Assessor—J. W. VanRiper.
The following were named as the committee: W. H. Heselschwerdt, E. L. Negus and J. Hummel.

Assaulted and Robbed.

John Amann, aged about 60 years and residing in Jackson was assaulted and robbed in the rear of the White block is broad daylight Friday and two ex-convicts, John Duff and Joseph Saunders, are under arrest for the offense. Lieutenant of Police Chase, of Jackson, after rigidly questioning Saunders, announced that he had secured from him a full and complete confession. Duff, however, does not admit he is guilty.

The prison records show that John Duff was sentenced there from Monroe county November 13, 1911, for from one to five years for larceny, and was released on parole the 30th of last November. It shows, too, that Joseph Saunders was sentenced there from Washtenaw county December 4, 1911, for from one to fifteen years for highway robbery.

Saunders was employed by the Flanders Mfg. Co. at this place and was one of the men who held up Joseph Weber and robbed him. The scene of the robbery was near the D. J. & C. waiting room. Saunders was let out on parole recently. He has a family residing at Toledo.

Saunders will doubtless be taken back to the "pen," where he has fourteen years staring him in the face.

Annual May Festival.

The twentieth annual May Festival, which occurs May 14 to 17, will be given on a much more pretentious scale than any of its predecessors, owing to the completion of Hill auditorium, which makes possible the proper recognition of several interesting features which makes possible the proper recognition of several interesting features which culminate this year.

The fact that it will be the 20th consecutive festival, and that the present season marks the 25th year of service on the part of Prof. Albert A. Stanley; that this is the centenary of the births of two immortal masters, Verdi and Wagner; that for the first time a large children's chorus is to be heard; that a much larger orchestra has been engaged and that the list of participating artists consists almost entirely of "stars," whose positions in their respective firmaments are universally recognized and some of the events which may be noted.

A Severe Accident.

Mrs. H. Stanbridge, of Lyndon, met with an unfortunate accident about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. She was breaking a round stick of wood and when she struck the stick it broke and a portion of struck her in the left eye.

She was taken to the U. of M. hospital in Ann Arbor, accompanied by Dr. J. T. Woods, and the injured eye was removed in the evening. Mr. Stanbridge is confined to his home with an attack of heart trouble and the children of the couple are just recovering from the scarlet fever.

Pomona Grange Meeting.

Washtenaw and Wayne County Pomona Granges will hold a joint session in the Masonic Temple at Ypsilanti on Tuesday, March 11. All fourth degree members are cordially invited to attend and share in the pleasant features planned for the occasion, and for the good of the Order.

The morning session begins at 10 o'clock. Patrons going on the D. U. R. will be met by a reception committee, and the Temple is one block east of Ypsilanti waiting room.

An interesting program is prepared and a fifth degree team will initiate candidates into the degree of Pomona. The program is as follows:

Theme—Rural Progress.

Report of Committee Upon Agricultural Expert.

Lecture Work Plans for 1913; brief reports from every grange represented in charge of state lecturer.

Grange Lite—Mrs. C. H. Bramble.

Dinner.

1 p. m. Conferring fifth degree.

Open Meeting.

Benefits of Organization Among Dairymen—E. S. Bird, of Romulus.

The Housewives League—Mrs. A. O. Dunk, president of Detroit League.

Entertainment features will be interspersed throughout the program.

A Dangerous Counterfeit.

A very dangerous counterfeit $5 bill is now in circulation. It is said to be the most dangerous $5 silver certificate discovered in recent years. The counterfeit is apparently printed from photo-mechanical plates of excellent workmanship on two pieces of paper, between which silk threads have been disturbed. It is of the series of 1899, and bears the signatures of J. C. Napier, Register of the Treasury, and Lee McClung, United States Treasurer. The seal is darker than the genuine, and the green ink on the back of the note is also heavier than that of a real note. The letter E which precedes the serial number is larger than it should be, and the right side of the Indian head is not so well defined, owing to a merger of the lines of the face and those representing the hair. The general appearance of the counterfeit: Chief Flynn says, is likely to deceive even careful handlers of money.

School Notes.

Leo Martin, who has been working in Detroit has re-entered high school.

The high school basketball team was defeated by the Wanderers, of Ann Arbor, by the score of 35 to 16.

The following pictures were selected by the committee of teachers and now adorn the walls of the school rooms: The Parthenon, Mona Lisa, The Gleaners, Hoffman's Head of Christ, The Aurora, Westminster Abbey, Stratford-on-the-Avon and the Landing of the Pilgrims.

Supt. Hendry will give an illustrated lecture upon the grandeur of the Rockies Wednesday evening, March 12, in the auditorium of the high school. These views are in the natural colors and the scenery represented is in many cases beyond the conception of most American people. Ten cents admission will be charged, the proceeds to be used to pay for the lantern. The public are cordially invited to attend.

THE BALL PLANT IS SOLD.

Ann Arbor Parties Have Bought the Steel Ball Machinery.

Ann Arbor parties have purchased from the Detroit Trust Co., receivers of the Flanders Mfg. Co., the machinery, patents and business of the steel ball factory.

The sale was closed Tuesday morning and the new company will be known as the Hoover Steel Ball Company. The new company is now conducting factory and will continue to operate it in Chelsea for some time. The plant is to be moved from here to Ann Arbor as soon as the building in that city can be prepared for the reception of the machinery, which will probably take from sixty to ninety days. The payment of $75,000 was made to the receivers Tuesday morning.

In order to close the deal within the time limit set by the extension of the option to L. J. Hoover by the receivers, a plan was devised for having ten men underwrite the proposition. This was accordingly done by M. J. Fritz, Wm. Arnold, Walter E. Mack, R. T. Dobson, E. W. Groves, H. L. Douglas, Dr. L. P. Hall, Dr. R. B. Canfield, F. A. Stivers and Dan Zimmerman, of Ann Arbor. These gentlemen have assumed the responsibility of subscribing and paying over $75,000, and have taken over the plant as owners, their possession dating from Tuesday morning.

There are all kinds of reports as to what will be done with the remainder of the Chelsea plant of the Flanders Mfg. Co. Just what the outcome will be, time alone will develop. It may possibly be started up again ere long.

Lafayette Grange.

Lafayette Grange will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Sweetland at ten o'clock Friday morning, March 14. The program for the afternoon session is as follows:

Closing song.

Communication.

To the Citizens and Taxpayers of Chelsea.

Gentlemen: We are living in a period when progress demands improvement and when the essential duties are carried out it is necessary to have a body of experienced men to execute these demands.

If you want to mellorate your village it is necessary that you give it the proper officials that thoroughly comprehend the task. Without any personal disaffection, but through public sentiment, the people of this corporation will not hesitate to admit that they could not elect a better qualified man to the responsible position of mayor of this village than Mr. Wm. Bacon. He is a man who thoroughly understands municipal affairs and does not conjecture at things; always ready to aid industries that tend to improve the welfare of public and business interests. He will serve the people intently and is neither a conspirer or instigator, but will give every matter of detail due consideration without showing the least partiality. All who are personally acquainted with him know what he has done for his townspeople in the past and those of you who would know can look back at his previous record of administrations and see if there is one thing available that you can set aside or point your finger at that he has done contrary to the public and from which they have derived no benefits.

It is a matter that deserves a great deal of consideration to place a man in the presidency of this village under the circumstances that have existed for the last fifteen years. He must be acquainted with the facts to be able to carry out the expectations of the people and not lacking in experience in municipal duties.

We, therefore, ask that you give this serious matter due consideration when you cast your vote Monday, March 10, 1913.

Working for Salaries

We often hear teachers, clerks and others who work for salaries say that it is no use for them to open a bank account. If your expenses eat up all your salary it is only one more reason why you should have a bank account. At the end of the month your checks will show you where every penny went. When you look them over you will see where you could have saved a little here and there. Each month you will save a little more and you will soon have a bank account to be proud of. Our bank always has a warm welcome for young people with their first deposit. We know it means much to them.

Racing Cars Go "Over Hurdles."

California opens the season with annual $5,000 Imperial Valley Event. Studebaker's great run beats field of big cars and pushes Oldfield for largest share of purse.

Of all the courses on which motor cars have raced in America, there is none which boasts the weird and wonderful hazard of the Imperial Valley highway, where Californians have just been ushering in the racing season of 1913.

Every foot of the 210-mile course is below sea level. Participation by no means implies submerging, however. On the contrary, there was far more hurdling and acrobatics by the daredevils who entered.

Always once, sometimes two or three times in each mile, the other wise fine road crosses an irrigation ditch on a cement culvert, eight feet wide and from one to eight feet above the level of the highway. Some of the grades leading to these culverts are very abrupt.

When, with $5,000 in prize money waiting, two 120-horsepower Flats, a Studebaker, two Nationals, a Cadillac, Buick "40," Napier "Six" and a Ford loose at the irrigation culverts, spectators beheld the first motor car hurdle race in history.

A string of cars would come rushing along at perhaps 70 miles an hour. Approaching a culvert, the leading driver would throw out his clutch, apply all brakes, skid a bit perhaps, and slow down to about 35 miles. Just before the "take-off," brakes would be loosened and the car headed carefully for the middle of the culvert.

Up the incline it would scoot and leap from the top, all four wheels off the ground, and sometimes covering more than 50 feet before landing with a thump.

One by one, like sheep jumping a fence, the other cars would follow, bystanders cheering madly.

Of course, the strain was terrific. Wrenched steering gear and broken springs were common. Car after car dropped out for repairs, the list including Teddy Tetzlaff and the juggernaut in which he set the world's road record last year at Santa Monica.

Out of the bunch with a hop, skip and jump came the little Studebaker racer, driven by Frank Good, and joined battle with Barney Oldfield in the strife for first and second place.

Snorting, bellowing and plunging, the immense Flat tried in vain to shake off its American pursuer. But the Studebaker stuck like a leech, to the huge delight of the immense throng that lined the course, for all Southern California is a hotbed of Studebaker enthusiasm.

The strangely assorted pair raced together clear to the finish, with the rest of the field nowhere in sight. Oldfield managed to keep the lead, thereby winning his first big road race, after many trials. But the finish was so close that spectators say Barney came near tossing his mechanic into the Studebaker car as they went over the last hurdle, both in the air at the same time.

One of the Studebaker cars is on exhibition at Palmer's garage.

GREAT NAME NOW A MEMORY

With the Passing of Junius Brutus Booth Famous Family of Players Has Become Extinct.

The suicide of Junius Brutus Booth in England marks the end of one of the final chapters in the history of the most illustrious family of players known to American stage. Almost a hundred years ago the grandfather of the young man came to this country, an actor of established London reputation. He still lives in the memory of a few old players as one of the finest tragic actors ever seen on our boards.

On his death in 1853 his son Edwin found himself charged with the responsibility of sustaining the great reputation of his father. That the mantle of the elder Booth fell upon shoulders capable of wearing it gracefully and with infinite credit to the family has long since been a matter of history. Edwin Booth left behind him a reputation second to that of no man of his calling in private as well as professional life. He gave to the City of New York one of the noblest playhouses it has ever had, and to his fellow actors the Players club. The amount of his private charities will never be known, for the Booths were ever a modest race.

The father of the man, whose tragic death has just been chronicled was Junius Brutus Booth, an actor of good repute, though he never gained the high place won by his brother, Edwin. The mother of the younger Junius Brutus was Agnes Booth, one of the very best actresses of her day.

Thus passes the glory of an honored name.—Exchange.

BACKS UP CLAIMS OF ERIC

French Scientist Points to Proof That Norsemen Visited America in Eleventh Century.

M. Henri Cordier in the current number of the Journal des Savants calls attention to a proof of the discovery of America in the eleventh century which has hitherto passed unnoticed. In the Saga of Eric the Red it is said that when Thorfin Karlsefne returned from "Markland," or Newfoundland, in 1005, he took back to Greenland with him two children from the northern land of the Skrælings, and four words of their language are preserved in the Saga. These words were thought by the Greenlanders to be the names of the children's parents or chiefs; but M. Cordier shows that they can be traced to Esquimaux phrases of the present day, two of them meaning something like "Wait a moment" and "The Northern Islands" respectively. To this he joins the statement of Prof. Waldemar Jocheson, of St. Petersburg, that the scientific expedition sent by F. P. Riabuschinski to Kamchatka has proved the morphological connection of the Kamchatkan language with several Indian dialects of North America. This derives additional interest from the news from America of the discovery by Mr. V. Stefansson of tribes of white Esquimaux showing many traces of Norse descent, on the shores of Coronation gulf.—The Athenaeum.

Genius and Childishness.

A great philosopher once said that every true genius remained, in a certain sense, a child his whole life long. If such is the case, then relying upon believable accounts, De Quincey must have ever displayed this mark of mental distinction. In the practical affairs of daily life, he is said to have been unusually helpless. On one occasion, it is related, he starved while carrying in his pocket a draft for a considerable sum, not knowing that it could be converted into cash. Early in life his wife died, leaving him with a family of children, whom he was unable to care for properly. Toward the close of his career, however, when he had practically broken his terrible habit, his works were circulated widely, he seems to have enjoyed more prosperity. He died in 1859.

Birdless Riviera.

The absence of birds has often been noticed by visitors to the Riviera. It is now being very particularly felt by those who are interested in the production of roses, oranges, lemons and flowers and vegetables generally, as insects which attack plants have lately been unusually numerous and various methods have been adopted—mostly in vain—to put an end to their ravages.

The introduction of various insect eating beetles is being tried and a ladybird farmer might probably prosper in the district, but the greatest remedy would be the protection of birds which would at the same time lend some cheer to the silent gardens of the Cote d'Azur.

Lawyer Almost Came to Grief.

The paper the other day told how a Missouri judge almost punished a lawyer whose conduct in court was reprehensible. In a voice "quivering with emotion" his honor sent the jury from the room, and then, addressing the offending counsel, said: "Your questions are utterly improper and your personal conduct deserves the keenest reproof and condemnation. If you continue this behavior I shall fine you for contempt of court." Would it be permissible to suggest that the most effective way to fine a lawyer for contempt of court is to fine him?—Kansas City Star.

Point of View.

Redd—Black took a chance in a raffle for an automobile the other day, and he won it.

Greene—He's a lucky dog!

How Michigan Farmers Are Successfully Fighting Live Stock Diseases

If you are not doing something to rid your farm animals of the deadly stomach and intestinal worms you are simply Letting Down the Bars to hog cholera and all the other fatal diseases which have cost the farmers of this country over fifty millions of dollars the past year. YOU can't afford to run this risk. YOU can't afford not to take preventive measures. The best way of preventing these deadly plagues from getting a foothold among your stock is to keep every animal worm free and in the best possible condition.

Worms are the cause of 90 per cent of live stock losses. Thousands of Michigan farmers have learned this fact and by effectually striking at the cause have successfully won their fight. They have found "an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." Read how they have stopped the loss and improved the value of their live stock.

"I have fed SAL-VET to all my sheep, hogs and pigs, and also to one of my work horses and also to my cow. The horses have rounded out splendidly; my sheep never looked so well at this time of the year and my hog and spring pigs are in the best of health. I have always been slow to feed any of the stock food or medicine, believing that good feeding, good health, but I am well satisfied with the results obtained from SAL-VET. It has certainly improved to a marked degree, the condition of my stock."—J. H. SCHAFER, Dept. Sheep Dept. Michigan Agricultural Society, Hastings, Mich.

"SAL-VET is a fine thing. It was well worth the price for my cows alone. I have had some of them with trouble with their feet from it, with a single exception and I attribute their improvement to SAL-VET."—HARVEY F. DASHIELL, Britton, Mich.

"We keep SAL-VET accessible to our sheep all the time and have found its use very effective in keeping out worms, and the sheep in a generally healthy condition. We have also found it an excellent conditioner and worm cleaner for horses. Our experience is that of many of the best farmers in this locality."—A. A. WOOD, Sons, For Roscoe M. Wood, Saline, Mich.

"I have been feeding your SAL-VET to my sheep, hogs, horses and cattle for some time, and feel that I would not willingly do business without it. It keeps all my stock in fine condition and in a high state of thrift, and since feeding your remedy, I have seen no evidence of parasitic infection. I can confidently recommend SAL-VET to every stockman."—W. M. H. ANDERSON, Free, Fourth National Bank, Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Our hogs are free from worms, and look sleek and giving them SAL-VET. I feed it just as I do the sheep, and before them was just as good."—FRED MANLEY, R. 2, White Cloud, Michigan.

"Having thoroughly tested your 'SAL-VET,' I have found it to be exactly as you say it is. I feed it to hogs and pigs and never had better results in my life. Many hogs in the neighborhood of cholera, I have had no trouble here. I have used your LIVER-BROKER, R. 2, Byron Center, Mich.

"SAL-VET is all gone, and as common salt does not begin to take its place. I want you to send me a new box of SAL-VET. I want to feed it to my sheep, hogs and horses and dogs. I have seen no evidence of parasitic infection. I can confidently recommend SAL-VET to every stockman."—E. A. BOSTHAUGH, Fairview, Mich.

The Great Worm Destroyer and Live Stock Conditioner

Look Out for These Danger Signs

Coughing, rough coats, laggard steps, poor appetites and dull eyes. These are the common symptoms of worm infection and should disease break out in your neighborhood the chances are a hundred to one against you, and your entire herds may be swept away with a suddenness that will appall you. You can greatly lessen this danger from disease if not altogether avoid these heavy losses simply by letting your stock run to "Sal-Vet"—the cheapest and greatest worm destroyer as well as the best preventive of live stock diseases.

"Sal-Vet" is a medicated salt which works a wonderful change in all live stock.

It first destroys and expels the deadly worms and gives nature a chance to put every animal you own in a healthy, vigorous condition. It is the best stock insurance you can get because it costs so little and does so much. For one-twelfth of a cent a day any hog or sheep can run to it freely and will doctor themselves. It costs only a trifle more for larger animals and requires no mixing, no dosing, no drenching, no starving—no bother at all. I prove all this or no pay.

The Count at Home.

"Yes," remarked the returned tourist, with a reminiscent smile, "I was continually bumping into old friends and acquaintances while abroad. Went into a fashionable barber shop in the Rue de Saint Gerard. In Paris, and whom do you suppose I met there?"

"Oh, I'm no good at guessing," said his friend. "Who was it?"

"The Count de Pompadour, who cut such a swell at Atlantic City last year."

"Let's see—you and the count didn't mix very well. Did he condescend to speak to you?"

"He certainly did. The moment I entered the tonsorial parlors, he caught my eye and bowed and smiled and said, 'Monsieur is next.'"

Disagreeable.

"He is the most disagreeable man I know!"

"Yes, he told me he had to ask you three times for five dollars you had borrowed."

SYNOPSIS.

At the beginning of great automobile races the mechanic of the Mercury, Stanton, machine, drops dead. Strange youth, Jose Floyd, volunteers, and is accepted. In the race during the twenty-four hour race Stanton meets a stranger, Miss Carlisle, who introduces herself.

CHAPTER II.—(Continued.)

"My father is president of a tire company," she idly remarked. "His tires are being used on some of the cars, the Mercury for one, I believe, and he wanted to watch their testing and use. So, after a dinner engagement we could not escape, we motored down here from the city. You see I have not viewed much of the race. I admit this does not look very perilous and I am a bit disappointed. I again hear short crystal laugh. 'I shall hope better things of the famous Stanton; I want to admire him very much. But I am detaining you, and you are leaving.' Every thanks for your patience."

"Hardly leaving, since the twenty-four hour race is not six hours old," he corrected briefly. "I am glad to have been of any use to you."

She returned his salute; then, upon the cool impulse of one accustomed to doing as she chose, put her question directly:

"Ah—I am Miss Carlisle; I would like to know who has been good enough to aid me in my ignorance."

"My name is Stanton," he replied, and went on.

From the shelter of the obscurity he looked back. She had taken a step forward into the light and her veil had slipped aside as she gazed after him with an expression of acute and eager interest. She could not have been older than twenty-four or five, with a finely cut, beautiful face framed in waves of fair hair.

Floyd was sitting on a camp-stool outside the tent, chatting with a group of men, when Stanton returned. The rest had brought back the mechanic's color and animation; in fact, he looked ridiculously young and irresponsible. But he sprang up readily at the driver's nod.

"Time?" he asked, his gray eyes like burnished steel.

"Yes," Stanton confirmed. And to the nearest man, "Bring in the car."

There was an obedient commotion. Several men ran to flag the other driver; Floyd caught up goggles and cap, and knelt to tighten a legging strap. As Stanton made his own preparations, Mr. Green hustled up to him.

"We're leading," he reminded superfluously. "There isn't, really, any need for extra fast work, Stanton."

Stanton snapped a buckle, saying nothing.

"I telephoned to the office and told Rupert he needn't come. I told him that you had a new mfn."

"Well?"

"He said, 'Poor mut,'"

The driver straightened to his full height, his firm dark face looking to bronze inflexibility.

"You had better report his sympathy to Floyd, whom it is meant for," he advised hardily. "I'm not interested. If the company doesn't like the way I drive, let them get some one in my place; but while I do drive the car, I drive, and not Rupert or Floyd, or any one else. I'll neither take risks nor shrink them to order."

The assistant manager choked, speechless. He had no way of knowing why Stanton flashed a sullen glance toward the row of automobiles before the grand-stand, or who was meant by that "any one else." Meanwhile, he was intractable, he was subordinate, and he was obstinate—but he was Stanton.

The Mercury rolled in, the two men climbed from their seats, and there was a momentary delay for tank filling. Stanton took his place, expertly mentally speeding and retarding his motor while he waited for the workmen to finish.

"Stop a minute while I fix the carburetor," requested Floyd, from beside the machine. "It's colder late at night like this. Wait, you've dropped your glove."

Stanton silenced the engine. Something in the fresh voice, the boyish grace of the slight figure, the ready courtesy of the act, stirred him with a strange sensation and pricking shame at his own brutality. "Poor mut," a whisper repeated to his inner ear. When Floyd offered the gauntlet, the other dropped a hand upon his shoulder.

"Are you riding with me because you want the money badly enough to chance anything?" Stanton demanded harshly, "or because you are willing to trust my driving?"

Taken by surprise, open astonishment crossed the younger man's face, but his eyes did not flinch from the older, behind the goggles.

"I think you're the best driver on the track," came the steady answer. "And I'd rather trust myself to your recklessness than to some one else's mistakes, if you want to know. I guess you can steer straight enough for both of us."

Stanton's hand relaxed its hold. "Go fix your carburetor. Yes, I can steer—straight."

Again the blue-black eyes flashed sneering defiance toward the grand-stand; for the moment, Miss Carlisle's hope of witnessing desperate feats by the Mercury car seemed far from realization.

But the Mercury had not circled the mile oval four times when the Duplex, its choked feed-pipe cleared at last, burst from the paddock with its master driver at the wheel and bent on the recovery of lost time. The Mercury was on the back stretch of track, running casually near sixty miles at the moment.

"Car comin'," Floyd cautioned suddenly.

Stanton raised his head, alert a fractional second too late, and his closest rival shot past him, roaring down the white path. It was too much; Floyd and Miss Carlisle sank out of memory together, as Stanton reached for throttle and spark. The Mercury snarled and leaped like a startled cat. The dull period was over.

The Mercury car was slightly faster, but the Duplex held the inside line, and the difference between the drivers was not in skill so much as in daredevilry. Slower machines kept conservatively out of the way as the dangerous rivals fought out their speed-battle. Three times Stanton hunted the Duplex around the track, gaining on each lap, until the last circuit was made with the cars side by side, a flaming team. The spectators, scanty at this hour before dawn, rose, applauding and cheering, as the two passed again, still clinging together.

But gradually it became evident that Stanton, who held the outside, was steadily crowding the Duplex toward the paddock fence. Nor could the Duplex defend itself from the maneuver which must ultimately force it to fall behind at one of the turns or accept destruction by collision. The machines were so close that a swerve on the part of either, the blow-out of a tire or a catch in the ruts cut in the track at certain points, meant ungentle death. Mercilessly, gradually, Stanton pressed his perilous advantage. And at the crucial moment he heard a low, exultant laugh.

"Cut him closer!" urged his mechanic's eager, excited accents at his ear. "We'll get him on this turn—he's weakened!"

"Cut him closer!"

The comrade triumphed, came to Stanton as an unaccustomed cordial. They were passing the grand-stand, just ahead lay the worst curve.

It was partly reputation which won. If the Duplex had held firm, the Mercury must in self-preservation have yielded room. But the driver knew Stanton, guessed him capable of wrecking both by obstinate persistence in attack, and dared not meet the issue. There came the gun-like reports of a shut-off motor, the Duplex slackened its furious pace, and Stanton hurried past him on the turn itself, lurching across the ruts, and led the way down the track.

The witnesses in stands and paddock went frantic. Floyd pumped oil. Stanton snatched a glance at the miniature watch strapped on his wrist, over his glove, and slightly reduced speed. The maneuver had been successful, but the driver knew that it might have called down upon him the judges' just censure and have sent him from the track, disqualified.

The number of laps steadily grew nothing.

"For Mr. Stanton," the boy insisted.

on the bulletin register. A faint, dull light overspread the sky, the fore-runner of the early summer dawn. At four o'clock the Mercury unexpectedly blew out a tire, reeling across to the fence line from the shock and the jar of sharply applied brakes. Stanton said something, and sent his car limping cautiously around to the camp where its repairs stood ready.

Floyd slid out of his hard, narrow seat rather stiffly. The cold grayness was bright enough now to show the streaks of grimy dust and oil where the men's faces had failed to protect them from the effects of fatigue and strain of watching. Stanton looked for the inevitable pitcher of water, but found himself confronted instead with a grinning, admiringly bowed messenger boy who held out a cluster of heavy purple flowers.

"What?" marveled the disgruntled driver. "What idiotic trick—"

"For Mr. Stanton, sir," deferentially insisted the boy, who would have addressed the president as "bo," and glibbed at the car.

Stanton caught the blossoms roughly, anticipating a practical joke from some fun-loving fellow-competitor, and saw a white card dangling by a bit of ribbon.

WILSON'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

New Chief Executive Declares His Aim Will Be to Correct the Evils of Our National Life Without Impairing the Good.

Washington, March 4.—President Woodrow Wilson's inaugural address delivered today, one of the shortest on record, was as follows:

There has been a change of government. It began two years ago, when the house of representatives became Democratic by a decisive majority. It has now been completed. The senate about to assemble will also be Democratic. The offices of president and vice-president have been put into the hands of Democrats. What does the change mean? That is the question that is uppermost in our minds today. That is the question I am going to try to answer, in order, if I may, to interpret the occasion.

It means much more than the mere success of a party. The success of a party means little except when the nation is using that party for a large and definite purpose. No one can mistake the purpose for which the nation now seeks to use the Democratic party. It seeks to use it to interpret a change in its own plans and point of view. Some old things with which we had grown familiar, and which had begun to creep into the very habit of our thought and of our lives, have altered their aspect as we have latterly looked critically upon them, with fresh, awakened eyes; have dropped their disguises and shown themselves alien and sinister. Some new things, as we look frankly upon them, willing to comprehend their real character, have come to assume the aspect of things long believed in and familiar, stuff of our own convictions. We have been refreshed by a new insight into our own life.

We see that in many things that life is very great. It is incomparably great in its material aspects, in its body of wealth, in the diversity and sweep of its energy, in the industries which have been conceived and built up by the genius of individual men and the limitless enterprise of groups of men. It is great, also, very great, in its moral force. Nowhere else in the world have noble men and women exhibited in more striking form the beauty and energy of sympathy and helpfulness and counsel in their efforts to rectify wrong, alleviate suffering, and set the weak in the way of strength and hope.

But the evil has come with the good, and much fine gold has been corroded. With riches has come inexcusable waste. We have squandered a great part of what we might have used, and have not stopped to conserve the exceeding bounty of nature, without which our genius for enterprise would have been worthless and impotent, scornful to be careful, shamefully prodigal as well as admirably efficient. We have been proud of our industrial achievements, but we have not hitherto stopped thoughtfully enough to count the human cost, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, of the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly the years through. The groans and agony of it all had not yet reached our ears, its solemn, moving undertone of our life, coming up out of the mines and factories and out of every home where the struggle had its intimate and familiar seat. With the great government went many many deep-seated things which we too long delayed to look into and scrutinize with candid, fearless eyes. The great government we loved has too often been made use of for private and selfish purposes, and those who used it had forgotten the people.

At last a vision has been vouchsafed us of our life as a whole. We see the bad with the good, the debased and decadent with the sound and vital. With this vision we approach new affairs. Our duty is to cleanse, to reconsider, to restore, to correct the evil without impairing the good, to purify and humanize every process of our common life without weakening or sentimentalizing it. There has been something crude and heartless and unfeeling in our haste to succeed and be great. Our thought has been 'Let every man look out for himself, let every generation look out for itself,' while we reared giant machinery which made it impossible that any but those who stood at the levers of control should have a chance to look out for themselves. We had not forgotten our morals. We remembered well enough that we had set up a policy which was meant to serve the humblest as well as the most powerful, with an eye single to the standards of justice and fair play, and remembered it with pride. But we were very heedless and in a hurry to be great.

We have come now to the sober second thought. The scales of heedlessness have fallen from our eyes. We have made up our minds to square every process of our national life again with the standards we so proudly clean house and buy autos and char-lots."

ly set up at the beginning and have always carried at our hearts. Our work is a work of restoration.

We have itemized with some degree of particularity the things that ought to be altered and here are some of the chief items: A tariff which cuts us off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation, and makes the government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests; a banking and currency system based upon the necessity of the government to sell its bonds fifty years ago and perfectly adapted to concentrating cash and restricting credits; an industrial system which, take it on all its sides, financial as well as administrative, holds capital in leading strings, restricts the liberties and exploits without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country; a body of agricultural activities never yet given the efficiency of great business undertakings or served as it should be through the instrumentality of science taken directly to the farm, or afforded the facilities of credit best suited to its practical needs; water courses undeveloped, waste places unreclaimed, forests untended, fast disappearing without plan or prospect of renewal; unregarded waste heaps at every mine. We have studied as perhaps no other nation has the most effective means of production, but we have not studied cost or economy as we should either as organizers of industry, as statesmen, or as individuals.

Nor have we studied and perfected the means by which government may be put at the service of humanity, in safeguarding the health of the nation, the health of its men and its women and its children, as well as their rights in the struggle for existence. This is no sentimental duty. The firm basis of government is justice, not pity. These are matters of justice. There can be no equality or opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politic, if men and women and children be not shielded in their lives, their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they cannot alter, control or singly cope with. Society must see to it that it does not itself crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts. The first duty of law is to keep sound the society it serves. Sanitary laws, pure food laws, and laws determining conditions of labor which individuals are powerless to determine for themselves are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency.

These are some of the things we ought to do, and not leave the others undone, the old-fashioned, never-to-be-neglected, fundamental safeguarding of property and of individual right. This is the high enterprise of the new day; to lift everything that concerns our life as a nation to the light that shines from the heart of every man's conscience and vision of the right. It is inconceivable that we should do this as partisans; it is inconceivable we should do it in ignorance of the facts as they are or in blind haste. We shall restore, not destroy. We shall deal with our economic system as it is and as it may be modified, not as it might be if we had a clean sheet of paper to write upon; and step by step we shall make it what it should be, in the spirit of those who question and knowledge, not shallow self-satisfaction or the excitement of excursions whether they can not tell. Justice, and only justice, shall always be our motto.

And yet it will be no cool process of mere science. The nation has been deeply stirred, stirred by a solemn passion, stirred by the knowledge of wrong, of ideals lost, of government too often debauched and made an instrument of evil. The feelings with which we face this new age of right and opportunity sweep across our heart-strings like some air out of God's own presence, where justice and mercy are reconciled and the judge and the brother are one. We know our task to be no mere task of politics, but a task which shall search us through and through, whether we be able to understand our time and the need of our people, whether we be indeed their spokesmen and interpreters, whether we have the pure heart to comprehend and the rectified will to choose our high course of action.

This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication. Here must be the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us; men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try? I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men, to my side. God helping men, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me!

What Would You Do?

"What would you do if you were a millionaire?" was the question propounded to the little boys of an East-side school the other day.

The little East-siders' answers were interesting. Some of them wrote:

"I would have a house with rooms for each kind of use, such as sitting room, bedroom and dining room."

"I would buy banks and be a bank president at a large salary."

"You remember just when I went away you were having a sort of a romance with a tall blue-eyed young fellow?"
"Yes, so I was."
"I trust the romance ended happily?"
"You bet it did; he has been paying me alimony for a year."

ECZEMA IN RED BLOTCHES

205 Kanter Ave., Detroit, Mich.—"Some time last summer I was taken with eczema. It began in my hair first with red blotches, then scalp, spreading to my face. The blotches were red on my face, dry and scaly, not large; on my scalp they were larger, some scabby. They came on my hands. The inside of my hands were all little lumps as though full of shot about one-sixteenth of an inch under the skin. Then they went to the outside and between and all over my fingers. It also began on the bottoms of my feet and the calves of my legs, and itch, oh, my! I never had anything like it and hope I never will again. The itching was terrible. My hands got so I could scarcely work."

"I tried different eczema ointments but without results. I also took medicine for it but it did no good. I saw the advertisement for a sample of Cuticura Ointment and Soap and sent for one. They did me so much good I bought some more, using them as per directions, and in about three weeks I was well again. Cuticura Soap and Ointment entirely cured me." (Signed) Benj. Passage, Apr. 8, 1912. Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Nervousness Explained.
The young man entered the president's office and stood first on one foot and then on the other. He dropped his hat, handkerchief and umbrella. Altogether he was a highly developed case of nervousness.

"Well, well," said the employer, "out with it!"

"I have come, sir," said the young man, and then began to stammer.

"Well, speak up. Have you come to ask for the hand of my daughter or a raise in salary?"

"If you please, sir," stammered the young man, "it's both."

His idea.

"Il Trovatore."

A selection of greatest popularity among music lovers in general, Verdi's beautiful "Il Trovatore," one of the strongest favorites of all the "popular classics," has been selected for the performance of the Aborn English Grand Opera company at the Whitney Theatre, Ann Arbor, Thursday, March 13.

The last word has been said by the foremost critics of the world in regard to the great musical beauties of this work, and the only criticism against it has been that there is too much beautiful music of the simple but lofty style that can be enjoyed by the person with an average musical ear, and which does not require of the listener an extensive musical education. Other grand operas written in the approved scientific style of latter years, attract small audiences of advanced musicians, while such dearly loved favorites of long standing as "Il Trovatore" continue to draw the crowds of music lovers who go to enjoy and not study the technicalities of the work. Messrs. Aborn have found this one of the most popular selections of all the classics and have therefore made an elaborate production of this famous opera, which they present oftener than any other.

BIRDS DEFENDED THEIR HOME

Made Violent Attack on Men Engaged in Painting Tower in Which They Had Nest.

Workmen who have been painting the tower of College hall on the Verdun campus were attacked while suspended on their lofty scaffold by two diminutive sparrow hawks, the self-appointed guardians of the tower, says the Nashville Democrat.

One of the birds, the workmen said, lighted upon one of the gargoyles of the tower soon after the painting was started, and after a few moments of reconnoitering sallied into the "mere man," pecking at his head and beating him with its wings. The workman fought back, but the bird was not hurt. Its cries brought its mate to its assistance, and the birds continued the battle.

A lucky stroke of the workman's paint brush at last sent one of the hawks away and the other soon followed. The workman said the birds were small, but that he was afraid his eyes would be pecked out before he could beat the hawks away. The behavior of the birds is strange, as this is not the nesting season, and they presumably had no reason for wanting to guard their tower except the fact that it had been their home for several years. Rarely if ever before have sparrow hawks been known to attack a human being.

WHY HE CONTINUED TO CALL

Neither the Great Man Nor Possibility of Business Formed the Attraction for Visitor.

"See here," said the great man, when the caller had finally been permitted to enter the private office, "this is the sixth time you have come to discuss this matter. I told you in the beginning that I would notify you when I was ready to take it up. Why do you insist on bothering me about it?"

"I'm sorry it's a bother to you to have me call."

"You must understand that I'm a very busy man. I can't understand how you are able to afford to waste so much time hanging around here, waiting to see me, when you must know that your coming isn't going to do you any good. I'll take up your case when I come to it in its regular order, and not before. I've told you that a number of times."

"Yes, I know you have; but that pretty girl who sits in your outer office, telling people you are busy, is one of the most entertaining girls I ever met."—Chicago Record Herald.

"Skunk Bear."

Dr. Charles Stuart Moody, the well-known outdoor writer, who has recently returned from an expedition in the Rockies to study the habits of the mountain goat, has an amusing and instructive article upon the little known wolverine in Outing. It begins thus:

If some patriotically-inclined sportsman were to get up a voting contest to decide upon the most worthless and at the same time the most diabolically-cunning animal on earth I should have to squander all my money buying votes for the wolverine. Doubtless the red fox would have many supporters, but Sir Reynard is one of the infant class in a Methodist Sunday school when compared to this "long-coupled" cross between an overgrown weasel and an undergrown bear that inhabits the North woods.

Power of the Editor.

According to French law, the editor of a newspaper wields more power than the proprietor. A wealthy Russian admirer of Louis Blanc founded a paper, "L'Homme Libre," of which Blanc was appointed editor. The Russian rather fancied himself as a writer, and sent some articles to the paper, which Blanc returned with thanks. This so infuriated the owner that he endeavored to make the courts compel Blanc to insert the articles. The judge held that an editor has a right to decline articles, even when written by his proprietor, and so dismissed the plaintiff's suit with costs. But it was probably within the proprietor's right to retaliate by dismissing the editor.

Brazil Has Oldest City.

St. Augustine, Fla., will have to take a back seat as the oldest city, according to Dr. Jacob Frank, former president of the Chicago Surgical society, who declared in a lecture that Bahia, Brazil, was the oldest city on the western hemisphere. Doctor Frank, who recently returned from a tour of South America, lectured to the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart and patients of the Columbus hospital.

"I investigated the records of Bahia thoroughly," said Doctor Frank, "and I find that city to have been founded in 1649, thirty-five years before St. Augustine. This makes it the oldest city on the hemisphere."

Safe Course.

The face of the young man was rueful, and the lawyer he was interviewing looked exceedingly grave.

It was a clear case of breach of promise, and the man of law could see nothing but heavy damages as the ultimate outcome. And he lectured to some purpose the young man, who waxed restive.

"Oh, yes," the latter said impatiently, "I know all about it. The same old song, 'Do right and fear nothing.'"

"No, no, that's not it at all," said the lawyer smiling shrewdly. "What I meant to impress upon you was, 'Don't write and fear nothing.'"

To Our Friends and Neighbors

You know us. You know we would not—that we could not afford to—go back on our word. Nor can you afford to ignore this money-back-if-not-satisfied offer on this splendid laxative.

We honestly believe we have the best bowel remedy ever made—the most pleasant-to-take, most permanently beneficial laxative for relief from the miseries and dangers arising from constipation.

We wouldn't say this if we didn't believe it to be true. We wouldn't risk our reputation by making such statements did we not feel sure you would find them true.

Our faith is built both on the knowledge of what Rexall Orderlies are made of and on observation of very many severe cases in which they have proven their merit.

Try them at Our Risk

If they do not abundantly prove their merit with you also—if you are not entirely satisfied with them—we will refund your money—and we will do that on your mere say-so. We don't ask you to risk a penny. Isn't that fair?

Just let the bowels fail in properly doing their work—just let their action be delayed and incomplete and the entire system and every other organ suffers. Wastes that!

Overland

HERE attention can be called only to bare facts. This is the car—a big, powerful, spacious, beautiful, comfortable, self-starting, thirty-horsepower, five-passenger touring car—fully equipped, all ready for service. Built of the best materials, by the best mechanics of the automobile industry, in the most efficient automobile shops in America.

And the price is only $985 f. o. b. Toledo.

The positive statement can be made, without any reservation whatever, that this car is the automobile industry's record value.

Come into the show room and examine the new Overland. Get an explanation of the many exclusive features of Overland design and construction.

Better yet, get a demonstration ride. It costs you nothing and we consider it no trouble even if you are not quite ready to place your order.

Phone, call, or write. You will have our immediate and careful attention.

A. G. FAIST, Agent, Chelsea, Mich.

ABOUT TRAMP AUTOMOBILES

"What is a tramp automobile?" you ask. Not a dilapidated car of ancient manufacture—not at all. In our sense, it usually is a new car, painted, varnished, trimmed, and shiny on the outside, like many other cars. And yet this one is a tramp automobile—a car without a home. Don't you buy that kind!

Because it is sold to you without service, that valuable adjunct without which any car may become an expensive bargain to its owner.

"How is the dealer going to take care of me?" That's one of the questions you should ask yourself, "How well or how poorly is he equipped to give me proper service?"

Overland dealers carry a stock of parts and replacements depending on the number of Overland cars running in the particular dealer's territory. That's a part of the dealer's contract with the Willys-Overland Company, on which the company lays great stress.

Parts order come first, all other business next! That is the rule at the big Overland plants in Toledo, which stand behind the dealer every time. Such is the Service you buy in addition to the big unrivalled value you get in the great $985 Overland itself.

Step in and see for yourself, one of these days, how well the Overland owner is taken care of. No particular credit is claimed for this condition, because it is a business maxim as old as business itself, that the satisfied customer is the merchant's best advertisement. It's just ordinary mercantile sagacity. But you ought to look into it for your own benefit.

BREVITIES

GREGORY—Gregory to the front again—Glenn Marlatt has been chosen valedictorian of his class in the Stockbridge high school.

MILAN—Commencing on Monday morning, March 3rd, the groceries and meat markets of Milan will unite in a universal delivery system.—Leader.

WHITMORE LAKE—There has been an epidemic of pink eye in the village the past two weeks. Several of the pupils of the school have been kept at home on account of it.

SALINE—Miss Bertha Hirth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Hirth of Scio, and Mr. Alfred Jedele to this place were married last Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride in Scio. The Saline Cornet Band, of which Mr. Jedele is a member, were present at four o'clock to lend a helping hand in a serenade.—Observer.

BRIDGEWATER—One of a team of fine young horses belonging to Ben Feldcamp, while standing in the barn last Friday, was found to have a broken leg, and the animal was shot. How the accident happened is only conjecture, but it is thought that while kicking back for play, its foot was caught, and the leg broken, while trying to release it.

BOWELL—While they are absent for the winter, Electus Hadden was caring for F. W. Munson's horse. He hitched her up Thursday afternoon and tied her to a post while he went into his house on an errand. In a few minutes a neighbor ran in to tell them that something was the matter. The horse had somehow jumped over the post and was injured in such a way that she had to be killed.—Tidings.

ANN ARBOR—Suit has been started in the circuit court for divorce by Harriet Bortless, of Milan, against Walter C. Bortless for alleged cruelty.

DEXTER—The 60-acre farm belonging to the late Mrs. Nancy Hudson in Webster township has been sold to J. McCarthy, of Scio, who will take possession in a few weeks.—Leader.

JACKSON—Harry VanBuren, of Munith, was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Mayette Thursday on a charge of keeping his pool and billiard room open after hours. VanBuren pleaded not guilty.

GRASS LAKE—Rev. W. A. Cutler has accepted a call from the Congregational church of this village. For two months past he has been filling the pulpit with great acceptability to the members of that society.

CLINTON—Ira L. VanGieson has shipped his household goods to Rushville, Mich., which is a little town just out of Detroit. He with his family will move there Saturday. Ira is interested in the real estate business and he found it necessary to be near Detroit than Clinton is, hence the change.—Local.

ANN ARBOR—Jas. J. Beagle, of Wellsville, N. Y., on Tuesday pleaded guilty before Judge Kline to a charge of soliciting a man to burn the Manchester house at Christmas time two years ago. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and to spend three months in the county jail, or in default of $100 to spend six months in jail.

HE DIDN'T THINK IT SUDDEN

Little Point Upon Which George and His Prospective Father-in-Law Held Different Opinions.

"Miss Crupington—Sybil—I love you," he said. "Oh, George," she sighed, "this is so sudden! Speak to father, will you, dear? He'll be in soon."

And ten minutes later the nervous young man was facing his adored one's father.

"I love your daughter, sir," he commenced.

"Rather sudden, ain't it?" interrupted the old man, with a twinkle in his eye.

"Love refuses to be checked by time, sir," declared the youth. "It was sudden, I admit." Then the old man laughed. "Take her, boy; take her," he said. "You ain't a bad sort of a chap at all, George; but you ain't over swift, and that's a fact. For six months you made sheep's eyes at the girl without speaking; for another eight you sent 'er enough flowers to stock Covent Garden; and this last year you've been round 'ere every night squeezein' 'ands, sighin' like a steam siren and sittin' with the gas out. Sudden! Good 'eavens, George! You'll be takin' a 'earse 'orse for the Derby winner next!"—London Tit-Bits.

ALL HIS ORGANS TRANSPOSED

Autopsy on Laborer's Body, at New York, Showed Really Remarkable State of Affairs.

An autopsy performed recently upon the body of Michael Manning, a laborer thirty-two years old, who died of pneumonia in Bellevue hospital, disclosed what Dr. Cyrus W. Field of the hospital's pathological department said was an unusually complete case of situs inversus, relates the New York Sun.

The heart was on the right side instead of on the left, the spleen was also on the right side, the appendix was on the left side, the great stomach was out of place and the lungs had two lobes each.

More than one hundred doctors, professors and medical students were present at the autopsy. So far as the doctors could judge, Manning had suffered no inconvenience through the transposition of his organs.

Some of Napoleon's Monuments.

When Napoleon was at St. Helena a companion asked him one day about his treasures. "They are enormous," the emperor replied, "but in full view. Here they are: The splendid harbor of Antwerp, that of Flushing, the docks and dikes of Dunkirk, of Havre, of Nice; the gigantic harbor of Cherbourg; the harbor works of Venice; the great roads from Antwerp to Amsterdam, from Mainz to Metz, from Bordeaux to Bayonne; the passes of the Simplon, of Mont Cenis, of Mont Genevre, of the Corniche, that give four openings through the Alps. The roads from the Pyrenees to the Alps, from Parma to Spezzia, from Savona to Piedmont; the bridges of Jena, Austerlitz, of Sevres; the canal from the Rhine to the Rhone; the canal that joins the Scheldt and the Somme."

And so he goes on, recounting the building of waterways and roads as his lasting monuments.

Waterways and roads wouldn't be bad for the present generation to leave to its successors.

Left Record of Good Deeds.

One of the nineteenth century women who was considered a radical in her time was Amalie Sieveking, a native of Hamburg, born of a wealthy and cultured family. She taught just because she loved to teach, and wrote two books, called "Commentaries on the Bible," which provoked great distrust of her in conservative circles. When an epidemic of cholera broke out in Hamburg she offered to serve in the pest hospital, and thereafter her life was identified with social work of various kinds. She had advanced ideas about housing, about ameliorating the condition of the poor, and about hospital service, all of which were reflected in the philanthropic work that she carried on until her death in 1859.

Last Time Witness Nodded.

At a trial in court when the witness on the stand was being subjected to a merciless cross-examination, in answering one question the witness nodded. Whereupon the court stenographer, who was crowding the limit to get it all and could not see the witness, at once demanded: "Answer that question," to which the witness replied: "I did answer it; I nodded my head." The stenographer, without a moment's hesitation, came right back with, "Well, I heard it rattle, but could not tell whether it was up and down or from side to side."

Importance of Health.

There is no more important contributor to happiness than health. And strange as it may seem women are very careless in this regard—thoughtful of everybody but themselves. The great majority of women have no routine. Their lives are a succession of variations which keep the nerves in a constant flutter. They will stick to the house for days and then rush around like mad things for other days. Once a woman gets started going nothing short of a collapse can stop her. She will average four hours of sleep for a couple of weeks and then stay in bed for several days.

Just Call Us Up.

It is impossible for us to see everybody and get all the news. Just ring us up and tell us what you know, that the public should know or will be interested in. Give us a tip on the things you have heard about and we will try to get the facts. Don't be afraid to call us—that's what we rent the telephone for. But please do not wait until the paper is on the press, like many people do, for that is to late and you will get shut out.

NEW VERSION OF HAPPENING

Rumor That "Higher Critic" Has Unearthed a Revised Account of Solomon's Famous Deed.

History is becoming more unreliable all the time. The other day a "higher critic," excavating in the Peloponnesus, unearthed the following revised account of one of King Solomon's famous verdicts.

It seems that there was a child which was claimed by two women, and the case was brought before Judge Solomon for decision. According to the old version of the story Judge Solomon, after careful consideration, proposed that the child be cut in two and half given to each woman, whereupon the real mother protested.

It now appears that this is not what he did at all. He was still shrewder. Instead of cutting the child in two on the spot, he ordered that it be capitalised. Thereupon a company was formed and the stock equally divided between the two claimants. He then put the child to work in a sweatshop. Both women, satisfied, went away and lived in ease and affluence ever after on the proceeds.—Life.

THROW OUT THE LINE

Give the Kidneys Help and Many People Will Be Happier.

"Throw Out the Life Line"—Weak kidneys need help. They're often overworked—don't get the poison filtered out of the blood.

Will you help them? Doan's Kidney Pills have brought benefit to thousands of kidney sufferers.

Read this case: Mrs. W. Taylor, Chelsea, Mich., says: "I know Doan's Kidney Pills are a good kidney remedy as they have been used with great benefit in my house. A member of the family was troubled by kidney complaint and suffered severely from backache. The contents of one box of Doan's Kidney Pills brought entire relief. Although I have not had occasion to take a kidney medicine myself, I know that Doan's Kidney Pills are very effective in removing kidney difficulties."

Council Proceedings.
[OFFICIAL.]
COUNCIL ROOMS,
 Chelsea, Mich., March 3, 1913.
 Board met in regular session. Meeting called to order by the president. Roll called by the clerk.
 Present—Trustees, McKune, Brooks, Hummel, Dancer.
 Absent—Truitt, Lowry, Palmer.
 Minutes of previous meeting read and approved.
 The report of the paving committee was read by the clerk as follows:
 To the Honorable Common Council of the Village of Chelsea.
 We, the undersigned appointed as a paving committee by your body, do hereby make final report of the paving of Main, Middle and Park streets, as follows:
 Following is the number of square yards of pavement laid:
 Main street.....4254.80
 Park street.....629.91
 W. Middle street.....1157.33
 E. Middle street.....766.06
 Total number square yards 6804.70
 Total number running feet curbing 2369.
 Thickness of gravel for bottom course on paving 4 inches.
 Mix used on bottom course, six parts sand to one part cement.
 Thickness of wearing surface 2 inches.
 Mix used on wearing surface, two parts sand to one part cement.
 Curbing have 6 inch top and 8 inch bottom, and 16 inches high.
 Distance between expansion joints 1 inch and filled with asphalt.
 Width of spans or blocks 25 inch on Main street and 30 inch on Park and Middle.
 The Village has on hand the necessary asphalt for top dressing which is included in the following cost figures and an estimate is made that it will cost about $100 to put on this top dressing and complete the job.
 Included in the cost figures following are the items of cost for iron hitching posts and labor setting same which amount to $381.58. We have not included in the cost figures the purchase price of the cement mixer which was $225 the surveyors instrument amount $118, and the cost of the large tar kettle and other tools, and we recommend that the final difference in cost of paving and amount assessed, including the village proportion be credited to the general fund, when collected.
 The moneys collected for dirt sold which have been paid to the Village Treasurer, and the amounts which are still due, we recommend be credited to the street fund, as a large part of the dirt drawn was put on the streets.
 We have included in the total cost of paving the sidewalk extensions which we recommend be made a part of the total paving cost. We beg leave that the total cost, including cost of iron hitching posts, sidewalk extensions, steps, curbing, excavations, and estimated cost to complete the job, amount to $1,375 per square yard.
 Total cost of paving as per statement following $922.74.
 Total amount assessed against property owners, March 1, 1912.....$3,829.50
 Total amount assessed against property owners November 11, 1912.....2,452.80
 Total amount assessed.....$6,282.30
 Proportion Village at large, being one-third entire cost, $3,077.58
 $6,282.30
 Cost as above.....$922.74
 Balance on hand.....$ 127.14
 This amount, $127.14, we recommend to be applied on cost of cement mixer, surveyors instrument and other tools, which are on hand and which will be useful to the village in other work.
 Following are the order numbers, and the amounts included in each order that were paid out for paving purposes, and statement of amounts paid and to whom for all the supplies, work, labor and material that were used or went into the paving, the sidewalk extensions, curbing, steps, iron hitching posts, including material for top dressing and estimated cost to complete the job:

FIRMLY BELIEVE IN MASCOTS
 People of the Stage Probably Are, as a Body, the Most Superstitious on the Earth.
 It is well known that aviators are the most superstitious beings in the world, or, rather, in the air. But certainly actors and actor-managers run them very closely in this respect.
 A place now running in London attributes the whole of its success to the mysterious appearance every night of a little, sad-faced man who lounges near the theater till the house is filled. So confident is the management that this human mascot brings luck that, to keep him by them, they bribe him with choice cigars to lounge there every night.
 But even this, as an extraordinary example of the lengths to which superstition runs away with the most level-headed people, is beaten hollow by the marvelous array of mascots said to control the success of a new play just starting.
 To begin with, the leading lady possesses a huge black cat mascot, which sits sedately by her on the first night.
 A lucky feline is also the mascot of one of the adaptors, while the owners of the theater in question stake their luck on several curious amulets in their possession.
 Not content with this, the principal actor, who is also the manager, was lent for the special occasion of the first night, a magnificent watch of eastern workmanship.

PUDDING BELL STILL RUNG
 Church in the County Palatine Gives Warning It is Time to Begin Frying Pancakes.
 Concerning church bells Mr. Frank Hird tells of the quaint customs which are still observed in some of the parishes in the County Palatine.
 Before the Reformation the great bell of the parish was rung on Shrove Tuesday to call the people together for the confession of their sins, or to be "shriven;" hence the name of the day. "This bell," says Mr. Hird, "is still rung in some parts of Lancashire, and is still called the 'Pancake Bell,' being now regarded only as a signal to the people to begin frying their pancakes."
 "In some villages a bell is rung as the congregation is leaving the church after the morning service. This is known as the 'Pudding Bell,' it having been firmly believed for many generations that it is rung to warn those at home to get the dinner ready."
 "The origin of the ringing of this bell is not known, but like many other old customs, it still lingers in the remotest parts of the country, announcing to the village that the service is over and that 'pudding time has come.'"
 "So late as 1870 the curfew bell was rung at Burnley, Colne, Blackburn, Padham, and in many other towns and villages. This, perhaps, is the most remarkable instance of the persistence of an old custom centuries after it has ceased to have any reason."

CREDITOR TOOK HIS LEAVE
 Journalist May or May Not Have Meant Threat, but Visitor Would Not Change It.
 Lespes, the French journalist, known as "Timothee Trimm," was once disagreeably intruded on by a creditor, who announced his intention of not departing until he was paid. The creditor planted himself on a chair, and Lespes beheld him, with consternation, draw bread, and cheese from his pockets as though to fortify himself against events. Several hours glided by; Lespes had resumed his writing and finished an article. The creditor showed no signs of moving. Suddenly Lespes rose, and with bits of newspaper began carefully blocking all the apertures through which air could come into the room. He then made preparations for lighting a charcoal fire; but before applying the match, peered on the wall, just opposite the creditor's eyes, a paper thus laconically worded: "Take notice that we died of our own will." "What are you doing?" exclaimed the creditor, uneasily. "Your society would render life intolerable, so we are going to commit suicide together," answered Timothee, tranquilly. It is needless to say that the creditor decamped.

HER FEELINGS NOT SOOTHED
 Butcher Boy Evidently Not One Who Was Quick to See the Error of His Ways.
 An amusing telephone story is told of a lady whose name is Brown. One morning recently she proceeded from the breakfast table to the telephone in the hall, to order some things from the butcher.
 "Hallo!" said Mrs. Brown. "Is that Mr. Batty's?"
 "Yes."
 "Well, this is Mrs. Brown's residence. Will you send me a large, thick steak by four o'clock?"
 The boy in the butcher shop happened to answer the telephone, and promptly responded:
 "Well, you just bet your sweet life I will."
 "Do you know, sir, to whom you are speaking?" indignantly inquired Mrs. Brown.
 "Sure I do," said the boy. "You're Jenny, Mrs. Brown's cook."
 "You are mistaken, young man. You are speaking to Mrs. Brown herself."
 "Is that so?" replied the boy. "Then in that case, madam, we'll call the bet off."
 Moving One's Home.
 When a small settler in western Canada decides to move, he very often takes his "shack" with him; you can not rely upon finding houses just where you want them in a new country, and the cost of transporting materials makes it well worth while going to a little expense to move one's own residence. The houses, of course, are built of wood, and are raised by means of jacks and levers on to low trucks. Poles are then run from the front axle to the rear, in place of the ordinary tongue, and a good team of powerful horses proceeds to haul the dwelling to its new site. Naturally, in moving such cumbersome loads great care has to be taken, but many a cottage has been moved nearly a mile uphill without any damage being done to the structure.—Wide World Magazine.

Nothing But the Truth.
 Everything depended upon the testimony of this particular witness, and the lawyer realized the fact.
 "Now," he said, shaking his finger warningly, "we want to hear just what you know. Don't tell us what you think, or what you've heard, or what somebody else knows. Do you understand?"
 The witness brightened visibly, and showed by his glad smile that he had understood.
 "It was like this, sir," he began. "Old Bill Grubbs said to me that Jim Payne told him he heard Thomas John's wife tell Sid Lewis' girl that her husband was the 'ero of the fight, and that they paved into one another like—"
 But then the judge told him to stand down.

"More of the Same."
 The common belief is that the Indian child is both stolid and stupid. One traveler, however, when in South Dakota witnessed an incident that speedily disillusioned him upon this point.
 A precocious Indian child, two and a half years old, was disagreeably voluble at dinner, so much so that his mother leaned over, and, stuffing a piece of fat meat into his mouth, said: "There, I will stop up that hole now."
 As soon as the baby had devoured enough of his mouthful to enable him to articulate, he gasped: "Stop it up again, mother, stop it up again!"—Youth's Companion.

His Beauty Not the Cause.
 Fernando de Leyba, who took command of St. Louis on June 14, 1778, wrote:
 "I have been received by all the inhabitants with extraordinary signs of rejoicing, which I do not attribute to my beauty, nor to the fact that they were dissatisfied with my predecessor, but only that in the creature they praise the Creator."
 It was addressed to the governor general of Louisiana.

SAW BEAUTY IN FROG SONGS
 Their Voices, in Concert, Impressed the Great Naturalist, John Muir, to Comment.
 The love songs of the frogs seemed hardly less wonderful than those of the birds, their musical notes varying from the sweet, tranquil, soothing, peeping and purring of the hylas to the awfully deep, low bass, blunt bellows of the bull frogs. Some of the smaller species have wonderfully clear, sharp voices, and told us their good Bible names in musical tones about as plainly as the whippoorwill. Isaac, Isaac; Jacob, Jacob; Israel, Israel; shouted in sharp, ringing, far-reaching tones, as if they had all been to school and severely drilled in elocution. In the still, warm, evenings, big, bunched bull frogs belloved, Drunk! Drunk! Drunk! Jug-o'-rum, Jug-o'-rum! and early in the spring countless thousands of the commonest species, up to the throat in cold water, sang in concert, making a mass of music, such as it was, loud enough to be heard at a distance of more than half a mile.
 Far, far apart from this loud marsh music is that of the many species of hylas, a sort of soothing, immortal filling the air like light.—John Muir, in the Atlantic.

Keep Your Individuality.
 The idea that there is a kind of inequality for a woman in minding her own business and letting man do the same, comes from our confused and rather stupid notion of the meaning of equality.
 The uneasy woman has always taken it for granted that man is happier than woman. It is an assumption which is at least discussible.
 The man who praises the works of the Creator as all wise not infrequently treats his arrangement for carrying on the race as if it were unfit to be spoken of in polite society.
 A woman is very prone to look on marriage as a merger of personalities, but there can be no great union where an individuality permits itself to be ruled. The notion that a woman's happiness depends upon the man—that he must "make her happy"—is a basic untruth.—Houston Post.

Supreme Sorrow.
 All the bodily pangs and labors which motherhood and mother-care have cost age after age is the least of their giving. All the patient tolling which millions of mothers have imposed upon themselves when they alone have reared and fed their children, all the watchful nights, the tired steps—all that mothers have denied themselves for the sake of their children, is not the greatest of their sufferings. That is their greatest sorrow which a man has expressed in the poem wherein the mother throws her head at her son's feet, who, as he angrily stumbles over it, hears the heart whisper, "Did you hurt yourself, my child?"—Ellen Key, in the Atlantic.

For the Parent's Eye.
 Sympathy is a gift. We are born with it or without it as the case may be, but it can be cultivated from a very small beginning, and no parent, however cold and dispassionate toward the people in this busy world of ours, should allow the possibility of sympathy between himself or herself and the child to be cut off without making a hard fight. Personality, culture, dignity, understanding and quiet, peaceful sympathy—these are needed more than rooms "celled with cedar and painted with vermillion," and these, when exhibited in a home, give it the magnet quality, from which children once under its influence can never escape.—Mother's Magazine.

Stock-Watering.
 "Did you see them watering the stock today, dear?" asked the city woman of her husband, on their vacation.
 "No," replied the head of the big corporation; "not since I left the office last week."

Character in Streets.
 Bacon—I see there is no street in London named after any of Dickens' characters.
 Robert—Perhaps not; but some of them have twist enough to them to be so named.

Village Election.

Notice is hereby given to the qualified electors of the Village of Chelsea, State of Michigan, that the next ensuing annual election will be held at the town hall, within said Village, on Monday, March 10, A. D. 1913, at which election the following officers are to be chosen, viz.:

One President.
One Clerk.
One Treasurer.
Three Trustees, for two years.

In accordance with the Constitution of the State of Michigan and Act 206, Public Acts of 1909, should there be any proposition or proposition to vote upon at said Election involving the direct expenditure of public money, or the issue of bonds, every woman who possesses the qualifications of male electors and owns property assessed for taxes or owns property subject to taxation jointly with her husband, or with any other person, or who owns property on contract and pays taxes thereon, all such property being located somewhere within the district or territory to be affected by the result of said election, will be entitled to vote upon such propositions, provided such person has had her name duly registered in accordance with the provisions of said Act.

The Polls of said election will be open at 7 o'clock a. m. and will remain open until 5 o'clock p. m. of said day of election.
Dated this 24th day of February, A. D. 1913.
Hector Coors, Clerk of said Village.

Registration Notice.

Notice is hereby given to the qualified electors of the Village of Chelsea, State of Michigan, that a meeting of the Board of Registration of said village will be held at the Town Hall, west room, within said village, on Saturday, March 8, 1913, for the purpose of registering the names of all such persons who shall be possessed of the necessary qualifications of electors, who may apply for that purpose.

WOMEN ELECTORS.
In accordance with Section 4 of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State of Michigan and Act 206, of the Public Acts of 1909, the Board of Registration of said Village will register the names of all women possessing the qualifications of male electors who make personal application for such registration; Provided, that all such applicants must own property assessed for taxes within said village, except that any woman otherwise qualified who owns property within said Village jointly with her husband or other persons, or who owns property within said village on contract and pays the taxes thereon, shall be entitled to registration. Following are the qualifications of male electors in the State of Michigan:

Every male inhabitant of this state, being a citizen of the United States; every male inhabitant residing in this state on the twenty-fourth day of June, eighteen hundred thirty-five; every male inhabitant residing in this state on the first day of January, eighteen hundred fifty; every male inhabitant of foreign birth who, having resided in this state two years and six months prior to the eighth day of November, eighteen hundred ninety-four; and having declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States two years and six months prior to said last named day; and every civilized male inhabitant of Indian descent, a native of the United States and not a member of any tribe, shall be an elector and entitled to vote; but no one shall be an elector or entitled to vote at any election unless he shall be above the age of twenty-one years, and has resided in this state six months and in the township or ward in which he offers to vote twenty days next preceding such election.

Said Board of Registration will be in session on the day and at the place aforesaid, from 9 o'clock in the forenoon until 5 o'clock in the afternoon for the purpose aforesaid.
Dated this 24th day of February, A. D. 1913.
Hector Coors, Clerk of said Village.

What's Behind It?

A hard-headed farmer the other day said: "When I get money from the bank they make me sign a note and give security. When the bank takes my money on deposit there ought to be more behind it than a deposit slip."

He was right about it, too. There IS more behind it at this bank. Every dollar of our entire capital and surplus is behind it. Every director, officer and stockholder in our bank is behind it and personally responsible. Our reputation for safe and prudent banking is behind it. The deposit slip is not all that is behind the depositor's money, not by a long shot.

WILSON AND MARSHALL SWORN IN WITH IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

Inauguration of the New President and Vice-President Is Witnessed by Immense and Enthusiastic Throng—Great Parade Fills Pennsylvania Avenue With Color and Movement.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington, March 4.—With all the pomp and circumstance that properly accompany such a great occasion, Woodrow Wilson was inaugurated president of the United States today. Just before that big event, which took place on a platform in front of the east portico of the capitol, Thomas R. Marshall took the oath as vice-president.

As the new chief executive of the nation stood with bared head, Edward Douglas White, chief justice of the Supreme court, held before him the Bible always used in the ceremony. Mr. Wilson placed his hands upon the book and in a voice strong, though somewhat affected by emotion, swore to support the Constitution and the laws of the country and to perform the duties of his high office to the best of his ability.

Thomas R. Marshall swore fealty to the Constitution and to the people in the senate chamber, where for four years it will be his duty to preside over the deliberations of the members of the upper house of congress.

Taft and Wilson Ride Together.
President Taft and President-elect Wilson rode together from the White House to the capitol, accompanied by two members of the congressional committee of arrangements. The vice-president-elect also rode from the White House to the capitol and in the carriage with him were the senate's president pro tempore, Senator Bacon of Georgia, and three members of the congressional committee of arrangements.

The vice-president-elect took the oath first before noon in accordance with custom and prior to his taking by the president-elect. Every arrangement for the senate chamber proceedings had been made so that they moved forward easily and with a certain ponderous grace.

New Vice-President Takes Oath.
The admission to the senate chamber to witness the oath-taking of the vice-president was by ticket, and it is needless to say every seat was occupied. On the floor of the chamber were many former members of the senate who, because of the fact that they once held membership in that body, were given the privileges of the floor. After the hall was filled and all the minor officials of government and those privileged to witness the ceremonies were seated, William R. Taft and Woodrow Wilson, preceded by the sergeant-at-arms and the committee of arrangements, entered the senate chamber. They were followed immediately by Vice-President-elect Thomas R. Marshall, leaning upon the arm of the president pro tempore of the senate who, after the seating of the incoming vice-president, took his place as presiding officer of the senate and of the day's proceedings.

The president and the president-elect sat in the first row of seats directly in front of and almost under the desk of the presiding officer. In the same row, but to their left, were the vice-president-elect and two former vice-presidents of the United States, Levi P. Morton of New York and Adlai A. Stevenson of Illinois.

When the distinguished company entered the chamber the senate was still under its old organization. The oath of office was immediately administered to Vice-President-elect Marshall, who thereupon became Vice-President Marshall. The prayer of the day was given by the chaplain of the senate, Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church, of which President Taft has been a member. After the prayer the vice-president administered the oath of office to all the newly chosen senators, and thereafter with the senate of the United States passed for the first time in years into the control of the Democratic party.

Go to Capitol's East Portico.
Immediately after the senate ceremonies a procession was formed to march to the platform of the east portico of the capitol, where Woodrow Wilson was to take the oath. The procession included the president and the president-elect, members of the Supreme court, both houses of congress, all of the foreign ambassadors, all of the heads of the executive departments, many governors of states and territories, Admiral Dewey of the navy and several high officers of the sea service, the chief of staff of the army and many distinguished persons from civil life. They were followed by the members of the press and by those persons who had succeeded in securing seats in the senate galleries.

When President Taft and the president-elect emerged from the capitol on to the portico they saw in front of them, reaching far back into the park to the east, an immense concourse of citizens. In the narrow line between the onlookers and the platform on which Mr. Wilson was to take the oath, were drawn up the cadets of the two greatest government schools, West Point and Annapolis, and flanking them were bodies of regulars and of national guardsmen. The whole scene was charged with color and with life.

On reaching the platform the president and president-elect took the seats reserved for them, seats which were flanked by many rows of benches rising tier on tier for the accommodation of the friends and families of the officers of the government and of the press.

Mr. Wilson Inaugurated.
The instant that Mr. Taft and Mr. Wilson came within sight of the crowd there was a great outburst of applause, and the military bands struck quickly into "The Star Spangled Banner." Only a few bars of the music were played and then soldiers and civilians became silent to witness respectfully the oath taking and to listen to the address which followed.

The chief justice of the Supreme court delivered the oath to the president-elect, who, uttering the words, "I will," became president of the United States. As soon as this ceremony was completed Woodrow Wilson delivered his inaugural address, his first speech to his fellow countrymen in the capacity of their chief executive.

At the conclusion of the speech the bands played once more, and William Howard Taft, now ex-president of the United States, entered a carriage with the new president and, reversing the order of an hour before, sat on the left hand side of the carriage, while Mr. Wilson took "the seat of honor" on the right. The crowds cheered as they drove away to the White House, which Woodrow Wilson entered as the occupant and which William H. Taft immediately left as one whose lease had expired.

Parade Is Elaborate.
The "Jeffersonian simplicity" which Woodrow Wilson requested should be observed in every detail of his inauguration as president did not apply to the inaugural parade, for it was as elaborate as such an affair usually is. The people wanted it so, and they showed their appreciation of the spectacle by turning out by the hundred thousand and cheering wildly as the marchers passed with bands playing loudly and flags waving bravely.

The newly inaugurated president reviewed the procession and smiled his approval as he returned the salutes of the commanding officers, for all the glittering show had been arranged in his honor. Pennsylvania avenue, from the capitol to the White House, was full of color, music and movement.

The inhibition of the inaugural ball and of the planned public reception at the capitol had no effect as a bar to the attendance at this ceremony of changing presidents. Masses were here to see, and other masses were here to march. There was a greater demonstration while the procession was passing than there was four years ago. Victory had come to a party which had known nothing like victory for a good many years. The joy of possession found expression in steady and abundantly noisy acclaim.

President Taft and President-elect Wilson were escorted down the avenue by the National Guard troop of cavalry of Essex county, New Jersey. The carriage in which rode Vice-President-elect Marshall and President pro tempore Bacon of the United States senate was surrounded by the members of the Black Horse troop of the Culver Military academy of Indiana. This is the first time in the history of inaugural ceremonies that a guard of honor has escorted a vice-president to the scene of his oath-taking.

Parade Is Miles Long.
The military and the civil parade, a huge affair which stretched its length for miles along the Washington streets, formed on the avenues radiating from the capitol. After President-elect Wilson had become President Wilson and Vice-President-elect Marshall had become Vice-President Marshall, they went straightway from the capitol to the White House and thence shortly to the reviewing stand in the park at the mansion's front.

The parade, with Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, United States army, as its grand marshal, started from the capitol grounds to move along the avenue to the White House, where it was to pass in review. The trumpeter sounded "forward march" at the instant the signal was flashed from the White House that in fifteen minutes the newly elected president and commander-in-chief of the armies and navies of the United States would be ready to review "his troops."

It was thought that the parade might lack some of the picturesque features which particularly appealed to the people on former occasions. There were Indians and rough riders here not only when Roosevelt was inaugurated, but when he went out of office and was succeeded by William H. Taft. The parade, however, in honor of Mr. Wilson seemed to be picturesque enough in its features to appeal to the multitudes. They certainly made noise enough over it.

The procession was in divisions, with General Wood as the grand marshal of the whole affair and having a place at its head. The display, in the words invariably used on like occasions, was "impressive and brilliant."

Regulars Have Right of Way.
The regulars of the country's two armed services naturally had the right of way. Maj. Gen. W. W. Wetherston, United States army, was in command of the first division, in which marched the soldiers and sailors and marines from the posts and the navy yards within a day's ride of Washington. The West Point cadets and the midshipmen from the naval academy at Annapolis, competent beyond other corps in manual and in evolution, the future generals and admirals of the army, had place in the first division.

All branches of the army service were represented in the body of regulars—engineers, artillery, cavalry, infantry and signal corps. The sailors and marines from half a dozen battle-ships rolled along smartly in the wake of their landmen brethren.

The National Guard division followed the division of regulars. It was commanded by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Mills, United States army, who wore the medal of honor given him for conspicuous personal gallantry at the battle of San Juan hill. General Mills is the chief of the militia division of the United States war department.

The entire National Guard of New Jersey was in line, and Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Maryland, Virginia, Georgia, Maine and North Carolina were represented by bodies of civilian soldiers. Cadets from many of the private and state military schools of the country had a place in the militia division. Among them were boys from the Virginia Military institute, the Culver Military academy of Indiana, the Carlisle school, Purdue university, the Citadel cadets and the Georgia Military academy.

The third division of the parade was composed of Grand Army of the Republic veterans, members of the Union Veteran league and of the Spanish war organizations. Gen. James E. Stuart of Chicago, a veteran of both the Civil and the Spanish wars, was in command.

Harper Leads Civilians.
Robert N. Harper, chief marshal of the civic forces, commanded the fourth division. Under his charge were political organizations from all parts of the country, among them being Tammany, represented by 2,000 of its braves, and Democratic clubs from Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities.

They put the American Indians into the civilian division. The fact that they were in war paint and feathers helped out in picturesqueness and did nothing to disturb the peace. Members of the United Hunt Clubs of America rode in this division. Their pink coats and their high hats apparently were not thought to jar "Jeffersonian simplicity" from its seat. Pink coats were worn on the hunting field in Jefferson's day and in Jefferson's state.

There were 1,000 Princeton students in the civic section of the parade. Many of them wore orange and black sweaters and they were somewhat noisy though perfectly proper. Students from seventeen other colleges and universities were among the marchers.

There was music enough for any democratic occasion. The judicious distribution of the bands prevented the clashing of tunes. There were fifty bands in line, but only one of them, the Marine band, was allowed to play "hail to the Chief," a tune which every hand on an occasion like this hitherto has insisted on playing almost incessantly, to the routing of everything else known to the composers of the past.

Great Enthusiasm Shown.
All along Pennsylvania avenue, from the capitol to a point four blocks beyond the White House, the spectators were massed in lines ten deep. The cheering was constant and Woodrow Wilson cannot complain that the ceremonies attending his induction into office were not accompanied by apparently heartfelt acclaim of the people over whom he is to rule for at least four years.

Every window in every building on Pennsylvania avenue which is not occupied for office purposes was rented weeks ago for a good round sum of money. Every room overlooking the marching parade was taken by as many spectators as could find a vantage point from which to peer through the window panes. The roofs of the buildings were covered with persons willing to stand for hours in a March day to see the wonders of the inaugural parade, and many of them particularly glad of an opportunity to go home and to say that after many years waiting they had seen a Democratic president inaugurated.

at once to an even keel. In scientific language, it will float only with the convex surface downward.

Any child knows that if you cut up a broken rubber ball you get five or six nice little round-bottomed, high-ended boats. It remained for William Wouldhave to discover that these are all little self-righting life boats.

Many Miles of Sausage Links.
The sausage eaten in this country in the course of a year would encircle the earth more than six times.

Social Forms and Entertainments

Our next special day celebration will be the 17th of March, and we shall surely see that the memory of good St. Patrick is kept green. Did you ever see such an array of emerald green and such variety of novelties as the shops are displaying? The best of all is that it is not necessary to lay claim to Irish ancestry to participate in the festivities, for St. Patrick belongs to us all, so we'll all be "wearing" of the green and wish ye the top o' the mornin', or, as it will be for most of us, "St. Patrick's day in the evening."

I have had this bit of a rhyme tucked away, and I am sure it will do for a toast or sentiment that some of our readers will appreciate:

St. Patrick was a temperance lad,
Who halled from Dublin town;
By chasing snakes from Ireland
This good saint won renown.

But faith, 'tis different nowadays
Here 'neath the stripes and stars,
The man caught chasing snakes,
begor,

Will land behind the bars.

Here are some suggestions to be carried out at either a day or evening affair: Make place dolles of green cardboard shamrocks and sprinkle smaller ones over the table. For a centerpiece have a plant (oxalis) that is a good imitation of the real shamrock, and at this season some florists make a specialty of the real plants, also of coloring roses and carnations for the occasion. Artificial frogs and snakes of vivid green may be used as favors, or pipes and black hats with green bands and even cunning little piggies. As a novelty make the candlesticks of Irish potatoes of even size and scrubbed to snowy whiteness, hollow out a place for a green candle and place at the four corners of the table, or use as individual candles, or in a circle around the centerpiece.

Tiny candles looking exactly like potatoes and some like stones or pebbles (shamrocks) may be used as bonbons. Decorate with Irish flags, of which there are many varieties and have a program of songs, including "The Harp That Once Through Tara's Halls," "Wearin' o' the Green," "Kathleen Maivourneen," "Killarney" and "Come Back to Erin."

I must break the rules and give this fine recipe for "Grane Tay" punch, which is just the thing to serve at a card party:

One pint of strong infusion of green tea, one cup of orange juice, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of rum, and one-half cup of sugar sirup combined with two tablespoons of chartreuse. Mix all the ingredients and chill. Place in a freezer and freeze to the mushy stage. Serve in orange cups set in punch glasses and decorate with smilax.

St. Patrick's Day Suggestion.

Ask each guest to come prepared to tell an Irish joke or story, to sing an Irish song, dance a jig or tell an anecdote pertaining to the Emerald Isle. In this way the hostess is sure of having a successful party. Irish character costumes might be worn, for it is a well-known fact that when dressed for the part one always does better.

Here are menu suggestions to be adopted as the hostess sees best: Olives and tiny green pickles, chicken in cubes and green jelly, lettuce salad with Saratoga chips, salad served in green apples hollowed out, green mayonnaise, pistachio ice cream served with white cake with decorations of green angelica, Irish punch and green bonbons, mints, gum drops and buttercups.

For a dinner a crown roast of pork could be arranged like one of lamb by an obliging butcher, and with each rib tipped with a green paper frill it would be a goodly sight. Fill in the center with green peas and there could be a border of mashed potatoes sprinkled with parsley. Call it "Murphy's turkey." Green colorings are perfectly harmless if purchased at a reliable druggist's or grocer's, and they may be made of spinach juice.

To Find Partners on St. Patrick's Day.

Make as many shamrocks of green paper as there will be guests. Give each girl one, but hide those for the men and tell them they must find them and then find the girl who has the question which their shamrock answers. Here are the "green" conundrums:

Costumes Made Up in Cloth

Have All Season's Smartness

Here are two costumes that have been designed to be made up in the new spring materials. The first is carried out in fine gray tweed. The skirt wraps over to the left side in front and to the right at back; the lower part, which slopes off, is trimmed with buttons and braid loops. The coat is of basque; the front is carried up to the high turnover collar in a little embroidered silk vest, from which the revers of dark gray satin turn back; the pointed cuffs are also of satin. Togue of gray velvet, trimmed with osprey lined by a jeweled brooch.

Materials required: 5 yards 46 inches wide, 16 buttons, 4 1/2 yards satin for lining coat, a small piece of silk for vest, 3/4 yard satin for collar, revers and cuffs.

In the next illustration we show a plain but smart costume of tobacco brown face cloth. The skirt has a plain back and wrap-over front, the lower part being trimmed with buttons. The coat is cut to slope down a little lower in front than at the back. The collar of moire ends near the shoulder on right side, where it is finished with a pleated frill of lawn. The left side forms large pointed revers. The deep turn-up cuffs match the collar. The crown of the hat is of fine straw to match color of cloth; the brim is a lighter shade; pleated ribbon to match the brim stands up in front.

Materials required: 5 yards 46 inches wide, 3 buttons, 3/4 yard moire 22 inches wide, 1 1/2 yards satin 22 inches wide for lining coat.

SUFFERED FOR 25 YEARS.
Mr. R. M. Fleenor, R. F. D. 39, Otterbein, Ind., writes: "I had been a sufferer from Kidney Trouble for about 25 years. I finally got so bad that I had to quit work, and doctors failed to do me any good. I was getting worse all the time, and it at last turned to inflammation of the bladder and I had given up all hope, when one day I received your little booklet advising your pills, and resolved to try them. I did, and only two boxes, and I am now sound and well. I regard my cure as remarkable. I can recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to any one who is suffering from Kidney Trouble as I was." Photographer Thought He Was Going to Escape Ancient Joke, but It Was Not to Be.
"That fellow who just went out here after having his photograph taken is a marvel," remarked a photographer to a bystanding friend. "A great mind to give him that set of a dozen cabinet size free!"

"What's his special point?" asked the friend.
"Why, there've been in this studio since I started some years ago, about 187,000 and some sitters," went on the photographer. "And out of that number that fellow just now is the one who hasn't said to me with a grin as I posed him: 'Look out, or I'll break your camera!' I've begun to look upon it as an essential part of taking a photograph and if I didn't hear it at the right time I do believe I'd unconsciously wait for it before snapping the shutter. But that fellow didn't say a word; just stood up and and got snapped like it was a—"

"Say, snapper," interrupted a voice from the door, which just then opened and admitted the head of the late departed customer. "Say, I hope didn't break that there camera yours."

CLEAR HEADED.
Head Bookkeeper Must Be Reliable
The chief bookkeeper in a large business house in one of our great Western cities speaks of the late coffee died for him. "Tea is just injurious because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee."

"My wife and I drank our first cup of Postum a little over two years ago and we have used it ever since, to the entire exclusion of tea and coffee. It happened in this way:

"About three and a half years ago I had an attack of pneumonia, which left a memento in the shape of a peptic, or rather, to speak more correctly, neuralgia of the stomach. 'Cup of cheer' had always been one of my tea, but I became convinced, at a time, that they aggravated my stomach trouble. I happened to mention the matter to my grocer one day and he suggested that I give Postum a trial.

"Next day it came, but the old made the mistake of not boiling it sufficiently, and we did not like it much. This was, however, soon remedied and now we like it so much that it will never change back. Postum, being a food beverage instead of a drug, has been the means of banishing stomach trouble. I verily believe, I am a well man today and have no medicine."

"My work as chief bookkeeper of our Co.'s branch house here is of very confining nature. During my free-drinking days I was subject to nervousness and 'the blues.' I have left me since I began using Postum, and I can conscientiously recommend it to those whose work confines them to long hours of severe mental exertion." Name given by Post Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is plain in the little book, "The Book to Wellville," in pink. Ever read the above letter? A genuine, true, and full of heart real. Adv.

ORIGIN OF THE LIFE BOAT
Invention That Has Saved Thousands of Lives Largely the Result of Accidental Discovery.

Writers are always fond of dilating upon the commonplace origin of remarkable inventions. Still another instance of their accidental nature—and a most interesting one—is given by How T. Mahoney in "The Life Boat and Its Story."

In the course of a country stroll, William Wouldhave, the inventor of the self-righting life boat, came across a woman who asked his help in lifting a heavy vessel of water just drawn from the well. On the surface of the water there floated the broken half of a wood bowl. Wouldhave was drawn into conversation, and like many another who cannot keep his hands quiet while he talks, he idly toyed with the floating piece of wood. Naturally he turned it over, and found to his surprise that it immediately righted itself. He inverted it again with the same result, and since he was at the time actually at work on the problem of an unsinkable boat, he immediately realized the importance of his chance discovery.

It is an experiment that any one can readily make for himself. All you require is the fourth part of a hollow "prolate spheroid," or, to put it in more homely language, the quarter of a coconut shell split from end to end. Put the shell in a bowl of water, and you will find that it will not remain capsize, but will return at once to an even keel. In scientific language, it will float only with the convex surface downward.

Any child knows that if you cut up a broken rubber ball you get five or six nice little round-bottomed, high-ended boats. It remained for William Wouldhave to discover that these are all little self-righting life boats.

Many Miles of Sausage Links.
The sausage eaten in this country in the course of a year would encircle the earth more than six times.

CONSTIPATION

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods, they do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do stay all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that keeps these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and bowels. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverish it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it. Price 25 cents. All Druggists.

TAFT PLEADS FOR A BUDGET

Offers Congress Plan to Wipe Out U. S. Debt in 20 Years.

President Taft sent to congress his much discussed message, recommending the adoption of a budget system of relating proposed expenditures to expected revenues.

To carry out the budget plan, to reduce the deficit and the fixed charges against the government the president proposed:

To create a sinking fund commission to assist the chairman of the finance committee of the senate; the chairman of the house ways and means committee; the attorney general and the secretary of the treasury, with the controller of the treasury as annual auditor of the sinking fund account.

Legislation which would wipe out the national debt in 20 years after July 1, 1914, congress should set aside $45,000,000 annually for that purpose. That would be $15,000,000 a year less than the present amount required by law. The fund should be invested in three per cent government bonds and in 20 years the $1,160,000,000 debt, the president says, would be retired.

Some of the advantages of the budget system as pointed out by the president were:

A means of locating responsibility for estimates in keeping with revenues.

A means of allowing congress to see how much gross it will have to spend before it begins appropriating for each department or detail of government machinery.

Because it would furnish congress and the public with ready reference to reports and detailed records of account.

Because it would produce an adequate organization for assembling and classifying information to be used in telling the country what has been done and of the government's future needs.

To aid in working with a well defined purpose in many bureaus hitherto organized but directed under an inconsistent and ill-defined program.

To cancel the nation's debt, through a sinking fund, and to eliminate the deficit, which is slowly growing.

The state tax commission experts have covered the east side of Saginaw in their revaluation of Saginaw and have boosted 1,500 houses. Business blocks in the downtown districts are being boosted $50,000 at a time, and the valuation of the entire city will be increased several millions.

ASKS FOR LIFE TERMS

British Prosecutor Asks That Militant Suffragettes Be Given Limit.

Militant suffragettes connected with the burning of buildings in public parks are liable to "penal servitude for life." This was the announcement in London of Travers Humphreys, public prosecutor, in asking the magistrate at the Kew police court to commit for trial Miss Lillian Lenton and Miss Joyce Locke. The two were arrested Feb. 20 for setting fire to a pavilion in the Kew botanical gardens.

"I make my charge," said Mr. Humphreys, "under the malicious damage act, which makes it a felony punishable by penal servitude for life for any person to fire a building belonging to the king or devoted to public use."

Suffragette "Army" Arrives in Washington.

"Gen." Rosalie Jones and her suffragette "army" marched triumphantly into Washington through the capitol grounds and down Pennsylvania avenue with an escort of local enthusiasts and citizens which fairly choked the streets and delayed traffic. It was one of the most remarkable street demonstrations ever seen here.

A presidential inauguration could hardly have presented a more enthusiastic spectacle than Pennsylvania avenue from the capitol to the treasury building after the plucky, disheveled band of suffrage pilgrims swung warily around the peace monument for the final march of their 250-mile walk for the cause of equal franchise.

Incoming presidents have not received more clamorous applause than did the company of brown-clad women, huddled in a little group, forced to fight their way through veritable walls of shouting humanity for more than a mile of their historic "hike."

New Wilson Plan Stirs Legislators.

Lively discussion was precipitated in congressional circles by a published statement credited to President-elect Wilson that he intended to spend part of each working day in the president's room at the capitol, to keep in closer touch with legislative affairs. Such action on the part of the president would overturn a precedent which has restricted the president's visits to the capitol to the last hours of a session of congress.

Democrat leaders discussed the reported plan of Mr. Wilson with reluctance though many seemed to favor it, and others qualified their expressions.

"If President Wilson wishes to come to the capitol and advise with congress he will be welcome," said Senator O'Gorman.

WOOLING HER HUSBAND

By J. S. COYNE.

Mrs. Swandown—I hope, now, you have come to spend a long day with me—we shall have such a delightful chat about old times—but where is your husband? I'm dying to see him. Why did you not bring him with you?

Mrs. Featherley—Oh, he was engaged—he generally is engaged.

Mrs. S.—Come, sit down. Tell me, what is he like—is he good looking, kind, affectionate, domestic—does he, in short, resemble the fancy portrait you used to draw of the man whom you would select as your life partner?

I remember how you painted this imaginary paragon of yours—youthful as love—handsome as Adonis—brave as a lion—gay as a summer bird—witty, without malice, and learned, without display—kind and affable to all, but tender, loving and constant only to you.

Mrs. F. (sighs)—Ah, that was a schoolgirl's idea; reality paints with very different colors.

Mrs. S.—Ah, then you have discovered the delusions we practice on ourselves and fancy that the idol you, fancied was pure gold has proved to be an image of common clay.

Mrs. F.—Tia too true. We have only been married twelve months and already my husband treats me with a coldness that his politeness cannot conceal.

Mrs. S.—Impossible, my dear Edna. Impossible! If he ever loved you.

Mrs. F.—He did love me—oh, most devotedly!

Mrs. S.—And how have you let his heart escape?

Mrs. F.—I know not—I am sure, to please him, I have neglected the world—his interests have engrossed all my thoughts; the hours which a woman of my age usually spends at her toilet, I have given to regulating his household.

Mrs. S.—Hem! Interests—household—go on, my dear.

Mrs. F.—No, wife ever attended more closely to her domestic duties—to devote myself to them I have given up my music, drawing and accomplishments—as for my economy, I have carried it even to my own dress, which you see is of the plainest description.

Mrs. S.—Plain indeed—and men, unfortunately, are too apt to confound a woman with her dress. Mr. Featherley is doubtless a man of taste.

Mrs. F.—Exquisite. And you think, then—

Mrs. S.—I think you have neglected the very means by which you could have retained his affections. Instead of worrying him with details of house-keeping and monotonous lectures on domestic economy you should endeavor to charm him as you used to do, by your wit, your gaiety and your accomplishments—sing to him, play to him, dance with him, if he will; fascinate him by your graces—even plume him by your coquetry, for these are the cages in which we keep men's hearts our prisoners.

Mrs. F.—How, Julia, do you recommend me to employ such frivolous arts with a sensible man?

Mrs. S.—Ah, my dear, the most sensible men are fools where our sex is concerned. As to those arts you call frivolous, they are the only weapons nature has given us; and if we employ them to gain a victory why should we neglect them to secure a conquest?

Mrs. F.—Perhaps you are right; but is a wife's truth, her affection, her virtue, to go for nothing?

Mrs. S.—Oh, no; they will always command the respect and esteem of a husband; but if you want to fix his love you must employ a little artifice, a little delicate management. Be yourself the center of those pleasures which attract him; surround yourself with all that he admires, all that can please him, and never neglect those accomplishments which first charmed him in you.

Mrs. F.—And then?

Mrs. S.—Then, my dear, the neglected wife will become the enthroned mistress of his heart.

Mrs. F.—But if Featherley, as I dread, has formed an attachment elsewhere?

Mrs. S.—Ah, that would be serious. Still, I see no occasion to despair of bringing back the wanderer. I will lay my life that your rival, if you have one, cannot boast the graces of mind and person which you possess but want confidence to you.

"Artist's Love at First Sight."

The great Gainsborough, the painter of the celebrated "Stolen Duchess" and "The Boy Blue" and many lovely landscapes, fell in love at a glance! He was painting a landscape near Sudbury, when he was interrupted in his work by a lady coming between him and the sunlight. Her shadow fell upon his work, for she was wholly unconscious that she was interrupting a work of a genius. Gainsborough looked up, perhaps thinking it was a cow that was wandering by. It happened to be a very attractive woman, with whom the artist was instantly smitten. She proved a very helpful wife, and used to save every scrap of work her husband did, although he would dash off a lovely sketch and fling it under the table. These cast-offs brought a large sum at auction after the artist's death.

Straighten That Lane Back!

Backache is one of Nature's warnings of kidney weakness. Kidney disease kills thousands every year. Safety is only certain if the early warnings are heeded while help is possible. Doan's Kidney Pills have helped many thousands to get rid of backache, strengthen weak kidneys and regulate bladder and urinary disorders.

Don't neglect a bad back. If your back is lame in the morning, if it hurts to stoop or lift, if the dull aching keeps up all day, making work a burden and rest impossible—suspect the kidneys. If the urine is off color and shows a sediment, if passages are irregular, too frequent, too scanty, or scalding, this is further proof. There may be dizzy spells, headaches, nervousness, dropsy swellings, rheumatic attacks, and a general tired-out, run-down condition.

Use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that is publicly recommended by 100,000 persons in many different lands. Doan's act quickly, contain no harmful nor habit-forming drugs and are wholly harmless, though remarkably effective.

From Serious Dropsy To Perfect Health

George Davis, 524 S. 23rd St., Vincennes, Ind., says: "My back ached day and night. I became nervous and irritable and had such headaches, I thought my head would burst. I could not work without terrible dizzy feelings and was afraid to venture far alone for fear of falling. For days at a time I could not walk, and finally when the passage did take place, the odor would be stifling. My feet and arms were swollen to twice their natural size. When I touched the swollen areas, a dent would remain. I finally began using Doan's Kidney Pills and soon noticed a change for the better. The swelling in my limbs and arms went down, the dizzy spells left, and ere long I was in as good health as ever before in my life."

When your back hurts, when your kidneys trouble you, when you feel tired, worn-out or depressed, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that cured Mr. Davis, and make sure the name DOAN'S is on the box.

Taking a Lesser Chance.

A government inspector was conducting an oral examination for marine engineers. Said he to one:

"If you had tested your gauge cocks, had looked at your water glass and had found no water in the boiler, what would you do?"

Came the answer, swift and true: "I would jump overboard."

Spring Clipping of Horses.

The modern practice among the best posted and most progressive horse owners and farmers is to clip all horses in the spring. It is done on the theory that in their natural state horses were not obliged to work, so could shed the winter coat in comfort over a period of several weeks.

Since we oblige them to do hard work on warm spring days, the winter coat should be removed for the same reason that we lay off our heavy winter garments. Clipped horses dry off rapidly; hence they do not take cold as easily nor are they as prone to be affected with other ailments as unclipped animals whose longer hair holds the perspiration for hours. Because clipped horses dry off rapidly they rest better, get more good from their food and come out in the morning refreshed and fit for work.

Since the advent of the ball bearing enclosed gear clipping machine, the work of taking off the winter coat is easy. With the machine a horse can be clipped all over in half an hour, whereas with the old two-hand clipper it required several hours to do it.

Dairymen also now clip the cows all over two or three times a year. The flanks and udders are clipped every three or four weeks, so it is easy to clean the parts before milking. This means less opportunity for dirt and other impurities to get into the milk.
