PROUD OF HER LITTLE SON

Eskimo Mother Cared Little for Obsdience, but Much for Promising Qualities in Her Boy.

There is no such thing as punishment in an Eskimo household, writes Br. S. K Hutton in "Among the Eskimos of Labrador." And by way of illustration he tells of a small boy whom he met one day clambering down among the rocks and hummocks that strewed the beach, in open deflance of parental commands. He was a sturdy little fellow, and quite a baby. I judged him to be about two years old, certainly not more than three, but as he was clad in the dignity of ridiculous little trousers, I must speak of him as a boy. He seemed to have escaped from his mother, and to making for the beach on an adventure of his own; and when I looked toward the line of houses, I saw a young woman standing at one of the doors and calling to him.

"Kaigit! kaigit!" (Come back!) she shouted.

The child took no notice at all. "Kaiglt, ernera!" (Come back, my son!) cried the mother.

This time the child looked round but he went steadily on barking his Jittle knees against the sharp rock points, and tumbling into holes in his hurry. "Nia! nia!" he screamed.

I half expected the mother to come and fetch him after that, for "Nia!" is anything but polite; it was the equal of a very deflant "Sha'n't" that the child shouted at his mother. She took no notice; she was beaten, and accepted the situation, and turned back into the house to go on with her work.

Meanwhile I was interested in the doings of the small Eskimo boy; there thing they could for his welfare and was some grim purpose in his little to show his friends that he was not mind, and I stayed to see the finish allowed, through neglect, to make way of the play. He scrambled on until with himself. be came to a dog that lay sunning itself behind a stone. Very likely it was one of his father's sledge dogs against which he had a grievance, for he caught it fearlessly by the scruff of the neck and beat it with his tiny fists. The dog, great, powerful brute. could have esten the boy whole; but It made no resistance, simply cowering and whining under the little patting blows. Having fulfilled his purpose, the boy administered a last parting smack, and started on his journey homeward.

I followed the little fellow to his home, and found his mother busily brushing the snow off him, and smiling with pride in her hardy little son. He was disobedient, but what cared she? He was growing strong and fearless; some day he would be able to drive a team of dogs and naddle a kalak, and hunt the deer and seals and wairus. He was a proper Eskimo boy .- Youth's Companion.

The Chelsea Standard WEDEMEYER'S FEAR TO BECOME BURDEN

CONGRESSMAN LOUD DESCRIBES THE TRAGIC DETAILS OF ANN ARBOR MAN'S LAST DAYS.

REALIZED HE MIGHT LIVE MANY YEARS IN AN ASYLUM.

His Leap to Death Made After He Had Knocked Down His Atendant, Says Cengressman Loud.

With the last of his shattered reason, Congressman W. W. Wedemeyer decided further life meant hopeless dependence upon his family.

With that heart-breaking realization still in mind and in what may have been truly the most lucid interval since his breakdown, the physical giant pitched his attendant headlong into a row of steamer chairs, darted behind the reeling figure, and plunged over the top deck rail of the steamer Panama into the Carribbean sea.

It was understood that Congressman N. E. Kendall, of Iowa, was to be Congressman Wedemeyer's stateroom companion, but on boarding the steamship Panama at New York, late in December, for the outward voyage, other arrangements were made, and Congressman George A. Loud, of Bay City, Mich., took the other berth in Mr. Wedemeyer's cabin.

Story of Pitiful Collapse. It is only fair to tell the progress of the Ann Arbor man's increasing mental decline, day by day to the end, in justice to those who did every-

Congressman Loud, who has returned to Washington, fairly heart-sick over the tragedy, has detailed each step to the catastrophe. Congressman Wedemeyer, from the beginning of the voyage, made a confident of the Bay City member, and then, with a sudden evident loss of memory, declared he had no one to look after him nor his money. "Give the money to me," said Congressman Loud, adding "I'll look after you." This reassured Wedemeyer, and he showed no further apprehension about material things after passing over his valuables, including a gold watch left him by a brother.

He talked incessantly of his defeat, and it was always in the same strain: "A few days before election," he said, "I directed my secretary to mail out some government documents, 'horse books' and the like. After elecion I found in the rush of other things, this had not been done. If those books had gone out I would have won."

Told of Suicide Desire.

Mr. Wedemeyer was troubled with sleeplessness. The last night out, on the outward voyage, he woke Congressman Loud about one a. m. and said:

"I've thought about it two or three times and I'd go overboard but I can't just make up my mind to do it." Congressman Loud reported this to the captain of the ship and the surveillance that had been maintained over Wedemeyer since early in the voyage was redoubled. It was this incident that gave rise to the report from Panama that Wedemeyer had Loud declares he made no attempt. Lest he resort to an overdose of drugs, the ship's surgeon had taken sable stole, for example-in the from Wedemeyer a box of pills-opiates-said to have been given him in Ann Arbor to induce sleep. On landing at the isthmus this box was returned to Wedemeyer without Congressman Loud's knowledge.

The afflicted man was taken to a hospital on the isthmus. Each day saw his condition intensified. Daily Wedemeyer usually sat on his bed for a painful surgical operation.

Congressman Loud says the phase was ever in Wedemeyer's thoughts was not his becoming a hopeless burden on his family, of whom he was passionately fond. Not yet 40 years of cil's resolution empowering Ald. W. age, he calculated on at least 40 years more of life—that this should be in an

FAIL TO RAISE BONDS

Admits It's Defeat.

Defeat in their attempt to raise $1,100,000 bonds for liberating the 32 convicted "dynamiters" during the review of their cases by the federal court of appeals, has been admitted by the International Association of Ironworkers and its associate unions. The prisoners' respective local unions have been directed to furnish the individual amounts.

"Too big a proposition for us to finance," is the succinct explanation offered by Joseph E. McClory, acting secretary-treasurer of the international association, representing the local unionists in the bond matter. In a graph of the bond matter of the internation of the in McClory assured the Detroit labor unions that the international associations would combine in an effort to raise the entire $1,100,000.

ARCHBALD IS GUILTY

Senate Helds Commerce Court Jurist Influenced Officers of Erie R. R.

Judge Robert W. Archbald of the commerce court was voted guilty of graft by the United States senate, siting as a court of impeachment.

This means his expulsion from office and that he never again can hold any office of public trust or honor in his nation.

There were 13 articles of impeachment sent by the house of representatives to the senate to be voted on separately by the senators.

It was only necessary that the accused be found guilty on one charge to expel him. Thus when the first vote was announced his fate had been sealed.

A two-thirds vote was necessary on each ballot to sustain the charge then being voted on.

Archbald was found guilty on the first charge by a vote of 68 to 5. The impeachment proceedings against Judge Archbald were started early in 1912, when complaint was made to the interstate commerce commission, and later to Attorney General Wickersham and President Taft. that Judge Archbald had been concerned in influencing rathroads to grant him certain favors in connection with coal land deals, and the setlement of cases involving coal proper-

Other places which are towns today will make the rapid strides that are expected and will become cities. There will be other Edmontons, Calgarys, Reginas and Saskatoons, other places that may in their activity help to convince the outer world of the solidity and permanency of the Canadian West. The country is large and wide and broad and the ends of its great width and length are but the limits of its agricultural area. Its people are progressive, they are strong, there is no enervation there. The country teems with this life, this ambition, this fondness to create and to use the now the dominant men of the North, and they have imbibed of the spirit of the North. Therefore it is fair to say that no portion of the continent will show such wonderful results as Western Canada, and the year 1913 will be but the beginning of a wonderful and great future. And in this future the 200,000 Americans who made it their home, and those who preceded them, will be a considerable portion of the machinery that will be used in bringing about the results

The development of 1913 will not be confined to the prairie provinces. Railway building and city building in British Columbia will be supplemented by the farm, the ranch and the orchard building of that province. Vancouver will make great strides in building, and Victoria, the staid old lady of so many years, has already shown signs of modern ways, and if the progress made in 1912 may be accepted as anything like what it will be in 1913, there will be wonderful developments there. During last year the permits went over the ten million dollar mark and much more is promised for the year now entered upon.-Advertisement.

Took Load Off Mother's Mind.

Six-year-old Dora returned unusually early from school the other day. She rang the door bell. There was no answer. She rang again, a little longer. Still there was no response. A third time she pushed the button, long and hard. Nobody came to the door. Then she pressed her nose against the window screen and in a shrill voice, which carried to the ears of every neighbor on the block, called: "It's all right, mamma. I ain't the installment man!"

DISASTER SEEN IN SINGLE-CROP IDEA

More Profitable to Keep Some Live Stock.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

Single crop farming is disastrous in the long run, as we have seen in the case of wheat, tobacco, peanuts and cotton. Fruit is no exception to the rule. I believe there is a tendency to specialize too highly in fruit growing. and that in many cases the fruit specialist would find it more profitable to grow a certain amount of other crops or keep some live stock. He should make fruit growing his main business but select such other interests as will most affectively fill in the gaps that appear in all kinds of specialized farming. Even though the crops he selects may not in themselves be nearly as profitable as fruit, yet the total profit from the farm for a series of years may be greater, since labor and equipment are kept in use. Some lines of live stock farming are preferable to others because of the fertility the ma nure brings. Certain lines of stock husbandry in which the animals are fed in winter and pastured in summer are practicable in some cases.

SYNOPSIS.

In a spirit of fun Mayor Bedight, a surnemer visitor, is chased through the woods by ten laughing girls, one of whom he catches and kisses. The girls form to do the bidding of one of their number and day for ten days. A legislative measure emposing woman suffrage, which tropped from the mayor's pocket, is used to compel him to obey the mandates of the girls. His first day of service is with May Andrews, who takes him fishing. They are threatened by the sheriff with they are threatened by the sheriff with disers. Miss Vining sees what she con-disers a claudestine meeting between one of the girls and the mayor. The next lay be goes driving with Mabel Arney. They meet with an accident, are arrested and locked up, but escape.

CHAPTER VI.

In the office, smoking one of Mine Host's best cigars, his dignity outraged, sat the sheriff, waiting. Mayor Bedight walked up the hotel tairs, oblivious to his pending fate.

"Let me see," said Mr. Carnegie, thoughtfully, "I once heard a piece called, 'Angels Ever Bright and Fair,' that struck me as mighty pretty. How would that fill the bill?" "Guess again, Andrew. Nothing like

ADELINE'S GREAT FAITH

By SUSANNE PALMER.

When Adeline was nine the Puffler began wondering among themselves whether she still believed in Santa Claus. Adeline had written her usual letter to Santa and stuffed it up the chimney as usual and it had to be extracted with the accompaniment of much soot and emotion by her father. "Thunderation!" Puffle had said, trying to brush the soot from his face and smearing it on the collar. "This is the end of such foolishness! What an awful reach that child has! That letter was almost up on the chimney coping. She can't believe in such foolishness-" "The idea!" said Mrs. Puffle, indignantly. "I think it is perfectly sweet that Adeline still believes in Santa Claus! What is a little soot on your collar compared with nurturing the imagination of your child! You haven't any heart, Henry Puffle! I'm pos itively ashamed of you?" "Well, it's me the soot is on, you'll notice!" said Puffle grimly and ungrammatically. "That makes some difference! Oh, well, if the kid still thinks Santa Claus exists we might as well let her keep on thinking. She'll outgrow it fast enough! ' They labeled nearly all Adeline's gifts "From Santa Claus" and she received them with the same wide eyed wonder which had attended her Christmases from babyhood. "I got this from Santa," the Puffles heard her telling the little girl next door as she exhibited her new doll. "There!" said Mrs. Puffle accusing-"And you would have blighted that innocent faith! It is perfectly beautiful!"

It was the same when Adeline was ten. She babbled merrily about what she wanted Santa Claus to bring her. Resting her limpid eyes upon her wondering parent, she would beseechingly ask Puffle whether he thought if she wrote a very careful note to Santa, he would do such a wonderful thing as bring her a gold bracelet. "If wrote it vur-ry carefully, daddy?" tho repeated in her birdlike tones.

And Puffle's heart melting at the tender trust of his child, he told Adeline that he thought Santa would be unable to resist her appeal. "Only," Puffle added, with memories of the year previous, "it is not necessary, dearie, to chuck your letter quite so high up the chimney!" "Why, daddy!" Adeline protested in round eyed amazement. "It is so much easier for him to get it if it is high up!

He has to reach clear down the chimney, you know!" "To be sure," Puffle stammered. "I don't see," he afterward remarked to his wife. "why she hasn't discovered that Santa Claus is a fake. Some of the other children must know. The little imps are only too glad to give it away when they are disillusioned. They must have told her!" "You don't understand, Adeline!" protested Mrs. Puffle. "You don't realize at all what a sweet, trusting nature her head to suspect! I just want to cry when I think how terrible she will feel when she does find out. I hope it will be a long, long time yet!" "Well, I don't see how it can be, so long as she has eyes and ears and some brains," growled Puffle. Puffle was smitten dumb with amazement when at 11 Adeline, as holiday time approached, began to chirp in her sweet, childish way what

Santa was going to bring her. "He brought my bracelet last year," she said to her parents. "Don't you think he'll bring me a little silver watch this time? He would if he knew how I wanted it. Santa has never disappointed me, never!"

It was the day after Christmas that the Puffles, having raised a window to cool off the house, heard outdoors, just beneath the window, a conversation between Adeline and the little girl next door.

"Do you believe in Santa Claus?" asked the little girl.

Adeline laughed a superior and amused laugh. "Santa Claus?" she repeated. "Goodness me, no! I knew there wasn't any such thing when I was seven, but I've had to keep it up so's not to disappoint dad and mother. They have such a good time thinking I believe in Santa Claus. DREADED TO EAT. A Quaker Couple's Experience.

How many persons dread to eat their meals, although actually hungry nearly all the time!

Nature never intended this should be so, for we are given a thing called appetite that should guide us as to what the system needs at any time and can digest.

But we get in a hurry, swallow our food very much as we shovel coal into the furnace, and our sense of appetite becomes unnatural and perverted. Then we eat the wrong kind of food or eat too much, and there you areindigestion and its accompanying mis-

THE GOVERNOR GOES ABOUT THE STATE DEPARTMENTS

Representative Skeels Delivers a Flery Political Speech in Which All Parties Are Scored More Or Less

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Led by Rep. Baird of Bay, and Rep. Skeers of Oceana, the republicans in the house joined with the progressives and by an overwhelming vote rescindcu the resolution prohibiting legislative recounts. Rep. Skeels, who is one of the new republican members in the house delivered one of the greatest speeches heard in the legislature in recent years. The democrats who voted almost unanimously against legisfative recounts were roundly scored by the Oceana representatives. The national progressives were criticised for their failure to administer the 'square deal" in accordance with the planks of their platform, and the republicans who assisted in passing the original resolution were not spared.

During the state conference of the national progressive party held in this city the members of the republican party, and bull moosers as well, were severely criticised in stinging resolutions for their action in supporting the so-called "Chinese Wall" resolution. Evidently the action of the state con-Rep. Neller and Rep. It is pointed out that the number of people who voted in favor of it AUSTRIA, RUSSIA, ROUMANIA AND last fall is sufficient to warrent its being submitted again, and there are few here who believe that the legislature will turn a deaf ear.

At the regular session two years ago the resolution providing for the DISGUSTING RUMORS POINT TO submission of the equal suffrage amendment did not receive the required two thirds vote of the house, but it was the house that was responsible for its being submitted last fall. During the special session last spring the house passed the immediate effect primary bill in order to place the responsibility on the senate.

In retaliation the senate passed the suffrage resolution with a view to getting the representatives on record. The senators little dreamed that the house would give favorable consideration to the resolution, and when it was adopted by a two-thirds majority, some of the senators who had helped the peace of Europe. it along, nearly collapsed.

Territorial Imbroglio Arising From Balkan War Now Seriously Menaces the Peace of Eurpoe.

Despite the optimistic dispatches from London belittling the Roumania-Bulgarian territorial imbroglio, the Germans believe that situation to be most acute. It is feared that the Balkan situation now seriously menaces

Dispatches from Vienna, Solia and Bucharest said that the Roumanian question completely overshadowed the Turkish war in the public mind. It is said that Austria-Hungary, instead of demobilizing her troops, is calling to the colors more reservists. The dual monarchy, it is said, is in sympathy with Roumania, and this is disquieting because it is known that Russia would back Bulgaria.

Some profess to believe that Roumania, in her demand for Bulgarian territory, was being egged on by Turkish secret diplomacy, the porte thus hoping to escape with smaller sacrinew war cloud.

Powers May Get Fortress.

The capitulation of Adrianople will in the opinion of the Balkan plenipotentiaries, take place within a few days, either directly to the besieging forces or through European pressure. Pending some fresh development, the Balkan delegates are keeping in closest touch with the ambassadors, because they are aware that some of the questions they have most at heart depend almost entirely on the will of the powers.

Meanwhile the ambassadorial conference is doing little, hoping that the Adrianople difficulty will solve itself in some manner, and thus make interference by the powers unnecessary. The action of the ambassadors when anything other than leather is is hampered by the previous agreeused in the manufacture of supposed | ment that they must be unanimous in In apportioning his committees leather footwear, the fact shall be any decision requiring active interfer-

Should the fall of Adrianople still be delayed, now that the conference is suspended, it might become imperative for Europe to intervene; otherwise Europe would lose the prestige entitling her to dictate her will in smaller matters, such as bringing into being an autonomous Albania and partitioning the Aegean islands.

One suggestion is that, failing a better solution, Adrianople might be ceded to the powers, who could transfer it to the allies after permitting the Turkish garrison to leave with the honors of war, and guaranteeing other conditions, as the reservation of reigious and property rights to the Turks and the establishment of special courts for the trials of civil disputes arising between Musselmans.

Take Constantinople.

Some of the delegates from the allied states are of the opinion that now that they have paved the way for the expulsion of Turkey from Europe the powers ought to complete the work by removing Islam from Constantinople and transforming the Turkish capital into an autonomous city under European control, and that they should adopt means to give a really civilized government to Asia Minor.
