RECEIVED REPRIMAND.

A Number of Boys Taken Before Justice Witherell.

Fifteen or twenty of the young boys about town were taken before Justice Witherell Saturday and Monday evenings and given a reprimand for misdemeanors that they have had a hand in during the past two weeks.

The youngsters have made raids on the watermelon patch at the Methodist Old People's Home. At the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Sibley they feasted themselves quite liberally on grapes, and at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Riemenschneider the boys helped themselves to whatever they wanted. At all three of the places considerable damage was done which amounted to far more than what was taken by the lads.

One of the boys who was before Justice Witherell Saturday evening informs The Standard that he received the severest reprimand that he had ever had in his life, and that in the future he would purchase what he wanted in the line of melons and grapes, rather than undergo another scene in the court.

Presents Flagpole.

One year ago when the roof on the old school building was being repaired, the flagpole was found to be so badly rotted that it was considered unsafe and the Board decided that it would be unwise to allow it to remain. Since that time efforts have been made to secure a suitable pole. Prices were obtained upon steel and wooden poles, but were so high that they seemed to be unreasonable. The committee looked over the poles of the Bell Co. and selected one which they considered suitable and asked the local manager to ascertain the cost. This was done and a few days ago when C. J. Given, district manager, was in town he called upon Mr. Kalmbach and notified him that the Bell Co. were pleased to present the flagpole to the public schools of Chelsea with their best wishes.

The Board of Education wishes to thank the Bell Co. on behalf of the people of Chelsea for the pole, which will be raised as soon as it can be put in proper condition.

Slaughter House Burned.

Tuesday evening about 8:30 o'clock the slaughter house of F. C. Klingler, on McKinley street, was burned to the ground.

The fire was discovered by Fred Hutzel. He had delivered a veal calf at the yards and was on his way home when he thought that he saw a lantern burning in the building. He called Mr. Klingler by telephone and was informed that there was no one from the market at the slaughter house, and as he looked in the direction of the building he found it was in flames.

During the afternoon Mr. Klingler's butcher had killed three beefs and tried out a quantity of tallow. When he left he had carefully looked over the fires under the rendering kettles and left everything in a safe condition. As the floors were cement and kettles set in the same material the origin of the fire is a mystery. The loss is about $1,500, with an insurance of about $500.

Mrs. Sarah A. Lewis.

Died, Monday, September 9, 1912, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. S. Frost, of Lansing, Mrs. Sarah A. Lewis. The deceased was born in Shoran, Vermont, February 3, 1835, and was united in marriage at the age of 18 years to Geo. A. Lewis, who died about 40 years ago. Mrs. Lewis was a sister of Dr. R. S. Armstrong and for a number of years was a resident of Chelsea. She is survived by two daughters. The funeral was held from the home of her daughter in Lansing, Tuesday and the remains were taken to Chapel cemetery near Parma, for burial. Dr. and Mrs. R. S. Armstrong and Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Dancer of this place attended the funeral.

A SUCCESSFUL EVENT

The Sports Day Celebration Last Friday Well Attended.

The annual sports day celebration given under auspices of the Chelsea fire department was well attended and the afternoon proved to be quite interesting for the visitors.

The addresses delivered by W. H. Murray, E. R. Benscoe and Geo. J. Burke of Ann Arbor, were listened to with marked attention by the audience. As each of the gentlemen are candidates for office their speeches were of a political nature, and each expounded their party views.

The Chelsea band was on hand and as usual carried out an excellent musical program which was highly appreciated. The Saxophone Quartet of Jackson also entertained the visitors with a choice selection of music.

The ball game between Chelsea and Manchester drew a large crowd to the Wagner field on North street, and the Manchester team proved to be the victors. The numerous racing events proved to be very interesting. The balloon ascension was a decided success in every respect. The balloon landed near the home of Fred Riemenschneider and the balloonist dropped in the corn field of Ed. Weiss.

Two of the concessions were revoked by the authorities about one o'clock. The two were running the ring money game, and when a complaint was made to the local authorities they were promptly closed up and their license money returned. The dance given by the firemen in their hall was well attended, and the firemen did all that was possible on their part to furnish amusements for the visitors. Not a single accident happened during the day or evening.

Fire at the Factory.

About 9:30 o'clock last Friday evening a fire alarm was turned in, and as the blasts of the whistle gave the signal as the 5th fire ward most of the citizens came to the conclusion that it was a false alarm, arranged as part of the program for sports day. This was not true. Whenever there is an alarm that signals the 5th ward, it means that there is a fire at the Flanders Manufacturing Company's plant.

This arrangement was adopted soon after the stove works went into the hands of the receiver. The reason for this is twofold. It saves the trouble on the part of the fire department taking their hose out, as the factory has hose and nozzles attached to the hydrants that are scattered about the buildings and grounds. The hook and ladder truck is the only article that the fire department is required to take to the factory in case of a fire.

The alarm last Friday evening was turned in for a blaze that was discovered in the barn north of the brick buildings, and facing on Main street. Some one had entered the building and thrown kerosene oil about and started a blaze. The foreman of the night force in the ball department discovered the flames before they had gained much headway and had them out when the members of the fire department arrived.

School Notes.

The total enrollment of the public school now numbers 410. The largest attendance is in the kindergarten primary department where the enrollment is 84. In order to relieve this room twelve have been sent into the second grade and as many into the third. The non-resident attendance is about the same as last year, 52 in the high school and 12 in the grades.

The commercial course is proving very popular as the classes in this department are the heaviest in the school. Twenty-nine have elected to take this work. Four of last year's class have returned to take up the commercial course.

During the ensuing year a series of illustrated lectures will be given in the auditorium of the high school by Supt. Hendry, using the new Bausch & Lomb lantern. The first lecture will be upon the Yellowstone Park and Colorado Canyon. The proceeds of these lectures are to be used to defray the cost of this outfit.

Order Assessment.

The directors of the Washtenaw Mutual Fire Insurance company have ordered an assessment of $2 per $1,000 as payment for losses incurred during the past year, preceding September 1, 1912. Secretary Childs is now spreading this assessment. The company has suffered a number of substantial losses during the year, the largest being the $3,000 loss on the Ward home east of Ypsilanti, when it was destroyed by fire last December.

OPENED THE CAMPAIGN.

Governor Hiram W. Johnson Delivered Opening Address Saturday.

Governor Hiram W. Johnson, of California, the candidate of the progressive party for vice president, opened the campaign here Saturday morning from the rear platform of the special train in which he was touring the state.

Mr. Johnson was introduced by L. Whitney Watkins, the progressive party candidate for governor of Michigan. There was an audience of about 500 present and during the 10-minute address of the speaker he was frequently interrupted with hearty cheers. There was the usual quota of newspaper reporters aboard of the train and from their reports the opening campaign of the progressive party was greeted with a good crowd along their entire route. Bull Moose stickpins were distributed here, as well as a large amount of campaign literature.

Mortgage Tax Fees.

Ann Arbor Times News: Washtenaw county has just received the largest mortgage tax fee ever collected here, over $13,000.

The tax has been paid by the Equitable Trust Company of New York, holder of the mortgages securing bonds of the Eastern Michigan Edison company, valued at $2,631,000, a little over one fourth of the value of the bonds eventually to be issued on this security. Coincident with the filing of these mortgages for taxation on the one-half of one per cent basis the Equitable Trust company has also filed a copy of the merger agreement entered into last winter whereby the original holder of the mortgage, the Trust Company of America, was merged with the Equitable. As the law requires all papers affecting the ownership of property to be recorded, it was necessary to record this merger agreement transferring the ownership of the Eastern Michigan Edison mortgages to the Equitable along with the old holdings of the Trust Company of America.

Much of the property covered by the mortgages lies in this county. The rest is in Macomb, Oakland and Wayne counties, and according to the understanding with the trust company, will eventually carry a mortgage of $10,000,000.

"Where The Trail Divides."

The West, that is that part of western America that is peopled by picturesque sheriffs, ranchmen, cowboys, cowgirls, miners, Indians and greasers, has been the locale of a great number of plays. "The Round Up," "The Virginian," "Where the Trail Divides," "The Squaw Man," "The Great Divide," and "The Girl of the Golden West" are some of the best known.

Two of these successful plays were written by actors, Edmund Day, who is well and favorably known to the American theatre-going public as an actor, wrote "The Round Up," and Robert Edeson who made a tremendous success in "Strongheart" repeated his triumph in "Where the Trail Divides" of which he is the author. "Where the Trail Divides" was written from a suggestion by Will Lillibridge's novel of the same title and "The Round Up" was written from a vaudeville sketch in which Mr. Day appeared.

"Ma-Wa-Cha-Sa," a Sioux Indian known as How Landor is the central figure in Mr. Edeson's play. The drama is tremendously interesting, telling a beautiful story of the love of the Sioux for his foster sister.

Mr. Edeson wrote the play for his own use and he made the part a big one. Not a "fat" part but a big one and all who see "Where the Trail Divides" will agree that How Landor is one of the most fascinating of stage characters.

The late Henry B. Harris magnificently mounted "Where the Trail Divides" and an enlargement of the original production will be seen at the New Whitney theatre, Saturday, September 14, matinee and night. Best seats at matinee 50 and 75 cents. Phone 480.

In fact, for courteous treatment, perfect service, comfort, and quality and quantity of entertainment furnished the D. & C. boats have any hotel in the country backed off the map.

Deid in the Prison.

Jackson Patriot: Robert McCormick, who in January, 1910, was sentenced to Jackson prison for the remainder of his life for the 'murder of a Michigan Central baggage man at Ypsilanti, died in the prison hospital at noon Thursday, September 5th, after a lingering illness, aged 19. The deceased was 17 years old when he arrived, and by his demise established a record for serving a life sentence, requiring but a little over two years.

McCormick, with two other young fellows, burglarized a store in Ypsilanti. They were seen in making their getaway. Before any of them got out of town the news of the burglary was spread broadcast in order that they might be apprehended.

When they reached the Michigan Central depot the night baggage man sought to arrest McCormick. The latter whipped out a revolver and shot the railroadman dead. McCormick succeeded in getting away, but latter was captured as were his two pals, and all of them were sentenced to prison. McCormick in fleeing from the officers who were in pursuit was shot in the neck inflicting a wound that never healed. He was in the hospital more or less of the time during the entire period of his imprisonment. About two months after he arrived he and a prisoner named Aukerman escaped by sawing out bars from one of the hospital windows and letting themselves down to the ground by means of an improvised rope.

An abscess of the lung was the real cause of McCormick's death. He had been dying for weeks, and the fact surprising to the doctors attending him. The mother of the prisoner came from Detroit frequently to visit her son. The body was shipped to Detroit for burial.

McCormick was one of the three who shot M. J. Emmett of this place, at the time the baggage man was killed. Mr. Emmett at the time was acting as night agent at the Ypsilanti station and went to the assistance of the baggage man.

MEDICINE FREE

We Will Furnish the Medicine Free if it Fails to Relieve Kidney Disease.

If neglected, kidney disease secures a firm hold and results in an ailment that frequently becomes chronic and is most difficult to treat successfully. The symptoms of kidney diseases are usually not soon enough recognized, and treatment is too long delayed. This is why these human derangements are so prevalent.

Most diseases of the kidneys, bladder and urinary tract, when cared for in time, readily yield to treatment if the right medication is promptly and properly applied.

We have a treatment we believe will eradicate this class of disease. We are so certain of this that we sell the medicine with our own personal guarantee to cheerfully return every cent paid us for it,—without question or quibble,—at the merest hint that it did not do exactly as we claimed, or if the user is not entirely satisfied.

Our treatment consists of Rexall Kidney Pills, and we urge all sufferers of kidney derangements to try them at our entire risk. We know what they contain, how they are made, and will cheerfully tell all about them upon request.

We can make this frank offer because our experience has conclusively demonstrated that Rexall Kidney Pills are a safe, reliable and extremely efficacious medicine that rarely fails to do all we claim. Otherwise we could not afford to sell Rexall Kidney Pills to our neighbors and friends with our endorsement and money-back guarantee. Why hesitate to try them? Price 50c. VAGABONDS OF THE EARTH

BY ARTHUR D. HOWDEN SMITH

I HAVE often wished that I could bring those six men together, and yet, on the face of it, the wish is impossible of fulfillment. They are scattered to the corners of the earth. Some I have heard from through round-about channels, but most have passed beyond my ken. All but two were chance acquaintances, with whom I spent an hour or so.

There was Helmslund for instance. His line is birds—sea-birds, although, as far as that goes, anything wild and unknown attracts Helmslund. I dare say you never heard of Helmslund. You would soon enough, though, if you undertook to collect rare birds as a hobby. Helmslund is indispensable to scores of collectors in this country and Europe.

I met him one Sunday afternoon at the house of a friend who possesses a really remarkable collection of North American birds.

"Odd sort of fellow—Helmslund," our host later remarked. "I've known him several years, now, and he's just getting to the point where he gives me a sketchy account of the main incidents of interest in his trips."

"What trips?" I asked.

"After birds," replied my host. "That's Helmslund's work. He gets birds, not for the feather people—he would regard that as sacrilege—but for collectors like myself. He goes everywhere to get them. I don't suppose there's a country he hasn't been to in search of some particular specimen."

And that was how I happened to hear the story of Helmslund's battle for life on the wretched waters of Lake Kibushka, far up by the Arctic circle in the grim desolation of the Siberian steppes. It had happened the summer before, on a trip he had taken to secure some specimens of the rosy gull for a European collector.

With a single companion and a couple of dog-teams, he was working around the country, paying especial attention to the marshy tracts bordering several large lakes, which are the habitat of various species of water fowl. There is probably no more desolate country in the world than this portion of the steppes.

Helmslund soon found that the rosy gulls had deserted the shores of Lake Kibushka, and he determined to cross the lake, which was about twenty miles wide, and try his luck in the country beyond. So he secured a craft which he called a dingy, and which was large enough to hold his companion and three of the dogs, besides himself, and the party set out early in the morning. They propelled the craft by paddling, and it was slow work. At first, everything went well. Then a brisk breeze sprang up, agitating the surface of the lake until the waves became as large as those of the open sea. To add to the confusion, the dogs became frightened and started to quarrel among themselves.

Before they realized the danger, the boat had capsized and the two men and three dogs were struggling in the water. Helmslund kept his wits about him and helped his companion to swim to the overturned dingy. The dogs had already clustered about it and were fighting desperately in the water to climb on the bottom, but Helmslund pushed through them ruthlessly and helped the other man to get a seat, before he followed him. Luckily, he had retained possession of his paddle and he used it to beat off the dogs, crazy with fear as they felt the steadily increasing weight of their heavy water-soaked fur. Snarling fiercely, the beasts attacked the boat again and again, snapping at the men's legs and leaping out of the water in wild attempts to seize their throats.

Early in the afternoon, Helmslund's companion fainted and dropped off. My friend said that the tears stood in the little man's eyes as he told of this occurrence. He told it quite simply, without any straining for effect. It was only by direct questioning that my friend discovered that Helmslund had fallen off the boat himself in his efforts to save the other man, who had sunk like a stone. When Helmslund gained the boat a second time he was utterly exhausted and barely able to crawl on to its bottom. He had lost his paddle and had no means of directing his progress or even of determining in which direction he was going.

Fortunately for him, the wind was onshore, and late in the afternoon he drifted within sight of land. The sight gave him renewed energy to strip off his shirt and use it to signal to a village of natives.

as. In a cave in Caracas, however, he heard a tale which caused him to change all his plans.

This tale, or, rather, legend, had filtered into the city through the medium of up-country planters, and had been imparted to them by tame Indians, who in turn, had heard it from their wild brethren of the jungle. It had to do with a mysterious place known as "El Lugar de los Flores Venenosos" (The Place of the Poisonous Flowers), a great clump of weirdly beautiful flowers, exhaling a deadly perfume, which was said to be located in the dense wilderness that lies about the headwaters of the Orinoco. This perfume was noticeable two days off; within a day's march it was sickening; and by the time a man was within sight of the flowers, he was overcome by the intense smell.

With the instinct of the orchid-hunter, Grayson divined that the legend implied the presence of his quarry. He scouted the melodramatic features of the tale, setting them down to the imagination of the countless untutored individuals through whom it had passed, and without more ado he set to work organizing an expedition. Strange to say, he preferred to be the only white man, although he took with him an old half-breed who had been his companion on several other expeditions, and a large train of Indian porters.

One morning there was a perceptible odor of flowers in the air; by noon it had increased considerably. When they camped that night, the jungle smells had been entirely supplanted. Their nostrils were filled with the cloying scent. A number of the Indians refused to go any farther, but Grayson, the half-breed and a half dozen of the stanchest porters pushed on in the morning. The perfume grew heavier and heavier as they advanced.

Finally, one of the porters collapsed in his tracks. Another went down, and another. Grayson could feel his senses leaving him, although he struggled on. He said he had never smoked opium, but he imagined that his sen-

Another one of the six was Carriere. He was big and quiet, with a deceptive placidity—not at all the sort of man you expected to meet if you had ever heard of him.

Like many other adventurers, Carriere ran away at sea. Like all who have ever done so, he paid for his fun in sweat and agony. He was a sailor before the mast for several years, on coasting vessels, tramp steamers, trading schooners in the Far East. He was in the Philippines when the war broke out, and he was captured by the insurgents and held prisoner for several months. He was engaged in vague, ill-formed revolutionary plots; he joined secret societies that have for their aim the emancipation of British India; and he did many other things in many other places that took him down into the depths of life.

Finally, he drifted to the Balkans, about the time Macedonia was in the throes of the terrible revolt against Turkish rule. Carriere became intensely interested in this blind struggle of a Christian people for freedom, and he determined to let the world know some of the inside details of prevailing conditions. He believed, too, that he could be of help to the revolutionary chiefs in perfecting their organization in the villages and towns of the five vilayets.

In the course of nearly two years' work he had carried out his entire plan of organization, except in Salonika and some of the territory around that city. He left that to the last, because it was the most difficult task, and he thought that, with the prestige of what he had accomplished, success would be more easy. The chief of the local committee in Salonika had rather a sinister reputation. It had never been proved against him, but there were rumors of blackmail.

For several weeks, Carriere lay in hiding in one of the suburbs of the city, receiving prominent members of the committee and talking over the new schemes he advocated. He had no suspicions at first, although he did not like the local voivode, and it came as a wholly unexpected shock when his secretary was shot down on the streets at night, after he had ventured out for a brief walk. The local committee claimed that a Greek had done it, but Carriere was suspicious.

Two nights passed, and then the old woman in whose house he was hiding came to him with a scared look on her face. She had heard two men talking in her garden about askares and the approaches to the house. One of these men was the local voivode.

not hear the full story of his wanderings for many months. We knew he had sailed from England for Rio in the cabin de luxe of an English packet boat. From week to week, for possibly two months, we received letters from him. Then came the silence.

The silence continued for six months, until one morning I received a note written on American Line paper and postmarked Southampton. It was signed by Ford.

"Shall arrive on Philadelphia with in 48 hours after you receive this short of cash. Do you remember that ten dollars you owe me?"

That was impudence for you! I should have known who wrote that note, without a signature. However, I clapped a ten-dollar bill in an envelope and mailed it promptly. A week later Ford dropped in to see me.

"Much obliged for the cash, old man," he said. "It came in handy. You see, they trimmed me beautifully in Paris, and I started out for Rio with my steamship ticket and barely enough coin to last me three weeks. In fact, when I got to the Chilean frontier town across the Andes, I was strapped. That made me sick of the whole job, and I decided it was time to head for home. There was a prince of a British consul there, who loaned me a ten-spot and got me a pass for donkey transportation across the mountains to the Argentine railroad."

"Just by blind luck, I'd chipped acquaintance with the chief engineer of the construction gang on the Argentine side, and so when I hit him for a pass to Buenos Ayres, he ponied up like a good one."

"I was feeling pretty disconsolate and I went into a cafe near the waterfront to forget myself for an hour or two. That was the time when Brazil and the Argentine were seeing which could build warships the quickest, you know, and there was a big Brazilian sitting in the place, with his feet up, passing remarks to the occupants in general. As soon as he saw me, he concentrated his attention, apparently on the supposition that because I was small I must be easy. I stood about two sentences and then I went for him. We were rolling promiscuously around the restaurant, and I was getting a bit the worst of it, when a little man with an arm like a steam-hammer came through the door. After he got through with my Brazilian friend there were no scraps to be picked up."

"Well, we shook hands and told each other we'd always been longing to meet, and afterwards we had a drink. The little man was a Britisher, captain of a tramp steamer due to sail the next afternoon, and when I told him of my troubles he clapped me on the back and offered me free passage to Rotterdam. 'I'll have to put you down on the books as cabin boy or steward,' he said. 'But you'll do no work. Come as my guest; I'll be glad to have you.' He was a prince, that skipper. Fed me at his own table, gave me his own cigars and wine, and when we reached Rotterdam he staked me to Paris."

"Aunt Jane was in Paris, fortunately for me, and I think she was so glad at the prospect of getting me back to America that she divied up without any side remarks."

I never really knew Chatton, the fifth of my vagabonds. I had been dining at a club in Piccadilly with an engineering friend, and as we were passing out through the club parlors my friend drew me aside to make room for a big, broad shouldered man wearing blue spectacles. "That's Chatton," he whispered. "He was one of the principal assistants in the construction of the new trans-Andean line. He's always had bad eyes, and the doctor told me he ought not to work above the snow line, but that wouldn't do for Chatton. He wants to be where the fun is. You see, engineering as a science means little to him. It's the game he likes—the fight to overmaster some problem. Poor Chatton! Whenever there was a desperate job to be done, he was bound to be on it—and all for a beggarly six or seven pounds a week, I suppose."

"Why do you say 'Poor Chatton'?" I asked.

"Because he'll never get over this latest eye trouble. He got it from the snow glare, just as the doctors said he would."

"But what will the man do?" I exclaimed. "How is he going to live?"

"He'll live—survive, rather," rejoined my friend, bitterly. "His people have money. But he'll never work again. Every one who knows him is always out up. And he feels it, too, although he's deuced plucky about it."

If you have been in the habit of frequenting police courts or cheap lodging houses it is possible that you have met John Kelly.

As near as I could make out from stray admissions Kelly made to me, he gave up a reputable position in life to undertake a study of the psychology of tramps and thieves. He used to speak with genuine pride of his researches, and he was particularly proud of what he termed "his life work"—the compilation of a dictionary of thieves' slang, together with a compendium of the rules of house-breaking and safe-cracking. Nobody was ever permitted to get an extended view of this. For a dollar or two, now and then, when the man was hard up, he would permit one to copy out a few stray phrases; but he was very suspicious, as a rule, and believed that every one was in a conspiracy to tear the fruit of his years of labor away from him.

What became of him I never heard. He drifted away, his manuscript with him; to the end steadily refusing the propositions that he regarded as little less than insulting.

Health & Beauty Hints

By Katherine Morton

A becoming arrangement for the hair is a very important feature of the bride's altar getup, and this naturally includes the right draping of the veil; so it would be ridiculous to claim that any one style of coiffure is to be used, for the lines of hairdressing must conform to the size of the head, the cut of the features and the height of the bride. But, for the most part, hairdressing is done on a very elaborate scale, and to accomplish the vast structures piled upon heads many false pieces are needed. These go under names too numerous to mention, but the bang, the switch, the psyche puff, the cluster puff, the transformation and the pin curl are some familiar titles. In buying any of these pieces by mail, the bit is matched to a lock of hair from that part of the head where the false piece would be worn. Thus bangs and transformations are matched to the front hair, switches are judged by the tints of the back hair, and so on. The reason for this particularity is that naturally colored hair is of many tones, and these seem to dispose themselves over the hair as they see fit; wherefore it is easy enough to tell dyed false hair at a glance, for the changing tones of the natural color cannot be imitated. So dyed false hair is without the commercial value of the false pieces in natural colors, and when the tint required is a rare one the false fixing is still dearer. All those shades of brown which have a drablike tint, titian red, reddish gold and golden and white blonde are dearer than other colors.

A very handsome hair arrangement for the bride who is not too tall—that is, much taller than the average woman—is called the "coronation," this lending itself most charmingly to the lace veil put on in cap fashion, as is shown by the bride of the fashion pictures. For this style, which is rather intended to give a little height to the figure, the hair is parted in the middle, and two braids are carried around the head to form a large knot, showing from the front view of the head. This knot gives the support needed for the mop arrangement of the veil, which is fastened to it with a wreath of orange blossoms, the lace border of the veil falling about the face in a shaped frill. Such veils, be it understood—those with lace borders—are more widely trimmed at the bottom and sides than at the top, so the lightly trimmed and narrower end is shaped as it should be for a pretty fall about the sides of the face. With the "coronation" coiffure a ribbon is often worn about the braided knot, this ending in a bow without ends at the side. For classic, statuesque types lace veils are far more becoming than those of tulle, which seem rather to belong to youthful brides of saucy or demure types.

For the bride who is much below the average height, the hair is always piled at the top of the head, the knot often taking a pointed form, which is, of course, emphasized by a cunning massing of the lace or tulle veil worn. The bang will be a salient feature of the coiffure of every girl who can wear the forehead fringe, but the bang is the merest cobweb, and it is slightly waved or left straight, as suits the face. The fringe is also quite short, and when it seems undesirable to cut the natural hair for it, the little piece, delicately woven to a silk thread, is bought in false shape for about seventy-five cents. A narrow, ventilated and naturally curly bang of "convent hair" in every shade is sold for a dollar and a half, and where the forehead is very high, and the face thin, this is very softening to the features.

The smartest tendency of all coiffures is toward a distinct flatness of the top of the head, where the hair is parted at the middle or at one side; from the parting, wherever disposed, the side locks go back with a light waving, and the large knot of braids, or puffs and curls is placed high enough to show all the nape of the neck, and besides, elongates the back of the head to a great extent. This flatness of the top and rear extension gives the head a very lovely contour, and if the face needs the softening of little curls they are put in many places—at the nape of the neck, below or above the ears, or else in the round or pointed rear knot. As to the deep waving once done at the sides and under the back hair, it is still a feature of the coiffure's waxen laddie, but is by no means so conspicuous on human heads. The undulations admired are wide and loose, as if the waving were natural, for this method certainly gives a very legitimate look to the artificiality.

Ornaments for the bride's coiffure are numerous enough, some very splendid bandeaus of pearls being seen, as well as pearl combs and barrettes and pins. But if the veil is to cover the whole head, as it generally does, the ornaments had better be of shell in the color of the hair, as in this way they will not conflict with the half of whole wreaths and the separate knots of orange blossoms, used upon pins, for fastening on the veil.

Social Forms and Entertainments

For Club Entertainment. I belong to a ladies' club. The ages of the members are from twenty-five to fifty. Will you please suggest some way of entertaining them? I would like something in which all might take part.—Violet.

A number of ladies spent a most enjoyable afternoon in this manner: Each one was asked to dress her hair to represent some famous woman. It was surprising what a change was wrought in the appearance, and it was a jolly crowd, I assure you. Some of the personages were Martha Washington, Mary Queen of Scots, Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra, Frances E. Willard, Priscilla, etc. Old pictures furnished the ideas. Programs and pencils were passed and a prize was given to the lady who guessed the most and one to the person who remained the longest unguessed. I should think this would furnish entertainment for your club.

Regarding Mourning. Would it be proper for me to receive a gentleman caller while I am still wearing black and my mourning veil? I have worn it a year. I would not go driving Sunday because I didn't know whether it was proper. How long does one usually wear the mourning veil? Would it do for me to wear it with all white dress? In taking off mourning is it necessary to wear black and white a while before you go out in white?—M. B.

There is no harm in receiving calls while you are in mourning. About the driving, you must be guided by your own feelings. All white is considered mourning and black and white half mourning. A year is long enough to wear a heavy veil.

Duties of Bridal Attendant. Will you please tell me what the duties of the bridesmaid and groomsmen are, also at a home wedding who should receive the guests at the door?—Mabel.

At a home wedding the mother and father of the bride receive the guests; in other words, those who issue the invitations are the host and hostess of the occasion. A bridesmaid, if there is no maid of honor, immediately precedes the bride, stands beside her and holds her bouquet. The groomsmen supports the groom, enters with him, produces the ring at the critical moment and relieves him in all possible ways of the details of the preparation.

Compensation for Organist. Is it the custom to pay the organist at a wedding for her services, if you are well acquainted with her; if so, what compensation would you give her?—Blanche.

If you are well acquainted with the young woman and hesitate to offer her money, give her something to equal what she would receive in money from a stranger, for an organist is always paid for a wedding. I cannot set the amount, not knowing her terms.

For a Scotch Entertainment. Will you please give me some suggestions as to representing some Scottish character or books for an entertainment.—Lassie.

"The Heart of Midlothian," "Anne Laurie," "Scotch Chiefs," "The Monastery," "A Highland Laddie," "Ivanhoe" (carry a small hoe). If you go to the library doubtless many others will be suggested.

For a Dinner Dessert. Is maple mousse suitable for a dinner dessert? How is it pronounced.—M. E.

Maple mousse is delicious for dessert and always acceptable to every one, as maple flavoring is a general favorite. Mousse is pronounced "exactly like moose, a deer."

Making the First Call. In making a first call, if the maid takes a card at the door, when and where do I leave my husband's cards?—D. E.

Hand your husband's cards, with yours, to the maid, the courtesy is understood, as no one expects men to make daytime calls.

Picnic Invitation. Here is the invitation sent out for our club picnic that you helped us with when I wrote you a few days ago: (To be sung to the tune of "Annie Laurie.") You are cordially invited our picnic to attend. Delighted this message now to send. (Individuals can put "I surely am delighted.") Next Tuesday morn's the time, and the place: And so we send this little rhyme to help way gleam to cheer. The daisies can be filled in as desired. —Sarah.

MADAME MERRI.

WHAT WILL CURE MY BACK?

Common sense will do more to cure backache than anything else. I will tell you whether the kidneys are sore, swollen and aching. It will tell you in that case that there is no use trying to cure it with a plaster. If the passages are scant or too frequent, proof that there is kidney trouble is complete. Then common sense will tell you to use Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended special kidney remedy.

An Ohio Case

Frederick W. Harris, Ohio, writes: "For ten years I suffered from kidney trouble. I had a backache, dropsical symptoms, became manifestly weak, and was laid up in bed. After doctors had failed to cure me, I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me completely."

West No Place for Consumption.

Physicians in all of the eastern states will be asked by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis to stop sending consumptives in the last stages of tuberculosis and without sufficient funds to the southwestern part of the United States in search of health. While it is impossible to tell accurately how many consumptives there are at present living in the states of Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, southern California, and Western Texas, it is probable that no less than ten per cent of the 6,000,000 people in this territory have tuberculosis themselves, or have come to the west because some member of their family have had it. Every year, the health authorities estimate, not less than 10,000 consumptives, hopelessly diseased, come west to die. For these cases, the climate of this section of the country can do nothing, and they are compelled to die in strange surroundings and thousands of miles from home and friends. The National Association points out further that from 50 to 60 per cent of these advanced cases are too poor to provide the proper necessities of life, and they are either starved to death or compelled to accept the meager charity which this part of the country affords.

A FOOD CONVERT

Good Food the True Road to Health.

The pernicious habit some persons still have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve stomach trouble keeps up the patent medicine business and helps keep up the army of dyspeptics.

Indigestion—dyspepsia—is caused by what is put into the stomach in the way of improper food, the kind that so taxes the strength of the digestive organs they are actually crippled.

When this state is reached, to resort to tonics is like whipping a reared horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash diminishes his power to move the load.

Try helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.

"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food," writes a Maine man.

"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an advertisement I tried Grape-Nuts food, and after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved."

"Am much stronger, not nervous now, and can do more work without feeling so tired, and am better every way."

"I relish Grape-Nuts best with cream and use four heaping teaspoonsful as the cereal part of a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich., on the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A man appears from time to time who is nervous, weak, and full of stomach trouble.

BREVITIES

SALINE—A special election will be held here Tuesday, October 1st to vote upon the question of bonding the village for $30,000 for a water works system.

HOWELL—An overabundance of rain and an unusual shortage of sunshine the past five weeks has done much injury to bean crop in Livingston county.—Democrat.

MUNITH—John Curtis' house was badly shattered Monday of last week by lightning. Mrs. Curtis and son, Harold were in the house at the time, and were badly shocked. The damage is covered by insurance.

GREGORY—Work on the state road north of Gregory is progressing nicely, and the road is now passable for automobiles. The gravel is nearly all spread, but has not been rolled or graded as yet, although passing traffic has made a fairly good track.

GRASS LAKE—Grass Lake village has received more for their money expended on the streets this year than ever before. While east Main is not in the best condition at present it will make an elegant piece of road as soon as it is packed and settled. Our village officials can well feel proud of the work done.—News.

HOWELL—George Wilcox, 50, a well digger, was blown to pieces on the Cook farm north of here last Thursday by the premature explosion of a stick of dynamite he had ignited to remove an obstruction in a well hole he was digging. The heavy detonation shook buildings for half a mile around. A leg and arm were completely torn from his body.

BLISSFIELD—It is said that 3,000 names have been secured to the petition asking for a resubmission to the voters of Lenawee county of the local option proposition. This means that the question will be voted on next spring and if so large a number of signatures have been obtained a close election will ensue with the result that the county may go wet again.—Advance.

YPSILANTI—Eva Peety, aged 15, a sophomore in the high school here, jumped from the Congress street bridge Monday afternoon and was drowned. The girl came from North Buxton, Ont., to attend the local schools, residing with an aunt. It is believed she was brooding over school difficulties. Nobody saw the girl jump from the bridge, but workmen nearby heard a splash and, noticing the girl had suddenly disappeared, notified the police. The body was recovered. An inquest will be held.

JACKSON—A meeting of the county road commissioners was held in Jackson Monday. Commissioner Leeke drove here in an automobile from St. Clair county to be present. It was found that during the past week but one mile of road had been surveyed. County Surveyor Riley having been too busy to work at it more than one day during the past week. The commissioner engaged Surveyor Livermore to help them also. There is about thirty miles of road to be surveyed before the board of supervisors meet at their October session.—Patriot.

PINCKNEY—Last Thursday the township boards of Hamburg, Dexter and Putnam met in the town hall in this village to act on the petition of the Ypsilanti Land Co., requesting that the farm-house on their land which is known as the old Cobb farm be placed in the Hamburg school district. The Cobb farm lies in four townships, Hamburg, Webster, Dexter and Putnam. The Webster town board however did not appear. The residents of the school district of which the farm house now forms a part filed a counter petition asking that the district be left unchanged. After some deliberation the boards decided to refuse to grant the request of the Ypsilanti Land Co.—Dispatch.

SALINE—According to reports, at about the hour of midnight, Saturday, a demonstration was enacted on our streets almost equal to that at the Jackson prison, only that the crowd was less in numbers and they were not locked in. Blood was spilled over the side walk, fits fell lively and the loud conversation uttered was too vile and ridiculous to appear on paper. After some tiring persuasion by a few citizens who happened to be near, and the marshal, the riot was quieted and the offenders sent home. Tuesday complaints were made and six men whose names we have been requested to withhold faced Justice Gillen, who said to them that $5 fine and $4.20 costs for each man would insure their release—they paid up.—Observer.

To Mothers—And Others.

You can use Bucklen's Arnica Salve to cure children of eczema, rashes, tetter, chafings, scaly and crusted humors, as well as their accidental injuries—cuts, burns, bruises, etc., with perfect safety. Nothing else heals so quickly. For boils, ulcers, old, running or fever sores or piles, has no equal. 25 cents at L. P. Vogel's, H. H. Penn Co.'s and L. T. Freeman Co.'s.
