Alfred Cambric, of Jackson, who on June 1 shot and terribly wounded his young wife because of her retusal to return to and live with him, may be tried at the September term of the Jackson county circuit court. Cambric is charged with assault with intent to mureer. He is willing to plead guilty to shooting his wife, but he maintains that he did not intend to kill. Under the circumstances the judge cannot accept the plea of guilty and unless Cambric admits that he shot with intent to kill, it is probable that the question of intent will have to be decided by a jury.

Run Into by an Automobile.

S. P. Foster, carrier on rural route No. 5 was run down by an automobile driven by A. J. Waters, of Manchester, Wednesday morning, about midway between the farms of G. Hutzel and Alvin Baldwin. Mr. Waters was driving his car very fast and was about five rods behind the carrier when the latter heard a faint sound that warned him an auto was approaching. He whipped up his horse and pulled out of the road, but the car caught his left hind wheel and it was smashed into kind ing. The tracks in the highway shows that the auto driver kept to the center of the road and did not turn out. If he had turned his car but a few inches the accident could have been avoided. Mr. Waters accompanied by his wife and a gentleman were on their way to attend a funeral north of Howell. Mr. Waters went to the A. Baldwin's farm and borrowed a buggy wheel and informed the carrier that he would pay the repair bill. Mr. Foster finished his trip, but he is confined to his home today, and it will be several days before he will be able to return to his route. The muscles of his left shoulder are badly torn and he is considerably bruised up.

"Trapped by Wireless."

Joseph Burke, City Editor of the 'Star" is in love with Alice Marshall daughter of the reform candidate for mayor at a forthcoming election. Alice's young brother, Bob, has a wireless telegraph equipment and explains to his sister and her sweetheart, how he receives and sends messages.

A reporter on the "Star" conceives the idea of taking a photograph of Marshall as he is giving money to a beggar, using the picture with a sensational article alleging that Marshall is buying votes. He secures an accomplice who acts as a beggar and the reporter accomplishes his underhand purpose.

The article is brought to Burke, who refuses to publish it, because of his love for Alice and his faith in her father. The reporter is highly indignant and complains to the managing editor-when he fails to find his "feature" in the evening edition. The managing editor, deceived by the reporter, and believing that the article is bona fide, has Burke discharged and makes the reporter the Salt is the Base or Filler of this Preparation.

Each Prescribed Dose is Guaranted Fully Medicated.

It is necessary to use something to give greater bulk and cause animals to eagerly devour medicine that would otherwise be refused. The most potent drug is often most distasteful. All animals desire and require salt; hence we claim nothing more palatable could be devised with which to incorporate our medicine.

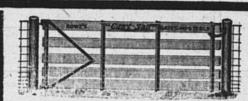

Dr. Holland's Medicated Stock Salt is not a substitute for any kind of feed. The stock raiser is the producer of stock food. What is needed is a remedy for the ills of stock and preparation wherein the stock raiser can get the greatest benefits from the food he produces. This can be done only by keeping the digestion in proper condition to assimilate this food, and the blood in condition to ward off disease. It contains no arsenic, antimony or anything injurious; it can be fed with impunity to the weakest lamb. The remedy will keep and retain its virtue indefinitely if kept dry. It will not get wormy, as it is a worm destroyer, not a breeder.

BOTH OF MICHIGAN'S SENATORS VOTE TO EXPEL.

Stripped of His Toga Lorimer Walks Out of Senate Chamber Alone After Fatal Vote.

States senate unseated William Lorimer, the junor senator from Ilimis, The end of the long fight to oust the senator came after six days of protracted debate, in which Senator Lorimer himself had occupied the floor for three sessions, making an impassioned defense of his election.

The final vote came upon the resoution offered by Luke Lea, senator from Tennessee, declaring the Lorimer election by the Illinois legislature in 1909 invalid. The adoption of the Lea resolution

RASH ALMOST COVERED FACE

Warrenville, O .- "I have felt the effects of blood poisoning for eighteen years. I was never without some erup. tions on my body. The terrible itching caused me much suffering and discomfort, while the rubbing and scratching made it worse. Last spring; I had a terrible breaking out of blistery sores on my arms and limbs. Myface and arms were almost covered with rash. I could not sleep and lost nineteen pounds in five weeks. My face was terribly red and sore, and felt as if my skin was on fire. At last I tried a sample of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and I found them so cool, soothing and healing, that I got some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Resolvent. I bathed with hot water and Cuticura Soap, then I applied the Cuticura Ointment every night for two months, and I am cured of all skin eruptions." (Signed) Mrs. Kathryn Krafft, Nov. 28, 1911. #### Day Begins at Midnight.

This fair exterior glory seems to spring from a strong inner life. Religious life in the Holy Orthodox Church, with its many ordinances and its extraordinary proximity to everyday life, is -- allowed to be monotonous and humdrum. Each day at New Athos is beautiful in itself, and if a monk's life were made into a book of such days, one would not turn over two pages at once.

The day begins at midnight, when to the occasional melancholy chime of the cathedral bell the brothers move to the first service of the morning. On my second night at Afon I wakened at the prayer bell and joined the In the church, as if confirming the impression, was but one dim light-the clergy, the monks, the faces of the holy Ikons, all were shadows, and from a distance came hollow shadow music, the sound of the breaking of the waves. It was the still night of the heart, where the Dove yet broods over the waters, and life is only just begun. At that service a day began, a small life. When the service was over and we returned to our rooms, morning had advanced a small step; the stars were paler, one just made out the contour great hall where five or six tables of the shadowy crags above us. Just a little sleep, and then time to rise and wash for breakfast. The monks in charge of the kitchen must be up some time before the rest of us. At eight o'clock the morning service commences, and every monk must attend. Then each man goes to his work, some to the carpentry sheds, others to the unfinished buildings, to the brick works, the basliet works, the cattle yards, the orchards and gardens, laundries, leather works, etc.; the teachers to the schools, where the little Caucasian children are taught, the abbot to his cell, where he receives the brothers in turn, hears any confession they may wish to make and gives advice in any sorrow that may have come upon any of them. The old abbot is greatly beloved, and the monks have children's hearts. Again in the evening the day is concluded in song lowing the soup came fish, and then and prayer. Such is the monastery

Editorial in the National Grange Monthly Sums Up Some of the Most Important,

PRACTICAL ACCOMPLISHMENT

A good many accomplishments of practical value can be charged upon the grange service to the country, and probably few members of the order realize to what an extent this is true. A recent editorial in the National Grange Monthly sums up some of these accomplishments in a way that at once suggests how valuable Grange service to the country has been. There is much of information in the summary. It says:

"In computing the value of Grange service to its day and generation, it is by no means necessary to limit the study of legislative enactments of recognized value—there are infinite other phases of Grange ministry to its people. But if on its legislative achievements alone the order were to be judged, how strong the showing that would be made. In fact, if mention of its scores of other legislative victories were omitted, what an array of force attaches to a contemplation of the four great reforms for which the Grange has zealously fought the past score of years. "Here is a group of Grange ideals in legislation overtopping all else that has been striven for in the meantime: The free delivery of mail to the farm rect election of United States senators. Search the records of the National Grange, and of nearly every state Grange, for 20 years back, and find these four fundamentals of legislation demanded. Oftentimes the Grange has stood alone in the demand, but no less determinedly has it held its ground and fought vigorously on. And what have the years witnessed?

"Rural free delivery of mail to the farm homes made a reality on 45,000 distinct routes serving millions of the farm people and blessing them beyond human competition. A great nationwide movement for good roads, tens of millions of dollars expended annually and this very year to witness beyond doubt the beginning of a vast under glass. federal aid appropriation for trunk to the states, some of which have alapproval of the new method of senatorial election. Such is the Grange victory of a score of years and lesspride in such a record?

"Just now, in the moment of exultation, may well be asked the question -how soon would these great reforms have been accomplished without the Grange championship? Without it. who had taken the lead, borne the brunt of the fight, had heaped upon it all the vehemence of a selfish opposition, yet all the time maintaining a calm, progressive and courteous leadership into victory? How much the nation owes to the Grange for this succession of triumphs, no pen can ever adequately declare. It is a summary of service, not alone to members of the order that supplied the force to win, but of overflowing beneficence to millions of people, in every state, who shall rise up at the mention of the Grange and declare it their

The Grange Spirit. A striking example of the breadth and depth of the Grange spirit comes from a country town in one of the New England states. There, five years ago, a struggling Grange was organized, meeting very bitter opposition from the one local church in that country town. That opposition became so intense that one of the deacons took his team and drove continuously, for four days, urging all his people to have nothing to do with the proposed Grange.

In spite of it all, the Grange undertaking went through and the organization thus formed has maintained a consistent, dignified attitude and has done its best to prove helpful to the individual members. Gradually the church oposition has been broken down, until today the Grange commands the respect of practically everyone in that community.

As a striking commentary on the circumstances under which the start voice, to appropriate $200 from its around the church, renew the grading and make a village beauty spot of idation due to neglect, in the appearance of the church grounds. A more for evil" could scarcely be found; and it is that breadth of purpose and efprogress in all parts of the land.

The cucurbits, taken as a class, probably include some of our most important vegetables. They belong to the class known as annual vegetables and to the sub-class which are grown for their fruit and seed parts. This group includes the following vegetables, namely, cucumber, gherkin, muskmelon, pumpkin, squash and watermelon. The cucumber and muskmelon are the most important, although cucuribers probably stand

As earliness is such an important factor in securing remunerative prices, many growers start some of their plants under glass. Greenhouses are most valuable for this purpose although hot beds and cold frames are sometimes employed. The soil should receive early plowing and frequent harrowing before planting, and for a very early crop some growers prefer to throw up the land in small furrows thus securing better drainage and Additional Hospital Beds for the Treatment of the Tuberculosis Are Being Established.

Nearly 4,000 additional hospital beds for consumptives in 29 states were provided during the year ending June , according to a statement issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. This makes a total of over 30,000 beds, but only about one for every ten indigent tuberculosis patients in this country.

In the last five years, the hospital provision for consumptives has increased from 14,428 in 1907, to over 30,000 in 1912, or over 100 per cent. New York state leads in the number of beds, having 8,350 on June 1; Massachusetts comes next with 2,800; and Pennsylvania, a close third with 2,700. Alabama showed the greatest percentage of increase in the last year by adding 57 new beds to its 42 a year ago. Georgia comes next with 109 beds added to 240 a year ago. New York has the greatest numerical increase, having provided over 1,800 additional beds in the year.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made glant strides in the past century, and among the—by no mehan least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion, which has been used with great success is French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, ulcs, &c., there is no doubt. In fact itseems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this abort article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous curea, should send addressed envelope for FREB book to Dr. Le Clerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampatead, London, Eng. and decide for themselves whether the New French Romedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 3 or No. 3 is what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill healts and unhappiness. If it is firm and moist below, and dry and loose near the surface, then there is a good seed bed for corn, which is one of the first requisites for growing a profitable crop. The producing of such a seed bed is what the successful corn grower meant by saying that the best time to cultivate corn is before it is planted.

Good seed must be planted on this good seed bed, otherwise our careful work will be somewhat wasted.

Don't be afraid of cultivating too deep the first time over, and use a cultivator that is adapted to the soil. The deep cultivating will let air into the soil and hasten the decay of organic matter and the building up of plant food. As soon as the corn roots begin to spread between the rows, the cultivator should be run shallower, so as not to prune the roots too much and set the plants back in their growth. friend.

"In Syracuse,' said he. And do you know, that merchant smiled a kind of doubtful, polite smile—the sort of a smile which is a tribute to one's business rating, and not to one's humor. He didn't see the point at all. But I thought that he was an exception until I walked down town with a friend of mine, who is at the head of a big commercial organization in the southwest. He specializes in Navajo blankets, and usually gets $35 to $50 for extra good ones from the jobbers here in the east. He called on the jobbers, to look over their stock of blankets, and finding that the man in charge did not know him, he priced the stock.

"'A good blanket,' said the man in charge, 'is worth from $250 up.'

"It surprised my friend, for he knew what he sold those same blankets to the same firm for. And he asked the reason. And that fogbrained, varnish-headed, white-eyed salesman told him this, in all seriousness, and believing every word he said.

"'You see,' said he, 'collecting blankets is a very dangerous business. Three men out of every five we send to the wilds are killed by the savage Indians."

ITALICS USED FOR EMPHASIS

They Reveal the Writer's Sense of the Relative Importance in Things He Has Written.

Doctors of style in the writing of English declare that the use of italics for emphasis is a positive fault, showing weakness of construction and inability to express ideas strongly by a right arrangement of words. Nevertheless, italics are used deliberately by some forceful writers to gain added effect and to fasten the eve and the mind of the reader upon important points, somewhat as a speaker will said for or against the use of italics they certainly reveal the writer's things he has written. He has select ed certain words and hence, as we know more of the man behind the words. His choice of emphasis tells us what manner of man he is. His italics are an index of his mental or moral character.

We are all writing history day by day. On every page some things are written small, others stand out boldly in italics. Take up the book at night and read the story of the day. It will be an interesting record-perhaps a startling one. Doubtless we shall feel very much like correcting the proof when we find where the italics are set.—Christian Herald.

According to their report, a man with good eyes will recognize a person seen once before at a distance not greatly exceeding 82 feet. An intimate acquaintance may be recognized at from one hundred and sixty to three hundred and twenty feet; and a very dear friend or relative up to five hundred feet.

The rifleman can discern the different parts of his adversary's body, and every decided movement at about three hundred feet, and a movement of the legs or arms up to a little more than twice that distance. At six hundred yards a moving man is a mere creeping blur on the landscape, and at eight hundred yards any movements of the arms or legs are no longer visible.

Of course, there are averages such as the jurist must recognize in weighing the evidence of witnesses, and the military leader in noting the position of his antagonist and the outside limit of effective rifle and pistol fire. Then, there are exceptions to these rules. Hunters, seacoast dwellers, prairie cattlemen and farmers whose sight, unweakened by civilized life and trained by constant exercise of "long sight," will often nearly double the averages given. So, too, the clearer air of the prairies and table lands certainly doubles the power of the human eye -Joe Chapple's News Letter.

FORESTRY PROBLEM IN JAPAN

Little Brown Brothers Have Safeguarded Themselves Against Destruction of Forests.

Just at the time when this country is beginning to struggle with the problem of husbanding its forest resources, of protecting its mountain slopes, and of improving the waterways, it is interesting to know that the Japanese have successfully attacked the same problem, before the 'land suffered severely from the evil effects following deforestation. The far-sighted people of Nippon have foreseen the results of the destruction of their extensive mountain forests, and have safeguarded themselves by placing all of these under government control.

The practice of forestry has been carried on in Japan for a longer time than in any other country. For 1,200 years the people of Japan have been success that has been a little short of sense of relative importance in the marvelous. Under careful management, the Japanese forests yield very high financial returns. This high note their significance we begin to yield is only made possible by the close utilization of every bit of the tree so that scarcely a twig is wasted, and by the improvement of the growth of their forests by carefully conducted thinning and tending. The woods are first thinned at the age of thirteen years, and then every five years after that up to the time of the final harvest, at 120 years.

Statue That Sprang Up in Night. In London, where one of the most luxuriant and beautiful parks in the world, the Kensington Gardens, is a vast playground for children, the fairies' own month of May was celebrated this year with a rare gift. A statue of Peter Pan, the boy who would not grow up, prettily lilting on an ancient tree-trunk and blowing his pipe, which brings the birds and squirrels and field mice out to listen, was set up in a single night and when the little children came next day to play they believed that the beautiful image of dral of Milan, built all of marble, with the little boy who plays with them at make-believe was left by the fairy lofty main spire terminating in a great folk themselves. And who would be marble statue of the Virgin. The ex- so sadly grown up as to tell them any

STORY OF STREET AND STREET, AN

(Editor's Note—Capt. George B. Boynton died as few months ago in Brooklyn. He served, all told, under eighteen flags and his life has furnished much material for fiction. This is a story of some of his adventures told by himself for the first time.)

EAR the close of 1889 I was seized with a freak of fancy to visit Cairo, the ancient capital of the kings of Egypt—those glorious old marauding monarchs who made despotism a fine art, and graft a Under my British name of

George MacFarlane I stopped at Shepheards' Hotel, then the home of all pilgrims, and gave myself up to the enjoyment of new scenes. It was at the height of the tourist season, following the Christmas holidays, and there was an abundance of company, made of cultured Europeans and a few Americans of gentle birth, for that was before Cairo was overrun with the overrich. The time was delightfully whiled away for a month before anything happened to indicate the reason for my being there, but within less than half of that time I had renewed acquainty ance with the man who was really the key to the situation, though I did not suspect it at the time.

He and I had been strangely thrown together some years before under conditions which provoked rather an intimate knowledge of each other; and when we met on the street one day the recognition was instant and mutual. He did not inquire into my business, but simply asked what name I was traveling under, in order that he might not embarrass He stood In close and confidential relation to Tewfik Pasha, the Khedive, and on that account it is best that there should be no hint, even now, as to his name.

As I was enjoying my after-dinner cigar one evening in a quiet corner of the garden in front of the hotel I was approached by three women peddlers, apparently of the fellah class. They wore the common blue kimona-like garment, held together seemingly by luck, and their small black veils were thrown over their heads, leaving their faces bare and thus placing them outside the pale of Egyptian respectability. I was about to walk away to avoid their pestering when my eyes met those of the one who was in the lead, and instantly I was attracted in place of being repelled.

Her sparkling eyes, turned full on me and ignoring all else, told me as plainly as words. could have done that she had some message for me, and, suspecting that the moment for which I had been waiting for weeks had arrived, I walked slowly toward her, as though in a mood to barter. As we met, seemingly somewhat disconcerted by my steady gaze of profound and unconcealed admiration, she drew her uncouth veil across her face and held out her hands, like one trained to tourist trade, that I might examine her wonderful rings. Those hands could never have known work, they were so soft and small; and arms more perfectly rounded were never modeled in marble by a master. Plainly this woman was not of the servant class, to which her companions as clearly belonged.

One of her hands was half closed, and as she laid it in mine it opened and a small piece of folded paper fell into my paim. Long accustomed to ways out of the ordinary, I gave no sign beyond an involuntary start which she felt, but no one else noticed, and proceeded, with much deliberation, to select a ring which I purchased as a souvenir of our first meeting. Not a word passed between us except as to the price of the ring, over which there was no

The women who were with her made a pretense of showing me their wares, but it was only a show for the benefit of any inquisitive persons who might be watching and, without urging me to buy, they passed on.

Curious as to the contents of the communication which had come to me so strangely, but fearful of being watched by I knew not whom, it was some time before I went to my room to read the note by the light of a tallow candle. The mysterious missive read:

"You are Captain Boynton. Are you willing to undertake a difficult and perhaps dangerous mission? Answer tomorrow night through the channel by which you receive this."

Here was a romantic promise of something new and real in the way of excitement, for I could imagine nothing stereotyped growing out of such an unusual beginning, and I rejoiced. Inasmuch as the only man in Caire who knew me as Captain Boynton, and who was acquainted with my favorite occupation, was a confidant of the Khedive, it naturally occurred to me that the oily Tewfik Pasha was mixed up in it some way, and I suspected that it involved another secret movement against British rule in Egypt. The latter suspicion was soon verified, and there never has been any doubt in my own mind that I was equally correct in the conjecture as to the participation, or at least the silent approval, of Tewfik.

The next evening before going down to din-ner, I wrote my reply:

"Yes, provided it is something a gentleman can do, and I am well paid for it. But I will ct no negotiations in this way. I must er I retired to the same out-of thefound the night before to await deve It probably was not long, but it seemed hears before the same three women came up the short flight of steps running down to the street. As on the night before, it was left to Ialla to barter with me. I again took both of her hands in mine, to examine her jewelry, and as I did so slipped into one of

CAPTAIN GEORGE B. BOYNTON

Her jewels were much richer than those she had worn the previous evening, and as I studied their barbaric beauty I softly pressed her childish hands as the only means of conveying something of the impression she had made on me, for I did not know the extent to which the other women were in our secret or could be trusted. Her only response was one quick glance, which I interpreted as a mixture of pleasure, surprise and interrogation: the one distinctly pleasant thing about it was that it contained nothing of indignation or hostility.

There was no sign of either Ialla or her two friends the next evening, though I watched for them closely. On the second afternoon I received a call from my old friend, who undoubtedly had vouched for me to the people who had opened up the exceedingly interesting correspondence. It was apparently a casual visit, but its purpose was revealed when, in the course of a general conversation regarding the country and its ways, along which he had cleverly piloted me, he said:

These Egyptians are a remarkable people. I have lived among them long enough to know them and to admire, particularly, their sublime religious faith and their exalted sense of honor. With their enemies, and with the travelers on whom they prey, they are tricky and evasive to the last degree, but in their dealings with people whom they know and trust they are the more honorable men in the world. I don't know whether you expect to have any dealings with them, but if you do, you can trust them absolutely."

With that opening I was on the point of speaking to him about the note I had received and answered, but before I could say a word he had started off on another subject, leaving me to understand that he knew all about the matter but did not wish to talk of it, and that he had taken that method, learned from the diplomats, of endorsing the people with whom he had put me in communication. I took my accustomed seat in the garden that evening. impatient for further unfoldings. I had not been waiting long when Ialla and her two companions appeared and came straight toward me, but without any sign of recognition. As she passed closely beside me, walking slowly, Ialla whispered, almost in my ear:

"Follow me at ten o'clock!" A few minutes before ten I descended into the street to wait for them, so it could not be seen from the hotel that I was following them. Promptly on the hour Ialla and her attendants came down the steps and set off toward Old

They led me almost the full length of the Mooshka, turned into one of the narrow side streets, then into another and another until they stopped at last in front of a door at the side of one of the little shops.

When I was within perhaps fifty feet of them falla entered the door, after looking back at me, while her four companions walked rapidly on down the street. I pushed open the door, which was immediately closed by a servant who dropped a bar across it, and found Ialla waiting for me in a dimly lighted hallway. She led me nearly to the end of the long hall, opened a door and motioned to me to enter. and closed the door from the outside. I found myself in a large room, which, after my eyes ed to the half-light, I saw was magnificently furnished. A fine-looking areb, with gray bair and beard, was seated in ottoman, smoking a bubble-pipe. His bearing was majestic, and for the purpose of easy identification he will be known here as Regal, though that was not his name.

"I am glad to see you, Boynton Pasha," was his greeting, in a deep, strong voice. He proved himself a man of action and advanced himself greatly in my esteem by giving no time to idle chatter. "We know you well," he said, "through trustworthy information, as a soldier and a sailor, and we believe you are peculiarly well equipped for the work we wish you to undertake. It is a sea-going expedition, involving danger of disaster on one hand and the couse of liberty and a substantial reward on the other. Are you willing to attempt it?"

"If you are open to reasonable terms and I am given full command of the expedition I will gladly undertake it," I replied "If it furnishes real adventure I will be quite willing to accept that in part payment for my services."

Without further ceremony he let me into the whole plot. At the bottom of it was the old cry of "Egypt for the Egyptians," which is not yet dead and probably will not die for centuries, if ever. It was Arabi Pasha who had made the last desperate fight under this slogan, and it was his release from exile that was sought by the plotters, in order that he could renew the war for native liberty.

Through spies it had been learned that Arabi was confined at a point near the coast only a short distance from Colombo, the capitol of Ceylon. He was allowed considerable freedom, within certain prescribed limits, and was in the custody of only a small guard. His escape was regarded as impossible, and the idea that an attempt might be made to rescue him seemingly never entered the minds of those responsible for his safe-keeping.

Yet that was precisely what I was asked to accomplish.

I promptly assured the old patriot, whose anxiety and excitement were shown in his blazing eyes, that I would cheerfully assume responsibility for Arabi's rescue and his safe delivery at almost any point that might be designated.

With a gesture which indicated that everything was settled in his mind and that it was necessary for me only to name my terms to have them agreed to, Regal said he anticipated no difficulty on that point and suggested that I return the next afternoon or evening to meet his associates, the inner circle of the revolutionary party.

Regal was waiting for me and with him were five of his countrymen.

It was urged by them and agreed that I should take no part in the actual rescue of Arabi, but remain on the ship to guard against any surprise by water and to be ready to steam westward as soon as the party returned. I was to stand in close to the shore just after dark, with all lights doused, and it was thought that Arabi would be safe on board long before sunrise so that we could be well clear of the land by daybreak.

When I finally started back to my hotel Ialla and her attendants were waiting for me in the alley, for it was not wide enough to be called a street. They started on ahead, but we had gone only a few short blocks when her four companion; walked briskly away and she wafted for me in a deep shadow.

"How did your business turn out?" she inquired anxiously, as I bowed low before her. Her voice, which I had been longing to hear. was soft and clear, as well became her, and her radiant beauty alone shone forth through

"Thanks to your cleverness," I replied, "it has turned out well."

"Then you are going to rescue my uncle!" she exclaimed delightedly. Her sparkling eyes flamed with excitement and, as if to seal the compact, she extended her hand, which I first pressed and then kissed. Then I slipped it through my arm and started to walk, out of the shadow into the moonlight, and she accompanied me without protest. We walked long and talked much, and some of it was interest-

The next night I found my way alone to Regal's abode and received the first payment of 20,000 pounds, in Paris exchange. There was a final conference, and I took my departure with many good wishes. Ialla and her two women attendants were waiting for me, as had been arranged, and my love-making was resumed where I had left off on the preceding night. Ialla was more responsive than before, but when I urged her to go with me to France or marry me at once in Cairo she would not listen. Finally she said: "After you have rescued my uncle I will go with you anywhere, but not until then will I think of marriage.

Nothing could move her from that decision. I arranged to meet her the next night and the one following, and several others, which she accomplished by the popular method of bribing her attendants, but, though it was a joy to her to be told of my love, there was no way by which she could be induced to yield to it until her uncle was free.

I went to Marseilles and, after looking over several ships that were for sale, bought L'Hirondelle, a coasting steamer of 800 tons. At Suakin one of the great surprises of my life awaited me. We had scarcely tied up whn the man from whom I was to receive the warriors came aboard with a letter from Regal directing me to turn the ship over to him and discharge the crew. The agent could not understand the change of plan any more than I could, and I could not even guess as to the cause, but he was there to obey orders, and there was nothing else for me to do. Feeling sure there would be a satisfactory explanation waiting for me at Cairo, I returned there, after paying off the crew and sending them back to Marseilles and London in charge of Leigh and

I was still more mystified when, on reaching Cairo, I was unable to find Regal, Ialla or any one else connected with the undertaking, nor could I get the slightest trace of them.

In the hope of seeing Ialla again, and determined to secure some definite clue as to just what had happened in my absence, I waited around for two weeks or more, until I encountered the old friend who, I knew, was responsible for my connection with the conspiracy. I did not dissemble, as I had before, but took him to my room, told him the riddle and asked him the answer. I did not expect him to admit anything and was not disappointed. He said, in substance:

"Of course I know nothing about the plot of which you have told me. If what you say is true, I should say that you have been making something of a fool of yourself over this Ialla and that you have only yourself to blame for the abrupt ending which seems to have been reached. These women are the greatest flirts

"You thought Ialla was in love with you, but but she was only having a good time with you, and she has taken a lot of pride in telling her friends about your meetings, at their afternoon gatherings for the exchange of gossip. She had no idea of marrying you, an unbeliever, you can be sure. It may be she thought she was stimulating you to deeds of heroism, but, if she considered that at all, it was a secondary

"The men you were dealing with have the contempt of their race for all women. They can not understand how any man can become so enamored of a woman, no matter how beautiful, as to let it interfere with his business. "They would argue that no man who could be relied on to carry out their plan would display such lack of judgment. It is possible that there may be some other reason for the situation in which you find yourself, but I doubt it. The wisest course for you is to tell me how you can be reached, and leave Cairo, for you can gain nothing by staying here. It is known to many people that I know you, and if any one should want to get in communication with you I will be able to tell him how to do it."

Possessing all the pride of a full-blooded man, I resented the calm assertion that I had been ensnared by a flirt, but, in looking back at it now, I am willing to admit that probably my friend was right about it. Feeling that for once my destiny had played it a bit low down on me, I crossed the Mediterranean and took a French liner for New York. Eleven years later Arabi was pardoned and returned to Egypt, but his influence among his own people was gone; the fact that he had accepted a pardon implied, to their astute minds, a secret agreement with their enemies and caused him to be regarded as a tool of the British. But, the fires of freedom are still burning, and now and again signal-smoke is

OVE is not getting, but giving and a madness of desire—oh, no, love is not that—it is goodness and honor, and peace and pure living—yes, love is that, and is the best thing in the world, and the thing that lives longest.

SOME LUNCHEON DISHES.

These dishes are suitable for either uncheon or supper:

When there are bits of left-over chicken (not enough for a meal) prepare it by cutting it in small pieces, add to a white sauce and a cupful of tender cooked celery. Serve on rounds of buttered toast.

When there are a few slices of cold roast pork left from dinner, chop and mix with equal parts of celery, add dressing and serve on lettuce leaves. Veal and lamb are equally good served in this way.

Milk toast is a most delicious dish for supper. Prepare the toast not later than five minutes before serving; dry it in the oven until hot, then toast a golden brown; dip the edges into hot water to soften, spread generously with butter and pour over a white sauce made of two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour cooked together and a cup of thin cream or rich milk added. Two cups will be needed for a large dish of toast. A little grated cheese of pronounced flavor grated over the dish just before serving adds to it.

Bits of bacon left from breakfast added to a white sauce and served with poached eggs is a change that is quite acceptable from the everyday poached eggs. The old-fashioned codfish served in broiled chops; then fry in deep fat and serve piping hot. The chop will need to be treated to egg and crumbs, as are croquettes. Fish chowder is another dish which may be served at almost any meal except breakfast.

Hash served in mounds with a poached egg on each is a nice way to serve both of these common dishes. Potatoes scalloped and seasoned with cheese or mixed with hard cooked eggs varies that time-honored dish. The addition of a few fresh mushrooms is relished by most.

PICKLING TIME.

Every frugal housekeeper likes to have her shelves well stocked with good things for the winter. Today one may buy such good canned goods that much of the work has been given up; but we all have a few time-honored and handed-down recipes which we prepare each year. The following are a few which are old and reliable:

To Can Green Corn Without Cooking .- Take nine cups of corn cut from the cob, have the corn just picked, one cup of sugar, half a cup of salt and a cup of cold water; mix all together and place in sterilized cans, sealed tight. Freshen when using.

Beet Relish .- A quart of boiled beets chopped, two cups of sugar, tablespoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of white pepper, half a teaspoon of redpepper and a cup of grated horseradish; mix all together and add enough vinegar to make it moist. Can cold.

Canned Red Peppers .- These delicious little appetizers which cost too much in the winter to have often, may be canned successfully at home. First, raise your own sweet peppers, and when ready to can, wash and cut in strips with the scissors, cover with boiling water and let stand five minutes; drain and plunge into ice water to cover, in which there is a large piece of ice. Again drain and pack into pint jars. To one quart of vinegar add two cups of sugar. Boil together fifteen minutes and pour the peppers until overflowing; seal and store in a cold place.

Ripe Tomato Pickle .- Mix the following ingredients in a stone jar: Three pints of peeled and chopped tomatoes, a cup of celery chopped, four tablespoonfuls of chopped red pepper, the "bity" kind, and four tablespoonfuls of chopped onion, the same of salt, six tablesponfuls of same of salt, six tablespoonfuls of teaspoonful of cloves, the same of cinnamon, a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, and two cups of vinegar. This will keep a year, and is good to use in a week. Fine for meats.

Nellie Maxwell. When Baking Potatoes.

Use one of the new wire frames that may be had for a few cents. You stick the potatoes on little upright coints, the potatoes bake all over at once and you do not burn your finger n turning them over or getting ther out, for you can put a do on the frame and put it in the ov ust like any other pan.
