Do a Little Figuring

How much money have you got saved up? How much can you save in the next year? It does a man good to look the situation squarely in the face once in a while and see where he is coming out financially. Take your pencil and paper and do a little calculating.

On Income and Outgo

And do not forget that interest on savings will add materially to your income. Here's a little table that will be of interest to you if you become a depositor in the savings department of this bank. It shows how money grows at 3 per cent interest:

Must Vote Taxes.

Of utmost importance to many city, village and rural districts in Michigan is the opinion just given by Attorney General Franz C. Kuhn in regard to the use of primary money which will be apportioned in July of this year. No part of it can be used to pay teachers for services rendered before the money is received by the district treasurer. If there is no primary money on hand, the districts must pay the teachers from the general fund and this is not to be replaced by primary money, when the atter is received.

The general school law provides that when the primary fund is exhausted, the teachers are to be paid out of the general fund. If there are not sufficient funds on hand, the school board may vote a tax sufficient and then borrow money on the amount voted, no action of the people being necessary. Special provision for the year 1912 is made in compiler's section 23 of the school laws as follows: "Provided, that, if any de ficiency shall be caused in the teachers' wages fund in any school district by the changing of the date in the apportionment of the primary school interest fund by the superintendent shall have authority first to borrow before the option expires. on the warrant of the district a sum sufficient to meet such deficiency or, such deficiency for a period not to exceed five years."

This deficiency or the bonds must e paid out of the general fund and ot from the primary money.

"Learned Author" in Something of Tight Place, but Equal to the Emergency.

Even when the son "inherits" his father's wit, as we say, his father may still keep his own, and on occasion even be able to cope successfully with ais offspring. Dr. James B. Angell tells, in his "Reminiscences," the following enjoyable story of his college says at Brown university, under the Presidency of Dr. Wayland:

The doctor's son, Heman Lincoln Wayland, one of my classmates, inherited from his father a very keen wit. The passages between lather and son were often entertaining to the class. One day, when we were considering a chapter in the father's textbook on moral philosophy, Lincoln rose with an expression of great solemaity and respect, and said:

"Sir, I would like to propound nuestion.

"Well, sir, what is it?" was the re-

"Well, sir," said the son, "in the learned author's work which we are now perusing. I observe the following remark"-and then he quoted. The class saw that fun was at hand, and began to laugh. "Well, what of it?" asked the father, with a merry twinkle in his eye.

"Why," continued the son, "in another work of the same learned auther, entitled 'On the Limitations of Human Responsibility,' I find the following passage."

He then quoted again. Clearly the two passages were irreconcilable. The boys were delighted to see that the doctor was in a tray, and broke into loud laughter.

"Well, what of it?" asked the doctor, and his eyes twinkled still more mer-

"Why." said the son, with the utmost gravity, "it has occurred to me that I should like to know how the learned author reconciles the two statements."

Ingenious Decorative Idea.

has an ingenious idea for decorating homes. She uses door panels, alcoves and convenient parts of the walls for decorative purposes. She paints on the walls landscape scenes, bits of ever, and have the furniture and the hangings harmonize with the wall decorations. Miss Merfield thinks that this phase of art has not been developed as much as it should, and bedieves that in the next 20 years many women will take up such work as their life professions. With the building of luxurious houses, she says, there will be a greater demand for artists who make a specialty of decorating and furnishing homes.

Liked the Women of Boston.

"What struck me most about the women of Boston," says Sarah Bernhardt in her recently published memoirs, "was the harmony and softness of their gestures. Brought up among the severest and harshest of traditions, the Bostonian race seems to me to be the most refined and the most mysterious of all the American races." The only comfort for the New York, Chicago, and Sacramento races of Americans, in the face of this somewhat invidious comment, is that the impression was formed by the eminent actress in the year 1879.

$100,000 Available for School for Deaf.

According to the opinion of Atty. Gen. Kuhn the $100,000 fund set aside by the state to meet losses sustained by fire or other destructive elements, is available for the rebuilding of the burned administration building of the Michigan School for the Deaf at Flint. Mr. Kuhn stated that the statute requires that the trustees of the school shall make a statement of the loss sustained and file plans and specifications for a new building, together with an estimate of the cost, with the state board of auditors. The gov ernor can call a meeting of the board and acting with it authorize the trustees to expend the needed money.

Novel Idea of State Management Bring City and Country Boys Together

Having provided for the boys from the country at the 63rd annual State

Fair, the management decided to also look after the boys from the city and so established a system of Medel Farms on a plot of ground 1,000 feet by 400 feet and on this plot fifty of the city boys will conduct for the next four months minature farms on which will be grown celery, onions, cors, pos-toes mangles, beans, sugar beets, squash, pumpkins and other produc according to a schedule and also for-ers to beautify the little farms. The lads who will take charge, each of an individual farm, will come from the Boy Scouts and from the Ford Republic and other organizations. These fifty lads will be under the general charge of a man who will give them instructions in the fundamental principles of agriculture and who will also provide them with the necessary seeds. The crops will be so planted that they will be at the harvesting per iod at the time of the opening of the Fair and on the general results and appearance of each farm the prize will be awarded. The State Fair Management has offered $100 in five bright $20 gold pieces to the boy whose produce and the general ap-pearance of his farm gives him the lead and the second boy will receive $50 and third boy $25 while other prizes of seeds and agricultural inplements will be offered by the mer-chants of Detroit and exhibitors whose seed and tools may be used. The lads who will range in age from four-teen to sixteen years, will also be allowed to dispose of their produce to the best advantage and in this way every boy will secure adequate returns for his labor. The State Fair Management will prepare the ground for the boys and the first crops will be in the ground within a few days now. The idea of the Model Farms for boys. was that of Secretary and Manager Hannon and it was immediately taken in hand by the Directors who gave it their hearty support and by the man-agement of the Boy Scouts and other organizations, who carefully selected. the boys. The State Fair management made but one restriction, that twentyfive farms be in actual operation at the time of the State Fair.

In arranging for the farming enter-prise for the city boys and for the Boys State Fair school from the boys all over the State, the Michigan State Agricultural Society provides the means for the boys of the city and of the country to get together for the week and the meeting will prove beneficial to all concerned and very interesting to their elders.

Pruning should begin as soon as the trees have been planted by cutting back the young trees at the time of planting to the height from the ground it is proposed to start the branches to form the head of the tree, which should not be over 12 to 15 inches. This cutting back will cause several of the upper buds to break and grow, thus starting the top or head at the proper height. The starting branches should be watched and only such left to grow as are to form the main branches. The strongest shoots should be left at equal distances around the stem and should there will be a second generation of tend obliquely outward so as to spread and make an open head. The second year these shoots should be shortened us and a great drain on the vitality to anyone who writes for it. This back to the extent of about half of the growth. The same plan should be continued the third and fourth years.

In all pruning to give the desired form to the head and especially while the tree is young, the orchardist should keep clearly fixed in his mind the form of the tree as it is to be when old: for what may seem to be an open head when the tree is young may prove to be too dense and crowded when the tree is older. The branches should not be too close together for convenience in gathering the best for training the pear. The the fruit.

By this method there will be no difficulty in shaping the tree into any desired form.

All pruning and training possible should be done while the trees are young and the growth of wood is tender. At such time the healing over is more rapid and complete, and the tree suffers less injury.

Old trees that have been neglected may be renewed by severe pruning. cutting back all the branches that are not in a healthy condition. This pruning will cause new, vigorous shoots to grow. The New York Times of March 23. 1912, in an article dealing with Canada's progress, says:

"At the present moment eight ship loads of European immigrants are afloat for Canada, while there are signs that the outward movement which is customary with us during labor troubles will be marked this year. There is no such startling record of our loss to Canada. Our citizens quietly slip over the border in groups or trainloads, but their going is not advertised.

"There is no mystery why Canada is the 'good thing' the United States used to be. It is because Canada is following in its neighbor's footsteps that it is repeating the fortunate experience which its neighbor is envying, even while deliberately turning and announced all the preparations its back on the teachings of the past. A fortnight ago the Dominion budget speech reported the unprecedented surplus of $39,000,000, and on Thursthe militia, and everything, but no day the Government passed through provision was made for the G. Chelsea Standard THINGS WE'RE ASHAMED OF

Why is it That Women Always Seem to Have Something to Apolo-gize For?

Isn't it queer the sort of things we are ashamed of? queries a western woman writer. How often do we hear people apologizing profusely because they happen to live in an unfashionable part of town. They will explain and explain ad nauseam how they came to be living in that house and how very awkward it is having that class of neighbors. I have come to the conclusion it is little short of a crime not to live in the fashionable part of the city.

And then relations. Everybody seems to be ashamed of at least one relation. In most cases the only ones they are proud of are dead ones, a long time dead, and very remote relations at that. But the living relations always seem to be a cause of shame they never will live in the right districts, build the right kind of house, bring up their children stylishly or indulge in the right kind of trade. Female relations will insist upon marrying undesirable husbands, and male relations always manage to acquire vulgar or dowdy wives.

One stylish lady is wont to sigh elegantly as she murmurs "poor dear George-peculiar wife, you know; I've tried, but I really can't include them in my social affairs, you know."

But of all the shameful shame pro ducers the behavior of our babies is the shamlest

Our babies always will dirty their pinnies, ask for candy, wipe jammy fingers on the visitor's coat, demand attention persistently and vociferously, knock over the tea cups, spread the cake crumbs all over the best carpet and perpetrate all the other hundred and one misdemeanors that the dear lambs are heir to. They all do it sometimes and they all do it always on the days we earnestly yearn for them to make a good impression. So why are we ashamed of them for being normal? Why do we all explain at great length how Tommy never behaves like this on ordinary occasions and why do we persist in being mortified so poignantly?-Ex-

Captain George & Boynton

URING the Franco-Prussian war, which ended in the capitulation of the French at Sedan, September 1, 1870, I had three ships busy with honest cargoes, but I did not get a chance to do any contraband running until just before its close. Under fire of the guns at Trieste I ran out guns, which I delivered to the com-safety at Bordeaux only a few days the battle of Sedan. Shortly after this I placed the Leckwith and my other ships in the hands of Nickell & Co. for charter and miled for New York.

The first word that reached me on my arriwas that my wife, who had sailed ahead of me, was seriously ill at her old home in Illinois. I went to her at once and remained at her side until the end, three weeks later.

When I returned to New York after the fumeral I was greatly depressed and was in a mood for anything that offered excitement. 'A stew days later I met Frank (Francis Lay) Nor-Knowing each other by reputation, we soon became friends. Later we became partmers in some of the most gloriously exciting exploits in which I have been fortunate enough to participate. Norton was a natural born pirate, and he looked the part.

When I first met him he was wild about the China sea, where he had spent several thrillfing years and made several fortunes, but I. heard so much of Venezuela and of Guzman Blanco that my heart was set on going there metore I undertook to explore any other strange lands. The upshot of our many discussions was that I sent Norton to London to take command of the Leckwith until I was weady to join him, when it was agreed we should go out in the yacht to his beloved China sea.

After Norton's departure I bought the small Tore-and-aft schooner-yacht Juliette, fitted her out at New London, Conn.; for a six months' cruise and started for Bermuda to test her seaworthiness, with Lars Lorensen as sailing masfeer, formerly of the Leckwith, and a brave and loyal Norseman. Guzman Blanco was not at St. Thomas, so we went on to Curacao, always a revolutionary rendezvous, and there, in the latter part of December, I met Guzman and General Pulgar; his chief of staff. Guzman, after many exciting political and millfary ups and downs, was planning an invasion of Venezuela against the Monagas faction, then in power.

. After he had studied me, asked all sorts of questions and apparently satisfied himself that I could be relied on, Guzman told me, in a general way, of his plans and asked me to secure for him 3,000 old Remington rifles and 500,000 cartridges and deliver them as quickly as possible at Curacao.

Some two months later I arrived at Curacao, where, instead of Guzman Blanco, I found General Ortega, who was with Guzman when I first met him and seemed to be fully in his confidence. Ortega handed me a note, bearing what purported to be the signature of Guzman, which directed me to deliver the cargo at a place to be indicated by Ortega, and stated that payment for it would be made on my cabin table. I showed the signature to itwo men who knew Guzman well, and both pronounced it genuine. I had no suspicion that anything was wrong and took this preexaction simply as a matter of ordinary busimens sense.

Ortega directed me to deliver the cargo at Tucacas point, about one hundred miles west of La Guayra, and, on arriving, Ortega went ashore and returned with a request that I order off the batches and start the unloading of the cargo in my boats and then go ashore with him and get my money. This was not in accord with my contract with Guzman or with the note Ortega had handed me, but I had great confidence in Guzman and did not wish to offend him. As soon as the unloading was well under way I went ashore with Ortega. We climbed the bluff and walked half a orde inland to a mud-thatched hut before which a sentry was pacing. Ortega gave the countersign and we stepped inside, to find General Pulgar, who was chief of staff for Guzman when I was introduced to him, wrapped in a chinehora and smoking in a hammock. He explained evasively that he was there instead of Guzman, but when I asked him for my money he smiled and straightened up.

"I told Ortega to deliver that message to you," he said, "but there is no use mineing, words and I may as well tell you that you are my prisoner. Your cargo is being taken care of and will be put to a very different purpose from that which you expected. As I have said, you are my prisoner, but I have an offer to make you. It can't make much difference to you whether you serve Guzman or sne. If you will join my forces I will make you a colonel and give you command of a battalion, and when the revolution is over I will pay you for your rifles, just as Guzman again inquired where Guzman was, but shrug of the shoulders was the only answer second get to questioning along that fine. Not wing so much about Venezuelt revoluthen as I did later, I could not fathom strange situation to my entire satisfacton but it was my guess that in a me way

Polgar had become urrayed against Guzman, and it turned out that I was right.
I told Pulgar that I would give him an answer in the morning and spent the rath with riegs, under guard of tried to draw him out. idently according to orders, he would not even talk about the weather,

At sunrise we went to see Pulgar, When asked for my decision I inquired what the result would be if his revolution failed.

"Then I am sorry, my dear captain, but you will lose your cargo, while I will lose my life, which is of infinitely more importance to me. But the revolution will not fail!" he vehemently declared.

As though impressed by his confidence, I announced that I would accept his offer, with a mental reservation to escape at the first opportunity, for I did not propose to fight against

"That is excellent," he said, with the suggestion of a bow. After coffee I went with him to inspect his troops. I was formally given command of a battalion of 300 men, and an Indian servant, who, I afterward found. had orders to shoot me if I attempted to escape, was assigned to me. I accompanied Pulgar back to his headquarters, where I was given an old sword and the tarnished shoulder straps of a colonel, these constituting my uni-

"Now that you have allied yourself with my forces," he then said, "you will have no use for your ship. You will therefore write a note to the officer in charge, directing him to proceed to Curacao and await orders. She will be safe there and," with a quizzical smile, "you will be safe here."

As there was nothing else for me to do. I complied with it at once.

I had been trying for about a week to whip my lazy, ignorant troops into some sort of shape, when word was brought in one morning that "the enemy" was approaching.

Instead of allowing me to lead my battalion, Pulgar ordered me to remain with him on a little knoll in the rear, from which he made a pretense of directing his forces.

I will say for them, though, that they fought hard and stubbornly, but they were gradually driven back, and Pulgar, who had a terrible temper, was furious. All at once the opposing troops were largely reinforced and came with a rush which quickly converted our orderly retreat into a rout. Pulgar, cursing like a madman, dashed into the disorganized mass of his liberty-loving louts, with Ortega and the rest of his staff at his heels.

I was left alone and was hesitating as to what I should do, when my Indian servant tugged at my trousers-leg. "Follow me, colonel!" he said. "I know where there is a boat." He started off at a run and covered ground so fast that I had to gallop my horse to keep up with him. He led the way to the beach near where my cargo had been landed and pushed a native boat from under a clump of mangrove trees. We jumped in and shoved off in a hurry, for Ortega and several of his were making for us.

We drifted around for three days and nights without so much as a glimpse of a distant sail and without an ounce of food or a mouthful of water, save only such as we were able to suck out of our clothes after a providential rain the second night. On the morning of the fourth day a fog lifted, and close to us was a fleet of fishermen from the island of Oruba, twenty miles to the westward of Curacao. They took us to their island, and after we had rested and eaten for two days a fishing boat took us to Curacao. There I learned from Consul Faxon what had happened in Venezuela. Guzman's plans had worked out more rapidly than he anticipated, and he landed in Venezuela early in February at the head of a small force, but with a large army waiting for him. With only slight resistance he entered Caracas and proclaimed himself dictator. His victory was so easily achieved and was so largely a personal one that he did not give to Pulgar the reward to which he considered himself entitled, and Pulgar immediately started a new revolution.

When I told Faxon how I had been imposed on and impressed into Pulgar's service he advised me to tell Guzman the whole story. I went on the next step ar, which also carried a letter from Faxon, in which he told Guzman the precautions I had taken to verify the signature to the order Ortega had given

I called on Guzman after I knew he had re ceived Faxon's letter and was welcomed with marked cordiality. "Tell me your whole story," he said, "but let me assure you it is believed before it is told." His face took on an ugly look when I told him how Ortega had tricked me with the forged order, and he interrupted me to say that he had sent an officer to Curacao to await the Juliette and direct me to deliver the arms at La Guayra. This officer's failure to get to me in advance of Ortega had not been satisfactorily explained and had, Guzman said, been severely punished. It was evident that he suspected collusion between his agent and Ortega,

When I had finished Guzman told me he was surrounded by men whom he either suspected or hesitated to trust. He wanted a man whom he could rely on implicitly to watch for evidences of treachery among those around him, and he was kind enough to say he thought I was the man he had been looking for. He asked me to remain in Caracas for an indefinite time, to mix freely with his followers and ascertain, who could be trusted.

I had been with Guzman Blanco for about a year after he proclaimed himself dictator of Venezuela, February 14, 1871, when I began to grow restless again. This was in no sense due to any fault I had to find with Guzmar. He had treated me with every mark of friendship and had proved, time and again, that i possessed his entire confidence. But under his strong hand things were settling down to a humdrem, and with my whole nature clamoring for a change to more strenuous scenes I put the situation up to Guzman and secured his permission to go away, on the promise that I would return within six months. 1-summoned the Juliette from Curacao and set sail for England, for the double purpose of securing a cargo of arms with which to add to the joy of living in Central America, and of look-within me the germ of his China sea insanity that it was taking root.

We stopped at St. Thomas, that haven of thieves, blacklegs and revolutionists, and there I met General Baez, brother and minister of war to Buenaventura Baez, the president of Santo Domingo, and one of the most interesting characters the romantic West Indies have produced.

He knew of my association with Guzman Blanco and at once approached me with a proposition that I go to Santo Domingo to aid his brother in the troubles he foresaw. I told him that, if I could get an extension of leave from Guzman I would consider any practical plan that promised excitement.

We went on to London, where I learned that Norton was in the Mediterranean with the Leckwith, impatiently carrying general cargoes. I left word for him with Nickell & Son that I expected soon to be ready to go out east with him, took on a cargo of arms and headed for Costa Rica, where I had information that a revolution was hatching against General Tomaso Guardia.

We ran into bad weather in the Caribbean and were forced to put in at Kingston, after all, leaking badly.

When the repairs were completed the governor of the island refused to allow us to reload our cargo, as he had an intimation that she ship was not what she pretended to be. This hint, it developed later, came from Jimmy Donovan, a "sea lawyer," whom I had shipped at the last minute in the hurry of getting away from London. He made what is known, . In a few minutes I was captured, along with | Capt. Smith to Blame for Titanic on the sea as a "pier-head jump." On the fourth day I prevailed on the governor to allow us to take our cargo, but he insisted that the ship must be held, with both anchors down, until further orders. I decided that we would go out that night. Knowing me as well as he did, Lorensen laughed incredulously, thinking I was joking, for the channel through the harbor was shaped like the letter S and commanded by a fort which could, as he said. blow us out of the water without half trying. "Just the same," I said, "we are going to sea or to heil tonight."

During the evening he greased all of the blocks so we could start on our problematical journey without any noise. The moon went down at midnight, and before it was out of sight we had one anchor up, with a muffled capstan. We were getting up the other when the harbor policeman came along. A few Bank of England notes blinded him and we got under way, with two of the ship's boats towing us and the tide helping us along. Evidently the fort had orders to look out for us, but we caught them napping, apparently, for we were almost past it when we were hailed and ordered to stop.

The next instant, without giving us a decent chance to heave to, even had we been so inclined, they whanged away at us. The second shot went clear through us, just below the waterway, and Lorensen, who was with me at the wheel, exclaimed grimly, "Here we go, captain!"

But he was mistaken, for in the darkness their gunnery was not up to the standard of British marksmanship.

We were soon under cover of the Myrtle Bank hotel and after that two ships protected us until we were far enough away so that only a chance shot could reach us.

The arms we carried were sold to the revolutionists in Costa Rica, being paid for partly in cash and partly in coffee, which I sold at Curação. From there I returned to Venezuela and reported to Guzman Blanco, after having been away only about four months.

After Guzman's successful campaign against the rebel, Pulido, in which I served on the staff, I received another letter from Baez, urging me to come to Santo Domingo. The same mail brought a letter from Baez to Guzman, asking him to grant me leave of absence for a few months to enter his service. Guzman was flattered by this request and with his permission I went to Santo Domingo City in the spring of 1873, on the Juliette.

President Baez of Santo Domingo was short and thin and had a washed-out look, as though his skin had been faded by chemicals instead of by a three-quarters admixture of white blood. I had heard of him only as a good fighter, but that reputation I became convinced, soon after my first visit to the "palace," had been earned for him by his former friends and supporters and was in no sense the work of his own sword, at least so far as recent years were coacerned.

The "army" was, in reality, not much more than an unorganized body of densely ignorant natives, who, as practically the only compensation for their supposed loyalty, were allowed to carry guns which they did not know how to use. I taught them how to march without getting in each other's way, how to handle their arms without shooting themselves, and as much discipline as they were amenable to, but I fear my efforts did not go much beyond that, even though they did effect ing up Frank Norton, who had so well planted a decided improvement. The revolutionary spirit seemingly having subsided with the improvement in the army, I took the Juliette to Halifax, N. S., in the summer of 1875, to have her decks strengthened and mounted with rapid-fire guns. We returned early in the fall to find that the smoldering revolution had burst into flame and that a large force was marching on Santo Domingo City. The president and his brother were vehemently but vainly advising each other to be brave when I reached the palace.

"What shall we do? What shall we do?" demanded the president as I entered the door. "It strikes me that it might be a good scheme to fight," I replied, with no attempt to conceal my disgust at their attitude.

They told me there were about 3,000 men in the attacking force. We had more than 4,000 men under arms. The city had no defenses worthy the name, and I insisted that the thing to do was to go outside and fight It out in the open. The president, who had apparently regained a little of his nerve. agreed with me and, against the continued objections of his brother, we went out to meet the attacking army.

General Baez commanded our center and right, while I commanded our left flank. With the firing of the first gun he began to give way before a force that was inferior in both numbers and discipline, and fell back so rap- mob, he was again asked if he were idly that before I realized it my command guilty. "I am guilty," he cried, and was flanked and almost cut off, with the sea on one side of us and the enemy on two others ing high above his head. and rapidly closing up the fourth.

General Ganier d'Aton, aster. a tool of Pimental and Cabral, was at once proclaimed president and hailed by the populace with the customary acclaim.

Instead of being killed at once, as I had expected. I was taken to a small port on a hill near the town, where, on the altogether false. charge that I had fomented trouble and brought on civil war, I was tried by drumhead court martial and sentenced to be shot in the hotel a dictagraph which he asat sunrise. The verdict was, of course, dictated by revenge, and execution of it was delayed because they wished to gloat over me for a while.

This was a little the most serious predicament I had ever been in and, with the idea of taking every chance that was open to me, rather than with any distinct hope that it would be answered, I gave the grand hailing sign of a powerful secret order which I had joined while in Caracas. I thought I saw a sergeant raise his eyes, but, as he gave no further sign, I concluded that if there had been any movement it had been one of surprise and not of recognition.

I was placed in a large sala with windows opening on the courtyard, and blank walls on the three other sides.

Along about three o'clock, just as I had about made up my mind that in a couple of hours I should be due to start on an indefinite exploration, I heard a short scuffle at each end of the path the sentries were patrolling, and a gurgling noise as though a man were choking. The next moment Lorensen's voice came softly through the door:

"Are you in there, captain?" I assured him that I was,

"Stand away from the door!" he said, and I obeyed the order with pleasurable alacrity. Three blows with a log of crutch mahogany, taken from a pile in the courtyard, smashed in the door. Lorensen selzed my arm and, led by the sergeant who had, after all, recognized the sign I had made, we climbed down a declivity back of the fort and made our way to the shore, where two boats were waiting for us.

As soon as it was day I sailed close in and bombarded the fort where my execution was to have taken place.

At Caracas I found Guzman had been elected president. He was inaugurating public improvements, and induced me to go upon a wonderful journey of exploration up the Orinoco through the unmapped interior of Venezuela. After a six months' river journey of 2,000 miles, we reached Manaos, Brazil, on the Amazon, that great river and the Orinoco having a common source. From Manaos we sailed to Rio Janeiro and from there to England on the Elbe, commanded by Captain Moir, commander of the Trent when Mason and Slidell were taken off. On the way I wrote a full report to Gusman, promising to return within a few years. At London I joined Frank Norton to start for the China sea.

Gomez Says He Will Have Negro Revolt Quelled in Ten Days; U. S. Bases Its Course on That Representation.

President Taft replied to President Gomez's telegram regarding the attitude of the United States toward Cuba. He declared the American government's activities in mobilizing war vessels at Key West and dispatching the Prairie with marines to Guantanamo was not in any sense an intervening movement. The following is the text of the message: "I am sincerely gratified to learn of your government's energetic measures to put down the disturbance and to know that you are confident of being successful. As was fully explained to the Cuban charge d'affaires, this government's motive in sending ships to Key West, just as sending the Prairie to the Guantanamo naval station, was merely to be able to act promptly in case it should unfortunately become necessary to protect American life and property by rendering moral support or assistance to the Cuban government. As was made quite clear at the time these ordinary measures of precaution were entirely disassociated from any question of intervention.

"WILLIAM H. TAFT." Feeling assured that President Gomez has misunderstood the purpose of dispatching the large naval force to Key West, the state department has now left to the discretion of Col. Karmany, commanding the marine force en route on the cruiser Prairie the extent to which the marines shall be employed.

BABY'S ECZEMA AND BOILS

"My son was about three weeks old when I noticed a breaking-out on his cheeks, from which a watery substance oozed. A short time after, his arms, shoulders and breast broke out also, and in a few days became a solid scab. I became alarmed, and called our family physician who at once pronounced the disease eczema. The little fellow was under treatment for about three months. By the end of that time, he seemed no better. I became discouraged. I dropped the doctor's treatment, and commenced the use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a few days noticed a marked change. The eruption on his cheeks was almost healed, and his shoulders. arms and breast were decidedly bet ter. When he was about seven months old, all trace of the eczema was gone.

"During his teething period, his head and face were broken out in boils which I cured with Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Surely he must have been a great sufferer. During the time of teething and from the time I dropped the doctor's treatment, I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, nothing else, and when two years old he was the picture of health. His complexion was soft and beautiful; and his head a mass of silky curls. I had been afraid that he would never be well, and I feel that I owe a great deal to the Cuticura Remedies." The Wreck of the Taxicab. The young woman in the taxicab scuttling frantically down the dark street, clung to the arm of the young man alongside, as if she were terrifled at the lawbreaking, neck-risking speed. But evidently some greater fear goaded her, for she gasped: "Can't he go a little faster?"

"Can't you go a little faster?" The young man alongside howled as he thrust his head and shoulders through the window in the door.

But the self-created taxi-gale swept his voice aft, and the taut chauffeur perked his ear in vain to catch the vanishing syllables.

"What's that?" he roared. "Can't you go a little faster?"

The indignant charloteer simply had to shoot one barbed glare of reproach into that passenger. He turned his head and growled:

"Say, do youse want to lose me me license?" For just one instant he turned his

A dozen or more miracles coincided to save the passengers from injury. The young man found himself standing on the pavement with the unhinged door still around his neck. The young woman's arms were round his had been absent of mind. It had reposed there often enough, but never before in the street under a lamppost. The chauffeur found himself in the road, walking about on all fours, like a bewildered quadruped.

Evidently some overpowering need for speed possessed the young woman, for even now she did not scream. she did not faint, she did not murmur. "Where am I?" She simply said: "What time is it, honey?"

And the young man, not realizing how befuddled he really was, or how his hand trembled, fetched out his watch and held it under the glow of the lamppost, which was now bent over in a convenient but disreputable attitude.

"A quarter to ten, sweetheart. Plenty of time for the train." "But the minister, honey! What about the minister?" The consideration of this riddle was interrupted by a muffled hubbub of yelps, whimpers and canine hysterics. Immediately the young woman forgot ministers, collisions, train-scheduleseverything. She showed her first sign

They groped about in the topsyturvy taxicab, rummaged among a jumble of suitcases, handbags, umbrellas and minor impedimenta, and fished out a small dog-basket with an inverted dog inside. Snoozleums was ridiculous in any position, but as he slid tail foremost from the wicker basket, he resembled nothing so much they had given him as their destinaout of a work-basket. brilliant than: "That mess don't look much like it ever was a taxicab, does it?"

The young man shrugged his shoulders, and stared up and down the long street for another. The young woman looked sorrowfully at the wreck, and queried:

The place of their shipwreck was so deserted that not even a crowd had gathered. The racket of the collision had not brought a single policeman. They were in a dead world of granite warehouses, wholesale stores and factories, all locked and forbidding, and full of silent gloom. In the daytime this was a big tradeartery of Chicago, and all day long it was thunderous with trucks and commerce. At night it was Pompell, so utterly abandoned that the night watchmen rarely slept outside, and no footpad found it worth while to set up shop.

The three castaways stared every which way, and every which way was peace. The ghost of a pedestrian or two hurried by in the far distance. A cat or two went furtively in search of warfare or romance. The lampposts stretched on and on in both directions in two forevers.

In the faraway there was a muffled rumble and the faint clang of a bell. Somewhere a street car was bumping along its rails.

"Our only hope," said Harry. "Come along, Marjorie."

He handed the chauffeur five dollars as a poultice to his wounds, tucked the girl under one arm and the doghead. One instant was just enough. basket under the other, and set out,

His train stood now waiting to set forth upon a voyage of two thousand miles, a journey across seven imperial states, a journey that should end only at that marge where the continent dips and vanishes under the breakers of the Pacific ocean.

At the head of his car, with his little box-step waiting for the foot of the first arrival, the porter stood, his head swelling under his cap, his breast swelling beneath his blue blouse, with its brass buttons like this evil. reflections of his own eyes. His name was Ellsworth Jefferson, but he was called anything from "Poarr-turr" to "Pawtah," and he usually did not come when he was called.

Tonight he was wondering perhaps what passengers, with what dispost tions, would fall to his lot. Perhaps he was wondering what his Chicago sweetheart would be doing in the eight days before his return. Perhaps he was wondering what he San Francisco sweetheart had been doing in the five days since he left her, and how she would pass the three days that must intervene before he reached her again.

He had Othello's ebon color. Did he have Othello's green eye? Whatever his thoughts, he chatted gaily enough with his neighbor and colleague of the Portland sleeper. Suddenly he stopped in the midst of a soaring chuckle. "Lordy, man, looky what's a-com-

"I hope you git him."

"I hope I don't." "He'll work you hard and cuss you out, and he won't give you even a Much Obliged."

enough to fill a van." The oncomer was plainly of English origin. It takes all sorts of people to make up the British Empire. and there is no sort lacking-glorious or pretty, or sour or sweet. But this was the type of English globe-trotter that makes himself as unpopular among foreigners as he is among his own people. He is almost as unendurable as the Americans abroad who twang their banjo brag through Europe, and berate France and Italy for their innocence of buckwheat cakes.

The two porters regarded Mr. Harold Wedgewood with dread, as he bore down on them. He was almost lost in the plethora of his own luggage. He asked for the San Francisco sleeper, and the Portland porter had to turn away to smother his gurgling relief.

Ellsworth Jefferson's heart sank. He made a feeble effort at self-protection. The Pullman conductor not being present at the moment, he in-

Organization Takes Strong Stand Against Liquor Traffic-Significant Action on Question Taken.

It is perhaps not generally known now strong a stand the Grange as an organization takes against intemperince, and in opposition to the liquor raffic in general. On this question the organization is everywhere a anit and no principle of the Grange is more rigidly insisted upon than that neither the liquor business nor anybody connected with it will be for one moment tolerated in the Grange.

Along this line significant action has recently been taken in two different Grange states, that makes very clear the stand the order takes on the fquor question. One of these instances was at a big Grange meeting in Heron county, Ohio, when this resoution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That we as a Grange are opposed to all liquor advertisements as are published i a number of our leading daily newspapers, and ask was the dusky attendant in the San that they be discontinued. We refer to the Toledo Blade, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Cleveland Leader and Cleveland News." The other was a vote passed with great vigor at a rousing great meeting in Pennsylvania, and was as follows: "Resolved, That the present interstate commerce law permitting the inroduction of intoxicating liquors into territory where its sale as a beverage has been prohibited by the citizens of such territory is an insufferable outrage and we as a Pomona Grange hope to see our congressmen use every effort to assist in the enactment of what is known as the Kenyon-Shephard bill, which is designed to correct

"Resolved. That a copy of this resolution be sent to our national legisla-

As further emphasizing the Grange position, it will be of interest to know that a rigid section in the fundamental law of the Grange covers this very question and in language so plain there is no danger of its being misunderstood. The law in question reads as follows:

When any Patron shall engage in the sale of spirituous liquors as a beverage, either wholesale or retail. such Patron shall, without notice, be dropped from the roll and membership, and the secretary shall notify he secretary of the State Grange, who shall notify each subordinate Grange in the state where such offending Patron resides."

All Kinds of Members.

Although the Grange is primarily an agricultural organization and exists for the advancement of the farmers' interests, it has nevertheless been greatly broadening its scope in recent years and is today embracing many not actual tillers of the soil, but who still possess a large interest in agriculture and a hearty readiness to join in all that pertains to rural improvement and the farmer's welfare.

How varied is the membership in some modern Granges is decidedly in evidence in one Grange recently reported, that has the following remarkable list of occupations listed in its membership roll:: Automobile salesman 1, baker 1, blacksmith 1, bookkeeper 4, butcher 2, boarding-house keeper 1, contractor and builder 1. carpenter 8. clerk 2. coachman 1, driver 1, druggist 1, expressman 1, farmer 6, florist 1, fish dealer 1, gardener 8, garage owner 1, grocer 5, grove superintendent 1, hay, feed and grain 1, housewife 69, huntsman 1, ice and wood dealer 1, kennelmanager and foreman 6, machinist 1, erate in absolute harmony. mayor 1, minister 2, musician 1, paint-1. member of Congress 1, member of | ing projected on the screen.
