James Beckwith.

James Beckwith was born in London, England, August 2, 1833 and died at his home at Sylvan Center, Wednesday, November 13, 1912, aged 79 years, 3 months and 11 days.

Mr. Beckwith came to America in 1852, and to Sylvan Center in 1863 where he has since resided and conducted a blacksmith business. He was an expert at shoeing oxen, and was called to Detroit a few years ago to shoe a number of ox teams that were being used by an advertising firm. Mr. Beckwith was the only person who resided near Detroit at that time who would undertake the work.

In 1856, while residing in Canada he was united in marriage to Miss Emma Butcher, who died in 1865, and to this union one child, George W., was born. In January, 1867, he was united in marriage with Miss Emeline Fisher, who survives him. To this union five children were born being Claude D., of Detroit, Rolla J., Carrie A., of Chelsea, Harry O., of Jackson, and Corella, of Sylvan Center, all of whom are living.

The funeral was held Saturday, November 16, Rev. H. G. Palmer officiating. Interment being at Maple Grove cemetery Sylvan Center.

Good Pieces of Road.

There are three good pieces of road to be found in Sylvan, that have been kept up by three farmers of the township in front of their premises. The men who have given their time to the work are Christian Kalmbach, Geo. W. Gage and Fred Sager.

The method of working the roads has been with the split log drag, which they have used for years. The roads are hard and smooth and shows what can be accomplished by the use of the split log drag. If this method of road building could be adopted by the township the cost of maintaining the public highways could be considerably reduced and the result would be far in advance of the present mode of working the roads.

Should Not Be Done.

Patrons of rural routes should remember that now that the weather is getting cold they should provide themselves with stamps and thus save the carriers from picking pennies out of the boxes. Carriers are not required to do this and it is an imposition to ask them to do it in cold weather. Just imagine yourself trying to pick up pennies after you have been riding twenty-five miles and driving a horse.

Escape An Awful Fate.

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet, Ill., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate. Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough, she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicines till I used Dr. King's New Discovery. But I owe my life to this wonderful remedy for I scarcely cough at all now." Quick and safe, its most reliable of all throat and lung medicines. Every bottle guaranteed. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at L. P. Vogel, H. H. Fenn Co. and L. T. Freeman Co. Advertisement.

NOTHING TO THE STORY.

None of the Jackson Prison Suspects Were Locked up in Chelsea Jail.

One of the Detroit Wednesday morning daily papers contained an interview with one of the Jackson prison suspects, who is being held at Detroit in connection with the fire that destroyed the binder twine warehouse.

In the interview as published the prisoner stated that he did not know where the other suspects were, but after leaving Jackson he heard the name "Chelsea" mentioned and that they might have been locked up there by the officers who had them in charge.

Officers McKune and Cooper inform the Standard that none of the suspects were ever locked up in the village jail. The story is apparently a fake on the part of the prisoner who found an easy mark in an overanxious news reporter looking for a "scoop." The item created some comment about town. If the prisoner had been at all familiar with the Chelsea jail he would have selected some other town to leave his fellow suspects at. Judging from the published reports of the men who were taken to Detroit the lock-up here would not have detained them very long.

Order of Things Reversed.

The coming of electric lights and automobiles has entirely revolutionized more than one industry. A few years ago when kerosene was largely used for household purposes, gasoline was simply a byproduct and was sold very cheap, as it was almost useless. Now, the case is absolutely reversed and the demand for gasoline makes kerosene the byproduct and the price of the commodities is reversed. The Scientific American claims that manufacturers of automobiles can make a carburetor that will work equally as well with kerosene, and that will be the solution of the fuel problem for motor cars.

To Move into New Offices.

The Michigan Portland Cement Co., are making arrangements to move their offices at the Four Mile Lake plant to the building formerly occupied by the Chelsea Savings bank. The property is owned by N. S. Potter, sr., of Jackson, who is also interested in the cement works, and it will make the finest office building occupied by any cement manufacturing concern in the state.

Cost Him Nothing.

Patrick H. Kelley, the new elected congressman-at-large, is preparing his campaign expense bill, as required by the federal law. The new congressman says his election did not cost him a cent outside a small postage bill and some printing. As disclosure of this is not required by the law, he will have the pleasure of reporting his election cost him nothing.

The Recital at St. Mary's.

As already announced Mme. Rosa d'Erina, the famous Irish prima donna and concert organist, will give one of her charming organ and song lecture recitals in St. Mary's Catholic church on Wednesday evening, November 27. Rosa d'Erina is one of the most remarkable musical marvels of the day. A native of Ireland, she was the organist of the Cathedral in Armagh, the city of St. Patrick, at twelve years of age, and at fourteen was the organist of the great Carmelite church in Dublin.

She studied vocal music in Paris where she made her operatic debut, and in London was commanded to sing before King Edward and Queen Alexandra and was appointed vocalist and organist to the latter. She is assisted by her husband G. R. Vantom, the well known tenor, who is a native of the Island of Jersey, and is a cousin of Mrs. Langtry, the famous English actress, known as the "Jersey Lily."

The recital on Wednesday the 27th is of a dual character, the first part consists of a charming song lecture on the music of Ireland, rendered from the sanctuary, and the second part an organ and song recital rendered in the organ gallery. The program is unique and original, and full of interest and charm, and indications point to a large attendance.

The following will be the program for the evening:

PART FIRST.

The following numbers will be rendered by the two artists:
"Silent, O Moyle".....Song of Fionnuala
"Rich and Rare".....Moore
"The Meeting of the Waters".....Moore
"Organ Fantasia on Irish Airs,"
Introducing Marches, Planxties, etc., and the old march of Brain Boru, composed A. D. 1014, on the eve of the Battle of Clontarf.
"The Minstrel Boy".....Moore
"The Harp that once through Tara's Halls".....Moore

PART SECOND.

(a) Grand Organ Overture "Masaniello".....Auber
(b) Romanza "Traumerel".....Schuman
Mme. Rosa d'Erina.

Choral Union Concert.

The next concert on the Choral Union series to be given in the University hall will take place, Monday evening, November 25th, when the well known Flonzaley Quartet, who have appeared in Ann Arbor so many times, will again be here. This organization stands as one of the greatest if not the greatest ensemble organization in the world and their consistent playing each year in America and in Europe is continually winning more laurels for them. Temperamentally they are well fitted for their chosen work and the fact that they do not have to consider the financial side in working out their programs and policies means much to them in their art, since it permits them to devote their entire energy to perfecting their own playing and none of their strength is diverted towards other channels. This organization is unique in this respect, since all the other great quartets are made up of musicians who devote a large part of their time to teaching, solo work and various other activities.

Owing to the fact that a goodly number of general admission tickets admitting to the one concert only were sold at the date of the Schumann-Heink concert, there is now a limited number of tickets available for the Flonzaley concert and the remaining concerts on the series, which will be disposed of in the order of application. When this number is exhausted, it will be impossible to secure more tickets of any kind, since the legal restrictions and the University of Michigan authorities forbid the selling of more tickets of any kind than the seating capacity.

SUFFRAGISTS WIN VICTORY IN COURT

GENESEE BOARD MAY CANVASS
VOTE ON EQUAL RIGHTS
AMENDMENTS.

SUPREME COURT SUSTAINS
JUDGE WISNER, OF FLINT.

Protest Filed by George B. Jennison
in Bay County Against Canvass
—in the Ballot an Equal Suffrage.

The equal suffrage workers won a signal victory, when the supreme court denied John Stevens, of Flint, a writ of mandamus against Circuit Judge Wisner, of Genesee county, to show cause why the circuit judge should not issue an injunction prayed for, restraining the Genesee county board of canvassers from certifying to the state board of canvassers at Lansing the election returns from Genesee county on the equal suffrage amendment to the state constitution.

Stevens, through his attorneys, applied to Judge Wisner for an injunction seeking to restrain the county board from certifying their returns to Lansing, on the ground that the ballots did not contain the full amendment. This the court, recording to the petition set up in the application for the writ of mandamus, refused to either deny or grant, and it was for the purpose of getting action at the hands of the circuit judge that the mandamus was asked for. In his petition for the mandamus, Stevens sets up that the circuit judge in refusing to either deny or grant the injunction prayed did so for the purpose of delaying the matter, thus affording the county board of canvassers ample time in which to certify the result of the election to the state board of canvassers at Lansing.

George B. Jennison, acting on behalf of the equal suffragists, filed a protest against canvassing the ballot on equal suffrage in this county on the ground that the ballot used in the election was not in legal form in that it did not contain the entire amendment.

The protest was filed to offset that of the opponents of the amendment, who are asking to have the vote thrown out in several counties, which carried the opposition. Bay county voted over 1,600 majority against the amendment.

Prosecuting Attorney Hitchcock filed an opinion holding that the board had no jurisdiction to throw out the returns of the amendment, their duty being solely to tabulate the vote as returned to them and to announce the result.

Frank J. Heil, a local saloon man, has filed protest in circuit court against counting the vote on the suffrage amendment on the grounds that the vote was illegal. Among a dozen reasons given he claims that the ballot was not properly printed and the amendment not properly advertised.

Sugar Barrel May Clear Up Mystery.

An election mystery in Kalamazoo county may be cleared up by the canvassers, when they are given a chance to inspect a sugar barrel that was used in Climax township as a repository for votes.

With several candidates showing dispositions to ask for an official recount, the county canvassers at a loss to explain the discrepancy that is reported at Climax. The poll lists of that township show that 319 people voted there, while the returns total but 278 ballots, a discrepancy of 41. This number of votes if accounted for, might make a great difference in the result of two or three contests, where the winners carried the county by less than 40 plurality.

Kalamazoo County to Make Tile.

Kalamazoo county will have a factory for the manufacture of tile to be used in connection with the good roads work, and it will be operated by prisoners from the county jail. The commission has just purchased a farm at Fortage Center and will build a factory at once.

It is said this is the first move to establish a county reformatory and do away with the antiquated county jail. The Portage farm is in the center of the county and well located for such an institution.

The good roads commission of Berrien county is considering a way to return $4,000 of road tax money to three townships which built good roads before the present state reward system became effective.

Charles Hibbard, of Port Huron, was found over to the circuit court for trial on a charge of voting illegally on election day. Hibbard alleged on the stand that his name was registered by W. H. McKee, who has the contract for the new military street bridge.

Judge Wisner, of the Genesee county circuit court, in the case of the city of Flint against the railway company, ruled that the railway company must operate its cars to the new limits (for one fare). The corporation charged an excessive fare, the passengers going beyond the old corporate limits.

Maize and Blue Defeats Cornell.

Strategy, perfectly timed and perfectly executed, accomplished for Michigan what mere strength and determination never could have done—accomplished the overthrow of the "Big Red Team" from Cornell by a score of 20-7.

That is rather a top-heavy score and one might get the impression that it was perfectly easy and pleasant for Michigan to whip these men from Ithaca. Don't be misled, gentle reader, into thinking anything of the sort. It was anything but a one-sided game and for at least 45 of its 60 minutes things looked as though Michigan would be very glad to call it quits with the score a tie.

But Michigan's team was living something down and was out to show that the reputation of Maize and Blue eleven for fighting until the final whistle blows is a merited one, that dreadful game at Pennsylvania notwithstanding. The last five minutes of play proved the most vivid of the afternoon and it saw Michigan turn probable tie, which pleases nobody and leaves a bad taste in the mouths of all concerned into a splendid victory with something to spare.

Two Candidates Claim Same Office.

The action of the Eaton county board of canvassers in counting the vote that gave County Clerk E. G. Pray a plurality of 567 for the office of representative, following a protest filed by Dwight Backus, the democrat nominee, alleging that the state constitution prohibited a county officer from aspiring to a seat in the legislature, will result in the contest being carried to the house at Lansing. Mr. Pray claims that his resignation, to take effect Nov. 4, was filed with Judge of Probate Dann, on Nov. 2, and for that reason the section mentioned does not apply. Mr. Backus contends that the county clerk was ineligible as far back as the primaries and will present affidavits to show that Mr. Pray continued to act as county clerk up to the time the protest was filed with the board. Tuesday, Nov. 12.

With nearly half the counties heard from the majority in favor of the amendment appears to be creeping up, and the returns indicate that the majority will be even greater than the most optimistic suffrage leaders had hoped for.

Fifty Thousand Turks and Bulgarians Have Been Killed or Wounded in Fighting Around Constantinople.

There are at least 10,000 cases of cholera in and around Constantinople today. The pestilence is scourging the army and the refugees who continue to flock into the city from the war-ravaged section north of the city. The mosques, including historic St. Sophia, have been turned into hospitals and hotels for the refugees. Small spaces are reserved for religious ceremonies.

In the northern suburbs the sound of booming cannon can be heard all day and night, telling of the fierce battle which is going on at the city's threshold.

All negotiations between Turkey and the Balkan league have been broken off, according to dispatches received from Constantinople by a prominent member of the diplomatic corps. It gives no details but intimates that Turkey rejected the conditions set forth by Bulgaria and her allies as the preliminary to the end of hostilities.

Fifty thousand Turks and Bulgarians have been killed or wounded in the fighting along the Tethalja lines outside of Constantinople.

EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS.

Wilson Announces Call for Extra Session Before April 15.

"I shall call congress together in extraordinary session not later than April 15. I shall do this not only because I think that the pledges of the party ought to be redeemed as promptly as possible but also I know it to be in the interest of business that all uncertainty as to what the particular items of tariff revision are to be should be removed as soon as possible."—WOODROW WILSON.

President-elect Wilson took the first important step towards carrying out his pledges to the people, when he announced he would call an extra session of congress not later than April 15, instead of waiting six months for the regular session.

The president-elect gave out his statement before embarking on his vacation for two reasons. First, as declared in his statement, he desired to remove any uncertainty that might be injurious to the business interests of the country. The second reason was purely selfish, he remarked. He wants to spend his vacation in quiet and peace. He realized, he said, that unless the question was settled at this time, he would be besieged continually for a definite statement on the subject.

Simultaneously with the issuance of his statement the president-elect gave permission to say he is to spend his vacation in Bermuda. He sailed on the steamship Bermudian Saturday afternoon. The Bermudian is booked solidly and the president-elect has been assured that there are no politicians among the passengers. The president-elect will spend four weeks on the island, returning to New York, Dec. 16. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Wilson and the Misses Jessie and Eleanor Wilson. Miss Margaret Wilson, the elder daughter, will remain in New York to continue her study of music.

Abdul Hamid's Daughter Ends Life.

According to a Russian correspondent at Constantinople, Zekie, the eldest daughter of Abdul Hamid, the Turkish sultan, and who was very patriotic, was overcome with despair on account of her country's disasters and dramatically committed suicide in the garden of her magnificent palace at Abushair.

Tar Party Defendants Held Guilty.

The jury in the case of Ernest Welch, charged with participation in the tarring of Minnie Le Valley, at West Clarkfield, O., on the night of Aug. 30, returned a verdict of guilty of assault and battery. Welch was the first to be tried of six men indicted on a charge of "riotous conspiracy."

Returns show that in Osceola county the names of Herbert Baker, bull moose candidate for auditor general, and Julius B. Kirby, candidate for attorney general, were reversed. This is the third county in which the same mistake was made.

Jackson Gorgy, an aged resident of Allegan, was seriously burned when a gasoline stove exploded. He lived alone in a portion of the old Allegan house, one of the oldest buildings in the city. The building was badly damaged and a garage was ruined.

STATE BRIEFS.

A jury convicted Chester E. Bricker, a Port Huron druggist, of selling liquor to a minor. It is expected that the druggist will appeal the case to the supreme court.

Circuit Judge Walter H. North is likely to be petitioned to call a grand jury in Calhoun county to investigate an alleged combine of Battle Creek coal dealers.

The list of appointees of Gov-elect Ferris will probably contain the name of James Melme, of Adrian, for state dairy and food commissioner. Helme has served under Commissioner Dame.

Arthur Fairchild, of Cadillac, was shot while deer hunting near Wolf lake with John Ballard. Ballard was striking a match on the safety device of his rifle when the gun discharged, the shot entering Fairchild's right thigh.

At the school in district No. 3, of Mills township, Midland township, Midland county, a giant buck poked his head through the door of the school room about recess time and put a stop to recitation. He then calmly trotted away to the woods.

Drain Commissioners D. E. Birdsell, of Barry county; Frank O. Miller, of Ionia county; and Jesse Pickett, of Kent county, are seeking to push through the proposed Little Thornapple drain, which will rescue for cultivation about 3,000 acres of land.

ALBANIA- Firebrand of the Balkans

IN THE ALBANIAN MOUNTAINS

HARDLY any other portion of the universe has been the subject of more war talk than the Balkan peninsula, and few sections of the continent of Europe are less well known in the western world. The Balkan war cloud is familiar enough, having appeared and reappeared at intervals for years past, yet few people know why there should be trouble in the Balkans. Today we are face to face with real conflict, the very existence of Turkey is at stake, and even Europe may be engulfed in war. In the very center of the conflict are the Albanians. But who and what are the Albanians? Well, Albania is a province of Turkey situated to the north of Greece, on the eastern shore of the Adriatic sea.

It is probably the least-known region in the Balkan peninsula, and compared with the other countries in that part of Europe, it has been but little explored by travelers, with the result that its wild and fearless inhabitants, who number some 1,600,000, retain, to a large extent, the primitive habits and customs of a bygone age.

The country is extremely mountainous, especially in the north and south. There are no railway lines though several have been projected, and the development of commerce is retarded accordingly. Carriage roads exist in a few instances, but generally travelers have still to pass one place to another by means of bridle-paths.

The inhabitants, who are one of the most ancient races in Europe, are divided into two divisions, northern and southern, known as Ghegs and Tosks. Both have ever been brilliant fighters, defending their mountain fastnesses in the past with remarkable success against all invaders.

Retain Original Customs. Retaining their original customs and language, the Albanians present a marked difference from other races in the Balkan peninsula. Sir Edwin Pears in "Turkey and Its People" gives an interesting description of the Ghegs and the Tosks. He remarks that the Ghegs are noted for their square heads, refined features, and usually light colored hair; whilst the Tosks have a heavier cast of features, with darker hair. Among both, however, are beautiful heads, which recall those of classic Greece. The characteristic dress of the Ghegs is a waistcoat, jacket and breeches, each close-fitting, of a white material, usually resembling tweed cloth, braided with black. That of the Tosks is the long white petticoat, known as the dastanella, which the Greeks who employ big numbers of Albanians as soldiers, have taken for the uniform of the king's guards.

In northern Albania the clan system still exists, and the Ghegs very rarely pay taxes. The scattered Turkish officers possess little authority, and the one obligation the inhabitants owe to the Ottoman empire is that of providing soldiers in time of war. In each clan the elders form a council and preside over gatherings of the tribesmen, which exercise the supreme legislative power. Loyalty to the chief of his clan, and to his work, is the Albanian's greatest virtue. An in-born courtesy is common to the race. The best fighter is the best man, and every Albanian feels himself independent, except when bound by the ancient customs of his race. In northern Albania he recognizes no law except that based on such ancient customs. The Turk until recently has hardly attempted to impose any other law. Whether in the field or the marketplace, he is nearly always armed, and is ready to fight on the smallest pretext. The boy attains manhood when he can show he possesses arms which he has captured from an enemy. All are the rifle as a sign of joy, and Christian congregations are summoned to divine service by a definite number of shots.

The primitive method of revenge by means of the vendetta, or blood-feud, still obtains in the country, and the slaying of one member of a family or clan leads to a series of crimes or to warfare. The claims of hospitality, however, are very strict, and injury to a guest has to be avenged. In the case of marriages, a stipulated price is paid for the bride. Marriage by capture remains the rule today. Women are respected, but wives have to work their hardest in the fields. There is very little education in the country, although there are schools in some of the towns.

It is this primitive race whose quarrel with the Turk is very clearly understood in the west, which is warring the concert of Europe. In the first place, as has been shown, the most successful of sultans and conquering generals in the heyday of Ottoman power never succeeded in subduing the Albanians. These gallant mountaineers acknowledged the sovereignty of the sultan only so far as it protected them from the encroachments of other nations who would have civilized them.

Turks' Nefarious Rule. The present trouble with the Albanians began when the new constitutional regime came into being in Turkey four years ago. The Young Turks insisted on regarding themselves as the dominant authority in Turkey. This would have been all right if they had had numerical preponderance and the moral and intellectual ability to dominate the other races.

All races in the Turkish dominions have suffered during the nefarious rule of the Young Turks' secret committee of mediocre men, but none more than the Albanians. In a few weeks their centuries-old privileges and immunities were abolished, their country was invaded by hordes of inexperienced officials of a race which they held to be their inferiors, their language was tabooed in the schools and forbidden in the printing press, unless written in Turkish characters, their young men were drafted into the Turkish army and sent off to Asia Minor and the deadly Yemen to be shot, a system of taxation was introduced which threatened to drain them as dry as their Macedonian neighbors, and worse than all, they were notified to surrender their firearms.

The result was rebellion. But the Albanians could do nothing against the trained troops equipped with machine guns which the Turks turned against them. The rebels fled to the mountains and soon their little peaceful villages were the scenes of frightful massacres too horrible to recount. Arms having failed, the Albanians decided to try constitutional methods at the general election which took place last spring. But by violence and illegal use of the army the Young Turks' secret committee, it is said, prevented free elections not only in Albania but throughout the empire, with the result that a parliament of Turks, subservient to the committee of union and progress, was elected.

Again the Albanians rebelled, and this time with greater success. The army ordered against them refused to march, in fact made common cause with them, with the rebels. This time, instead of having to defend themselves in their mountains, the Albanians have been able to invade Macedonia, since when the "packed" Turkish parliament has been turned out and a new cabinet of Young Turks formed. The Albanians have been promised redress of their grievances by the new government. But so far they have refused to go home. They want to see the promises of the Turks carried out. If they are not they will march to Constantinople.

WHY MABEL LOST HIM

By BLANCHE HARPER.

"I'll leave it to you," said the young man with the receding chin to his friend with the fuzzy hat, "whether it was my fault or not! It was just bad luck! I'm hoodooed, that's what!"

"I thought you were asked over to visit Mabel's family at their place in the country," objected his friend with the fuzzy hat.

"I was," admitted the young man with the receding chin. "And I put it to you if that wasn't encouragement. When a girl's family lets her invite a man for a week-end doesn't it look as though everything was all right? And if the girl didn't want you couldn't she sidestep the invitation?"

"Mabel wrote me a nice letter when she asked me and I considered the question before accepting. A man doesn't want to commit himself off-hand, you know. Girls are so frightfully keen these days, and while Mabel never seemed so you never can tell. Still, I had always liked Mabel pretty well, and you know where her dad stands—he's got so much money that they use it for kindling wood. So I made up my mind that I might do lots worse. Besides, I hated to disappoint Mabel. I resolved to ask her to marry me and get it over with."

"Go!" said the man with the fuzzy hat in admiring tones. "I like to see a man with courage!"

"I was a little surprised," said the young man with the receding chin, "to find when I got there that about six other fellows had been invited, and among them that Rollison chap—that particularly obnoxious fellow who never notices anybody, you know. I resolved to show him a few things. So I got Mabel to myself the very first day. She had the garden hose turned on her pet flower bed and I rushed out to help her. She insisted that she preferred to water the flowers herself, but I simply took the hose away from her and naturally she had to stay and watch me use it. I tried to lead up gradually to what I had in mind, but she didn't seem to realize the situation and always ran me off the track. Finally I turned to her in desperation and, throwing out my hands, said—"

"What?" breathlessly inquired his friend.

"Well, whatever I said was completely lost in the subsequent excitement," admitted the young man with the receding chin. "When I threw out my hands I dropped the hose naturally and the nozzle struck on a stone at such an angle that the full force of the stream hit Mabel in the face and drenched her."

"I didn't see her again till evening, but, of course, neither did Rollison. Naturally I sought her out to apologize. She had just taken a chair under the moonlight at one end of the porch and said 'Oh!' in a rather disappointed tone when she looked up and saw me. It sounded as though she had expected some one else."

"Mabel," I began, "I can't tell you how sorry I am—"

"Don't try," she said. But I kept on for an hour. Whenever any one else walked toward the corner I hitched my chair around to prevent the intrusion, so we were not disturbed. Finally she rose and so did I. I stepped closer to her and took her hand, but just as I said 'Mabel' softly she let out a shriek that brought every one running.

"My foot! My foot!" she wailed.

"You brought your great heavy heel down on my foot and nearly killed me!"

"Then that Rollison chap pushed in ahead of me and half carried her to a chair. It was most annoying. But I knew that fate could not defeat a persistent man."

"The next day all of us went for a walk, but despite my efforts I could not get a word with Mabel. I admired her shyness. A girl can always feel a proposal in the air, and it is natural for her to throw obstacles in the way. It only proves her interest. Finally I circled around and reached a stile ahead of the rest. I planned to be there when Mabel arrived and help her over before Rollison could climb the fence and do it himself. It worked beautifully, only as I bobbed up smiling and lifting my hat I ran plump into a hornet's nest in a sassafras bush back of me—and I don't know who helped Mabel over that stile."

"Every one seemed to think it my fault that Mabel was stung by several of the little beasts, too."

"I made up my mind that I would have to write my proposal and send it to her. But just before I left her for home I accidentally overheard Mabel and her father talking."

"Good gracious!" Mabel told him. "Don't blame me if he has kept out of all your bridge games! I told you he could play bridge when you wanted some one to fill out your table, but I didn't guarantee to chain him into a chair! Haven't I endured enough in my constant maneuvers to escape his attempts to propose to me? I've been nearly drowned and poisoned by hornets and my foot was smashed trying to get away from him—and Mr. Rollison ready to slay him at sight! Go away, papa, and don't add to my troubles!"

"Now I leave it to you if I didn't serve Mabel right just to let matters drop and not write that proposal?"

"You did!" agreed the friend with the fuzzy hat.—Chicago Daily News.

A Local Product, Too. "Have you any aptitude for quotations?" asked the literary person of his friend the haberdasher. "Only in my own line of business. To tell the truth, I don't even know how pig iron is quoted this morning."

Speck on Their Black Satchels. Mollie, a light-colored mulatto housemaid who has been in the employ of a South Side family for a number of years recently gave up her position to get married, relates the Kansas City Star. A few days ago she returned and asked to have her old place back. The woman of the house was glad to have her return, but surprised that she came so soon after being married, and questioned her as to her reason for wanting to return. In reply the maid said: "My husband's folks are all jealous of me because I'm so light colored. You know my husband is very dark and all his folks is dark, too, and was mad because he married me. Why, one of his sisters told me, 'You's so bright you make a spot in our family.'"

Counsel of Despair. "I want a piece of meat without any bone, fat or gristle," said the bride, on her first trip to market. "Yes, ma'am," replied the butcher. "I would suggest that you take an egg." —Youth's Companion.

Dr. Temple and Mrs. Temple looked at each other in dismay, then at the clock and the cigars, then at the Wellingtons, then they stammered: "Thank you so much," and sank back. Wellington stared at his wife: "Lutetia, are you sincere?"

"Jimmie, I promise you I'll never smoke another cigar."

"My love!" he cried, and seized her hand. "You know I always said you were a queen among women, Lutetia."

She beamed back at him: "And you always were the prince of good fellows, Jimmie." Then she almost dashed as she murmured, almost shyly: "May I pour you coffee for you again this morning?"

"For life," he whispered, and they moved up the aisle, arm in arm, bumping from seat to seat and not moving it.

When Mrs. Whitcomb, seated in the dining-car, saw Mrs. Little Jimmie pour Mr. Little Jimmie's coffee, she shook on her. She vowed that she would not permit those odious Wellingtons to make tools of her and her Sammy. She resolved to telegraph him about divorcing him, and order him to take the first train west and meet her half-way on her journey home.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

A Duel for a Bracelet. All this while Marjorie and Mallory had sat watching, as kingfishers shadow a pool, the door where through the girl with the bracelet must pass on her way to breakfast.

"She's taking forever with her toilet," sniffed Marjorie. "Probably trying to make a special impression on you."

"She's wasting her time," said Marjorie. "But what if she brings her mother along? No, I guess her mother is too fat to get there and back."

"If her mother comes," Marjorie decided, "I'll hold her while you take the bracelet away from the—the creature. Quick, here she comes now! Be brave!"

Mallory wore an aspect of arrant cowardice: "Er—ah—I—I—"

"You just grab her!" Marjorie exclaimed. Then they relaxed into a hundred of impatient attention. Kathleen floated in and, seeing Mallory, she greeted him with radiant warmth: "Good morning!" and then, catching sight of Marjorie, gave her a "Good morning!" coated with ice. She glanced past and Mallory sat inert, but Marjorie gave him a ferocious look, whereupon he leaped to his feet.

"Oh, Miss—Miss Kathleen."

Kathleen whirled round with a most hospitable smile. "May I have a word with you?"

"Of course you can, you dear boy." Marjorie winced at this and writhed at what followed: "Shan't we take breakfast together?"

Mallory stuttered: "I—I—no, thank you—I've had breakfast."

Kathleen froze up again as she snapped: "With that—train-acquaintance, I suppose."

"Oh, no," Mallory amended, "I mean I haven't had breakfast."

But Kathleen scowled with a jealousy of her own: "You seem to be getting along famously for mere train-acquaintances."

"Oh, that's all we are, and hardly that," Mallory hastened to say with too much truth. "Sit down here a moment, won't you?"

"No, no, I haven't time," she said, and sat down. "Mamma will be waiting for me. You haven't been in to see her yet?"

"No. You see—"

"She cried all night."

"For me?"

"No, for papa. He's such a good traveler—and he had such a good start. She really kept the whole car awake."

"Too bad," Mallory consoled, perfunctorily, then with sudden eagerness, and a trial at indifference: "I see you have that bracelet still."

"Of course, you dear fellow. I wouldn't be parted from it for worlds."

Marjorie gnashed her teeth, but Kathleen could not bear that. She gushed on: "And now we have met again! It looks like Fate, doesn't it?"

"It certainly does," Mallory assented, bitterly; then again, with zest: "Let me see that old bracelet, will you?"

He tried to lay hold of it, but Kathleen giggled coyly: "It's just an excuse to hold my hand." She swung her arm over the back of the seat coquettishly, and Marjorie made a desperate lunge at it, but missed, since Kathleen, finding that Mallory did not pursue the fugitive hand, brought it back at once and yielded it up:

"There—be careful, someone might look."

Mallory took her by the wrist in a gingerly manner, and said, "So that's the bracelet? Take it off, won't you?"

"Never!—it's wished on," Kathleen protested, sentimentally. "Don't you remember that evening in the moonlight?"

Mallory caught Marjorie's accusing eye and lost his head. He made a ferocious effort to snatch the bracelet off. When this onset failed, he had recourse to entreaty: "Just slip it off." Kathleen shook her head tantalizingly. Mallory urged more strenuously: "Please let me see it."

Kathleen shook her head with sophistication: "You'd never give it back. You'd pass it along to that—train-acquaintance."

"How can you think such a thing?" Mallory demurred, and once more made his appeal: "Please, please, slip it off."

"What on earth makes you so anxious?" Kathleen demanded, with sudden suspicion. Mallory was stumped, till an inspiration came to him: "I'd like to—to get you a nicer one. That one isn't good enough for you."

Here was an argument that Kathleen could appreciate. "Oh, how sweet of you, Harry," she gurgled, and had the bracelet down to her knuckles, when a sudden instinct checked her: "When you bring the other, you can have this."

She pushed the bracelet back, and Mallory's hopes sank at the gesture. He grew frantic at being eternally frustrated in his plans. He caught Kathleen's arm and, while his words pleaded, his hands tugged: "Please—please let me take it—for the measure—you know!"

Kathleen read the determination in his fierce eyes, and she struggled furiously: "Why, Richard—Chaucey!—er—Billy! I'm amazed at you! Let go or I'll scream!"

She rose and, twisting her arm from his grasp, confronted him with bewildered anger. Mallory cast toward Marjorie a look of surrender and despair. Marjorie laid her hand on her throat and in pantomime suggested that Mallory should throttle Kathleen, as he had promised.

But Mallory was incapable of further violence; and when Kathleen, with all her coquetry, bent down and murmured: "You are a very naughty boy, but come to breakfast and we'll talk it over," he was so added that he answered: "Thanks, but I never eat breakfast."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Down Brakes! Just as Kathleen flung her head in baffled vexation, and Mallory started to slink back to Marjorie, with another defeat, there came an abrupt shock as if that gigantic child to whom our railroad trains are toys, had reached down and laid violent hold on the Trans-American in full career.

Its smooth, swift flight became suddenly such a spasm of jars, shivers and thuds that Mallory cried: "We're off the track!"

He was sent flopping down the aisle like a bolster hurled through the car. He brought up with a sickening slam across the seat into which Marjorie had been jounced back with a breath-taking slam. And then Kathleen came flying backwards and landed in a heap on both of them.

Several of the other passengers were just returning from breakfast and they were shot and scattered all over the car as if a great chain of human beads had burst.

Women screamed, men yelled, and then while they were still struggling against the seats and one another, the train came to a halt.

"Thank God, we stopped in time!" Mallory gasped, as he tried to disentangle himself and Marjorie from Kathleen.

The passengers began to regain their courage with their equilibrium. Little Jimmie Wellington had flown the whole length of the car, clinging to his wife as if she were Francesca da Rimini, and he Paolo, nitting through inferno. The flight ended at the stateroom door with such a thump that Mrs. Fosdick was sure a detective had come for her at last, and with a battering ram.

But when Jimmie got back breath enough to talk, he remembered the train-stopping excitement of the day before and called out:

"Has Mrs. Mallory lost that pup again?"

Everybody laughed uproariously at this. People will laugh at anything or nothing when they have been frightened almost to death and suddenly relieved of anxiety.

Everybody was cracking a joke at Marjorie's expense. Everybody felt a good-natured grudge against her for being such a mystery. The car was ringing with hilarity, when the porter came stumbling in and paused at the door, with eyes all white, hands waving frantically, and lips flapping like fannel, in a vain effort to speak.

The passengers stopped laughing at Marjorie, to laugh at the porter. Ashton sang out:

"What's the matter with you, porter? Are you trying to crow?"

Everybody roared at this, till the porter finally managed to articulate: "T-t-train rob-rob-robbers!"

Silence shut down as if the whole crowd had been smitten with paralysis. From somewhere outside and ahead came a pop-popping as of fire-crackers. Everybody thought, "Revolvers!" The reports were mingled with barbaric yells that turned the marrow in every bone to snow.

These regions are full of historic terror. All along the Nevada route the conductor, the brakemen and old travelers had pointed out scene after scene where the Indians had slaked the thirst of the arid land with white man's blood. Ashton, who had traveled this way many times, had made himself fascinatingly horrifying the evening before and ruined several breakfasts that morning in the dining-car, by regaling the passengers with stories of pioneer ordeals, men and women massacred in burning wagons, or dragged away to fendish cruelty and obscene torture, staked out supine on burning wastes with eyelids cut off, bound down within reach of rattlesnakes, subjected to every misery that human devilry could devise.

Ashton had brought his fellow passengers to a state of ecstatic excitement, and, like many a recounter of burglar stories at night, had tuned his own nerves to high tension.

The violent stopping of the train, the heart-shaking yells and shots outside, found the passengers already apt to respond without delay to the appeals of fright. After the first hush of dread, came the reaction to panic.

Each passenger showed his own panic in his own way. Ashton whirled round and round, like a horse with the blind staggers, then bolted down the aisle, knocking aside men and women. He climbed on a seat, pulled down an upper berth, and scrambling into it, tried to shut it on himself.

Mrs. Whitcomb was so frightened that she assailed Ashton with fury and seizing his feet, dragged him back into the aisle, and beat him with her fists, demanding that he protect her and save her for Sammy's sake.

Mrs. Fosdick, rushing out of her stateroom and not finding her luscious-eyed husband, laid hold of Jimmie Wellington and ordered him to take to the rescue of her spouse. Mrs. Wellington tore her hands loose, crying: "Let him go, madam. He has a wife of his own to defend."

Jimmie was trying to pour out dying messages, and only spluttering, getting that he had put his watch in his mouth to hide it, though its chain was still attached to his waistcoat.

Anne Gattie, who had read much about Chinese atrocities to missionaries, gave herself up to death, yet rejoiced greatly that she had provided a timely man to lean on and should not have to enter Paradise a spinster, providing she could manage to convert Ira in the next few seconds, before it was everlasting too late. She was begging her first beathen to join her in a gospel hymn. But Ira was roaring curses like a pirate captain in a hurricane, and swearing that the villains should not rob him of his bride.

Mrs. Temple wrung her twitching hands and tried to drag her husband to his knees, crying:

"Oh, Walter, Walter, won't you please say a prayer—a good strong prayer!"

But the preacher was so confused that he answered: "What's the use of prayer in an emergency like this?"

"Waiter!" she

PRETTY THANKSGIVING DAY DINNER TABLE

By ADELE MENDEL.

HOW much easier it is for the hostess of today to prepare for a Thanksgiving dinner than it was for the hostess of a hundred years ago! Then it meant not hours, but weeks of planning, for the hostess had none of the conveniences or labor saving devices that we are so familiar with as necessities today. No indeed, her dinner had to be cooked on an open fire, not on a modern range or gas stove. Electricity would have seemed nothing less than a miracle. The simple utensils used in the home of the present day would have caused the greatest amount of astonishment. A lemon squeezer would have been regarded as a curious object, but then so would have been a food chopper, an egg beater, or a can opener.

The coffee was always roasted and ground at home. There was no prepared mustard, cocoa, vanilla, gelatin or prepared yeast. String beans, lima beans, asparagus or peas were not served in November. Tomatoes were called love apples and were not recognized as a vegetable. Everything was home made, for groceries were not delivered at the house in sealed packages.

There were few house flowers such as we are accustomed to see adorn our tables. The flowers were all of the old-fashioned variety. Orchids were unknown, the chrysanthemums were very small; roses were not like the roses of today, but carnations were used in abundance.

Invitations had to be issued a long time ahead to insure a reply, if the guest resided at any distance. Verily, we have much to be grateful for, when we consider how many wonderful inventions there have been to lighten the housekeeper's labors. Now, when Thanksgiving is celebrated in every state in the Union, there is no one who hasn't something to be thankful for.

Thanksgiving ever is a day of pleasant reminiscences; a day when the family and friends are gathered around the well laden table in a spirit of rejoicing. Hospitality is the characteristic note of the day and it really ought to be a pleasure and a gladness to plan a Thanksgiving dinner.

The housewife of 1912 will be wise if she follows the example of her great grandmother and plans her dinner and table decorations in advance so that she will have little to do on Thanksgiving day.

The decorations for a Thanksgiving table would be very effective if it had for its main decorations the turkey. For, what is a Thanksgiving dinner without a turkey? The table cloth around the edge of the table is trimmed with large sized turkeys cut out of crepe paper in realistic coloring. Paper turkeys hold the place cards. The same bird ornaments the napkins. Small baskets trimmed with chrysanthemums hold the salted almonds. For the center decoration of the table use a large dark red basket filled with ears of corn. The imitation corn and leaves can be made of yellow paper with green paper for leaves. Wheat, oats, fruit, or flowers or anything in keeping with the harvest idea may be used.

A college girl who has taken up the business of making table souvenirs and decorations has gone to America's early history for the appropriate little things used at Thanksgiving. Taking the year 1630 as the proper period for her charming trifles—the year in which the first Thanksgiving was celebrated in Boston—the clever girl has turned out little puppets dressed as the Pilgrim fathers, Indians and many a fair New England maid known in song and story. She has made crude cardboard houses, covered with log-cabin paper, and for the animals used by the first settlers she goes to the toy store, where suitable and cheap trifles are found.

For the finer Thanksgiving tables she arranges, her New England scenes of those long ago times are as instructive as they are beautiful. The center of the table is always used for the picture she wishes to represent, and there, with her quaint dolls, her Puritan maids and men, her primitive homes, wigwags, wild turkeys, deer, ducks, cannon and what-not, she will turn out pictures as amusing to grown-ups as to children.

Some of this brilliant woman's notions could be copied at home, with very little expenditure. The history books give any number of "pretty scenes to copy from and by choosing the least elaborate the work would be lessened and the effect be just as good.

For instance, there was always a blockhouse in ye olden days, with cannon before it, and turkeys were roasted in the open air, and there were piles of corn when the harvest was in and so on. In a farm home it would be easy to have dried ears of corn about, shucks and all showing, and in a city ears of popcorn could be used.

Take the blockhouse scene and prepare the picture for the possible invasion of hostile Indians. Cover a square cardboard box with brown paper for the log house; trace over it with black crayon a rude imitation of logs, cut slit windows, put on a rough chimney and leave the door half open, with a little doll, dressed as a Puritan child, peeping out. About the blockhouse group some toy pine trees, one or two Puritan men, two maids and maybe a friendly Indian with feathered headdress. The maids and child are dressed in grave gray gowns with white kerchiefs and caps, and the white men wear buff-colored knee-breeches, red waistcoats and green or gray tail coats. The good Indian wears war paint and, maybe, drags a cloak of fur behind him. Dolls for the purpose can be had at 10 cents apiece—four inches high—and they could be dressed in tissue paper.

They are held to the table with long black headed pins, or rather to a board upon which the scene is set and afterward covered over in suitable manner. One of the metal turkeys, sold now in all the candy and toyshops for Thanksgiving, could appear in the scene and also a deer and a fat goose. The birds and animals can be had from five cents up.

All the things mentioned in these dramatic times could be symbolized with pretty trifles bought at the ten cent store or elsewhere, for favors. The following things are seen and are all suitable: Papier mache pumpkin pies, candy boxes made like ears of corn, kegs, cannon, Indian baskets and tomahawks. The kegs were always a part of the New England Thanksgiving, and they held root beer—made by the Indian women—and molasses, which was used for the pies famous to this day.

Another amusing idea for a Thanksgiving table scene could be a demonstration of the great progress of the years. This scene might hold a paper aeroplane, an automobile, little French bandboxes and dolls dressed to depict the various races that have invaded the country. There could be a negro, a Chinaman, a Russian Cossack, an Indian laborer, a German, a Frenchman and so on. There should be little American flags for souvenirs or trimmings, flag candy boxes and plenty of red, white and blue ribbon tying souvenirs, place cards and menus.

The place cards or menus used must correspond to the two periods. Little printed cards with very pretty symbols, old and new, can be had very cheaply. For the invitation there are also some Puritan-father postcards that could be used, while the modern invitation could be written on a postal giving any famous American object or scene. Aeroplane cards would be suitable.

For a child's Thanksgiving party there are bushels of pretty trifles that cost next to nothing. The metal turkeys, deer, pasteboard cannon, flags, snapdragons and airships are all reproduced in tiniest shape. The wee things which are sometimes put in a Jack Horner pie cost from one cent up to five.

All the candy holders made for the season show some red, white and blue, while the paper napkins and table covers have just the right things in their rough picture borders.

Thanksgiving Place Cards. A pretty place card shows a big brown hand-painted turkey, wearing a necklace of bright red cranberries. Other cards show fat little children driving turkeys made of real feathers glued to the card. Hand-painted bunches of celery, ears of corn, fruit and vegetables, each cut from cardboard in the right shape, are made to match vegetable centerpieces. Then there are tiny paper doll cards, hand-painted and wearing gowns of yellow tulle. Real doll children, carrying yellow-tulle chrysantheums, are made to fasten to vineglasses by means of a hidden wire arrangement.

For the finer Thanksgiving tables she arranges, her New England scenes of those long ago times are as instructive as they are beautiful. The center of the table is always used for the picture she wishes to represent, and there, with her quaint dolls, her Puritan maids and men, her primitive homes, wigwags, wild turkeys, deer, ducks, cannon and what-not, she will turn out pictures as amusing to grown-ups as to children.

A REAL THANKSGIVING

By DONALD ALLEN.

"I was a girl I wouldn't go walking too far," said old Uncle Robert as a girl of 20 passed him on her way down to the gate of the farmhouse.

"And why not?" she asked as she almost came to a pause.

"Well, according to my ideas, it's going to rain and snow and blow and hail, and when the storm does break she's going to be a buster. You live in the city and don't know anything about the storms we have out here. I've seen it when we didn't have a train along for four straight days."

"I wanted to go to the postoffice to mail a letter."

"It's three miles there and back, and if I was you I'd put it off. Maybe somebody'll be passing that you can send it by. Tomorrow's Thanksgiving, you know, and we are going to have the awfulest, biggest, nicest dinner anybody ever set down to. It's in your honor, you know. There'll be a turkey, a duck and a chicken; there'll be cranberry sass, pumpkin pies, currant jelly, sweet cider and apple dumplings; I think I'll just walk a mile, anyhow," said the girl as she opened the gate and passed down the highway towards the village and the railroad depot.

"And if you come home as wet as a hen don't say I didn't warn ye. It's going to come, and it's going to be a buster."

Half an hour later, a middle-aged woman with a motherly face and voice came out on the steps and asked:

"Pa, do you reckon it's goin' to storm?"

"Sure as ducks."

"Where's Minnie?"

"Oh, she's gone for a santer. I give her warning. What's she wantin' to mail a letter for? I hain't mailed a letter nor got one in 20 years, and I guess I'm about as well off as most folks. I was going to ask her but forgot it."

"Tomorrow's Thanksgiving, You Know."

"Don't you ask her a word about it," cautioned the wife as she came down to him. "I guess Minnie's got something on her mind, and it hain't none of your business. I reckon she'll tell me when she gets ready. Leastwise, I hain't goin' to do any pumping."

"Something on her mind, eh? That's funny. Didn't know that girls ever had anything on their minds except new clothes. Is that why she come visitin' us all of a sudden?"

"None of your business! I guess my own sister's daughter can come and see me any time she takes a notion, and that without writin' ahead. What's on her mind, as high as I can make out, is about a young man. If I don't tell you you'll worry the shirt off your back. Pa, you got to be as poky as an old maid. You can't see a pillar-case flopping on the clothes line but what you want to know all about it. Yes; it's about a young man. They are engaged, and they've had a falling out, and she's sorter run away from him to find out if he really cares for her."

"And she's got scared about it and has written him a letter to tell where she is!" queried the husband.

"Go on! It's probably a letter to her ma, though I didn't see it nor ask. I hope she didn't start for town. It's going to storm for sure, and there hain't but one house on the road where she could find shelter. Look down the road and see if you can see her."

"Can't see hide nor hair of any girl," reported Uncle Robert after going out to the highway and taking a long look.

An hour later, with both uncle and aunt fidgeting about their girl visitor, the black clouds that had been banking up for hours began to advance before a breeze that soon strengthened into a gale. In five minutes the gray afternoon had become twilight. In fifteen there was cold rain and lively hail, and Uncle Robert was blown into the kitchen to exclaim:

"I told her it was going to be a buster, and that she mustn't blame me. I started down the road to meet her, but, Lordy, what a storm! I couldn't get ten rods at I was to die for it!"

Miss Minnie had reached town and mailed her letter and started back again when the storm broke. Before it came, she thought she could make out a human figure on the road ahead of her, but wasn't sure. The very first gust picked her up and turned her around and deposited her under a roadside tree. She remained there until the gale began to whip the branches off, and then let go her hold and ran for it. There were limbs falling all about her, and the hail-stones peppered her until she ran almost blindly. She hadn't gone a quarter of a mile when, as she crouched and covered her face, she was struck by a flying limb and knew no more.

It was the dim sight of the girl and the scream she uttered when hit, that sent the man who was clinging to the roadside fence back into the highway. He bent over the unconscious form and picked it up and staggered back to the fence and followed it until he saw a light and found the gate of a farmhouse. His lusty calls for help soon brought out a man, and the senseless burden was carried into the house and received by a woman.

"I don't know who she is, but I found her in the road," explained her rescuer. "There is blood on her hair, and I think she was struck down."

"We'll do all we can," replied the man and the woman together. "But you mustn't look for much. We are mighty poor folks. We hain't got no camphor nor whisky, and as for getting a doctor out from town—it can't be done tonight."

The girl was carried into the only bedroom and laid on the only bed, and when her wet clothing had been removed and she was between the sheets, the woman got a cloth and a basin of water and washed away the blood and whispered to the stranger:

"I don't think she's bad hurt. She's just fainted away with the scare of it. When she opens her eyes I'll tell her to go to sleep, and she'll be all right in the morning."

"Do you think it's some young lady from the village?" asked the stranger of the farmer as they talked in whispers in the outer room.

"No, I don't reckon so. I reckon it's that new girl that arrived at Turner's a few days ago. I saw her going towards the village two hours ago."

"Arrived at Turner's! Say, man, are you sure? Is it a strange girl to the neighborhood?"

"I've heard say it was Uncle Bob's niece, and that she come from the city. What ails you, stranger? Does this storm upset you?"

It wasn't the storm. Percy Kincaid had quarreled with the girl he loved and had asked to be his wife. It was about nothing, almost, as most lovers quarrels are, but pride on either side held off a reconciliation until the lover finally learned that Miss Minnie had gone on a journey and left no word for him. She was going to spend Thanksgiving week in the country. Within three days she was making every effort to locate her, that he might patch up a peace. He had succeeded. He was going to throw himself on her mercy and ask Uncle Robert for a place at his Thanksgiving table.

The storm grew fiercer as the night advanced. The girl woke and then slept a dreamless sleep, and the lover had long hours in which to ponder and think. When another day came even the cattle could not face the storm nor man move from his door. It was Thanksgiving day. At Uncle Robert's there was a feast to be spread; at Bradley's there was hardly better than poorhouse fare. But the victim of the accident was no longer in bed, and the rescuer no longer cared about the weather, and the farmer folks looked at each other and smiled and whispered:

"Even if we had a turkey and cranberry sauce I don't believe they'd eat a single mouthful. They've just sorter found each other, and are tickled to death."

And when at last they could make their way to Turner's, and Uncle Bob stammered and Aunt Harriet cried for joy, Miss Minnie asked in a way that was almost heartless:

"Why do you take on so? I never had such a lovely Thanksgiving in all my life!"

ALL SHOULD GIVE THANKS

Every Life and Every Heart in the Land Has Some Occasion for Gratitude.

In their proclamations designating tomorrow as Thanksgiving day, the president and the governors of states have set forth in dignified and due order reasons why the people of this country should give thanks.

But every life and every heart in all the land has some occasion for special utterance of gratitude. Formal, official proclamations from the highest executive authorities may furnish suggestions for equally formal prayers in churches tomorrow, prayers in acknowledgment of divine favors received by us as a people and as individuals.

Cruden condenses the teachings of New Testament writers into his definition of thanksgiving: "An acknowledging and confessing, with gladness, the benefits and mercies which God bestows either upon ourselves or others."

As "every heart knoweth its own sorrow," so every life knows its own occasion for gratitude. And no heart has so great sorrow and no life so sad mourning but reason for thanksgiving, is manifested in just those "benefits and mercies."

HEROIC EFFORT TO EXTERMINATE DREAD BROWNTAIL AND GYPSY MOTH IN THE EAST

One of the Most Successful Devices Yet Used is the Hannagan "Moth-Pot"—Electric Company Makes Experiments With Arc Lamp Especially Arranged.

Although the work has not attracted a great deal of attention outside of New England, it is nevertheless a fact that the United States department of agriculture has been expending about $100,000 annually in New Hampshire in an heroic effort to exterminate the dread browntail and gypsy moth pests.

In addition, the legislatures of New Hampshire and Massachusetts have set aside smaller sums to help on the work. Both pests continue to advance over an everwidening area, so that it will not be long before other states which now neglect the opportunity of warding off trouble will find themselves engaged in the same battle.

The widest variety of devices for killing off the pests have been put into service. One of the most successful of these was the so-called Hannagan "moth pot," which consisted in the essence of a flaring pot and a quantity of burning crude oil. At first these were set upon the ground in commons and other open places but later they were hung from the mast arms of street lamps, the best location being found to be about three feet back from the arc lamp, measured along the mast arm, and three feet below. Even at this distance, however, the heavy black smoke from the smudge soiled the arm and was in several ways disagreeable.

The Manchester Traction, Light and Power company had meanwhile been experimenting with an arc lamp arrange to accomplish the same ends as the moth pots and the accompanying drawing shows the type of globe which was finally adopted after considerable experimenting. It is used on 72 volts, 7 1/2 ampere, series alternating arc lamps, fitted with clear glass inner globes. From the drawing the glass workers manufactured a mold and from this 605 of the special globes were cast. By the terms of the contract, the electric light company was to cart these globes to the lamps, put them on, take away and store the regular globes, empty the globes daily, keep track of the quantity caught and, at the end of the moths' flight, replace the old globes and store the special globes until the next year.

The globes were put on with the cut away part up, so that the moths fluttering around the light would fall into the bowl. The first gathering was made July 8. The flight, which usually continues about eight days, this year lasted 15 days. Between July 8 and July 23, there were collected from the globes 107,516 bushels within the city and 127,116 bushels from the globes placed at two of the summer resorts.

The theory upon which the device works is that the globes shall be cut off at such a height that the moths can easily fly inside but be unable conveniently to fly out. The shape shown was found to be best when used with the regulation type of oblique angled reflectors. Examination of the moths when taken from the globes showed them not to be badly burned, except occasionally on the head. Death seemed to have resulted from general suffocation from the intense heat or from impact against the walls of the death chamber.

Two different quarts were counted, one moth at a time, and it was found that there were just about 1,600 moths to a quart. Of these about two-thirds were females. This fact could easily be determined from the moths as taken from the globes, but careful observations were made of those which thickly encrusted the street lamp poles, trees, sides of buildings, etc., and gave good evidence that this percentage was accurate enough for all purposes. In a bushel there were, of course, 51,200 moths, according to these figures, or 5,494,500 in all. If 60 per cent. were females, the figure would be 3,296,640. In a year the development resulting from the eggs deposited by each female would be about 400, so that if the quantity mentioned had not been destroyed in the electric light globes, they would have produced in excess of 1,318,656,000 other moths to get busy on the trees in 1913. Adding to this figure the number that would be developed by the females captured at the two summer resorts, Lake Massabesic and Pine Island Park, the total of 1,474,560,000 is reached, a truly astounding figure.

In collecting the moths from the globes the lamp trimmer simply placed his hand over the opening at the bottom, removed the globe and dumped the contents after measurement into two-bushel bags of close woven goods. Measuring was done by means of a ten-quart flaring pail, suitably marked on the sides. The condition of the employees who attended to this job was shocking, as they were covered with rash from their toes to the top of their heads. Some of them found it necessary to bathe in creoline or strong yellow soap baths five or six times a day.

When thrown loosely in, such a globe as that shown would hold about 10 1/2 quarts of moths. However, after a globe got about half filled the moths seemed to stew from the heat of the lamp, so that about half way through the heap would be wet and at the bottom "muddy." Several of the inner globes gave way under the confinement of the heat and were badly distorted and discolored. Sometimes the globes would be so full that the moths would be heaped up and on most of the heavy catch days they were almost full to the brim. From the globes the moths were taken to one of the generating stations, where they were thrown into the furnaces and burned.

The theory upon which the device works is that the globes shall be cut off at such a height that the moths can easily fly inside but be unable conveniently to fly out. The shape shown was found to be best when used with the regulation type of oblique angled reflectors. Examination of the moths when taken from the globes showed them not to be badly burned, except occasionally on the head. Death seemed to have resulted from general suffocation from the intense heat or from impact against the walls of the death chamber.

MADE A CLEAN JOB OF IT

First Time Old Gentleman Had Eaten a Crab, and He Left Nothing on the Dish.

A jolly old boy, from the Midlands entered into one of the hotels at the seaside, and, seeing on the slab on the right a crab dressed on the shell with legs, claws and parsley ranged round, said to the landlady:

"What d'ye call that?"

"Crab," was the answer.

"Looks good," he said; "and give us a pint of ale."

Bread and butter was added and the dinner left to his dinner. In about an hour the genial landlady entered the dining room to see if his guest was getting on all right. He found him chawing up the last claw, the chawer red in the face, but beaming.

"Like the crab, sir?"

"Yes; he was capital. I never tasted one afore. But I think you baked 'em a little too long; the crust was hard. Let's have another pint."

He had eaten the lot—shell, claws and all complete.—London Tit-Bits.

GOOD NAME.

Preston—Why?

Weston—I can never win on them.

Some Names Easily Remembered.

"Now, children," asked the teacher, addressing the class in United States history, "who was it that shot Roosevelt?"

"Why—erah!" hesitatingly answered the brightest pupil. "I think it was a crank by the name of Swan or Prank, or something like that."

"What surgeon attended the colonel, and—"

Thereat they all arose and exclaimed as with one voice: "Scurry L. Terrell, M. D.!"

From this we should learn that an unforgettable name is rather to be chosen than great riches.

Stretching It Some.

The men were boasting about their rich kin. Said one: "My father has a big farm in Connecticut. It is so big that when he goes to the barn on Monday morning to milk the cows he kisses us all goodbye, and he doesn't get back till the following Saturday."

"Why does it take him so long?" the other asked.

"Because the barn is so far away from the house."

"Well, that may be a pretty big farm, but compared to my father's farm in Pennsylvania your father's farm ain't no bigger than a city lot!"

"Why, how big is your father's farm?"

"Well, it's so big that my father sends young married couples out to the barn to milk the cows, and the milk is brought back by their grandchildren."

NOT SO MUCH CHANGE

EXPERIENCES OF TWO WOMEN WHEN THEY MOVED.

Each Found They Had Done a Whole Lot of Unnecessary Worrying as to How Their Furniture Was Going to Look.

"I moved in the summer," remarked a Brooklyn woman. "I didn't move very far, but it makes a great difference. I moved from the rather cramped and semi-dark first floor of our apartment up to the top floor, flooded with sunlight and swimming in fresh air. Now, just before I moved one of my best friends came to see me—a woman with whom I'm so intimate that she and I never hesitate to say to one another exactly what we think. 'I suppose you're going to buy a lot of new furniture. When you get these old things of yours up into that sunshine above there and spread out into so much more space you will see how shabby and inadequate it all is and you'll have to replace it.'"

"Now, I was rather fond of my old furniture and I didn't at all relish the idea of losing it or of spending money for new."

"I moved. Then another intimate friend called to see me. She looked around at all my things with their very souls visible in the bright new light and all spread out conspicuously as they never had had to be down below in the smaller apartment. As I waited for more criticism she turned to me beamingly and said: 'How fine your furniture looks up here. It has a chance to be shown right. I never realized how well it looked down in that little apartment where you didn't have room to display it and where it was too dim to let anyone appreciate it. It makes all the difference in the world to bring it out into the good sunshine.'"

"It is," answered one of her hearers. "I had an experience similar to it earlier in the year, and I think women who contemplate moving to larger quarters and dread the expense of a lot of new furniture should know of it. We moved from a tiny, narrow, ugly house in a row to a big detached house. In the old place the furniture looked shabby and infatigable and we were always dissatisfied, though we knew it had cost a good deal in the beginning. It had to be put in stiff rows, because there would have been no room for us to walk around, otherwise. The cumbersome pieces we had brought from the big house we had originally lived in looked hideous. The place we were moving to looked so much larger that everyone said we should have to buy quantities of things to fill it. My husband, even, wanted to sell most of our 'old truck,' as he called it, and start in brand new, but I convinced him that we could not possibly afford that, so we furnished things up as well as possible, closed our eyes as they were removed, and then set about fixing the new house."

"The first thing we discovered was that we had enough. There were things for every room. I revealed in spreading out, for a change, and found I could make the stiff-looking old-fashioned article take on new airs of attraction and fit comfortably into big, irregular rooms, where they had stuck out resentfully in ugly rows of straightness before. I am not raving about my home, for I know it has many defects and if I had plenty of money I should make many improvements, but I do know that in my new big sunny rooms everything we formerly half-despised looks far better than ever it did before. And positively all we have had to buy has been a couple of chairs that we had been intending to get for a year past, and a few rugs to replace our heavy old carpets—which I refused to put down."

GIVE AIR OF DISTINCTION

That the Braided Waistcoat Is to Remain Will Be Welcome Intelligence.

Braided waistcoats are in again and on many they remain in favor, for better than any other accessory they dress up and give distinction to a plain tailor-made suit or to a simply made silk frock. The model which made the hit belongs to one of the most elegant of the season, and is a clever woman can duplicate it. The waistcoat is merely a sleeveless bodice of white silk, fastening in the back, its neck slightly rounded out and its front elongated into a square and its front extending half-way to the base of the hips. Double rows of narrow colored silk soutache running straight across the front of the waistcoat, form stripes which are filled in with other rows of the braid set on in scallop or pointed effect. The new waistcoat must always be belted from below the arms across the front.

Selection of Hangings. In selecting draperies and hangings avoid large figured materials. Light walls and hangings will make the small room seem large. A pillow or two and a rug of the predominant color of the characterless room will brighten such a room into a tinge of beauty.

Two Materials Used. Combination of checked and plain materials will be much in vogue this fall and coming winter. Checked skirts will be worn with plain jackets, checked material forming cuffs, collar and belt.

Social Forms and Entertainments

How to Raise Money. Our Sunday school class, consisting of eight girls about 15 years of age, wish to donate some money to our new church. Please suggest to us how we could raise this money.—Maple Leaf.

There are many ways to make money. Not knowing the circumstances in your case, it is hard to suggest. I attended a very clever "experience" meeting, where each girl had made a dollar by her own efforts during the summer vacation. Of course, the dollar limit was not obligatory, but all had to make 100 cents.

One girl made current jelly and sold it to her friends at so much a glass; another pressed her brother's trousers; one stopped buying ice cream soda, and one saved carfare.

You might have one or two sales on Saturday afternoon for housewives, having all sorts of home-cooked delicacies. I am sure with eight clever girls the new church will receive a liberal donation.

A Difficult Question. Your advice has helped more than one girl, so I come to you for the first time, hoping to be helped also. I have been engaged to a young man for a year, but we do not feel able to marry now and probably will not for two or three years. What we want to know is, is it right for us to still be engaged, knowing this? We have talked of breaking the engagement, but as yet we have not, not knowing which is best to do. I do not believe in long engagements. We are both anxious to do the right thing, whatever that is.—Unhappy.

Now don't be unhappy about the situation, but just agree this way: break the engagement with the full consent of you both, then when the time comes that circumstances will permit the marriage, why do it. You are perfectly right about long engagements. They are not fair. You should both feel perfectly free; some one else may come into both your lives, you cannot tell.

A Wedding Supper. We are about to give a wedding luncheon, and cannot decide what to serve that would be dainty and yet elaborate. The supper or luncheon to be served at 8 p. m., and we would like to have courses, and desire you to arrange the menu. We want to elaborate an affair as you think would be in keeping. One thing that I had better mention that may assist you in arranging the menu is that we wish to serve cold turkey for the meat.—Mother.

At that hour you should serve a supper, not a luncheon, which is a middle of the day function. Serve cold turkey, escalloped oysters, hot rolls, olives, celery, cranberry jelly, then a fruit salad, cheese straws, ice cream in individual forms, coffee and the wedding cake.

To Entertain Informally. Can you suggest some way of entertaining a party of young people between the ages of 20 and 30, very informally? There will be about 12 in the party. Also what would you suggest for simple refreshments, and prizes, if they be awarded?—X. C. L.

Did you ever hear of a really new method of entertaining? Nearly every novelty is only something old done in a new way. I think cards are the best in most cases, with perhaps a little contest at the end while the hostess sees to refreshments. The other day I saw a jolly hour spent in guessing what flowers each guest represented by wearing some article to indicate the blossom. The rose, peony, violet, tiger lily, pansy, etc., were there.

Marking the Bridal Silver. Is silver to be given a bride always engraved with the initials of her maiden name? Is her first name permissible to use?—M. L.

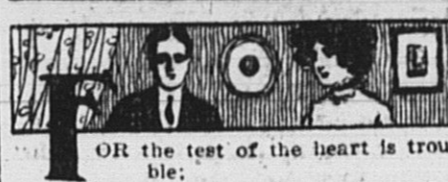

Yes, both silver and linen bear the initials of the bride. Near and dear friends sometimes use the first name, and sometimes a pet cognomen is engraved on a personal gift. This is done on silver picture-frames which are much in vogue at present, presumably to hold the husband-elect's photograph.

The Proper Thing to Do. Kindly tell me the proper way of eating a club sandwich in a restaurant, also whether by-fillon is slipped from the cup or eaten with a spoon?—Country Girl.

A club sandwich is eaten with a fork, the toast, if very dry, may be broken and eaten with the fingers. Bouillon is taken from a spoon except the last few swallows which may be taken from the cup by lifting with one of the handles and rising the cup to the lips.

MORE PAPER BAG COOKERY.

Tomatoes Baked in Small Paper Bags.—Wash the tomatoes, lay them in greased paper bags. It is nice to allow a bag for each tomato and serve them in the bag. Bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes. They should be tender, without being broken. The flavor of tomatoes baked this way is so much better that it is worth trying.

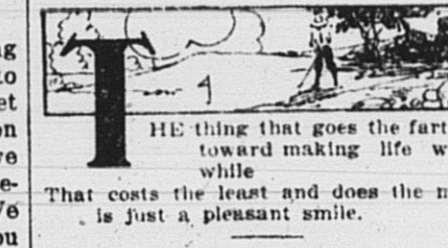

Stuffed Onions.—Parboil a sufficient number of medium-sized onions for the meal, put them into cold water, drain and, when cold, remove the centers. Fill the onions with a savory stuffing or chopped ham, or nuts or bits of sausage; anything that will make a stuffing of sufficient flavor. Place in a buttered bag with a little water and butter, and bake for three-quarters of an hour. Remove from the bag to a hot vegetable dish, sprinkle with salt and pepper and serve with the sauce from the bag poured around them.

Baked Potatoes.—Parboil for ten minutes a sufficient amount of potatoes for the family, then place in a buttered paper bag with a few tablespoons of butter. Bake for half an hour, then tear open the bag, sprinkle with parsley and serve from the bag, placed on a platter. Salt should be added to the potatoes before putting them in the bag. The flavor of potatoes baked in this manner is really surprising to those who have never eaten them.

A fish steak may be stuffed and laid in a paper bag and baked, making a most elegant dish.

Liver, previously parboiled and cooked in a paper bag, would never be recognized as the same dish which we so often serve on our tables. Lay the liver in the bag, and on these pieces of calf's liver, which have been well scalded in boiling water, season and fold the bag; lay on the rack in a hot oven and bake for twenty minutes or until the bag is a golden brown. Slide the bag off on a hot platter and carry to the table before opening.

Pigeons, squabs and small game are delicious baked in paper bags. Stuff wild duck, after parboiling, with a bunch of celery or an onion, and put into the buttered bag. Bake in a hot oven for twenty to thirty minutes.

WHAT TO EAT.

He is of all men miserable who enjoyeth not his food.

Spanish Stew.—Buy beef ribs at the price your butcher insists on asking; put them, after a thorough wiping, into a pot with cold water, a peeled and sliced onion and a half can of tomatoes, a red pepper well minced, and five whole cloves. Simmer gently for three hours, setting on the back part of the range. Thicken with browned flour and serve. Three pounds of beef ribs is sufficient for a family of six.

A little chopped ham left from dinner, added to a white sauce and used on creamed potatoes, makes a very appetizing dish.

Beans and Bacon.—Soak a pint of beans over night and cook in fresh water until tender the next morning. Just before serving add a seasoning of cream, salt and pepper and serve hot. Bacon cut in dice and fried, the beans added and cooked five minutes, is also a nice way to serve them.

Potato Croquettes.—Take a cup and a half of mashed potatoes and mix with a tablespoonful of butter and the yolk of an egg. Season with salt and pepper and milk to moisten. Mold into croquettes, make a hole in each end and stuff with a little green pepper which has been fried in butter. Dip the croquette in egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Banana Pie.—Fill a dish with alternate layers of sliced bananas and bread crumbs, beginning with the crumbs and ending with the banana. Pour in rich milk enough to fill the spaces, dot with bits of butter and bake twenty minutes.

Depends. "What do you think about wigs?" "That sometimes they are a costly luxury and sometimes a bald necessity."

More Fitting. "What's the name of this place?" "Tarrytown." "Thank you. Judging from the number of village loafers about here, it ought to be called 'Tarry-at-the-Station.'"

Lawyer, However, Qualified Admission With a Remark That Had Unkind Sound.

The jury was hearing the closing arguments in a damage suit before Judge Ben M. Smith, in which slander was alleged. The attorney for the plaintiff had been directing his broadsides against the defendant for his show of ingratitude, when the latter's counsel objected.

"Gratitude is inspiring but not a constitutional requirement," interposed the objector, who had borrowed several law books from the other lawyer some time before.

"One look at your face convinces me that you are right," said the first lawyer. "If gratitude were a constitutional requirement you couldn't be a citizen."

RASH SPREAD TO ARMS

759 Roach Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.—"At first I noticed small eruptions on my face. The trouble began as a rash. It looked like red pimples. In a few days they spread to my arms and back. They itched and burned so badly that I scratched them and of course the result was blood and matter. The eruptions festered, broke, opened and dried up, leaving the skin dry and scaly. I spent many sleepless nights, my back, arms and face burning and itching; sleep was purely and simply out of the question. The trouble also caused disfigurement. My clothing irritated the breaking out."

"By this time I had used several well-known remedies without success. The trouble continued. Then I began to use the sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Within seven or eight days I noticed gratifying results. I purchased a full-sized cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and in about eighteen or twenty days my cure was complete." PUTNAM FADELESS DYES

Calumet Ends "Bad Luck."

Remember when you were a youngster, what a trial-baking day was? If Mother was lucky, everything went finely—but if she had "bad luck" her cakes and her pies and her bread were failures. Her success in baking seemed to depend almost altogether on "luck."

Nowadays there's no such thing as "baking luck." At least, not in the kitchens of the up-to-date cooks. Simply because Calumet Baking Powder has made baking a sure success. It has made inexperienced cooks able to bake perfectly, and day after day it is saving hundreds of dollars' worth of time and materials by doing away with costly failures.

Calumet Baking Powder is the purest baking powder made—and guaranteed not only to BE pure, but to stay pure in the CAN and in the BAKING. Calumet has twice been officially judged the BEST baking powder made—receiving the highest awards at the World's Pure Food Expositions in Chicago (1907) and in Paris (1912). Adv.

BREVITIES

BRIDGEWATER—Hog cholera has attacked the hogs on the farm of Robert McHenry and so far he has lost eight from the disease.

ANN ARBOR—A branch of the National Federation of Musicians was formed in this city Friday evening, with a charter membership of 30.

MUNITH—John Earl's house barely escaped burning down one morning recently, but by prompt action of the family it was saved with slight damage.

JACKSON—If present plans of the postmaster general carry, Jackson will probably be one of a list of cities which will have a motorcycle brigade of letter carriers.

PINKNEY—Forty-six deer licenses have been issued in this county. None were taken out by Putnam parties but Hamburg, Unadilla and Marion are well represented.—Dispatch.

SALINE—Tuesday of last week was the second time Saline village has voted on the Bonding for waterworks and the proposition carried by 24 majority; 235 voted yes, 114 voted no and three votes were void, 113 women were among the voters.—Observer.

ANN ARBOR—Sarah and Mary Horton, aged 14 and 12 respectively, were taken to the Adrian Industrial school for girls Friday, following investigations by the juvenile authorities in this city. The girls are daughters of a woman living near the university hospital and employed at the Allen hotel.

YPSILANTI—Postmaster Richard Owen has just received a letter from the secretary of the treasury at Washington stating that the new postoffice in Ypsilanti would be at the corner of Adams and Congress streets. No word has been received, however, as to when building operations will be commenced.

ANN ARBOR—On motion of Prosecutor Burke Judge Kline Friday afternoon put over the case of the people against Theodore Asch of Salem till the December term of court. Asch is charged with incest, the complaining witness being his stepdaughter, Lena Pritzkow. It is because of her condition that the case has been postponed.

YPSILANTI—Philo Ferler, 92 years old, a member of the first Ypsilanti council and a pioneer of this city, died Friday. He came to this city in 1867 and for a number of years conducted a foundry here. He was a member of several lodges. Ferler is survived by a widow; one son, Chas. T., and two daughters, Mrs. Lucy Orcutt and Miss Gertrude, all of this city.

DEXTER—One of Webster's boys, who is something of a gardener, had an interesting and profitable experience with tomatoes the past season. He planted a piece of ground 12 feet wide by 6 rods long, and it yielded at the rate of more than 800 bushels per acre. Besides what the family used he sold 23 bushels.—Leader.

MANCHESTER—The poultry association is planning of having a fine show next month. Besides poultry they will have an exhibit of apples, corn, etc., if the farmers will "come along" with the goods and we hope they will. It would be a good thing to make selections now of choice samples of apples, corn, etc. An exhibition of these and other products will be of interest and benefit to this village and surrounding country and should be well patronized.—Enterprise.

ANN ARBOR—Three students were arrested here early Sunday morning. After the saloons had closed the student went down to the county jail and three eggs and stones at the windows. One student giving his name as Roy Gregory, pleaded guilty in justice court Monday morning and paid the costs of the case and was released. Another who said he was Arthur Hunter, pleaded not guilty but was released. His trial was set for Thursday morning. The other student was released without a hearing. The names the students gave could not be found in the university directory.

ANN ARBOR—Al Lewis of New York and Frank Kelly of Toledo said to be two notorious pickpockets, were arrested in this city as they got off a train from Detroit Saturday morning and placed in jail. The arrest was made by two detective whom Sheriff Stark had hired to come here and watch for crooks that always flock to a big football game. Kelly and Lewis were kept in jail until Monday and then released on suspended sentence by Justice Ritchie. Local officers say that had Lewis and Kelly been allowed to mingle with the crowd on the way to and from the football game a number of people would undoubtedly have lost their pocketbooks.—Times News.

DANGER IN DELAY

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous For Chelsea People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they so often get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health will be gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, gravel and Bright's disease may follow as the kidneys get worse. Don't neglect your kidneys. Help the kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills, which are so strongly recommended right here in Chelsea.

John Lyons, Lincoln St., Chelsea, Mich., says: "From personal experience with Doan's Kidney Pills, I can say that they are a good kidney remedy. My kidneys troubled me for two or three years, the secretions being highly colored and containing sediment. I had pains across the small of my back and was miserable in every way when I commenced taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They entirely relieved me and I have had no cause for complaint since."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.
