Willis VanRiper Was Killed While Riding Bicycle Wednesday Night

A very serious accident happened Wednesday evening on the south crossing of east Middle and East streets, that resulted in the death of Willis the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur VanRiper.

The boy was returning home from the business part of the village on his bicycle, which was under considerable. headway and he ran into the buggy of Jacob Alber, who stopped his horse within ten feet of the place where the accident occurred.

The accident was witnessed by Chas. E. Stimson, Ed. Hammond and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Hathaway. The street Mr. Alber was driving slowly from the south and the boy going east they were unable to see each other in time to avoid the crash, which resulted fatally.

The bicycle struck the buggy with force enough to throw it into the buggy striking the driver on the shoulder and arm. The boy landed in the highway with force enough it is thought by the physicians to rup ture his stomach.

The injured boy was picked up by Messers, Stimson and Hammond and taken to the residence of the latter, where he died about one hour after the accident. Drs. Gulde and Palmer were called but were unable to save the boy

The accident is a sad blow to the bereaved parents as he was their only child. Last September he met with an accident that confined him to his home for several weeks.

Those who witnessed the accident are unanimous in the opinion that the accident was not the fault of either of the parties and that if the street lights had been turned on it might have been avoided. The funeral will be held Saturday their names were learned. Two westbound cars were already standing on the switch at Hillside when a double-header limited, also from Detroit, came along. The first car, No. 7297, slowed as it entered the switch, but No. 7661 coming along behind, failed to. It crashed into the rear of No. 7297 and pushed that car in turn into the rear end of No. 7783, the rearmost of the two cars which had been standing on the switch.

Caldwell was standing in the vestibule of No. 7297, and the crash threw him with terrific force back against the door, and then, on the rebound, to the ground. All four cars were crowded and Mrs. Caldwell had been riding in the vestibule with her husband as far as Ypsilanti, when room was made for her inside the smoking copartment.

Passengers on No. 7297 assert that no red lights were shown on the rear of the cars standing on the switch, as required, and those on No. 7761 say that the brakes on that car failed to work when the motorman tried to slow down to avoid striking No. 7297.

Game of Ball Here Monday

CHELSEA WON.

The ball game between Chelsea and Clinton, Monday, was pulled off before a small crowd for a holiday, and those who were not present missed seeing a good game, although it was void of spectacular plays.

The Cardinals had the best of the argument after their batfest in the third innings. Clinton scored the first run on two two-baggers, but Jackson soon settled down to business and light was not yet turned on and as struck out two of the next three men, and it was pretty hard for the visitors to score after that, although they got a couple in the fourth and one more in the sixth.

The game started out to be a real exciting one, but when the Cardinals got their batting rally in the third, they practically tucked the game

Had Seen Great City Grow. When Mrs. Bridget Woods, who died a few days ago, went to New York at the age of six years, she found it but a moderately sized town. The city hall was then in the same place where it now stands, but it was considered to be located on the extreme northern bounds of the city, beyond which there was little chance of the houses ever extending. The only Catholic church was St. Peter's, which still stands at the corner of Barclay and Church streets. Mrs. Woods was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, on February 1, 1805, and came to New York in 1811, a year before the second war with Great Britain. Mrs. Woods, who enjoyed the most remarkable good health to within a few days of her death, had also many memories of which for a time she was a resident. She could look back to the days when there was no jail in that town, and such criminals as there were, were exposed in the good old-fashfoned way, in stocks and pillery. NEGRO SMILING AND TALKING ALL THE TIME HAS JEFFRIES IN DISTRESS ALL THROUGH THE BATTLE.

Once Great Master of the Ring is a Child in Johnson's Hands; Boilermaker Helpless in Trying to Solve Grinning Black Man's Defense.

Jack Johnson, the Negro, is still the world's heavyweight champion. He knocked out Jim Jeffries in the fifteenth round at Reno, Nev. The fight was one-sided from the start. The Negro blocked the old champion's blows at every stage of the game and punished him severely in the last five rounds of the

The confusion was so great that no announcements from the ring officials were audible.

Finally after more or less of struggle that looked for a time as though it would grow into a riot, the ring was partially cleared.

police had to beat them back. The first man to congratulate him in his corner was John L. Sullivan. Jeff was attended by his physician as he sat in his corner. He sat shaking his head sadly for a few minutes and then was led to his dressing-room. Soon afterwards he was taken to his camp at Moana Springs.

As soon as the men left the ring the crowd began the destruction of the ring. The ropes were cut into bits, the canvas ripped up and snipped into small pieces, and even the staples that hold the canvas were unscrewed and taken as souvenirs.

The Fight By Rounds.

Jeff walked in and feinted, both smiled and Johnson gave ground. Johnson led a straight left and landed lightly on Jeff's face. They were cautioned when clinched. Johnson shoved Jeff away. Jeff hooked a left to the neck and in the clinch sent a right to the body. Johnson responded with a light one and they stood breast to breast trying for blows. As they broke Jeff sent a left to Johnson's neck. Johnson responded with a left and continued to stand breast to breast try-ROUND ONE. Johnson responded with a left and continued to stand breast to breast trying for short inside blow. As they hadly sw broke Jeff sent a left to Johnson's neck Johnson come in. The gong rang when they were clinched. The fighting was tame and they turned to their corners. Jeff head and got a left smiled.

When the count of seven had been quarters. Jeff crouched and waited for Johnson and he was willing. They came together without a blow. Johnson tried his uppercut and missed. When they broke Jack shot his left hard to Jeff's face and tried his uppercut, but missed again. There was a lot of leading and not much fighting gong rang without a good blow having been struck.

ROUND THREE.

"Take it easy, Jeff," said Corbett as they walked to the center. Jeff smiled and led for the head with left, but missed. Jeff hooked a left to the body and right to the head, but neither blow was hard. They shoved and pushed each other about the ring. Johnson sent two left jabs to the face and tried his right for the chip, but missed the sent two left jais to the late and the his right for the chin, but missed the latter. Jeff smiled at the left blows and continued to bore in. It was simply a wrestling bout thus far. Jeff kept blocking them perfectly. Jeff did not seem to breathe hard, but Johnson acceptance of provides as he was rubbed appeared nervous as he was rubbed ROUND FOUR.

Jeff took his crouching position again came together in a lock. Johnson tried his right for the chin, but missed, and they began an exchange of talk. "Don't rush, Jim; don't you hear what I'm tell-ing you," said Johnson as Jeff forced ing you," said Johnson as Jeff forced him back and they came to a clinch. Jeff put a left to the face and started the blood from Johnson's lip. The crowd yelled "first blood for Jeffries." but Johnson smiled. As Johnson walked in Jeff smashed sharply to his face and they came to a clinch. Jeff sent a left to Jack face. Johnson came back a right, but Jeff neatly ducked it and the round ended.

ROUND FIVE.

Jeff walked straight out to Jack and tried to land his left. Both sparred well and Jeff led for the body, but was blocked. In the clinch that followed Johnson shoved Jeff back easily. When they broke Jack swung his left for the body, but missed. Johnson shot an uppercut and cut Jeff's lip slightly. As they broke Jack landed a left on the face and Jeff came back with a left on the body, Johnson held Jeff's arm and as they broke Jack again tried to uppercut. He missed, but stung Jeff on the face with a left. "Go on, Jeff." shouted Corbett, "that left is a joke," Jeff stepped in and shot a straight left shouled Cornett. That left is a job. Jeff stepped in and shot a straight left to Jack's head and the crowd cheered. The gong found them in a clinch. The pace was slow up to this time, with little damage to either man.

Again Jeff crouched. They stepped around each other, Johnson trying to send in stiff left to face. One of them cut Jeff's cheek a bit. Again they lolled in each other's embrace, but neither was willing to take a chance. Jeff rushed, but missed a left for the body and took a left on the chest in return. Johnson kept up a running body and took a left on the chest in return. Johnson kept up a running flow of talk to Jeff when they came to a clinch, but Jeff calmly chewed gum and waded in. He missed Jack with a left and took a left and a right on the head. Jeff got a left on the face. Johnson closed Jeff's right eye. Jack missed two rights. Jeff's nose was bleeding when the gong rang. When Jeffries took his seat his seconds got busy with his right eye, but Jeff scoffed them. It was O. K. and they only sponged his face. Johnson's round. face. Johnson's round.

ROUND SEVEN Jeff walked right in, but before he had a chance Jack led with right and left and missed. Jeff's face seemed badly swollen and he rubbed it with badly swollen and he rubbed it with his glove. He feinted and tried to draw by his glove. He feinted and tried to draw by Johnson on, but the negro declined to draw by the body, but missed it and took a left of the body, but missed it and took a left of the head and Johnson laughed loudly. Jeff got a left on the face twice at close range. Jeff butted his way into another clinch, but failed to land. He drew Jack's lead and shot a left to the face. Jack's lips bled. In a close quarter mix Jack sent his left to the face twice and Jim's lip bled. This round was somewhat faster.

got a left in the face. He missed Jack's body with a left and took two lefts on the face. "Hello, Jimmy," said Jack to Corbett as he landed on Jeff. "Did you see that one?" Jeff walked into a left to the face and again they mauled each other without damage at close range. "Come on, break," said Jeff as Jack held his gloves. Rickard did not touch the men, but allowed them to take their time. Jeff missed twice with his left, and took a left on the face. Jack tried several times to put his right through, but failed to cobnect. Jeff shoved Jack about seemingity with ease. The gong found them locked. Johnson's blows up to now had been snappler and cleaner, but outside of a bruised eye Jeff was not hurt.

ROUND NINE. ROUND NINE.

Jeff stood up and walked into a left to the chest. "Make him fight," yelled Corbett. "Never mind; just wait," responded Johnson. Johnson walked in and tried a left to the body. Jeff got inside of it and put his head against Jack's chest and shoved the black fellow back to the ropes. Jeff took it all in calmly and seemed to be waiting the opening. Johnson stepped in quickly and shot a left hard for the body, but Jeff's glove was there first. Jeff swung in two lefts to Jack's face that did no damage. He swung his left arm around Jack's neck. His wrist landed hard.

ROUND TEN. ROUND TEN.

ROUND TEN.

They came up quickly. Jeff shot a left to the face, but Johnson brushed it away and responded with a left to the body. Jack again missed a lightning right for the jaw and they hauled about the ring in a clinch. At close range Johnson sent a left uppercut to the mouth and they both missed a right for the jaw. Jeff got under a left lead and seemed to want to wear Jack out by bearing down his weight and shoving him about. Jeff struck two lefts to the face in a clinch and he got one of the same in return. Johnson took two lefts in the face when they broke. Jeff stepped in quickly and shot a left to body just as the gong rang. Jeffrles appeared to be fresh as he waited the gong and watched Jack. Johnson was also fresh, but appeared less at ease as he frowned across the ring.

ROUND ELEVEN.

They walked up carefully, Johnson trying his left once to find it blocked. He took one in the face three times, but smiled back to Jack. They broke away and Jack sent a stiff left uppercut to the face and a right to the body. He kept Johnson bobbing his head to escape the right uppercut whenever they got together. In a clinch Jack sent three uppercuts to the face in quick succession. Jeff appeared tired. They shoved about, Jeff with his head on Jack's shoulder, and when they finally broke Jack hooked his left hard to the hose. The blood flowed from Jeff's nose and lips. He appeared slow compared with Jack's snappy blows. Just before the call of time Jeff rushed in and sent left and right to the body, but Jack was going away and was not hurt. Johnson's round. ROUND ELEVEN.

ROUND TWELVE.

Jim walked over, waiting for a chance to get inside the negro's defense. Jack simply walted and then drew back or hooked a left to the face. "Hurry up; we're going some wild," saild Johnson. Jeff saild nothing. Jeff sailed in till his head rested on the black man's shoulder and tried to rip in body blows. They were blocked almost before they were started and the negro's boxing drew a cheer from the crowd. Jeff forced his way to close quarters, but got a left on the sore nose for his reward. His nose bled freely and as he turned to take his seat at the gong he spat out a mass of blodd. Jeff was not worried, apparently, and looked fresh. Johnson seemed ROUND TWELVE. y, and looked fresh. ROUND THIRTEEN.

Putting his right glove before his face, Jeff walked into a clinch without a blow. When they broke Johnson sent a left to the body and a right uppercut touched the chin. "Stick there," shouted Corbett. Jeff stuck and he was forced away. Then he took two lefts and a right uppercut to the face. Johnson sent in three letts to face in quick succession and then uppercut to the face. Jeff seemed tired and could not stood back and stung left to the face, then calmly clinched. This, round was all Johnson's. Jeff's eyes almost closed. "Cover up," said Corbett. "You will get him."

ROUND FOURTEEN.

Jeff walked straight into a left and they hung onto each other. Jack tap-ped the big fellow in the face with the left twice, and blocking Jeff's attempt at close fighting, shambling forward. Jeff took three straight lefts to the face and got in a left to the face lightly. Jeff's lefts were simply picked out of the air by the clever negro before they could get within six inches of his face. "How do you feel, Jim?" said Jack as they stood clinched. "How do you like em?" Jeff was so blind that he made Jeff was so blind that he made esponse. He walked into three no response. He walked into three lefts in quick succession. "They don't ROUND FIFTEEN.

It was a clinch to start with, following Jeffries' attempt to land on the body. Johnson knocked Jeff down with body. Johnson knocked Jeff down with a right to the face. Jeff got up but was sent down again for the count of ten. The crowd yelled "stop it. Don't let him knock him out." EXPERTS SAY MICHIGAN WILL BE GREATEST ELECTRICAL STATE IN THE UNION.

eniency Will Lead to Expenditure of $30,000,000 to Develop 400,-000 Horse Power.

Considerable pressure is being rought to bear on the state railroad commission to induce the commissioners to let down the bars to a certain extent in relation to bond issues by water power companies, on the score that these corporations if allowed to carry out their plans will cause the development of this state to go forward faster than it has in almost any period.

It is asserted that beyond any question the state has complete control over rates and general supervision powers over these institutions, and that a little less restriction relative to bond issues will allow the power concerns to get their extensions under way this year and lead ultimately to the expenditure of over $30,000,000 in developing the water power of this state. Authorities on Michigan water pow er say that Michigan has wonderful opportunities along this line. They talk of water power development as promising as much for the industrial and agricultural interests of the state as did the railroads in earlier times. They say that the day is not far dis tant when the farmer will be supplied with electricity for heating and lighting his home as well as for irrigating purposes. With irrigation will come greater crops, they argue, and declare that soon the power lines will be as thick over the state as are telephone lines today.

It is stated that there is good au thority for the estimate that where water power electricity can be secured and water obtained not over 70 feet below the surface, the farmer, with a tank on his premises 4 feet higher than the highest point on his farm, can irrigate his farm for from $2 to $4 an acre, using electric power for pumping purposes. Scientific men say this will mean a new day for agriculture in this state.

It shows that up to June 18 orders had been received for 2,265,865 pounds of twine, the number of orders being 1,570. For the week ending June 25 373 additional orders were received, the 373 calling for 254,240 pounds. This makes a total of 1,943 orders received calling for 2,520,105 pounds, of which 2,446,065 pounds have been shipped. The season for selling practically closes by July 1. This week's sales will carry the total sales above 2,600,000, which will be about 25 per cent increase over the sales of 1909.

The cash orders received up to June 25 footed $63,660.57, the balance of approximately 75 per cent being on 90 days' time. Yet the prison contractors' trust and the binder twine plant are still abusing the binder twine plant and clamoring that the state ought to dispose of the plant, and give the contractors a chance to work all of the convicts for their own profit, instead of having them work under a system whereby the state will get the profits.

Adams and Navin were both willing to vote for an increase, but such a resolution would require the approval of the governor, and the latter refused to do this, stating that Welsh was not an experienced prison man, and while he acknowledged his business ability, did not think he would be justified in giving so large

The new building has just been formally dedicated and the fine equipment of machinery and testing apparatus which is to make it the most complete laboratory of its kind in the country is rapidly being installed. The staff of some twenty government investigators has already arrived and been established in the suite of offices in the new building and for some months have been delivering lectures before the students of forestry.

In the new laboratory the United States forest service and the University of Wisconsin will co-operate in the investigations which will be made to solve problems confronting the paper manufacturers, lumbermen, builders and others who deal with the products of the American forests. The building itself, which cost some $50,000, and the site upon which it stands, south of University avenue, between Camp Randall and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad tracks, were furnished by the university. The equipment was furnished by the government at a cost of about $75,000 and the staff of investigators is also maintained by government appropriations. These men, a addition to their laboratory work, will deiver lectures in the regular forestry course of the university. The laboratories, too, although devoted chiefly to the government experiments, are open to the faculty and students for advanced research along the lines of study undertaken by the experts.

The laboratory, which faces north on Uniersity avenue, is a fine fireproof building of dark brown brick, trimmed with white Bedford stone and roofed with red tiles, with a 180 feet frontage and a depth of 80 feet. Immediately east of the building a private spur from the railroad carries the lumber into the aboratory yards. A derrick is to be erected north of the track for unloading the big logs and stumps for the experiments from the flat tars. Immediately opposite, south of the track, to be installed a small sawmill with a saw which will cut timbers up to 20 feet in length. Already togs of long-leaf, short-leaf and lobolly yellow pine have been sent in to the oratories by lumbermen and paper manuturers at Kenwood, La., Hattiesburg, Miss., hornton, Ark., and spruce logs from the faine woods. A number of fat pine stumps for the turpentine, rosin and alcohol tests have also been received.

Sheds for air drying the lumber line the west side of the yard, which is to be graded ad covered with cinders. Immediately back the building is a deep, cement-lined pit to ald the creosote to be used in experiments until it is pumped out into the laboratory

The problem of making a satisfactory print aper from materials other than spruce and smlock is one which will receive particular stention, and for this purpose a complete paper making plant has been made a part of laboratory equipment. Every process, a the breaking of the wood into chips for First treatment by soda and sulphite solus to the final running of the sheets of sper through the calendering rolls to pro-duce a finished surface, will be followed care-mily, so that the results of substitution of Both soda and sulphate processes of treatment of the chips will be used and the laboratory will make its own sulphite liquor in a vat adjacent to the digestors, in which the wood is cooked by steam until the lignin is all dissolved and only the cellulose left. A blast of high-pressure steam drives the chips against the side of the digestor, further dividing the cellulose fibers, and then the whole mass is pumped out by a centrifugal pump into a tank in which it is stirred until the fiber is still further broken up. Over and over it is run through "riffler" troughs and over screens where suction draws out the fiber to be used and leaves behind the small chips, splinters and other waste.

When the liquor has been washed out of it in a washer driven by an electric motor (a contrivance much like the housewife's washing machine) it is put into a press and the water is squeezed out of it. Such of the pulp blocks from the press as are not wanted immediately are then in convenient form to store away on shelves.

After going through the beating engines the refined pulp is run on to the screens of the paper machine and taken up by felt rollers, from which it goes to wooden rollers and then between metal rollers to the steam-heated drying drums, where the wet sheet is run back and forth until it is ready for the final smooth finish of the hot steel calendering rolls. Any grade of paper can be made on this machine, from the roughest brown paper to fine correspondence paper, in a running sheet 15 inches wide, and even a water-marking device is attached, so that the impression can be made on the wet sheet before it goes through the rollers and on to the winding drum at the

How to make timber last longer by protecting it with preservatives from the various borers and fungous growths which attack wood will be another important problem to which considerable time and laboratory space are to be given. Beneath the building is a great pit, heated by steam to a temperature most favorable to rot, and there, in separate glass compartments all about the walls, are to be samples of timbers with the various fungous growths and animal and insect enemies of the wood attached. The progress of their effect upon the wood will be closely watched and compared with that of the same pests upon samples of the wood treated with different preservatives, prepared and applied in the room abou

A big skylight and many windows make the preservative laboratory an excellent place to work and every facility is provided for testing the various forms of preservatives and antiseptics to protect timbers, such as those in mines and water-front piers, which are much subject to the attack of minute animals and plants.

Into two great treatment cylinders the timbers are shoved and steam pumps force the oll from tanks above at high pressure into the cylinders. When no more oll will enter the cylinder, even under 150 pounds pressure per square inch, it is drawn off and again returned to the tanks and measured. The difference between the amount drawn off and that originally forced in deducting the oil collected are heated with steam coils and an iron cage hung above lets the railroad ties or other timbers down into the hot oil. By a trolley arrangement the cage can be lifted and run across to other tanks filled with cold oil, so that it is not necessary to pump out the hot oil and replace it with the cold, as in laboratories where there is but one set of tanks.

All about the inner walls of the preservatives laboratory are ranged shelves to accommodate the samples of wood for treatment and those already submitted to the different forms of protection against rot and other attacks.

What woods will best stand various kinds of straff, in bridges, buildings and different structures will be determined in the timber testing laboratory, where two seven-horsepower motors furnish the electric current to run the machinery.

In the torsion machine timbers can be twisted until the strain reaches 30,000 inchpounds. Five "Universal" testing machines are provided to test the strength of different woods under slow pressure, one having a capacity of 100,000 pounds, another twice that, and three other smaller ones 30,000 pounds.

To see what sudden strains oak, pine, maple and different woods will withstand a Hatt-Turner impact machine was built in the machine shops of the Purdue university and sent to the forestry laboratory for experiments. It can be so gauged that the hammers, ranging in weight from 50 to 250 pounds, can be dropped from heights up to six feet upon the beam or block of wood, exerting a sudden pressure of hundreds of pounds.

In a laboratory where so much machinery is in constant use there must be facilities for instant repairs. For this purpose one end of the laboratory is fitted up into a machine shop. Here, too, much labor is saved by use of electricity to run the engine lathe, millingmachine and other necessary apparatus. Beside the anvil there is a gas forge for heating and tempering steel.

The equipment of the wood shop, where timbers and samples of wood are to be prepared for tests, is very complete.

Steam heated ovens for drying wood, in order to test the shrinkage, warping tendencles and water content of different woods are a part of the laboratory equipment, and a portion has also been set off for a seasoning

In this connection, in another laboratory, tests will be conducted to discover the heat conductivity of different woods, to assist in the work of the kiln drying and preserving

Stumps and other resinous portions of the trees now burned as trash will be put into stills and retorts and the turpentine, tar and gases will be extracted, carried off, separated and refined into the various commercial products. If methods of doing this economically can be fixed upon, the problem of utilizing much of the big pine trees now waster will

All of the many chemical tests made necessary by the work of the different departments will be centered in a blg chemistry laboratory on the second floor, where eight large windows on the east and south furnish admirable light, and eight stone tables, besides those running all about the room beneath the win-

As some of the tests will produce strong fumes, there are tables encased in glass with hoods and ventilators above to carry off the smells and small doors through which the experimenters will work.

A corner room is set apart for special work in distilling turpentine and other products and special unlighted space is provided as a chemicals storage room. Still other unlighted spaces are reserved as photographic darkrooms and record vaults for the safe keeping of the valuable reports of the work done.

One of the most interesting offices is that of the pathologist who has charge of the experiments with the fungi and other enemies of the woods. Upon his desk are large collections of glass tubes containing cultures of every sort of vegetable growth which feeds upon wood fibers, and samples of all the minute animalculae which attack timbers. Many he secured last summer in his visits to mines in different parts of the country, since one of the greatest sources of the dangerous mine cave-in is the destruction of supports by these little enemies

A large drafting room, ighted from the north and east, a library and filing room, a lecture hall and a suite of 17 offices for the staff officials and their clerks and stenographers complete the building arrangements below and in the attic a space for storing materials which cannot be left in the open yard and which is reached by an elevator from the

The government will appoint to regular work in the laboratory, as an addition to the present staff, several of the students who have been doing forestry work the past winter at the University of Wisconsin.

The forestry lecture course of the university, just closed, included this year, besides the regular work under State Forester E. M. Griffith, lectures by W. L. Hall, assistant forester at the Washington office; R. S. Kellogg, who holds a similar position; Franklin H. Smith, in charge of the wood utilitization office of the government at Chicago; H. F. Weiss and H. S. Bristol, assistant directors of the new laboratory; L. F. Hawley, in charge of the wood distillation of the laboratory, and Frederick Dunlap, in charge of the kiln drying investigations.

At the time of the formal dedication of the laboratory the various departments of the government work were in full operation, that the visitors may see the actual work in progressjust how paper is made; how timbers are tested: how stumps are distilled, and how the little marine animals are prevented from boring through shipping.

The staff of the new laboratory is as follows: McGarvey Cline, Purdue '04, director; H. S. Bristol, Yale, and H. F. Weiss, Yale, assistant directors; H. D. Tiemann, Stevens Institute of Technology, in charge of technology; Ralph Thelen, University of California, mechanical engineer; W. H. Good Roads For Wexford.

Cadillac and Wexford county are interested in state reward road build-ing this year. The Cadillac Good Roads association reports that in addition to the $500 a mile offered by the state, private citizens and lum-ber companies of this city have pledged $800 a mile for every mile of state reward road built in this county, regardless of location, in the next three years. In addition there are several townships in the county that are building one, two and three miles of reward road out of township moneys. It is estimated that in the next three years there will have been built at least 40 miles of these roads in Wexford county.

In Osceola township, Osceola coun ty, the town board is asking for $25,-000 for the building of the state reward roads during the present year.

BOY TORTURED BY ECZEMA

"When my boy was six years old, he suffered terribly with eczema. He could neither sit still nor lie quietly in bed, for the itching was dreadful. He would irritate spots by scratching with his nails and that only made them worse. A doctor treated him and we tried almost everything, but the eczema seemed to spread. It started in a small place on the lower extremities and spread for two years until it very nearly covered the back part of his leg to the knee.

"Finally I got Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills and gave them according to directions. I used them in the morning and that evening, before I put my boy to bed, I used them again and the improvement even in those few hours was surprising, the inflammation seemed to be so much less. I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, the same of the cured. My son is now in his seventeenth year and he has never had a return of the eczema.

Slight Change in the Wording.

A Sunday School teacher shipped chair to a little girl by freight. When it arrived it was badly broken, owing to the carelessness of the brakemen on the train.

Hearing of this the lady immediate-Chas. Foren and wife, of Detroit, ly shipped another chair, and used all spent the past week with Chelsea the eloquence possible when addressing the representatives of the railroad on the subject. She drew a pathetic picture of the disappointed child, and suggested a notation like this: "Do not break this chair, or you will break a little girl's heart."

A very determined employe agreed to fix it up. He did. The chair arrived in perfect condition, bearing this inscription:

"The lady says if any damn brakeman busts this chair, there will certainly be hell a-poppin'."

question which students of plant life ask themselves. Careful investigation shows that some is variously changed and used in the leaves themselves, some is carried to other parts of the plant where it is needed for the production of energy and the building up of new cells, and the surplus is stored away for the future needs of the plants. The place and manner of storage differ widely in different plants. Sometimes the surplus is accumulated in the form of various sugars, very often as starch and less frequently as mucilage similar in composition to starch or some proteid compounds.

There are difficulties encountered in storing this surplus food just where it is made. It may so obstruct the cells of the leaf that food making is hindered and leaves are usually rather small so they can contain only a small reserve. Besides many plants retain

An excellent example of thick leaves producing a food storehouse is found in the American century plant, Agave Americana, found most abundantly in the warm regions of southern United States and the Grier parts of Mexico and Central America. As public parks and greenhouses have been multiplied, century plants have become familiar objects in many parts of the country. Found in hot dry countries they have successfully solved the problem of obtaining plenty of sunlight without exposing too much leaf surface to the drying winds of the desert. Their leaves are long and thick, arranged in a loose rosette and covered with an exceedingly thick epidermis. In these thick leaves large quantities of sugar and mucilage are stored. Century plants are long-lived but seldom reach the hundred years that their leaves for a few months only, their names would suggest. KINDNESS TO

Gives to All of Them That Kindly Disposition Which Makes Them Quiet, Teachable and Reasonably Safe.

(By S. C. MILLER.

There is always a way to overcome fear in our domestic animals and that is by kindness. Kindness from the day of their birth, and continued as long as they live. This gives to all of them that kindly disposition which makes them accommodating, quiet and teachable, and safe. It makes them loving and loyal. It adds to their length of life. A horse of a fretful disposition is old at ten, while one that has a quiet disposition may still be young at twenty. It is strange that we do not learn this. How often does a young man just starting in life, buy a good team of young horses, and in order to make hem appear to have much spirit and a heavy wagon, and sometimes with velop into a spavin may sometimes in a load, and in a few years they are this way be checked at the start.

They have made him rich, and he has made their lives happy. In Paris, it is said, horses are treated more cruelly than anywhere else in the world, and because of this treatment, though they have the best street draft horses in the world, the Percheron, they live on the average but three years.

Thomas Ardmore and Henry Maine Griswold stumble upon intrigue when the governors of North and South Carolina are reported to have quarreled. Griswold allies himself with Barbara Osborne, daughter of the governor of South Carolina, while Ardmore espouses the cause of Jerry Dangerfield, daughter of the governor of North Carolina. These two young ladies are trying to fill the shoes of their fathers while the latter are missing. Both states are in a turmoil over one Appleweight, an outlaw with great political influence. Unaware of each other's position, both Griswold and Ardmore set out to make the other prosecute Appleweight. Ardmore organizes a big hunt. Griswold also takes the field. Frank Colling Atlants reporter is arrested by Ard. Ins. Atlanta reporter, is arrested by Ardmore, but released to become press agent for the young millionaire's expedition. Griswold's men capture Bill Appleweight. Jerry Dangerfield discovers the captive outlaw and leads him to Ardsley, her own prisoner.

Then hoof-beats thumped the soft earth of another of the trails that converged at this point, and Ardmore and Collins flashed out upon Jerry and her captive, amid a wild panic of him up."

"You are safe!" cried Ardmore in a low tone, to which Jerry nodded carelessly, in a way that directed attention to the more immediate business at hand. He was not at once sure of his cue, but there seemed to be something familiar in the outlines of the man on horseback, and full identification broke upon him now with astounding vividness.

"Jugs," he began, addressing the prisoner smilingly, "dear old Jugs, to think we should meet again! Since you handed me the jug on the rear end of the train, a few nights ago, life has had new meanings for me, and I'm just as sorry as can be that I gave you the buttermilk. I wouldn't have done such a thing for billions in real money. And now that you have fallen into the excellent hands of Miss Dan-

name?" asked Jerry. "Allow me to complete the introduction," interrupted Collins, who had hung back in silence. "Unless my eyes deceive me, which is wholly improbable, this is a gentleman whom I once interviewed in the county jail at Raleigh, and he was known at that time as William Appleweight, alias

"You air right," admitted the prisoner without hesitation, and then, addressing Jerry: "Yer pa would be glad to know his dorter had helped an ole frien' like me, gal. Ye may hev heard him speak o' me."

"But how about that message in the cork of the jug you put on the train at Kildare?" demanded Ardmore. "And why did you send your brother to try to scare me to death at hev," and the black woman's pursed

"That is not of the slightest importance," interrupted Jerry, gently playing with the tether which held Mr. Appleweight; "nor does it matter that papa and this gentleman are friends. CHAPTER XIV.

A Meeting of Old Friends. Habersham's men had proved exceedingly timid when it came to the business of threshing the woods for Appleweight, whom they regarded with a new awe, now that he had vanshed so mysteriously. They had searched the woods guardedly, but the narrow paths that led away into the dim fastnesses of Ardsley were forbidding, and these men were not without their superstitions. They had awaited for years an opportunity to strike at the Appleweight faction; they had at last taken their shot, and had seemingly brought down their bird; but their lack of spirit in retrieving the game had been their undoing. They had only aroused their most formidable enemy, who would undoubtedly lose no time in seeking revenge. They were a dolorous band who, after warily beating the woods, dispersed in the small hours of the morning, having found nothing but Appleweight's wool hat, which only added to their mystification. "We ought to have taken him away on the run," said Habersham bitterly, as he and Griswold discussed the matter on the veranda of the prosecutor's dawn. "I didn't realize that those felold man; but they refused to make off with him until the last of his friends to have had more sense myself than We had all his friends accounted for -those that weren't at prayer meeting were marked down somewhere else, and we had a line flung pretty deliverance must have come from somewhere inside the Ardmore property. Griswold went at once to the inn to change his clothes. No further steps could be taken until some definite report was received as to Appleweight's whereabouts.

It had been the most puerile transaction possible, and he was aware that a report of it, which he must wire at once to Miss Barbara Osborne, would not impress that young woman with his capacity or trustworthiness in difficult occasions. The iron that had already entered into his soul drove deeper. He had ordered a fresh horse, and was resolved to return to Mount. Nebo church for a personal study of the ground in broad daylight.

As he crossed the musty parlor of the little hotel, to his great astonishment Miss Osborne's black Phoebe, stationed where her eyes ranged the whole lower floor of the inn, drew attention to herself in an elaborate

I must tell you how miserably I have failed, before you trust me any further. Wethat is to say, the prosecuting attorney of this county and a party he got together of Appleweight's enemiescaught the outlaw last night-took him with the greatest ease-but he got away from us! It was all my fault, and I'm deeply disgusted with myself!"

He described the capture and the subsequent mysterious disappearance of Appleweight, and confessed the obvious necessity for great caution in further attempts to take the outlaw, now that he was on guard. Barbara laughed reassuringly at the end of the story.

"Those men must have felt funny when they went back to get the prisoner and found that he had gone up into the air. But there's a new feature of the case that's more serious than the loss of this man-" and the trouble again possessed her eyes. She drew from her purse a cutting from a newspaper and handed it to him.

"That's from last night's Columbia Vidette, which is very hostile to my father.'

He was already running over the heavily leaded column that set forth without equivocation the fact that Gov. Osborne had not been in Columbia since he went to New Orleans. It scouted the story that he was abroad in the state on official business connected with the Appleweight casethe yarn which Griswold had forced upon the friendly reporter at the telegraph office in Columbia. One thing, however, is certain, Miss Osborne, and that is that we must produce your father at the earliest possible moment."

"But"-and Barbara hesitated, and her eyes, near tears as they were, wrought great havoc in Griswold's soul-"but father must not be found until this Appleweight matter is settled. You understand without making me speak the words-that he might not exactly view the matter as we

It was a painful subject; and the force of circumstances to appeal to him, a stranger, to aid her to perform a public service in her father's name rallied all his good impulses to her standard. Heat a poker red hot, and then hold it against the screw head for a little while, wait a few minutes for the screw to cool down, when it will be found that the screw can be removed quite easily with the same screw driver that just previously would not perform the work. The explanation is quite simple.

The red hot poker heats the screw, the screw expands and makes the hole it is in just a wee bit bigger. The screw then cools down and resumes its original size, leaving the hole in the wood a size too large-and there Successfully Operated Without Ground Connection at Either End-Apparatus on Bicycle.

The sending of wireless messages through space without a ground at either station has been demonstrated by two inventors of Brooklyn, N. Y., Messrs. I. Wolf and H. Mohler, where they took part in the Memorial day parade with their complete sending and receiving stations mounted on bicycles, says Popular Mechanics. One of the inventors took the position at the end of the procession, while the other was leading, making a distance of about 11/2 miles between them. No ground wire was used and the rubber tires prevented any connection through the frame and wheels.

The sending apparatus of the station on the bicycle consisted of a two-inch induction coil, a zinc spark gap, a home-made rubber plate multiple-series condenser, which was used for transmission of the electrical waves, and a large wireless key that operated the coil. The receiving instruments consisted of a pair of 3,000 ohm doublehead telephone receivers, a silicon detector and a noninductive potentiometer. The entire outfit, including the battery, was mounted on a board 10 by 22 inches, which was fastened to the handle bar of the bicycle as shown in the photographs.

The aerial consisted of a three-wire system mounted on a seven-foot pole, which was attached to the seat of the bicycle. Each of the three wires are ten feet long and insulated at the top and bottom.

The transmitting and receiving instruments were connected with very heavy rubber-insulated wire. The operator would guide the bicycle with one hand and work the key with the other. The interesting part of this outsomewhere in the woods. I was lost, away in his delirium. VARIOUS USES OF SILUNDUM

May Take Place of Platinum in Apparatus for Melting Brass and Many Other Metals.

Silundum, the new material for industrial and domestic apparatus made in the electric furnace of F. Bolling, a German engineer, is now being supplied commercially by a special factory in Switzerland. It is a form of silicon fact that she was driven by sheer carbide produced by saturating carbon with silicon, which is a vapor at about 1,600 degrees C., and the product differs from carborundum, the amorphous or crystalline silicon carbide, it being a very hard and resistant mass retaining the shape originally given the carbon. That is, the carbon, as bricks, rods or utensils, may be coated with or entirely converted into silundum by heating in silicon vapor. Below 1,600 degrees C., silundum does not melt or oxidize, and it is expected to find a large field as a cheap, resisting and durable substance for the heating rods or grids of electric kitchen ranges. As must be maintained, and I shall step it can be given a high temperature without risk of overheating, the ranges may have the glowing heat of a coal fire. As silundum is not affected by acids or chemicals, it may take the place of platinum for many uses, especially in apparatus for melting brass, aluminum, lead and other metals, and for laboratory ovens requiring high temperature. It is attacked by very hot molten metals, from which it may > Wireless for Airships. Now that aerial navigation is coming to be considered seriously, new problems are arising, such as the question of navigation on starless nights or over fog-bound land, when the aeronaut will be unable to find his bearings. It has been proposed by a German inventor, that a network of wireless stations be established over the land, each automatically sending out a predetermined signal at regular intervals, which would be received by the air craft, and enable the aeronaut to determine his course. The airships would not be required to carry transmitting apparatus, as a small receiving apparatus would suffice to enable them to avail themselves of this proposed system, and the weight of the receiving device could easily be kept down to a few pounds.

Gertainly There is No Need to Pity Them in This Day and Generation.

The typical old bachelor-crusty, irritable, solitary-seems to be passing away, if indeed he is not already ex tinct. Nowadays there is every encouragement for bachelordom, until it has developed from a single state to a united kingdom with royal palaces in all great cities.

There was a time when the typical bachelor was pictured seated alone in a sadly neglected room, pushing a reluctant needle through unvielding cloth, as he strove awkwardly to sew a button on his coat, using the side wall of his room for a thimble. #### Turn to the Right.

Turn to the right. When you meet a person or vehicle you should turn to right and give half the walk or road, as the case may be. When you are overtaken by a person or vehicle moving faster than you are going, you should move over and give half the road or walk, or sufficient room to allow them to pass on your left side. These are "rules of the road," and are backed by law in every state. Fasten this item in your mind, or paste it on your dashboard and you will not get into trouble if you act according to these rules. Remember the other party has just the same rights as you.

IDEA OF PERPETUAL MOTION ONE WOMAN'S GREAT RECORD

Thousands of Lives Made Useful and Happy Through the Efforts of Modest Heroine.

A modest heroine who died in New York last week was accorded a few lines of obituary notice in the daily an, who honored her Saviour and her sex, was Mrs. Elizabeth S. Hurley, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society's Elizabeth Home for Girls in New York city. She had been in the service of the society for 54 years, and in spite of her advanced agenearly 80-was active and efficient until within a week of her death. Mrs. Hurley, in all the years of her service. cared for upward of 20,000 girls, en deavoring to teach them habits of industry and to turn them from evil courses. She sent out to situations about 300 annually, trained for various duties, from laundry work and dressmaking to stenography and typewriting. Her influence and training are to be held responsible, the officers of the society say, for the fact that 12,000 women have led useful lives who might otherwise have gone to the bad. This is the sort of record that does not perish in heaven, even though it may in time be forgotten on earth. It shows what a single life of consecration and devotion to duty can accomplish.—Christian Work.

Smugglers' Ruse.

An ingenious method of smuggling saccharin has been detected at Bregenz, Australia, where seven men were arrested for importinglarge quantitles of contraband. When the Geneva-Munich express arrived at Bregenz the station master had a coach containing seven travelers uncoupled from the express and detained for examination. He had been warned by telegraph from Zurich that seven smugglers of Geneva were in the train with a large quantity of saccharin. After an exhaustive search the officials failed to find any contraband and were about to apologize to the seven travelers for their detention when one customs inspector accidentally kicked a hot water pipe in a first class compartment and the secret was revealed. All the hot water pipes in the carriage were in duplicate, differing in no detail as to length, breadth and color, but one set was of metal and the other set made of papler mache containing saccharin, which is about nine times as expensive in Austria as in Switzerland.
