HENRY H. FENN COMPANY

Is There a Mortgage

On your salary before you earn it? You can always keep out of debt if you spend less than you earn and put your surplus into a good strong bank.

Of course, illness or other hard luck may come to you, than your outgo will exceed your income, but if you have been wise and saved money you need not suffer for want of necessities and comforts. Don't you think you will do better work when you know that no one can come to you with a claim.

On Next Week's Income

You can have that assurance if you become a systematic saver and a regular depositor. Besides the actual amount of money you lay by and the three per cent compound interest it will earn, the practice of rigid economy will make you a better business man, a better man to your family and friends, and a better citizen generally. If you have not started on this road to financial success, take the first step now by opening a savings account in this bank.

Fatal Accident.

John Fahrner, of Sharon, aged about 78 years, died at his home Saturday evening, November 4, 1911, as a result of a runaway accident which he met with about 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

Mr. Fahrner left his home, which is in what is known as the Irwin school district, for Francisco, and when about two miles from his home he met an auto truck from Jackson, which contained a piano covered with a canvas that was blowing and the horse became frightened, turned short around tipping the carriage over and ran home.

Mr. Fahrner had three ribs broken and was injured internally. He was removed to his home and died about 8 o'clock in the evening. He has resided in Sharon for many years and was highly respected by a large circle of friends.

He is survived by two daughters, Misses Pauline and Carrie, and two brothers, Chris. sr., of Sylvan, and John, of Ann Arbor. The funeral was held from Sylvan Center school house at 11:30 o'clock Wednesday morning. Several of the members of St. Paul's church choir furnished the music. Interment Maple Grove cemetery, Sylvan Center.

Final Dividend.

The receiver of the Chelsea Savings Bank will sell the balance of the assets of the bank tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock as appears by an advertisement in another column. This means that the final dividend will be paid, probably before we again go to press and should be at least ten per cent to the savings depositors. This would make a total dividend of eighty per cent as seventy has already been paid.

Inasmuch as The Standard figures as given out the Thursday after the close of the bank four years ago were that savings depositors would receive seventy-six per cent or better, we feel cheery about our judgment, especially as at that time the highest guess was in the neighborhood of fifty cents on the dollar, and claims were offered at thirty cents on the dollar. After the Receivership is finally closed The Standard will publish the figures in full, something that heretofore has never been done in this matter.

Stick-up Men at Work.

Joseph Weber was the victim of a bold "hold-up" on south Main street about 6 o'clock Wednesday evening. He was on his way home and when near the residence Charles Mohrlock, a man stepped up to him from behind and grasping him by the throat pulled him backwards, reached into his pocket and secured his purse which contained about $9.00. After securing the wallet two men ran away from him. He had been followed from up town by men to the spot where the assault took place.

Mr. Weber is unable to identify the persons who committed the act. One suspect was taken before Justice Witherell but was allowed to go as he could not be identified as having any connection with the assault.

Celebrated Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Abner Beach, of Lima Center, assisted by about thirty of their nearest relatives celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Monday of this week.

Mr. Beach was born in the state of New York, and in 1838 his parents settled in Lima township where he has since resided, except for a few years when Mr. and Mrs. Beach made their home in Chelsea. Mrs. Beach was born in Lima in 1839 and was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David K. Dixon, who were among the early settlers of the township. They have one son, D. E. Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Beach are both highly esteemed by a large circle of friends who extend to them their congratulations.

Charles Leo O'Connor.

Charles Leo O'Connor was born June 23, 1905, and died at the home of his mother Mrs. Alice O'Connor, Saturday evening, November 4, 1911, age 6 years, 4 months, 13 days. He recently underwent an operation for throat trouble at the Homeopathic hospital at Ann Arbor. He was a bright, attractive and active little child. He leaves to mourn his loss, his mother, four brothers, John, Arthur, Daniel and Joseph, and two sisters, Mary and Sarah. The funeral was held from the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Tuesday morning, Rev. W. P. Considine officiating. Burial in St. Mary's cemetery, Sylvan.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Alice O'Connor wishes to thank her many friends for the flowers furnished at the funeral of her son.

CHURCH WRECKED.

Acetylene Generator in Basement Exploded Sunday Evening.

Bethel Evangelical Lutheran church of Freedom, was badly damaged by an explosion of the acetylene generator which supplied the gas for lighting the edifice.

The explosion occurred about 6:45 o'clock Sunday evening and at the time the janitor, Martin Heber, was ringing the bell for the evening service in the front entry of the church and he was blown out the door and down the front steps and quite badly injured. William Broesamle, who had just arrived at the place, lost his hat and had his hair singed. Irene Alber, aged 12 years, was struck by a piece of flying glass which cut a bad gash in one of her eyes, but it is thought that she will not lose the sight of the eye.

The lighting plant was situated in the basement of the church and just under the speakers' rostrum, which was blown up when the generator gave away. Had the explosion occurred a few moments later those who would have been on the speakers' bench are Dr. F. Mayer, pastor of the church, Congressman Wedemeyer, Attorney Otto Haab, of Ann Arbor, Rev. Papadof, of Saline, Rev. Jacob Wulfsman, of Manchester, and the auditorium would have been filled with a large audience who had been called there by the announcement that Mr. Wedemeyer would deliver an address on Panama.

The church was a new one, having been built last year, and probably is the largest in the township. The force of the explosion blew out the stained glass in the front and sides of the building and considerable of the plaster on the walls and ceilings was torn off. A fire started in the basement, but through the forethought of Rev. Wulfsman, who secured a quantity of flour at the parsonage, the blaze was soon smothered.

Had the explosion occurred a few moments later there would undoubtedly have been many seriously injured as the church would have contained a capacity audience. It is estimated that the damage will reach about $500.

Postal Savings System.

As the Chelsea postoffice will become a postal savings depository November 24th, the following will interest prospective depositors:

Accounts may be opened and deposits made by any person of the age of 10 years or over in his or her name and by a married woman in her own name and free from any interference or control by her husband. No person can have more than one account at any one time.

No person may open a postal-savings account at any post office who is not a patron of that office.

All accounts must be opened in person by the depositor or his authorized representative. After opening an account a depositor may forward subsequent deposits to the post office by mail.

Deposits will be accepted only from individuals, and no account will be opened in the name of any corporation, association, society, firm, or partnership, or in the names of two or more persons jointly.

No account will be opened in the name of one person in trust for or on behalf of another person or persons.

The service of the Postal Savings System is free, and no charge or fee is collected or required in connection with the opening of an account or the withdrawal of money deposited.

When a person applies to open an account he must furnish the necessary information for the postmaster or his representative to fill out an application, which he will then be required to sign. If the applicant signs by mark his signature must be witnessed by a disinterested person.

Deposits are evidenced by postal-savings certificates issued in fixed denominations of $1, $2, $5, $10, $20, $50, and $100, each bearing the name of the depositor, the number of his account, the date of issue, the name of the depository office, and the date on which interest begins. The postmaster or his representative will make out a duplicate of each certificate issued, which the depositor will be required to sign and which the postmaster will retain in his records.

No account may be opened for less than $1, nor will fractions of a dollar be accepted for deposit.

No person is permitted to deposit more than $100 in any one calendar month nor to have a total balance to his credit at one time of more than $500 exclusive of accumulated interest.

Savings certificates can not be transferred or negotiated and will be payable only to the person to whom issued.

On opening an account a depositor is supplied with an envelope in which he may keep his savings certificates. On this envelope is printed information for his guidance, and also a blank ledger record on which to keep an account of his deposits and withdrawals.

In case a savings certificate is lost or destroyed the depositor should notify the postmaster. If deemed proper, a new certificate will be issued upon compliance by the depositor with the necessary requirements.

Postmasters are not permitted to receive savings certificates for safe-keeping.

Amounts less than $1 may be saved for deposit by the purchase of 10-cent postal-savings cards and adhesive 10-cent postal-savings stamps. Each postal-savings card contains blank spaces to which savings stamps may be affixed from time to time as purchased, and a postal-savings card with nine 10-cent savings stamps thus affixed will be accepted as a deposit of $1 either in opening an account or in adding to an existing account.

Savings cards and stamps will be redeemed only by the issue of savings certificates and are not valid for postage. They will not be received in exchange for postage stamps nor will postage stamps be accepted in exchange for postal-savings cards or stamps.

Interest will be allowed on all deposits at the rate of 2 per cent per annum, computed on each savings certificate separately, and payable annually. No interest will be paid on money which remains on deposit for a fraction of a year only.

Deposits will bear interest from the 1st day of the month next following that in which deposited.

Interest will continue to accrue on a savings certificate as long as it remains outstanding, certificates being valid until paid, without limitation as to time.

Compound interest is not allowed on an outstanding certificate, but a depositor may withdraw interest payable and include it in a new deposit, which will bear interest at the regular rate.

A depositor may at any time withdraw the whole or any part of his deposits to his credit with any interest payable by surrendering savings certificates, properly indorsed for the amount desired.

A woman who opens an account and afterwards marries must present her savings certificates at her office in order that the certificates may be indorsed as payable to her in her new name. The postmaster will receive no further deposits from a depositor failing to comply with this requirement, nor will he make any partial or interest payment to her.

Postal-savings bonds can only be procured by the conversion of postal-savings deposits, and will not be issued to persons who are not depositors, but whether in registered or coupon form they may, upon receipt by the depositor, be sold and assigned at any time to any person desired.

Society Officers.

The Excelsior Degree of the L. O. T. M. M. at their meeting Tuesday evening elected the following officers: Queen Regent—Ada R. Speer. Queen Bee—Lila M. Campbell. Prime Minister—Mary L. Boyd. Priestess—Helen Young. Court Clerk—Martha E. Shaver. Chancellor of Treasury—Josie Johnson. Court Reader—Ruth J. Waltrous. Court Jester—Amy Gentner. Right Attendant—Amelia VanRiper. Left Attendant—Agnes Runciman. Inner Warder—Kate Rheinfank. Outer Warder—Mabel Hughes. Pianist—Evelyn Foster.

Couldn't Sober Up.

Among the number arraigned before Judge Dahlem Thursday morning at the police station was a man giving his name as Charles Nelson and his residence as Chelsea. He had been picked up in a mudhole where the watering trough is at the corner of Main street and Waterloo avenue. He had rolled in the slough until he was plastered with mud from head to foot. His hair was full of it, as was his mustache, and his appearance was that of a wild man when brought before the court. At first he denied being drunk. He said he drank only one glass of beer, did not see the watering trough and ran into it. He had $3.50 in change, which was accepted as the amount of his fine. The Chelsea named Nelson who was picked up out of the mud at a watering trough Wednesday night and fined for being drunk, was arraigned in police court again yesterday morning. He had gone out and got drunk again. This time he went to jail for fifteen days in default of a fine of $10.—Patriot, November 4.

WINGED THIEVES OF EGYPT

Kites and Crows Rob Tea Tables and Steal Gilt Balls From the Links.

Out at Gezira, where all Cairo has its rendezvous at the Sporting club every afternoon in and out of season, there exist large colonies of kites and crows. No sooner are the tea tables laid out than the former, who have been perched on the quiver on the adjacent trees, start circling round and round. With a sudden dive one of these hawklike birds will swoop down on the table he has chosen and pick off the bread and butter and cake.

New arrivals in Egypt are always very disconcerted by these antics. It matters not how many people are seated around the tables. The kite is no respecter of persons and on one crowded afternoon last season, when the German crown princess was taking tea, I remember seeing no fewer than eight kites swoop of their estates by as many kites in the space of a few minutes.

These monster birds add to the terror which they strike to the heart of the new arrival by the fact that their flight is so sudden and the theft is committed without stopping. They describe a curve, the lowest point of which is the plate of bread and butter or cake, and so accurate is their descent that rarely do they leave or drop anything. An amusing factor in this otherwise rather annoying situation is furnished by the crows, who invariably act as scouts for the kites, and the presence of whom, hopping about the grass, always precedes one of these depredatory flights.

When the coup has been successfully brought off the crows evince their pleasure by ear splitting caws, and proceed to follow the plunderer at a respectful distance, possibly in order to express their unbounded admiration in the vain hope of obtaining a few crumbs. On the golf course the kites are a source of endless trouble to the players—and incidentally one of great profit to the golf ball vendors—for it is no unusual thing for your ball to be whiffed off just as you are making ready to put after a second approach.—Cairo Correspondence Fall Mail Gazette.

The Stepmother in the Classics.
The ancients were as bitter on the subject of the stepmother as any modern could be. Their metaphorical uses of these words for a stepmother are cruelly significant. Thus the Romans had an expression "to complain to a stepmother" (noverca), meaning to complain in vain; and "noverca," beginning, no doubt, as slang, came to be a recognized term for rough places of land or for ditches which drained off the water imperfectly and slowly. The Greeks were as bad with their word, "metrix." Hesiod spoke of lucky and unlucky days as "mother and stepmother days," and Aeschylus brands a dangerous seacoast as "a stepmother to ships."

Old Joke Appropriately Quoted.
Senator Sullivan of New York once put in a new form a joke as old as medicine. The occasion was a banquet of homeopathic physicians. During the banquet the usual toasts were drunk. To the health of "the ladies," of "the president," of "Hahnemann, the father of homeopathy," and of a dozen other persons and subjects, glasses were drained duly, and then, all of a sudden, the toastmaster remarked: "Senator Sullivan has not been heard from. Senator Sullivan will now propose a health." The senator arose and beamed upon the assembly of physicians. "I propose," he said, "the health of the sick."

Libel on Stepmothers.
One of London's prominent medical men has "got himself disliked" by the stepmothers of all nations. The basis of his offending is his public assertion that "all stepmothers are instinctively cruel to stepchildren."

Such a statement is regarded, very justly, as in the nature of wholesale libel. In fact, every observing man and woman in the civilized world can recall plenty of instances proving the falsity of the doctor's charge.

This London libeler would find occasion for apology to the women he maligns by reading the history of the boyhood of Abraham Lincoln and of the devotion of the stepmother of that great American.—Chicago Journal.

Diogenes Again.
Diogenes paused and shook the hand of the prominent citizen heartily. "Is he the honest man?" asked the Athenians.

"S-h-h," replied Diogenes in a whisper. "I have to humor him. He owns the oil trust."

Whereupon he made his way to the refinery and had his lantern filled free of charge.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Satisfactory Explanation.
I thought you told me this place was so healthy that nobody ever died here!" objected the prospective purchaser to the real estate agent. "I did, and I'll stick to it." "I'll bet you will. You also told me that people in this suburb didn't have to pay grocery bills, because the ground raised their vegetables for them." "I told you that too." "How do you account for the fact that one of your prominent citizens died of starvation yesterday?"

"That was a joke."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PROHIBITION IN STATE THE AIM

THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE WILL CONSIDER SUCH RESOLUTION NOV. 28.

W. C. T. U. AND PROHIBITION PARTY MAY WORK TOGETHER.

Special Meeting to Be Held in Detroit That May Unite Separate Temperance Bodies in Michigan.

Following the past six years of continuous effort in behalf of local option in the various counties of Michigan a strenuous campaign for absolute prohibition of the liquor traffic in the state may soon be launched. A resolution to this effect was introduced at the annual meeting of the state board of trustees of the league at the Y. M. C. A. in Detroit. The resolution is as follows:

"Whereas, The creation and development of temperance sentiment seems to have become so general and widespread as to justify the belief that Michigan as a commonwealth, desires to rid itself of the saloon; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Anti-Saloon League of Michigan that the next legislature of this state be petitioned to enact a law prohibiting the beverage liquor traffic, and that this federation of the enemies of the saloon earnestly seeks the assistance and co-operation of every temperance organization, and individual, to obtain the enactment of such legislation."

L. E. Stewart of Battle Creek submitted the resolution. After a prolonged discussion the meeting adjourned without taking action on the resolution but a special meeting has been called for November 23 to be held in the Detroit Y. M. C. A., at which the matter will be taken up and settled.

In case the resolution is adopted, it is thought the Anti-Saloon league, the state W. C. T. U. and the Prohibition party, will work together for the passage of a prohibition bill through the legislature.

Decision May Release 20 Men.

An opinion handed down by the supreme court Friday afternoon will probably mean the release of William Grosoup, who was sentenced from Hillsdale in 1905 to serve from seven to 15 years in Jackson on a charge of robbery and with him may be released 19 other convicts.

In June, 1906, Grosoup committed the robbery, but was not sentenced until the legislature passed a new law. It was this law that he was sentenced under. He applied to the supreme court for a new trial.

A copy of the decision has been sent to the three prisons in Michigan asking for the history of men who were sentenced under the 1905 law, and whose crimes were committed under the 1903 law. They are six in Ionia, nine in Jackson and five in Marquette.

Osborn Wants Women to Vote.

Gov. Osborn declares he favors women's suffrage, and says he believes women will be voting in every state in the country within ten years, although he does not pose as a prophet. He made these statements in answer to a query from an eastern newspaper, saying that he favored suffrage for women as a wise and just proposition, and asserting that, in his opinion, sentiment in favor of it is increasing in this state. Asked as to his views as to the prospect of success of the movement in this country within the next 10 years, the governor replied:

"I hope for its success within that time, but I am not a prophet."

Association Facing Crisis.

The third annual convention of the Michigan State Society for the Prevention and Cure of Tuberculosis was held in Detroit. One of the papers read was by the president of the state association, Dr. A. S. Warthin, who said that the association was facing a crisis because of the falling off of interest in the movement and consequently of financial contributions. The society adopted resolutions regarding the segregating of advanced cases, and went on record as strongly advocating the establishment by the state of an institution for the purpose.

Banker Under Arrest.

Charged with the embezzlement of $12,000 of the funds of the Manistique State bank and falsifying the books of that institution to cover up his shortage, Melvin Orr, cashier of the bank, is under arrest at Manistique. It is asserted that Mr. Orr never speculated but spent the greater part of the money he is alleged to have taken in making himself a good fellow.

Jury Frees Mrs. Volk.

Mrs. Volk, tried for the murder of her husband at Muskegon was acquitted, after the jury had been out 22 hours. It was charged she wanted her husband to die because she felt she herself would not live long. He was killed with a shotgun.

Hancock is organizing a second division of the naval brigade. It is thought that this organization will give Hancock the balance of power and that the training ship Yantic, over which there is a controversy with Escanaba, will remain in Hancock.

County Clerk Kaiser, of Houghton county, has up to date issued only 550 deer licenses. This is a comparatively small number and is taken to mean that the hunters are waiting for snow. The normal number of deer hunters in Houghton county is about 2,000.

Railroad Commissioner Dickinson says in reference to the decision of the supreme court ordering a physical connection between the Michigan Central and the D. U. R. tracks at Oxford: "The commission considers the verdict a great victory. We will now make a number of orders requiring steam and electric roads to make physical connections. These have been held up pending the decision of the Oxford suit." Dickinson intimated that connections which will benefit Birmingham and Farmington villages will be ordered.

Ambrose Pond, a trusty at Jackson prison, in the mailing department, made his escape Sunday afternoon. Pond was sentenced from Jackson in 1909, to serve from two and a half to five years, for stealing sheep. A reward of $50 is offered for his capture.

Eastern announcements from an official source are that the Hallack Chemical Co. of Philadelphia is to build a $1,000,000 plant in Wyandotte, thus following the lead of the Michigan Alkali Co., Pennsylvania Salt Co. and Solvay Co., in getting at the salt beds below Detroit.

NEW COAL BED FOUND NEAR FLINT

WORKMEN BORING WELL NEAR CITY BORE INTO THICK VEINS OF BITUMINOUS COAL.

THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY RUNS THROUGH PROPERTY.

Leases of Adjoining Farms Have Been Taken and a Company Is Now Developing the Property.

What is believed to be the largest field of bituminous coal in Michigan has been discovered in a territory comprising 775 acres of land a mile west of Flint.

Developments of the property by the Genesee Coal Mining Co., which is now operating a mine east of Flint in Burton township, will soon be begun. Officials of the company are now at work on the plans for sinking a number of shafts and expect to announce within a week or two the date on which they will commence excavating.

The first trace of coal was found when workmen were boring for a well on the farm of William Wilson. The prospectors found they had struck a thick vein which increased in size the further they explored. A score of other farms in the vicinity were leased and testing started on all of them. On five farms beside the Wilson place the same indications of a very rich bed of the coal was found.

The Grand Trunk railroad runs through the center of the territory and the new mines will be afforded splendid shipping facilities. It is said the Grand Trunk will in time take its entire coal supply from this bed and this prospective contract has boomed the property and hurried development plans.

Will Test Warner-Cramton Law.

Prosecuting Attorney Fuller has caused the arrest of C. L. Fuller who conducts a saloon at Otter Lake, in Genesee county. The prosecutor states that his arrest is based on the Warner-Cramton law, which states no saloon can be opened within 100 feet of disputed territory. The prosecutor holds that Lapeer county, a local option county, is disputed territory. Many complaints have reached the prosecutor's office, which is said to have caused the arrest.

The defendant waived examination and was bound over to the circuit court. It is stated that the State Brewery's association will fight the case for Mr. Fuller, believing the law unconstitutional.

Gov. Osborn at Greenville.

Signalized by the firing of the first gun in the 1912 state campaign, the seventh annual banquet of the Montclair County Republican club was held in Greenville. Gov. Osborn was the chief speaker and a significant demonstration took place when he was introduced by Toastmaster Van derburg. The toastmaster with great enthusiasm declared that Gov. Osborn was big enough to govern Michigan once, "and by the eternal, he is big enough to be elected a second time." There was loud applause and cries of "You bet, he is."

Farmers Begging for Men.

Twenty-five cents an hour and board and lodging in what farmers are advertising to pay common laborers to help harvest the bean crop in Huron county. This is equivalent to $3 for 10 hours' work, reckoning board and lodging at 50 cents a day. And, even at these unprecedented wages, the farmers cannot get as much help as they need. They are advertising the 25-cent offer in both the newspapers and by handbills.

Adrian Celebrates R. R. Anniversary.

In honor of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the arrival of the first train over the Erie & Kalamazoo railroad, the women clubs of Adrian unveiled a memorial boulder on the courthouse square. This road was the first to be built this side of New York state and was the occasion of great rejoicing at the time of its completion.

Osborn Endorses Bible in Schools.

Gov. Chase S. Osborn heartily endorsed the resolution passed by the Michigan State Teachers' association favoring the use of the Bible in public schools and paid the teachers' several high compliments in an address given before them in Detroit at the Light Guard armory. This meeting was the closing one of this year's convention.

Politicians, who have been scheming to find a candidate against Taft in the regular Republican ranks, have been referring a good deal of late to Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Hughes, former governor of New York, as good conservative timber. Justice Hughes has ended the talk with a flat refusal to be in any way considered as a candidate.

Erie township, Monroe county, next to Ohio, proposes a bond issue of $50,000 to help stone the old military road to the Ohio line to get a market road into Toledo. Erie township so far has lent no help to the Detroit-Toledo boulevard project.

The Michigan alliance of societies for Christian primary instruction will hold its first meeting on November 16 at Grand Rapids. The alliance was formed last spring and is composed of the most prominent educational societies in the Christian Reformed churches in western Michigan. It is the largest alliance of its kind in the United States.

GENERAL NEWS IN BRIEF

John F. Fox, speaker of the Pennsylvania house of representatives, died suddenly at his home in Homestead.

He will touch Bahia and Rio de Janeiro in Brazil, Montevideo in Uruguay, Buenos Aires in the Argentine Republic and Valparaiso in Chile.

Announcement is made at the state house in Maine that the governor and council have decided, after a long discussion, that the special election held on Sept. 11 had resulted in constitutional prohibition being reaffirmed. The acceptance of corrections in the vote of four towns reversed the original result, which was a majority of 26 for repeal.

The sale of large quantities of stamps at reduced rates resulted in the arrest of five men in El Paso, Tex., believed to have been operating recently in the northwest, and the recovery of several thousand dollars' worth of stamps, diamonds and old gold. The men will have a hearing Monday before the United States commissioner.

Farmers throughout the Illinois corn belt, facing heavy loss on account of the large amount of grain that has rotted in the fields because of excessive rains, have determined to recoup part of their loss at the expense of the coal dealer by using decayed corn for fuel during the winter. The amount of corn left in the fields is the largest in the history of Illinois.

The United States district court of appeals has affirmed the right of 5,000 Cherokee Indian children, born since 1902, to share in an undistributed allotment of $5,500,000 by the government to the Cherokee nation. Senior members of the tribe contended that the children were not entitled to share in the money because they were born after the Cherokee enrollment was made in 1902.

March is the favorite month for suicides, judging from statistics of 1910 prepared by the census bureau. There were 8,590 suicides in the U. S. during the year, 856 coming in March. R., of Superior, Wis., formerly first lieutenant in the Ninety-second Indiana volunteers during the civil war, has presented a claim to the war department for $90,000 salary and interest up to the present time.

DEMOCRATS WIN BIG OHIO CITIES

G. O. P. LOSES OUT IN CINCINNATI, COLUMBUS AND CLEVELAND.

SOCIALISTS POLL HEAVY VOTE IN BUCKEYE STATE.

Eugene N. Foss Democratic Governor of Boston, Is Re-elected Over Frothingham Republican.

Eight Ohio cities elected socialistic mayors Tuesday. These cities are Lorain, St. Mary's, Martins Ferry, Fostoria, Mt. Vernon, Barberton, Salem and Cuyahoga Falls.

The democrats were swept into power in the three largest cities of Ohio Tuesday, Columbus, Cincinnati and Cleveland returning decisive democratic pluralities.

A feature of the elections throughout the state was the large socialistic vote. In Columbus, Eby, the socialistic candidate for mayor, according to early returns, was running a close race with Mayor Marshall, the republican nominee for second place, while George J. Karb, democrat, had been elected by from four to six thousand plurality.

Foss Re-elected.

On the face of the returns from 954 out of 1,070 election districts, the democrats won the state election Tuesday and kept Massachusetts in the party column by continuing Gov. Eugene N. Foss in office for a second term. The returns gave Foss, democrat, 187,553; Frothingham, republican, 177,074. Last year the same districts gave Foss, democrat, 201,334; Draper, republican, 167,497.

PEKIN IS CAPTURED

IMPERIALISTS FIRE INFAMOUS SHELLS IN THE CITY.

The following cable dispatch dated Pekin has been received by Tong King Chong, secretary of the loyal junta of the Chinese revolution, and editor of the Chinese Free Press:

"Insurgents captured Pekin. General uprising in city successful. Manchus slaughtered. The emperor fled north to the Jehol river with the dowager. Prince Ching, regent, captured. The Forbidden City is in insurgents' hands. The national assembly has declared for a republic. The republic is now firmly established. 'Wu Ting Fang is to be minister of foreign affairs; Dr. Sun Lat Sen will be named first president and dictator.'"

Gen. Li Hung Peng, the rebel commander-in-chief, has rejected the peace terms presented to him by Gen. Yuan Shi Kai, who was commanded by the government to restore peace in China.

Dr. Wu Ting Fang, former Chinese minister to the United States, accepted the post of foreign affairs in the new Chinese cabinet, throwing the weight of his vast experience in statecraft to the revolutionary cause.

Wen Tsung Yao, another prominent Chinese, has joined the rebel cause. News of the action of these statesmen caused a sensation here.

Almost the whole of the native city of Hankow has been burned and it is feared that the Wesleyan mission near the Han river, in which are 50 blind boys and 150 wounded persons, who with the staff of the mission, make up a total of 300 persons, was destroyed.

Dr. Booth, the medical head of the mission, asked the imperialists to grant an armistice of two hours to permit removal from the mission but the firing ceased for only a half hour.

A Red Cross steamer which attempted to rescue the inmates of the mission was driven back by the fire from the rebel fort. One shell struck the steamer's deckhouse.

The Chamber of Commerce asked the foreign consuls to protest against the burning of the city, but the consuls declined to do so.

Massacre of civilians is reported to have been started again by both sides, the rebels killing Manchurians and the imperialists slaughtering the Chinese.

The new revolutionary government, which is apparently impersonal, nevertheless effectively controlled the situation in Shanghai and on the Yangtze delta.

Study to Save Hunters' Lives.

The so-called "list of immortals" of the United States biological survey—a roster of all hunting fatalities in this country—already this year has had added to it 47 names. From the information the bureau hopes after a few years to be able to deduce general principles which will be of value in framing "life saving" federal and state game laws.

Two monoplane collided while in flight at the Garden City aviation field in Mineola, N. Y. Both were badly damaged, but their pilots, Walter L. Fairchild and Wilbur Kimball, escaped with a bad shaking up.

The bodies of Walker McDaniels and Commodore McClure, who were entombed in a mine near Fort Branch, Ind., by the explosion of a "wind" shot, were recovered after the rescuers had battled several hours with the poisonous gases. There were no marks on either body, indicating that death was due to asphyxiation.

A SERIOUS ERROR.

Many a case of kidney disease has proven fatal because the symptoms were not recognized. If you suffer from backache or bladder irregularities, follow the advice of G. H. Tuttle, Rogers Street, Broken Bow, Neb. Says Mr. Tuttle: "I was confined to my home for weeks, unable to walk more than ten feet at a time. The doctor said I had gravel, and his treatment helped me temporarily, but soon the symptoms returned with greater severity than before. Being urged, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and received almost instant relief. In a few weeks' time I was completely cured."

I feel it my duty to let you know what Swamp-Root did for me. I was bothered with my back for over twenty years and at times I could hardly get out of bed. I read your advertisement and decided to try Swamp-Root. Used five bottles, and it has been five years since I used it, and I have never been bothered a day since I took the last bottle of it. I am thoroughly convinced that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root cured me and would recommend it to others suffering as I did.

My husband was troubled with kidney and bladder troubles and he took your Swamp-Root and it cured him. This was about five years ago.

You may publish this letter if you choose.

HIS TOWN

CHAPTER I.

Dan Blair.

The fact that much he said, because of his unbecomable slang, was incomprehensible did not take from the charm of his conversation as far as the duchess of Breakwater was concerned. The brightness of his expression, his quick, clear look upon them, his beautiful young smile, his not too frequent laugh, his "new gayness," as the duchess called his spirits, his supernatural youth, his difference, credited him with what nine-tenths of the human race lack—charm.

His tone was not too crudely western; neither did he suggest the ultra east, with which they were familiar. American women went down well enough with them, but American men were unpopular, and when the visitor arrived, Lady Galorey did not even announce him to the party gathered for "the first shoot."

The others were in the armory when the ninth gun, a young chap, six feet of him, blond as the wheat, cleanly set up and very good to look at, came in with Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, Lady Galorey, his hostess, greeted them.

"Oh, here you are, are you? Lord Mersey, Sir John Fairbrope." She mumbled the rest of the names of her companions as though she did not want them understood, then waved toward the young chap, calling him Mr. Dan Blair, and he, as she hesitated, added:

"From Blairtown, Montana."

"Indeed? Did she die a natural death?"

"Yes, the natural death of a person who tries to light a fire with kerosene!"—Stray Stories.

money. I dare say the river is responsible for its cleanliness, but that fact seemed to give him satisfaction."

The duchess was leaning on the table at Lady Galorey's side.

"Dan's father took Gordon all over the west that time he went to the states for a big hunt in the Rockies. He got to know Mr. Blair awfully well and liked him. The old gentleman bought a little property about that time that turned out to be a gold mine."

With persistency the duchess said: "How do you know it is 'clean money,' Edith? Not that it makes a rap of difference," she laughed prettily, "but how do you know that he is rich to this horrible extent?"

Lady Galorey put down her address book impatiently: "Does he look like an impostor?"

The other returned: "Even the archangel fell, my dear Edith!"

"Well," returned her friend, "this one is too young to have fallen far," and she shut up her list in desperation.

The duchess sat down on the edge of the lounge and raised her expressive eyes to Lady Galorey, who once more looked at her sarcastically, and went on:

"Gordon liked the old gentleman; he was extraordinarily generous—quite a type. They called the town after him—Blairtown; that is where the son 'bails from.' He was a little lad when Gordon was out and Mr. Blair promised that Dan should come over here and see us one day, and this," she tapped the table with her pen, "seems to be the day, for he came down upon us in this breezy way without even sending a wire, 'just turned up' last night. Gordon's mad about him. His father has been dead a year, and he is just twenty-two."

"Good heavens!" murmured the duchess. Lady Galorey opened her address book again.

"Gordon got him terribly on his mind, my dear; he has forbidden any gambling or any bridge as long as the boy is with us."

Her companion rose and thrust her hands into the pocket of her tweed coat. She laughed softly, then went over to the long window where, with out, across the pane, the early winter mists were flying, chased by a furtive sun.

"Gordon said that the boy's father treated him like a king, and that while the boy is here he is going to look out for him."

Over her shoulder the other threw out coldly:

"You speak as though he were in a den of thieves. I didn't know Gordon's honor was so fine. As for me, I don't gamble, you know."

Lady Galorey had decided that Lily's insistent remaining gave her a chance to fill her fountain pen. She was, therefore, carefully squirting in the ink, and she flushed at her friend's last words.

Lady Galorey herself was the best bridge player in London, and cards were her passion. She did not regret the lady in the window that there were other games besides bridge, but kept both her tongue and her temper.

After a little silence in which the women followed each her own thoughts, the duchess murmured:

"I'll tell you, Edith—let us write to the boys. Where did you say we were going to meet the boys for food?"

"At the gate by the White Pastures. There'll be a cart and a motor going. Whichever you like, around two."

"Right," her grace nodded; "I'll be on time, dearest."

And Lady Galorey, with a relieved sigh, heard the door close behind the duchess. Wiping her fountain pen delicately with a bit of camellia, she murmured: "Well, Dan Blair is out of Eden, poor dear, if he met her by the gate."

A fortune of a round ten million pounds was a small part of what this young man had come into by direct inheritance from the Copper King of Blairtown, Montana. For once the money figure had not been exaggerated, but Lady Galorey did not know about the rest of Dan's inheritance.

The young man whistling in his rooms in the bachelor quarters of Ordone Park House, dressed for dinner without the aid of a valet. When Lord Galorey had asked him "where his man servant was," Dan had grinned: "Gosh, I wouldn't have one of those Johnnies hanging around me—never did have! I can put on my stockings all right! There was a chap on the boat I came over in who let his man put on his stockings. Can you beat that?" Blair had laughed again.

"I think if anybody tickled my feet that way I would be likely to kick him in the eye."

Dressing in his room he whistled under his breath a song from a newly-popular comic opera; and he intoned with a clear young voice a line of the words:

"Should-you-go-to-Mandalay."

Out through his high window, if he had looked, he would have seen the misty sweep of the park under the faint moonrise and fine shadows that the leaves made in the veiled light, but he did not look out. He was dressing for dinner without a valet and giving a great deal of care to his toilet; for the first time he was to representatives who pleaded for a longer period in which to prepare to discuss corporate excess tax have no excuse.

Lansing.—Governor Osborn has extended the time for the commission of tax inquiry to make its report until December 1, so those corporation representatives who pleaded for more time in which to prepare to discuss the corporate excess tax with the commission will have no excuse for failing to appear if they really desire to take up the matter.

In view of the developments at the only hearing held, members of the commission are inclined to believe there will be few attacks to controvert their statements that there is a large amount of property grossly undervalued for taxation purposes and that corporations are at the head of this list. The commission is not saying so, but the fact is that according to the impressions the members have been given, they are firmly of the opinion that while the corporationists will raise a whole lot of side issues and other issues, when it comes down to hard pan the financiers will have to admit that corporation business has been looking up in Michigan for a number of years and at the same time other property has been providing most of the money which supports the machinery of the government.

Discussing the situation and the statements made, Commissioner P. H. Kelley seemed strongly imbued with the idea that the main issue, the nub of the commission's case, is what he termed the present inequality of burden of taxes, asserting with emphasis that "so long as the powerful men—the wealthy, influential men of a community—are on the tax rolls at 10, 12 or 15 per cent, it's a pretty mean, cowardly government that forces the laboring man to pay taxes on 80 per cent of the value of his home."

Michigan Teachers Meet.

The annual state convention of the Michigan Sunday School association opened in Bay City with over 700 delegates attending, the features being addresses by visiting clergymen and Sunday school workers.

At the first Presbyterian church Rev. L. E. Lovejoy of the Detroit housing committee made a stirring appeal for better understanding of and care of children, declaring that many parents love their children, but do not understand them. He would tell them the truth always, even to sex hygiene, for the child was as much entitled to know what could be taught it as an adult.

Among other speakers were H. S. Versey of Grand Rapids, C. P. Gurney of Hillsdale college, Dr. F. McElfresh of Chicago, Dr. Edwin W. Latham of Cedar Falls, Ia., and Rev. Dr. George Elliott of Bay City.

Michigan Teachers Meet.

Luther L. Wright, state superintendent of public instruction, fired the opening gun of the Michigan Teachers' association convention at a meeting of the county normal school teachers held in Detroit.

Mr. Wright had some interesting and moderately radical things to say. He took the position that in teaching arithmetic to children it must be remembered that thought is one thing and process another, and that young children have no reasoning powers. Consequently the teaching process should be automatic and oral. He should be a school in which no pupil is allowed to use pencil and paper in the study of arithmetic until he reaches the seventh grade.

"The result of the ordinary methods in vogue is that after going through eight grades the child knows nothing but arithmetic," said Mr. Wright. "This is a complaint that we receive from colleges all over the country."

With an enrollment of over 7,000, the fifty-ninth annual meeting of the Michigan State Teachers' association will be by over 2,000 the largest meeting ever held by the organization and may eclipse in numbers the yearly sessions of the National Educational association. For some years the Michigan organization has been the largest state association in the country, and its growth in the past year has been remarkable.

Reception bureaus were established at the railway stations and high school students were stationed there as guides.

Many State Employees Must Go.

There are worried looks on the faces of a majority of the employees of the state board of health, for many changes will ensue before another month elapses. Those having political backing are calling politicians to the rescue.

Recently two employees tendered their resignations, one having been employed in the department for the past eight years.

This leaves ten of the old force, and it is known that at least five of this number will be asked to resign.

Vanilla Bean in England.

Society women are interested in the horticultural activities of Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, who is cultivating in her garden several vanilla bean vines. The vine is delicate and fragrant and has a commercial value. It is a terrestrial parasite and grows on almost any kind of tree, lighting up the rudest and most attractive bark with its dainty festoons of leaves and tendrils. The beans form early, and even the least experienced amateur can raise the useful vanilla plant.

At the first Presbyterian church Rev. L. E. Lovejoy of the Detroit housing committee made a stirring appeal for better understanding of and care of children, declaring that many parents love their children, but do not understand them. He would tell them the truth always, even to sex hygiene, for the child was as much entitled to know what could be taught it as an adult.

Among other speakers were H. S. Versey of Grand Rapids, C. P. Gurney of Hillsdale college, Dr. F. McElfresh of Chicago, Dr. Edwin W. Latham of Cedar Falls, Ia., and Rev. Dr. George Elliott of Bay City.

Michigan Teachers Meet.

Luther L. Wright, state superintendent of public instruction, fired the opening gun of the Michigan Teachers' association convention at a meeting of the county normal school teachers held in Detroit.

Mr. Wright had some interesting and moderately radical things to say. He took the position that in teaching arithmetic to children it must be remembered that thought is one thing and process another, and that young children have no reasoning powers. Consequently the teaching process should be automatic and oral. He should be a school in which no pupil is allowed to use pencil and paper in the study of arithmetic until he reaches the seventh grade.

"The result of the ordinary methods in vogue is that after going through eight grades the child knows nothing but arithmetic," said Mr. Wright. "This is a complaint that we receive from colleges all over the country."

With an enrollment of over 7,000, the fifty-ninth annual meeting of the Michigan State Teachers' association will be by over 2,000 the largest meeting ever held by the organization and may eclipse in numbers the yearly sessions of the National Educational association. For some years the Michigan organization has been the largest state association in the country, and its growth in the past year has been remarkable.

Reception bureaus were established at the railway stations and high school students were stationed there as guides.

Many State Employees Must Go.

There are worried looks on the faces of a majority of the employees of the state board of health, for many changes will ensue before another month elapses. Those having political backing are calling politicians to the rescue.

Recently two employees tendered their resignations, one having been employed in the department for the past eight years.

This leaves ten of the old force, and it is known that at least five of this number will be asked to resign.

Vanilla Bean in England.

Society women are interested in the horticultural activities of Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, who is cultivating in her garden several vanilla bean vines. The vine is delicate and fragrant and has a commercial value. It is a terrestrial parasite and grows on almost any kind of tree, lighting up the rudest and most attractive bark with its dainty festoons of leaves and tendrils. The beans form early, and even the least experienced amateur can raise the useful vanilla plant.

Association is Facing Crisis.

The third annual convention of the Michigan State Society for the Prevention and Cure of Tuberculosis was held in Ann Arbor. The first paper was read by the president of the state association, Dr. A. S. Warthin, who said that the association was facing a crisis because of the falling off of interest in the movement and consequently of financial contributions.

The society adopted resolutions regarding the segregating of advanced cases, and went on record as strongly advocating the establishment by the state of an institution for the purpose.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Dr. Collins Johnston, Grand Rapids; first vice-president, Dr. Guy Kelfer, Detroit; second vice-president, Dr. Robert Harkness, Houghton; secretary, Miss Carol Walton, Ann Arbor; treasurer, Dr. H. J. Hartz, Detroit; directors, Dr. Caroline Bartlett Crane, Kalamazoo; Ralph Apted, Grand Rapids; Mrs. B. C. Whitney, Detroit; Dr. V. C. Vaughn, Ann Arbor; Dr. Russell L. Dixon, Grand Rapids; Mrs. Elnore Chamberlain, Hartford, and Mrs. Huntley Russell, Grand Rapids.

Slow to Pay Taxes.

There is still no indication that owners of Michigan mortgages are disposed to crowd up to the counter to pay the specific tax on these securities, as provided in the law passed by the last legislature. The state has received $6,770.25 in taxes on $2,741,704.35 in mortgages; the counties have secured an equal sum, making the total tax paid in, $13,540.50, while if these securities had been taxed as they were previously the tax would amount to about $55,000, and this amount would be collected annually, while the other amount is collected but once.

It is the opinion of state officers that only owners of the mortgages which are on record have paid in the tax as provided for the mortgages now in effect. It is believed that possessors of unrecorded mortgages are not bringing them out for the purpose of paying the tax, as there is undoubtedly more than $2,700,000 in mortgages in effect in the state at present.

First Clash on New Tax Scheme.

In the first clash between representatives of the corporations of Michigan and the state commission of tax inquiry over the proposed system of taxing the so-called corporate excess for the support of the state government, both the corporationists and the commission agreed that much better conditions would prevail if all property was assessed at its true cash value. They differed, however, as to the method of enforcing this valuation as to the proportion of taxes different classes of property are paying at present, and as to the best method of bringing about a cash valuation for taxation purposes.

Hal H. Smith, representing the Michigan Manufacturers' association, flatly told the commission that in Choral Union Concert.

One of the most attractive numbers on the Ann Arbor Choral Union concert series will be the recital Friday evening, November 17, by Maud Powell violinist, assisted by Walde-mar Liachowsky, pianist. Mme. Powell has been a favorite virtuoso for several years; but unlike many great musicians she does not stand still, and during the present season there has been no musician of whom the New York press has talked more than of her. Everywhere she goes her perfect musicianship has attracted much attention and the delighted audiences have called for more. The New York Evening Post said: "Maud Powell, queen of violinists as Kreisler is the king, gave a recital in which she interpreted music by ten composers, Italian, German, English, American and Russian, in a style marvellously adapted in each case to the nationality of the piece in hand. She got flowers and cordial applause galore, and was obliged to add several extras to the dozen or so promised." The New York Times says: "Mme. Powell stands for the sincerest art, and what she does is all for the music and not at all for the exploitation of herself. She is today at the height of her powers, and her recital yesterday afternoon once more attested her admirable artistic gifts and acquisitions, her profound musical feeling and insight, her fine taste, high technical accomplishment and especially her vigorous and robust style that keeps her sentiment true and wholesome."

Live Stock Exposition.

A babel of noise is churning the atmosphere of the scene of the greatest of all live stock displays, the International Live Stock Exposition which will be held at Chicago, December 2 to 9. Preparation is being made on a stupendous scale for the largest display of horses, cattle, hogs and sheep since the inception of that magnificent enterprise. An army of mechanics and laborers is on the ground setting the gigantic stage on which the show will be presented to the people of the North American continent. If the largest list of entries on record warrants such prediction, the 1911 International will throw its forerunners in the shade and each of them was credited with having marked a climax.

An elaborate scheme of interior decoration has been designed and artisans will work overtime during the next three weeks carrying it into effect. New facilities for the convenience of visitors are being installed and neither pains nor expense spared to insure success.

AVOID HARSH DRUGS

Many Cathartics Tend to Cause Injury to the Bowels.

If you are subject to constipation, you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is harmful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way effect a cure and their tendency is to weaken the already weak organs with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever devised. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it on the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user a cent if it does not give entire satisfaction and completely remedy constipation. This preparation is called Rexall Orderlies. These are prompt, soothing, and most effective in action. They are made of a recent chemical discovery. Their principal ingredient is odorless, tasteless, and colorless. Combined with other well-known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation, it forms a tablet which is eaten like candy. They may be taken at any time, either day or night, without fear of their causing any inconvenience whatever. They do not gripe, purge, nor cause nausea. They act without causing any pain or excessive looseness of the bowels. They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons, and aged people, as well as for the most hearty person.

They come in three size packages, 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain them only at our store—The Rexall Store. L. T. Freeman Co.

There is a new contest on in the Sunday school between the men and the women. The winning side will be given an oyster supper.

When Paleness Was Pity.

In the days of the Puritans the stocks were not unknown as a penalty for looking too healthy. Ruddiness of complexion was a crime when a gaunt visage was regarded as an outward sign of sanctity. Doctor Richard, writing in the early eighteenth century, remarks: "Then it was they would scarcely let a round faced man go to heaven. If he had but a little blood in his cheeks his condition was accounted dangerous, and, I will assure you, a very honest man of sanguine complexion, if he chanced to come nigh an official zealot's house, might be set in the stocks, only for looking fresh on a frosty morning." Few of the January faces to be seen in a London street, however, would run any risk of drawing down this penalty.

Botany Bay.

Sir Joseph Banks was the man who invented the once familiar phrase "Botany Bay." He was the botanist attached to the expedition of Captain Cook, the "Australian Columbus." Landing at this bay, close to the present city of Sydney, he found such an abundance of strange plants and flowers that he associated the word "botany" with it for all time. For a long time Botany Bay and Australia were synonymous in England. Sydney has spread out to the historic bay, and you can travel by tram car to "Botany." It was Sir Joseph Banks who made the kangaroo and other Australian animals known to science.

COMES QUICKLY.

Don't Have to Wait For Weeks. A Chelsea Illustration.

Waiting is discouraging. Prompt action pleases everybody. A burden on the back is a heavy weight.

Hard to bear day after day. Lifting weight, removing the burden, Brings appreciating responses. Chelsea people tell of it.

Tell of relief that's quick and sure. Here is a case of it:

F. A. Hammond, Madison St., Chelsea, Mich., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with the best of results. My back was very lame and every cold I caught made my trouble worse. When Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention I commenced their use and they quickly gave relief from the pains and regulated the passages of the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills certainly deserve my endorsement in return for their good work."

NOTICE

There will be a sale of certain claims at the Chelsea Savings Bank Building at 2 p. m. Friday, November 10th, as indicated in the notice published below. This notice was first published in The Ann Arbor Daily Times-News on November 4th, in accordance with an order of the Court made that day:

There are certain pending claims and obligations due the Chelsea Savings Bank, for the final determination of which the Receiver cannot wait, as such a course would delay the closing up of the receivership. In order to close up the affairs of the Bank at the earliest possible date, these claims and obligations will be sold, subject to the approval of the Court, to the highest bidder at the Chelsea Savings Bank Building, in Chelsea, on Friday, November 10th, at 2 p. m. Full particulars and details may be obtained at the office of M. J. Cavanaugh, Attorney, Savings Bank Building, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Conservatism

We hear the word used a whole lot regarding banks and their management. It is a good thing, and properly applied is of very great advantage but in many cases the word does not bear out its definition, or rather its application does not. Fossilism, dry rot, coldness, these are not conservatism, but who fellow, a great stickler for what he called conservatism, but who was simply petrifying, has been succeeded in the management of a bank by a man of ideas and good sound sense, with the result that deposits have doubled in a year and the business of the bank goes forward by leaps and bounds. This bank is conservative enough all right but it does not use the iceberg variety, as that brand ever has been, and always will be, a detriment to any bank. We can handle some more business and we ought to have yours. If you feel as we do about this, come in and let us talk it over.

Romances Near to Thrones

Napoleon III and Eugenie

STERLING HELLIG

Copyright by
PEARSON PUBLISHING CO.

HEN a king's love is mentioned, the mind flies to the morganatic.

In America the word has been misused for seaminess in mentioning the usual heart affairs of royalty, but it is an exact term of purely German genealogical law, and means a legal and binding marriage that does not raise an un-royal wife to royal rank.

Now, if a false morganatic marriage is the easiest thing imaginable and a true one disadvantageous but quite possible, how shall we sufficiently admire an emperor who lifts a little countess to be empress beside him? Add an unstable throne, new in itself, newly mounted, in sore need of royal alliances; add the bitter opposition of his family, the laugh of the world, the contempt of statesmen, and the estrangement of partisans; make the beloved one a foreigner completely unpopular with his people, and you will have the elements of Napoleon III's heroism in loving Eugenie.

Few kings since Cophetua have loved like this.

Among so many royal loves that lacked devotion, it shines like a star. It begins with a gypsy at Madrid. Eugenie's mother, a widow, camarera mayor to the queen, lived in her own house in the Plaza del Angel.

One day—Eugenie being thirteen and a tomboy—they refused to take her in the Prado carriage promenade, which, with the opera, still remains the common ground where poor, proud families meet the great ones of Madrid as equals. The Countess de Montijo clung to her carriage and her opera box.

Alone, Tomboy Eugenie was sliding down the banister. She slid too strong, banged against the fly-screen front door, and fell inanimate. A gypsy woman, passing, took the girl's head in her lap and brought her to. Then she looked attentively at her and said:

"The senorita was born under the open sky, the night of a battle."

"What!" exclaimed the countess, returned with the carriage. She was struck by the truth of the words. Thirteen years ago, at Granada, an earthquake had forced them to camp in the garden, and Eugenie was there prematurely born.

"What will be her future?" asked the superstitious mother.

"She will be queen," said the gypsy.

The prediction was bold, and beauty only could lift the thirteen-year-old girl to its realization; but beauty had already done much for that family.

So dreamed the mother. She herself had been a really poor girl, daughter of a British subject who had failed in business in Malaga. His name was Kirkpatrick, and he had married one of two beautiful sisters, yet still poorer—see how hereditary beauty will force its way, through four generations, from its unadorned self to a throne!

The first was a poor Spanish girl, Gallegos, whose sole possession was her beauty. Graciana, French wine merchant of Malaga, married her and had two lovely daughters; and two foreign consuls, French de Lesseps and Scotch Kirkpatrick, lifted them by marriage to the first-rounder of the social ladder. From the de Lesseps alliance came the "grand Francis" of Suez and Panama; but Kirkpatrick's wife gave him a daughter of such rare charms that a Spanish grandee, with a place at court and of considerable family, married her for love.

He was a duke, a marquis, a viscount and a baron, but the title by which he had been known to the world was Count de Montijo. He had two daughters fairer yet than mother, grandmother or great-grandmother, and he died. Eugenie was one, her sister Paccia was the other.

On the thirteen-year-old girl the gypsy's prediction made a formative impression. Confronting it, as she grew up, she saw her elder sister Paccia (Maria Francisca) make an unprecedented match even in that family. Paccia caught the rich and mighty Duke of Alva, higher than the Duke of Alva could only be a king.

Eugenie, growing up, refused brilliant Spanish offers; first the Duke of Ossuna, then the rich and handsome young Duke of Sesto. Sesto in truth inspired her with "a certain sympathy and admiration. He was so attractive!" But it was not love. Deep in her heart she loved a dream prince, the unknown of the gypsies, endowed by her girl's fancy with a thousand charming attributes. She smiled at the absurdity of it. Where could such a prince be? Yet she held off from all other suitors.

When her mother took her to Paris her heart leaped at an unexpected premonition. The handsome, dark-browed, careworn man, still young, who, as French president, received at the Elysée, became a romantic figure in her eyes. Eugenie wished to attend a presidential reception. Her mother hesitated. It would make them ridiculous with the mildewed smart set.

"But my father was an officer of the great Napoleon," said Eugenie, and she had her way. The prince-president, weighed down with the dangerous and complicated details of his plot, was struck by the girl's beauty. That evening he sought her out a second time. He was touched and flattered by the romantic interest she showed in his person and his cause. The beautiful girl stuck in his mind. He felt as if he had always known her. He knew that he would meet her again.

Eugenie felt the same mysterious attraction. "Ah, would that I could help him!" She thought of the lonely prince and his risky ambitions that were being laughed about in Paris as an open secret. At the moment of the coup d'état she fairly burned with anxiety. She dashed about the little flat like a tigress. "What can I do?" she asked herself. "What can I do to aid him?"

That night Napoleon received a letter. It was from a romantic, inexperienced girl, but ardent and sincere. It gave him her good wishes and audaciously offered him all she possessed should his projects need ready money. After December 2 it was the Empire in fact if not in name. Napoleon gave hunts like a sovereign, at Fontainebleau and Compiègne. At these he met again the beautiful Spanish girl, fearless horsewoman, tireless dancer. He remembered above all her letter written in that dark hour of his wavering chances.

His love at first sight for Eugenie was soon noticed, showing itself full-blown in the most open attentions. The girl and her mother had continual invitations to Compiègne and the Tuilleries.

Napoleon soon found the uselessness of throwing his handkerchief at the beautiful foreigner.

Yet he felt—he knew—that she loved him passionately. It was a desperate situation for the girl, and his heart swelled with love and pride and admiration of her. Once Eugenie and her mother were bidden to a parade review at the Tuilleries. In the courtyard Napoleon drew up his horse under the windows of the first floor to salute the ladies. He wished to dismount and go up to them.

"Mademoiselle," he said, addressing Eugenie, "which way shall I take to get to you?"

"He was almost as new to the Tuilleries as any of us," told the Eugenie of eighty-three years. "He did not know his way about the palace."

"Sire," she called down to him, "you must come by the way of the chapel!" As a fact the corridor leading to the chapel was the shortest route to these rooms, but Napoleon understood her hidden meaning. Again, one afternoon at Compiègne, when the flower of the brand-new emperor's court was idling around his vingt-et-un table, she made the situation clear to him. Seated at Napoleon's right, she consulted him from time to time as to her play. She found two picture cards in her hand, counting twenty out of twenty-one possible points. "Stand on that," said the emperor. "It is very high."

"No," said Eugenie, "I must have all or nothing!" Every morning old Jerome Bonaparte, his uncle, last surviving brother of the great Napoleon, would arrive, confidential, flattering, giggling and a-rog with bad insinuations:

"Have you got her?" Hoary old sinner, unrepentant of his desertion, fifty years ago, of his true American wife in Baltimore, he had the court ladies in full slander of Eugenie before Napoleon had made up his mind, and he exercised a diabolical ingenuity in trying to prevent an honest marriage.

Those first ladies of the Second Empire had extraordinary manners. One evening, at Compiègne, when Eugenie was going in to dinner on the arm of Colonel de Toulougeon, a slight confusion permitted him to whisk Eugenie ahead of Madame Fortoul, wife of the minister of that name.

"How," exclaimed, audibly to her cavalier, "do you permit that—creature to push past me?"

The next morning Mlle. de Montijo, with tears in her eyes, stood on the terrace apart from the others. It was no ruse to attract Napoleon's sympathy, the girl saw her prince-hero disappearing in a nightmare of hateful gossip. Napoleon, who had sought her, asked the cause of her sorrow.

"I must leave Compiègne," she faltered—and told of the slights and insults to which she was subjected.

The emperor listened to the beautiful girl. Then, when she had finished, he tore a green string of ivy from a park tree, deftly twisted it into a crown, and said loudly—that all might hear—as he placed it on her head:

"Wear this one—meanwhile." It is a twice-told anecdote, but, as it was Napoleon's proposal of marriage, I see no way to omit it. He never actually asked her hand—he took it. Not another murmur arose from the court ladies. At once they flocked around Eugenie.

It was another matter, however, for Napoleon to force his choice on the statesmen and soldiers backing his still risky empire. Opinions were divided on what royal alliance he should make. Some were for a princess of Sweden; some for a Braganza, some for the Hohenzollern. Then, suddenly, Napoleon, speaking of Eugenie, sprung the mine by saying: "There is no question but the right of hand."

"No question but the right of hand!" The words ran through his backers like an alarm of fire. One with the strongest hold upon Napoleon—De Persigny, his minister of the interior—was sent to tell him in the name of all that it would not do.

De Persigny, mixed up with Napoleon in many an adventure, had kept his old-comrade liberty of speech. He joked about Napoleon's admiration for Eugenie; surely the emperor must amuse himself. When he noticed that Napoleon's face grew stern, he rose to fighting arguments, brutally accumulating proofs and reasons why a marriage would be idiotic, both dynastically and otherwise. He sneered at the Montijo title; brought out the grandfather, Kirkpatrick, bankrupt Malaga raisin merchant; and then he took up Eugenie's roving life. "What was the girl doing here in Paris?"

"Did you ever hear of the young Duke of Sesto?" asked De Persigny. "Did you ever hear of Merimee?"

"Merimee is a great writer," said Napoleon. "Surely—for he writes Eugenie's letters to you!" laughed De Persigny. "Mother, daughter, and newspaper man sit round the table and concoct the beautiful letters that you cherish. Really, it is not worth risking the coup d'état to arrive at that!"

What a triumph for the aged lady to recall Napoleon's steadfast love in face of both policy and slander! It was always known why Eugenie hated De Persigny, Prince Jerome and the Princess Mathilde. She could forgive political counselors who pressed the royal princesses upon Napoleon; she could not forgive the powerful ones who sought to take away her character behind her back.

Napoleon heard them all alike. He answered nothing. Foul and most of the military backers, with Edward Ney and Toulougeon for their spokesmen, formed rapidly "The Clan of the Lovers." In vain did Mathilde drag herself at Napoleon's knees, begging him to renounce a marriage that would be the ruin of them all. The emperor had decided. "You will give a great ball to announce the engagement."

he said to his weeping cousin. And she did it. Napoleon acted toward Eugenie with chivalrous loyalty. He laid before her all the disadvantages of the brilliant yet uncertain position he was offering her. He explained to her his unpopularity with the old French aristocrats, the bad will of certain great powers, the possibility of his being assassinated by some secret society of which he had become a member in his adventurous youth. There were hostilities even in the army, in his opinion the most serious danger; but he could out them short by declaring a war.

"I would not have it otherwise," she answered. "I will take my risks beside you. So may I be worthy!"

As a queen she lacked dignity. She had not been born to the solemn self-appreciation of royalty; and she was a mixture of lightness and austerity, generosity and sense, kindness and indifference, in which the transitions were abrupt and disconcerting to French orderliness.

Alone among the sovereigns of Europe Queen Victoria had received her cordially; more, she had taken up Eugenie and imposed her on the courts of Europe. Yet even at Windsor, where the imperial couple were received with extraordinary pomp, Eugenie's insouciance threatened to play her, a bad turn that would have illustrated her un-imperial attitude.

A quarter of an hour before they were to be received by Victoria and her beloved consort in the throne room, Eugenie discovered that, among the hundred trunks of the French visitors, hers alone had not arrived! The emperor was deeply mortified that the discovery should have been made so late, as showing lack of discipline and serene orderliness, and on his advice Eugenie had already begun to pretend a headache due to suppressed seasickness when one of her ladies dared to offer her a choice of gowns.

A blue dress of the simplest description seemed the only one that promised well. Great ladies and maids fell upon it deftly, and in a few minutes the blue gown was readjusted to the empress. So Eugenie—without jewels, flowers at her corsage and flowers in her hair—appeared before the British court in her own dazzling beauty. She made an immense success.

What most touched Victoria's heart, it may be told, was the pathetic and pretty way in which the young couple spontaneously confided certain doubts and fears to her as an experienced matron and mother of eight. They had been married two years, and as yet there was no heir. When the little prince-imperial was born, one lady only was permitted to be present with the doctors and the serving-women all the time. This was the Countess of Ely, Queen Victoria's intimate friend, sent over from England to help along.

As had been done for the King of Rome, it was announced in advance that should the infant be a boy, cannon would fire, not twenty-one times, but a hundred.

It happened after midnight, and the Parisians, awakening, counted the cannon-shots. When they got past twenty-one, the Parisians rolled over in their beds and yawned: "Well, she is lucky!"

The bigamous old Jerome had bitterly persecuted her as an interloper. His son, Plon-Plon, her hater and detractor by inheritance, was not persona grata with Eugenie. So Napoleon, who enjoyed smoking cigarettes with the reprobate father of the present pretender, Victor, was forced to visit him secretly. One day, some time after the marriage, he came, sat down, and said:

"Prince, does your wife make you scenes?" "No," replied the husband of Clotilde, the daughter of Victor Emmanuel.

"There is no living with Eugenie," sighed Napoleon. "The moment I give audience with another woman I risk a violent quarrel."

"Crack her on the side of the face the next time she makes you a scene," suggested Plon-Plon.

"Don't think of it!" exclaimed the emperor. "You don't know Eugenie; she would open a window of the Tuilleries and cry 'Police!'" To the end women took advantage of this breezy independence, natural exuberance, and ineradicable unconventionality of Eugenie to lay traps for her. Hers was a continuous performance of the Lady walking amid the rout of Comus. Among others, Mme. de Metternich, wife of the Austrian ambassador, seemed to have vowed Eugenie's destruction. Once, at Fontainebleau, she almost led her into going to the races in short skirts.

"My dear Pauline," someone asked her, "would you counsel your own sovereign to get herself up in short skirts?"

"That is different," replied the Metternich. "My empress is a royal princess, a real empress, while yours, my dear, is . . . Mademoiselle de Montijo!"

Was she only Mademoiselle de Montijo? Did she not keep her word: "So may I be worthy!" to the Empire and to France? Twenty years later, in her dealings with Bismarck after the Franco-Prussian war, Eugenie had practically concluded a treaty while refusing to concede "an inch of French territory." The Republicans, taking the deal out of her hands, agreed to the loss of Alsace and Lorraine.

ERUPTION COVERED BODY

"Three years ago this winter I had a breaking out that covered my whole body. It itched so it seemed as if I should go crazy. It first came out in little pimples on my back and spread till it covered my whole body and limbs down to my knees, also my arms down to my elbows. Where I scratched it made sores, and the terrible itching and burning kept me from sleeping. I tried several remedies all to no purpose. Then I concluded to try the Cuticura Remedies. I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, also the Resolvent, for about four months, and they completely cured me of eczema. I have had no return of the disease since. I never had a good night's rest after the skin eruption first broke out till I commenced using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had only used them a few days before I could see they were beginning to heal, and the terrible itching was gone."

"Those that lived in the house at the time know how I suffered, and how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me. I never take a bath without using the Cuticura Soap, and I do not believe there are better remedies for any skin disease than the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Miss Sarah Calkins, Waukegan, Ill., Mar. 16, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 5 K, Boston.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH YOUR BABY?

The young mother—and many an old one, too—is often puzzled to know the cause of her child's ill nature. The loudness of its crying does not necessarily indicate the seriousness of its trouble. It may have nothing more the matter with it than a headache or a feeling of general dullness. It cannot, of course, describe its feelings, but as a preliminary measure you are safe in trying a mild laxative.

Nine times out of ten, you will find it is all the child needs, for its restlessness and peevishness are perhaps due to obstruction of the bowels, and once that has been remedied the headache, the sluggishness and the many other evidences of constipation and indigestion will quickly disappear.

Don't give the little one salts, cathartic pills or nasty waters, for these will act as purgatives, and they are too strong for a child. In the families of Mrs. M. K. Chew, Bay Shore, Mich., and Mrs. Martha E. Rapp, Niles, Mich., the only laxative given is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It has been found to be a most perfectly all the paring of a laxative, and its very mildness and safety for the use of children, women, and old folks generally—people who need a gentle laxative—thousands of American families have been enthusiastic about it for more than a quarter of a century.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a large bottle (family size) can have a sample bottle sent to the home free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 301 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

Urgent Necessity.

A distinguished theologian was invited to make an address before a Sunday school. The divine spoke for over an hour and his remarks were of too deep a character for the average juvenile mind to comprehend. At the conclusion, the superintendent, according to custom, requested some one in the school to name an appropriate hymn to sing.

"Sing 'Revive Us Again,'" shouted a boy in the rear of the room.—Life.

Curative Treatment.

In his reading lesson Bobby had come to the word "punishment," and it was too long and hard for him. After puzzling a while, he asked the teacher what the word was.

"You ought not to let that puzzle you, Bobby," she answered. "What does your mother give you when you have been an unusually naughty boy?"

"Castor oil!" he exclaimed, sure that he had guessed it.—Youth's Companion.

The Tuberculin Test for Cattle in Michigan

By WARD GILTNER,
State Veterinarian

At times state or municipal regulations have forced cattle owners to submit their herds to the tuberculin test. Interstate trade in breeding or dairy cattle requires that the shipment be accompanied by a tuberculin test. Cattle breeders generally do not object to this testing of cattle for interstate shipment, but there is a very great opposition to enforced state or local tuberculin testing. It is not our purpose to discuss this phase of the subject. We wish here to present to the farmers of Michigan a review of the methods and means by which they may avail themselves of the tuberculin test when they have voluntarily decided to have the same made, or when the shipping of cattle for breeding or other purposes makes a test necessary.

We have always believed that the progressive farmer, for his own financial interest if not from reasons of pride, is ever anxious to anticipate legislation or coercive measures in the matter of sanitation. The sanitary ideal requires the tuberculin test of every cow supplying milk for human consumption in any of its forms, whether as milk, cream, butter, cheese or other milk preparations. The pure food legislation is tending to force the farmer to approach this ideal; the farmer's own interests suggest the advisability of voluntarily making the test.

To those who have no other reason for making the test than a desire to know the condition of their herds as to tuberculosis, we will say that this test can be applied in one of two ways. Either of these ways necessitates having the test made by one who is trained to do this work. The graduate of a recognized veterinary college licensed to practice in Michigan should be able to make the test for you. In order to make it possible for more farmers to avail themselves of the test, the laboratory of bacteriology at M. A. C. has undertaken to train competent agricultural students to make the tuberculin test under the supervision of the laboratory, and there are now a considerable number of such young men who have satisfactorily made tests both on their own and on neighbors' herds. To either of these classes of men, the veterinarian or the agricultural student trained as indicated above, the laboratory of bacteriology will furnish the tuberculin and the charts for recording the temperature and other data without charge. The only requirements are that the work be properly done and that a record of the test be returned to the laboratory.

Requests frequently come to us for information as to how an official tuberculin test of cattle (or mallein test of horses) can be secured to meet the requirements of officials in other states to which such animals are to be sent or taken. Michigan provides a state veterinarian, or, more correctly, she provides a state veterinarian, but does not outline his duties very clearly or comprehensively. However, certain other states require that the state veterinarian of Michigan shall indorse all tests or health certificates of horses or cattle shipped from Michigan into those states. At the present, the state veterinarian is also a member of the staff of the laboratory of bacteriology at M. A. C.

Anyone wishing to have an official test made of cattle or horses for shipment into other states should secure the services of a local veterinarian who is a graduate of a recognized veterinary college and licensed to practice in Michigan, and have him send to the state veterinarian at East Lansing for tuberculin or mallein for the number of cattle or horses to be tested. The material will be sent without expense to either the veterinarian or the owner of the stock. After the test is made, the charts should be returned immediately to the state veterinarian who will indorse them, if properly made out, and return to the proper party.

Correspondence relative to this matter will receive careful attention.

Cabbages may be successfully kept by placing them heads downward in a shallow trench and covering them over with earth. The covering should not be thick enough to keep the heads overly warm, and no harm is done by letting the roots stick out through the earth. The earth and the outer leaves may freeze, but the thin covering will allow them to thaw out and not decay from heat.

Tools and materials should be kept in their proper places. Do not keep all sizes of bolts or screws mixed together in a single receptacle, but fit up suitable boxes or bins, so that the supplies may be accessible on short notice.

Celery may be kept until late in the winter by packing in boxes of sand and placing in a cool cellar. For this purpose the roots and all outer leaves should be left on unless they already show signs of decay.

The proper maintenance of farm machines not only saves money but avoids danger to those who operate them. Keeping the harness and vehicles in repair may prevent a dangerous runaway.

A serious defect in the wool may not be strictly a disease, but it may be the result of a poor condition of the sheep due to some mistake or neglect in the management.

Prepare the Chickens for the Market

By J. O. LINTON, Michigan Agricultural College
Instructor in Poultry Husbandry

Just now is a time when the chickens are about ready to come in from the range. The pullets should be in their winter quarters that they may not be disturbed later when they are in laying, and the extras—all those which are not to be used as layers or breeders, and the surplus cockerels—should be made ready for market.

It is not expected that range cattle are in market condition without a few weeks finishing, nor can it be expected that range chickens are ready for table use without softening of the muscle and adding a little fat. Noticeable changes can be made in a few days time and if from ten days to three weeks' careful feeding is practiced a neat profit may be realized as a result of the increased weight and the superior quality of the meat.

Most fatteners feed twice a day, 12 hours between feeds, and are careful to have the food of such a constituency that it will drop—not run—from the end of a wooden ladle and not lumpy enough that the birds can carry it away from the troughs. Feeding may be done three times a day if preferred, the birds allowed all they will clean up in a short time and then the troughs cleaned and turned over.

For ordinary fattening, whether it be done in crates or in small pens where the birds can be kept reasonably quiet, a mixture of two parts ground oats, two parts ground buckwheat and one part corn meal may be used; a mixture of equal parts ground oats, ground barley, and ground buckwheat; or if preferred, a mixture of two parts ground barley, two parts low grade flour, one part wheat bran. In either case the meal should be mixed into a thin porridge with sour skim milk or buttermilk, but if it is not convenient to procure the milk in sufficient quantities, meat and raw vegetable foods may be added to the ration.

If the chickens have been on free range and had only hard grain foods it is well to starve them 24 hours, then start them on the wet mash in small quantities, six or eight ounces for a dozen birds, and gradually increase this amount till they are eating all they can. The appetites must be kept sharp, which may be done with variety of foods and addition of plenty of grit and charcoal. Thin shavings of tallow may be added the last few days and is readily converted into chicken fat which not only adds weight but gives the carcass a more finished appearance and assists greatly in cooking.

After the birds have been properly finished off they should be killed as soon as possible or they will lose weight. However care should be taken to have them starved for a few hours before killing so as to leave the intestines empty and the carcass in the best condition for the market.

Even the leghorns, which are hardly meat type, may be made to take on a very delicious quality and additional weight sufficient to realize a good profit.

Method of Roasting Meat

The principal difference between roasting and boiling is in the medium in which the meat is cooked. In boiling, the flesh to be cooked is surrounded by boiling water; in roasting, by hot air, although in roasting proper much of the heat comes to the joint as radiant heat. In both cases, if properly conducted, the fibers of the meat are cooked in their own juices.

When the meat alone is to be eaten, either roasting, broiling or frying in deep fat is, when properly done, a more rational method than boiling, for the juices are very largely saved. The shrinkage in a roast of meat during cooking is chiefly due to loss of water. At the same time small amounts of carbon and nitrogen are driven off and a little acid is produced which dissolves some of the constituents of the meat. The fat undergoes a partial decomposition into fatty acids and glycerin, and a little of it is volatilized.

It is interesting and at the same time important to remember that the smaller the cut to be roasted the hotter should be the fire. An intensely hot fire coagulates the exterior and prevents the drying up of the meat juices. This method would not, however, be applicable to large cuts, because meats are poor conductors of heat, and a large piece of meat exposed to this intense heat would become burned and changed to charcoal on the outside long before the heat could penetrate to the interior. Hence the rule: The smaller the cut to be roasted, the higher the temperature to which it should be exposed.

The broiling of a steak or chop is done on exactly this principle. An intense heat should be applied to thoroughly coagulate the albumen and stop the pores, and thus prevent the escape of juices. A steak exposed to an intense heat for ten minutes is thoroughly cooked, and has yet that rare, juicy appearance which is so desirable. Quoted from U. S. Department of Agriculture, Farmers' Bulletin No. 34.

Don't wait until the fall rains or winter snows cover the machinery with rust, warp the wood and scale off the paint. It is more than worth the trouble to get the machinery under cover as soon as it has done its season's work. An implement shed will pay for itself in a few years.

AGREE ON MOROCCO.

France and Germany Agree on Terms of Settlement.

In the Franco-German accord, officially given out, Germany recognizes the right of France to establish a protectorate in Morocco. Both nations engage to obtain the adherence to this accord of the other signatories to the Algeiras agreement.

France cedes to Germany about 250,000 square kilometers in French Congo, touching the German Kameruns, inhabited by about 1,000,000 negroes and with a commerce of $2,000,000 annually. The new German frontier starts at Moudia bay and extends to the Sanga river, to Kanoko and through the Congo, finally attaining Lake Tchad by way of the Ubang and Lengone rivers. France retains the right to run railroad lines across the territory.

Germany cedes her "Dutch bill," extending from the Chari river to the Leogone river. France and Germany agree to submit all new difficulties to The Hague tribunal.

France agrees to safeguard in Morocco the economic equality and commercial liberty for which provision is made in existing treaties. There is mutual agreement to take over the rights and obligations in connection with the companies holding concessions in the ceded territory.

Reign of Terror in Tripoli.

Steamer passengers arriving from Tripoli describe the situation there as a reign of terror. Strong military patrols are continually conducting rigorous house-to-house searches, and on the smallest pretense summary punishment is meted out. Many victims have been shot in their own houses and such is the absence of any attempt to discriminate between friend and foe that many foreigners have taken refuge in their consulates.

London, Ont., Swept by Fire.

Fire in the business section of London, Ont., caused a loss of $750,000 and deprived 500 persons of employment. The fire originated in the store of J. H. Chapman & Co. The plants of the Purdon Hardware Co., the Chapman company and many others were totally destroyed. The workers were in constant danger from falling walls, but no one was seriously injured.

One thousand students of the University of Notre Dame, Indiana, ended a week of prayer and religious exercises with a pledge of total abstinence from intoxicating liquor.

BREVITIES

PLYMOUTH—Plymouth postoffice will become a public savings depository on and after November 23rd.

BRIGHTON—Charles Dorr, jr., of Brighton, got his hand in a corn husker last week and stripped the nails and flesh off of a part of the fingers.

JACKSON—The state pardon board at its recent session, has the largest number of applications for pardon it has ever considered, 127. This is because a meeting of the board has not been held since last July.

DEXTER—Albert Koch of Webster recently purchased 80 acres of land of Chas. Wheeler, formerly known as the Foran farm, the consideration being $2,000, and will soon begin putting up buildings on it.—Leader.

DEXTER—Johnson Backus, 72 years of age, died at his home here late Saturday night. He was a retired merchant, having been engaged in the coal and lumber business for many years. He is survived by his wife.

JACKSON—The examination of George H. Sweet, the former Munith banker, which had been adjourned to Monday, was postponed for six weeks. Some negotiations are going on, and it is possible that the matter may be settled.

BLISSFIELD—Duval Terpeny, a student in the Addison high school who broke his leg in a football game with the Hillsdale team last week, has since had to have the injured member amputated just below the knee.—Advance.

POWELLVILLE—The way the oiled soil of the streets bakes up one's feet this weather makes it interesting. We heard one fellow swearing to beat all about it the other day. He said the council was a lot of pot heads and the council didn't promote the scheme at all.—Standard.

GRASS LAKE—J. F. Rohrer's meat market was burglarized Tuesday night to the extent of about five pounds of bolognas, one bunch of celery and twenty pennies. The work was evidently done by hungry hobo who gained an entrance by breaking a window in the rear of the store.—News.

BROOKLYN—Will Kieber says that he can't see why they should call it Mohawk Valley corn unless because it takes a whole valley to lay the ears down in. The ordinary ears of the variety he raised this year won't go in a common corn crib without sawing in two, and as to amount, a chunk of seven or eight ears of low new-ground brought forth over 135 bushels to the acre.—Exponent.

NORTHVILLE—There are only three cases of diphtheria in town, little Robert Houghton, Harry Shafer and Clifford Parmenter. Reports which have been circulated to the effect that there are eight or more such cases, are entirely groundless. Antitoxine has been given the patients and all are getting better rapidly. Extra precautions have been taken by closing the schools for a week, so that it is hardly possible that it will become an epidemic.—Record.

Saved Child From Death.

"After our child had suffered from severe bronchial trouble for a year," wrote G. T. Richardson, of Richardson's Mills, Ala., "we feared it had consumption. It had a bad cough all the time. We tried many remedies without avail, and doctor's medicine seemed as useless. Finally we tried Dr. King's New Discovery, and are pleased to say that one bottle effected a complete cure, and our child is again strong and healthy." For coughs, colds, hoarseness, lagrippe, asthma, croup, sore lungs, its the most infallible remedy that's made. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by L. P. Vogel, H. H. Kane Co. and L. T. Freeman Co.

Grange Products Contest.

The seventh annual products contest, conducted under auspices of Washtenaw County Pomona Grange, will be held at Masonic Temple, Ypsilanti, November 14. The aim of this event has always been educational but it has continually widened its scope. Special attention is now paid the work of boys and girls under 18 years of age. This year young exhibitors are invited to dinner as guests of the Grange. Following dinner, Prof. J. A. Jeffrey, of Michigan Agricultural College, will make the awards on the corn exhibits and talk upon "Modern Corn Culture," and Miss Swingle of Ann Arbor, will make the awards on the baked products and talk upon "Modern Corn Cookery."

Everybody having a noteworthy or new variety of grown product or of homewerk, is invited to show it. Everybody else, desiring to compare and learn from this exhibit, will also be very welcome. Bring contributions to picnic dinner and come early. At close of the contest Pomona Grange will sell at auction any exhibits which may be donated to help defray expenses of this event.

A GREAT DISCOVERY

Certain Ingredients That Really Promote Hair Growth When Properly Combined.

Resorcin is one of the most effective germ destroyers ever discovered by science, and in connection with Beta Naphthol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which destroys the germs which rob the hair of its natural nourishment, and also creates a clean healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the development of new germs.

Pilocarpin, although not a coloring matter or dye, is a well-known ingredient for restoring the hair to its natural color, when the loss of hair has been caused by a disease of the scalp.

These ingredients in proper combination, with alcohol added as a stimulant and for its well-defined nourishing properties, perfect perhaps the most effective remedy that is known for scalp and hair troubles.

We have a remedy which is chiefly composed of these ingredients, in combination with other extremely invaluable medicinal agents. We guarantee it to positively cure dandruff and to grow hair, even though the scalp in spots is bare of hair. If there is any vitality left in the roots, it will positively cure baldness, or we will refund your money. If the scalp has a glazed, shiny appearance, it's an indication that baldness is permanent, but in other instances we believe baldness is curable.

We want every one troubled with scalp disease or loss of hair to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. If it does not cure dandruff and grow hair to the satisfaction of the user, we will without question or quibble return every cent paid us for it. We print this guarantee on every bottle. It has effected a positive cure in 93 per cent of cases where put to a practical test.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is entirely unlike, and we think, in every particular, better than anything else we know of for the purpose for which it is prescribed. We urge you to try this preparation at our entire risk. Certainly we know of no better guarantee to give you. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Chelsea only at our store—The Rexall Store. L. E. Freeman Co.

ANN ARBOR—Edith Staebler and her cousins, children of Emanuel April, of Scio, narrowly escaped death when a traction engine upon which they were riding fell down an embankment. The engine had been on her heels farm to run a corn husker, and was leaving when the children jumped on to have a ride.

Ethel Barrymore.

Theatregoers will have an opportunity next week to enjoy the brilliant gifts and compelling methods of Ethel Barrymore when she appears at the Whitney Theatre, Ann Arbor, on Monday night in "The Witness for the Defense," her new English drama. Mr. Mason's play might have as its second title, "Save Me From My Friends," for poor Stella Ballantyne nearly has her life ruined by the arrogant stupidity of Henry Thresh, her friend, and a successful lawyer at that.

The story is simple and direct. Stella is married to a drunken bully in the Indian Civil Service, and Thresh meets her, after many years, living in cowed and abject misery in Rajputana.

Her husband is on the verge of delirium tremens and when Thresh leaves them he threatens to strike his wife, and in self defence she shoots him.

She is arrested and her acquittal is practically assured on the plea of self defence when Thresh rushes in with a new defence; claiming that Ballantyne's life had been threatened by certain seditionists and that he himself had seen a long, lean arm stealing under the canvas tent on the night of the murder.

Two years later we find her living at Sussex, England, and learn how she was acquitted. Richard Hazelwood, a young soldier, has fallen in love with her; they are about to be married. Then Henry Thresh comes upon the scene, not through his own volition but owing to the suspicions of Hazelwood's relatives who wish to learn more about the trial and the acquittal. Thresh rises to the occasion but he knows that Stella shot her husband and when he hears that she is about to re-marry, his desire to interfere becomes uncontrollable.

She comes to him in the night and begs him to be silent and let her be happy. This is one of the great scenes of the play. She recounts with tragic intensity the ghastly horror her life had been with Ballantyne, and she tells how it was that blind and almost unconsciously she shot and killed the man whose hand was raised to strike her.

At this moment they are discovered by old Hazelwood, and despite all, she must risk in confession all her future happiness.

Miss Barrymore is accompanied by a distinguished group of players, who are said to give Miss Barrymore worthy support. The cast includes Mr. A. E. Anson, for two years leading man in the New Theatre; Mr. W. L. Abingdon, well known as "The Devil" in Henry Savage's production and Ernest Stallard, Lumsden Hare, Leslie Faber and Annie Esmond.

"The Prince of Tonight."

Musical comedy gained much when Henry Woodruff gave up the dramatic for the musical field, and it is generally conceded that he, too, has been fortunate in securing as his initial vehicle "The Prince of Tonight," which, according to popular opinion, is the best effort of Hough, Adam and Howard, authors of most of the other musical comedy successes so capably exploited by producer Mort H. Singer. "The Prince of Tonight" has a well defined fantastic romance woven through its delightful three acts, and the music is fitted to the play rather than used as incidental, as is customary with the average musical play. It has been said that the music or the play could each hold attention without the other. There are numbers suitable for the best of comic operas, while there is more than the average of popular whistling airs. "It's a Dear Old World, After All," "You Won't Know Anybody There," "Follow the Rainbow Trail," "Tonight Will Never Come Again," "I Can't Be True So Far Away," "Her Eyes Are Blue for Yale," "Can't It Be Love?" and "The Best Thing a Walter Does is Wait" are among the song gems. The Mort H. Singer productions always excel in the chorus. Not only are young and pretty girls required but the men also must come up to a standard of good looks. The male contingent in "The Prince of Tonight" are not a whit behind their star in the possession of good looks and all selected for their singing abilities. Mr. Woodruff will have the role of a resourceful college youth who is spurned by a pretty heiress, but later wins her through the magic influence of a century plant at the moment of its blooming. He becomes a prince for the night, in the mythical land of Lunatania. "The Prince of Tonight" will be seen at the New Whitney Theatre Saturday, November 11, matinee and night with the complete production, identically as presented for an entire season at the Princess Theatre, Chicago.
