The Cocoa Tree.

The cultivation of cocoa is at present an inviting agricultural pursuit in Trinidad and parts of Venezuela. The gocoa tree cannot withstand strong sunshine, and the young plants have to be shaded by banana or plaintain trees, and later when they attain their growth, by tall trees known as "importals" or the "mother of the cocoa." These make a kind of canopy over the entire plantation. G. T. OFFICIALS

Questioned by Commission Relative to Wreck.

SAYS ENGINEER RESPONSIBLE

If Spencer Was Properly Warned of the Train Ahead, Why Would He Risk His Life, Is the Question to Be Explained.

Lansing.-Among all the officials of the Grand Trunk who have been questioned by the state railroad commission relative to the wreck at Durand, all have stood by the original theory advanced by the railway, that Engineer Spencer, whose engine crashed into the helpless sleeper, with its load of human lives, was alone responsible for the wreck.

Having secured that declaration they have been asked by the railway officials how they explained the fact that if Spencer had been properly warned of the train ahead he allowed his engine to continue on its way unchecked when his life would be risked as much as anyone's when has thus far attempted to explain a reasonable theory why he thought Spencer would take such a chance.

Richard Doyle, master of transportation for the Grand Trunk, was before the commission, and he also was asked the question, and he could not aid the commission in solving the mystery. He examined Conductor Lacey and Brakeman Graham, who were in charge of the wrecked train, when the men were put at work during the strike, and declared that he was satisfied by his examination that they were both competent trainmen.

Nothing new was developed by his testimony. At its conclusion the commission announced that as soon as the testimony taken at the inquest in Durand had been transcribed so that it can be examined, the commission will announce a verdict of its own, placing the responsibility where the commissioners believe it should be placed, and if the facts warrant prosecuting officers will be asked to take steps to bring those named before a court for trial.

Confusion in the Primaries.

Utter confusion in state politics promises to prevail in Michigan as a result of the primary election unless candidates ascertain at once whether they are on one or more tickets and make a choice of one ticket. The state board of canvassers is in session here and their early investigation of the returns show some extraordinary results in the primary election and some mighty amusing features.

Must Readiust Its Rates.

The state railroad commission has rendered an opinion declaring that the Michigan Power company has discriminated in rates for electricity in this city and orders the company to file a new tariff with the commission within the next 30 days.

If the new tariff is unsatisfactory and further complaints of discrimination on the part of the power company reach the commission, it is set forth in the opinion that the case will be reopened and the commission will take further steps which will result in a just and equitable rate to all consumers of power in this city.

Payment of prisoners according to their industry to insure protection for their families and their own rehabilitation on release was recommended to the international prison congress in session at \Washington, by the section on "preventive means." THE GENTLE SHEEP AS A RAPID FIRE MONEYMAKER

An enormous number of sheep are coming into the Union Stock Yards Chicago, which are being sent there by Western grazers on account of the scarcity of feed in that section of the country, and which must be sold at buyers' prices.

The states of Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, are well provided with good feed and an opportunity of this kind, if offered by one of the great dry goods houses or department stores of Chicago, would deplete three quarters of the homes of that city of its womenkind inside of half an hour after the notice appeared. All they would want would be time enough to throw a few clothes over them; some wouldn't even stop to put "rats" in their hair, thousands would forget the "powder," none would stop to "paint," but every "father's daughter" of them would make a "B" line to hubbles' pants, and extract there from without leave, license or consent, all that therein was to be found in the shape of cash, and then tunble over each other to be first on the spot.

Lots of these women would buy much more than they required, and would quietly hold over their purchases until the close of the sale, and then let loose their surplus stock upon their less wide awake friends, and reap thereby a harvest of "sheckels" which we may take for granted would be at once returned to the trouser pockets of their husbands while those gentlemen still slept. That is the woman of it.

PART ONE. CHAPTER I.

I found my wife and told her all about it. "You see, Agatha," I said. "it's going to be rough on old Arch if he doesn't. After all, she's always go to him."

In fact, she gave him exactly and only ten days from the receipt of her letter in which to accomplish the holy estate, or, rather, in which to get himself engaged. The actual ceremony she would leave to follow as soon as possible when the proper order of things should permit.

Arch, when I saw him in London that morning, was in the wildest state of mind imaginable. He had only just received the letter, and he'd be blessed if he'd take unto himself a wife at all, merely to humor the impossible whims of his Aunt Georgy, much less accomplish the deed with any such indecorous haste. She had always badgered him to death on the subject of getting married, and now he supposed this was her way of punishing him for his systematic disregard of her wishes.

"Wants to jolly well push me to the wall and force my hand!" he told me indignantly. "She'd do anything to lection. INFERNAL MACHINE AND NINE-TEEN ARE KILLED.

GEN. OTIS AND OTHERS CHARGE OUTRAGE TO LABOR UNIONS SEEKING REVENGE.

Score Badly Hurt in Addition to Fatalities - Attempt Made on Manufacturers' Secretary.

The building and plant of the Los Angeles Times, one of the best known newspapers of the southwest, Gen. Harrison Gray Otis editor and principal owner, was destroyed by an explosion and fire. Upwards of 20 of its employes were killed and the financial loss is nearly half a million dollars. At least 22 are injured.

The management places the blame for the explosion on the labor unions with which the paper has long been engaged in bitter warfare. It is charged that unidentified persons set off a charge of dynamite in a blind alley which ran into the center of the building. The structure was completely wrecked. The flames enveloped it from cellar to roof.

An attempt to destroy the residence of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, publisher of the Los Angeles Times, by means of an infernal machine, was made following the explosion which caused great loss of life and destroyed the buildings and plant of the Times, and a suspected effort to blow up the auxiliary plant of that paper.

A powerful infernal machine was also found in the residence of Secretary Zeehandelaar, of the Merchants & Manufacturers' association.

$100,000 Reward for Dynamiters. Under the stimulus of proffered rewards aggregating $100,000, hundreds of policemen, detectives and private citizens are searching for clues that may lead to the arrest of the conspirators who blew up the Los Angeles Times building, causing the death of more than a score of persons and attempted the destruction of the homes of Gen. Harrison Grav Otis, owner of the Times, and of F. J. Zeehandlaar, secretary of the Merchants benefit may come to the people of the United States by the study of the habits of a particular animal, that animal is studied forthwith and studied carefully.

In folk lore history and in the history of localities which hardly can be classed as folk lore, the frog and the toad frequently have been confused; sometimes stories have been told of frog visitations and it has turned out that the invading army was composed of toads: The reverse of the statement also has been found to be true on several occasions.

Some years ago an army of track-hopping tramp toads took possession of the gravel road bed of the Sioux City and Pacific railway, and in unbroken column miles in length, as the local story had it, the toads marched past the town of Blencoe, Iowa. It is stated that there were so many millions in this mighty army that nothing like an accurate estimate of the toads could be made. The ground was said to be brown with the color of its visitants.

If there was such an army of the batrachians as it is said there was it would be no wonder if the residents of the infested district might have feared that the toads would divert their course from the railroad into the towns. to repeat Pharaoh's plague of the frogs, "When the rivers brought forth frogs abundantly, which went up into the houses, and into the bed chambers, and even upon the beds, and upon the people, and even into the ovens and into the kneading troughs."

Now the toad is not nearly so handsome a being as is his frog cousin. He never could "a-wooing go" like his green-coated brother, despite the fact that Shakespeare proclaims that his toadship has a jewel in his head. Ugly and venomous, the bard of Avon writes the toad down, and ugly and venomous to the people's mind in many places he is to this day, although in reality he ranks with the birds as one of humanity's best friends. As a matter of fact, it is likely that the brown-skinned army which moved without banners in military array some years ago was on the march to meet the great army of Rocky Mountain locusts which was moving fleadily forward in an opposite direction and in General Sherman's words, "Foraging liberally upon the country." Even though the toads are so harmless and helpful, they perhaps will never get anyone to love them. It must be admitted that appearances are against them. The Iowa people who some years ago were visited by the toads had no reason to arrogate to themselves any particular distinction on account of the visitation, for in scores of instances the animals have appeared in immense bodies, and in some cases, without any intention so to do, they have inaugurated veritable reigns of terror

Years ago, in the little Puritan settlement of Windham, Conn., out of which sprang as many notable American families, perhaps, as" have come from any other colonial hamlet, a migration of toads led the people to believe that the tocsin of the last day had been sounded, and they were all summoned, sinners and sinless, to answer at the bar of judgment. Tradition says that the migration which brought this fear upon the people was one of the frogs. Scientists of today lean rather to the toad theory, but it made little difference to the frightened populace which species of batrachian brother it was that brought horror into

Now it happened that there lived in Windham two colonial colonels, big men and dignified, by names Dyer and Elderkin. It may do to harm at this late day to say that both these military titled gentlemen were more fond of good living, so the story goes, than was perhaps exactly consistent with the strictest Puritan thoughts. Some of the elders of the place, it is said, looked a bit askance at some of the views of Colonels Dyer and Elderkin. There were slaves in that day in Connecticut and Windham held its share.

One peaceful night in May the Windham families retired at their usual hour, not long after "candle light." At midnight they were wrapped in the profoundest slumber, but no sleep however sound could withstand the roar that broke upon that peaceful hamlet in the watches of the night. There were blended the ncises of a million throats. It was guttural. harsh and horrible, and it came out of the jetty blackness of midnight. The people of Windham jumped from their beds panic stricken, threw on what clothes they could, and rushed outdoors, many bearing pine torches. which ate little light holes in the inky black-

The slaves were prostrated with fear and clung to the knees of their masters. The noise ceased not for an instant, but on the contrary increased with every moment, and then, to the added horror of all, the noise found shape in words which one quick-eared, imaginative woman interpreted into this, all but two of the people accepting the interpretation readily: "Judgment day; Judgment day; Colonel Eyer and Elderkin too, and catch a nigger too." It is perhaps needless to say that the only two people among the white inhabitants of Windham who did not thoroughly accept the interpretation were Colonels Dyer and Elderkin. In a few minutes the light of the torches showed an immense concourse of toads or frogs, whichever they were, bearing down the main street of the town, croaking and "glucking" like a myriad of night demons. It suddenly struck the people that if Judgment day was at hand, nothwithstanding the fact that Colonels Dyer and Elderkin seemed to have been singled out by the visitors, the day of accounting according to the Bible was an allembracing affair, and thereat all the Windham people started trembling violently.

There are living today a good many persons who are direct descendants of the Colonel Elderkin whom the batrachians called to judgment that night. In Chicago until recently there lived a Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Norris, a direct descendant of Colonel Elderkin. Mrs. Norris had heard the story of the invasion of the village a score of times from the lips of her grandmother, who as a child was taken time after time to see the place from which the night disturbers came. To the days of their deaths Colonels Dyer and Elderkin were called Frog Dyer and Frog Elderkin, and if local Connecticut authorities are to be believed, there has not been seen from that day to this either a toad or a frog in the meadow and pond from which started that midnight migration.

To get away, for a moment, from frogs and toads, and in order to lead back to them again, let it be said that out in Utah the gull is a carefully protected bird. Olive Thorne Miller speaks of them as "great, beautiful, snowy creatures who look strangely out of place so far from the seashore." I have been told that these gulls are sacredly protected by the law and the people of the western state, and I have also been told that the early settlers, the Mormons, believed that the Lord has sent the birds to his chosen people.

It is no wonder that it was believed the gulls were specially sent. Clouds of grasshoppers had destroyed the crops in that early day in many of the western territories. They attacked Utah by the million millions. Then it was that the gulls appeared-birds never before seen in that locality within the memory of man. They came in tremendous flocks and devoured without stopping the hosts of the enemy, and they completely saved the crops from destruction. Now the gulls follow the plains like chickens, and in Utah at least, it is said that no one has any desire to raise his hand against them.

What the gull was to Salt Lake region the toad was to one section of a northwest Texas county, some time ago. There was but a comparatively small area of the county under cultivation, but the growing things were threatened with destruction by a horde of Rocky Mountain locusts; then there appeared to the astonished gaze of the resident Texans an army of toads, before which in numbers the great army of Xerxes was but as a score. These dismal-looking, warty-backed Hop-o'-mythumbs came along as on business bent. They said nothing and they ate grasshoppers. They cleaned up utterly one entire flight of the creatures. And they quietly sat under the cabbage leaves and beet tops to wait for more. They didn't come. The toads had saved the crops, and it may be judged that if one wants to be certain to get in a quarrel he can get it if he will go that section of Texas and malign a toad.

Should anyone be inclined to doubt the insect-eating capabilities of a common every-day American toad, let him listen to the evidence of an experimenter, who is at once a scientist and a clergyman, the one fact establishing his accuracy and the other his veracity. This theologue-naturalist, as the record shows, found a toad in his garden and proceeded to make a pet of it. He went to call on master toad one morning about ten o'clock and without knowing how many insects already had fallen before the toad's darting tongue, proceeded to feed him on plant pests. The toad ate readily and greedily twenty-three large squash bugs which were offered him, and then looked up inquiringly for more.

The squash bug larder was depleted, so the clergyman turned his attention to caterpillars, Of these hairy, repulsive creatures the toad ate ninety-four, so the story record goes, and then he shut down to hep heavily off to a shady corner to take that rest which it is said aids animal digestion.

Now this same experimenter tells tales of toads which might appear a bit overdrawn, were not the gentleman's cloth what it is. He took in his experiments with one toad some large "tangle-legged" grasshoppers. Master toad took kindly to this species of food, but owing to to the nature of the insect's legs and their extreme length he found difficulty in swallowing. In order to aid in the process, as soon as he would get a firm grip on the grasshopper he would look for a stick or a stone by means of pushing against which he could force his prey down his throat. Now in order to see what the toad would do if no stone or stick were at hand, all of those articles were removed from his vicinity, and then he was fed another big grasshopper with great knotted

Now it must be remembered that the present writer is not vouching for this toad story: he is simply setting it down as it has been told by an observer, and if it is a "nature fake" the blame must go elsewhere. The toad, finding he could not swallow the big grasshopper, looked about as usual for a stone and, finding hone, he attempted to use the ground as a pusher. He was unable to get the right angle to secure sufficient force, and so as a last and perfectly effective means, he stood on his head and without the least difficulty forced his food down his throat.

This toad unquestionably was a wonder. One day, we are told, he happened to find an angleworm of great length. He took hold of one end and succeeded in swallowing about an inch and a half of the worm, which then realizing its danger apparently, wound the rest of its body boa-like around the neck of the toad. This gave the worm leverage enough to enable it to tug away at that part which the toad already had swallowed. The result was that although by a mighty effort the toad could swallow about half an inch, the worm, when the relaxation came, succeeded in withdrawing three-quarters of an inch. The toad saw his breakfast slipping away from him, but his infinite wit came to his rescue. It is said that he sat up like a squirrel took one mighty swallow, and then before the worm could get in its withdrawing work, he pressed his forefeet against his throat and held the swallowed part of the breakfast in place; then, so the story goes, by a series of quick successive swallowing and throat squeezing, the toad soon had the worm in the dark interior where he was needed for breakfast.

Toad migrations are not extraordinarily unmmon events. They have taken place in many parts of the country, and once the toads in traveling succeeded in stalling a railroad train on the Canadian Pacific line. The story of this runs to the effect that the wheels crushed the creatures and so greased the rails that progress was impossible for some time. The passengers said that they could have stood the situation more philosophically if the blockaders had been frogs, for then the question of the food supply would have been settled for a lot of hungry people. Frogs' legs make good eating.

It is not generally known, perhaps, to the layman that toads, like frogs, lay their eggs in the water. Countless millions of eggs will be deposited in some morass. They hatch out, the young get big enough, and migrate in a body to the dry land, sometimes going long distances as an entity. These, it is said, are the marching armies of toads which astonish people and accounts of which are spread broadcast over the earth.

Straw Hats and Autos

"You might scarcely think," said Mr. Mac-Blink, "that there was anything in common between straw hats and automobiles, but by that way of thinking you'd be surely forgetting their cost of upkeep, in which respect they are strikingly alike. 'They say it costs more to keep an automobile than it does to buy one; precisely the same is true of the straw hat. You take my own experience for an illustration. "Early in the season I bought a straw hat for which I paid $2. I know a place where you can get a very good straw hat for that money, and if it hadn't rained all summer I should have been on the straw hat account under no additional expense.

"But it always does rain more or less, Just as it has done this summer, and as is very well known if a drop of rain gets on a straw hat it is all up. Raindrops on a straw hat will accumulate dust, and then you have to have the hat cleaned, and that costs money; in some places 25 cents; in some 15.

"I find by reference to my books that I have paid out this summer in straw hat account for upkeep only $2.30, which is a good deal. While the automobile man has been spending his money for gasoline and things I have been blowing mine for hat cleaning, and it has cost me more to keep that hat going than it cost me originally.

"But in this I find some slight satisfaction. In this respect at least I find myself on the same footing with the man who at the beginning of the season bought instead of a straw hat an automobile.'

COMING OF A SUDDEN GUEST

Not Feared by the Woman Who Can Seize the Every-day Larder's Possibilities.

The housekeeper who is quick to seize the possibilities of the every-day larder, with its collections of odds and ends and its plainer viands, need fear no sudden guest, however imposing.

For instance, that half cup of boiled rice that was left over can be con verted into a very dainty accompaniment to the meat or fish by stirring it in a cream sauce until heated dairy cheese over the top. Serve with ish with layers of cheese sliced very, very thin at intervals and a dusting of salt and pepper. Some think a few drops of onion juice dropped on each layer an improvement. Bake until it browns, with cheese and a little bread crumbs on top and serve hot.

When other things fail at the crucial moment the chances are that there will be fresh eggs in the house, and these can be transformed into a very acceptable luncheon dainty as egg croustades.

To prepare them cut a square loaf of bread into slices two inches thick, and scoop out the center of each square, after trimming away any thick box. Fry a nice brown in deep fat, box. Lydis E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com.

One housekeeper who recently received a guest of epicurean habits rather unexpectedly found herself with nothing more special than a broiled beefsteak as the main course

As it proved, however, no elaborate compound could better have met the taste of the distinguished visitor than the steak as served to him.

It was, of course, delicately broiled and just before serving was sprinkled, after seasoning with salt and pepper, with a tablespoonful each of chopped chives and parsley, and was then rubbed over quickly with a tablespoonful of butter creamed with the same quantity of lemon juice. The unusual, piquant flavor was immediately detected and commented upon.

The psychic moment for serving is when the butter in the sauce has melted over the meat.

BEEF PIE A L'ITALIENNE

Elaborate and Tempting Recipe for Making This Palatable and Widely

One pound of cooked beef, six ounces of boiled macaroni, one pound of peeled tomatoes, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one chopped shallot, one tablespoonful of butter, one tion. cupful of stock, one tablespoonful of flour, one tablespoonful of oWrcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. The macaroni must be boiled till quite tender in boiling salted water, having been broken in inch lengths before being put into the water. Melt the butter in a saucepan, put in the chopper shallot and flour, and brown them carefully. Add the stock, and stir until boiling, then add the Worcestershire sauce and seasoning. Slice the meat thinly. Butter a casserole, put in a layer of macaroni, then one of meat; sprinkle over a little parsley, and continue these layers till the dish is full. Let the last layer be of macaroni, as this protects the meat from too great heat. Pour in enough of the sauce to about half fill the dish.

Halve and lay the tomatoes all over the top of the pie, and place a piece of butter on the top of this half. Bake the pie till it is very hot and the tomatoes soft, and serve at once.

Split Biscuit. These are made for supper when bread has been baked in the morning: Use one pint of dough, risen over night, of the bread; take one pint of milk, two tablespoonfuls of butter, four of sugar, one teaspoonful sait and two well beaten eggs. Mix all ingredients in a bowl, cutting the dough with a knife. After the mixing, add a generous quart of sifted flour, knead the dough well and let it stand in a warm place for six hours, when it should be a perfect sponge; work it down well at the end of that time. Sprinkle the molding board well with flour, turn the dough upon the board and roll it down to the thickness of about one-fourth of an inch.

Dip the biscuit cutter in flour, cut up the dough with it, place half of the cake in a buttered pan, spread a little soft butter on it, take fresh cake from board and put on the top of those already in the pan. Cover with clean towels and set away in rather cold place, about 65 degrees; let biscuits rise until they are about double their original size; it will take about two hours. Bake in rather hot oven for one-half hour. Two good-sized pans of biscuits may be made with ingredients mentioned.

Now They Sleep Indoors, George H. Beattie, jeweler in the old Arcade, and L. E. Ralston, auditor of the News, have jointly and severally decided that sleeping out in the open isn't all that it has been declared to be, says the Cleveland Leader. They were both in a deep snooze out at the Beattle farm, near Chagrin Falls, the other night, when a runaway team from the county fair city turned into the lane leading up to the Beattie estate and came along at full Points to Good Future. Seven poor children, four girls and three boys, all about ten years old, went to a nearby seashore resort, in charge of two women, for a day's outing. The funds for the picnic were provided by two boys who sell papers and who live in one of the two houses from which the excursion party was recruited. One of the women in charge of the children said that the boys had arranged the outing "of their own accord, and the remarkable thing is this: They are not good boys by any means and one of them is probably the naughtiest boy in the neighborhood. But we think that when boys do little things like this they will come out all right."-New York Tribune.

By CARL JENKINS

Arthur Crampton was 40 miles out of the city in his automobile. He wasn't motoring to see the country. but to hunt up some information for the law firm of Black, Swope & Crampton, to which he had just been admitted. This information must be sought for quietly, very quietly.

Miss Nora Haskell was motoring car. Her chauffeur sat beside her, but he was not considered in the matter of operating the car. At a certain point she overtook another auto. It was that of Mr. Crampton, who was sleuthing along as quietly as possible and raising as little dust as he could. she wanted to show the man ahead that he was a slow coach for the road. He gave her room to pass.

But as her auto came up, he let out another speed notch. He was cautioned to slip along quietly, and here he was, racing along at break-neck speed. He even wanted to shout. He wanted to swing his cap.

The two machines raced side by side for 50 rods, and then Mr. Crampas read and orders drawn on the ton pulled ahead. Miss Haskell tried it twice more and failed each time. She was not queen of that turn-pike. mel, that the village furnish tile for The chauffeur started to say some thing, but she silenced him with a look, and was getting ready for a fourth trial when a country constable stepped into the highway ahead.

"The squire is waitin' for just sech folks as you!" he said as he climbed into Mr. Crampton's auto, and beckoned for the other to follow.

The justice was in his office, half a mile ahead. It was his solemn day. He looked at the culprits over his speciacles and said:

"Sixty miles an hour, and suppose you'd have met a load of hay! Suppose an innocent child had been crossing the road! Suppose a one-legged any connections with any sewer or man had been going along with his

"But, your honor, the road was Section 2. Any person wishing to clear, and the pace was not sixy miles make any connection with any sewer an hour," protested the young lawyer. "Young man sit down. This is a serious case, and not to be decided in a minute. I adjourn it for three days,

The three days passed and the culprits were on hand for the trial.

It was plain that the justice was prejudiced in the case, at least so far as Mr. Crampton was concerned. He got the speed up to eighty miles an hour, and the constable swore that he heard whooping and yelling and that if a milkman had come along he'd have been smashed to a powder. He had probably dared the young lady to race with him and she accepted the dare. She was fined ten dollars as a great moral lesson, but Mr. Crampton was fined fifty.

The fines were paid and the culprits were about to depart when the constable stepped up to the lawyer and
