Marriage Contract Shows That Ladies of Egypt Were Not Unduly Oppressed.

Most of us make the acquaintat of Egypt in the splendidly dramatic'story of Joseph and his brethren, and so look on Pharaoh and his people as gloomy and malign persecutors, fit only to be swallowed up in the Red sea waves. Or we read of the graves and sober monuments of the Nile valley, with their perpetual reminders of death and the kingdom of night; with the result that we are hardly prepared to realize the gay and lightsome side of the anicent Egyptian life, or to credit the thought that those tombsmile. But there was a side of gayety and of charm, and just as we are finding that so many of our deeper and more philosophical thoughts go back to the people of the Delta, so we are beginning to discover the originals of all our jokes in the buried cities of the Nile.

That ladies were not unduly oppressed in the land of the Pharaohs, we may gather from this marriage tic manuscript, but dating in form to far older times:

"I," says the Lady Iris, "take thee as my husband. Thou makest me thy wife, and givest me, in token of dower, five-tenths of silver. If I discharge give and return to the two and a half tenths of silver, of what thou gavest me as my dower, and I cede unto thee all and everything that I shall acquire with thee, one-third part, as long as thou art married unto me.'

Not even Chicago or Reno can boast of a franker marriage contract than that; and there is something wonderfully naive in the idea of the good lady Isis "discharging" her lord, on the ground that she hates him and loves another better. The sum she returns him, as part of her now canceled wod-'er, is about equal to a silver dollar. So we have still something to learn in marital levity and feminine imperiousness .- Harper's Weekly.

Pays Church to Advertise.

"I have drawn people to hear my sermons by advertising. I have attracted them with moving pictures, hot suppers, pink teas and flowers and flags. If I have had any degree of success in Spokane it is because of Detroit's sensational development. It the liberal use of printer's ink," says Rev. Dr. James W. Kramer, pastor of the First Baptist church, who came to Spokane from South Carolina two years ago.

"There is something worse than sensationalism. It is the inability of the church to produce life. The church that does not advertise is behind the times and is nursing empty pews, and he who rails against the minister for advertising is suffering for a congregation.

"I am not an advocate of ragtime methods or vulgar preaching, but I do plead for the church which is a humming plant of machinery, with live -coals in the firebox, smoke curling from the stack and every belt, wheel and pulley going.

"I believe, too, that the people need instruction and that a minister of the gospel is, first, last and all the time, a teacher. There must be life."

Diamond Toys.

Andrew Carnegie, at one of his fa mous dinners in New York, talked about the prodigal and ostentatious expenditure of a certain type of New York millionaires.

He takes a Valquez," said Mr. Carnegie, "and cuts it into three strips so that it will go on a screen. Paul Bourget told the world about that. And I and his neck was broken. For weeks heard, the other day, another thing about him.

"A gentleman was being shown over the $3,000,000 palace of one of those -millionaires. The gentleman stopped before an enormous mirror and

"'What a large and perfect glass! Pity it's scratched."

"'It's rather a pity,' said the millionaire, carelessly; and, turning to his major domo, he said: 'Don't let the children have any more diamonds to play with, Maurice.'

KALAMAZOO COUNTY KEEPS AT WORK PETTY OFFENDERS IN-STEAD OF IN JAIL.

Drunkards, vags and petty criminals have nearly completed building 32 miles of good roads for Kalamazoo county. This is the only county north of the Mason and Dixon line using county prisoners on public improvements and the scheme is only being tried here as an experiment. So far, according to members of the road commission, it has worked out much more successfully than anticipated.

Officers do not find it difficult to keep from 20 to 30 men on the gang all the time. ## Detroit Census Figures.

The greatness of Detroit and its enormous increase in population in the last 10 years, as proved by the census figures just made public at Washington, have created a countrywide sensation.

That Michigan's metropolis could leap from a population of 285,704 in 1900 to 465,766 in 1910, a gain of 63 per cent, has evoked exclamations of wonder from New York to San Fran-

The U. P. Enrollment List.

From the upper peninsula is coming the "explanation" that the enormous enrollment figure up there is to be accounted for by the "fact that the lists have not been revised and includes dead men and men who have moved away.' Deputy Secretary of State Mills thus explains the explanation: "The 58,000 enrollment given out here is a corrected enrollment. We take great pains to keep the figuresstraight. When we have reason to lieve that the township clerks are not taking proper care of the rolls and striking out the names of the dead or those who have moved from the territory, we call their attention to this in a letter. Ederal Fish Farming " OF FISHERIES -SE T WAS nearly 40 years ago that the streams was centered at six hatcheries and United States government first subhatcheries in 1909. At one of these the awoke to the necessity of conservprincipal species handled is the Atlantic saling the aquatic resources of the country, and began those operations in behalf of fishes, fishermen and fish-eaters that have now attained such gigantic proportions. Several of the states had already established their local fish commissions or boards when in 1871 congress took the initial step toward a fishery service by the passage of a joint resolution creating the office of commissioner of fish and fisheries.

The early years of the bureau of fisheries' were devoted to an investigation of the condition of the fisheries of the Atlantic coast. Great Lakes, and other sections; to studies of the interior and coastal waters and their inhabitants, and to exploration of the off-shore fishing banks. The cultivation of useful fishes was soon taken up throughout the country and quickly attained large proportions. The natural expansion of the work was materially augmented from time to time by acts of congress, and in a comparatively short time the operations came to have a very wide scope.

From year to year, as the importance of the work has become increasingly evident, additional hatcheries have been built, the capacity of existing hatcheries has been enlarged, the scale of the operations has been extended, and new kinds of fishes have been added to the mon, at four the shad, at three the yellow perch, at two the white perch, and at one the striped bass. In recent years the bureau has operated a shad hatchery on the Delaware river, and has detailed the steamer Fish Hawk for shad hatching in Maine, New Jersey, North Carolina and Florida. The central station, in Washington, is operated largely for experimental and exhibition purposes.

In order to counteract the effects of the very exhausting fisheries of the Great Lakes, the government has maintained hatcheries for many years, and now operates six belonging to the United States and two belonging to the state of Michigan. The fishes to which attention is given are those which enter most largely into the catch of the fishermen, namely, the whitefish, cisco, lake trout, and pike perch, the annual output of which now exceeds one and a of the bureau.

It is conceived to be the better policy to expend a small amount of public money in making fish so abundant that they can be caught without restriction and serve as cheap food for the people at large, rather than to expend a much larger sum in preventing people from catching the few fish that still remain after generations of improvidence.

Public or government fish-culture in America exceeds in extent and importance that of all other countries combined. However, the neglect of some of the states to provide the minimum protection to certain species inhabiting interstate and international waters has not only negatived the fish-cultural work of the bureau and of the states themselves, but has practically inhibited it by preventing the possibility of securing an adequate supply of eggs, thus making desirable and necessary the placing of interstate and international waters under the jurisdiction of the general government.

At the end of the first ten years of the bureau's existence, the fishes that were being regularly cultivated were shad, carp, chinook salmon, Atlantic salmon, land-locked salmon, rainbow trout, brook trout and whitefish, in addition to which the propagation of several others had been undertaken experimentally. The list now is six times as long and the annual output is ten times the aggregate for the tenyear period ending in 1881.

The main energies are devoted to the important commercial fishes-shad, whitefish, lake trout, Pacific salmons, white perch, yellow perch, cod, flatfish and the lobster, which are hatched in lots of many millions annually. More widely popular, however, are the distributions of the fishes of the interior waters which are generally classed as game fishes. Although representing only about 10 per cent. of the output of the hatcheries, this feature of the work is very important, for it supplies choice kinds of fish for public rivers, lakes and ponds, and for fishing preserves and private ponds and streams in all parts of the United States. The Sshes most in demand for these purposes are the land-locked salmon, the diftrent species of trout, the grayling, the basses, the crapples, the sunfishes, and the catfishes, but various others also are handled.

Fish-cultural stations are established by special act of congress, and their location and construction are determined after a careful survey of the available sites in a given state. The usual buildings are the hatchery proper, a residence for the superintendent and his famlly, and necessary outbuildings. At some stations there may also be power house, foreman's or fish-culturist's dwelling, mess hall and sta-

The only permanent marine hatcheries are in Maine and Massachusetts, where the cod, pollock, flatfish, and lobsters are hatched in immense numbers. Other sea fishes that have in previous years been artificially propagated and may again come under the hand of the fish-culturist are the haddock, the scuppaug. the sheepshead, the sea bass, the mackerel, and the squeteague, some of which were hatched on the steamer Fish Hawk, in Chesapeake bay half billions. Under arrangement with the Canadian authorities, two egg-collection stations for whitefish, cisco, and lake trout are maintained at points in Ontario.

While surveying a new "bank" on the coast of Alaska, the government steamer Albatross in 20 minutes made the experimental catch of cod and halibut shown in one of our illustrations. As a result of explorations of the Albatross on the Pacific coast, fisheries of great importance have been established there.

The hatcheries on the rivers and lakes of the Pacific coast are devoted almost exclusively to the various salmons. In California. where the bureau established a salmon hatchery as early as 1872, there is one central or main station, at Baird, on the McCloud river. with important collecting stations on two other tributaries of the Sacramento. In Oregon a central hatchery at Oregon City, on the Willamette river, has three subhatcheries on tributaries of the Columbia, in Oregon and Washington, and three subhatcheries on tributaries of the Rogue river, Oregon, in addition to several egg-collecting station.

The interests of the large salmon fisheries of the Puget Sound region are safeguarded by a hatchery on Baker lake, on the Skagit river.

A significant feature of artificial propagation on the Pacific seaboard is that in the Columbia basin the hatching of the acclimatized shad has begun on a small scale, and in the Sacramento basin the cultivation of the acclimatized striped bass has commenced under conditions which indicate that more eggs of this species may be obtained in California than in any of the states to which the fish is native.

The hatcheries in the interior regions constitute the most numerous class, and their output reaches the largest number of people. Their operations are addressed chiefly to the so-called "game" fishes, which, while caught mostly by anglers, nevertheless constitute an important element of the food supply. At these stations large numbers of fish are reared to the fingerling or yearling sizes before being released; for this purpose more or less extensive pond areas are required.

The fish-cultural work of the federal government has now attained a magnitude that cannot reauly be comprehended, and is increasing at an exceedingly rapid rate. Especially marked has been the increase in the hatchery product during the past ten years, owing in part to the extension of operations at existing stations, and in part to greater efficiency of methods and appliances. The work during the fiscal year 1909 reached larger proportions than ever before, over three billion fish being produced and planted.

While the bureau does not lay undue stress on mere numbers and considers the vitality of the fish and the conditions under which they are planted as of paramount importance, the foregoing figures are certainly very suggestive and as a further statement of the magnitude of the fish-cultural work, it may be of interest to record that the aggregate output of the hatcheries from 1872 to 1909 was about 28 billion, of which over 13 billion represents the work of the past six years.

In making his original plans for the systematic investigation of the waters of the United States and the biological and physical problems they present, Commissioner Baird insisted that to study only the food-fishes would be of little importance, and that useful conclusions must needs rest upon a broad foundation of investigations purely scientific in character. The life history of species of economic value should be understood from beginning to end, but no less requisite is it to know the histories of the animals and plants upon which they feed or upon which their fod is nourished; the history of their enemies and friends and the friends and foes of their enemies and friends, as well as the currents, temperatures, and other physical phenomena of the waters in relation to migration, reproduction and growth.

In pursuance of this policy the bureau has secured the services of many prominent men of science, and much of the progress in the artificial propagation of fishes, in the investigation of fishery problems, and in the extension of knowledge of our aquatic resources has been due men eminent as zoologists who have been associated with the work temporarily. Their services have been the services of specialists for particular problems, and through them the bureau has not only been able to give to the public the practical results of applied science, but has contributed to pure science valuable knowledge of all forms of aquatic life.

The importance to the fishing interests of the work of the bureau in connection with the economic fisheries is widely appreciated and freely acknowledged. The statistical inquiries of the bureau afford the only adequate basis for determining the condition and trend of the fisheries and the results of legislation, protection, and cultivation. Among the numerous special matters in which the bureau has benefited the fisheries the following may be men-

By bringing to the attention of American fishermen new methods and new apparatus, new fisheries have sometimes been established and new fields exploited.

By the introduction of cod gill nets the win-in the single item of bait. By the dissemination of information regarding new fishing grounds important fisheries have been inaugurated. Thus when the abundance of halibut off the coast of Iceland was made known by the bureau, a fishery was begun which yielded from $70,000 to $100,000 annually to the New England fishermen.

Owing to the appalling mortality among the crews of the New England fishing vessels, caused in large part by the foundering of vessels at sea, the bureau many years ago undertook the introduction into the offshore fisheries of a type of craft which would combine large carrying capacity and great sped with enhanced safety. By correspondence, discussion in the daily press, personal interviews, exhibtion of models and finally by the actual construction of a full-sized schooner (the Grampus), with th requisite qualities, the bureau was enabled to inaugurate a momentous change in the architecture of fishing vessels; so that for a long time the New England schooners have been constructed on the new lines, with a consequent minimizing of disasters and a decided increase in efficiency.

In other fisheries and regions the bureau has likewise advocated improved types of vessels and boats especially adapted to local conditions, and has published plans and specifications embodying the results of studies of the fishing flotilla of the world.

The results of the bureau's efforts in this line in saving life and property, in increasing the usefulness of the vessels, and in improving the quality of the catch as landed, cannot be estimated, but the beneficial effects may be partly appreciated when it is stated that during the ten years ending in 1883, when the old types of vessels were in use, there were lost by foundering from the port of Gloucester slone, 82 vessels, valued at more than $400,000. with their crews of 895 men, while during the ten years ending in 1907, the losses from this cause aggregated only a fourth as many vessels and men.

FEMALE ROBINSON CRUSOE

French Woman Who Lived Alone for Two Years on the Isle of Demons.

The Isle of Demons, off the coast of Newfoundland, was the scene of a romance as thrilling and a tragedy as real as any told in fiction. About the year 1540 one Marguerite de Roberval, niece of the French viceroy, fell in love with a young cavalier and promsed him her heart and hand. Her uncle, the viceroy, considered the youth unworthy of his niece's proud position, and, angered by her refusal to give up her lover, passed a sentence of exile on both of them. A vessel carried the couple to the isle of Demons leaving them there with an old nurse, who had attended the Lady Marguerite from her childhood, and who wished to share her exile.

At first the banishment did not seem so dreadful a thing. The young man's strength stood between his wife and suffering, and for two years all went well. A child was born, and the parents began to plan for the establishment of a colony which might thrive in this island home.

Then came trouble, swift and terrible. Disease fell upon the little family, and the young wife and mother saw her husband, child and faithful nurse all sicken and die. With her own hands she dug their graves and buried all that was dear to her, and then began a life alone, a life in which the mere question of existence became a problem hard indeed for a frail woman to solve. By means of the gun that had been her husband's she kept herself provided with food and with skins for her clothing.

For two years she lived a Robinson Crusoe life this gently-bred girl. Once a boat filled with Indians came near the shore, but the painted faces and fierce aspect of the savages frightened her, so that she hid instead of hailing them. She spent weeks of labor in making a crude canoe, but her hands were unskilled, and when she launched her craft, it would only tip over. At last she was rescued by some fishermen who ventured on the island, half frightened at first by what they thought was an evil apparition. Marguerite was sent to France, but her uncle discovered her whereabouts and continued to persecute her. She finally found a refuge in a small French village, where she hid until the viceroy's death. After that she came into the world once more and lived to a good age.-New York Press.

King Among His Fellows. A Kentucky capitalist who was arrested in Kansas City for having violated the law of the arid belt, made this plea to the judge for release:

"I own forty-seven hundred acres of Kentucky land with blue grass a foot high all over it, ninety head of thoroughbred Hereford cattle, eighteen stands of bees, a barrel of money and two pairs of suspenders. I'm the only fellow in the world that ever owned two pairs of galluses at once."

The judge was thoughtful, but the plea didn't go with him.

Every man has ideals in his mind One of them, held almost universally, is to own two pairs of suspenders at once so that he will not be obliged to change these valuable supporters continually from pants to trousers.

Few achieve it, however. It is not a matter of money, for many well-to-do and even rich men are tied to one pair of suspenders through early habits of thought and training, inertia, absent mindednes and the like errors.

When we see a man who owns two sets of suspenders we say to ourselves: "There goes a king!"

Horse Had His Sympathy.

A chauffeur whose first love is horses even if he is now wedded to an automobile, made his appearance on Seventh avenue, New York, on a scorching afternoon. A string of automobiles stood in the shade of a big man. hotel. Presently a delivery wagon was added to the row of vehicles, but the shadows were not wide enough to shelter it, too, and the horse stood panting and trembling in the broiling sun. The driver of the machine that stood just behind the delivery wagon alighted and patted the horse's sweaty flank.

"You poor old fellow," he said, "it's darned shame, isn't it?" Then in the absence of the horse's driver he undertook to remedy the shame hin self. His own machine was run away from its position at the curb, the horse was backed into the shade, and the automobile took its place in the sunshine. It is not recorded that thereafter anyone expressed sympathy for the automobile.

SYNOPSIS.

Thomas Ardmore and Henry Maine Griswold stumble upon intrigue when the governors of North and South Carolina are reported to have quarreled. Griswold allies himself with Barbara Osborne, daughter of the governor of South Carolina while Ardmore exposures the cause of lina, while Ardmore espouses the cause of Jerry Dangerfield, daughter of the gov-ernor of North Carolina. These two ladies are trying to fill the shoes of their fa-thers, while the latter are missing. Both states are in a turmoil over one Apple-weight, an outlaw with great political in-fluence. Unaware of each other's posi-tion, both Griswold and Ardmore set out to make the other prosecute. Both have tion, both Griswold and Ardmore set out to make the other prosecute. Both have forces scouting the border Griswold captures Appleweight, but Jerry finds him and takes him to Ardsley, her own prisoner. Ardmore arrests a man on his property who says he is Gov. Osborne. Meanwhite another man is arrested as Appleweight by the South Carolina militia. The North Carolina militia is called into action. When Col. "No, in the blue 'room adjoining Miss Dangerfield's! And what do you think! It is none other than the daughter of the governor of South Carolina.

"Oh, Nellie!" gasped Ardmore.

"Why, what's the matter?" demanded Mrs. Atchison. "I had gone in to Turner's to look at that memorial church we're building there, and I learned from the rector that Miss Osborne, with only a maid, was stopping at that wretched hole called the Majestic hotel. I had met Miss Osborne in Washington last winter, and you may forget, Tommy, that on our mother's side I am a Daughter of the Seminole War, a society of which Miss Osborne is the president general. I hope Miss Osborne's presence here will not be offensive to you. Miss. Dangerfield. She seemed reluctant to come, but I simply would not take no. and I am to send for her at four o'clock."

"Miss Osborne's presence is not only agreeable to me, Mrs. Atchison," responded Jerry, "but I shall join you in welcoming her. I have heard that the ancestor through whom Barbara Osborne derives membership in the Daughters of the Seminole War was afterward convicted of robbing an orphan of whose estate he was the trusted executor, and such being the case I feel that the commonest Christian charity demands that I should treat her with the most kindly consideration. I shall gather some roses, with your permission, and have them waiting in her room when she arrives, with my card and compliments."

Ardmore had rarely been so busy as during the afternoon. Several more newspaper correspondents were found Ardsley cellars.

It was Jerry who interrupted him, her little fists clenching, a glint of fire in her eyes.

"It is for me to ask your pardon, Miss Dangerfield! Let us agree that this person is an unworthy citizen of any state, and proceed. It has been Osborne, your endeavor to see this man under arrest in South Carolina, thus relieving North Carolina or her chief executive of responsibility for him. We, on our side, have used every effort to lodge Appleweight in jail on your side of the state line. Am I correct?" Jerry nodded affirmatively.

"Then, Miss Dangerfield, and gentlemen, I must tell you that you have lost your contention, for Appleweight spent last night in jail at Kildare, and to secure his safe retention there, we generously lent your state a few of our militia to guard him. Ardmore was trying not to show too plainly his joy at Griswold's discomfiture. None of the South Carolina officers had ever seen Appleweight, as they lived remote from the scene at his exploits. Habersham's men, who had so signally failed in the descent upon Mount Nebo church, had taken to the woods on the appearance of the state soldiery along the border, and could not be found to identify the man seized at the house on the creek. Habersham had discreetly declined to support Griswold's venture at the last moment; to do so would, he pleaded, ruin his chances of political preferment in the future; or worse things might, indeed, happen if he countenanced and supported the armed invasion of North Carolina by South Carolina militia. THREE ACTORS IN SORROW

Showing How Easily Makers of Mirth May Be Involved in Personal Tragedy.

A pathetic story of the tragedies of the stage is revealed by David Beehler, who has just returned from Sioux City, Ia., where he encountered De-Wolf Hopper and Arthur Dunn.

The trio were in the West hotel in Sioux City. It was their first meeting in years. After the exchange of courtesies had been passed Mr. Dunn asked Hopper, "How are your folks?" and received the reply, "Very well, thank you. How are yours?" "Immense,' replied Dunn.

Three days later Mr. Hopper received a wire announcing the death of his mother and was forced to cancel engagements. That same_day, two hours later, Mr. Dunn received a teleformed that his brother-in-law, Ezra Kendall, had passed away. The men met on the outgoing train-from Sioux City and condoled with each other over the bereavement which had befallen them.-Chicago American.

To Gain Social Success.

To be successful socially, a woman must possess brains and looks, a ready wit and perfect manners. She must be well posted on general topics and have a fund of what the English call "small talk." She can never rise to any prominence in the social world unless she has a firm will, sound sense and ready sympathies.

These qualities, added to enough of wealth to do as she would do, make epresentative type the best and of the American cociety woman. But then, our women possess all these qualities even when their lives are not thrown in the most pleasant places. No woman in the world possesses the adaptability of the American woman. She always knows what to do and when to do it.

Whenever man interferes with the laws of nature he is liable to suffer for it. Forest fires in four northwestern states become so serious that President Taft is called upon at a conference of war department officials to take action authorizing the sending of more troops to save life in the stricken territory. Mr. Cecil says in his dispatch that there is no doubt that the fires in the Crater national forest and at Medford resulted from incendiarism and that new fires are being set constantly. He reports that he has started 25 men on scout duty in an effort to catch the culprits. Fires in the Crater national forest in southern Oregon and at Medford, Ore., are proving more serious every hour. There are 300 men there now under the forest service.

SELECTION OF FOODS.

Many housekeepers who pride themselves on their knowledge of the cuts of meat and can tell at a glance the hardy old farmyard veteran from the juicy young broiler, fall down completely when choosing fruits and vegetables. Berries which looked well in the market prove flat, stale and unprofitable. Melons and cucumbers outwardly attractive were only skin deep in good looks. Oranges and grapefruit are frequently overripe and peaches green. The wise selection of fruit is not learned in a day nor with one lesson. For the beginner there are a few points, which if observed will make the chances better of getting what one pays for and teach one how to tell the good from the bad.

The two chief tests are weight and fgararnce. Ripe fruit has a fresh, sweet odor which is easily recognized. Fragrance is the best test to give to berries, as those without that delicate aroma should be regarded with suspicion. This is also true of lemons, oranges, peaches, pears, and especially of cantelopes.

When buying oranges, grapefruit and melons, weight is the important item; if light in weight, beware of them, they will either be pithy or unripe. If melons are spongy to the touch they are either unripe or stale. Cucumbers should never be purchased
