that the children get a full share. Quaker Oats is packed in regular size packages and large size family packages.

An aching back is instantly relieved by an application of Sloan's Liniment.

This liniment takes the place of massage and is better than sticky plasters. It penetrates—without rubbing—through the skin and muscular tissue right to the bone, quickens the blood, relieves congestion, and gives permanent as well as temporary relief.

Here's the Proof. Mr. JAMES C. LEE, of 1100 9th St., S.E., Washington, D.C., writes: "Thirty years ago I fell from a scaffold and seriously injured my back. I suffered terribly at times; from the small of my back all around my stomach. I just as if I had been beaten with a club. I used every plaster I could get with no relief. Sloan's Liniment took the pain right out, and I can now do as much labor work as any man in the shop, thanks to Sloan's Liniment."

Sloan's Liniment has no equal as a remedy for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, or any pain or stiffness in the muscles or joints. Prices, 25c, 50c, and $1.00.

Sloan's back on horses, cattle, sheep, and poultry sent free. Address Dr. Earl S. Sloan, Boston, Mass., U.S.A.

BREVITIES

STOCKBRIDGE—A miniature building put up near the school house for the fire department to practice on Monday evening, was set on fire and destroyed by the younger generation before the fire brigade arrived on the scene. —Brief.

WHITMORE LAKE—Whitmore Lake is to have another elevator. The Michigan Milling company is moving an elevator here from Delhi. It will be built on the ground near the stock yards. The gravel is being drawn and the company expects to have the elevator up and ready for use before many days.

ADRIAN—E. O. Rose, of Jackson, 60 years old, a mail clerk on L. S. & M. S. No. 318 between Adrian and Jackson, was struck by a switch engine in the Adrian yards Friday and instantly killed. Rose was collecting mail from the depot box and in crossing the track he failed to see a switch engine backing toward him until it was too late. Both his legs were cut off below the knees and his head and chest crushed. He was picked up unconscious and died immediately.

JACKSON—Peter Walceajic, a laborer at the Michigan Central railroad shops at Jackson Junction, was electrocuted by the trolley wire of a car used to transport material about the shops, late Tuesday afternoon. Walceajic was operating the car when the trolley pole became fouled with the power wire. He violated a rule of the shop by attempting the release of the trolley himself, and grasped the live wire. He was instantly killed. He was 22 years of age and unmarried.

MONROE—The "forgettery" of a brakeman probably saved Monroe city from being wiped off the map, and Dundee and other nearby places from being "shooked" a bit Saturday last. A rear collision of a freight train near that city in the early morning hours of that day was the cause of a $100,000 fire of cars and merchandise resulting from the accident. A car containing 30 tons of dynamite should have been attached to the rear of the train bunted into had not the brakeman forgotten to perform that duty. "Tis truly 'an ill wind that blows nobody good."

LANSING—Judge Wiest has ordered W. J. Dancer, receiver for the defunct Stockbridge bank, of which former state treasurer Glazier was owner, not to pay any more premiums on five life insurance policies of $10,000 each, which Glazier took out with the Mutual Insurance Company of New York, and which he turned over to the bank as security for loans. Judge Wiest also ordered the receiver to surrender these policies, which were taken out eight years ago, and realize the cash value on them, about $6,000, which will be distributed among the creditors of the Stockbridge bank.—Ingham County Democrat.

JACKSON—Harry Gordon Selfridge and his family were given an informal reception at the home of Mrs. W. H. Withington in this city Monday night. Mr. Selfridge is the head of the much discussed American department store in Oxford street, London, and is a native of this city. He greeted warmly hundreds of his school-boy friends and was the guest of honor at a dinner earlier that evening. The party left Tuesday for Chicago and will sail for England November 6. Before opening his great London establishment, Mr. Selfridge was manager of the Marshall Field establishment in Chicago. He began his business career as cash boy in a dry goods store in this city.

MONROE—Rockwood and vicinity is all agog over the discovery that the Huron river contains something besides a small amount of murky water in the summer and unduly large quantity of the same fluid in flood time. Pearls have been found in some of the shells in the river and pearl hunting is now the thrilling pastime in the neighborhood. Several weeks ago Miss Ada Mercure was preparing a flower bed and decided to use Huron river shells for decorative effect. She got a substantial basketful, but before putting them to that purpose followed the advice of a friend, Mrs. Frank Brown, who told her to open the shells first, as they might contain pearls. Sure enough among the first half dozen a fine pearl was found and the balance of the contents of the basket netted several more. Her father, Capt. Mercure, took two of them to a Woodward avenue jeweler in Detroit, who offered him $20 apiece for them. Miss Mercure and Mrs. Brown then kept their discovery quiet and started on a systematic hunt, and with good success. Nothing was known of their strike until through their disagreement over the division of their store, the news leaked out. And now the river bottom is being raked with a fine toothed comb by pearl hunters. —Democrat.

ANN ARBOR—The stork has been exceedingly busy in Ann Arbor during the past ten months, and indications are that all previous birth records will be eclipsed before the other two months of the year have passed. The records in the city clerk's office show that 301 births have been reported up to Saturday night. These figures are equal to the birth record of 1908, and in event they keep coming in at the same rate they have been the record will show at least 50 more new arrivals than last year.—Times News.

LESLIE—The electric line is practically ready to run cars clear through from Jackson to Lansing. It will be some time before the power station at Mason is completed, and whether the company will run cars before it is done is not known. It is believed the power will not be sufficient transmitted from Lansing to Jackson to run cars from Leslie to Mason. Many men from here who worked on the line between Lansing and Jackson have gone to Lansing to work on the line now being built between that city and Owosso.

MANCHESTER—While hunting north of town early Friday morning Fred M. Freeman saw a large bird soaring in the air. It was a long way off but he resolved to chance a shot at it and was astonished to see the bird come to the ground. He ran up and with a bush held it down and called to Rev. Wulfman, who was hunting with him, and they captured the bird which proved to be a young eagle. It was but slightly wounded in one wing and they tied its feet together and brought it to town. The bird prepared to put up a scrap when it saw the men approach but they secured it without much difficulty. —Enterprise.

Election of Officers.

The annual election of the Chelsea fire department, will be held at Firemen's hall, on Thursday evening, November 4th.

Swept Over Niagara.

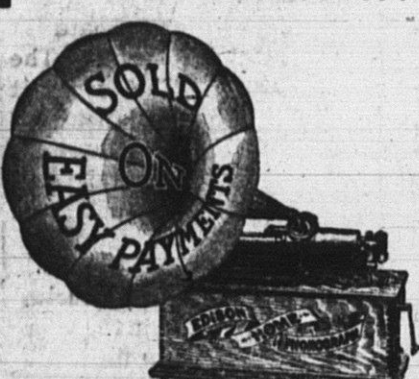

This terrible calamity often happens because a careless boatman ignores the river's warnings growing ripples and faster current. Nature's warnings are kind. That dull pain or ache in the back warns you the kidneys need attention if you would escape fatal maladies—dropsy, diabetes or Bright's disease. Take Electric Bitters at once and see bacchae fly and all your best feelings return. "After long suffering from weak kidneys and lame back, one $1.00 bottle wholly cured me," writes J. R.
