Charles A. Smith.

Charles A. Smith was born in Sylvan February 8, 1862, and died at his home in Detroit, Tuesday evening, April 15, 1913, aged 51 years, 2 months and 8 days.

Mr. Smith has been in failing health for some months past, but was able to attend to his business most of the time. He paid a visit to his Chelsea relative about two weeks ago. He was united in marriage with Miss Lizzie, a daughter of Mrs. P. P. Chase, October 10, 1883, and to this union one daughter was born. He was a member of Chelsea Tent, K. O. T. M. M. and also a member of a lodge of I. O. O. F. in Detroit.

He is survived by his wife, one daughter, two grandchildren, his mother, Mrs. Sarah Smith, and one sister, Mrs. Lucy Stephens.

The remains will be brought here Friday morning and the funeral will be held in the Baptist church at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, Rev. Edgar L. Killam, of Grand Rapids, will conduct the services. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

Gettysburg Semi-Centennial.

There are between 600 and 800 Union veterans of the civil war still living in Michigan who fought in the battle of Gettysburg July 1, 2 and 3, 1863, and who will be able to go to the semi-centennial celebration of the battle next July at state and government expense. This estimate is furnished at the Grand Army state headquarters in the state house, Lansing. There are a small number of confederate surviving veterans of the battle also living in Michigan, who, too, can join in the celebration without expense. The privilege is not restricted to veterans who served in Michigan regiments. By a bill which has already passed both houses $20,000 is appropriated to pay for their transportation. The Pennsylvania legislature has voted money to feed the veterans while at Gettysburg and the war department will furnish the tentage. No provision is made for the transportation of families of veterans or shelter or subsistence. Preparations are making to care for a maximum of 40,000 veterans, confederates as well as Union. The 40,000 will live in tents, eight to a tent, in a camp about one-eighth of a mile north of the clump of trees known as the high water mark, it being the farthest point north that a confederate fighting force reached during all four years of the civil war. The war department will furnish spring wagons and ambulances to carry veterans to all parts of the battlefield. The cost of sending the Michigan veterans to the celebration may not exceed $15,000. Whatever it is the balance at the $20,000 will be turned back into the state treasury.

Must Call a Special Session.

As the county road system was carried at the recent election, unless the board of supervisors holds a special session sometime before the middle of the coming summer it will be impossible to build any good roads in this county before the summer of 1915. Under the good roads law the supervisors cannot spread the good road tax until they receive an estimate from the road commissioners for a certain amount of money, which cannot be more than two mills on each dollar of assessed valuation. Unless a special meeting is held to elect these commissioners early in the summer, or some arrangements are made for electing them at a special election, it will be impossible for them to certify to the board how much money is wanted or on what plan it is to be expended. It has been supposed that they could do this at the January meeting of the supervisors. But the law prescribes that the certification must be made before October 1, so that the tax can be spread before December 1. Since there was a meeting of the supervisors last January there will be none next January. In other words the commissioners elected at the October meeting, would be unable to claim any money for road building until the rolls are certified to the October meeting of the board in 1914. The tax would then be spread and some time in 1915 the first road building could actually begin.

Now once in every five years the supervisors hold a meeting in June, but this coming June does not happen to be one of the times for a regular meeting. The only way the good roads commissioners can be chosen in time to present their estimate of road taxes to the October meeting of the board will be to have a special meeting of the supervisors early the summer to select three commissioners. These three commissioners are to be chosen for varying terms the first time, one for two years, one for four and one for six, and thereafter one will be selected every two years. To hold a special meeting of the board of supervisors a petition signed by ten of the twenty-nine members is necessary.

"From the Manger to the Cross."

Manager McLaren claims that if he can only convince patrons of the Princess that he has booked for Wednesday, April 23 the greatest picture ever produced, "From the Manger to the Cross," that he will not have a vacant seat in the house for any of the three performances. In many theatres in Detroit, the only place the picture has been shown in Michigan, the crowds have been so large that many have been turned away, and return dates have been secured by every manager who has played the picture. People who plan to attend the Princess on the 23rd would do well to secure their tickets in advance as reserved seats are now on sale and many have been sold. Only three performances will be given. The one at 3:30 being for school children and the price is 10 cents. Two evening performances, one at 7 o'clock and one at 8:45. Price, 35 cents.

Cavanaugh Lake Grange.

The next meeting of Cavanaugh Lake Grange will be held at home of Mr. and Mrs. Mott Hammond on Tuesday evening, April 22. Let us give Mr. and Mrs. Hammond a full house of enthusiastic Grangers.

Our last meeting at the home of C. Riemschneider was attended with a house full of loyal members and the topics for consideration given to the various members was handled very ably. Manfred Hoppe, co-operation among farmers, C. Riemschneider, what new crops will I try this year? He took up alfalfa and beans. Which is most important to attend the caucus and primaries, or election by Philip Schweinfurth. Why do I live in Michigan by C. Weber. The flower garden by Mrs. Kate Gieskie. How can we improve our farms by Mrs. Carrie Richards.

The Grange songs that are interspersed are of a high order and full of inspiration. Surely it is a pleasure to preside at meetings where members are so loyal and the atmosphere so congenial that it gives every one an inspiration and a desire to attend every meeting.

The writer of this article very recently was so impressed with the spirit of true fellowship, when on the evening of April 5th, the occasion of his anniversary, about fifty of the Grange members invaded his home. It was such a surprise I could not comprehend the situation. You all perhaps have heard dreams where everything seemed sublime. Just such a sensation came over me after they were all comfortably seated and having a good time in general. C. Kalmbach came in with a handsome leather chair, and with a few well chosen words, presented it to the Master of the Grange as a token of appreciation due him for the services rendered. Words fail to tell how I value the occasion and the kindness they have shown me, will never be forgotten.

In my next article I will give the history of our Grange. Your truly, R. M. HOPPE.

GREAT STRIKE IS ON IN BELGIUM

SOCIALIST TRADE UNIONS IN PEACEFUL FIGHT FOR THE BALLOT

TIE-UP COMPLETE IN SMALLER CITIES OF COUNTRY

Fifty Thousand Soldiers Under Arms For the Purpose of Protecting Those who are Willing to Work

The vast political strike, planned by the Belgian Socialist trade unions, has begun in a movement to secure ballot equality for all voters.

The first workmen to take part in the movement were the night shifts of the mines and mills throughout the country. They left the various plants in charge of a few caretakers, told off by the Socialist leaders to keep the property from deteriorating.

At least 250,000 men laid down their tools during the morning. There were numerous exceptions to the general walkout in many districts, however.

The strike is complete in such places as the mining districts, but is scarcely discernible in some localities. In Brussels the strike is not noticeable.

Probably one-fourth of the workmen engaged in the suburban factories did not report for work.

Reports from the provinces tell of complete or nearly complete stoppage of work at Liege, Charleroi, Mons, La Louviere, 26,000, most of them belonging to the metal, carriage-building and tobacco trades.

Fifty thousand soldiers are under arms, not for the purpose, the government says, of terrorizing the strikers, but of protecting those who are willing to work.

Parents Suffer Injuries in Attempting to Rescue Children from Flames.

As the result of a fire which destroyed the home of James Bradley, at Kenesh, near St. Ignace, Mr. Bradley is an inmate of a St. Ignace hospital, mourning the death of his wife, their three daughters and a neighbor's child.

The fire started while the family was sleeping. The daughters, aged 14, 10 and 7, were burned along with Verna Irwin, aged 7, who was spending the night with them. Mr. and Mrs. Bradley were severely burned in attempting a rescue, and the latter died of injuries in the hospital. Mr. Bradley probably will recover.

Mr. Bradley is foreman of a mill at Kenesh and Mr. Irwin is an employee of the same plant. The Bradleys moved from Pellston to Kenesh last January.

Memorial Services for Titanic

At 2 o'clock Tuesday morning the steamer Olympic was in identical position as she was a year ago when she received the distress call from her ill-fated sister ship Titanic. This was the time of the last message received from the Titanic, which sank 20 minutes later, carrying with her 1,600 men, women and children.

Eight eastbound and 10 westbound steamers were in the vicinity of the disaster on its anniversary. Special services held on each of these vessels in commemoration of the victims who lost their lives in the greatest catastrophe in the annals of the sea.

Suffragette Wins Hunger Strike

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the suffragette leader, was released from Holloway jail after having been on a "hunger strike" for nine days.

She had been sentenced to three years in the penitentiary as leader of the militant suffragettes.

Mrs. Pankhurst was released on probation, under the terms of which she must report at frequent intervals to the police. In case she commits any misdemeanor she is liable to immediate arrest without a warrant and must then serve out her full term of conviction. The intention of the authorities is to allow her to be free only until she regains her strength.

OLD CASES ARE STRICKEN OFF

JUDGE TUTTLE DISPOSES OF TWELVE HUNDRED IN TWO HOURS.

THE OLDEST ONE WAS STARTED SEVENTY-TWO YEARS AGO.

Many Will Be Taken Care of in May in Federal Courts in Detroit and Bay City Districts.

In the brief space of two hours United States District Judge Tuttle, at Detroit, struck 1,222 equity cases from the March term calendar, leaving but 37 to be tried.

It was number five on the calendar and was the case of Henry Howard vs. Silas Wood, Robert Johnston, Frances Barritt, Amos Stillewood, Cornelius M. Hishby and Isaac H. Devoe. E. B. Harrington was the attorney named for the complainant.

Most cases in the equity calendar are suits pending in patent matters, and the majority of them will be disposed of May 12 or the date for trial set at that time. The equity cases in the calendar for the western district at Bay City will be pared down by the court May 11.

Fire of unknown origin broke out in South hall of Adrain college, the ladies' dormitory, and for a time threatened the whole building. Killed Accidentally.

Earl Huddemacher, the 15-year-old son of John Huddemacher, of Salem, manager of the Worden creamery, was shot and instantly killed while hunting with Rue Eherenberg, the son of John Eherenberg, a blacksmith at Worden, about 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

The two boys went hunting early Sunday, with the Eherenberg boy's shotgun. Walking through some brush near the home of William Hamilton, the Eherenberg boy with his gun over his shoulder, pushed on ahead and young Huddemacher followed immediately behind him. In some way the gun was discharged, full into Huddemacher's face, killing him instantly. The boy was dead when young Eherenberg returned with assistance. The body was carried into the Hamilton home where it remained until viewed by the coroner Sunday afternoon. The shooting is believed to have been caused by a twig or a branch striking against the trigger of the shotgun as it pointed back over Eherenberg's shoulder. Young Huddemacher's parents are almost crazed with grief.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Paul wish to thank their neighbors and friends for their assistance during Mr. Paul's recent illness.

Experience Teaches

Said Billy Smart, at work in the ditch: "I'm young and stout and earn plenty of money. I want to dance and I don't kick on paying the fiddler. I believe in having a good time today. Tomorrow can take care of itself."

The gray-haired laborer at his side smiled sadly as he replied: "I thought the same way myself when I was of your age. That's why I am pegging away now when I am all played out. If I had only had sense enough to have started a bank account and stayed with it I wouldn't have to work now. Hop to it, lad. Nothing but experience will teach you."

Here is the reason: Black Silk Stove Polish sticks right to the iron. It doesn't rub off or dust off. Its shine lasts four times longer than the shine of any other polish. You only need to polish once in four or five days, yet your stove will be cleaner, brighter and better looking than it has been since you first bought it. Use on your parlor stove, kitchen stove or gas stove. Get a can from your hardware or stove dealer. If you do not find it better than any other stove polish you have ever used before, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. But we feel sure you will agree with the thousands of other up-to-date women who are now using Black Silk Stove Polish and who say it is the "best stove polish ever made."

Ground Walls of Old Nineveh

(From the Christian Herald.)
ON HORSEBACK along the summit of the walls of the old city of Nineveh; that has been my work today. It is a journey of but three hours or of eight miles, yet there are so many things of interest to see, so many old ruins to examine, that a full day is scarcely long enough to make the complete circuit as one should. The Book of Jonah calls Nineveh a great city of three days' journey. Had Jonah stopped to admire the palaces along the walls or to study the strange sights which must have met his eyes, he might have found the three days too short, writes Prof. E. J. Banks, from Mosul, Arabia.

In its day, Nineveh was the greatest city in the world, and now its ruins are as imposing as the city was great. Sixty-five years ago Layard discovered the palaces of its kings and carried their treasures away to England. Since then visitors to the ruins have been few, and only during the present wave of reform in Turkey have the Arabs begun to use the ruins as a quarry.

The ruins of Nineveh stand on the left shore of the Tigris about five hundred miles from its mouth. Directly opposite the ruins is Mosul, the second largest city in Mesopotamia. Many of its seventy thousand people are Chaldeans, now Christians, the descendants of the people of old Nineveh.

Now a large new arched bridge, aided by a short bridge of boats, connects Mosul with Nineveh. Let us stand at its western end. Below it a kelek, or goat-skin raft, laden with of the foundation wall varied, but in places it was fully ten feet above the foundations the walls were continued with large sun-dried bricks to a great height.

Just what the ancient gates were like, none can now say, for the excavator has not yet uncovered them. Only at the gate in the northern wall have the Arabs dug away the fallen dirt, revealing a great marble slab engraved with the figure of a winged bull. The gateways of Nineveh, therefore, were faced with slabs of sculptured marble; probably they were enriched above and gorgeously decorated. When we leave the walls to go down into the city, we can hardly believe that we are on the site of an ancient Assyrian capital. There are hundreds of acres of barley growing in its season; hundreds of camels are grazing over the waste places.

The site of Nineveh is almost perfectly level. Here and there are slight elevations which might be taken for natural hills. Few brick or pottery fragments appear on the surface. But adjoining the western wall are two huge mounds concealing the palaces of the greatest kings of Assyria. The lower or southern mound is the smaller, and perhaps of greater interest, for it is occupied by a mosque and a village of considerable size. Its name is Nebi Yunus, or the Prophet Jonah, for in the mosque is the tomb in which Jonah lies buried.

I rode up the steep, narrow streets of the village to the mosque, and to the amazement of the natives I dismounted and entered the mosque yard. A crowd of excited men quickly surrounded me. To a priest I explained freight and passengers, ready for a ten days' trip down the river to Baghdad. Above the bridge, on the rocks projecting from the water, and along the banks, a hundred women are beating the dirt from their clothes and spreading them in the ancient fashion on the shore to dry. Large troops of camels come straggling along and wade knee deep into the water to drink. Farther along are the booths of the vendors of watermelons, which are larger even than the prize pumpkin at an American agricultural fair. The grapes and melons of Assyria are unsurpassed.

Beyond the bridge and gardens and irrigating trenches, now fully a mile away, are the old walls of Nineveh. In ancient times the river used to flow along at their base, but the course of the Tigris is always changing. Imagine a ridge of dirt, with steep sides like the roof of a house, from thirty to forty feet high, so sharp along the top that there is scarcely room for a narrow path, and you have a picture of the walls of Nineveh. In company with Doctor Stanley, an English medical missionary of Mosul, I made their complete circuit on horseback. In shape the city was a somewhat irregular quadrangle, with its longer sides running north and south.

It has long been supposed that the walls of Nineveh were of mud bricks, but these modern excavators have shown that the foundations were of massive blocks of white limestone. Only the outer and inner courses were of well cut stones, while the stones between were in the rough. The height that I had come to see the grave of Jonah, and with a motion of the hand I made it understood that he would be rewarded. Removing my shoes, I followed the priest through a dark passageway. There he pointed to a wall and said that the tomb was just beyond. I wished to enter the prayer-room from which the tomb itself might be seen, but the place was considered far too sacred for my profane feet. However, the few Christians who have been permitted to see the tomb may look only through a small window into a dark chamber in which a cloth-covered mound is scarcely discernible.

If we follow the wall from Nebi Yunus to the north half a mile, and over the Khazir by a new stone bridge, we come to Kouyunjik, the largest mound of Nineveh. Covering about a hundred acres, it rises in places to the height of one hundred and fifty feet. Its sides are so steep that one may ride to the summit only up the winding paths made by the grazing camels. Here, in 1845, Layard found the palaces of Sennacherib and Esarhaddon, and thousands of clay tablets of the Nineveh library. Here, still later, George Smith discovered parts of the Babylonian story of the Deluge, and since then Rassam and King have excavated with success.

After all this labor, you might suppose that the mound has been thoroughly excavated; but only a part of the surface has been scratched. It would take a thousand men a hundred years to thoroughly excavate the entire city.

WAS NOT MARRIED

Nurse Gregory at Thirty and One, Was Still Single, but Not for Long.

By HAROLD CARTER.

"Miss Gregory!" said the man on the bed petulantly.

Nurse Gregory approached her patient. Patients always were petulant, even the best of them, the day after an operation, especially when, as in this case, there was only a small hope that the eyesight would ever be regained. Thirty-five years old and blind! She shuddered to think of this strong man perhaps condemned to a life of inactivity and wretchedness.

"You want some orange juice?" she asked.

"No, I want to talk to you, nurse. You know, during the two weeks that I've been here, before my operation, never seeing the light, and hardly hoping to, I've—well, you've become sort of necessary to me."

Nurse Gregory smiled softly. It was nice to be necessary to anyone. She was necessary to none except for the sake of her skilled hands and shrewd intelligence. And this man—Arthur Graham—had none to care for him. He had lived a single life, absorbed in his work as a painter of stained glass, until the explosion of chemicals that wrecked his studio and blinded him.

"Do you think I'll ever recover my eyesight?" asked the patient.

"We hope so. The doctor says there is a fighting chance. He'll know when the bandages are removed next Tuesday."

"Mayn't I raise them ever so slightly, nurse? I want to see what you look like."

"No!" she cried in alarm. "No! No! Do you want to destroy your last hope of seeing again?"

"I want to see you," he complained.

Nurse Gregory sat down by his bedside. "Suppose I talk to you instead," she said.

"Then let me ask you an impertinent question. How old are you,

Unfastened the Bandages.

Nurse? I have a horror of fat, elderly nurses. I bet you're not above seven and twenty."

"You're four years out," Nurse Gregory answered. "I am thirty-one."

"And you're not married, Nurse?"

"No," she answered, a little wistfully. "I am not married."

"But you could have been—scores of times," he cried triumphantly. "With a personality like yours, a nature like yours, a—"

"Now, you stop," answered Nurse Gregory. "It's time you went to sleep. And don't you dare to think about touching those bandages. We all hope that you will see as well as ever, again."

But when she had left the hospital and gone to her room in the nurse's home, she wept bitterly. She had grown to care for this patient of hers more than for any man she had ever known, and she did not want him to regain his sight.

No, she wanted him always to be blind, so that he could be dependent on her, and so that he should never know. It was the worst thought that ever came to her. She fell on her knees.

"Dear God, forgive my sinful wish and make him well again," she prayed. "Even though I must lose him—yes, even though I must lose him."

Plain Nurse Gregory, they called her at the hospital, and, for the matter of that, everywhere. She was one of those women whose beauty is in the soul. If her features were pleasing, it was in spite of their irregularity, and because of the goodness that radiated from her. She had never had a lover. She had had her plainness drilled into her from childhood. And now—now for the first time she felt depressed of her birthright.

"Dear God, make him well," she prayed, "even though it kill me to let him see me as I am."

The days passed. The man on the bed was well; there was only the formality of raising the bandage to be gone through. Then, on Tuesday morning, he would know his fate in a moment. And neither the nurses nor the doctors could prophesy what would be the outcome of that moment of suspense.

"Nurse," said the man on the evening before, "sit down a moment. I want to tell you something. I'm in love—in love with you. I—"

"If you talk like that I shall leave you," said Nurse Gregory quietly, though her heart was fluttering.

But the man only laughed, and then, stretching out his hand suddenly, he found Nurse Gregory's and took it in both his and raised it to his lips. "Nurse," he said, "do you know what will be the first thing that I shall do when I am well? It will be to ask you—" he held her hand tightly in his—"to ask you to be my wife."

Nurse Gregory could not answer. Her tears were falling fast, and something in her throat choked her utterance.

"You are crying!" exclaimed the man. "You are not angry with me. You love me? There is no one else?" "I love you, and there is no one else," she whispered, and then for the first time in her life she felt a man's lips on hers.

"I know I ought to have waited," he said. "If I am blind, I shall be a blind beggar at the street corners, for without my sight I can do nothing. I should not have asked you until I am well. But I know that I shall see. I am sure of it. God could not be so cruel as to prevent me from seeing you."

"Perhaps God would be kind," thought Nurse Gregory, but she said nothing.

"But love is blind," he continued. "I love you, Elsie. Will you marry me if I get well?"

"No," she cried suddenly. "You must not think of it. You are just grateful. You—you—"

But he actually laughed as she ran out of the room; for, despite the seclusion of his life, he knew when a "no" meant "yes."

"I wonder what has upset Nurse Gregory?" said the doctor to the night nurse as he met her outside the patient's room. "Do you know, I believe she is troubled about Mr. Graham. It's a bad case."

"You don't think he'll see, then?" inquired the nurse.

"It will be a miracle if he does," the doctor answered.

When on the following morning the doctors had assembled in Graham's room Nurse Gregory was as serene as ever. The patient sat in his chair toward the light, his head upturned; only the clenching of his fingers showed the tension of his nerves. At the doctor's bidding Nurse Gregory unfastened the bandages. One turn—another—another, and they fell from his eyes, and the man leaped up and stretched out his hands to the sunlight.

The miracle had occurred.

"But why won't you go back?" inquired the doctor, half an hour later. "He is calling for you. You won't refuse to say goodbye to him? I thought you got along so well together."

With shaking knees Nurse Gregory went back into the room. Graham was standing, his baggage packed, ready to leave. Very miserably she held out her hand.

"Goodbye," she whispered.

He caught her in his arms and pressed her cheek to his. "My love!" he whispered. "How beautiful you are!"

LIONESS LOOSE IN THEATER

Women and Children Hurt in a Panic That Followed Beast's Freedom.

A lioness which was released from its cage in the Popular theater in the Rue de Belleville, Paris, France, owing to an attendant's blunder, caused a panic which resulted in seven people being trampled and seriously injured. The lioness was one of the performers in a dramatic sketch. In this sketch a painter dreams that his wife and daughter are attacked and killed by lions which are the property of a woman with whom the painter has fallen in love.

The little drama, in which the tamer March has played for many years, is very popular in France, and the theater was crowded for the performance. By some mistake the cage containing the lioness was placed on the stage with the wrong end toward the audience, so that the astonished lioness, which should have been behind the bars, found itself between the cage and the orchestra.

There was a moment of dramatic tension. The conductor of the orchestra sat motionless with terror, staring at the lioness, which waved its tail slowly and snarled at the conductor.

A woman shrieked. The lioness, with a roar of rage, crouched, sprang over the footlights and across the orchestra, knocking the player of the double bass and his instrument over, and landing in the front row of stalls, from which the occupants had fled. She then leaped into one of the boxes. The door of the box was open, and the lioness passed into the manager's office beyond.

March, the lion tamer, sprang after the lioness and shut himself in the room. He stunned the animal with an iron bar and then dragged her through a side door leading to the stage. Before the lioness recovered it was safely caged.

Meanwhile the audience struggled towards the exits, and seven women and children were knocked down and hurt. Several women fainted.

Hardly Up to Date.

Mamma—I don't see you playing with that nice doll grandma gave you for Christmas.

Emma—No. Its wardrobe was horribly incomplete. She didn't send a bathing suit, an aviation costume, or a smoking robe.—Puck.

MEMORABLE EVENING

By SARAH O'SULLIVAN.

"Isn't dinner nearly ready, mother?" asked Lester, walking impatiently up and down the room. "It's getting late and I have a pressing engagement to-night."

"In just a few minutes," answered Mrs. Randall. "But do you know I was thinking today that you are always having pressing engagements. It is a rare occasion for you to pass an evening at home with the family."

"By George, I believe you're right, mother," returned her son. "It never struck me before how much I have been gadding about. But I'll stay at home some evening very soon. Sure, I will."

"You'd better get the memorable evening now," put in his sister Marjory. "If you don't you are liable to forget your resolution."

"That's a go. Let me—" I have a very important engagement for tomorrow and one also for Wednesday evening. Thursday is George's stag party. For Friday I have opera tickets. Saturday—well no fellow stays at home Saturday evening. Sunday you always have a million of the relations over, so there's nothing doing for that night. How's Monday? Monday suits me."

"Now," proclaimed Lester, "you all hear that one week from tonight I shall be delighted to pass an evening in the bosom of my family. I shall consider it an engagement of paramount importance. I shall anticipate that evening's pleasure with the greatest possible eagerness. How shall I pass the weary hours until that entrancing moment?"

"I'll wager you dollars to doughnuts that you'll forget all about it before next Monday," declared Marjory. "Forget? Indeed not! How you wrong me! If I do not remember, I'll present each of you with a half dozen pairs of the finest kid gloves. Forget? I should say not!" Lester glowed with indignation.

The following Monday Marjory made a batch of fudge for Lester's evening at home. Mrs. Randall baked his favorite molasses cookies and put the home-made grape juice on ice. His smoking jacket and slippers, which had been out of service for a considerable time, she placed within easy reach.

The evening came. Lester, sitting down to the dinner table, exclaimed, "It's downright annoying! Here, I know I have some engagement for to-night, and yet for the life of me I can't think what it is. It has been worrying me all day. Such a thing has never happened to me before. Provoking!"

Mrs. Randall and her daughter exchanged glances, but said nothing.

"Can't you people help me out?" asked the worried young man.

Both maintained a discreet silence. "Well, I'll get shaved and dressed and by that time I may remember," he said, hopefully.

In a little while Lester re-entered the library saying: "I'm going to the club. Maybe some of the fellows over there can put me next. If any one phones, tell him to call me up at the club."

An hour later Marjory phoned to her brother, saying sweetly: "Have you thought of your engagement yet?" "No, I haven't," he answered, crossly.

"Well, how about the evening you were anticipating with such eagerness? That evening you said you would be delighted to pass in the bosom of your family?"

The telephone receiver was hung up with a bang.

A few minutes later Lester crept up to his room and put on his smoking jacket and slippers. He entered the library, threw himself on the couch and asked in a sheepish way: "Well, what size gloves do you wear?"

Queen Helene's Charity.

The Italian people, who are given to sentiment, adore the Queen Helene because she loves the poor. Recently a woman with her little boy present ed herself at the dispensary of the Via Morsini, at Rome. The child was alarmingly ill. When the doctor came to see the little patient, a woman plainly dressed, who had entered a moment before, stopped to hear what the physician was saying.

Seeing the mother in tears, she said: "Your child will require special care. It will be necessary to send him to the hospital." "I know that he will die there," said the poor mother, "and yet I cannot keep him at home, we are so poor."

"I understand you," said the woman, sympathetically. "I too, am a mother, and she placed in the hand of the poor woman a bank note for 100 lire. "Your child shall lack for nothing, my good woman. Come and see me at the palace." And this was Queen Helene.

His Part in the Game.

William Faversham was talking modestly about an article on women's Easter dress that he had written.

"If the article made a hit," he said, "it was because I wrote it calmly, without heat or rancor. I didn't treat this important subject like Spratt."

"Spratt, you know, said to his bookkeeper: 'My wife brought home a new Easter hat last evening—one mass of yellow paradise plumes—ninety-seven plunks.'"

"How'd you like it?" asked the bookkeeper.

"Oh, I just raved over it," said Spratt.

TRAINING CHILD MIND

DISORDERLINESS A THING TO BE CORRECTED EARLY.

Responsibility Rests with Mother When She Allows Bad Habits to Become a Settled Thing in the Life of Offspring.

If I had only realized when I was a child how much more work it made to have people disorderly and careless about their things I am sure I should have been more careful. But I didn't realize, writes Ruth Cameron in the Milwaukee Sentinel.

That is the oft expressed sentiment of one young woman who has recently gone to housekeeping in a home of her own. And I fancy there are many of us who could say the same thing—we didn't realize! And not about that matter only, but about many matters.

I have heard it said that children are naturally selfish. I beg to differ. I think they are naturally full of the most generous impulses. But I do admit that they are naturally thoughtless and that is what makes them seem selfish. It is not that they would be deliberately selfish and unkind; it is just that they have lived so short a time that they do not understand the trouble and pain and self-denial they may be the cause of—they just don't realize!

Once I knew a wise mother who grasped this fact and based her training on the effort to make her children realize exactly what they were doing when they were thoughtless or careless or unreasonable.

For instance, take the very matter of which the young housewife spoke. This mother had a daughter who was terribly slack about leaving things around. She would come into the house and leave her coat on an chair and her fur on another, throw her gloves on the table and put her hat pins on the mantelpiece and only put away her hat because she was afraid something would happen to the feathers if she didn't. Her mother talked and talked to no avail. Finally she decided to make the daughter realize the trouble she was causing, so she told her that for the next week she the mother, would not pick up one thing that any of the children left lying around, that her daughter must keep the house in order as a punishment for past misdeeds and that if she failed to do so she would not be allowed to go to a certain function to which she was looking forward.

As all the children inherited more or less a tendency to disorderliness from an artistic father, her task was by no means easy. Needless to say the end of the week found her saying: "I never realized how much trouble leaving things round made. I will be more careful in the future."

Again, when the two older children got the habit of teasing for things that were beyond the family purse, this wise woman, instead of scolding, simply took them into her confidence about the family income and outgo asked their help about keeping the accounts, and without saying a word of her purpose to them, soon made them realize for themselves why they could not have everything that other children had. And after that she had no more trouble with teasing.

Look back into your own childhood and see if the unkind, the selfish, the thoughtless, the cruel things that you did were not all done because you did not realize.

What better basis, then, could we have for training our children than helping them to realize now instead of years afterward when it is too late!

Queen Helene's Charity.

The Italian people, who are given to sentiment, adore the Queen Helene because she loves the poor. Recently a woman with her little boy present ed herself at the dispensary of the Via Morsini, at Rome. The child was alarmingly ill. When the doctor came to see the little patient, a woman plainly dressed, who had entered a moment before, stopped to hear what the physician was saying.

"I understand you," said the woman, sympathetically. "I too, am a mother, and she placed in the hand of the poor woman a bank note for 100 lire. "Your child shall lack for nothing, my good woman. Come and see me at the palace." And this was Queen Helene.

THOSE RHEUMATIC TWINGES

Much of the rheumatic pain that comes in damp, changing weather is the work of uric acid crystals.

Needles couldn't cut, tear or hurt any worse when the affected muscle joint is used.

If such attacks are marked with headache, backache, dizziness, and disturbances of the urine, it's time to help the weakened kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills quickly help sick kidneys.

Big Returns From Sealing. With a catch of 36,000 seals, the steamer Stephano is the first of the sealing fleet operators in Newfoundland waters to report.

She brought news that the Nascope had 27,000 fish, the Florizel 22,000, the Sagona 23,000, the Eagle 12,000, the Ballaventure 10,000, the Ponaventure 8,000 and the Adventure 7,000. Others of the fleet had poor luck.

Thrifty Scot.

When Sir John Carr was at Glasgow, in the year 1807, he was asked by the magistrates to give his advice concerning the inscription to be placed on Nelson's monument, then just completed. The knight recommended this brief record: "Glasgow to Nelson."

"True," said the others, "and as there is the town of Nelson near us, we might add, 'Glasgow to Nelson nine miles,' so that the column might serve for the milestone and a monument."

Marquess of Sligo In Indian Mutiny. Lord Altamont, who through the death of his aged father, the other day, has become marquess of Sligo, was through the Indian mutiny. His father, who was in the Indian civil service, was stationed at Bankipur when the mutiny broke out.

Lord Sligo's wife and infant son, seven months old, the new marquess, were sent for safety to a place which was surrounded by rebels for a fortnight. The child, however, was safely taken through the sepy lines by a faithful Indian nurse, who dyed his skin as a ruse to pass him off as her own son. A long time passed before the boy was restored to his anxious parents, who meantime had to go through a further siege at Monghyr. The new marquess recently celebrated his silver wedding. On the actual anniversary day he had to be in Scotland, but he sent his wife a telegram with the characteristic message, "Twenty-five years without regret."

FRIENDS HELP. St. Paul Park Incident.

"After drinking coffee for breakfast I always felt languid and dull, having no ambition to get to my morning duties. Then in about an hour or so a weak, nervous derangement of the heart and stomach would come over me with such force I would frequently have to lie down."

Tea is just as harmful, because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.

"At other times I had severe headaches; stomach finally became affected and digestion so impaired that I had serious chronic dyspepsia and constipation. A lady, for many years State President of the W. C. T. U., told me she had been greatly benefited by quitting coffee, and using Postum; she was troubled for years with asthma. She said it was no cross to quit coffee when she found she could have as delicious an article as Postum."

"Another lady who had been troubled with chronic dyspepsia for years, found immediate relief on ceasing coffee and using Postum. Still another friend told me that Postum was a Godsend, her heart trouble having been relieved after leaving off coffee and taking on Postum."

"So many such cases came to my notice that I concluded coffee
