An atroclous case of a human vampire is reported from (lalizana, in Portugal. : A young child, son of the local blacksmith, was missing for several days, and was found dead in a field near the town. Examination revealed that the corpse was bloodless. Inquiries led to the apprehension of a merchant, Dom Salvarrey, who was last seen with the child. This man confessed that he had killed the child in order to drink his blood. He declared he suffered from pthisis, and had been told by a gypsy that he could only be cured in this manner. He was assured that several cures had thus been made. It is surmised that this terrible outrage was due to the murderer being mentally deranged, but it is not the first case recorded of such un

EDITH HUNTINGTON MASON

Author of "The Real Agetha"

Copyright 1910, by W. G. Chapmanio Copyright in Great Britals. SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and indolent young bachelor of London, receives news that he has been made helr to the estate of his Aunt Georgiana, with an income of $20,000 a year, on condition that he becomes engaged to be married within ten days. Failing to do so the legacy will go to a third cousin in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find him a wife within the prescribed time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Agatha Sixth strikes Archic as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Agatha Sixth already cares for Archie. He gains from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require of month's time fully to make up her mind. Agatha First, neglected by Terhine, re-ceives attentions from Leslie Freer. Four days of the precious time have passed when Terhune is called to London on business. Agatha First, on the plea of sickness, excuses herself from a motor trip planned by the Vincents.

CHAPTER V.-Continued.

"Why, that's too bad!" said my wife sincorely, though somewhat surprisedly, "I'm awfully sorry, dear child, and we shall miss you, of course. But you mustn't think of going if your head aches. Go unstairs and lie down a while, why don't you, and I'll have some tea for headache." And she spoke to the footman who waited at the door of the automobile.

"I will, thanks. Sorry to miss the trip," replied the girl, "You're an angel, Agatha!" And with another farewell word or two we left her and had started on our way to Northbury.

And now comes the very strangest part of this rather strange or at least unusual attempt to make a match and win a fortune for a friend at one and the same time on the part of Dearest and myself. But it appeared that he had, for when Freer remarked uselessly and obviously for the third time, "What beastly luck to have forgotten the jack. Now if only it had happened out on the main road instead of in this short-cut, we would have stood a chance of borrowing one from another car!" the little chap who was standing by, came forward and informed us in a shrill childish pipe that if it was another machine we wanted he'd seen a "big feller" come through that same wood not a minute ago and it had stopped not far away. And he pointed a grimy thumb over his shoulder toward the road that led to our left.

For a Yellow Luncheon. During the golden rod season a very attractive luncheon may be served; Let the rooms and norches be decorated with the feathery yellow blossom, having all the table pieces low and not too large.

For the menu serve a delicate soup like cream of celery; and on top of each place a spoonful of whipped cream, and for the yellow color just a suggestion of egg yolk from a hardcooked egg put through a ricer or sieve. If one wishes to omit the soup, a fruit course may be substituted, or both may be served. For the fruit course, the rich yellow of musk melons served in balls made with a French potato cutter and dressed with a bit of lemon-juice and powdered sugar, is very good. For the main dish, chicken croquettes with white sauca garnished with grated yellow cheese, might prove most appetizing hard and systematic work to save; creatures who were helpless to save themselves and agains whom as someone has put it, the hand of man and the head of woman constantly were raised. It per haps is hardly accessary to say that the allusion to the head of woman had to do with the fashion of wearing the plumage of native wild birds for decorations for hats and bonnets.

With the lon cres plain vanilla, serve preserved yellow pumpkin. It tastes much better than it sounds and is a beautiful yellow to carry out the color scheme? Cut the pumpkin in dainty cubes and preserve with orange and lemon. It is the custom with many who entertain, when carrying out a color scheme, to tie the rolls with ribbon of the color used in the decoration. Ribbon seems very much out of place on food; it may be used in the table decoration to advantage or to tie up small boxes of candy as favors or in countless pleasing ways, but as an ornament or garnish for food, it seems inappropriate.

It was a hardlight to get the masses of the people interested in the bird protection movement. Today yery little is known in a general ment. Today very little is known in a general way of the manner in which success was wrought out; it is not at all uncomman even now to hear the bird protectors spoken of as mere sentimentalists, and there are men who have had a part in the fight to save the wild life who have been encered at as effeminate. The truth is that most of the men who engaged in the work of preserving the feathered species were hard-headed and child prove on occasion that they were hard fisted. It takes only a casual glance at a woman's hat today to show that the fashion of wearing feath ers is still if not supreme, at least a ruler to a considerable degree. It should be known, however, that not once in a hundred times do you see. on a woman's head today the plumage of a native.

American bird. The traffic in the feathers of bluebirds, robins calbirds and other decryard, pets has been almost entirely stopped. Even those who wish that the plumage wearing habit should cease altogether are powerless to prevent the sale of the feathers of certain species of foreign birds. The aigrette of which woman is so fond is a part of the plumage of the snowy heron, a bird which lives not only in the United States but in certain foreign countries. It a bird is to be found in America and also abroad the sale of its plumage is generally forbidden in the United States, but there is, and always has been, some difficulty in proving from whence came the supply. Law, generally speaking, has its technicality loopholes and the bird protective law is not culture of the United States government. The biological survey has been of great service to the farmers of the United States and to all men engaged either directly or indirectly in any form of agricultural pursuits. When the survey was throatened with extinction a few years ago by the apparent intention of congress to refuse it an appropriation, the farmers of the United States with the bird protectors and the real sportsmen, rose in its defense and saved it. The survey probably will be spared to continue its useful work as long as the agricultural department has existence.

The history of bird protection in the United States naturally and of right, is connected with the history of two organizations, the various state Audubon societies for the protection of wild birds, and the American Ornithologists' union. Recently William Dutcher of New York, who is the president of the National Association of Audubon societies and a fellow of the American 'Ornithologists' union, told the ornithologists of the world assembled in convention in a European city the story of the bird protection movement in North America. Mr. Dutcher and all the other officers of the National Association of Audubon societies are of birds and to their protection.

A celebrated French scientist said not long ago that if the bird life were to he swept out of existence man could survive only a few. months. Bucauso of the ravages of the insects

YILLED IN PERFORMANCE

To lead up to the establishment of the Audubon societies, of which nearly every state in the Union has one, it might be said that it. was not until the year 1883 that the public in the United States awakened to the fact that too many wild birds were being slaughtered, largely for millinery ornaments and other decorative purposes. In addition, thousands of song and insectivorous birds were killed annually for food. In his story of the movement for bird protection Prosident Dutcher told of the beginnings of the crusade to save the lives of the songsters which year by year were coming back to the farm and the garden in greatly decreased numbers. Mr. Dutcher said, speaking of the condition in 1883:

The newspapers published items almost daily on the subject, and many strong editorials were written. A quotation from one of these entitled The Sacrifices of Song Birds' will show the camiestness of the press in respect to the situation: 'The destruction of American wild birds for millinery purposes has assumed stupendous proportions. The unholy work gives employment to a vast army of men and women and this army wages its campaign of destruction with a diabolical perfection of system.'

"The editorial in question further refers to details of the work published in other columps of the paper, which furnishes evidence of the gliustly character of the business. The logical result of this newspaper agitation was that the American Ornithologists' union at its annual meeting hold in New York city September 30, 1884, appointed a committee of its members to investigate the extent of the alleged wild bird destruction and to devise means to stop the slaughter by legal or any men who have devoted their lives to the study other legitimate method.

"This committee found that the claims of ... the press and of individuals were not in the bighs in the plant. At first the society in kingdom have triumphed in their cause. The least exaggerated, but on the other hand, did tended to do like work by persuasive mission. Promise is that there will be no cessation of not fully represent the terrible invoked that any energy, and along this line to a consider the work which means so much to the bird were being made on the non-kullia. the present day to realize the enormous num. ber of birds that were slaughtered for the millinery trade alone.

"The greatest sufferers were the white awamp birds, such as terns, gulls and heron, but incredible numbers of land birds also were sacrificed, some 60 or 70 species being included in the lists. In one millinery estabment alone 150 skins of the Baltimore orioles were found.

"From the work started by this committee in 1884 the present well-organized and financially endowed corporation known as the National Association of Audubon Societies for the Protection of Wild Birds and Animals has resulted, although in the interim there were many periods when the outlook for bird protection in North America seemed doomed to failure."

It was the result of an appeal made to congress by the council of the Ornithologists' tion of $5,000, the money to be administered. under the direction of the department of agriculture for the purpose of taking means to save the lives of the native American birds which were useful to man.

As William Dutcher says further in his story of the protective movement:

"In recognition of the action taken by the American Ornithologists' union in securing the apprepriation, the secretary of agriculture invited the council of the union to select a superintendent to carry on the work and at a subsequent meeting held in Washington, Dr. Clinton Flart Merriam was selected as the superintendent and Dr. Albert K. Fisher as his, assistant. Both of those noted ornithologists were among the founders of the American Ornithologists' union."

It was from this humble beginning that the present biological survey, a division of the United States department of agriculture, has grown. It is perfectly apparent from the letters which agriculturists send to Washington, constantly that the work of the biological survey has its value appreciated more and more every year. The survey has published a great mass of valuable statistics of the food habits of birds and their relation to agriculture and

As has been said, there are Audubon societles for bird protection in nearly every state in the Union. They are affiliated in one great society called the National Association of Audubon societies. The writer of this articlefrom personal knowledge can speak of the beginnings of one of the largest and most active of the state organizations.

Persons who were known to be interested in hirds were asked to meet to form a protective organization. A good many persons not particularly, interested in bird protection also were invited. Boveral women came to that all sorts of trials and tribulations, but today first meeting, wearing the plumage of wild it seems that the friends of the feathered

So it is that the bird protectors not only have carried on a great work in the education of children and in moral sussion among the elders, but they have taken eases into courtclators of the law, until today the bird protect year by year, the cheapest wheel to tive laws are as much feared as any other buy; but long before the cheapest gear, laws on the statute books. About fifteen years ago there was a week of zero weather in some of the southern states. The blue bird, which is a northern favorite. does not go far enough south in winter to The unusual cold of that winter fifteen years ago almost annihilated the tribe of bluebirds. There were only a few left to come back tothe northern fields in the spring. The blue bird, however, was protected, and the efficlency of the Audubon society's work was never more clearly shown than in this case. The blue birds today have recruited, their ranks under protection and are as numerous as ever they were.

For years the bird protectionists went ahead with their work with the treasury at a low point.

· It always had been hoped that some kindly disposed person would realize the strength and beauty of bird protection work and would give of this substance to the cause. The man known as a scientist nor as a bird student. One day, however, Albert Willcox saw a newspaper account of some of the bird protection work done by the national Association of Audubon societies and he wrote a letter asking for more details. He received the information that he wanted and he wrote to say that he was about to make a new will and felt so much pleased with the work of the society that he would give it annually during his lifetime a considerable sum-of-money to-be used in carrying on the work of the association, and that when he died he would give the society a legacy of $100,000 in his will, and, he added, "I may not limit it to this amount."

Albert Willcox died four years ago. He left $100,000 to the Audubon society as he had promised, and in addition he made the society his residuary legatee to the extent of one-half his estate. Today the National Association of Audubon societies, through the generosity of Mr. Willcox, is placed on a sure and lasting foundation. The bird protective work has been going on for a quarter of a century. It had NATURE'S SIGNALS

> A Neck-Tie and Apron Party. This really is an old time stunt, but like many other old things has been rejuvenated. The hostess prepares as many cheese cloth aprons as there are men and as many pieces of silk or ribbon as there are girls. When all arrive the men are given spools of thread and told to find the girl who has an apron to match it. In this way partners are chosen and the girls put on the aprons after the men have sewed the hems and sewed on the strings: Allow half or three-quarters of an hour for this. Next the girls are given the necktio pieces and they are gathered together and put through a door, seach girl having hold of an end, the door is closed and the men are to come in and take hold of an end. When each man has an end, the door is opened and the girl who has hold of the other end must fashion a necktie for her swain. The latter puts it on and the girl outs on her apron, and thus partners are selected for supper or refreshments. This is a very jolly

The real bistory of these Union Pacific coal land frauds has been buried in the archives of the interior department, and has only now come to light. It appears from the records why the facts have long been suppressed, for these records show that Mr. Garfield, before being appointed secretary of the interior to relieve E. prised of the embarrassment in which the railroad corporation found itself, and actually went into office pledged to protect the Union Pacific against both criminal and civil prosecution in

All Right, but Here He was at Fault.

We are told that the latest sensation in the medical world is the assertion of a doctor that he is able, by looking into a patient's eye, to make an accurate diagnosis of the complaint which the patient is suffering. But is. this really as novel as it is supposed to be? I recollect hearing some time ago of a doctor who said to a patient who was under examination: "I can see by the appearance of your right eye what is the matter with you. You. are suffering from 'liver.'"

"My fight eye?" saked the patient. "Yes," returned the doctor. "It shows me plainly that your liver is out of order." "Excuse me, doctor," said the pa-

NORTHVILLE-The Starkweather Stock farm sold six of their find Holstein cows at the auction sale held by the Michigan Holstein Breeders Co. at the State Fair grounds last week at an average of $211.00 each; This was the largest average of any oreeder in the state and out of a con-signment of 125 head of cattle.

ANN ARBOR—Because he ordered meals for himself and a friend and then refused to pay, Lew Andrews was arrested Thursday, and Friday morning in Justice of the Peace Ritchie's court was adjudged to pay $5.05, the costs, and 50 cents for the two meals. The complaint was made against Andrews by the proprietor of

A Careful and Painstaking Official

These Letters Speak for Themselves. Office of City Assessor, Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct., 27, 1910.

To the Public: As Assessor of Ann Arbor I from time to time go over (all papers) recorded in the register of deeds office. Never in my experience has the work of the office been kept up in better shape than under Mr. Abbott, and the copying on the books is the most legible and correct that has been done to my knowledge. Also the work has increased from a third to a half more than under previous registers, I do not see how any improvement can be made in the method of doing tho work or the administration of the office.

S. W. BEAKES, City Assessor.

As manager of the Washtenaw Ab stract Company my duties take me to the Register's Office many times in each day, and I take pleasure in stating that the office of the Register of Deeds under the present Register, Mr. H. J. Abbott, has been conducted in a manner that will compare very favorably with any of his predecessors. He is always very courteous and obliging in the transaction of business, and in my opinion the people have brought millions into the state will make no mistake in giving to him
