Townsend and His Rabbit's Foot.

Jackson Star: The Citizen Press says there's no such thing as luck in four leaf clovers or rabbit's feet. Isn't there? Well, you can't make Congressman Townsend believe it. When he started on his phenomenal race for the senatorial toga he received from Chester Brown of Constatine the left hind foot of a rabbit which he wrote had been killed by a hunchback in a cemetery at midnight with a silver bullet by the light of the moon. He added that it was the mate to one sent to Wm. Alden Smith when he was making his Senatorial campaign, and that he was to carry it in his left trouser's pocket and to feel of it whenever dis-

CITY IS LOGICAL POINT FOR WORLD'S PANAMA EXPOSITION

its Geographical Position and Many Other Considerations Mark it as Most Sultable Spot for Dedication of Great Work.

Public sentiment has decided that the completion of the Panama Canal in 1915 shall be celebrated with a great International Exposition in which all the nations of the world may participate; and the question of where this Exposition is to be held will be settled by Congress at its approaching session.

New Orleans and San Francisco are contesting for the honor of holding this Exposition, and both cities have guaranteed immense sums of money as an evidence of their ability to finance so great an enterprise. An Exposition worthy of the term

"World's Fair," such as New Orleans. proposes to build, will be a great educational movement. Its success as such, however, will depend entirely upon the percentage of our population who can secure its educational advantages, this in turn, depends upon its location, as the time in traveling to and from the Exposition, and the cost in railroad and Pullman fares, are the most important factors. Considering these matters, New fion, seem to be fully substantiated by the following facts:-New Orleans is 500 miles from the center of population in the United States. San Francisco is 2,500 miles distant therefrom.

Within a radius of 500 miles from New Orleans there are 17,500,000 people. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 2,000,000. Within a radius of 1,000 miles from Francisco there are only 6,000,000. At an average of 900 miles from New Orleans, there are 70 of our principal cities with a combined population of 20,000,000. Averaging 900 miles from San Francisco there are only 8 large cities, with a combined population of just 1,000,000. The average distance of all these cities to New Orleans is 792 miles,to San Francisco 2,407 miles.

Over 75 per cent. of the people of the United States could go to an Exposition there at an average expense for railroad fare of $12.50, as against an average of $37.50 to the Pacific Coast; and for several millions of our people, the Pullman fare and Dining Car expenses alone, for a trip to San Francisco, would amount to more than all their transportation expenses for a trip to New Orleans.

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular young bachelor of Löndon, is suddenly aroused from the aimless and indolent life he leads, by the startling news from the law firm of Barnes, Wiloughby & Son, that he and as fast as I could talk. is the heir to a sheep farm in Australia bringing in an income of $20,000 a year. (By F. L. LANDACRE.) Toads have been found to be friends of the farmer. They feed entirely upon an incredible number of insects. The federal department of agriculture, investigating the toad, discovers the startling fact that in 24 hours hours the insect food consumed by one toad equals in quantity four times the capacity of its stomach, which is practically filled and emptied four times every 24 hours. One hundred and fifty-nine stomachs examined by the department showed a content of 19 per cent. of ants: 16 per cent. of cut worms; 10 per cent. of thousandlegged worms; 9 per cent. caterpillars, 8 per cent. of ground beetles; 5 per cent. of destructive weekils; 3 per cent. of destructive weevils; 3

Protect the toad. Teach the thoughtless boy friendliness to this helpless, harmless, useful animal.

The frogs and toads, like many animals that are unable to defend themselves with teeth or claws, and are slow of foot and at the same time make a tempting morsal for almost any flesh-eating animal, rely to some extent at least on protective colora-

That is, they may seek surroundings in which their permanent color is inconspicuous or, as in the case of the frog and toad, they may in addition change their color to suit the surroundings.

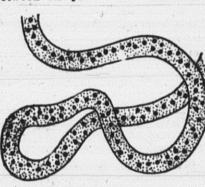

If you examine a toad particularly, or even a frog, you will see several colors, such as red, yellow and brown shading into black.

The intensity of these colors and the amount of surface covered by them varies, so that the effect of the blended colors varies considerably. An interesting experiment for a young naturalist consists in placing frogs, particularly the tree frogs, on a green, brown or gray background to see to what extent they will assume the color of their surrounding.

The skin of the toad is covered warts, which have a more or less unpleasant taste to animals if we may judge by their actions when they pick up a toad.

The raccoon is said to roll the toad between its paws some time before eating it. While the secretion of the skin is protective neither it nor any other act of the toad produces warts. The food habits of the toad can be easily tested by keeping them in the yard or garden and feeding them in the evening. They feed at night, and are not at all wild after being handled a few times.

In feeding them, only live insects the toad, insects disappear as if by masses of eggs which toads and frogs

These are always deposited in the water. The frog's eggs are in a mass and the toad's in a long string; both are covered by a jelly-like coat, which swells up and makes the mass of eggs frequently larger than the parent.

This covering probably protects the eggs from being eaten and also serves to retain the heat of the sun's rays.

The rate of growth of the egg depends upon the temperature, but in a few days the young tadpoles come out of the eggs remaining attached, however, to the masses of jelly or to adjacent vegetation.

The metamorphosis of toads and frogs is one of the most marvelous processes in nature and gives us a hint how other animals that now always live on land once came out of the water, for all land animals show evidence of having descended from water animals.

The decree of summary banishment for 8,000 members of the religion orders and confiscation of their property, worth millions, gave excuse for brutal outrages against the clergy.

The provisional government has now recognized the seriousness of the situation and the police adopted severe measures to prevent the population sacking the religious establishments and to check the demonstration against the religionists pending their

Benton's high moral character was blemished by his pugnacious disposition. In his early days he was involved in many "affairs of honor" as duels were termed then. He had not been in St. Louis long when the most unfortunate event in his career occurred. In the trial of a law suit some trivial dispute arose between him and a young attorney named Cha les Lucas, a highly esteemed and most estimable young man. Lucas won the case and Benton challenged him. Lucas declined the challenge at first, but Benton persisted and offered deliberate insults. Lucas then accepted. They fought a first duel and no one being injured a second meeting was insisted upon by both parties. In the second duel Lucas fell mortally wounded. Before dying he took Benton's hand and forgave him, but Benton never forgave himself, and the shadow of this tragedy went with him through the years to his grave. The code-duello was resorted to in those days often for insignificant things, and every public man of consequence had figured in such an affair either as principal or second. This duel was fought the year after Benton arrived in St. Louis. Four years later the father of the lamented vietim of the duelling cusdidates for senator against Benton. His Fight With "Old Hickory."

Benton, like Andrew Jackson, was of North Carolina birth, and, like Old Hickory, moved to Tennessee when a youth just entering upon manhood's estate. He became Jackson's friend while they both lived in Nashville and co-operated with Jackson in raising at that time considered extremely huthe brigade of militia which became the nucleus of the army that was to annihilate the British at New Orleans and make January 8, 1815, a red-letter da; in American annals. It hushed slavery agitation for a decade, and any attack upon it for a time was resisted by south as well as north. Benton was 39 years old when he took his seat and had lived exactly half the years given to him. Monroe was just beginning his second term as president, Calhoun was secretary of war, Henry Clay was speaker of the house of representatives. In the next presidential contest Benton supported Clay against Jackson, but ever after that he was Clay's political enemy and Jackson's warmest and strongest supporter.

Father of Homestead Law. To Benton more than any other man is due the fact that there is no frontier in the United States today. What was a wilderness west of the Rocky mountains fifty years ago is now settled by happy and prosperous men and women by reason of his effort in securing the enactment of the homestead law. Benton established the policy of selling public land at a maximum of $1.25 an acre, giving preference to actual settlers and securing to settlers the right of preemption. This made settlement easy and streams of sturdy men and women began at once to move westward.

Benton looked into the future further than any other statesman of his time. In answer to the taunts that the western country, particularly Oregon, would never be anything more than a hunting ground, he prophesied that the time would come when there would be more people west of the Rockies than east. He advocated the construction of a military road to New Mexico, and was so earnest in his sup tom was one of the unsuccessful can- port of the idea of a transcontinental railroad that his enemies charged him with being mentally unbalanced on the subject, and even his friends feared he was too enthusiastic. In one of his first speeches he prophesied that the Pacific coast would soon become the door of Asia and advised sending ministers to China and Japan-a proposal

Brought About Specie Payments. It was through Benton's effort that was nicknamed "Old Bullion," of drawn around it and across its face this floor. With how much reason let but after Andrew Jackson, the presi-

In this he made the mistake that has been made by so many senators and congressmen of this day, who say they oppose protection, but vote for protection on the products of their own states, thereby placing themselves in the position of not being able to successfully question the justice of the demand of those in other states for a larger share of protection for them. After the election of Andrew Jackson to the chief magistracy Benton became the right arm of that great president. In the atttempted nullificaion of the tariff laws by South Carolina, Benton made effective Jackson's ultimatum to that state demanding submission to the law, by engineering the passage of a compromise tariff bill which stopped everybody from talking of fighting, but satisfied nobody.

Fought United States Bank. Jackson's greatest battle was against the United States bank, which he declared must either be put out of business or it would run the government. Benton led this fight in the senate. He brought up the question in 1831 by submitting a resolution to the effect that it was not expedient to the bank raged fiercely for years. It had many powerful adherents and obtained the support of a number of members of congress, as was shown later by investigation, through what amounted to orazen bribery in the way of favoritism on loans. In the midst of the fight the presidential election of 1832 took place and Jackson was triumphantly re-elected. Shortly after this Jackson made an order withdrawing the public funds from the bank. This precipitated a tremendous public uproar and the senate adopted a resolution censuring Jackson for the act. Benton immediately began a fight to expunge this resolution from the record, and finally, in the last days of the Jackson administration, the mo-

The old warrior was not dismayed and kept up the fight. In 1852 he was sent to the lower house of congress from St. Louis as a Union Democrat. For thirty years he had been absolute dictator in the politics of Missouri. His word was final, and his wishes law, but the tide had turned, and for of his life by giving up the fight acthe remaining years of his life set steadily against him. Yet at no time in his career does Benton present a more inspiring figure than when, with his back to the wall, crowded on every side by foes, he continued to battle for the principles he believed in. By compromising and by truckling to the public sentiment of his state he could have regained his seat in the senate, but he would have lost the love and admiration due the brave man who prefers defeat with the right to victory with what he considers wrong.

Benton's mannerisms were marked and did not tend to make him popular with the masses. He seemed egotistical to the point of absurdity, yet in him it was merely exaggerated selfrespect. To the casual observer stern and pompous, he was gentle and tender-hearted to those who knew him well. His public and private life were above reproach. His high sense of honor as a public servant, his incorruptible integrity, his unwavering adherence at whatever cost to the principles he believed in, his powerful intellect and his aggressive energy combined to make him a fighter eminently qualified to lead and represent the militant people of the West in the first half of the last century.

He was defeated for re-election to the house in 1854, and in 1856 became for governor, and ran third in the race. He was now 74 years old, but as lamenting his fate or the people's ingratitude, he cheerfully took up the completion of his "Thirty Years' View," giving a mental picture of the ton, undismayed by the storm of pub-In 1848 the anti-Bentonites carried a lic misunderstanding that had wreck-

So Benton won life's battle by sim ple honesty, by perseverance, by having ideals and remaining true to them in sunshine and in shadow. His influence will be felt for good as long as this republic lasts, and the failure to secure political preferment at the end centuates the grandeur of his character. He lost for the moment, but in losing he gained for all time. For him there was victory in defeat. The lesson of his life is-it is not essential always to win, but it is essential to keep the faith.

The Mystery of a Duel. Having fought his duel and saved his honor by firing a shot in the air. the editor of a French provincial newspaper went back to his desk and the incident had quite left his mind when he felt something strange in his thigh. He looked and found that he was bleeding profusely.

A doctor was called, who discovered that a bullet was embedded in the editor's thigh some two inches deep and required extraction. "Why was this not taken notice of on the spot where the duel took place? he asked. The editor was as much in the dark as the doctor. At the moment of the duel he had fired into the air and his adversary also took evidently been no intention of doing the slightest harm on either side. The editor felt nothing as he left the field and had shaken hands with his antagonist as a sign of reconciliation. How a bullet came to be lodged in his thigh was simply one of the mysteries of dueling.

Reductions Made in Europe and the Far East in Campaign to Increase Use of Kerosene.

New York .-- J. I. C. Clarke, through whom the Standard Oil Co. makes its official announcements to the public, has issued a statement to the effect that the company has entered on a thoroughly mapped out campaign to increase the consumption of kerosene in European countries and the lands of the Orient. The first move in this campaign is the reduction of the prices of oil in those countries. Mr.

Clarke's announcement says, in part: "The Standard Oil Co. has inaugurated a campaign to increase the world's consumption of refined oil. The level of prices for refined oil today in the inited States is lower than at any ne during recent years, and as a rect result of these prices the connption of refined oil in this country increasing. The same policy is now ring actively pursued abroad."

As indicated by this statement, the ted States, though without announcing that it had in view a campaign that would cover the world. In August the price of refined oil in tanks was reduced from 61/2c to 51/2c a gallon, and the price of refined oil in barrels at the refinery was cut 1 cent, from 9%c to 8% c a gallon.

Argue for New Charter.

Attorneys for Adrian presented an important question to the supreme court, at Lansing, relative to the vote on charter revision in the cities of this state. A proposal to revise the charter of Adrian was submitted to the voters last spring. It carried by a majority of the vote cast on that particular issue, but did not obtain a majority of all the votes cast, and the council refused to appoint a charter commission, declaring that the intent of the law is that the question must receive a majority of all votes Rather effective and equally unusual cast, if it is to be effective. Citizens is the gown of two-tone silk veiled contend that the revision proposal was properly carried and ask the court to compel the council to appoint the commission, urging the law requires a simple majority of the vote cast on the question.

Explosion Buries 52.

Entombed by an explosion in the Starkville mine of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co., at Starkville, Col., at least fifty-two men are the objects of heroic efforts of rescuers, trying to penetrate the black depths of the mine in the hope that some or probably all of the imprisoned miners might be rescued.

The presence of black damp, which almost invariably follows in the wake of coal mine explosions, makes the work of rescuers extremely hazardous.

Auditor General-Oramel B. Fuller. The Republican state convention asembled in Detroit Thursday, completed the ticket for state offices, adopted a progressive platform, was addressed by Senator William Alden Smith, Hon. Chase S. Osborn and others. Senator Smith's address was the key-note of the campaign, of course. The nominations were unanimous; they being renominations, with the exception of attorney-general. There were five candidates for this office, but Kuhn had the greatest strength and, though not having votes enough to nominate on the first ballot, a rapid-fire of changes after the roll-call settled the matter."

All the defeated candidates were given the opportunity to pledge their loyalty, but Patrick H. Kelly was the only one who was present and he did his part cleverly. Senator Smith called for Amos S. Musselman, but he was not present and Grant Fellows had also disappeared when he was called for.

The Democratic Ticket.

For state land commissioner—Orlando F. Barnes, of Crawford, The best Democratic convention that has been held in 20 years, according to the belief of the leaders present, is that which was called to order by State Chairman Shields in Kalamazoo Friday morning.

The opening feature of the convention was the speech of Frank D. Eamans, of Detroit, as temporary chairman of the convention, in which he scored the Republican administration, Chase S. Osborn, Gov. Warner and the Payne tariff

The Wayne county delegation arrived late, so that no real business was done till 1 p. m., then things went with a rush. The platform is of a very warm tone.

Candidates prominently named for various offices refused to allow the convention to consider their names, among them James T. Scully, of Ionia, who had the strength of the convention behind him for attorney-general. On his refusal to run, Thomas J. Bresnahan, of Cassopolis, was nominated unanimously.

Mayor Bailey, of Battle Creek, was proposed for a place on the ticket, out he, too, refused. The nominations brought considerable confusion but they were finally completed and all were made unanimous.

INFLUENCE OF THE MOTHER

Well to Remember That She Is Ever a Model of Behavior to the Children.

It is hard for a young mother, who has not yet overcome the wayward tendencies of her own youthful nature, to realize the influence she exerts over her little one. She is constantly surrounded by critical imitators who copy her morals and manners.

As the mother is, so are her sons and daughters. If a family of children are blessed with an intelligent mother, who is dainty and refined in her manner, and does not consider it necessary to be one woman in the drawing room and an entirely different person in her everyday life, but who is a true mother and always a tender, charming woman, she will invariably see her habits of speech and perfect manners repeated in her children.

Great, rough men and noisy, busy boys will always tone down their voices and step quietly and try to be more mannerly when she stops to give them a kind word and a pleasant smile. For a true woman will never fall to say and do all the kind, pleasant things she can that will in any way help to lift up and cheer those whose lives are shaded with care and toil. The mother of today rules the world of tomorrow.

"For years I could not safely eat any breakfast. I tried various kinds of breakfast food, but they were all soft, starchy messes which gave me distressing headaches. I drank strong coffee, too, which appeared to benefit me at the time, but added to the headaches afterwards. Toast and coffee were no better, for I found the toast very constipating.

"A friend persuaded me to quit the old coffee and the starchy breakfast foods, and use Postum and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice. I began using them three months ago.

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have headaches. I have gained 12 pounds in weight and feel better in every way. "Grape-Nuts make a delicious as

Managing a Husband. Men are like children, they want managing, although you must never let them dream that you think so. No child likes to be ordered about, no man will endure coercion. But managing! It is an art so subtle, so elusive, that few women understand even the rudiments of it. Sisters mine, let us reason together, says Woman's Life. In every human being there is a spark of the divine; it is yours to fan that spark into a flame—that is managing a man-it is to get the very best out of him there is to have, and not two women in ten can do it. Do not think that there is anything unworthy in managing a man-to bring out the best is a high vocation. Only let us see to it that we are worthy of it. There are women who have made angels of men, but at the cost of their own divinity. There is room for more than one unselfish person in a family.

It is a shame for people who have in their lives a consciousness of love and character and courage, to fall into the wasteful folly of unhappiness about the unimportant.-Margaret De-
