Bad Accident.

Chris Breustle, of Jerusalem, returned to his home from Breckenridge, Minn., last Saturday. While working about a self-feeding threshing machine ten weeks ago, he got his left arm caught in the machine and it was so badly injured that he has been in a hospital at Breckenridge for the last nine weeks. The wounds have not entirely healed and it will be some time before he will be able to use his arm.

Must Be Labeled.

Binding twine sold by the state prison plant must be labeled as the law requires other binding twine to be labeled, in the opinion of the attorney-general's department, and as a result the state institution will have to tag about 1,000,000 pounds now on hand before it is placed on sale. Last winter the legislature passed an act requiring that each bag of twine sold in Michigan bear a tag stating the name of the manufacturer, the tensile strength of the twine and the number of feet per pound.

Burglars Enter Meat Market.

Bad, bold burglars, broke into the meat market of VanRiper & Chandler sometime Tuesday night. Mr. Chandler discovered that burglars had helped themselves to $3.85 worth of the firm's cash, shortly after opening the shop Wednesday morning. Entrance was gained to the market through a window in the rear of the shop. It was down from the top and by tearing off the wire screen, and with the aid of a stepladder the job was an easy one for the intruder. There was $1.25 in pennies in the cash register which was left by the invaders.

A Bad Fire.

A fire in the woods owned by F. H. Sweetland, Mr. Holden and Geo. T. English, did considerable damage Sunday afternoon. Some of the fences were burned and a large portion of the dead timber that was standing was consumed. Arthur Widmayer, who occupies the English farm, discovered the flames upon returning home from church and when he reached the woods discovered six hunters on the premises. Just how the fire started is unknown, but it is supposed to have been caused by carelessness on the part of hunters, and as the leaves were extremely dry it did not take long for the flames to get a good start before they were discovered.

Kalmbach Will.

The last will and testament of Peter Kalmbach, a late resident of Sylvan, was admitted to probate Saturday afternoon. In it the deceased disposes of a farm of 110 acres, valued at about $4,500, to his son with the stipulation that the same shall be sold and money realized for the purpose of paying for the burial of the deceased to pay $600 to Freda Prange, his contemplated wife; to give his daughter, Corolla Bender $300; to his daughter, Emma Young, $300; to his granddaughter, Maria Garbett, $350. The deceased also asks that the executor, Christian Weber, erect a monument over his grave to cost not more than $75. With the will is filed an agreement entered into by and between the deceased and Freda Prange, dated February 13, 1907, in which Kalmbach, aged 74 years, agreed to wed Freda Prange is well acquainted with the value of deceased's property and accepts of $600 as her dower rights in all of his property.

Miss Christina M. Artz.

Christiana Mary Artz was born August 24, 1832, and died in the city hospital of Jackson, on Thursday, October 28, 1909. She spent the earlier years of her life near the villages of Waterloo and Francisco. In 1875 she moved to the state of California where she remained until 1896 when she returned to the state where she lived in the earlier years of her life.

After her return to this state she made her home with her sister, the late Mrs. Caroline Notten, after whose demise the latter's sons, Fred and Elbert cared for her in their respective homes until a few months previous to her death, when she was taken into the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Fred Artz, of near Waterloo village.

While in San Francisco, she was employed in the homes of some of the leading families of the western section of our country. At one time she was engaged in the household of Gov. Boggs as superintending chef and at another time in the home of Senator Cowen. In 1880 she removed from San Francisco to Fresno, Cal., where she made her home until her return to the east. She was a member of the German M. E. church since 1875, and while in California was identified with the congregations of this denomination there. After her return to this vicinity she was transferred to the Salem German M. E. church near Francisco, where she retained her membership until her death. Some over a year ago she was stricken with paralysis, which was followed by repeated attacks gradually leaving her speechless and helpless. She was tenderly cared for by her relatives until October 19, when she was taken to the Jackson city hospital where she could receive the best medical attention. All of her immediate family have preceded her to the world beyond, leaving as her nearest relatives a sister-in-law, several nephews and nieces, and a number of cousins.

Miss Artz was a devout Christian, and an active business lady, having been engaged in various business pursuits. The funeral took place on Sunday morning, October 31st, at the Salem German M. E. church, with interment in the cemetery of the German Methodist church near Waterloo.

JOHN COLLINS FOUND DEAD ON M. C. TRACK

HAD EVIDENTLY ATTEMPTED TO BOARD TRAIN.

An unknown man, aged from 70 to 75 years, was found dead in the west yards of the Michigan Central at this at 12:35 this morning.

The body was discovered by the crew on a freight train, and officers Leach and Hepburn were notified. The body was lying face downward about halfway between the oil house and the stand-pipes. The head and face was quite badly bruised. The body was removed to Stuffer's undertaking rooms and Justice Withereff was notified, and upon further investigation may decide to hold an inquest.

The dead man was seen by night telegraph operator Austin Easterle on the first baggage car on train No. 37 which arrived here at 11:15 Wednesday night. It is supposed that the man fell from the train at the point where his body was discovered. He was poorly dressed and undoubtedly was a man who had no permanent place of residence.

LATER—From a letter found in the effects of the dead man, his name is John Collins; that he was on his way from Nevada to Boston. That he was born in 1836. A passport showed that he had worked 3 or 4 days in September, not giving the name of the employer. Thirty-five cents in cash and two lead pencils were also in his possession.

Were A Little Slow.

Several hundred policy holders in the Washtenaw Mutual Fire Insurance Company woke up to the fact Monday that they had been suspended from participating in any benefits in the event they suffered a loss by fire. The 30 days given the policy holders to pay up all arrears expired with the stroke of 12 o'clock Saturday night, and Monday between 200 and 300 policies were of very little weight. This condition of affairs is ascribed by the officers in charge to be due more particularly to the fact that the policy holders are forgetful of their obligations.—Ann Arbor Times News.

In The Justice Court.

Frank Blessing, of Jackson, was taken before Justice Withereff Tuesday afternoon on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $5.00 or 10 days in the county jail at Ann Arbor. The fine not being paid Blessing was taken to the county jail Tuesday evening.

Thomas Grant, of Jackson, who was run in Tuesday by Marshal Hepburn, was taken before Justice Withereff Wednesday when he pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk and disorderly. He was fined $10 and costs.

Believes in Hoodoo.

If Dr. Lee Ackerson of Milan township does not get any deer this winter he can blame it all on Deputy Sheriff of the county clerk's office. Dr. Ackerson came into the office Friday forenoon and asked for a deer shooting license. The paper was carefully filled out and handed to the doctor. With an exclamation he demanded to know what was being handed him, for in the upper corner appeared the hoodoo No. 13. Now the doctor believes in hoodoos and expressed the belief that his shots at deer would be very few this year. However, he carries with him the assurance of the deputy and many friends who are "next" that the deer in Michigan woods will not be apprised of the fact that "Doc" carried license No. 13.—Times News.

John W. Vogel's Big City Minstrels.

John W. Vogel's Big City Minstrels will appear at the Sylvan theatre on Thursday evening, November 18, and will present a program which for genuine novelty has never before been attempted by any other minstrel manager. The company is a large one and every artist has been selected with a great care for his respective worth. One surprise follows another in rapid succession, from the rise to the fall of the curtain. Those who have seen the clever performers in this attraction will wish to see them again, and those who have not had the opportunity of witnessing the entertainment should do so now and spend an evening of rare enjoyment, guaranteed to satisfy the most exacting amusement seeker.

"The Climax."

Plays of today, which are going to be remembered as long as have been such classics as "A School for Scandal" and "She Stoops to Conquer" are those which have as their foundation real heart interests, such as is found, regardless of one's station in life. Just such a play is "The Climax," which Joseph Weber will present at the New Winter theatre, Ann Arbor, Friday and Saturday, November 5 and 6, matinee Saturday. The piece is the work of Edward Locke, an author unknown to fame. The musical theme, which has a strong bearing on the play, is by Joseph Carl Brel.

The story of "The Climax" in brief concerns Adelina von Hagen, daughter of a German musician and an Italian opera singer. She is studying music with a relative in New York. Her voice is sure and her spirit light. John Raymond, a doctor from Azalia, Ohio, where Adelina's infancy was spent does not believe the stage a proper vocation for any woman, and especially for Adelina, whom he loves. The girl has a little trouble with her vocal chords which a slight operation would cure. The operation is performed by a prominent specialist, who assures Adelina that there is only one chance in a thousand for failure. Dr. Raymond, ready to do anything to keep the girl from the stage, suggests to her the probability of this one chance. He continually persists in this suggestion until the day when the vocal chords should have healed. When she is permitted to try to sing, her voice will not come, the suggested failure had become an accomplished fact.

After an intense grief she agrees to fulfill her former promise and marry the doctor. On the wedding day Adelina discovers that her voice is not dead, but merely sleeping. She tries again and the tones come clearer than ever before. Dr. Raymond confesses what he has done, offering as an excuse a blind intoxication of love. The thoroughly delightful little play ends with Adelina left to follow the brilliant career before her, but with the knowledge that ultimately love will find a way.

Seats can be ordered by mail in the usual way. There will be no advance in prices for this excellent attraction.

Scripser will sell the following personal property at public auction, on the premises of the late Daniel Scripser, farm situated two miles south of Unadilla and about two miles north and east of Lyndon Center, on Thursday, November 11, commencing at one o'clock p. m., sharp: Three good serviceable horses, two milch cows, forty-five fowls, farming tools, household, and a quantity of corn, oats, hay and cornstalks. ## LONG LIFE OF INDIAN QUEEN

Jeanie, the Ruler of Chelalis, Was 132 Years Old at the Time of Her Death.

There has just died at the home of her grandniece, Mrs. William Vianen of New Westminster (herself 76 years of age) the last of the royal line of the Chelalis Indians, in times long past a strong nation occupying the country contiguous to Harrison Lake, a Montreal Herald's Victoria (B. C.) correspondent says. Queen Jeanie was reputedly 132 years old at the time of her death and until quite recently in full possession of all her faculties. She was a young woman 31 years of age and the mother of five when Simon Fraser made his historical expedition in the course of which he discovered the great river to which he gave his name, and Queen Jeanie told with pride of giving the strange white man "hospitable entertainment," in recognition of which the Scottish explorer presented her with several pretty trinkets, which have ever since been preserved as family heirlooms.

Queen Jeanie had for years been living in a lowly hut on the Indian reservation at the west end of New Westminster city, forgotten by the busy world and almost forgotten by the scattered remnants of the nation over which in its unity she once ruled. For the last year or more she has been speechless and utterly helpless, waiting for the summons to the happy hunting grounds. Her grandniece, herself 76, 55 years ago married one of the province's earliest pioneers, William Vianen, better known as "Dutch Bill," the first white fisherman on the Fraser river. His death occurred about three years ago. No such case of Indian longevity as that of Queen Jeanie has been known in this part of the world.

Hendaye, Frontier Town.

Hendaye, the French frontier town which has been forwarding much of the Spanish crisis news, and has been the scene of embarrassing demonstrations by Spanish refugees against their own country's government, is the Andaye of Wellington's passage of the Bidassoa. Gen. Hay crossed the channel and a half mile of sands at low tide from the Spanish bank on the morning of October 8, 1813, and captured Hendaye. To-day the traveler by the Sud express crosses the "international" railway bridge between Irun and Hendaye without realizing exactly when he passes the frontier. But the little river is an effective boundary still. One day early this year a correspondent found himself in the main square of Irun asking for the railway station, and only one of seven or eight prosperous-looking Irun citizens had French enough to understand or answer the question—within a few hundred yards of France!

Oil of Sassafras for Insect Bites.
It is not generally known how valuable a preventive against the bites of mosquitoes, fleas, gnats, midges, etc. oil of sassafras is. The fact has recently been recorded again by A. T. Girdler. If in a susceptible person the oil is applied at once to the place that has been bitten it almost invariably prevents the poisoning altogether. If applied to the inflamed spot a day or two after the bite it an once stops the irritation.

To those who live in the country and whose life is made a burden by undue susceptibility to insect bites and to those who have not yet returned from holiday making in regions infested by biting insects, oil of sassafras should be a great boon and it is harmless as an external application.—London Globe.

Electricity Known of Old.

A writer in the Elektrotechnische Anzeiger cites many incidents to show that electricity was not unknown to the ancients, and that George Eber's suggestion in a novel that the Egyptians made use of lightning conductors was well founded. Instruments much like the modern heliograph were also used, the writer says, by priests, as a means of communication between temples. There can be no doubt, he says, as to the temple having been protected by lightning rods. The Biblical description shows that the roof was provided with metallic poles held aloft by columns and that the ends in chains terminated in great water tanks. He adds: "All of which is vouched for in the first book of Kings and the second book of Chronicles."

Lighthouse for Peace Memorial.

Would not a lighthouse be a fitting memorial of the peace that has prevailed on the great lakes since the war of 1812? The neutrality of the great lakes is a triumph of common sense and humane instincts over warlike impulses. It also illustrates the superiority of the unwritten to the written statute.

Naturally So.

"There seems to be a great deal about provisions in this north pole discussion."

"Of course, there is. Isn't it quite natural for there to be something gastronomic about a feat which was performed by a Cook?"

A Mistaken View.

"That lawyer conducted the cross-examination."

"Why, I thought he was real good-natured about it."—Baltimore American.

HORRIBLE DEED OF CLYDE BROWN

BRUTALLY SLEW HIS WIFE, WHO WAS RETURNING HOME FROM CHURCH.

WOMAN A JUNE BRIDE.

Had Been Separated But a Few Weeks, Owing to Domestic Troubles, Which Ended in Murder.

As they were on their way from church Sunday afternoon, Clyde Bowen, aged 24, pulled a razor from his pocket and slashed his wife's throat from ear to ear, leaving her dead body by the side of the road. Then, after wandering aimlessly about the neighborhood, he went to the home of his parents, told them what he had done and attempted to cut his own throat, but ineffectually.

Evidently thinking better of his determination to kill himself, the young man jumped on a horse and rode toward Newaygo, where he was captured by officers sent after him. He talked freely of the tragedy and said he had killed his wife because they quarreled.

Bowen and his young wife were married last June, since when their life has been full of domestic infelicity, according to the young man's parents. A few weeks ago they separated and each lived with their parents. Sunday afternoon both Bowen and his wife attended services at the Oak Grove church, eight miles from Howard City, in a lonely spot. After the services Bowen met his wife in the churchyard and they had a few words, which were not overheard. They were then seen to leave and walk down the road. Half an hour later the body of the young woman was found in the roadway nearly a mile from the church.

A charge of murder in the first degree will be lodged against Bowen.

Want More Laws.

The Michigan state teachers' convention, which was held in Saginaw, came to an end with the submission of the report of the committee on resolutions. This committee recommended medical inspection for the public schools, declared for support of the enforcement of the anti-cigarette law, that the organization and growth of secret societies in high schools should be stopped, approved industrial training and recommended its gradual extension to both city and country schools; commended the work of the legislative committee in the securing of new school laws and suggested for its furthering the passage of a law defining the power of city school superintendents, fixing a minimum salary for all teachers and a minimum term of nine months in all schools, city and rural. It also declared for a more equitable distribution of the primary school fund.

Wholesalers Are Foxy.
Only 20 foreign liquor dealers have paid their license fee to the state, as required under the Warner-Crampton liquor law, and Aud-Gen. Fuller is wondering whether that is all the outside liquor firms doing business in this state. He has been informed that there are about 100 such firms having agents traveling over the state, but the law confers no authority on him to investigate, that matter being left to the local authorities.

There is a strong suspicion that some firms have delayed taking out a license until Nov. 1 in order to save the fee for the first two months the law was in effect. Each agent of a foreign liquor firm is required to have with him a copy of the license granted his firm, and it remains for the local officials to ascertain whether any agents are making their towns without these credentials.

Guarding the Preserve.

Over 40,000 acres of land have been set aside in Isocoo, Oscoda and Alcona counties for a forest preserve, and several well known rangers will be employed by the state in conjunction with the government at Washington, who will reside on the land to keep fires from spreading and look out for trespassers. Several thousand acres of seedlings of the different pine varieties will be set out and watched carefully, and the present timbered area will be carefully looked after. Houses will be built by the government for the forest rangers to live in, distributed about the tract so the land can be all covered by the hunters.

Thayer Sentenced.

Lying on a couch from which he was too ill to arise, Claude L. Thayer, aged 72, who shot and killed his wife and then attempted suicide last July, was sentenced in circuit court at Lansing to serve a life sentence in Jackson prison. Thayer's illness is the result of the bullet he fired into his head, and he has been in a precarious condition for many weeks.

It's terrible to smoke a cigarette in Holland, as Elmer Fink, a young Grand Rapids football player, learned Saturday when an officer ran him in with a coffin nail in his mouth. Fink promised to swear off and was released.

Enraged on account of being refused an invitation to a wedding, Frank Czeneski, of Muskegon, went to the residence where the celebration was being conducted and was attacked by Walter Zarjarc. Czeneski was cut 11 times about the head and face, and is now in a hospital and may not live. Zarjarc is under arrest.

Mrs. Eliza Lubert, of Ira township, swore to a warrant for Rev. Gustav Dobranz, pastor of the German Lutheran church at Ira, charging assault and battery. She charges a feud has existed between them for two years.

Two distinct earthquake shocks were recorded on the seismograph at the Ann Arbor university Sunday, the first at 1:05 a. m. and the second half an hour later. It is thought the shocks were at least 6,000 miles away.

The latter had to accompany the two bodies and a double funeral was held.

Fruit growers of Oceana county say that the industry is growing rapidly. The profits from this year's crops are said to be greater than ever, and the peaches were exceptionally good.

DEEP WATERWAY IS DEMANDED BY ALL

Great River Convention Is Held in New Orleans.

PRESIDENT FAVORS PROJECT

Promises the Present Administration Will Support Issuance of Federal Bonds If Fourteen-Foot Program Proves Feasible.

New Orleans, Nov. 1.—Ringing demands for "14 feet through the valley" and elaborate argument in support of the program for the creation of a deep waterway from the lakes to the gulf have marked the great convention of the Deep Waterway association that opened here Saturday.

President Taft, Vice-President Sherman, Speaker Cannon, governors of the Mississippi valley states, innumerable senators and representatives, among them Senator Lorimer of Illinois, the father of the deep waterway movement, Sherman, Too, is for it.

Vice-President James S. Sherman has brought to the people of the middle west the message of the east, promising enthusiastic support of the waterway program. "We people of the east depend on your people of the west," said he. "When we help you, we help ourselves; so there is every reason why we should do all in our power for you, as soon as we realize what you want and why you want it."

Speaker Cannon and Secretary of War Dickinson are no less outspoken in their assurances of support, and many senators and representatives, among them Senator Lorimer of Illinois, the father of the deep waterway movement, Sherman, Too, is for it.

President Taft promises support. President Taft, who arrived in New Orleans escorted by a great flotilla, after an illuminating trip down the Mississippi river from St. Louis, landed from the lighthouse tender Oleaner about eight o'clock Saturday morning, and was driven to his hotel through streets that were canopied with magnolia branches, palm-trees and southern moss, and everywhere entwined in the decorations were the mottoes "Fourteen Feet Through the Valley" and "River Rate Regulation is Rate Regulation."

At the Athenaeum in the afternoon the president aroused a storm of cheers by promising that if the 14-foot project proved feasible and advisable, the present administration would favor the issuance of government bonds to defray the cost.

Not for a "Pork Barrel." At the same time Mr. Taft made it plain that he would not stand for any plan to make a "pork barrel" of the project. He said he opposed any such general bond issue of $500,000,000 or $1,000,000,000 for waterways improvement, the money to be cut up and parceled out to different sections. He declared that the improvement of waterways had been carried forward in a haphazard fashion in the past, and that a new method should be adopted. "I believe in the deep waterway," said the president. "I am for it, and I shall use all the power that I possess in doing what may be accomplished to give you citizens of this great valley what you so earnestly desire. It is all a part of a still greater movement inaugurated by Theodore Roosevelt, and properly called by him the conservation of our national resources."

"The projects for irrigation and for the improvement of waterways in the future are not to be for the purpose of distributing 'pork' to every part of the country. Every measure is to be adopted on the ground that it will be useful to the whole country. They are not to be adopted for sending certain congressmen back to Washington or for making certain parts of the country profitable during the expenditure of the money."

"We should take up every comprehensive project on its merits and determine whether the country where the project is to be carried out has so far developed as to justify the enormous expenditure of money, and if it will be useful when done. When we decide in favor of a project, I believe in issuing bonds to carry it to completion as rapidly as possible. It has been proposed that we issue bonds for $500,000,000 or $1,000,000,000, and cut it up and parcel the money out in this and that section of the country. I am opposed to any such proposition, because it not only smells of the 'pork barrel,' but would be a 'pork barrel.'"

2. The entire route of the lakes-to-the-gulf deep waterway from Joliet to New Orleans, through the Des Plaines river, the Illinois river and the Mississippi river, has been surveyed under direction of congress by United States engineers, who have officially reported to congress that the building of the deep waterway is feasible.

5. It is intended to ask the Sixty-first congress to pass a bill providing definitely that the United States government undertake the construction of the deep waterway from the point where the Illinois work will end, to the Gulf of Mexico.

DEEP WATERWAY IS DEMANDED BY ALL

Great River Convention Is Held in New Orleans.

PRESIDENT FAVORS PROJECT

Promises the Present Administration Will Support Issuance of Federal Bonds If Fourteen-Foot Program Proves Feasible.

New Orleans, Nov. 1.—Ringing demands for "14 feet through the valley" and elaborate argument in support of the program for the creation of a deep waterway from the lakes to the gulf have marked the great convention of the Deep Waterway association that opened here Saturday.

President Taft, Vice-President Sherman, Speaker Cannon, governors of the Mississippi valley states, innumerable senators and representatives, among them Senator Lorimer of Illinois, the father of the deep waterway movement, Sherman, Too, is for it.

Vice-President James S. Sherman has brought to the people of the middle west the message of the east, promising enthusiastic support of the waterway program. "We people of the east depend on your people of the west," said he. "When we help you, we help ourselves; so there is every reason why we should do all in our power for you, as soon as we realize what you want and why you want it."

All West Point is plunged in gloom over the death of Eugene A. Byrne, of Buffalo, as a result of being injured in the Harvard-West Point game Saturday.

The Army and Harvard lined up on their scheduled time and a large crowd was witnessing the game, which promised to be one of the best of the season. Young Byrne was playing his usual position at left tackle. The game was in progress but 10 minutes in the second half when he was thrown in a scrimmage. When Byrne remained stretched on the ground the game was halted and he was carried off the field in an unconscious condition.

Only the immediate resort to artificial respiration kept the boy from almost instant death, for he did not draw a natural breath after receiving the fatal shock. Surgeons were unable to make a complete examination Saturday night on account of his critical condition, and opinions varied as to whether a blow on the spine or on the solar plexus caused the paralysis. But X-ray photographs taken after his death revealed a dislocation between the first and second cervical vertebrae causing the first vertebrae to be thrown forward, pressing against and probably resulting in a lesion in those nerve centers of the medulla oblongata, which govern the respiratory muscles. This caused the natural process of breathing to cease altogether and the artificial means of respiration resorted to was all that kept the injured cadet alive until Sunday morning. No autopsy was held aside from the X-ray examination.

Col. Hugh L. Scott and the football coaches held a conference Sunday, at which it was decided to cease playing football for the remainder of the season.

This means that the Army-Navy game will not be played next month. Byrne's mother and father bore the shock of the fatality with fortitude. The father witnessed the accident on the field and he jumped out of the stand and ran on the gridiron when he saw that his son was badly hurt.

The funeral services will be conducted with full military honors. Byrne was a great favorite at West Point. There was nothing unreal about the tears that flowed from many eyes when his death was announced.

Football claimed two victims in addition to Byrne, Saturday, and another player is on the verge of death.

Roy Spuyck, 19 years old, a player on the second eleven at Haskell university and an Indian, dove headlong into a scrimmage. He slipped and landed on his head. His skull was fractured and he never regained consciousness.

ASTERING GREAT FOREST PROBLEMS

MASTERED by the forest service of one of the greatest practical forest problems ever undertaken by any government is advancing space. Briefly stated, that problem is to develop to its highest usefulness a total area of 168,000,000 acres of wild lands, mainly mountain wilderness, but closely related to the welfare of the entire country.

From an administrative standpoint the most striking fact of the year was the remarkable increase which took place in the actual use of the forests that will be brought out by the following statement:

	Per Cent.
increase in area.....	11
increase in number of timber sales.....	236
increase in amount of timber cut.....	102
increase in number of free-timber permits.....	76
increase in number of special-use permits.....	67
increase in number of grazing permits.....	11

Regarded as property, the national forests justify general expenditures for their protection and improvement. At $2 per thousand feet stumpage the merchantable timber alone forms, just as it stands, an asset worth something like $800,000,000, while the very moderate grazing charge yielded the government last year an income of nearly $1,000,000. It is a safe prediction that within 20 years the forests will bring in from the sale of timber alone an annual net income of as many millions of dollars.

An average wood production of 30 cubic feet to the acre of commercial forest is a moderate estimate of what will ultimately be obtained under management. The hundred million acres of such forest would allow to be cut each year over 3,000,000,000 cubic feet, or over 20,000,000,000 to 25,000,000,000 board feet, without diminution of the supply. This is but a fraction of the country's consumption of wood.

ever, preferred to large sales, and large sales which would tend to expose the consumer to monopoly prices are uniformly refused. Requests made by prospective bidders for the advertising of over $2,400,000 worth of timber were refused during the past year.

One result of this policy has been to bring about a decline in the average price of the stumpage sold. In general higher prices are obtainable through large than through small sales. The most important consideration in making sales of timber, however, is not the price obtainable, but the serving of the public interest. Obviously, to sell timber in quantity at less

DISTRIBUTING PRAIRIE-DOG POISON ON THE RANGES

Wore it wise to so, the receipts from the forests could very easily be made not only to keep pace with the expenditures, but to return to the government the entire cost of maintaining the forest service. Private owners of grazing lands in the same regions ask and receive a very much higher return per head of stock for the use of their lands than does the forest service. The national forests, which contain one-fifth of the standing merchantable timber in the country, furnished last year about 1.3 per cent. of its lumber cut, resulting in the removal from the forests of about one-eighth of one per cent. of the stand. Of this comparatively insignificant cut, one-fourth was not sold, but was given to home-builders and communities; yet the sales brought in nearly $900,000. If the chief object of the forests were to produce immediate income, the amount received could be multiplied several times. There is actually going to waste in the woods each year, through decay and other natural causes, from five to ten times the amount of timber now being cut.

With an adequate force of forest officers available much of this waste might be prevented. Timber sales involve, for marking, scaling and supervising the work, a cost to the government of about 30 cents per thousand feet, and the amount sold cannot be much increased without an increased appropriation. There is also the waste of the productive power of the forest, which cannot be brought into full play until the mature trees have been removed to make room for a growing crop.

Most of the forest timber is beyond reach, unless heavy outlays are made to obtain means of transportation. Such timber can be sold only to those who command large resources of capital, and even then only at a relatively low price. On the other hand, where the demand for the timber is good and competition for its purchase fairly brisk, it is generally necessary to go slowly because of the certainty of future requirements. In short, the question of the timber that can safely or wisely be sold is a local one. The fact that timber is rotting in the woods in distant regions will not help communities which find their home supply exhausted.

For these reasons the sales of national forest timber are carefully guarded. The amount of national forest timber sold during the year was slightly over 388,000,000 feet, or not much over one-third the amount sold the previous year. The falling off was directly due to the refusal to make large sales. Under such sales the actual cutting is allowed to extend over several years. The amount of timber cut and paid for during the year, however, more than doubled the cut of the previous year, with a total of not quite 393,000,000 feet. The receipts from timber sales were about $850,000, as against not quite $670,000 for the previous year. In addition there was cut under free use over 130,000,000 feet of timber, valued at about $170,000.

The timber lands of the west, outside of the national forests, are mainly in strong hands. Were the national forest timber offered on the market to every purchaser, the main scene of western lumbering would be quickly shifted to the public holdings. It is sometimes asserted that the creation of the national forests has played into the hands of monopolists of timber lands. It was, on the contrary, an eleventh-hour halting of the process which would have made the hold obtainable by such a monopoly complete. To permit the owners of standing timber to preserve their stumpage intact while supplying their business needs through purchase from the government would simply invite the hoarding of private timber for further high prices, while the public supply would be disposed of without an adequate return.

Under the timber-sale policy now in force both the present and the future interests of the consumer are borne in mind. The needs of those dependent on the forests are supplied up to the limit set by the power of the region to maintain a steady yield. It is recognized, also, that the removal of mature timber to make room for a new and growing crop is the only way by which the forests can be put to work. Small sales are, how-an enlarged timber supply. Broadcast sowings were made during the year in 27 forests, in eight states, to test by experiment the extent to which reforestation may be hoped for through the use of this method. The national forest nurseries, in which are being grown stock for transplanting, were enlarged and about 700,000 trees were planted. Over 300,000 trees will be ready for planting in 1909.

The beneficial results of regulated grazing, shown in a decided betterment of much of the national forest range, made it possible to increase the allotment of stock on a number of the older forests. At the same time investigations in range improvement through re-seeding, new methods of handling stock, the eradication of poisonous plants and the destruction of prairie dogs brought important progress toward still better future use of the forests by stockmen. The development of watering places is another means that is being pursued to the same end, while the killing of predatory wild animals by forest service hunters saved the stockmen losses probably greater than the entire amount paid in grazing fees. This amount was over $960,000. Through the enforcement of quarantine regulations and the distribution of blackleg vaccine other losses from disease were prevented.

Through co-operation with private owners investigations in forest management and forest planting were continued. It was possible to make field examinations of only about one-fifth of the total acreage for which advice concerning forest management was sought. Every tract of land on which the advice of the service is applied becomes a valuable experiment in practical forestry. The total area for which examinations have been made since co-operation was first offered is nearly 11,

Reforestation of large areas of the national forest is called for primarily in the interest of the water supply of the west, but also, though less pressing, for the sake of to the attention of the public the knowledge gathered for the use of the public was vigorously prosecuted.

Col. Ed Little is said to be the author of this story of how Funston swam the Bag-Bag.

One of the brave fellows in the Twentieth Kansas was Sergt. Oswald, a great big fellow and somewhat of a favorite of Col. Funston's. The regiment had reached the bank of the river and had halted, out of danger. Then this dialogue is said to have ensued:

Col. Funston: "Sergt. Oswald, go and ascertain the depth of the river below."

The sergeant saluted and replied: "Very well, sir," and proceeded into the water.

"How deep is the water, Sergt. Oswald?" asked the general.

"Six inches, Col. Funston," replied the sergeant.

Funston: "Advance, Sergt. Oswald," and the sergeant advanced.

Funston: "Halt, Sergt. Oswald; how deep is the river?"

Oswald: "Eleven inches, Col. Funston."

"Advance, Sergt. Oswald," and the sergeant advanced.

"How deep now, Sergt. Oswald?"

"Seven inches, Col. Funston."

Funston (rising to his feet with his sword in hand): "We'll swim er, by heck!"—Kansas City Times.

AN AMERICAN ELM

The modern police "sweatbox," for which there is no warrant, either ay or ecclesiastical, replaces the rack, which passed out of use in England soon after the assassination of that witty and wicked profligate, the duke of Buckingham, at Portsmouth, by John Felton. This noted assassination occurred on Saturday, August 23, 1628.

Felton underwent several examinations, always asserting that he had no accomplices, and when the earl of Dorset threatened in the king's name to examine him on the rack he said: "I do again affirm, upon my salvation, that my purpose was known to no man living; and more than I have said before I cannot. But if it be his majesty's pleasure, I am ready to suffer whatever his majesty will have inflicted upon me. Yet this I must tell you, by the way, that if I be put upon the rack, I will accuse you, my lord Dorset, and none but yourself."

This bold resolve astounded the examiners. They hesitated and consulted the judges, who unanimously replied that "torture was not justifiable under the laws of England."

"Graustark."

"Graustark," dramatized from the novel of George Barr McCutcheon, author of "Brewster's Millions," with an excellent company of New York players, and an elaborate production of scenic and electrical effects and picturesque costumes will be the offering at the New Whitney theatre, Ann Arbor, Thursday, November 11. This attraction comes after being acclaimed in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and Pittsburgh, to be the dramatic sensation of the time. In the latter city the police were called to clear the streets in front of the theatre so great was the crowd of people trying to buy tickets. The local management, hoping to avoid a case of this kind, will endeavor to have patrons of the theatre secure their seats well in advance.

It would be folly to dwell at length on the story, for who has not read McCutcheon's book? And where can you find a reader who is not familiar with "Graustark" with its many thrilling incidents, the charm of its love episodes and its vein of exquisite humor. To faithfully reproduce the scenes in and around the principality of "Graustark," a special crew of expert stage mechanics are carried to manipulate the massive and intricate devices utilized in this realistic masterpiece of stagecraft.

Read what a Chelsea citizen says:

Mrs. S. J. Trouten, McKinley St., Chelsea, Mich., says: "I suffered a great deal from backache and I had acute pains through my kidneys. Headaches and dizzy spells were common and the kidney secretions caused me considerable annoyance by their frequency in passage. I tried a number of remedies, but found no relief until I commenced taking Doan's Kidney Pills. The contents of one box removed the backache and also strengthened my kidneys. I am pleased to give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement."

costing double the price and you will find it much superior both in durability and in finish.

We know Suesine—no occasion for guessing—we know it is just the prettiest, daintiest, loveliest material you will find, yes, even if you were to pay double the price asked for Suesine.

Quality above the average for the price—beauty which attracts the more one sees it—and a durability of finish which assures long service.

Especially pretty for young girls—for bridesmaids' frocks—for children's wear—for party gowns, as well as for women's dresses and for waists.

No matter what you are told and no matter who tells it, there is no genuine Suesine Silk unless it bears the Suesine name on edge of cloth.

The very fact that every yard of Suesine Silk carries that name means a great deal to you. It means that if Suesine Silk disappoints you or any of your friends, you can always avoid Suesine very easily, ever afterwards. The fact that the manufacturers do mark Suesine Silk proves they are certain that no one will be disappointed.

See that your next dress, or waist, is made of Suesine.

Chat on Interesting Topics of Many Kinds, by a Recognized Authority

A Harvest Home Party.

In Sweden they make a ceremony of bringing in the last sheaf of wheat signifying that the "summer is over and the harvest ended." With this in mind, a hostess who is noted for her originality issued invitations for a "Harvest Home" party at her place in the country. It is now quite the thing not to return to town until the first of November, so the beautiful foliage and the glories of autumn are enjoyed to the full. At this party, which was given last year, too late to get in the department owing to the fact that it must be made up several weeks in advance, the house and spacious verandas were literally covered with gorgeous oak and maple leaves, as was the lower floor of the great barn where dancing took place at eight o'clock. The hours were from five to ten, which just permitted the making of trains to and from the city.

A novel feature was the playing of the band composed of the workmen on the place. They were mostly Germans, and as each department had its own foreman with helpers the organization was quite complete as well as unique. They played for the dancing, and to a most stirring march they led the gay party to the last sheaf of wheat in the field. It was laid in the pony cart belonging to the ten-year-old daughter of the house, who drove the prettily decorated pony into the barn, where the sheaf was placed in the middle of the cleanly swept floor and the hostess paid a tribute to Ceres, a health being drunk in mulled cider made on the place and served by the hostess. After a supper of fried chicken, boiled ham, hot muffins, rice and tomatoes cooked together with shrimp, which the colored cook said was "Jumbalaya," tea, coffee, Macdoine of vegetable, salad and pumpkin pie, the dancing began. After a few informal dances there was what the hostess called a "Farmers' cotillon," because all the figures pertained to work on the farm, and the favors consisted of big straw hats, sunbonnets, whips, milking stools, tin pails, spades, rakes, hoes, etc. It was all very original and pretty. Cider frappe was on hand for the dancers.

A Geographical Party.

This was given by a gay party of young people and all pronounced it a success. The invitations had the usual day, date and hour, with the fingle given, which explained a wee bit the character of the affair, or, as a youth aptly expressed it, "what you were up against."

All guests who want to win a prize should on the atlas gaze their eyes. Brush up their knowledge, cram their brains.

With abbreviated states: With maps of many a foreign clime, And rivers they must put in rhyme.

The first stunt was to read the following "stately story" and fill in the blanks with the abbreviations of the name of a state. The story here has the blanks correctly filled for the benefit of the hostess.

A handsome (Md.) fell in love with a (Miss.) whom he attended when she was (Ill.), and who was sweeter than any flower of the (Del.). He asked her hand in marriage, but her (Pa.) wished her to wed his war time friend, the (Col.). who was rich, but who looked as if he had come out of the (Ark.). So he put the doctor off by saying he would (Conn.) the matter (Ore.). But the lover pressed him, and said: "(Wyo.) will (U.) not give (Me.) an answer?" The father, being a Yankee, answered his question by asking another, "(Kan.) you support a wife?" and added bluntly that he feared his daughter would have to (Wash.) for her living, should she marry so poor a man. The young man replied: "Although I am poor, (Io.) No man, and I (Wis.) I could support my wife, (R. I.) would not marry." When he met his sweetheart next morning at early (Mass.) and told her of the interview, she said: "(La.) I could love you no (Mo.) had you all the wealth of (Ind.)." So they were married at (Tenn.) o'clock and the husband got (Ariz.) in his profession, and there is (O.) to keep them from being happy.

After this came a map-drawing contest. The guests were handed large sheets of paper with pencils and told to draw any country they chose, with a few principal rivers, mountains and cities; to write their names and the name of the country on the back and pin the paper on the wall. Then all had to guess what was what. The one who guessed the most correctly received a prize. Slips of paper were then passed containing the names of two rivers, which were to be woven into a rhyme. The results were read aloud and were very amusing. Floating island and small sponge cakes were served. The prizes were interesting foreign prints framed in plain wooden mouldings.

The Best Food for Workers.

The best food for those who work with hand or brain is never high priced.

The best example of this is found in Quaker Oats. It stands at the top among foods that supply nourishment and vigor, without taxing the digestion, and yet it is the least expensive food one can eat.

This great food value and low cost make it an ideal food for families who want to get the greatest good from what they eat.

Laborers, factory or farm hands, fed plentifully on Quaker Oats will work better and with less fatigue than if fed on almost any other kind of food. All of these facts were proved and very interesting information about human foods were gathered by Professor Fisher of Yale University in 1908. In addition to the regular package Quaker Oats is packed in large sized family packages either with or without china dishes.

SHOWED HIS HERO WORSHIP

Surely Nothing Wrong Could Go Forth from Lips That Were His Veneration.

Allen has a strong admiration for soldiers. He seldom misses a military parade and his childish fancy has so idealized the boys in blue that he considers them little short of perfection.

Not long ago his mother took him to see an elderly friend of hers—a sweet-faced, silver-haired woman, who is the widow of a veteran of the civil war. Before arriving at the house Mrs. Parker told Allen this bit of her friend's history, and consequently the boy accorded this beautiful woman the most reverent attention.

In discussing a certain current subject of literary interest the two women had a mild difference of opinion, and Allen's regard for brass buttons would not long permit him to listen in silence.

"Mamma," he asked in gently reproachful tones after he had fidgeted a moment in his chair, "don't you think a soldier's wife ought to know?"

Texas Bill—I'm no major; I'm a minor.

He Forgot Something.

"Is that all you have to say to me?" she queried, looking off into space.

"Great heavens, girl," said he, abashed, "what more can I say? Haven't I told you that I worship the very ground you walk on? Haven't I offered you every iota of my worldly possessions? Haven't I said that you would never want for anything, that your relatives could come and stay as long as they wished, that I would work my fingers bare for you, and that I would devote my entire existence to you?"

"Oh, yes, you said all that," she replied, wearily, "but—"

"But what?" he asked, tremulously.

"You—your didn't say right out and out 'I love you,' and that's what I wanted to hear most of all."

Anti-Climax.

"First rate."

"Pigs doin' well?"

"Fine."

"That puny colt come 'round all right?"

"He sure did."

"Glad to hear things is so likely, Bill. How's your wife?"—Washington Herald.

Heartless Parent Again.

Beautiful Girl—Gardener, don't make a flower bed there. It will spoil our croquet ground."

Gardener—Can't help it, miss. Them's my orders. Your father says he is going to have this garden devoted to horticulture, not husbandry.

THE DIFFERENCE

Coffee Usually Means Sickness, But Postum Always Means Health.

Those who have never tried the experiment of leaving off coffee and drinking Postum in its place and in this way regaining health and happiness can learn much from the experience of others who have made the trial.

One who knows says: "I drank coffee for breakfast every morning until I had terrible attacks of indigestion producing days of discomfort and nights of sleeplessness. I tried to give up the use of coffee entirely, but found it hard to go from hot coffee to a glass of water. Then I tried Postum.

"It was good and the effect was so pleasant that I soon learned to love it and have used it for several years. I improved immediately after I left off coffee and took on Postum and am now entirely cured of my indigestion and other troubles all of which were due to coffee. I am now well and contented and all because I changed from coffee to Postum.

"Postum is much easier to make right every time than coffee, for it is so even and always reliable. We never use coffee now in our family. We use Postum, and are always well."

"There's a reason" and it is proved by trial.

SILO IS PERMANENT FACTOR IN HUSBANDRY

Time Not Far Distant When Stock Raisers as Well as Dairymen Will Depend on It Entirely for Feed—By Prof. A. S. Glover.

Showing How to Start Silo on Foundation.

It is more than a quarter of a century since the American farmer began to can some of his green crops in a vessel, called a silo. There has been much written and a great deal of experimenting done to prove the feasibility of preserving some of our green food in this manner. There is no longer any question that this method is one of the best as well as the cheapest ways we have of storing some of our green crops.

In the beginning many ill-constructed silos were built and extravagant claims were made for their use. In many instances the silage was very poor in quality, which led many thoughtful and conservative people to condemn the silo.

Since we have learned to fill them properly the prejudice and suspicion are fast disappearing and silos are being built in every part of the country where livestock is kept. The silo has become a permanent factor in American husbandry and the stock raisers, as well as the dairymen, will depend largely on the contents of the silo for green feed.

The progressive dairymen have long realized the value of succulent food for their cows, and they have been using silos for many years. It is the more conservative farmers who are now rapidly becoming converted to the use of silage and are making inquiries in regard to the building of silos and many other questions pertaining to this method of preserving feed. These questions have led the writer to prepare these notes on the silo and silage.

It is a settled question that the silo should be built round, for in a building of this shape the silage is best preserved. In a round structure the contents settle more evenly than in any other shaped building, and if the corn is properly put into the silo the material is nearly as good next to the wall as it is in the center.

It is not always so with the square structure the silage in the corners of a square building is apt to be very poor in quality and often unfit for feed.

Since the round building is the best form to construct the next question to consider is what kind of a round silo should be built? The stave silo, which is manufactured by a number of firms, makes a very satisfactory building and one that lasts for many years. Farmers who have built the stave silos are well pleased with them.

It should be borne in mind that a silo is nothing more or less than a large air-tight vessel in which feed is "canned" for future use. The size of the silo depends upon the number of animals that are to be fed from it.

In the main it should be tall and slim. It is difficult to build a silo too high, but it is easy to build it too large in diameter. The diameter should be of that size to allow at least a two-inch layer of silage to be fed each day from the top surface. If the silage is exposed too long to the air it will spoil, the same as canned fruit or vegetables. The average feed of silage is about 40 pounds a day and the silo for winter feeding should hold enough to feed the stock for 200 days.

The following table gives the dimensions the silo should be built for a given number of animals and the number of days that it will feed them; it also gives the approximate capacity of each size and the average number of acres of corn it will take to fill the silo:

Number of animals to be fed from the silo for in:	Approximate capacity, tons	Number of acres of corn to fill the silo
20 days.....14	28	8 to 9
25 to 30.....16	32	9 to 10
30 to 35.....18	36	10 to 12
35 to 40.....20	40	12 to 14
40 to 45.....22	44	14 to 17
45 to 50.....24	48	16 to 19
50 to 60.....28	56	18 to 22
60 to 70.....32	64	22 to 25

A silo should never be built over 20 feet in diameter. If it is necessary to have more material to feed it is better to build two small receptacles than one larger than 20 feet in diameter. It involves considerable more labor to handle silage in a very large structure than in one of reasonable size. Many farmers prefer to have two silos. They feed from one during the winter and have the contents of the other for midsummer's feeding.

The silo should never be built in the barn. Silage is more or less a fermented product and must be fed with care, otherwise the milk may become tainted by its use. Barns that contain a silage always bear the odor of the silage, and this should be avoided if high-grade milk is to be produced.

A circular foundation of stone, brick or gravel is constructed from two to three feet above the ground to protect the timbers from moisture. The wall is built from 14 to 20 inches thick, depending upon the nature of the soil and the size of the silo to be built. The top of the wall should be beveled outward, which permits the water to flow away very quickly from the base of the building.

SOY BEANS A GOOD CROP

Hogs Take Very Kindly to This Plant and Eat Beans Readily—Flesh Former—By Prof. H. A. Moore.

Soy beans were first grown at the Wisconsin experiment station in 1899, and each year since the acreage and the number of varieties tested have been increased.

The tests at this station have been made for the purpose of determining their value as a forage plant and of finding out which varieties, if any, were adapted to our soil and climate.

Twenty-nine varieties have been on trial. Of these the Michigan green seems especially adapted to be grown with corn for silage. This is a medium early variety and is noted for its height and great growth of foliage.

The stems are strong and it usually stands erect so that it can be harvested nicely with the corn binder, or if grown alone can be cut to advantage with a mower.

If grown for seed or pasture purposes the soy bean should be sown in drills about 30 inches apart. Where a small acreage is desired a hand drill can be used, but where a large quantity is planted a grain drill can be used by stopping some of the intervening spouts so as to have the soy beans the proper distance apart.

A corn planter can be used to advantage and the seed sown the usual distance allowed for corn, or by doubling put them one-half the distance apart.

Where the greater distance is allowed between the rows the seed should be sown about twice as thick in the row.

If the desire is to cut for hay, sow broadcast with seeder or by hand. Where sown in drills about one-half bushel of seed should be used per acre, and if sown broadcast about one bushel.

The soy bean can be harvested to advantage by being pastured off with hogs and it seems that this will be one of its principal uses in the future, as it is high in protein and a great flesh former.

Hogs take very kindly to this plant and eat the beans readily. By planting a few acres of the early varieties each year a farmer can not only renew the fertility of the soil, but have an abundance of feed for fitting his hogs for the fall market.

Cleanliness in Dairy.

No matter what time of the year it is, too much cannot be said in favor of cleanliness in the dairy. Many persons think that in summer time when the cows do not sleep in the filthy lot it is not necessary to wash the udder before each milking. This is a mistaken idea.

Pasturing Hogs on Alfalfa.

In pasturing hogs on alfalfa it is better to provide more pasture than the hogs need. Then cut what is left for hay, just as though it had not been used for pasture. Cutting gives it a fresh start, and the field produces more pasture than it would if these patches were allowed to mature.

Time for Churning.

After cream becomes sour the more ripening the more it deprecates. The best time for churning is just before acidity becomes apparent.

MUSIC IN THE CHURCH BELL

Modern Tendency to Do Away with This Summons to Worship a Fact to Be Regretted.

Modern innovations are in most cases of a character to win and deserve approval; but in the list of desirable changes from the old customs cannot be reckoned the abolition of the church bell. Though the silvery chimes of the "church-going bell" may have grated on the sensitive nerves of the Sunday morning sleeper, it may be asserted, without fear of contradiction, that to the great majority of city and village residents the abolition of the time-honored custom of ringing the bell as a notification to churchgoers that the hour for worship has arrived is a genuine cause for regret. Don't you remember back there in the springtime of your life, back in the little country village, what a chord of sympathy was touched as the ringing strokes of the rusty clapper resounded through the Sabbath stillness?

Even if you were a "bad boy" and were not attracted to the little white, slender-spired building on the knoll near the center of the village, didn't you lie out on one of the sunny banks on the outskirts and listen, as to real music, to the clanging reverberations? When you came to the city, don't you remember how the Sunday morning church bell recalled the old days and the country with its sweetness and naturalness, and how you listened in a sort of ecstasy long after the last tones had died away on the smoky air, longing for more? Long has the church bell been a part of our most cherished institutions. Its tones warned the thrifty burghers of old New York of danger and helped to build civilization on the western continent. It rang out its patriotic warning from famous North church and other historic edifices on more than one occasion and called the defenders of liberty to arms against the oppressor human rights. From the pine-crowned hills of Maine to the monastery walls of the far southwest, its far-reaching tones have urged to prayer and to battle.—Buffalo Inquirer.

Moorish Indifference to Pain.

The atrocities of Mulai Hafid, the sultan of Morocco, towards the prisoners taken in the fight with El Roghi (the pretender) have lost him the services of Kaid Belton, the Englishman appointed to the command of the Moorish troops 16 months ago. The sultan set great store by Kaid Belton and tried to make him reconsider his decision to resign, but the latter declined to remain. In an interview recently Kaid Belton said it was impossible for him to acquiesce in the inhuman methods of Mulai Hafid. "On the last official parade which I attended in Fez," he said, "93 human heads were held up before the sultan on the ends of rifles. Later in the same day 20 of El Roghi's officers had their right hands cut off at the wrist. The hands were taken to Mulai Hafid on a tray, as a proof that his orders had been carried out. The stumps when the hands are cut off are steeped in a cauldron of boiling oil—not, you understand, by way of further torture, but simply to stop the bleeding. Well, I never heard so much as a whimper from a single one of those men. That in itself was hardihood enough; but that is not all. One prisoner, having stretched out his right arm, and suffered the mutilation, walked over to the cauldron of oil, which was placed on a fire. The man had a cigarette between his lips, and while the stump of his arm was plunged in the boiling liquid he calmly stooped and lighted his cigarette at the flames. Later on 300 more heads were brought in."

A New Note in Weddings.

Edith Acworth, a wealthy young woman of Malvern, England, has struck a new note in weddings. She became a bride the other day of a Calcutta merchant, and her wedding was designed after paintings by Romney. The Romney wedding interested the women of all England and a natural development has been the announcement of "Reynolds weddings," "Whistler weddings," and, of course, "Gainsborough weddings." The costumes of Miss Acworth and her six bridesmaids were from paintings in the British National gallery. The gown worn by the bride was an exact copy of a Romney painting of her great-grand-aunt. Two boys wore Romney page uniforms, and two baby girls in quaint little dresses looked as if they had stepped straight out of a Romney canvas. Another Romney touch was given by rose-pink sashes for the bridesmaids.

Saw There Was Money in It.

According to the Washington Star, Commissioner of Immigration Robert Watchorn said recently of an immigrant:

"He was a bad case. He was as ignorant of government as the two Polish policemen were. Two new policemen were once put on the Warsaw force. They did good work, they arrested a lot of people, then suddenly they resigned."

"Why are you resigning?" the superintendent asked.

"The older of the two men answered, respectfully:

"We are going to start a police station of our own, sir. Boris here will make the arrests, and I will do the fining."

"Well, my little man, what are you crying for?"

"My motor—bee-hoo—has broken down, and I've got to walk to school—bee-hoo!"—Puck.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Ky.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has certainly done me a world of good and I cannot praise it enough. I suffered from irregularities, dizziness, nervousness, and a severe female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored me to perfect health and kept me from the operating table. I will never be without this medicine in the house."—Mrs. SAM'L LEE, 3628 Fourth St., Louisville, Ky.

Another Operation Avoided. Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R. F. D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

The Rare Gift of Courtesy.

Courtesy includes not merely social kinness, graces of speech, absence of rudeness, but honorable treatment of business associates and of all the fellow citizens with whom a man of affairs may have business to transact. It is not American to keep one citizen waiting all day at the door because he is poor, and to grant another citizen an interview because it is believed he is rich. Wisdom is not confined in a purse, and frequently much wisdom may be learned from a poor man.

A Long-Panther.

Mary, aged 14, was found one day by an older sister sobbing and crying. "What is the matter?" she asked, with great concern.

"Three boys have asked me to go to the dance to-night," was the unexpected reply.

"Well, my dear child, certainly that is not such a terrible misfortune."

"Yes; but I told the first one I would go with him, and the last one was a long-panther."—Harper's.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with a scene at a box party. Miss Henrietta Winstanley, sister of Bishop Winstanley, overheard Barbara Anson propose to Barbara Hemmings, whose brother Dan was in his employ. Dan was one of the town's popular young men. He showed some nervousness when Attorney Tom Twining told him that Barbara refused Anson's proposal. Twining refused to prosecute. Barbara persuaded Anson to postpone starting prosecution. Twining learned of the engagement of Anson and Barbara. He congratulated both. He visited Miss Hemmings and found her almost in tears. He told her he had loved her, but feared prematurely announcing his affection. By actions alone she told him she reciprocated. Mrs. Anson Dines, wealthy widow, proposed a marriage by proxy with Bishop Winstanley. The bishop had been paying attention to Miss Streeter. Dan consulted Twining, saying his sister was determined to marry Anson, declaring she actually loved the banker, though he could not help believing she was making a sacrifice to save him from jail. Miss Winstanley, finding a pressed rose in the bishop's boutonniere, sent a love affair. Mrs. Dines sailed for America. Miss Winstanley informed Twining that Mrs. Dines was intent upon stopping the marriage of Barbara Anson. Mrs. Dines arrived and Anson immediately set about to sail with Barbara for Europe the following day. In order, it seemed, to avoid Mrs. Dines. Mrs. Dines confronted Anson with evidence of his peculations while attorney for the late Mr. Dines.

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

"I shall not intrude upon you further," she said; "but I desire you to understand that I am prepared to do all that I say I will do in case you do not yield to my stipulation. I have with me the papers which leave no room for doubt as to your guilt. Shall I give them to Mr. Twining, as your attorney?"

"I am the attorney of the company of which Mr. Anson is the president, madam," I said; "but in no case—"

"It is not worth while," Anson interrupted.

Mrs. Dines bowed. "My own attorney, Mr. Dean, has examined the papers, and he will tell you—"

"If he has not already done so," Miss Winstanley ventured, as her one little shot.

"That I am able to carry out my plans," Mrs. Dines finished. "But I think you will see the wisdom in following the less aggressive course."

"You leave me no choice in the matter," he said bitterly. "I am the under dog in the fight."

"The under dog is often to blame for the fight," she said, tersely.

She approached the door, and I held it open for her.

"Do you sail alone by the Deutschland, Mr. Anson?" she asked, turning. He smiled grimly.

"I shall sail alone," he said.

CHAPTER XI.

Once in the corridor Mrs. Dines put out an unsteady hand to her friend.

"My tablets, Henrietta. It is so annoying to be weak."

"Weak!" echoed Miss Winstanley. "You were magnificent!" She clicked open her bag and produced a small white box, whose lid she quickly slipped, extending it to the suffering lady, while I begged them to come into my office until Mrs. Dines had rested and felt a little recovered. But Mrs. Dines declined.

"We must go to Barbara at once," she said. "Why, the poor child is probably getting into her wedding gown at this minute. Think of it! Anson will go to her, of course, with some explanation; but she must have enough of the truth from us to prevent any further mistake."

"And oh, the blessed relief it will be to her!" breathed Miss Winstanley.

"You forget that she may love him," I suggested.

Mrs. Dines spun round on me at that like a huge, laboriously spinning top.

"You think that possible? Gracious heaven, I hope not! I came to bring her happiness, not to break her heart."

"You need have no fear as to that," Miss Winstanley hastened, assuringly. "You have done her a service beyond words. You see, she has been very clever in carrying forward her part of the hideous program which she mapped out, and her cleverness has deceived Mr. Twining. I am willing to stake everything I have that she doesn't love Anson, and that she does—"

She paused, her significant glance full upon me.

Mrs. Dines lifted her brows, and, comprehending suddenly, held out her hand to me with gratifying and unexpected warmth.

"I hope Henrietta is right, Mr. Twining," she said; "I do indeed."

"You cannot hope it as I do," I replied earnestly; "but I have none of her assurance, and a great many doubts."

"We shall see," declared Miss Winstanley blithely.

We went down to the carriage in silence. There we found the Winstanley coachman about to ascend with a telegram which a house servant had just brought, knowing his mistress was to make her first visit to Anson and hoping to find her there. She climbed into the carriage, opened the message, "read it, went so white I was sure she was going to faint, and held it out to me without a word."

I read it with amazement and a conscience that gave me some decided twinges.

"Married!" I exclaimed. "Bishop Winstanley married! And to the Stinnet!"

"What!" cried Mrs. Dines; "did I scare him like that?"

Her pallor gave way to a rush of color, and, leaning back, she laughed till her eyes fairly brimmed with tears. There was no attitudinizing about it; she was simply overcome with the humor of the situation, and I hoped earnestly that the bishop's sister would gradually yield herself to it also. At present she showed no signs of it.

"Get in," she said to me; "we can't discuss it here."

Obedient, we rolled decorously off. Mrs. Dines' hand went out and covered her friend's.

"My dear, can you ever forgive me for precipitating such a thing as this?" she asked anxiously.

Miss Winstanley shook her head.

"You—'you didn't do it,'" she murmured; "he has been—been carrying pressed roses; I suppose any one else would have known what that meant, but I—dear heaven, how could I believe such a thing?" she wailed. "And to elope—oh, Hannah, think of it, Charles to elope!"

Mrs. Dines' laugh rumbled forth so contagiously that to save me I could not help echoing it softly.

"That's just what I am thinking of, dear," she said. "To think of his imagining that he had to fly from poor me like that! It's so funny! Oh, do try to see how very funny it is, Henrietta," and she sobbed in her enjoyment of the affair.

"It is absurd and unforgivable," said Miss Winstanley austerely.

The large hand tightened over hers, and Mrs. Dines' tones became serious.

"You are not to hold it against him. Promise me that. Take it out of me, but don't spoil his happiness by censoring him. I'm the one to be punished."

"Oh, by no means. You greatly misjudge her," Mrs. Dines contended. "She is calm, I grant you, but a bishop's wife should be calm. No, really, since your brother wouldn't have me, I don't know where he could have done better. Besides, she's prodigious rich, you know. What! You didn't know? Oh, yes, immensely so. My poor little dot looks small beside hers. She doesn't talk about it, but—"

"Does she talk about anything?" I inquired.

Mrs. Dines shot me an amused glance over her friend's head.

"Silence is an excellent qualification for a bishop's wife, I'm sure, Mr. Twining; then she isn't always getting herself and the diocese into trouble. Now, see here, Henrietta, considering her looks and her reserve and her money, surely you might forgive her for letting your brother run off with her."

"It's very good of you to try to cheer me up," Miss Winstanley responded, vaguely.

"And it's downright foolish of you to hold out against so beautiful an arrangement. To my mind this is as admirable a match all round as I have known of in a very long time. So do cheer up and be glad. Don't you agree with me, Mr. Twining?"

"Most heartily, as Miss Winstanley knows," said I.

"That little lady was not, however, ready to yield herself at once to the sudden situation."

"To run away!" she moaned; "at Charles' age!"

"But don't you see that it's a great compliment to me?" smiled Mrs. Dines. "Let me get that much out of it, won't you? It shows how much confidence he has in my getting what I want. You see, he didn't know what brought me to America, and, following on the heels of my proposal to him, it really seemed, you know, that I was coming to marry him, whether or no. You can see for yourself how the poor dear man must have felt. Did he imagine, I wonder, that if everything else failed I should kidnap him? Well, I forgive him even that. And I want you to forgive him, Henrietta. You must. That's a good, sensible sister. And now it's quite time we came back to our mutton. Tell the man to drive us to the Hemmings, will you, Mr. Twining? If you don't feel up to going in, Henrietta, I'll go alone, but one of us must certainly see Barbara at once."

"Then you may let me down at the Fifteenth street corner of the Square," said I. "I'll get along back to the office."

As the carriage stopped, Miss Winstanley bent forward, looking eagerly after a fast-disappearing figure.

"Isn't that Dan?" she cried. "Can you overtake me? He is the one to take her the word."

I sprang out and caught up with him within the block, although he was swinging along at an uncomfortably brisk gait.

"On your way to the house, are you?" he asked when he saw me. "It must be pretty nearly time for the wedding. I was afraid I couldn't make it in time, but I caught a flyer within the hour after I had Barbara's message."

"Miss Winstanley wants you," I said, nodding to the carriage, that had turned and was bringing up to the curb.

He was surprised to see Mrs. Dines, and greeted her with a boyish affection that must have warmed her heart.

"All on the way to the wedding?" he inquired after he had shaken hands.

"There is to be no wedding, Dan," Miss Winstanley said, gently.

He had paled before she could explain.

"Nothing's wrong with Barbara," he asked, quickly.

"No, no; everything is just coming right for her. Get in"—with a glance toward the coachman. "We are driving to the house now, and Mrs. Dines will explain to you. Then you must tell Barbara what is to be told. We'll wait outside, and if she wants us we'll come right in. If not you must tell us, and we'll go away again. Don't you—will you?"

"I must tell you good-by," I said.

As I started off across the Square, Miss Winstanley called after me that she would send for me later in the day.

But I was too impatient to await her summons, and four o'clock found me at her door. As I turned in at the steps, the door opened and Dan came out, hurrying down and stopping at sight of me to wring my hand. He was beaming. I had not seen him so much like his old self in months, and it did my heart good. Somehow it also seemed to presage well for me. All his buoyancy had returned, and he was once more the charming, irresistible fellow we all loved.

(TO BE CONCLUDED.)

"To Run Away!" She Moaned; "at Charles' Age."

ished, for anybody can see that the hastening is entirely due to me. I suppose if I had any vanity I'd be getting my punishment right now, but, unfortunately, my sense of the humorous outweighs my vanity and I can only—only—oh, Henrietta, for goodness' sake, laugh!"

A faint—a very faint twinkle lit in Miss Winstanley's hurt eyes.

"It is absurd for him to run away from us like this," she said. "For you know, Hannah, I was arrayed with you."

Her friend nodded warmly, laughing and dancing over her face and in and out among the copious chins.

"She is really a charming girl," I put in.

"Who is she, anyway?" asked Mrs. Dines. "To think of my not asking that before!"

"Miss Streeter," said I; "a cousin of Mrs. Jack Anson's."

"Not Cecelia Streeter! You don't tell me! Why, Henrietta, dry your eyes; this match was made in heaven. She was born for the bishopric. Think how she looks the part."

"So I am always reminding Miss Winstanley," I ventured.

"Then that's all she ever does," wailed her sister-in-law miserably.

In Praise of Georgia Grub

Macon Man Waxes Eloquent Over the Excellence of the Eating Common in His Territory.

"Come down in the goober fields of Georgia if you want to know what good eating is," said Mr. James Jackson of Macon, Ga., to a reporter of the Washington Post. "Did you ever eat a possum stuffed with goobers and sweet potatoes, with corn pone and gravy on the side, topped off with ice-cream buttermilk right from the sprig? You haven't, you have missed something," declared Mr. Jackson. "You can talk about your cat-sauvage duck, your terrapin, and your vasa-back, if you think that is the finest of fare here, but wait until you eat what I have described. Or fry a fat turkey, cooked with chestnuts, like one of 'before-ds' war' black 'mamies' can prepare it. The goober country in Georgia is the most prosperous and contented anywhere in the south," continued Mr. Jackson. "The people down there are extraordinarily hospitable, and no stranger traveling through the country can possibly get away from the farmers, who will insist that the traveler stop and stay over night to enjoy some of that celebrated eating. When you come that way, if you ever do, I will show you what sure enough 'grub' is."

An Alluring Prospect.

"So you think you would like to journey in Africa?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox. "I fancy it would be a sweet relief to travel in a country where there are no overworked railway ticket sellers, nor Pullman porters, nor hotel clerks, nor head waiters."

Entertaining Our Friends.

The sensible people who entertain often and simply are those we delight to honor and we know they are not disturbed by an unexpected guest. Have some little surprise when entertaining. It need not be anything elaborate, but just something out of the ordinary. Keep a notebook in which you may write or paste clippings of the odd and unusual, and observe when traveling and store up ideas. There is of course "nothing really new under the sun," but we may be ingenious enough to make things appear so. A cake that is simply delicious, seems elaborate, but is not, has found favor among many. Bake a white cake in a sheet about an inch and a quarter thick. Cut in pieces with a small biscuit cutter; put three pieces together with a cooked frosting between each, and spread around the sides; then roll in shredded coconut. Make the frosting as follows: Wash one-third of a cupful of butter, add one cupful of powdered sugar, gradually, and beat until creamy. Then add one cupful of cream filling which has been cooked. Flavor with vanilla and one and one-half squares of melted chocolate.

Cream Filling for the Above.—Mix seven-eighths of a cupful of sugar with one-third of a cupful of flour, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of salt; add two eggs, slightly beaten, and pour on gradually two cupfuls of scalded milk. Cook 15 minutes in a double boiler, stirring constantly until thick, afterwards occasionally. Cool slightly and flavor with either vanilla or lemon.

A salad that is most appetizing and good to look at is made of a few apples, a stalk or two of celery, a handful of nuts and a few strips of the sweet red and green pepper shredded. Serve with a boiled dressing or mayonnaise on a crisp lettuce leaf. A resourceful woman is able on short notice to serve an appetizing meal which is a gratification to herself and a pleasure to her guest.

ARE to be what you are, and learn to resign with a good grace all that you cannot, and to believe in your own individuality.—Amiel.

Our Simplest Dishes That Are Often Poorly Served.

There are a few dishes that it would seem all cooks should be able to prepare with satisfaction, but when one is served poor bread, poorer toast, badly cooked steak and eggs and such unspeakable coffee, we are appalled at the need for training along these lines. Some of these so-called cooks have not even the consciousness that their cooking is bad. They are like the woman who has a great deal of taste, but it is all bad.

Any one may learn to cook an egg or a steak, and serve a good cup of coffee, but there must be thought and science used in the operation. A good loaf of bread or a crisp piece of toast is not evolved without previous training and practice.

Now, all these things are worth while, and until we bring trained minds and hands to the work, we will have haphazard results. We hear people say every day: "I never have good luck making so and so." There is no such thing as luck in cooking. Things are good because the conditions are favorable, or bad because they were not, and it is our business when cooking to see that conditions are right. One says: "My mother was a splendid cook and she was never so careful about her measurements." We must remember that an experienced cook has a trained eye and it is hardly safe to trust eye measurements until we have years of experience, so when we see her putting in a bit of this and a pinch of that she knows just what she is measuring as we do with a teaspoon leveled with a knife. Then let us not be satisfied until we have raised or standard of cookery in these simplest of our foods and "climbed from better up to best."

Tomato Preserve.

Peel one pound of yellow pear tomatoes, cover with sugar and let stand over night. In the morning pour off the syrup and boil until quite thick; skim, then add tomatoes, ginger, and lemons which have been sliced and the seeds removed. Cook until the tomatoes have a clarified appearance.

Peach Dessert.

Serve one-half of a large peach the hollow of which is filled with whipped cream and then sprinkled with nuts. The peaches should be first sweetened and the cream may be sweetened and flavored with almond.

How to Care for the Child.

Perplexed mother writes: "My child has sneezing fits after the morning sponge bath. What would you advise?" Some mothers give their babies a hypodermic of morphine for sneezing. The sugar wakes this remedy more grateful to the child. Be sure to keep this prophylactic away from father.

STOCKBRIDGE—Philip Cassel died very suddenly at the home of his daughter in Stockbridge Saturday morning of heart disease. He was 84 years of age and resided on his farm south of Stockbridge in the town of Waterloo until four years ago when he sold his farm and moved to Stockbridge. Burial at North Waterloo cemetery.

MANCHESTER—Albert Gumpner, who has been working in a machine shop in Detroit, lost his arm recently by its being caught in a machine. A few years ago, while hunting, his gun was accidentally discharged, the charge passing through his left hand, necessitating its amputation, so that his recent accident seems doubly unfortunate.

HILLSDALE—As the result of discovery of traces of oil on the property of William T. Seidler, one mile east of the city, much interest is felt by many people in the city and in that neighborhood. The well has been sunk to the depth of 80 feet and was primarily planned to afford water for the farm buildings. No steps have yet been taken to develop the well.

ANN ARBOR—Shelley B. Hutchinson of Ypsilanti, has filed a petition in the circuit court asking the court to issue an order releasing him from paying further temporary alimony to his wife, Clara Hutchinson, pending the result of a suit for divorce started by him on February 20 last. Mr. Hutchinson alleges that he has cause to believe his wife, now in California, does not intend to return to Michigan, and that she does not intend to allow him to see their children again. Hutchinson is the man who introduced trading stamps several years ago. He made an enormous fortune in this country and lost a great share of it. Then he went to Australia and made a few more millions in the same trading stamp scheme. This he also lost a great share of. He started the United States Daily in Detroit a few years ago and sunk several tens of thousands.

A PUBLIC BENEFIT

Chelsea People Greatly Interested in the Generous Offer of the L. T. Freeman Co.

The people have already demonstrated that they would rather trust a man who is naturally honest than one who is honest only because he had to be.

The L. T. Freeman Co. have a firmly established reputation for square dealings and sterling honesty. When they told the people that Rexall Remedies are the purest and most dependable medicines that it is possible for modern science to produce, and that they would tell the public what each one of these 300 or more remedies contained, and that they sold Rexall Remedies on their personal guarantee that they would give entire satisfaction or they would not cost the user a single cent, they were believed.

Ever since this announcement the L. T. Freeman Co. store has been largely patronized by people buying Rexall Remedies, all of which proves that this store has the confidence of the people and that honesty is the best policy.

There is no "cure-all" among the Rexall Remedies. There are different and separate medicines, each one devised for a certain human ailment or a class of ailments closely allied. For instance Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are recommended for the positive relief of stomach irritation, indigestion, flatulency and dyspepsia. They are rich in Bismuth-Subnitrate, Pepsin and Carminatives. They are prepared by special process which perfect and enhance the great remedial value of these well-known medicinal agents. This remedy sells for 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00 per package. Every one suffering from stomach disorder should try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, inasmuch as they cost nothing if they do not satisfy.

Remember, the L. T. Freeman Co. store is the only store in Chelsea where these remedies may be obtained, and every one in need of medicine is urged to investigate and take advantage of the frank and generous manner in which they are sold.
