PROMISING OUTLOOK.

Merchants Second Annual Basket Picnic next Thursday.

The arrangements for the Chelsea merchants second annual basket picnic at Vandercreek Lake, on Thursday of next week, have been nearly all completed, and a sufficient number of cars have been engaged to accommodate a large crowd.

The first cars will leave the Chelsea waiting room in the morning at 8:00, and will leave the lake at 5:00 o'clock in the afternoon on the return trip. The committee have arranged to start the last car from here at 10:10 a. m., to accommodate those who wish to attend the Feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, which will be celebrated in the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Tickets for this car must be purchased of H. H. Fenn Company on or before noon Wednesday, and will be good for this car only, and if a sufficient number of tickets have not been sold, all who have purchased tickets will have to go by the earlier cars.

The committee have engaged the North Lake band to furnish the music for the day. Every purchaser of tickets will be given four tickets that will admit them free of charge to the four attractions at the lake, and the dance hall can be used free of charge from 10 o'clock in the forenoon until 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The outlook for an enjoyable day is very promising.

Mrs. Harriet Steinhoff.

Miss Harriet Stevens was born in the township of Tecumseh, Michigan, January 30, 1833, and died at the Methodist Old People's Home Saturday, August 3, 1912, aged 79 years, 6 months and 3 days. She was converted at the age of 16 years. She was a very active and faithful worker in the church and Sunday school, remembering even in the last few days of her sickness to send her mite and best wishes to the missionary societies in which she labored so long.

She was married to William Steinhoff November 1, 1857. He died January 27, 1907, and was buried in Brookside cemetery at Tecumseh. Mrs. Steinhoff became a member of the home July 6, 1909. She was a woman of high ideals and noble principles, but a sufferer for many years. The funeral was held at the home at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Rev. J. W. Campbell officiating. The remains were taken to Tecumseh Monday for burial.

Join Order of St. Dominic.

Misses Ruth Rafferty, Marie Steele, Frances Eder, and Mary Schwick-erath of this place and Agnes Bissett the latter resided at St. Mary's convent here the past year will on Tuesday, August 13, in St. Joseph's Academy at Adrian, be among a class of twenty-four novices who will receive the habit of St. Dominic. The impressive ceremony will take place in the morning at 9 o'clock.

Rev. W. P. Considine of this place will celebrate the solemn high mass and Rt. Rev. Bishop Kelly of Ann Arbor will preside. A number of the friends and relatives of the young ladies will be present and witness the ceremony.

Mrs. Emma Wardle.

Mrs. Emma Wardle was born in Leoni 70 years ago last March and died at her home in Detroit, Monday, August 5, 1912. She was a daughter of Joseph and Polly Winans-Durand early settlers here. Mrs. Wardle was a resident of this place about 30 years ago. The deceased was a niece of Mrs. Mary Winans. She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Lena Owens, and one grandson. The remains were brought here and the funeral was held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Benton at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, Rev. C. J. Dole officiating. Interment, Vermont cemetery.

Baseball Notes

Chelsea landed one off Ann Arbor last Sunday, which is Chelsea's tenth straight victory. The all-round playing of Elisele was immense, while Wackenhut had five put-outs and was the star of the day; Miller, the second baseman, made some wonderful grandstand plays.

Chelsea will line-up next Sunday against the strong Jackson Independents and a good game can be looked for.

He Won't Limp Now.

No more limping for Tom Moore of Cochran, Ga., "I had a bad sore on my instep that nothing seemed to help till I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve," he writes, "but this wonderful healer soon cured me." Mrs. Sarah A. Shaver.

Sarah A. McCombs was born in Palmyra, New York, May 7th, 1826, and died August 1, 1912, at her home on west Middle street. She was the second child of John D. and Mary Letts McCombs, they being brother and sister respectively of the late Mr. and Mrs. John M. Letts of this place. She came to Michigan when about 18 years old and was married to Jacob A. Shaver July 2, 1846, and has resided in Chelsea for many years, coming here about the year 1850.

Four children, Mrs. J. W. Gregg of Detroit, E. E., J. F. and M. A. Shaver of Chelsea; four grandchildren, E. J. Gregg of Detroit, Leon, LaRue and Meryl Shaver of Chelsea, and a great grand daughter Madalyn Gregg of Detroit survive her. A sister, Mrs. Jane K. Speaker, resides in Nebraska. Mrs. H. M. Dean and C. E. Letts of Detroit and Mrs. Wesley Canfield of Chelsea are cousins of the deceased.

The funeral was held from the home Sunday afternoon, Rev. C. J. Dole of the Congregational church officiating.

Her remains were borne to the grave by her sons and grandsons and laid by the side of her husband, who departed this life nine years ago.

Lecture at St. Paul's Church.

A stereopticon lecture was given at St. Paul's Evangelical church Sunday night by two theological students, F. Puhlmann and E. J. Soell. The lecture and slides told the story of the work of the German Evangelical church all over the world and especially the various lines of work carried on in the United States. A fund for this purpose is being created, and at present reaches $73,000, but its promoters are determined to increase the amount to an even $100,000.

The work of Elmhurst and Eden Colleges was described at length. One hundred and three new churches were built last year. The lecturers are, as has been said, students who put in their summers in this unique way, getting acquainted with the churches and giving information to the members.

Sold Out.

Now that the Home Telephone Company of Ann Arbor has been taken over by the Bell, the stockholders know exactly where they are at. They will get back less than 50 cents on the dollar of their original investment besides having received nothing for the use of their money for the nine years the company has been in existence. Chelsea investors are congratulating themselves on having taken the advice of the Standard and not having been misled last year into putting up an independent exchange with no one to run it. While the present service furnished by the Bell in this town is not what it should be an independent exchange would only double the affliction and also have been a losing investment.

Progressive Party Nominees.

Singing "Onward Christian Soldiers" and the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," the delegates to the first national convention in Chicago of the new progressive party Wednesday night acclaimed Col. Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, as their candidate for president and Gov. Hiram W. Johnson, of California, as their choice for vice president.

Marking a new departure in the proceedings of national conventions, two candidates immediately were informally notified of their nomination and in the midst of deafening cheers appeared before the delegates to voice their acceptance and to pledge their best efforts to the coming campaign.

Cards of Thanks.

The family of Mrs. Sarah A. Shaver wish to extend their sincere thanks to their many friends and relatives, also to the members of the Chelsea Band and the order of the Knights of Pythias for the kindness, sympathy and floral offerings tendered during their late sad bereavement.

We wish to thank the relatives and friends who rendered their assistance in our recent bereavement.

ANNUAL PICNIC.

Will be Held in Wilkinson Orchard on Tuesday, August 20.

At a meeting of the committee of the Church of our Lady of the Sacred Heart on Wednesday evening it was decided to hold the annual picnic for the benefit of St. Mary's school, on Tuesday, August 20th, in the Wilkinson orchard just south of the village limits.

The various committees who will have charge were appointed. A good program of sports is being arranged. The Chelsea Band has been engaged to furnish the music for the day. Eminent speakers are to be present. The ladies of the parish will serve one of their noted dinners at noon, and an enjoyable day is in store for all who attend.

New Iron Bridges.

Highway Commissioner Geddes has the material on the ground for two new iron bridges that the Sylvan township board is having built, and a cement culvert is to be placed across Mill Creek at Sylvan Center.

Work was commenced Tuesday on what is known as the Tyndall bridge on the C. Kalmbach road. The road has been closed while the work is being done and the territorial or Sylvan crossing roads is the route being used by drivers of teams and automobiles. The work will be completed by the last of this week and the road will be opened for use of the public the first of the coming week.

The second bridge is to be built at the Pratt farm, which is occupied by George Goodband, and the work will start as soon as possible.

The culvert at Sylvan Center is to be constructed of cement and will be built under the present bridge which will not be removed until the culvert is completed and travel on that road will not be shut off. The commissioner expects to start the work on the culvert the first of the coming week.

Severe Accident.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Siehl of this place were out Tuesday evening riding on a motorcycle and Mrs. Siehl was severely injured. At the time of accident they were going west on Middle street and in front of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Alber both riders were thrown from the motorcycle and Mrs. Siehl sustained a compound fracture just above the left ankle.

At the spot where the accident occurred the street had just been sprinkled and it appears that the motorcycle skidded. Mr. Siehl escaped unharmed.

Must Speak English.

Hereafter men entrusted with the important duty of flagging a train or setting signals must be able to speak and read the English language. The state railroad commission issued orders to that effect Tuesday, as it is claimed foreigners are often made to perform this duty and as a matter of public safety the commission believes they should be able to comprehend what is said to them and be able to make themselves understood in case of an emergency.

Raises a Cyclone of Dust.

The Chelsea street sweeping machine can raise more dust to the square inch than any other dust creating device in town. After the pavements have been gone over by the driver of the machine the sidewalks and store fronts are a sight, even the show cases and goods in the stores are liberally covered with dust. If the streets were sprinkled in the evening before the sweeping is done the effect of the dust cyclone might possibly be checked to some extent.

Canada Has Sufficient Coal for 6000 Years

It Has Enough Agricultural Land for the Settling of Millions.

A report dealing with the coal resources of Canada has been issued by the Dominion Department of Mines. The estimates given are only based on what is known. In the western and northern regions, which have been little explored, there may be vast deposits of nothing whatever is known at present. The officials of the department estimate that in Canada there is in Canada 73½ billion tons; of anthracite 461 million tons; sub-bituminous and lignite over 100 billion tons. The quantity of coal now annually mined in Canada is about 12 million tons. With an estimated quantity of unmixed good coal of 74 billion tons, it would require 6166 years to exhaust the supply. If the inferior grades were included, supply would last for 14,575 years. Of course the coal demands of Canada will keep on increasing, but it will be a good many years before the quantity of Canadian coal mined will equal present output of the United States mines. Their annual output is about 600,000,000 tons. At that rate it would take only 145 years to exhaust the estimated Canadian supply of good coal, and about 350 years to get to the end of the total supply. And with the increasing population, made up of about four hundred thousand persons a year (and it looks now as if this number would be reached this year), one hundred and seventy-five thousand the opening up of this rich field of agriculture, and it is a high class of agriculture, carried on by the use of brains, and, where energy has not been endowed, it has become in that splendid air a case of inoculated energy. The rapid advancement of railways makes the situation easy. Today one may be located thirty miles from one of the many branches of the different systems. A year from now, the whistle of the locomotive and the long train of cars may pass the farm, the elevator is but a short drive from the home, a splendid market is established, and all the advantages of an old settled community are at hand. The prospects this year from an agricultural standpoint are exceedingly bright, and, relieved of untoward conditions, the farmer is already counting his bank roll, planning for more extensive operations for next year, and figuring on paying out for his farm. He is calculating what the increased value of his holdings, as a result of a successful crop, will add to his assets. Already some fields of wheat have been harvested, barley has been cut, and the yield is above his expectation. In fact, the feeling at the time of writing is that never in the history of any country on the continent has there been such a prospect of a large average crop, all over the three central provinces of Canada, as will be harvest-being an estimate of the immigration from the United States for 1912, the consumption of coal will naturally increase.

The agricultural districts of Canada have now become so well known throughout the world, and the vacant area of splendid land is still so great that it may be expected that the number mentioned will increase from year to year, and it will not be many years before the immigration figures will reach the million mark.

It may be asked what is there to warrant this large immigration? With millions of acres of land, capable of producing twenty-five to forty bushels of wheat to the acre; or, if in oats, from forty to ninety, and even as high as a hundred bushels per acre, or the same splendid yields of flax or barley, there is ample inducement to attract these hundreds of thousands who are filling the present agricultural settlements and pushing forward into the newer settlements year by year, and where room still for the hundreds of thousands who will follow. There remains not only the agricultural wealth of the country, but there are also the social advantages, the home-making opportunities, there is the life and the energy born from the knowledge that the settler is more than a settler in the upbuilding, in the making of a country that will soon rank amongst the first in the nations of the world. There is no desire on the part of the writer to dwell upon the success that has followed the American settler in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta and the coast Province of British Columbia, or to speak of the thousands of individuals whose hundreds of dollars are made them thousands, but attention must be paid to the fact that these people have done well. They are followed by their families and their friends, who also are doing well.

Where, a few years ago, seemingly only months ago, there was nothing but the open prairie, or if we speak of the more central portions of these provinces, the park districts, there are now well tilled and cultivated farms, dairy farms, too, and the herds of cattle. Cities and towns are the result of

COOKING PEAS AND CARROTS.

Many Ways of Preparation to Suit the Individual Taste—Peas Served in Turnip Shells.

One way of preparing peas, and for my own taste there is none better: Blend together two tablespoonfuls of butter and one tablespoonful of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper, for each pint of peas. When the peas are soft stir this into the peas and cook five minutes. In preparing them in that way all the flavor and nutritive value of the peas are retained. Use care that there is not too much water; there should be only enough to cook the peas in, which is scarcely enough to cover them.

To Cook Young Carrots.—Wash and scrape the carrots and cut in quarters lengthwise; then holding the quarters together place on a board and cut crosswise through the four quarters in one-half inch places. Boil twenty minutes or until soft in just enough water to cover. They are very nice prepared by the same recipe given for peas; and just before serving add two teaspoonfuls of parsley finely minced to each pint of carrots.

Peas and Carrots.—One cup of carrots cut in small pieces as stated and two cups of shelled peas. Cook the carrots and peas together until soft. Drain; add four tablespoonfuls of cream and one tablespoonful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Heat over hot water and serve as soon as hot.

Peas Served in Turnip Shells.—Use the flat turnips for this dish and choose them near of a size. Wash and pare the turnips and with a sharp knife scoop out the center, leaving a shell one-half inch thick. Steam the turnips and be careful not to overcook them or they will fall to pieces. Put a folded napkin in the serving dish and place the turnips on it; shake a little salt and pepper over them, and fill with cooked peas which have been seasoned with butter, salt and pepper. Do not waste the turnip which was scooped out, but cook and mash it and reserve for another meal.

ADORNMENTS FOR THE TABLE

Cloths, Luncheon Sets and Dollies Should All Be of the Finest Possible Materials.

The tablecloth is becoming a thing of rare beauty and some of the new ones are lovely enough, with their wealth of lace and hand embroidery, to be used for a lingerie gown.

For the round table the linen covers only the top, a 14-inch border of cluny lace hanging below. This same lace is inserted in the center of the cloth and takes the place of the usual centerpiece.

For the luncheon set color is being introduced. Daisies embroidered in natural tints upon heavy Irish linen give a charming new touch. These, as a rule, include a large centerpiece and a dozen dollies.

The petals of the flowers are done with very thick, fluffy floss and the embroidery can be finished in a very short time.

Other pretty luncheon sets are made of finer linen, the dollies being cut in squares instead of round, while the new punch work and a very little fine French embroidery are introduced.

For breakfast the table linen is much plainer, and these sets include the cloth and a dozen small napkins.

Damask embroidered in quaint little flower designs in color are very attractive, while others are of linen crash embroidered in cross-stitch.

All of these are rather expensive when bought in the shops, but the housewife who has several idle hours during the day can with but a slight expense and little trouble give her table linen a distinctive air.

Health Plum Pudding.

Two cups best graham flour, sifted and then measured. Mix with half a teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of soda and one teaspoon of baking powder, one cup of nuts (either almonds, English walnuts or pecans), a cup of raisins, a cup of milk and one-half cup of molasses. Wash, seed and dry the raisins and flour them lightly. Slice or chop the nuts fine, then add molasses and milk to the flour; mix well and quickly; add raisins and nuts; mix thoroughly again. Butter pudding mold, turn in the batter and boil three hours. Serve with lemon sauce.

To Wash Blue Duck.

To wash the child's blue duck suit, shake it free of all outer dust, then dip it in cold water containing ox-gall in proportion of a tablespoonful to a gallon of water. Let the garment get almost dry, drying it in the shade; then wash it quickly in tepid water, using borax soap, or if you have not this, use a very little pure white soap wherever necessary to remove the dirt, and add a little borax to the wash water. Rinse well, dry in the shade, and iron while still damp, or at least not thoroughly dry.

Seeded Grape Pie.

Take your grapes, pulp them, set aside the skins, bring the pulp to a boil slowly, then press through a sieve, mix with the skins. Take a cup of sugar, mix two tablespoonfuls flour with it, put with your seeded grapes, add a lump of butter. Have a nice, rich pie crust; line your pan with it, put in grapes; then your top crust. Cut holes in it to allow the steam to escape. Brush the top with melted butter; bake in a hot oven to a golden brown. Serve a little warm with coffee.

Janet's Economy

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

"It's this way, John," said Janet Ware, in response to John's fifth proposal of marriage. "I just won't marry—you nor anybody else—yet. I shouldn't be satisfied to settle down in the town where I've grown up and see the same things and the same people for the rest of my life. You understand, don't you, John?"

The repulsed John looked as if he did not understand and did not wish to understand Janet's reasoning. The only thing in the world he could understand was that he was in love with Janet.

"No, Janet," he answered. "I hardly think you can expect much sympathy from me. If you'd marry me, I'd promise some day to take you abroad. I'd work hard and save; I know I could do it. Anyway, how can you go now? Your father can't afford to send you."

"Of course he can't; but I've got the best plan! You see, there are seven of us—and I'm the oldest. And of course, with such a big family, mother has never had time to keep up with the modern sort of scientific housekeeping. You know, I took a course in domestic science."

"Yes," admitted John.

"Well, of course, I can see where there's a lot of wasted effort and money in this household," continued Janet sagely. "Now, I'm going to keep house for a year and father says I can have what I save."

Janet hesitated to watch the effect of her startling statement on John, but the effect was not encouraging, and she went on:

"In the first place, I'll dismiss the cook and the maid—they're just ready to leave anyway. And I'll get one good, substantial servant and she and I'll do the work. I'll save lots that way, and by superintending the cooking I'll avoid the waste and save a lot more."

"I Work Too Hard, You Give Me More Money."

Janet paused again, but John's expression showed no sign of relenting sympathy, so she went on:

"You see, I'll get one servant for, say, $16 a month. We pay these two $36 a month. That will be $20 a month—$250 about a year; besides the board of one of them—$5 a week, I should think. How much is five times fifty-two?"

"Two hundred and sixty," volunteered John gleefully.

"Well, there's over five hundred, besides the saving of waste. And then I'll have a garden and grow all our own vegetables; and besides being cheaper, they'll be a lot healthier, and so we won't have doctor's bills. You see, John? I'll have six or seven hundred dollars—and I could go quite a bit on that."

"Perhaps—when I come home, John, and get ready to settle down," Janet started; but, noting the hopeful look of John's face, she laughingly left her sentence unfinished and bade him a decided good night.

Thus Janet Ware's year of money-earning began. Within a week she had dismissed the two well trained servants from the Ware kitchen, had installed therein in their place a "green" young girl fresh from Finland, whose only ambition seemed to be to answer every question with her one English phrase—"You bet!"—and had hired a gardener by the day for three days to spade and rake and plant the garden.

From the beginning the task of earning money by saving it was a hard one for Janet. Her first month's savings were spent before the first month was done. She spent $10, in plants and seeds for the garden; and she spent another $10 in equipping her one-maid kitchen—new cook books, casseroles, double boilers, patent egg beaters and mops and various other labor saving devices. Besides that, Lena, the new maid, had broken so much china and, through ignorance, ruined so much food, that the bill for waste which Janet had hoped to do away with altogether was double its usual size.

One other thing bothered Janet. John Wilson, who after each of his other four repulsed proposals had doggedly returned to try his luck again at Janet's hands, had almost disappeared from Janet's daily life, and Janet realized that she missed him. When she met him occasionally he quietly told her that he was working a little harder than usual and seldom had time for sociability.

But in spite of all her discouragements and trials Janet bought a huge ledger and put down in it a detailed account of her finances. On one page she would put down fifteen cents for green corn seed, and on the opposite page she would make an entry of this sort: "I ought to get at least ten dozen ears of corn from this; and at twenty cents a dozen that would be—two dollars; two dollars would pay my fare from London to Windsor and back, or else it would pay for a drive around Paris."

By fall, four or five months after she had started her scheme of economy, Janet's European trip was well worked out on the pages of her ledger. But she knew that the coveted trip was still a long distance ahead.

One September morning as she was weeding in what remained of the garden she was musing uncomfortably on the fact that she had twice raised Lena's wages—Lena had added to her English vocabulary the demand, "More English; more mun"—that she had found it necessary to have a gardener a day a week in the garden and that his wages had practically equalled the saving she had made on vegetables, and that somehow, in spite of working and planning incessantly, it did cost money to supply food for the nine members of the family and their numerous guests.

"Sis," a shrill voice interrupted her musings, "what's the smoke in the kitchen? I guess the house is on fire."

"Oh, dear me," said Janet, running from the garden to the kitchen door, "that's the cake I put in the oven, burned to a crisp. That's what I get for doing two things at once. Botheration," she ended crossly as she opened the oven and pulled out the charred layers.

She was sorrowfully looking at the ruin when she heard the voice of her twenty-year-old brother.

"Janet," it said, "I've asked six of the fellows to come here this evening—just for a sort of round-up before we go back to college—and I wish you'd get up a good feed. Your chicken salad would be just right—and that kind of ice cream you make with candied cherries and nuts—and those little cakes you make with whipped cream in them, and—"

"Oh, Janet," called a voice from upstairs, "isn't this great? Here's a note from Aunt Martha saying she and Uncle Tom and Cousin Bess are all coming for a week. Isn't that perfectly delightful?"

Lena, hot and frustrated, worked noisily about the kitchen. She looked up suddenly as this last announcement dawned upon her understanding.

"Company?" she queried. "Too much. I work too hard. You give me more money!"

"No, Lena, not another cent," said Janet decidedly.

"Then I go. I now speak much English. More English, more mun."

Janet walked deliberately to the telephone. First she called up the intelligence office and engaged two experienced servants; then she called up John Wilson at his office.

"Hello, John," she began, "why don't you come and see me?"

"I've been busy," answered John.

"Well, can you come see me to-day?"

"Yes, I think so. What luck have you had with your summer's work?"

"Oh—I haven't had very good luck—at least—well, I have not earned the trip—but I have learned how to keep house."

"That's too bad. I've had better luck. I've worked hard and got enough money together for a trip to Europe."

"Oh," said Janet. "John, maybe you'd better not bother to come to see me, after all."

"But, Janet," said John, "I've planned a trip for two. Will you be home in twenty minutes? I want to tell you who's going with me."

Make His Demands Definite.

The "minimum wage" idea appeals to one English boy who was asked the other day by his teacher to write, as the daily composition, a letter to his father asking for an increase in pocket money. The boy set forth the need of large funds, and ended with a courteous demand for a "minimum sum of money." One of the reasons for the demand was that the boy did not get enough taffy to eat and had no papers to read.

Sadness of Unbelief.

I look upon unbelief as the greatest of calamities. It is the loss of the chief aid of virtue, of the mightiest power over temptation, of the most quickening knowledge of God, of the only sure hope. The unbeliever would gain unspeakably by parting with every possession for the truth which he doubts or rejects.—William Ellery Channing.

Only One Real Road.

There is only one real road to human prosperity, and it is the same for a nation as for an individual. That is the honest road of hard work under free institutions, and when they tried to teach people that they could be made rich by some short cut, they were doing that which was thorough ly dishonest.—Walter Lipp.

Culture will do much for a woman, but it will not permit her to sneeze gracefully.

A Puzzle.
"Birds of a feather flock together."
"How about a rooster and a crow?"

Too Sleepy.
Physician—What can I do for you?
Patient—My foot gets asleep often and I want something to give it insomnia.

In Practice.
Husband—Your extravagance is awful. When I die you'll probably have to beg.
Wife—Well, I should be better off than some poor woman who never had any practice.—London Opinion.

Sounds Better.
The feeling of many men with regard to public office is much the same as that which a certain distinguished Frenchman had toward the academy—that group of forty who are called "the immortals." He was asked one day why he did not propose his candidacy for the academy.

"Ah," said he, "if I applied and were admitted, some one might ask, 'Why is he in it?' and I should much rather hear it asked, 'Why isn't he in it?'"
Christian Register.

Making Himself at Home.
Doris was radiant over a recent addition to the family, and rushed out of the house to tell the news to a passing neighbor.

"Oh, you don't know what we've got upstairs!"

"What is it?"

"It's a new baby brother!"—and she settled back upon her heels and folded her hands to watch the effect.

"You don't say so! Is he going to stay?"

"I guess so—very thoughtfully." "He's got his things off."

Awful.
A West End woman called the attention of her husband to a little baby which was trying to sleep on the porch of its home on the opposite side of the street.

"It's lying on the bare boards, isn't it?" he observed.

"Yes, they haven't even placed a rug for the little chap to rest his head on."

The husband took another look.

"And what do you think of that?" he ejaculated. "They haven't even painted the boards."—Youngstown (O.) Telegram.

Red Cross Seals Being Printed.

Seventy-five million Red Cross seals are now being printed for the holiday sale of these anti-tuberculosis stickers for 1912. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which in co-operation with the American Red Cross will conduct the sale, makes this announcement and states further that the outlook this year is bright for a higher sale than ever before.

The seal this year is said to be the best of its kind that the Red Cross has ever issued. The design is in three colors, red, green and gray. A Santa Claus head in the three colors is shown in the center surrounded by holly wreaths. In each corner is a small red cross. The seal bears the greeting, Merry Christmas, Happy New Year, American Red Cross, 1912."

FAMILY RUNT.
Kansas Man Says Coffee Made Him That.

"Coffee has been used in our family of eleven—father, mother, five sons and four daughters—for thirty years. I am the eldest of the boys and have always been considered the runt of the family and a coffee toper."

"I continued to drink it for years until I grew to be a man, and then I found I had stomach trouble, nervous headaches, poor circulation, was unable to do a full day's work, took medicine for this, and the other thing, without the least benefit. In fact I only weighed 116 when I was 28."

"Then I changed from coffee to Postum, being the first one in our family to do so. I noticed, as did the rest of the family, that I was surely gaining strength and flesh. Shortly after I was visiting my cousin who said, 'You look so much better—you're getting fat.'"

"At breakfast his wife passed me a cup of coffee, as she knew I was always such a coffee drinker, but I said, 'No, thank you.'"

"What! said my cousin, 'you quit coffee? What do you drink?'"

"Postum," I said, "or water, and I am well. They did not know what Postum was, but my cousin had stomach trouble and could not sleep at night from drinking coffee three times a day. He was glad to learn about Postum, but said he never knew coffee would hurt anyone." (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

"After understanding my condition and how I would feel knew what to do for himself. He discovered that coffee was the cause of his trouble as he never used tobacco or anything else of the kind. You should see the change in him now. We both believe that if persons who suffer from coffee drinking would stop and use Postum they could build back to health and happiness." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

TWO TERRIBLE CASES OF RINGWORM CURED

By Resinol. Itching and Disfiguring.

Chicago, Ill., June 5, 1912: "My little daughter had a running sore, which I was told was a wet ringworm, on the back of her head from ear to ear, and also one which spread from one hip to the other, extending from the waist down. They itched her continually. She had to be carried on a pillow, and nights she could not sleep on account of the sores. She suffered terribly, and would scream continually. I bought Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and after about two weeks my child was well and hearty." (Signed) Mrs. Emily Skelick, 233 Grand Ave.

Nossville, Pa., May 11, 1912: "It is the greatest pleasure for me to testify to the merits of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment in the treatment of ringworms, from which I suffered for about five weeks until I found a perfect cure in Resinol."

"The trouble began with severe itching, affecting my face and neck. Then burning set in, causing me to lose a lot of sleep. In all, there were a dozen fairly large sores, with many small ones. The sores were very unsightly. I tried several remedies without much relief until a happy thought struck me to try Resinol Soap and Ointment. It made short work of the ringworm." (Signed) E. S. Gilman.

"Exclamatory" Was Right.

Mrs. Mason's colored washerwoman, Martha, was complaining of her husband's health.

"Why, is he sick, Martha?" asked Mrs. Mason.

"He's vey polly, ma'am, polly," answered the woman. "He's got the exclamatory rheumatism."

"You men inflammatory, Martha," said the patron. "Exclamatory means to cry out."

"Yes, ma'am," replied Martha, with conviction; "dat's what it is. He hollers all the time."—Judge.

The Sound of Thunder.

There have been a great many different theories about the cause of the noise we call thunder. Some savage nations think it is caused by the clouds knocking together in a storm and making a spark, like two pieces of flint, with a crackling sound at the same time. Not long ago, when electricity first began to be understood, many persons believed that the lightning made a hole in the air as it passed along and that the rush of air to fill up this vacuum caused the noise, just as it is caused by the air rushing back into the vacuum in a big cannon.

The most modern theory, based on some remarkable experiments with very fluffy cotton that was made damp, is that the intense heat of the electrical discharge instantly turns the surrounding vapor of the clouds into steam and causes an explosion as sudden and as fierce as gunpowder. It is the number and diversity of these explosions that makes the crackling sounds we hear when the thunder is close to us which would not be the case if the cause were the air rushing into a single vacuum, as that would make only one big bang, just like a cannon.—Ex.

A Trip to Bermuda.

In the latest scenic photoplay the Edison Company and its talented company of players who are now actively at work in Bermuda, present to the motion picture world just a glimpse here and there of these charming islands, combining with it a little story which touches lightly the chords of humor.

We are prepared to take a personally conducted tour to this garden of Eden for newlyweds, accompanied by a bride and groom, a dead man and his daughter, two young men of the city and a fair single lady. They are personally conducted by a trusted guide who looks after the interests of all his company, but fails to exclude that dangerous little fellow Dan Cupid, who plays his old, old game with man and maid and who always brings his victims homeward bound. In the truest sense of the word a little cottage built for two is always the goal at the journey's end.

An enjoyable picture all the way through and a foretaste of good things to come from this wonderful island. At the Princess theatre Saturday evening.

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Mrs. Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in mandarin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Marjorie decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hating. Marjorie is distracted. Mrs. Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart. Anne Gattie, a fellow passenger. Marjorie vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Marjorie reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Marjorie finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train.

Eventually, the car quieted, and nothing was heard but the rumble and click of the wheels on the rails, the creak of timbers, and the frog-like chorus of a few well-trained snorers. As the porter was turning down the last of the lights, a rumpled pate was thrust from the stateroom, and the luscious-eyed man whispered:

"Porter, what time did you say we crossed the Iowa state line?"

"Two fifty-five a. m."

From within the stateroom came a deep sigh, then with a dismal groan: "Call me at two fifty-five a. m.," the door was closed.

Poor Mallory, pyramess and night-shirtless, lay propped up on his pillows, staring out of the window at the swiftly shifting night scene. The state of Illinois was being pulled out from under the train like a dark rug. Farmhouses gleamed or dreamed blissfully. The moonlight rippled on endless seas of wheat and Indian corn. Little towns slid up and away. Towns rolled forward, and away. Behind. Ponds, marshes, brooks, meadows, thickets and great gloomy woods flowed past as on a river. But some stars and the moon seemed to accompany the train. If the flyingness had been less heavy of heart, would have found the reeling scene of grace and night beauty. But he could not see any charm in all the world, except his tantalizing other self, from whom a great chasm seemed to divide him, though she was only two windows away.

He had not yet fallen asleep, and he was still pondering how to attain his unmarried, unmarriageable bride, when the train rolled out in air above great wide river, very noble under stars. He knew it for the Mississippi. He heard a faint knocking at a door at the other end of the car. He heard sounds as of kisses, and then somebody uttered along the aisle stealthily. He did not know that another bridegroom was being separated from his bride because they were too much married.

Somewhere in Iowa he fell asleep.

CHAPTER XVII.

Last Call for Breakfast.

It was still Iowa when Mallory awoke. Into his last moments of heavy sleep intruded a voice like a tower-crier's voice, crying:

"Lass call for breakfast in the Ringing Bar," and then, again louder, "Lass call for breakfast in Ringing Bar," and, finally and faintly, "Lass call breakfast rirar."

Mallory pushed up his window shade. The day was broad on rolling prairies like billows established in the green soil. He peered through his curtains. Most of the other passengers were up and about, their beds hidden and beddings stowed away behind the belying veneer of the upper-works of the car. All the berths were made up except his own and number two, in the corner, where Little Jimmie Wellington's nose still played a bagpipe melody, and one other berth, which he recognized as Marjorie's.

His belated sleep and hers had spared them both the stares and laughing chatter of the passengers. But this bridal couple, two berths, standing like towers among the seats, had provided conversation for everybody, had already united the casual group of strangers into an organized gossip-bee.

Mallory got into his shoes and as much of his clothes as was necessary for the dash to the washroom, and took on his arm the rest of his wardrobe. Just as he issued from his lonely chamber, Marjorie appeared from hers, much disheveled and heavy-eyed. The bride and groom exchanged glances of mutual terror, and hurried in opposite directions.

The spickest and spannest of lieutenants soon realized that he was reduced to wearing yesterday's linen as well as yesterday's beard. This was intolerable. A brave man can endure heartbreaks, loss of love, honor and place, but a neat man cannot abide the traces of time in his toilet. Lieutenant Mallory had seen rough service in camp and on long hikes, when he gloried in mud and disorder, and he was to see campaigns in the Philippines, when he should not take off his shoes or his uniform for three days at a time. But that was the field, and this car was a drawing room.

In this crisis in his affairs, Little Jimmie Wellington waddled into the men's room, floundering about with every lurch of the train, like a cannon loose in the hold of a ship. He fumbled with the handles on a basin, and made a crazy toilet, trying to find some abatement of his fever by filling a glass at the ice-water tank and emptying it over his head.

These drastic measures restored him to some sort of coherency, and Mallory appealed to him for help in the matter of linen. Wellington effusively offered him everything he had, and Mallory selected from his store half a dozen collars, any one of which would have gone round his neck nearly twice.

Wellington also proffered his safety razor, and made him a present of a virgin water of steel for his very own. With this assistance, Mallory was enabled to make himself fairly presentable. When he returned to his seat, the three curtained rooms had been whisked away by the porter. There was no place now to hide from the passengers.

He sat down facing the feminine end of the car, watching for Marjorie. The passengers were watching for her, too, hoping to learn what unheard-of incident could have provoked the quarrel that separated a bride and groom at this time, of all times.

To the general bewilderment, when Marjorie appeared, Mallory and she rushed together and clasped hands with an ardor that suggested a desire for even more ardent greeting. The passengers almost sprained their ears to hear how they would make up such a dreadful feud. But all they heard was: "We'll have to hurry, Marjorie, if we want to get any breakfast."

"All right, honey. Come along."

Then the inscrutable couple scurried up the aisle, and disappeared in the corridor, leaving behind them a mighty riddle. They kissed in the corridor of that car, kissed in the vestibule, kissed in the two corridors of the next car, and were caught kissing in the next vestibule by the next conductor.

The dining car conductor, who flattered himself that he knew a bride and groom when he saw them, escorted them grandly to a table for two, and the waiter fluttered about them with extraordinary consideration.

They had a plenty to talk of in prospect and retrospect. They both felt sure that a minister lurked among the cars somewhere, and they ate with a zest to prepare for the ceremony, arguing the best place for it, and quarreling amorously over details. Mallory was for one of the vestibules as the scene of their union, but Marjorie was for the baggage car, till she realized that Snoozleums might be unwilling to attend. Then she swung round to the vestibule, but Mallory shifted to the observation platform.

Marjorie had left Snoozleums with Mrs. Temple, who promised to hide him when the new conductor passed through the car, and she reminded Harry to get the waiter to bring them a package of bones for their only "child," so far.

On the way back from the dining car they kissed each other goodbye again at all the trying places they had sanctified before. The sun was radiant, the world good, and the very train ran with jubilant rejoicing. They could not doubt that a few more hours would see them legally man and wife.

Mallory restored Marjorie to her place in their car, and with smiles of assurance, left her for another part-hunt through the train. She waited for him in a bridal agitation. He ransacked the train forward in vain, and returned, passing Marjorie with a shake of the head, and a sour countenance. He went out to the observation platform where he stumbled on Mrs. Lathrop and Anne Gattie, engaged in a conversation of evident intimacy, for they jumped when he opened the door, as if they were guilty of some plot.

Mallory mumbled his usual, "Excuse me," whirled on his heel, and dragged his discouraged steps back through the Observation Room, where various women and a few men of evident underclerical were draped across arm chairs and absorbed in lazy conversation or bobbing their heads over magazines that trembled with the motion of the train.

Mrs. Wellington was busily writing at the desk, but he did not know who she was, and he did not care whom she was writing to. He did not observe the baleful glare of Mrs. Whitcomb, who sat watching Mrs. Wellington, knowing all too well who she was, and suspecting the correspondence. Mrs. Whitcomb was tempted to spell the word with one "r."

Mallory stumbled into the men's portion of the composite car. Here he nodded with a sticky cheer to the sole occupant, Dr. Temple, who was looking less ministerial than ever in an embroidered skull cap. The old rascal was sitting far back on his lumber vertebrae. One of his hands clasped a long glass filled with a liquid of a hue that resembled something stronger than what it was—mere ginger ale. The other hand toyed with a long black cigar. The smoke curled round the old man's head like the fumes of a sultan's narghile, and through the wisps his face was one of Oriental luxury.

Mallory's eyes were caught from this picture of beatitude by the entrance, at the other door, of a man who had evidently swung aboard at the most recent stop—for Mallory had not seen him. His gray hair was crowned with a soft black hat, and his spare frame was swathed in a frock coat that had seen better days. His soft gray eyes seemed to search timidly the smoke-clouded atmosphere, and he had a bashful air which Mallory translated as one of diffidence in a place where liquors and cigars were dispensed.

With equal diffidence Mallory advanced and in a low tone accosted the newcomer cautiously:

"Excuse me—you look like a clergyman."

"The hell you say!"

Mallory pursued the question no further.

CHAPTER XVIII.

In the Composite Car.

It was the gentle stranger's turn to miss his guess. He bent over the chair into which Mallory had flopped, and said in a tense, low tone: "You look like a t-t-toughbred sport. I'm trying to make-up a game of stud poker. Will you join me?"

Mallory shook his heavy head in refusal, and with dull eyes watched the man, whose profession he no longer misunderstood, saunter up to the blissful Doctor from Ypsilanti, and murmur again:

"Will you join me?"

"Join you in what, sir?" said Dr. Temple, with alert courtesy.

"A little game."

"I don't mind," the doctor smiled, rising with amiable readiness. "The checkers are in the next room."

"Quit your kiddin'," the stranger coughed. "How about a little freeze-out?"

"Freeze-out?" said Dr. Temple. "It sounds interesting. Is it something like authors?"

The newcomer shot a quick glance at this man, whose innocent air he suspected. But he merely drawled: "Well, you play it with cards."

"Would you mind teaching me the rules?" said the old sport from Ypsilanti.

The gambler was growing suspicious of this too, too childlike innocence. He whined: "Say, what's your little game, eh?" but decided to risk the venture. He sat down at a table, and Dr. Temple, bristling along his glass, drew up a chair. The gambler took a pack of cards from his pocket, and shuffled them with a snap that startled Dr. Temple and a dexterity that delighted him.

"Go on, it's beautiful to see," he explained. The gambler set the pack down with the one word "Cut!" but since the old man made no effort to comply, the gambler did not insist. He took up the pack again and ran off five cards to each place with a grace that staggered the doctor.

Mallory was about to intervene for the protection of the guileless physician when the conductor chanced to saunter in.

The gambler, seeing him, snatched Dr. Temple's cards from his hand and slipped the pack into his pocket.

"What's the matter now?" Dr. Temple asked, but the newcomer huskily answered: "Wait a minute. Wait a minute."

The conductor took in the scene at a glance, and stalking up to the table, spoke with the grimness of a sea-captain: "Say, I've got my eye on you. Don't start nothin'."

The stranger stared at him wonderingly and demanded: "Why, what you drivin' at?"

"You know all right," the conductor growled, and then turned on the befuddled old clergyman, and "you, too." "Me, too?" the preacher gasped. "Yes, you, too," the conductor repeated, shaking an accusing forefinger under his nose. "Your actions have been suspicious from the beginning. We've all been watching you."

Dr. Temple was so agitated that he nearly let fall his secret. "Why, do you realize that I'm a—"

"Ah, don't start that," sneered the conductor. "I can spot a gambler as far as I can see one. You and your side partner here want to look out, that's all, or I'll drop you at the next tank." Then he walked out, his very shoulder blades uttering threats.

Minute Men.

The so-called organization of Minute Men came into existence shortly before the outbreak of the Revolution. The patriots of Massachusetts and other New England colonies banded themselves together, obtained arms and pledged themselves to the defense of the colonies "at a minute's notice." From this pledge to take up arms "at a minute's notice" they got their name.

The Minute Men were enrolled in pursuance of the act of the Provincial congress, which was passed on November 23, 1774. Many names that were destined to become famous in the Revolution appeared in this roster of patriots. In the beginning they were expected to serve only in the New England colonies, but when the conflict came on, thought was taken of this. The Massachusetts Historical society has a list of the patriots who were enrolled as Minute Men.

Health & Beauty
Hints
By Katherine Morton

The beauty of the skin depends to a great extent upon the health of the sebaceous glands. These are little underlying ducts supplying the skin with the grease needed, and if their secretions are suppressed, the pores are stopped up and some complexion defect or other will result.

One must keep the pores of the skin unhampered of old oil and dead cuticle to have a good complexion, and when they seem inactive there is nothing to do but to resort to massage and very thorough bathing with hot water and a good soap. Cold water is useless against the deep seated dust and grease of the skin, even with the aid of soap. Moreover, it tends to contract the pores, making it still harder for them to yield their contents. So as a preparation for helpful massage, which is meant further to clear the stopped-up pores, the face bath must not only be hot but very complete.

There is much contention that soap is injurious to the skin, but this is by no means true. The influences of soap are tonic, antiseptic and cleansing, so that a soap must really be very bad to hurt the skin—contain, in fact, the strong alkali which scorches and irritates. A good face-bath with very hot water and a bland soap leaves a smooth skin like marble, and with repeated and systematic bathing the rough one is much improved. Work thick soap suds or a soap jelly well into the pores, and rinse with repeated waters. Dab it partly dry with a soft old towel, and then sit down with a pot of good cold cream, or a little almond oil, and proceed with the massage.

Begin by massaging the muscles of the cheek just in front of the upper half of the ear, using the three first fingers of both hands. Rub outward and upward in a circular manner, with a firm yet gentle touch, covering a spot about the size of a silver dollar. If the muscles are correctly located, the upward motion will pull the skin taut about the corners of the mouth, rubbing out the drooping line at the side of the nose. If the face is heavily lined here, massage will in time so strengthen the muscles that the furrows will be much softer, or disappear entirely.

Next massage the temple muscles in the same way. These are still more easily detected by the even greater influence they exert on the lines each side of the nose. The regular and systematic massage of them will prevent the formation of crow's feet, those fine lines at the corners of the eyes which laughing faces with thin skin take on so often at an early age.

Some urgent or other is undoubtedly required with massage, for otherwise the cuticle would be much irritated, and the benefits of any face cream are increased tenfold if it is used with massage. For the face constantly made-up with cosmetics, rouge and a fancy powder or liquid white, it is also necessary to cleanse the skin first with the grease before using water upon it. For otherwise the bath will only force the makeup down into the pores.

If the face skin is very delicate, do not dash cold water upon it after the hot bath, as this interferes with the circulation and is considered harmful by all the beauty people. Where the skin is very inactive two face steams could be taken a week, the massage immediately following these.

An astringent of a harmless and invigorating sort is often needed after massage, especially if the pores are inclined to be big, and all authorities agree that a first-class cologne is the best for this. A formula for farina cologne, which is much used in this way, follows below:

Oil of bergamot 1 ounce
Oil of neroli 5 drops
Oil of rosemary 5 drops
Oil of lemon 5 drops
Oil of cloves 3 drops
Oil of lavender 1 dram
Rectified spirit 1 gallon

The druggist would put up this formula more perfectly than it could be done at home, or else supply a bottle of German cologne, which would be very nearly as good.

Arranging the Veranda.

Do not crowd the veranda to overflowing with odds and ends, or all its comforts and charm will be dispelled. Arrangements should always be perfected to make it desirable as an outdoor living-room, well lighted at night and suitable for breakfast, luncheon, tea and even dinner. And if in a vicinity where mosquitoes and flies swarm, screens must completely enclose the porch space.

Dark Slippers.

At the present moment slippers of the paler tints are not considered good styles in Paris and footwear in richer shades of dark red, blue and violet combined with gold and silver are worn with gowns introducing those tones. These metal brocades can trace their popularity to the rich Oriental effects introduced by the evening gown.

Social Forms and Entertainments

From Brown Eyes.

Is it proper for me to go with a young man who is engaged to another? Am going with a young man whom I like very much; how am I to find out whether he cares for me? He has told me that he loved me, but I don't know whether to believe it or not. Haven't been going with him very long. Is it all right to go driving at night? Suggest something for a "gypsy tea"; also something odd to entertain about six girls and boys. How should the invitations be written? Am going to have a visitor for a week. What must I do to entertain her all the time. I live in a small place where there are very few amusements.

BROWN EYES.

I should not think you would want to accept attention from a man who was engaged; it does not look right and I would not do it. I would not be in haste to believe all a man told me if I had known him but a short time; better go slow and let time settle the question of how much he thinks of you. I do not believe in girls going driving alone at night without a chaperon. I do not know what you mean by "gypsy" tea, suppose you write and tell me about one for the benefit of the other readers of the column. For six girls and boys it is not necessary to write the invitations unless for a formal dinner party. Just ask them over the telephone or when you see them. Summer entertaining is always very informal. Do you think your visitor will wish to be amused "all the time"? I should have my friends meet her at a porch party in the afternoon or an evening card party or something like that.

A Variety of Questions.

Have read and enjoyed your answers in the paper so much, have decided to ask you to please answer a few questions for me.

Which color eyes and hair are counted the stronger, and which are most generally liked by the majority of people?

How often should a young man call upon a young lady during the week, and how late should he remain?

Would it look well for a girl to tell her friend of all her former love affairs when he seems very anxious to hear about them and insists that he should know?

Do you think a girl who is seventeen too young to have young men callers?

If you have not been introduced to a young man is it proper to speak to him when he always speaks?

Hope you will not mind helping me out in this. I thank you very much.

"DIXIE GIRLIE."

Scientifically I do not know whether it has ever been proven which is the stronger, light or dark haired people. I think dark hair and eyes are greatly admired and I have heard much in favor of the golden blond, although that type is said to lose its youth sooner than the darker haired, but I have seen it work both ways. It all depends upon how deeply interested a young man is. I should say that two or three times a week is often enough and ten-thirty late as he should stay on ordinary occasions. A girl must do as she thinks wise about her former love affairs. I do not think many affairs are to a girl's credit; I mean serious ones. Seventeen is plenty young enough for a girl to be in society. It all depends upon who the young man is whether you should speak to him. There is generally a way for a man to meet a girl by being properly introduced. I do not mind helping you out in the least.

Questions From Gladys.

I read your department every Sunday and would like to ask some questions. First, do you think it is all right for a girl fourteen to have boys at her party? Second, please give two or three games or contests to have when the boys and girls first come to keep it from being "stiff." Third, does the hair grow quicker plaited or hanging loose (at night)? Thank you for the help I have gotten from your department. I like it so much.

GLADYS S. B.

It is perfectly right to ask boys to your party, and they like to be asked. I put all the contests I can lay my hands on right into the department; perhaps the "Nautical" in today's paper will help you. It is best to braid the hair very loosely at night after a thorough brushing to remove the dust of the day. Thank you for your kind words regarding the department.

Reply to "G. H." and "R. L."

I am very sorry I cannot answer your questions because I do not know; the best way to find out is to write direct in care of the stock company.

GRANGE IN LARGE TOWNS

Contradiction of Uncalled-for Criticism Regarding the Many So-Called "City Granges."

Some critics of the Grange have called attention to the fact that the organization of many Granges in cities and large towns indicates that the control of the order is fast slipping away from the farmers and that it cannot longer be designated as a truly farmers' organization.

The contradiction of this criticism, instances without number are furnished showing these so-called "city Granges" hard at work along distinctly agricultural lines, especially arousing among their members, who are workers in other occupations, a positive interest in the farm and in all that makes for its prosperity.

For example—one such Grange recently voted to procure a plot of land for the purpose of planting and cultivating corn by its members, who will compete in the big New England corn show of next fall. The members are enthusiastic over the project and are starting some great corn prospects, though nearly every one of them gets his living at some other business than tilling the soil. Another "city Grange" took hold of a dormant agricultural fair, got all the town's people interested and eventually put it well on its feet and with every indication of a successful future. Another holds an annual June flower show, that creates keen competition and wonderfully improves the quality of local cultivation. Another prizes for the best gardens made each year by its members. Scores of such Granges conduct a fair every autumn at which exhibits of fruits and vegetables are made the conspicuous features. Other Granges of this type have excited a distinct influence in their city in behalf of more school garden work for the children; for tree planting along city streets and avenues; laying out public parks and playgrounds; not to mention the influence excited by such Granges for the better market facilities for the nearby farmers and the bringing of producers and consumers of food products into closer relations, for mutual benefit, all of which seems to give the "city Granges" ample warrant to live and to increase.

PRIZES FOR DEAD FLIES

Granges in Many Middle Western States Inaugurate a Crusade Against the Pests.

A novel phase of Grange work, and yet one that is entirely practical, has been inaugurated among the Granges in one of the Middle West states. This consists in quite a widespread movement, including many subordinate Granges, for the offering of money prizes to the children for the destruction of flies. The prizes are to be awarded to the children who, within a specified period, exhibit the most dead flies harvested; while a small cash prize for every pint of dead flies brought in is paid to every worker, outside of the prizes awarded to the ultimate victors. It is believed that fly dangers in that section will be greatly reduced by this method and that a campaign of education against the flies will be one outcome of the undertaking among the children.

A similar plan, though directed towards a different end, is being carried out in Massachusetts. In some sections the tent caterpillars have proved very destructive this year and a like contest among the children, with graded cash prizes for the greatest results, has been inaugurated by the Granges. In the gypsy moth and brown tail moth sections of the same states the Granges have shown similar energetic leadership and have set the older people at work as well, destroying the moths, not by the prospect of any reward or prizes, but because enthused by the effort of the children in a commendable cause. This is a novel phase of Grange endeavor exemplified towards exceedingly practical ends, for the general public good.

Ohio State Grange Session.

The Patrons of Husbandry of Ohio are looking forward to their annual State Grange session, which will be held in Salem on December 10, 11 and 12 next, the location having just been definitely determined upon. The Grand Opera House and the Globe Auditorium are to be used for the sessions of the three days, the latter for the conferring of the sixth degree and for the public reception, which is always a big feature of the state session. Many plans are under way to make this a record-breaker, both in point of attendance and in the policies that this coming session will declare for.

Money Wisely Spent.

Many a Grange earns a good-sized sum of money and then devotes it to worthwhile ends, by expending it for some form of community improvement or otherwise exemplifying progressive leadership for the bettering of its locality.

Works in the Garden Now.

Grown old in the service of his master and mistress, James was a privileged retainer.

He was waiting at table one day, when a guest politely asked for a fish fork. Strangely enough, the request was ignored.

Then the hostess noticed the episode and remarked in a most peremptory manner:

"James, Mrs. Jones hasn't a fish fork. Get her one at once!"

"Madam," came the emphatic reply, "last time Mrs. Jones dined here we lost a fish fork."

James has now been relegated to the garden.

Eradication of Canada Thistles

By R. S. SHAW, Dean and Director, Michigan Agricultural College

Canada Thistle

The ease or difficulty experienced in eradicating Canada thistles depends on the kind of soil and the character of the crops in the rotation. As they propagate readily by root-stalks which run under the ground, they spread more rapidly and are much more difficult to eradicate in loose, open, porous soils than in heavy clays. Grain crops are more favorable for their continuance than cultivated crops such as corn, beans, roots, etc., providing the latter are properly cared for.

I. Canada thistles can be completely eradicated in a single season by thorough summer fallowing, but this is an expensive system and should not be employed unless an entire field has been taken possession of so as to make it impossible to grow a crop.

II. The best method is to follow with two cultivated crops in succession, as corn after corn, with manure applied between the two crops if possible. Cultivate thoroughly, using the sweeps on the cultivator; these are cultivator points with wings and are from eight to ten inches wide; they can be attached to almost any cultivator with sweeps after the corn is too big for a two-horse rig. Check now corn if possible so as to cultivate both ways. If thistles are in patches which are not too numerous, give these spots more frequent cultivation than the balance of the field. The secret of success consists in keeping the thistles underground; this done, they must smother.

If two cultivated crops cannot be grown in succession and if the thistles are not all killed the first year, sow the clean portions of the field to grain and seed to clover or grass.

New Queen of the Dairy World

With a record of 1,668.34 pounds of butterfat produced in 365 days, Banostine Belle DeKol, a five-year-old Holstein Friesian cow owned by Dan Dunsmick & Bro., Ohio, becomes the new "Queen of the Dairy World." This wonderful cow produced during the year 27,404.4 pounds of milk, testing 5.66 per cent. fat. If made into butter, her fat production would equal 1,322.9 pounds of butter or over 3 1/2 pounds per day for 365 days.

During the time that Banostine Belle DeKol was in test she received nearly, if not all the time, more or less ensilage and alfalfa. When available she received roots and a mixed grain ration, the foundation of which was bran and oats. The grain ration was varied to suit the conditions of the cow from 25 pounds to as low as 9 pounds per day and the estimated average amount of grain fed was 12 to 14 pounds daily. She was also given green food when it was available during summer season.

This cow is a wonderful example of the importance and value of good breeding. Her pedigree includes a long list of ancestors possessing high records. All Michigan farmers cannot possess animals of phenomenal ability but it is easily within the reach of all to improve their herds to the standard of profitable production by the use of pure bred sires. The bull is one-half the herd and the constant use of bulls of one breed will soon produce

Then put a hoed crop on the thistle patches the second year, unless they are too numerous and scattered. If mangolds or stock beets or turnips or rutabagas are planted on these patches and if the thistles are killed by August first, clover or grass seed can be sown among the roots and covered lightly with a spike tooth drag. The following year the field will all be seeded. This succeeded admirably with us in eradicating quack grass.

III. If Canada thistles are scattered in grain or pasture crops and are not too numerous, they can be subdued by the use of the thistle spud which can be procured of any hardware dealer, though he may not keep them in stock. Mark the patches in some way or other and then cut the thistles off below the ground every ten days or so after they start in the spring. This tool and the method just described are satisfactory where the thistles are not too numerous, as where new patches are starting in pasture, grain crops, along fences, in lawns, woodlots, etc.

IV. I have seen Canada thistles completely destroyed by cutting them close to the ground with a scythe just as the blossoms opened, but this probably will not occur except where followed by dry weather and adverse growing conditions. It is better not to rely upon this method.

Success can only be obtained in combating Canada thistles by following up the methods of eradication patiently and perseveringly. Unfortunately the shortage and high price of labor too often prevent the farmer from doing the things he wants to at the proper time.

A high grade herd without a very great expense. Mixing breeds and the use of grade bulls has kept Michigan cattle far below the standard they ought to attain. If you are interested in this proposition write to the Michigan experiment station, East Lansing, Michigan, and ask for Circular 4 on "The Improvement of Michigan Cattle."

Better Yields.
In England the average yield of wheat runs from 30 to 33 bushels to the acre. In Germany it averages about 28 bushels. In the United States the average for the past ten years has been about 15 bushels. England gets about 15 bushels of oats to the acre, the United States gets less than 30. The soil of England and Germany has been bearing crops centuries before ours knew the touch of a plow. These disparities in yield must be due either to the incompetency of our farmers or to the debilitation of our soil.

Correcting Soft-Shell Eggs.
Soft-shelled eggs may be caused by lack of lime in the ration of the hen and also may be due to the fact that she is out of condition, resulting from too much corn in the ration. If the former is the cause the difficulty may be righted by supplying old plaster or wheat bran or oats should be substituted for the bulk of the corn, and the stock made to scratch for their feed.

Trees Afford Comfort.
A few trees in the pasture add greatly to the comfort of the sheep these days. If you can't save them, set up a few posts and cover a bit of ground over for a shed.

The KITCHEN CABINET

ARE indeed in the soul which has journeyed through untroubled ways from cradle to mid-life. The sweetest as well as the greatest souls on earth have experienced great difficulties and borne great burdens.

SOME NICE DESSERTS.

Angel Parfait.—Boil together a cup of sugar and a third of a cup of boiling water; pour over the well beaten whites of two eggs. When cold fold in a pint of double cream, whipped. Pack in half-pound baking powder cans and place in equal parts of ice and salt to mold. Let stand four hours, then unmold and serve with fresh raspberries. This amount serves eight.

Dainty Dessert.—When one has plenty of cream there are endless varieties of most delicious dishes which may be prepared on short notice. Chop a half cup of blanched almonds, cut in quarters a cup of marshmallows; add sugar to taste and stir into a pint of whipped cream. Put a spoonful of this on slices of chilled pineapple. The pineapple may be shredded and the mixture served in a sherbet cup, tasting full as well.

Pastry shells baked in patty tins, and when cold filled with sliced peaches, well sugared, and whipped cream added is a variation from the ordinary peaches and cream.

Line a sherbet cup with strips of sponge cake, fill with chocolate ice cream, arrange a tablespoonful of whipped cream on the top of each, sprinkle with chopped pistachio nuts and decorate with a candied cherry. This is called Chocolate Trifle, but is no trifling dessert.

A delicious lemon strawberry frappe is prepared by crushing a pint of ripe berries and then pass them through a sieve; add a sirup of a cup of sugar and a third of a cup of water boiled together, a half cup of lemon juice. Mix well and pack in a mold. Let stand four hours in ice and salt.

A simple and inexpensive dessert, when nothing else seems available, is cornstarch pudding. Prepare the milk and boil the starch, a tablespoonful or two to a pint of milk, sugar to taste, and if chocolate or cocoa is liked, a few tablespoonfuls of that with a bit of vanilla. Be sure to cook it long enough to cook the starch well. Serve with cream and sugar.

MEALS WITH LITTLE HEAT.

For those who feel that they cannot dispense with meat entirely during the heated term, there are many dishes which may be flavored with meat in small quantities which serve every purpose. The agricultural department tells us that two and a half quarts of milk are equal in protein material to a pound of average beef, nine eggs have the same value, two-thirds of a pound of ordinary cheese, half a pound of peanut butter and two-thirds of a pint of dried peas, beans or lentils.

There are still people who deprecate the value of skinned milk; it is most excellent for soup making, many puddings and for use in bread and cakes. Skim milk has nearly all of the food value left in it minus the fat. This may be supplied if needed in any of the dishes, so that the milk is as valuable practically for food as if it were unskimmed.

A cupful of meat added to a dish of vegetables or with dumplings makes a good flavored dish, and the gravy will make it go much farther. A mixture of two or three kinds of vegetables with a cheap cut of meat will serve a large family. If housekeepers served the amount of meat necessary per capita for their family and what was considered a suitable allowance, there would be smaller meat bills and better nourished families.

Excessive protein food is dangerous, as it imposes undue exertion on some of the organs. Over-eating is a common fault and many of the diseases to which our flesh is heir might be done away with if we were more abstemious. The suggestions to cure the "meat ridden" menu are the substitution of salads, milk and milk dishes, cheese, eggs and nuts.

Nuts are so good and wholesome eaten with no accompaniment except salt, made into croquettes or baked in a loaf and served with a sauce as for meat loaf.

Sudden changes are never wise; it is better to gradually wean the family from large quantities of meat by the substitution of some of the above foods a little at a time.

When cooking a fowl add a knuckle of veal and the flavor will be nearly as good for a pie as the chicken itself for another day's dinner.

GIRDLER ATTRACTS ATTENTION AS ENEMY OF THE GRAPEVINE

Plants Caused to Present Ragged Appearance on Account of Dead Tips Resulting From Attack of Insect—Has Been Found in Several States From Missouri to Pennsylvania.

The Grapevine Girdler. a, Egg; b, Larva; c, Pupa; d, Adult; e, Beetle Girdling the Cane Just Below Its Egg-Chamber. The Upper One of the Twin Holes in the Center of the Cane Contains the Egg. All Greatly Enlarged.

(By FRED E. BROOKS, West Virginia Experiment Station.)

The grapevine girdler is an insect not often mentioned in entomological literature, probably for the reason that in the past it seems to have confined its attacks chiefly to the plant known as Virginia creeper or five-leaved ivy, Ampelopsis quinquefolia, and has seemed, therefore, of but little economic importance. In this state it appears now to have developed a preference for the grape. In several localities I have seen grapevines presenting a ragged appearance on account of the dead tips resulting from the insect's attacks, but I have never been able to find either the beetle or evidences of its work on ampelopsis.

The species cannot now be regarded as a pest of very serious consequence, except in rare instances, but it has several times attracted attention as an enemy of the grape in this state during recent years, and heretofore but little has been known in regard to its habits.

The distribution of the species seems to be quite general throughout the eastern and mid-western sections of the United States. In 1882 Mr. C. V. Riley, in his first report on the noxious insects of Missouri, mentioned it as forming galls on the common creeper. At about the same time Mr. Benj. D. Walsh had specimens of the insect in his collection in Illinois, marked "Madarus ampelopsis." It was not until the year 1876 that a description of the beetle was published. In that year Dr. John L. LeConte described it in his work on the Rhynchophora of America, and gave to it the name which it still bears. LeConte gives its geographical distribution as "southern and western states." Since the description was published the species has received but infrequent and brief notice, but has been recorded as occurring in several states from Missouri to Pennsylvania.

The wound which the beetle makes in ovipositing causes the tip and terminal leaves on the young cane to drop over and die, and shortly afterward to fall from the vine. The egg is not carried to the ground with the prunings when they fall, but it remains in the vine, and the larva which develops there feeds in the heart of the stump from which the leaves and tip were removed.

It is interesting to compare the methods of this insect with those of other species that girdle twigs or small branches in order to kill or partly kill the wood in which their eggs are laid and their larvae are to feed.

The "hickory twig-girdler," Oncideres cingulata, a "long-horned" beetle, lays its eggs in the branches of hickory and other trees and then girdles the branch below, by cutting a deep groove with its strong jaws so that the branch above dies and is frequently broken off by the wind. The "elm twig-girdler," Oberia ulmicola, a beetle of the same family, attacks elm in a similar manner. The female cuts a deep groove around a twig so that it is easily broken off by the wind. Below the groove she cuts a slit in the bark and deposits an egg and then moves further down the twig and girdles it a second time, now merely cutting through the bark so as to deaden the part above. Another species of the same genus, known as the "black-berry cane-girdler," Oberia bimaculata, attacks blackberry canes in a similar manner.

lata, cuts a double girdle and lays an egg between the two, in a similar manner, in the young canes of blackberry and raspberry. Still another "long-horned" beetle, the "oak-pruner," Elaphidion villosus, lays its eggs in the branches of oak and other trees but leaves the girdling to be done by its larvae. In this case the larva feeds in the heart of the twig until it is nearly full grown and then cuts the twig almost off at the lower end of its burrow. Immediately after the cut is made it retreats into the burrow above and waits for the wind to blow the twig to the ground, where it completes its transformation within the burrow.

The adult of the "raspberry cane-maggot," a two-winged fly of the genus Phorbia, lays its egg near the tips of young raspberry shoots. The larva which hatches enters the cane and after working its way downward for several inches it encircles the shoot several times, with a spiral groove made just beneath the bark, which kills the shoot above, and the larva feeds thereafter on the dead wood.

The "currant stem-girdler," Janus tingitana, a saw-fly, punctures the bark of currant bushes near the ends of growing twigs with its saw-like ovipositor and lays an egg in the orifice. Just above the egg it girdles the twig by making several deep cuts with its ovipositor so that the twig breaks over. The larva which develops from the egg feeds on the pith of the stump.

There are other species that operate in a similar manner, but the ones that have been mentioned will serve to show that the peculiar habit, in one form or another, is shared by insects belonging to widely separated groups. It is interesting that so many species, which in most respects do not resemble each other in the least and which represent at least three orders, have adopted some form of this peculiar way of providing for the safety and comfort of their progeny.

ERADICATION OF THE GRASSHOPPER

Ohio Station Gives Formula for Making Poisoned Bran Mash for Use in the Gardens.

The Ohio station advises that for protecting gardens and limited areas from the attacks of grasshoppers, good results are usually obtained from using a poisoned bran mash, prepared as follows:

Stir together, while dry, two pounds of paris green and 25 pounds of bran, then moisten with water that has been sweetened with molasses or dissolved sugar, making a wet but not sloppy mash.

For plants set about three feet apart, making a wet but not sloppy mash, use a tablespoonful near each plant, or the mash may be sown over the field broadcast. One treatment should not cost over $1 per acre, labor not included. Keep the poultry away from the poison.

Moderate Litter.

It is really better to kill a few pigs at birth rather than compel the sow to raise so many. The pigs do not grow well and the sow gets poor.

WHY COWS STOOD IN WATER

Artistic Limitations Responsible for Characteristic Attitude of the Humble Bovine.

In a north of England town there was a shiftless man who would never accept gifts outright, although he was always depending on charity, says Al Priddy in his book. "Through the Mill," relates the Youth's Companion. He painted landscapes, and my aunt, when benevolently inclined, would hire him to decorate our walls with rural scenes, highly colored in glaring tints, as if nature had turned color blind. Not one stood on the vivid green hills.

"Jorvey," she remarked to the old man, "why do you always put the cows in the water?"

"It's this way, Mrs. Brindin," the old artist responded. "You see, ma'am, I never learned to paint hoofs."

Telling the Truth.

On little Arthur's birthday, he received a present of a very large furry toy monkey.

Two days later, his father found it lying in a corner with both eyes missing.

"My boy," asked father, more in sorrow than in anger, "why have you spoiled that beautiful monkey by pulling its eyes out?"

"Didn't," replied Arthur briefly. "Don't tell any untruths," snorted father, more in anger than in sorrow, "or I'll punish you! Why did you pull the monkey's eyes out?"

"Didn't!" repeated little Arthur defiantly. Then he hurried on, as father took off his slipper. "I—I pushed them in!"

FACE A SIGHT WITH TETTER

Moberly, Mo.—"My trouble began with a small pimple on the left side of my face and it spread all over my face and to my neck. It would be scarlet red when I got warm. My face was a sight. It looked very unpleasant, and it felt uncomfortable. My face was something awful; it just kept me in agony all the time. Some said it was tetter, and some said it was that awful eczema, but I rather think it was tetter. I had been troubled with it for about two years and tried many remedies, but got no relief until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment."

"When I would wash my face with the Cuticura Soap and apply the Cuticura Ointment it would cool my skin and draw great big drops of matter out of the skin. You would think I was sweating; it would run down my face just as though I had washed it. It itched and smarted and I suffered in the day time most. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for a month and I was cured of it." (Signed) Mrs. J. Brookshier, April 15, 1912.

WHERE DOCTORS FAILED TO HELP

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Green's Health—Her Own Statement.

Covington, Mo.—"Your medicine has done me more good than all the doctors' medicines. At every monthly period I had to stay in bed four days because of hemorrhages, and my back was so weak I could hardly walk. I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I can stay up and do my work. I think it is the best medicine on earth for women."

How Mrs. Cline Avoided Operation.

Brownsville, Ind.—"I can say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me more good than anything else. One doctor said I must be operated upon for a serious female trouble and that nothing could help me but an operation."

"I had hemorrhages and at times could not get any medicine to stop them. I got in such a weak condition that I would have died if I had not got relief soon."

"Several women who had taken your Compound, told me to try it and I did and found it to be the right medicine to build up the system and overcome female troubles."

"I am now in great deal better health than I ever expected to be, so I think I ought to thank you for it."—Mrs. O. M. CLINE, S. Main St., Brownsville, Ind.

BREVITIES

STOCKBRIDGE—The hotel is closed and the citizens of the village opened their homes for the accommodation of the home coming visitors last week.

HOWELL—Livingston County Association O. E. S. will hold their midsummer meeting at Island Lake August 13, 1912, the guests of Michigan Chapter of Brighton—Democrat.

HILLSDALE—Contracts were let last Friday for Cambria drain No. 1, which is to be one of the biggest drains ever constructed in the county.
The drain is over five miles long and will cost about $6,000, and about 15 per cent less than the estimated cost.
Daily.

MILAN—While engaged in operating a sausage machine at the Central Meat Market last Monday, Wm. Duns-more had the misfortune to have his right hand badly lacerated. It was found necessary to remove the second and third fingers at the second joint.
Although the first finger was badly injured an effort is being made by the physicians to save the member.— Leader.

MILAN—While playing about a mowing machine driven by his father,
the five-year-old son of Frank Smith, of Robinson township, was caught in the knives of the machine and so terribly mangled that he died a short time later. His right leg was severed.
The father picked up his boy and ran half a mile to the farm house. Medical assistance was summoned hastily, but all efforts to save the lad's life were futile.—Leader.

ANN ARBOR—A hobo camp that has sprung up along the Huron near the Michigan Central yards in this city, has been receiving much attention from the police every day for the past week. Another party was broken up Tuesday morning. In order that the city need not have the expense of sending the gang to the workhouse, no arrests were made, but the men were given a chance to get out of town.

STOCKBRIDGE—A band of gypsies struck town last Friday, and have since been camped half a mile north of town. Their occupation is trading horses and telling fortunes. On Monday Sheriff Barnes was over from Mason after one of the women, who it seems had taken a silk quilt, a silk skirt and scarf from a house in Mason. She claims she took it in pay for telling an old lady's fortune. At Mason she was fined $14 for telling fortunes without paying a license, and allowed to return here.—Brief-Sun.

SALINE—Archie Sweet lost his nice little driving horse Tuesday evening by having it run down by the 8 o'clock car. Archie had tied the animal in the barn and gone into the house, when a few minutes after it slipped the halter in some way and wandered into the road where it was struck by the car, eastbound, about ten rods east of the house. The mortman can find no good excuse for the act, as the car as it reaches the top of the hill in front of the Isbell house is running quite slow and as the horse was but a few paces beyond it seems like carelessness that any accident should thus have occurred.—
Observer.

JACKSON—The school board Friday night authorized Superintendent Marsh to contract with Miss Shaw, formerly of Bay City, to organize a class in the day schools here for the deaf. The state pays a liberal sum towards extending school facilities for those so afflicted, and there are in the city several children eligible for admission to the class is not confined just to those who have residence in this city, but they can come from any point, and be received up to the limit of the school accommodations and of the teacher to care for. The maximum number was not stated, but there must be three deaf mutes or those seriously deaf to qualify for the aid from the state.—Patriot.

JACKSON—The man who was run over by a Michigan Central switch engine at the Main street crossing early Sunday morning and killed has been identified as Charles Abbott, whose father John Abbott, resides at Hillsdale, and the body has been shipped there at the father's request. A search of the dead man's clothing revealed some evidence of his identity in a newspaper clipping he had in his pocket. The news item was of the arrest of Charles Abbott of Cadmus for intoxication and described the violence the prisoner used in objecting to his arrest by the officers and his incarceration. This newspaper clipping together with the fact that the letters "C. A." were tattooed on his right arm led to the belief that his name was Charles Abbott. Later the body was positively identified.
The deceased was aged 54, and a stone mason by trade. His father is also a also a stone mason, and is also known as a Free Methodist evangelist. The parents of the deceased reside in Hillsdale.

UNADILLA—Rev. Armstrong left last week for Mt. Clemens and Bradford, Penn., on a vacation for a few weeks.

BUNKERHILL—The Catholics of this place will hold their fifteenth annual picnic on Tuesday, August 15.
A program of speaking, games and sports.

YPSILANTI—Seth B. Mereness of Ypsilanti began suit in the circuit court Monday to recover $269.68 from John Millsbaugh of the same city on a mechanic's lien. Mereness says Millsbaugh engaged him last spring to repair a house for "whatever the job's worth" and has since refused to settle up.

PINCKNEY—A cow belonging to John Fitzsimmons, which was staked out on the banks of the mill pond near Briggs' gravel pit, in some way got tangled up in the rope and fell into the pond, drowning in less than two feet of water. Friends started a subscription to buy them another cow and succeeded in raising over $30.—
Dispatch.

ANN ARBOR—Officers of the Washtenaw Mutual Fire Insurance company received notice Saturday afternoon that a cow and a bull belonging to Charles Fuller, of Augusta township, had been struck by lightning in a storm, July 30. Mr. Fuller places his loss at $90. The two animals were in a field together and were killed by the same bolt.

ANN ARBOR—Edith Brown, a 12-year-old colored girl, was taken into custody by the police Sunday and placed in the detention room at the court house pending an investigation.
The girl claimed to have been badly lashed with a razor strop for a minor disobedience, by Miss Alice Brown, also colored, with whom she was living in Ann Arbor.

SALEM—A warrant for assault and battery was issued by Justice W. P.
Holmes of Salem township for Henry Simpson on complaint of Louis Clark.
Deputies Sheriff Max and Eldert left shortly after 1 o'clock to arrest Simpson. Clark says Simpson struck him in the face Saturday night when he attempted to protect a smaller man whom Simpson was "kidding."

JACKSON—Several boys will appear in juvenile court Saturday for having held up a lad from the country and robbed him of some candy he had purchased at a store. The matter was reported to the police, and Patrolman Vandebogart captured two of the culprits and learned from them who the others were. The boy from the country was visiting in this city.

TECUMSEH—Lenawee County Fair association has engaged for the coming fair a herd of trained elephants which will perform their stunts in front of the grand stand on all of the big days of the fair. A Japanese troupe of acrobats has also been secured, and they will do their acts on a large platform which will be erected near the judges' stand just opposite the grand stand.—News.

A Plain Statement of I H C Wagon Value

SOME farmer saves money every time an I H C wagon is sold. Not because it costs less money to begin with, but because of the length of service it gives, an I H C wagon is the cheapest wagon you can buy. The longer a wagon lasts the cheaper it is. That is why it is economy to buy the best wagon—one that will outlast any ordinary wagon. When you buy an I H C wagon

Weber
Columbus

New Bettendorf Steel King

you invest in a wagon built of the highest grade material which experience and care can select or money can buy, built in the most thorough, painstaking manner, by skilled workmen, in factories which have modern appliances for doing work of the highest standard at the lowest possible cost.

All lumber used is air-dried in sheds with concrete floors. This insures toughness and resiliency. All metal parts are made of especially prepared steel, guaranteeing the longest service. Each wagon undergoes four inspections before being shipped so that it reaches the purchaser in first class condition, ready to be put to work at once, and able to carry any reasonable load over any road where a wagon should go.

Weber and Columbus wagons have wood gears, New Bettendorf and Steel King have steel gears. The I H C dealer knows which wagon is best suited to your work. When you see him get literature from him, or, write
