Robt Aged Man.

Louis Kline of Milan, 92 years old, was slugged and robbed of $50 in cash by a stranger with whom he became acquainted about noon Monday.

A posse of armed business men pursued a man and arrested him at the point of a pistol after he had crawled under a grain elevator near the railroad tracks. The man arrested denied all knowledge of the affair.

Kline met a stranger on the street Monday and the man accompanied him to a coal yard where Kline purchased some coal, later accompanying the aged man to his home.

Kline declares the stranger went out into the barnyard with him and without warning struck him upon the head and took $50 he had in his pockets. The aged man is in a serious condition.

Improving Their Chelsea Plant.

The AuSable Electric Co. have just completed a number of improvements at their Chelsea sub-station. The interior of the building, floor and machinery have been repainted. Steel lockers have been installed for the use of the employes and also one for tools. Another improvement will be either a steel or asbestos telephone booth to replace the wood one that is in use at present. All wood so far as possible, has been removed and the station is to all appearance fire proof.

The company have men at work erecting a line of poles and wires from the Chelsea sub-station to the water pumping station of the Michigan Central near the cement works. When the work is completed the pumping station can be operated by either an electric motor or with the gasoline engine which was installed when the station was erected the past year.

Geo. H. Whittington, who has been in the employ of the company at this place for several years as an electrician, and his assistant take considerable pride in keeping the building and machinery in a very neat and orderly condition. By a recent order of the proper authorities, all employes of the company will have to take an examination as to their qualifications for the positions that they fill. The examinations are to be held in about two weeks.

Cutting Down Expenses.

The board of auditors at its February meeting adopted a resolution directing the justices of the peace in Ann Arbor to refuse to pay over fees to the city for arrests made by the police when complaint is made under the state law. The resolution is designed to prevent the city from making arrests at the expense of the county.

According to the bills presented to the auditors and allowed there was a decided increase in the number of prisoners arrested in January as compared with the number in December. The increase is partially accounted for by the discontinuance of the road gang by the supervisors at the January meeting. The total cost of arranging prisoners from Ann Arbor and caring for all prisoners in December was $559.95, and in January, $629.50. In December Sheriff Stark received $359.40 for boarding the prisoners, and in January, $578.55. A large percentage of these arrests are tramp cases.

In December Justice Ritchie, of Ann Arbor, received $124.70 as fees for his services and in January $261.30, while Justice Doty, also of Ann Arbor, received in December $74.95 and in January, $86.95.

Richard Lutz has been appointed agent to look after the burial of old soldiers in Scioto township. The auditors also refused to allow the bill for $25 to Dr. A. M. Barrett, the dentist who was called to examine Edward Wood, the painter, who was arrested shortly before Christmas for threatening to shoot M. J. Cavanaugh and a number of others.

Repairing Plant

The Michigan Portland Cement Co. of Four Mile Lake, the last of the week stopped work at their marl beds and in the clay pits for the season. The plant is being operated for the present. During the next few weeks the plant will undergo a thorough overhauling. The company will start work at the marl beds and clay pits as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

Fell From Telephone Pole.

Glen Kugler, one of the linemen employed by the Michigan State Telephone Co. building the new toll lines between here and Dexter, met with a painful accident about one mile east of the cement plant, on Monday. He was working on a pole and fell from it, a distance of about twelve feet, landing on his right foot. His heel and ankle were badly injured. He will be laid up for a few days.

The pupils of the eighth grade will hold a candy sale this week for the purpose of raising money with which to buy pictures for their room.

The Chelsea high school boys lost to Saline in a hard fought game of basketball Friday night. The final score was 29 to 26 in favor of Saline.

Supt. Hendry will give a free stereopticon lecture in the auditorium of the high school, Wednesday, February 19, at 7:30 p. m. He is exceedingly anxious to explain the use of the lantern in connection with the daily work of the school and takes this opportunity of explaining it to the patrons of the school district. After the lecture a light lunch will be served by the teachers and pupils of the high school to those who wish it, for which ten cents will be charged. The proceeds will be used to purchase pictures for the school. The general public are cordially invited to attend this lecture.

"The Heart Breakers."

In "The Heart Breakers" which will be the attraction at the Whitney theatre Ann Arbor on Saturday, February 15, matinee and night, the story of the play deals with an organization of young men of wealth called "The Saxons" supposed to have been started by Prince Maurice of Saxony. The members have been jilted by the opposite sex with such fatal results that they have become woman-haters. The object of the club is to seek revenge on the young women who caused the wounded hearts. Members of the Saxons are deliberately set to the task of winning the hearts of the young men of wealth who are sought as victims. They are supplied with money, motor cars, and other expedients. The courtship is continued, first by one and then another, until the young woman permits herself to be kissed. The plot of the Saxons is then unfolded to her and she is made to feel the sting and remorse that she herself once dealt out. The Saxons have a head or "master" who directs their movements, and whose wits and services are tested to their utmost in pursuit of one girl whom the other members are unable to trap, Fay Munger, the daughter of a crabbled old millionaire, whose wife has been stolen by one of the Saxons. Old Munger learns that the Saxons are seeking his daughter, so he locks her up in his castle in the Adirondacks, and makes a bet of $50,000 that no Saxon shall see her or kiss her before a certain day, when she is to be married to the man of his choice. The "master" takes the bet, and installs the Saxons in the castle in the guise of servants. In the undertaking the "master" falls desperately in love with Miss Fay, and becomes ashamed of himself and the part that he is playing, and forswears his crows and through his efforts he breaks up the band and everything turns out happily and he gets the girl he loves. Manager Mort H. Singer, will present George Damerel, late star of "The Merry Widow" in the leading role, and he is ably supported by a company of fifty, including a perfect Princess chorus.

All cars held for performances at this theatre. Seat sale Thursday, February 13, 10 a. m. Phone 480.

HUNT FOR TREASURE IN PERU

Belief That Gold in Extraordinary Value is There Seems Impossible to Eradicate.

In Mr. Bryce's chapter on "Cuzco and the Land of the Incas" in his new book on South America, he discusses some of the great ruins left by the ancient races: "On the top of the hill behind these lines of ramparts there are remains of ancient buildings. It is hard to make out what these edifices were, for every bit of ground built upon has been ransacked over and over again for hidden treasure. Peru is full of stories about fabulous quantities of Inca gold hidden away to save it from the rapacity of the conquerors, and some of the tales may be true, though hardly any such treasures have been found for more than a century past. But the story that there is a secret passage cut in the rock from the Inca castle at the top of the hill down through it and into Cuzco, where it opens to the temple of the sun, is too much for any but native credulity. These beliefs in long subterranean passages recur everywhere in the world. It was perhaps still believed in Oxford that there is such a one from the Church of St. Peter in the city to the ruined nursery on the river at Godstow (Fair Rosamund's place of confinement), two miles distant. It is believed in Kerwan (in Tunisia) that the most sacred of all African cities communicates underground with the well Zem Zem in Mecca, 3,000 miles away and on the other side of the Red sea. "The most persistent treasure hunt carried on by the Peruvians has been that for the golden chain made by the Huayana Capac, which was long sought to be stretched all around the great square of Cuzco, and was thrown into the Lake of Urcos lest it should fall into the hands of the Spaniards. Everybody believes it to be still at the bottom of the lake, which is very deep."

Two Ideas of Music. There are two ways of regarding music. There is a writer. "You may regard it as an entertainment, in which case you will applaud. Or you may regard it as a sacrament—and be silent. The latter was the way of Sir Thomas Browne. Even that vulgar sad tavern music," he wrote, "which makes one man merry, another mad, strikes in me a deep fire of devotion, and a profound contemplation of the life of divinity more than the ear discovers; it is an hieroglyphical and shadowed lesson of the whole world, and creatures of God; such a melody to the ear, as the whole world well understood, would afford the understanding. In brief, it is a sensible fit of that harmony which intellectually sounds in the ears of God."

To Provide Courting Room. Courting couples have a hard time in New York. Many of them are obliged to make appointments on street corners and in quest of a place to visit to go to questionable public dance halls. These conditions have caused Miss Gordenia Winthrop of Washington, D. C., who has been interested in social problems for the past five years, to announce that she will establish at her own expense of $15,000 a house where young people may meet under the supervision of experienced chaperons. "I have been over every section of the country studying its social evils," she said, "and I think I have found now what will be a great remedy for the young in this great city."

The Elastic Globe. To the layman nothing may seem more rigid than the crust of the earth, but men of science tell us that it bends and buckles appreciably under the pull of the heavenly bodies. Careful observation has also shown that the shores on opposite sides of a tidal basin approach each other at high tide. The weight of water in the Irish sea, for example, is so much greater at that time that the sea sinks a trifle and in consequence pulls the Irish and English coasts nearer together. Thus the buildings of Liverpool and Dublin may be fancied as bowing to one another across the channel, the deflection from the perpendicular being about one inch for every 16 miles. It has also been shown that ordinary valleys widen under the heat of the sun and contract again at night.—Harper's Weekly.

With Many Items. This you hire that plumber I recommended to you? "Yes." "How did he turn out?" "Oh, he filled the bill, all right."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Brought to It. Switzerland, usually progressive, is supposed to use of the airship in warfare. "Has got along without a navy for 100 years, having no coast line. But she has now had air to protect as anybody else, don't you see?"

The Likeness. Why will the revival of whipping in the public schools be the part of a school? "I don't know. Why?" "Because it will be a spanker soon."

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

REP. WILCOX HOPES TO SECURE A $200,000 PRISON IN ONTONAGON COUNTY.

ALSO TO TRANSFER SOME OF THE INMATES AT LAPEER HOME TO MARQUETTE PRISON.

There Will Be a Warm Time Over Congressional Districts—What Will Happen to the Salt Inspector's Office?

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Representative Wilcox, of Ontonagon county, hopes through the aid of a concurrent resolution to secure the appointment of a commission to investigate the feasibility of erecting a new $200,000 prison in Ontonagon county where the convicts may be employed by the state in the mining of copper. It is Rep. Wilcox's idea that it would be a good proposition to transfer some of the inmates at the Lapeer home for the feeble minded and epileptic to Marquette prison, and erect a new prison in Ontonagon county to care for the convicts who would work the mines. By this Wilcox claims the overcrowded condition of the Lapeer institution could be remedied, and the appropriation of $200,000 asked for at Lapeer would be sufficient to build the new prison in his county.

According to the Ontonagon representative, who is himself a miner, the copper mines in Ontonagon county have never been a paying investment, but he believes the state could succeed where private parties have failed, if the convicts are placed at work in the mines. He is also of the opinion that the convicts would be able to share in the plan, and aid in providing for their families.

Rep. Wilcox says that the inmates of the Lapeer home would find the climate much better at Marquette, and that it would relieve the crowded conditions of the home.

This year's budget is destined to be the largest in many sessions if all the appropriation bills now before the legislature receive favorable consideration, as Rep. Hinkley, chairman of the ways and means committee of the house, says that already the total asked for foots up to $9,223,210, and the work is only begun.

Statistics gathered from all the appropriation bills introduced in the house and senate thus far show the total amount of these measures to be more than $100,000 above the total amount of the budget two years ago. And this, in spite of the fact that there are but 26 items this year where the total was upwards of $0 two years ago, and in view of the probability that the total this year will include many items not mentioned in 1911.

The total amount recommended at the end of last session was $9,881,551.81. And this figure was cut by former Governor Osborn until the total was $9,101,763.39. In view of what these figures indicate, the million dollar surplus left by Osborn's administration promises not to go very far in taking care of the expenses incident to the present administration. That Governor Ferris does not hope to equal the record of his predecessor is evidenced from his statement on the question of appropriations.

The governor said recently when someone remarked at the overwhelming total of the appropriations sought, that this was the result of the strict economy of his predecessor. "By this I do not wish to be construed as criticizing ex-Governor Osborn," said the chief executive, "but things were pared down so close that there is bound to be a reaction.

Democrats of Ingham county are planning for a big time when the annual banquet of the Lewis Case club is held at the Masonic temple Thursday night. By holding the banquet the night before the democratic state convention, the democrats will be able to draw from the delegates who will be in the city to attend the convention. A. M. Cummins, of Lansing, is president of the club.

Among the speakers will be Governor Ferris, Senator James Murtha, of Detroit, Lawton T. Hemans, of the state railroad commission, Alfred Lucking, of Detroit, Congressman-elect Samuel W. Beakes, of Ann Arbor, and Edmund Shields, of Howell, chairman of the state central committee. This is the first time in several years that the Lewis Case club has held a banquet, but it is planned to make the next one of the most notable democratic gatherings in the state this year. Frank L. Dodge, of Lansing, will act as toastmaster.

Whether or not the senate will confirm the appointment of A. C. Graham, of Cadillac, as state salt inspector is a much mooted question. Behind the closed doors of an executive session the senate indulged in a squabble of an hour's length as to whether favorable action should be taken on Governor Ferris' appointee, and then by a vote of 16 to 13 referred the appointment back to the senate committee on executive business with the excuse that the governor had not signed the bill abolishing the office.

The governor declared he appointed Graham because he desires the latter to take hold and wind up the affairs of the department under the law abolishing the office, and that Graham's tenure will cease the day the bill goes into effect, despite any technicalities which might enable him to hold the office for the term for which he was appointed.

Senator James Murtha, of Detroit, chairman of the senate committee on executive business led the fight on behalf of confirmation while Senator Weadock, of Saginaw, the home town of John Baird, the present inspector, incited opposition to the matter, on the score that the senate has no definite information as to whether Governor Ferris proposes to abolish the office when the bill takes effect next August, or at the term of his appointment.

When the legislature tackles the job of re-apportioning the congressional districts there is bound to be one big fight. Already signs of an approaching storm have become evident and it is expected that there will be some lively wire pulling before an agreement is reached, if it is possible to do that this session.

There are so many in the legislature who are harboring congressional ambitions that it will be utterly impossible to satisfy all of them. Rep. Catlin, chairman of the house committee on apportionment has a bill before the legislature, but no one believes that he will be able to put it through. The senatorial and representative districts are not attracting so much attention but fireworks are in store when the congressional apportionment bill is up for consideration.

By unanimous vote the senate passed the Scott resolution providing for submitting to the people a proposed amendment which will open the way for establishing a firemen's pension or relief fund. The resolution was amended to allow for including all members of fire departments, instead of just firemen, as it read in its original form, and then it went through with ease. The resolution has not been considered in the house, but it is thought that it will encounter considerable opposition.

Senator Walters, of Traverse City, has introduced a resolution in the senate which will allow for the submission by the legislature of pending legislation to the supreme court for its approval as to its constitutionality and validity of form. Senator Walters says Massachusetts has a law of this character which works very well and he believes the system once established in Michigan will eliminate much litigation as well as save the state a great deal of money. The resolution was referred to the committee on judiciary.

When the senate's proposal for a stenographic report of the legislative proceedings came over to the house it was tabled by a vote of 59 to 29. Rep. Jensen moved to table the resolution and there was no debate on the subject. The roll call was demanded and while the democrats generally lined up for the measure, still there were some breaks in the lineup. The national progressives also were divided. Four or five republican members voted in favor of the stenographic record. An effort will be made to re-suscitate the resolution, but among the farmer members who see no need for such a record and who are staggered at the prospect of an additional $20,000 expense, there seems little hope for the proposal.

Although slightly amended the house has reported out the Jerome bill for reapportionment of congressional districts. The basis for apportionment is one representative for each 28,100 population. Inasmuch as the old basis was 24,000 so that a county must have increased in population to remain entitled to its old representation.

Under the terms of the Jerome bill, Wayne county's representation is increased from 14 to 19, Kent gains another representative making 6, while Allegan county loses one member. The other counties having more than one representative are unchanged, but the following counties have been grouped together into representative districts: Leelanau and Benzie; Wexford and Missaukee; Mason and Lake; Clare and Osceola; Charlevoix and Antrim; Oceana and Newaygo; Otsego, Montmorency and Alcona; Keewenaw, Baraga, Iron and Ontonagon; Alger, Schoolcraft, Mackinac and Luce; Gladwin, Midland and Roscommon; Ogemaw, Iosco and Arenac; Presque Isle and Alpena; Cheboygan and Emmet.

Montenegrin Army Commands Scutari

The Montenegrin army besieging the Turkish fortress of Scutari carried the great Bardanjoli hill by assault after six hours of severe fighting.

The infantrymen on several occasions came into such close quarters that hand-to-hand fighting was general along the line.

Bardanjoli hill dominates Scutari from the eastern side and the Montenegrins are mounting siege guns on the heights to bombard the principal points of the city.

The capture of Bardanjoli hill, at Scutari, by the Montenegrins, cost the victors 2,500 men in killed and wounded.

Prince Katsura Stoned by Mob.

Prince Taro Katsura, premier and minister of foreign affairs of Japan, was stoned by a mob in the streets of Tokio, Japan. The stoning of Katsura came immediately after he had offered to the emperor his resignation and that of the other members of the cabinet.

Several newspaper offices were also attacked by unruly crowds, who attempted to set fire to the buildings. There were many riots in various parts of the city in the course of which a number of policemen and civilians were injured.

ATTEMPT TO BLOW UP TROOP TRAIN

Militia on Way to Quell Rioting at West Virginia Mines.

What is declared to have been a deliberate attempt to dynamite a train bearing three companies of militia to the Paint Creek district, West Virginia, to suppress the disorder there, was discovered and 19 persons, including J. F. Parsons, a political leader and former candidate for the legislature at the last election, were arrested. Guards who preceded the train declare they found 70 sticks of dynamite wedged under the rails and connected with a detonating cap which the locomotive would have set off when it passed over.

Mr. Parsons stoutly maintained his innocence in the matter and intimated that the dynamite had been purposely planted by the mine guards to cast odium on the strikers.

Advises stated that 19 persons were killed in Monday's rioting in the strike region.

Reports from Moulton and Standard state that the mountains are still filled with armed men.

Many Killed in Jap Riots.

Violent political riots broke out in the city of Osaka, Japan. The offices of the newspapers which support Prince Katsura, the premier, were attacked by great mobs. Several deaths are reported.

Mrs. Cleveland Is Now Mrs. Preston.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland and Thomas Jex Preston, Jr., were married by President John Grier Hibben, of Princeton university in Prospect, the executive residence of the university. No preliminary announcement had been made of the marriage and the utmost simplicity was observed in the ceremony.

The bride wore a simple white gown and carried a bouquet of white Killarney roses.

Dr. Mary Walker Is Seriously Ill.

Captain Scott and Four of His Party Found Frozen to Death.

Capt. Robert F. Scott, the English polar explorer, and four of his party of 65 noted scientists and sailors were frozen to death in a blizzard which overhauled them after they reached the south pole on January 18, 1912.

Expecting to meet the party and bring the members back to civilization, the Terra Nova, the vessel which had carried the expedition to the Antarctic, returned to the base of operations and found four of the party dead. The news was brought to Oamaru, New Zealand, by a signalled message from the vessel on her return.

The expedition consisted of 28 officers and scientists in addition to a crew of 23 picked men from the British royal navy. Capt. Scott's party reached the exact point where Ronald Amundsen planted the Norwegian flag at the south pole. They found the hut constructed and left behind by Amundsen's party.

These facts were recorded in the documents found on the bodies of the dead explorers when they were recovered.

HOLIDAYING IN THE WINTER

AN IMMENSE AMOUNT OF MONEY SPENT BY WESTERN CANADIANS IN WINTER SEASON.

"An unusually large number of Western Canada people are leaving or preparing to leave to spend the Winter in California."

The above item of news was clipped from a Western Canada paper early in December. In the same paper were items conveying the intelligence that hundreds of Western Canadians were also taking a "trip abroad," spending the Christmas season "at home," as they yet term the old land. The Scandinavian element participated largely in the holiday business of the railroads and the steamships, but they all had returned tickets. Early in December the east-bound trains and boats were loaded, and an estimate furnished by the railroad people gave upwards of twelve thousand as the number who would make the Christmas holiday visit abroad. This does not mean that these people are leaving to avoid the coldness of the winter, nor for any climatic conditions whatever. They have come out to Canada and have done so well that they can afford the hundred or fifty or two hundred dollars or more that it takes to carry them across and back. When they came to Canada they did not buy that much money all told, but now they are wealthy and on their return will bring some of their friends with them.

Then there are those, too, who on their wheat farms have made sufficient money that they can afford to take a holiday, and what better winter holidaying ground could they have than California? How many in other farming districts of the continent could afford the money and the time that these people can?—Advertiser.

JAKE'S FAULT VERY SERIOUS

Father Rightly Felt He Could Never Be Captain of Industry Unless He Was Captain of Industry.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaacs took great pride in their young son Jake, Jake was determined to make him a great business man, a veritable captain of industry. One day mother heard loud screams coming from an adjoining room and rushed in to investigate the cause of the trouble. Father was vigorously administering a dose of "strap oil" to the young hoper! "Ikey! Ikey! Vy for you are clobbering little Jakey?" "Because I caught him in a lie; dot's vy," replied father, continuing the chastisement. "A lie? You say a lie?" "Yes! I will teach him to lie better as dot see I hant to break effery bone in hees body."—Exchange.

At the Studio. A motor stopped in front of the photographer's, and a woman lacking none of the artificial accessories deemed necessary to "look," entered the studio. A couple of days later the photographer submitted proofs for her approval. "Not one of those pictures looks anything like me," the woman insisted.

The photographer tried in every way to pacify her, but finding this an impossibility, lost control of his temper: "Madam!" he exclaimed, "did you read my sign?" "Yes."

"Well! It does not say 'cleaning, dyeing and remodeling.' It says 'portraits.'"

What She Meant. "So you think I smoke too much?" he asked, just to keep up a conversation that seemed to be languishing. "Not at all," she answered, not very skillfully concealing a yawn. "You said you thought so."

MONTE CARLO Lure of the GAMBLER

OF all the smaller countries in the world none possesses a more dangerous fascination for the public at large than Monaco, probably the smallest state in Europe, which lies at the south of France on the sunny shores of the Mediterranean.

Why Roulette Was Started. Very different, however, was the condition of Monaco some 60 years ago. The people were in a rebellious frame of mind, for, being without any means of communication with the outer world save that of a defective road, they had no industries, were terribly poor, and found that to keep a royal family at their own expense was becoming a costly luxury.

Monte Carlo Casino. would be wise to relieve them, and that it would be well to gain a revenue by the simple device of making the foreigner pay by gambling.

MEXICAN CAPITOL SCENE OF BATTLE

FOR SEVEN HOURS SLAUGHTER ONLY A DRAWN BATTLE IS THE RESULTANT.

UNITED STATES TROOPS AND WARSHIPS READY TO GO. The Mexican Revolt is in Full Swing, and the Conditions Are Becoming Still More Serious.

Mexico City was the stage Tuesday of one of the most remarkable battles ever fought in which 1,000 soldiers, federals and rebels, and non-combatants were killed and hundreds of others wounded.

The Mexican revolution is in full swing, and the conditions are becoming still more serious. The Mexican revolution is in full swing, and the conditions are becoming still more serious.

After seven hours of fighting during which the federal forces sought to dislodge General Felix Diaz and his men from the city arsenal the federals retired. The net result of the carnage was a draw.

Tuesday at midnight a conference relative to the critical situation developing in Mexico was called at the White House. With President Taft was Secretary of State Knox, Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Meyer, Major-General Wood, chief of staff of the army, Brigadier-General J. B. Aleshire, the quartermaster general and Brigadier-General William Crozier, and Rear-Admiral A. A. Fiske, aide for operations, United States navy.

The conference did not adjourn until 2 o'clock Wednesday morning. As a result of it the secretary of the navy ordered two more battleships to Mexico and the secretary of war ordered two transports at Newport News to be put in readiness for troops.

All other preparations have been made by the administration for an armed movement for the protection of American life in Mexico if a condition of anarchy prevails. The president in a formal statement again declared against intervention.

The grave seriousness of the situation is thoroughly appreciated here and many believe intervention is now inevitable. The following formal statement was issued at the White House after the conference:

"After the conference here between the three secretaries of state, war and navy, it was not thought that the news from the City of Mexico required any action of an affirmative character further than to order two more battleships to Vera Cruz. These, including one ordered to Tampico, will make four, or a division of the fleet, on the gulf side of Mexico under the command of an admiral.

"The war department is to hold itself in readiness but no affirmative action was directed to be taken by the secretary of war except to put the transports at Newport News in commission.

"These transports will receive troops should further action be deemed necessary. The purpose is merely to take precautionary steps to protect Americans and foreigners in the City of Mexico, should conditions of violence continue and anarchy succeed.

It was reported that all of the president's advisers were of one mind, that some precautionary steps should be taken immediately.

"The attitude of the government is still strong against intervention, and it was determined to take no step at this time which would commit us to such a policy, and to take only the reasonable precautions to meet an emergency which it is earnestly hoped and believed will not arise."

Herman Ott, an Eckford farmer, narrowly escaped death when his wagon was struck by a Michigan Central train near Albion. The horses were killed and the wagon smashed, but Ott was only slightly bruised.

WOMAN SICK FOURTEEN YEARS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.: "I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

BUT SHE DID NOT VISIT HIM

Little Chance That Voice-Culture Student Attempted to Gratify Old Gentleman's Friend.

Patiently the old gentleman had been sitting through the ordeal of hearing the voice-culture student in the hall bedroom below practicing with a zeal which left no room for criticism, but with a talent by no means so kindly described.

"I can't come in," he said in response to an invitation, "but I simply came to tell you of a friend of mine who would, I know, be willing to pay almost any amount of money to hear you sing."

Overwhelmed with joy the young woman begged the kind old gentleman to write his friend's name and address on a piece of paper.

When he had gone upstairs she looked at the slip of paper which he had handed back to her inscribed and neatly folded. It read: "John W. Jones, Asylum for the Deaf."

Know It All. An old but sturdy Irishman, who had made a reputation as a gang boss, was given a job with a railroad construction company at Port-au-Prince, Haiti. One day, when the sun was hotter than usual, his gang of black Haitians began to shirk, and as the chief engineer rode up on his horse the Irishman was heard to shout:

"Allez—you sons of guns—allez!" Then turning to the engineer, he said: "I curse the day I ever learned their language."

Credit and "Confidence." First Bank Official—I just loaned Bulger $50,000 on his business. Second Ditto—is his business good enough to warrant it? "Sure! He showed that he was employing over fourteen hundred children."—Life.

A DIFFERENCE. It Paid This Man to Change Food. "What is called 'good living' eventually brought me to a condition quite the reverse of good health," writes a N. Y. merchant.

"Improper eating told on me till my stomach became so weak that food nauseated me, even the lightest and simplest lunch, and I was much depressed after a night of uneasy slumber, unfitting me for business.

"This condition was discouraging, as I could find no way to improve it. Then I saw the advertisement of Grape-Nuts food, and decided to try it, and became delighted with the result.

Did You Ever Hear Anyone Say That the U. S. Separator was Hard to Wash? :

No person who has tried washing a United States Separator, using our new Mechanical Washer, (see picture) has ever made such a statement. The United States Cream Separator is the only separator adapted for thorough mechanical washing. It can be washed in half the time of other separators.

Here Is The Reason:

Owing to their scientific design, the washing water is driven hard through the skimming sections, carrying all the milk and dirt away with it and actually scrubbing all parts of the metal. Very little water is required.

Any local agent will willingly demonstrate this fact for you, at your home. We will attend to this for you, if you will simply fill out and mail the coupon.

BILLY THE KID

THE MOST FAMOUS OF THE BAD-MEN OF THE WEST

© BY THE RIDGWAY CO.

By Frank J. Arkins

HOWLING mob of fortune-hunters crowded into Silver City, New Mexico, in the seventies. The uncovering of mineral wealth was beset with great danger. The Apaches were on the war-path. It was hazardous to travel in the country without an escort, but the magnet of wealth in the mines drew men to the scene notwithstanding. In the citizenship of the community there were rough men, for the early days were typical of those of other mining-camps isolated in the mountains and distant from civilization.

In that community there lived a boy of seventeen years of age, respected and loved by all. He was a favorite among the young men and considered a model youth by the old. He was gentle as a child. His face was delicately molded, his skin as fair as a girl's, his hands small and fingers tapering. Lithe, graceful, self-reliant, he gave every promise of an honorable career.

This boy, William H. Bonney, was employed in a local store and was considered a most accommodating clerk. The gruff community was convulsed with horror and dumfounded with astonishment one afternoon when the news spread like wildfire that Bonney had hacked a man to death with a butcher-knife and was fleeing for his life on the back of a stolen horse.

The murder was particularly atrocious. It was the result of an altercation in which young Bonney was engaged. Prior to this the boy had never been questioned. In an instant he was transformed into a demon, within a few minutes he had added theft to murder, and in seeking a place of safety left behind him a trail as broad as though he were following a macadam road. At the point of a revolver he compelled strangers to exchange horses with him, seized the best mounts at the various ranches along his way and spread consternation wherever he went. He followed the Mimbres river toward Deming, pursued by a posse from Silver City. Closely pressed, he escaped eastward over the Oregon mountains, when it was thought he was headed for Mexico.

The start of a bad man's trail. A western town was never more surprised. The majority of the people still defended him; there was some reason, his friends declared, for his strange act. But as news came of the way he was striking terror in the Valley of the Pecos where the roughest men in the southwest lived, the mind of the public was changed. From that time on his murderous exploits filled the hearts of men with fear. The boy's name in western history became forever after Billy the Kid. His name of Bonney is all but forgotten. As the Kid, he stands as one of the great historical figures of the cow-country, one of the worst youths that ever lived, prince of bad men, the youngest bad man of all.

His appearance among the prospectors and amid the mining-camps of the Oregon mountains was electrical. Here he conceived the idea that to evade arrest he must fight his way to the front single-handed. He boldly traded horses, obtained credit, bought supplies, because he could shoot straight with a revolver and had threatened the lives of a number of men. Then with all dispatch he pushed on to the Valley of the Pecos. This was the scene of the boy's exploits in the taking of human life.

The Pecos Valley was filled with men who had been driven out of Texas by the Rangers, and Billy the Kid's association with these men developed his mania for shedding blood. In his first altercation he realized that it was his life or the other man's. The fact that he was quick with a gun made him feared. He became embittered against one of the stockmen immediately upon his arrival in the valley.

"I'll make this valley too hot for him and dangerous to his punchers," said the boy. At once he commenced to use this man's cowboys as targets to practice on. He began a campaign that drew upon him the enmity of everybody. The murder of these innocent men, purely to gratify a spite against their employer, made him a leader among the bands of armed thugs of the region. He had at a bound become a celebrity, and every group of bad men wanted to claim him. But the Kid would have none of that. By degrees he gathered a band of his own.

How Many Men Did He Kill? The Kid killed more men, wantonly and for sheer love of murder, than any other man of whom there is a record in the west. It will never be known just how many he assassinated. He was a butcher who took delight in slaying the defenseless. He knew no pang of conscience. He had not one single redeeming trait. He would murder a friend as quickly as an enemy.

He thought nothing of appearing before a cook in charge of a "chuck" wagon, on a lonely desert range, ask for something to eat, compliment the man upon the quality of the food he had prepared, with apparent gratitude. He would ask him, as if the idea had suddenly popped into his head, whether he was an officer—or had been. Then, as though in doubt, he would shoot him in his tracks. This is no exaggeration. A man whom he left for dead, and who survived long enough to tell the story, was authority for the statement, shortly after his arrival on the Pecos river.

The boy was a terror before whom everybody fled. He rode the fastest horses, he helped himself to the best there was in every community he visited, wigged out of any number of tight places, and shot his way to freedom a dozen times.

Shortly after his arrival in the valley, he was persuaded, because of his reputation as a bad man, to assist in the arrest of three men charged with murder. They were captured without the firing of a shot, placed on horses, ironed and started jailward. To the deputy sheriff, who with him followed the prisoners across a long, dusty sand plain, he turned suddenly and said, "Let's kill those fellows!"

"Why? They haven't done anything to us." "They're guilty anyway, and we'll just save the county expense."

"No, Billy, they have not given us a chance to shoot at them—they have not tried to escape."

The deputy tried to argue with him, for he could see the light of murder dancing in the fellow's eyes.

The Kid rode forward, compelling the officer to do likewise, and, according to the story told, shot all three men. The deputy spurred his pony, the Kid after him. They exchanged shots, and the officer escaped with a few wounds.

From that time on it was dangerous for the Kid to enter a community. He raided north through Lincoln county, which was larger than many eastern states. There was not a line of railway or telegraph in it, and no telephones. It was easy to get away.

At that time there was rivalry between the different outfits. The country was filled with bad men, and they were about evenly divided among the cowmen. Cattle stealing was a common thing. The Kid became involved in a number of rows, and he took sides. His reputation as a "killer" grew.

Undoubtedly a number of these men were killed as a result of trouble among themselves, and the killing laid to the door of the Kid. It was easy. He could not deny it. No one would have believed him if he had. Besides, the more murders credited to him, the greater the fear in which he would be held.

Thus it was that it finally became impossible to get any one to accept the position of sheriff of Lincoln county, for it was only a question of time when he would run across the youthful demon.

The Kid knew that he had terrorized the country. He knew that the instant he let down his guard he would be killed. His safety lay in continuing.

The Turn of the Tide. Then, one day, even those hard characters who professed to be his friends were amazed by the report that for some trivial incident he had killed a member of his own band. The outlaws were now as anxious to end his career as were the law-abiding people of the villages. His friends commenced to murmur. The Kid was now reported in a dozen places at the same time, and these stories he turned to his advantage by appearing at irregular, though frequent, intervals in widely separated cow camps for more than a hundred and fifty miles north and south of the Pecos river.

Pat Garrett, a Texas Alabamian, who had helped organize the Lanky Rangers and had assisted in driving the bad men out of Texas to the first water west of the Staked Plains, was invited by the cattlemen to locate in New Mexico. They wanted him to restore order. The only way that could be done was either to arrest or to kill the Kid.

Garrett's record in Texas as a man-hunter and bad man tamer was known all over the southwest. In addition to being quick with a gun, he was absolutely without fear.

He was elected without opposition and took hold with an iron hand. He was an organizer, and men flocked to his standard. They felt, instinctively, that at last a man had arrived who could cope with the situation.

The Capture of the Kid. In November, 1880, Garrett came upon the Kid suddenly and captured him, with several others, after killing one man.

Word had reached Garrett that the Kid and his gang of three were located in an old house a short distance from Sumner.

"We had better make plans to get him," said one of the deputies.

"The plan is to get there before he gets away. I'll tell you what to do on the way."

The way led down a sage-covered "draw," with several bends made by sand dunes around which the road curved for a distance of about five miles. Before he reached the last bend he pulled up his horse, and waiting for his deputies to come up to him, and then, in the even voice for which he was noted, said:

"I am going to ride ahead. All attention will be centered on me. That will give you a chance to surround the house. I am going to take my time and walk my horse. They may get me, but if they do I want you to make certain that you get him."

The deputies withdrew to right and left, advancing under cover of the sand hills in an ever-widening circle until they had surrounded the house. Then Garrett rode forward. From his position he could see his deputies, who had dismounted, advancing cautiously through the sagebrush. He permitted his horse to walk slowly, as though utterly unconscious of the presence of the gang. At the door he called loudly.

Some one appeared at the window and, firing a shot at the sheriff, dodged back. It was done in an instant, but in that fraction of a second the man who had fired dropped dead in his tracks! Garrett had dismounted, and with his deputies poured a fusillade of bullets through the sides of the thinly boarded shack. A white handkerchief at the window indicated the surrender of Billy the Kid and his gang.

"You Give Me a 'Six-Gun,' Pat!" When Garrett reached the railroad with his prisoner he was menaced by a crowd that sought to lynch the Kid.

"It looks as though they are going to get me, Pat," the Kid remarked.

It was an ugly crowd, bent on dealing to the boy the fate he was certain to meet sooner or later.

"Not if I can help it, Billy. You are under my care, and I intend to protect you."

"You give me a 'six-gun,' Pat, and stand aside a few moments, and I will clean up the whole crowd. You'll see them stampered the minute you give me a gun."

"You could help—if you played square."

"I'd have to, old man. I'm in the tightest place I ever was in my life. They'll get us both, if you try it alone. They may get me, anyway. But you are up against it. If you try to defend me along."

"I'll trust you once, Billy; but understand, no fooliness. I'll drop you if you try it."

"Listen!" shouted the tall sheriff during a slight lull. "The man is my prisoner. You told me to arrest him. I have. He must have a fair trial. I know he is guilty. But it is for a jury to pronounce him so. You can not take him while I have a breath of life left, or while Billy the Kid has, either!"

Saying which he passed a revolver to the boy who had struck terror into the Pecos Valley, "You must get two of us now."

Back to back the sheriff of Lincoln county and the most noted murderer in the southwest stood.

"Now, Billy," cautioned Garrett, "don't shoot unless I tell you to. Remember that without me your life is not worth two bits today."

It was impossible to tell what was working in the mind concealed behind the childish face of the Kid. It was equally as impossible to read the thoughts of the determined sheriff who waited with apparent unconcern. The crowd knew and feared the Kid. With only Garrett to fight, the members might have risked it. With a revolver in the Kid's hand, they hesitated.

Garrett was quick to see the advantage he had gained.

"Now you will all move quietly away," he announced decisively.

Suddenly the crowd obeyed.

Held at bay, Garrett placed the Kid aboard the train which arrived a few moments later.

The Keeper and the "Makings." The Kid was tried in another county. He had no friends and no defense. There were plenty of witnesses against him now that he was a prisoner. He was defended by an attorney who made a brave fight. But he was sentenced to be hanged at Lincoln in July, 1881. He was brought back and confined in a jail built after the manner of Mexican houses, of adobe brick, with thick walls around a court or patio.

The day before he was to be hanged, half a dozen horses stood in the street, lines thrown over their heads—all that is necessary to make a cow pony remain in one place.

The Kid called from the gallery to the warden: "Hi, there, Bell! I'm going to swing tomorrow. Give me the 'makings,' will you?"

"Seguro, Miguel," shouted the warden, laughing. (Translated into English, the answer meant "Sure, Mike.")

The Kid stopped to the stairs. His hands were manacled in such manner that he had little use of them. The warden reached in his vest pocket for the cigarette paper, which he placed in his left hand, and with his right felt in his hip pocket for a sack of tobacco.

Like a flash the Kid raised his manacled hands and struck Bell square in the temple. The warden staggered. As he did so the Kid jerked Bell's revolver from his holster, and dealt the jailer a blow on the head that crushed his skull.

"Unfasten the jewelry, and we'll both get away!"

He shouted these words to another prisoner standing inside a cell. The Kid had been allowed the freedom of the galleries. He passed the keys taken from the prostrate warden to the man in the cell, who unlocked his handcuffs. Then, leveling the warden's revolver at the prisoner, he hissed:

"Give me back the keys!"

It was the work of but a moment to reach the barred gate that led into the street where the horses stood. A glance, and he took it all in. From where he stood he could see the form of the warden. Leveling his revolver, he fired a shot that ended his life, and then shot the man who blocked the door.

Once outside, he started a fusillade of bullets up and down the street to keep everybody in the houses. In another instant he was on the beat horse and had stamped the others so that pursuit would be delayed. In a few moments he was out of sight.

Garrett was about twenty miles away at the time after some rustlers. Word was sent to him and he returned post haste, heard the story from excited lips, and stopped only long enough to saddle a fresh horse. Accompanied by a few friends he took the Kid's trail.

At the end of forty-eight hours of flight, when tired out, Billy the Kid stopped at the house of a man named Maxwell, near Sumner. Retiring, he figured, doubtless, that Garrett would have to pause for rest also.

It was early the second morning, probably about 3 a. m., when the silent sheriff saw in front of him the cabin in which the Kid slept. He and his men dismounted and approached the house. Garrett reached the porch with his deputies and quietly stepped into Maxwell's room.

There are several accounts of what took place. One is to the effect that Garrett left his deputies stationed outside beyond the house. He was whispering to Maxwell, when the Kid, who was a light sleeper, awoke, and tiptoeing across the porch, entered, revolver in hand, and asked:

"Who was that who just came? Where is he?"

From his position Garrett could see him distinctly, and had the Kid been looking, he might have distinguished the form of the sheriff, standing by the bedside of Maxwell. The Kid had his revolver in hand, prepared to use it. Garrett knew that, and fired the single shot that killed

CHANGED HER MIND

Lover of a Vivisector Is at Last Taught the Lesson of Love.

By HARVEY PRENTICE.

Hamlin sat beside the bed, watching the house surgeon as he examined the little patient. Three hours before the boy had been brought to St. Mark's hospital, his little body arched like a bow. Nobody had believed a cure to be possible at that stage—until they sent for Hamlin.

Hamlin was looking at the boy, who now lay quietly sleeping. The desperately large injection of the serum had saved him, dragged him back from the jaws of death. Twelve days previously, on the Fourth of July, the child had injured his hand while setting off firecrackers; tetanus had developed, and but for Hamlin's serum, a fatal termination would have occurred. Now recovery was assured.

"This must be the hundredth life you've saved, doctor," said the house surgeon.

But Hamlin did not answer, for the words had only deepened the bitterness in his soul. What were those hundred lives saved for the one life lost to him?

It was nearly six years since Miriam Gray had broken their engagement. It had occurred so quickly, with such dramatic swiftness, that he had not even felt the pang till she was gone out of his life irrevocably. Their engagement had been a dream of happiness. During the four short weeks that it lasted Hamlin's soul had seemed as though winged; his work was consecrated now. It had been formerly a vague desire to benefit humanity; now it was for Miriam.

She knew he was a doctor, attached to the institute, but she did not know the nature of his duties. He had told her when three weeks remained before their wedding day. He had told her eagerly, enthusiastically, of his specific researches into a serum, and cure of tetanus. There was a cause, he said, but it was, in the main, unsatisfactory. He had improved on it; soon it was to be given to the world and humanity would bless his name. That, the fruition of his years of toil, he dedicated to her.

"But, dearest, how does one know that these sera will prove efficacious?" Miriam asked. "Does it not mean the death of many poor people who trust to the hospital doctors?"

"O, no," he answered, patting her cheek and smiling. "We 'try it on the dog'—literally."

"You are a vivisector?" she gasped.

"I am," he answered, with proud obtuseness. "Why of course I am! What is the painless death of a few animals compared with the lives of human beings?"

"I won't argue it with you," she burst out, passionately. "But I will never marry a man who tortures animals. You must choose between your tortures and me."

And all his remonstrances failed to change her. She would hear no reason, listen to no appeal. Her mind was obstinately fixed. Either Hamlin must give up his life work or her. And then he knew that his decision was already made—because, to him, duty meant more than anything in the world. So he had left her.

He had never seen her again. But he had heard of her marriage the following year. Her sister Evelyn had told him, meeting him by chance in the street.

"The mother has been outside the ward for fifteen minutes, doctor," said the house surgeon. "Shall I let her come in for one moment? She has her feelings under control. She's a fine woman, that Mrs. Keith."

Keith! That was the name. It had slipped out of his mind, with many bitter memories, but he remembered it now. Miriam had married Abel Keith, a quiet, oldish man; this must be her child, then. It was the faint resemblance to her that had started his thoughts along their old, well-worn channels.

"Wait, Mercer," said Hamlin, rising abruptly. "Tell her she can come in a moment. I don't want to meet her. I knew her once. I want to get out of this."

He goes up hastily and passed out through the door at the opposite end of the ward, while the house surgeon looked after him in wonder, scenting a tragedy. But Hamlin hastened down the stairs, heedless of the impression he gave. What an irony, that he should have been the means of saving her child—Miriam's child!

Yet the next morning he found a letter upon his table which set the blood hurrying through his veins. Too well he knew that writing. He opened it slowly, fighting down the impulse to fling it into the fire unread.

"Dear Dr. Hamlin," it began. "I want to see you, to thank you for saving Ronald's life. Will you forget and forgive everything that has passed? I cannot rest until I have your forgiveness. Now all my views have changed."

MIRIAM.

The house of the Keiths was opposite the park—four miles away from the dingy, old-fashioned quarter in which St. Mark's was set. Hamlin had not been near the place for years. Yet that afternoon, being free, he did tramp into the park, and, so trapping through the cool groves that eased the oppression of that fiery July day, he found his footsteps inevitably treading toward the place which had been forbidden him.

And at last, toward the cool of the afternoon, he found himself seated upon a bench facing the Keith mansion, dreaming vain dreams. He remembered that spot well; there Miriam and he had sat together when sion, dreaming vain dreams.

He had been dreaming for half an hour when he was suddenly recalled to himself. A quiet, elderly man was standing in front of him. The face seemed familiar. The man stretched out his hand.

"Are you not Dr. Hamlin, sir?" he asked. "Yes, I was sure I knew your face. My name is Abel Keith. Surely you remember me?"

"Indeed I do, Mr. Keith," said Hamlin, springing to his feet courteously. So this was Miriam's husband. He could well imagine how the disparity in tastes and years must have weighed on her.

"Miriam sent you a letter yesterday," said Mr. Keith, taking a place beside him. "We hoped that you would call. My wife and her sister will be passing this way in a few moments on their return from the hospital; they always walk through the park. Now, you must stay, and meet them—indeed you must, doctor. I cannot, of myself, thank you sufficiently for having given us back our child. It is our only one," he added wistfully.

"I can't," Hamlin stammered. "I have an engagement. I—"

"Now, my dear fellow," answered the other, smiling, "pray don't be so foolish. I know all about that misunderstanding of yours with Miriam, and I don't say I regret it now, for it gave me a wife. But old friends must not be unforgiving. Stay a while, doctor!"

Hamlin looked at him in disgust. The old dotard! Did he, then, know nothing, immersed as he was in his books—did he know nothing of the intensity of his love for Miriam, that he should seek thus to revive it?

Mr. Keith was prattling beside him, telling of a hundred little things that harrowed Hamlin's heart. He would find that Miriam had not changed in the least, he said.

"I won't deny," continued the scholar, "that when Miriam told me she had changed her views and repented having broken the engagement between you—I won't deny that I did have hopes that things might be adjusted."

Now Hamlin was sure, that he was dreaming. The old man babbled on. "I'm going to tell you about my little romance, my boy—for you are a boy in years, compared with me, and I feel that I have you to thank for having given me the most charming wife in the world. You know I was engaged to Miriam, but I always felt she didn't love me. And I offered her her freedom three times, but she refused to accept it. And so things went on until the very day before our marriage. And then I—I welched."

"You what, sir?" exclaimed the other.

"Welched! Made myself scarce. Rejected her. Yes, my boy, I was absent in Europe a year, and when I came back Miriam saw things the same way that I did. And you know it always had been Evelyn whom I really loved. She is older and our tastes are more alike. So that is how I came to marry Evelyn."

"You married—Evelyn?" said Hamlin, choking.

"Indeed I did, and very happily, too," answered the old scholar. "Don't you think Ronald looks like her a little? Why, what alls you, my boy? The heat must be too much for you. Dear me—let's come into the house. Why, here are the ladies! Evelyn, dear, you remember Hamlin. Miriam! Eh? Why, you seem to remember each other very well!"

Havana's Maine Memorial. The memorial of the birth of the Cuban republic, to be erected in Havana, is to be a monument composed of the forward turret of the ill-fated battleship Maine, resting on a round stone column supported by an octagonal base of three steps. Out of the smoke of an explosion at the top of the turret will rise the figure in Carrara marble of a maiden, representing the new republic and holding aloft the Cuban flag. Two gun muzzles will protrude from the turret, on its face will be five reliefs depicting scenes connected with the destruction and raising of the Maine, and below the turret will be a tablet with the laurel entwined American and Cuban shields, and an inscription.

CONSTIPATION

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods, they do not scour; they do not grip; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that cleanses these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverishing it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it. Price 25 cents. All Druggists.

TORTURED BY UGLY ITCHING ERUPTION

Doctor Recommended Resinol. Half of a 50c Jar Cured It.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 5, 1912.—"My little daughter was taken with a very small spot on the back of her hand. It grew larger and caused her more trouble. When she would scratch it, it would bleed and get very ugly looking, so I doctored it myself for about a year, and at last it broke out on both knees, and when she would go to bed she would scratch, and was so tortured and suffered so from the itching, that I took her to our doctor, who recommended Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment.

Improved with first application. I sent for samples and after the first application the itching and inflammation was improved, and I kept it up night and morning, and by the time the sample was gone she complained very little, so I got a fifty cent jar, and before that was half gone the trouble had entirely disappeared." (Signed) Mrs. Maude Schmechel, 2727 Presbury Street.

Nothing we can say of Resinol equals what others, such as Mrs. Schmechel, say of it. If you are suffering from itching, burning skin troubles, pimples, blackheads, dandruff, chapped face and hands, ulcers, boils, stubborn sores, or piles, it will cost you nothing to try Resinol Ointment and Soap. Just send to Dept. 13-K, Resinol Chem. Co., Baltimore, Md., for a free sample of each. Sold by all druggists or by parcel post.

Occasional Visitor. A notable housekeeper of the past generation, before the days of screens, had just announced with decision that she never had any flies.

"But, Aunt Augusta," faltered the timid visitor, "it seems to me that I saw a few in the dining-room."

"Oh, those," replied her aunt, with a majestic wave of the hand, "were the neighbors' flies. They will come in occasionally. But I was saying, we never have any of our own."—Youth's Companion.

Too Much for Him. The elevator passed the homely man's floor.

"Here, boy," he cried, "let me out on the sixth. I thought you knew that was my floor."

"Excuse me, sah," returned the boy, stopping the elevator and returning to the sixth floor. "I ought to know your face, sah, but de trouble is I have to remember so many ob' em, an' you's am so complicated, sah."

New Grand Central Terminal

A wonderful city, within a city, built for the comfort and convenience of the traveling public.

The main Grand Central Terminal Building in New York is now open to the public. This vast improvement is more than a great railway Terminal—it is a Terminal City, complete in itself, providing every detail essential to comfort and convenience.

It will embrace convention, amusement and exhibition halls, hotels, clubs and restaurants; post office, express offices, modern apartment and office buildings, and numerous stores and specialty shops.

Grand Central Terminal is the Heart of New York. At Forty-second Street and Park Avenue

(Fourth Avenue), one block from Fifth Avenue and convenient to Broadway.

It is the only Terminal on all lines of local traffic—subway, surface and elevated. More than 7,000 cars pass its doors every day, affording easy transit facilities to any part of Greater New York. Around it, and within a radius of a few blocks, are forty-nine hotels, fifty-eight clubs and thirty-five theatres.

Three new lines of underground transportation are now building to Grand Central Terminal, and soon there will be six levels for human traffic in Forty-second Street.

Underneath the Terminal City and its streets are 33 miles of railway tracks on two separate levels, the upper for Through Service and the lower for Suburban Service.

Each level forms a complete terminal in itself, separate entrances and exits, with equal facilities for the comfort of passengers.

Both levels are reached by gently inclined walks. No stair climbing, and no confusion, since incoming and outgoing traffic is separated.

Ticket, Pullman, Baggage and other facilities are progressively arranged from waiting room to train, no step need be retraced.

Plan your trip East over the New York Central Lines; enjoy restful sleep on the "Water Level Route," three hours of picturesque grandeur along the historic Hudson and enter
