Homer Spencer.

Homer Spencer, a former resident of Sylvan, died at Lima, New York,

Thursday, May 15, 1913. He moved from here to Reed City, where for several years he was a mail carrier, finally retiring on account of health.

He served in the Civil War and was a member of Co. K 20th Mich. Infantry.

The company was raised here, the late Elijah Hammond being the captain and Mr. Spencer sergeant and at the close of the war he held the rank of first lieutenant. He suffered for many years from the effects of two bullets that were lodged in his body during his term of service. His remains were taken to his former home at Reed City, and the funeral was conducted by the G. A. R.

The deceased was a son of the late

Mr. and Mrs. E. Spencer, who were pioneer residents, and a brother of Mrs. F. D. Cummings, of this place,

Mrs. Peter Fletcher, of Lima, and Abner Spencer, of Sylvan.

Reverses Former Ruling.

County School Commissioner Essery has been notified by Attorney General Grant Fellows that it will again be possible for township board officers to hold district school offices.

Attorney General Kuhn ruled a few years ago that it was illegal for the members to hold both offices, but the new attorney general has reversed this ruling.

Attorney General Fellows holds,
however, that the offices of district treasurer and township treasurer may not be filled by the same man. The commissioner has also been notified that the law giving the township officers the power to remove district officers has been repealed by the legislature. It was this law more than anything else that made it incompatible for members of both boards to hold two offices.

Constipation Cured.

Dr. King's New Life Pills will relieve constipation promptly and get your bowels in healthy condition again. John Supic, of Sanbury, Pa., says: "They are the best pills I ever used, and I advise everyone to use them for constipation, indigestion and liver complaint." Will help you.
Price 25c. Recommended by H. H.
Fenn Co., L. T. Freeman Co. and L.
P. Vogel. Advertisement.

Pomona Grange Meeting.

Washtenaw County Pomona Grange will hold its June meeting with Manchester Grange on the 10th of the month, when the following program will be carried out:

10:30 a. m.—Open in fifth degree.
Reports of granges upon co-operative efforts.

"What are the essentials of cooperation in business?" Discussion led by H. A. Hodge, Pittsfield Grange.

"Legislation regarding co-operative associations," reported by the committee on legislation.

Dinner.

1 p. m.—Symposium, "Washtenaw county from a rural standpoint."

Description of the county.

Three leading farm crops of the county.—W. A. Hutzler, Pittsfield.

Three greatest needs of the farmers of this county.—Geo. Gill, jr., Ypsilanti Grange.

Organizations in the county now available for rural betterment.—

Evan Essery, commissioner of schools.

What might a county farm bureau undertake in this county for its help agriculturally?—Hon. Jason Woodman, county farm specialist for Kalamazoo county.

Music and other entertainment features will be provided by Manchester Grange and the Pomona

Lecturer. All fourth degree members are urged to attend.

Several years have passed since the county grange has met in Manchester and for this reason and because the trains run very conveniently for many, it is hoped that a good delegation of members will plan to attend. The subjects to be discussed upon the program are timely and of live interest among us. Mr. Woodman is a well known practical farmer and member of the State Board of Agriculture who has recently been called to begin the work of an Agricultural Specialist in Kalamazoo county. He has been invited to talk upon the possibilities of this new agricultural extension work with direct reference to its usefulness in this county. A hearty welcome and a good time throughout the day are assure all who can attend.

Found Dead in Bed.

August John, aged 61 years, who has made his home with Mrs. and Mrs.
Lewis Meyer, of Lima, for the last eight or nine years, was found dead in bed at the Meyer home at noon Friday, May 23 1913. He ate breakfast with the family in the morning and retired to his room. At the noon hour when called for dinner he made no response and a member of the family entered his room and found him dead in bed.

The deceased was born in Germany in February, 1852, and has been in this country for about forty years.

He was a peddler and was quite well known in the southern part of this county. He had no known relatives in this country, but he has a son residing in Germany.

The funeral was held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Sunday afternoon, Rev. E. Thiem, pastor of Zion church, Rogers Corners, officiating.

Interment at Lima Center cemetery.

Eighth Grade Exercises.

The eighth grade exercises for the rural schools will be held at Chelsea at 10 a. m. Friday, June 6th. The address will be given by Hon. John Kalmbach.

Our local eighth grade will furnish the music and School Commissioner

Evan Essery will present the diplomas.

The parents and friends of the rural eighth grade are expected to be in attendance.

The eighth grade of our school will attend the exercises and their friends are also invited to be present.

After the exercises the rural boys and girls and their friends will have a picnic dinner followed by a ball game in which the town boys of the eighth grade will take part. There will probably be other contests.

This is the first time that the eighth grade exercises of those receiving diplomas have been held in this way and it is hoped that sufficient interest will be manifested to insure a continuance of holding them.

This year they are held in Ann Arbor, Chelsea, Dexter, Manchester,

Milan, Saline, Whitmore Lake and Ypsilanti.

Lima Township Board of Review.

The Board of Review of Lima township will meet at the Lima town hall on Tuesday and Wednesday, June

3 and 4, and also on Monday and Tuesday, June 9 and 10, from 9 a. m.

until 4 p. m. to review and adjust the assessment roll of said township.

Dated, Lima, May 29, 1913.
FRED C. HAIST, Supervisor.

SPENT THE COIN

Wm. Wade Makes a Confession as to What he did With Schaible's Cash.

On Tuesday morning of last week
Wm. M. Schaible, who is employed by Eppler & VanRiper, lost his pocketbook containing $940 in the toilet room at the place of business of J. E.

Weber. The pocketbook was found a short time afterwards by Wm. Wade, who confiscated $65 of the contents, and then threw the book into the garbage can in the rear of the building, not knowing in so doing that he had overlooked $100 in cash and two certificates of deposit amounting to $875.

Shortly after the find, Wade accompanied by Fred Osterle left for Jackson where $25 was invested in two suits of clothing, one for each man.

From there Wade went to Toledo, and Osterle returned here. When Wade returned here Friday night he had 10 cents in the exchequer, having spent the $85 in various ways.

Mr. Schaible after a search for the lost pocketbook without success, reported the loss to the local officers, who upon investigating became satisfied that Wade knew something about the lost pocketbook and a portion of its contents. Friday Osterle opened up and gave the information that was lacking to clear up the entire matter.

Wade was placed under arrest Saturday morning by Officer Cooper.

About 9 o'clock, Wade, accompanied by Officer Cooper, Justice H. D.

Witherell and Wm. M. Schaible to the garbage can where the pocketbook was fished out smelling of everything but a June rose.

Wade was taken before Justice

Witherell where he made a statement and signed a written confession.

He was bound over to the circuit court and was taken to the county jail at Ann Arbor, by Officer Cooper

Saturday afternoon. An effort is being made to settle the matter and in the meantime Wade is awaiting the results.

"The Grim Toll of War."

Frederic Douglas returns from a diplomatic mission abroad and falls in love with his daughter's governess.

Just before the Civil War breaks out they are married. The wife endeavors to hide the identity of her brother, Clel, who is a secret service agent. Clel secretly visits his sister.

The meeting is witnessed by Douglas who, believing his wife unfaithful, enlists, receiving a commission of Colonel.

Ellis is captured by the Confederates, but escapes closely pursued by the enemy and makes his way towards Colonel Douglas' camp. Mistaken for a spy, he is mortally wounded. After discovering his error the Colonel personally rescues

Ellis and brings him to camp. A battle ensues. The Confederates are driven back. Ellis has been carrying a letter written by his sister. Douglas finds it and learns the relationship between the two.

The Colonel returns home after the war and endeavors to make amends by a life of devotion to his faithful wife.

This thrilling war photo play will be shown at the Princess on Thursday, June 5th.

Amundsen Coming.

At the expense of much time, patience, and money Ann Arbor has secured the services of the great explorer, Captain Roald Amundsen, for his noted production, "How I Found the South Pole," at University

Hall.

Captain Amundsen has been as far north as any man save Peary, has discovered the Northwest Passage and the South pole. On his southern trip he was equipped with apparatus for taking moving pictures and photographed all things moving as far south as any thing moved after that

STORY OF FAMOUS CIVIL WAR FIGHT

Battle of Gettysburg Which Brought Credit to Both Blue and Gray.

TURNING POINT OF CONFLICT

Total Losses on Both Sides in Three Days' Fighting Over 50,000—Several Generals Killed and Wounded.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

WASHINGTON.—It is possible, some people would say, that the Battle of Gettysburg changed utterly the course of American history. It was a great fight between armies of Americans, for probably ninety per cent. of the men who fought on the two sides were born natives to the American soil. The bravery shown at Gettysburg was of the order which Americans have shown on every field and which reflects credit upon the hardy and heroic ancestry of the men engaged, no matter from what race they may have sprung.

At Gettysburg there was nothing to choose between the valor of the North and the South. The South lost the fight, but it lost it honorably and with the prestige of its soldiery undimmed. The charges made on that field have gone down into history as assaults made under conditions which every man felt might mean death at the end. The defenses made at Gettysburg were of the kind which it takes iron in the blood to make perfect. At Gettysburg Northerners and Southerners replenished their store of respect for their antagonists. The battle marked the high tide of the war between the states. After it the South largely was on the defensive, but its defense was maintained with fortitude and in the face of privations which could not chill the blood of men fighting for what they thought was the right.

The Northern armies were persistent in their attacks through the campaigns which after a few months were started against the objective point, Richmond. Brave men here and brave men there, and after the end came it was the qualities which keep company with bravery which made the soldiers of the North and South so ready to forget and to forgive and to work again for the good of a common country.

The great battle of Chancellorsville was fought not long before the opposing Union and Confederate forces met on the field of Gettysburg. Chancellorsville was a Confederate victory. The Southern government believed that the victory should be followed up by an invasion of the North for, according to its reasoning, if an important engagement could be won upon land from invasion, a condition which military men say always adds a subtle something to the fighting quality which is in any man. Some authorities have said that there were 100,000 men in the Confederate forces at Gettysburg to be confronted by 90,000 Union troops. Another authority says that the Confederate force was 84,000 and the Union force 80,000. As it was the armies were pretty nearly equally divided in strength.

In June, 1863, General Robert E. Lee began to move northward. Lee concentrated his army at Winchester, Va., and then started for the Potomac river, which he crossed to reach the state of Maryland. He fully expected to be followed by General Hooker's army and so General Stuart was ordered by Lee to keep in front of Hooker's army and to check his pursuit of the Confederates if it was attempted.

Late in June the Confederate force reached Hagerstown, in the state of Maryland. It was General Lee's intention to strike Harrisburg, Pa., which was a great railroad center and a city where Union armies were recruited and from which all kinds of supplies were sent out to the soldiers in the field. While the Southern commander was on his way with a large part of his force to the Pennsylvania capital another part of his command was ordered to make its way into the Susquehanna Valley through the town of Gettysburg and then to turn in its course after destroying railroads and gathering in supplies, and to meet the Confederate commander with the main army at Harrisburg.

It was General Jubal A. Early of General Lee's command, who reached Gettysburg after a long hard march on June 28. From there he went to the town of York and from thence to Wrightsville. At this place he was ordered by General Lee to retrace his steps and to bring his detachment back to a camp near Gettysburg. When Early obeyed Lee's order and had reached a point near Gettysburg he found the entire Southern force was camped within easy striking distance of the now historic town.

In the meantime things were happening elsewhere. General Hooker in command of the Union army which had been depleted at Chancellorsville, had succeeded in out-maneuvering General Stuart in command of Lee's cavalry, had got around Stuart's command in a way to prevent the Southern general from forming a junction with the forces of his chief commander. Lee gave over the proposed movement on Harrisburg when he heard of Hooker's approach and brought the different parts of his army together.

Four days before the Gettysburg fight General Hooker resigned as commander of the Union army. Hooker and General Hancock disagreed upon a matter concerning which strategists today say that General Hooker was right. Three days before the battle began, that is, June 28, 1863, General George Gordon Meade was named as General Hooker's successor in charge of the Northern army. General Meade at once went into the field and established his headquarters at a point ten or twelve miles south of the town of Gettysburg.

It seems that General Lee on hearing that Stuart had not succeeded in checking the Union army's advance had made up his mind to turn southward to meet the force of Hooker, or as it turned out the force of Meade. Lee with his force had advanced north beyond Gettysburg, while Meade with his force was south of the town. The fields near the Pennsylvania village had not been picked as a place of battle, but there it was that the two great armies came together and for three days struggled for the mastery.

On the last day of June, the day before the real battle of Gettysburg began, General Reynolds, a corps commander of the Union army, went forward to feel out the enemy. He reached Gettysburg by nightfall. His corps, the First, together with the Third and the Eleventh Infantry Corps with a division of cavalry, composed the Union army's left wing.

The Fifth Army Corps was sent to Hanover, southeast of Gettysburg, and the Twelfth Corps was immediately south of Gettysburg at a distance of eight or nine miles. This was on June 30, and the Union forces were fairly well separated, but they were converging and Gettysburg was their objective.

General Reynolds of the Union forces arrived at Gettysburg early on the morning of July 1. He dispatched a courier to Meade saying that the high ground above Gettysburg was the proper place to meet the enemy. Not long after this message was sent to Meade General Reynolds who dispatched it, was killed. He was on horseback near a patch of woods with his force confronting a large detachment of Confederate troops which was coming toward them. These troops of the enemy were dispersed by the Union batteries and Reynolds was watching the successful solid shot and shrapnel onset when a bullet struck him in the head killing him instantly.

General Abner Doubleday succeeded Reynolds in command of the troops at that point of the field. A brigade of Confederates, a Mississippi organization, charged the Union forces, broke their organization and succeeded in making prisoners of a large part of a New York regiment. Later these men were recaptured and the Mississippi brigade was driven back, a portion of it surrendering. In the fight on the first day at this point of the field or near it, one Union regiment, the 151st Pennsylvania, lost in killed and wounded 337 men out of a total of 446 in a little more than a quarter of an hour's fight.

General Doubleday fell back to Seminary Ridge and extended his line. The forces employed against him here were greater than his own, and after hard fighting Seminary Ridge was given up. The first day's battle was in effect and in truth a victory for the Southern arms. On the night of July 1 General Hancock arrived and succeeded in rallying the Union forces and putting new heart into the men. General Meade on that night ordered the entire army to Gettysburg.

Victory Not Followed Up. For some reason or other perhaps unknown to this day, what was virtually a Confederate victory on the first of July was not followed up by General Lee early on the next morning. General Meade therefore succeeded in strengthening his lines and in preparing for the greater conflict. One end of the Union line was some distance east of Cemetery Hill on Rock Creek, another end was at Round Top something more than two miles beyond Cemetery Hill to the south. The Confederate line confronting it was somewhat longer.

It is impossible in a brief sketch of this battle to give the names of the brigade and the regimental commanders and the names of the regiments which were engaged on both sides in this great battle. Meade, Hancock, Howard, Slocum and Sickles with their men were confronting Lee, Longstreet, Hill, Ewell and the other great commanders of the South with their men. The line of battle with the spaces in between the different commands was nearly ten miles. It was the Confederate general's intention to attack at the extreme right and left and at the center simultaneously. It was to be General Longstreet's duty to turn the left flank of the Union army and to "break it." Longstreet's intended movement was discovered in time to have it met valiantly. The battle of the second day really began with Longstreet's advance. The

Maj. Gen. George E. Pickett.

Southern general did not succeed in the plan which he had formed to get by Big Round Top and to attack the Third Corps from a position of vantage in the rear. General Sickles defended Round Top and Longstreet could not take it.

When one visits the battlefield of Gettysburg he can trace the course of battle of the second day where it raged at Round Top, Peach Orchard, Cemetery Hill, Culp's Hill, and what is known as The Devil's Den. The tide of battle ebbed and flowed. Little Round Top was saved from capture by the timely arrival of a brigade commanded by General Weed that dragged the guns of a United States regular battery up to the summit by hand.

At the end of the second day's fight it was found that the Southern army had failed to break the left flank of the opposing forces, that it had failed to capture Round Top and that the right flank of the Northern army, although vigorously attacked, had not been broken. There was a tremendous loss of life on both sides, and while in general the day had gone favorably to the Northern cause Gettysburg was still a drawn battle.

Charge of Gen. Pickett. It was on July 3, the third and last day of the great battle of Gettysburg that Pickett's men made their charge which has gone into history as one of the most heroic assaults of all time. It was forlorn hope but it was grasped and the men of George Edward Pickett, Confederate soldier, went bravely and with full hearts to their death across a shrapnel and rifle swept field.

When the third day's fighting opened it began with an artillery duel, hundreds of guns belching forth shot and death from the batteries of both contending forces. It is said that this was the greatest duel engaged in by field pieces during the four years of the war between the states.

The Union guns at one time ceased firing, and it is said that the southern commander thought they had been silenced, and then it was that Longstreet's men made an assault and Pickett's men made their charge. The former general's objective was Big Round Top, but his forces were driven back. Pickett formed his division in brigade columns and they moved directly across the fields over flat ground. They had no cover and they had no sooner come into effective range than they were met by such a storm of shot as never before swept over a field of battle.

They went on and on, and on closing in their depleted ranks and moving steadily forward to their death. Those of Pickett's men who reached their destination had a short hand-to-hand encounter with the northern soldiers. It was soon over and Pickett's charge, glorious for all time in history, was a failure in that which it attempted to do, but was a success as helping to show the heroism of American soldiers.

The losses at Gettysburg on both sides were enormous. The Union army lost Generals Zook, Farnsworth, Weed and Reynolds, killed; while Graham, Barnes, Gibbon, Warren, Doubleday, Barlow, Sickles, Butterfield and Hancock were wounded. The total casualties killed, wounded, captured or missing on the Union side numbered nearly 24,000 men. On the Confederate side Generals Semmes, Pender, Garnet, Armistead, and Barke-dale were killed, and Generals Kemper, Kimball, Hood, Heth, Johnson and Trimble were wounded. The entire Confederate loss is estimated to have been nearly 30,000 men.

The third day's fight at Gettysburg was a victory for northern arms, but it was a hard won fight and the conflict reflects lustre today upon the north and the south. Lee led his army back southward, later to confront Grant in the campaigns which finally ended at Appomattox.

Forces Engaged and Losses. The forces engaged at the Battle of Gettysburg were:

Confederate—According to official accounts the Army of North Virginia, on the 31st of May, numbered 74,668. The detachments which joined numbered 6,400, making 80,868. Deducting the detachments left in Virginia—Jenkins' brigade, Pickett's division, 2,300; Corse's brigade, Pickett's division, 1,700; detachments from Second corps and cavalry, 1,300, in all 5,300—leaves an aggregate of 75,568.

Union—According to the reports of the 30th of June, and making allowance for detachments that joined in the interim in time to take part in the battle, the grand aggregate was 100,000 officers and men.

The casualties were:

Puzzled Missionary. Will some one explain why some people who are invariably late at church need no bell to call them to the moving-picture show on time?

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR TO MEET IN FLINT

CONCLAVE TO BE HELD IN THE FINEST TEMPLE IN THE STATE.

GREAT PARADE SCHEDULED FOR JUNE THIRD

Elaborate Preparation Made for the Entertainment of Guests by all Civic Bodies of the City of Flint.

The Masonic bodies of Flint are especially interested in the Knights Templar convocation of Michigan's Grand Commandery, which convenes in Flint on June 3 and 4, because it will enable them to display the finest Masonic temple and equipment in the state. The occasion will bring to Flint several hundred Masons and Templars and the temple will be their Mecca.

Elaborate preparations have been made for the entertainment of these visitors and especially the ladies, for whom automobile parties will be organized. The Flint Country club will keep open house for these visitors during their stay in Flint and the Grand Templar parade on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock will be the largest ever held in any city in Michigan outside of Detroit or Grand Rapids. It is unusual for any number of commanderies to attend a convocation in the same year the triennial convocation is to be held. Flint will be a noted exception in this instance, because there will be at least 12 commanderies in the parade.

Law Seniors Leave Fund

Instead of leaving to the university an oil painting of some faculty member, as has been the custom, the senior law class of the W. of M. has decided to leave a loan fund of $200 as its memorial. The board of regents will be the trustees of this fund, and it will be loaned to law students, especially seniors, on recommendation of the law faculty. The students who receive aid from the fund will repay it at convenient intervals with interest. Thus the fund will continue to increase.

Church Convention at Saginaw.

Two hundred delegates are expected for the state convention of the Christian church which convenes in Saginaw the first week in June. J. N. McNash, secretary of the American Christian Missionary society; W. R. Warren, secretary of the Ministerial Relief association of the United States; R. H. Hopkins, national Bible school superintendent, and other leading national lights of the church in this country will be here.

Brotherhood Meeting at Cadillac.

The Congregational Brotherhood meeting at Cadillac in conjunction with the Michigan Congregational conference, elected the following officers: President, S. E. Clark, Detroit; vice president, W. T. Warren, Alpena; secretary-treasurer, H. B. Clement, Detroit. The president's report showed 47 brotherhoods at the beginning of the fiscal year, with 64 at the present time, and a gain of 789 members.

Followed Ten Years and Killed.

After a pursuit of ten years around the world, agents of the Camorra of Italy found and killed Angelo Defino, said to have turned traitor to the organization in Palermo a decade ago. Five previous attempts had been made to kill him. Bullets fired by three strangers, who entered a Brooklyn dance hall, where Defino was sitting at a table chatting with friends, killed him instantly. The murderers escaped.

Newcomb to Succeed Larmour.

Harry A. Newcomb, of Kalamazoo, has been appointed postoffice inspector, succeeding J. J. Larmour, of Detroit, who was removed from the service a short time ago. Newcomb has been a mailing clerk in the Kalamazoo office several years. He took the inspector's examination and qualified before Larmour was removed.

The thirty-ninth annual reunion of the Loomis Battery association was held at Coldwater, with 19 soldiers present. While in service this battery saw 18 battles. Murray Tilton was elected president. O. R. Root secretary and treasurer.

Prof. Walter H. French, of Lansing, head of the department of agricultural education at the M. A. C., has rejected an offer to become president of the New Mexico Agricultural college, and will remain at the East Lansing institution for at least another year.

There will be no municipal lighting plant in Albion this year at least, the council having closed a contract, with a private corporation to light the streets. An incandescent system will be installed to take the place of the present arc lights.

W. P. McNammy, United States district inspector of boilers, has condemned 14 Pare Marquette locomotives as unfit for use. All of them had been under the care of men imported by the railroad company to take the place of strikers in the Wyoming yard shops.

REP. FRANCIS O. LINDQUIST

Michigan Congressman has introduced a bill for pure cloth fabrics and leather. He has been assured of the support of sixty-three hundred women's clubs and of the National Laundrymen's Association.

Many Die When Ship Sinks

The steamer Nevada, with 200 passengers on board, struck three mines in succession in the gulf of Smyrna, and sank. The mines were strewn in the coast waters by the Turks to prevent attack by the Greek fleet during the Balkan war.

Of the 200 passengers on the steamer 80 were rescued by boats, which put off from the French cruiser Britz, which, was anchored in the harbor.

Th Nevada, though owned by a Turkish company, was flying the American flag. She belonged to a fleet of eight steamers, of which seven were renamed in 1910, and were transferred to the American flag.

To Make Chicago Silent

Chicago's great orchestra of discordant sounds, arising from rattling elevated trains, locomotive whistles, river boat sirens, automobile squawks, and the cries of peddlers, was placed on trial and found guilty of being a nuisance.

The sentence was immediate suppression and all the city ordinances, regulating whistles and other noises, have been ordered revived. Many of these anti-noise laws have been regarded as "dead letters."

"We shall try to make Chicago one of the quietest big cities in the country," said Mayor Harrison.

Anhut Sent to Sing Sing

John N. Anhut was sentenced to not less than two years and not more than four in Sing Sing prison.

Anhut, who was formerly a Detroit lawyer and state senator, recently located an office in New York city. He was convicted of offering a $20,000 bribe to Dr. Russell, superintendent of Matteawan insane asylum, to free Harry K. Thaw, the millionaire slayer of Stanford White.

The usual motions for a new trial and arrest of judgment were denied by the court. No notice of appeal was filed.

Child Is Burned in House.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joe McGee, about eight miles northeast of Lake City, was burned to the ground and their 4-year-old daughter, Margaret, burned in bed before she could be rescued. A baby was thrown from a window by its mother and saved, but a 9-year-old daughter was badly burned by the flames.

Mr. McGee was absent from home at the time. The explosion of a lamp which had been left burning is believed to have been the cause of the accident.

The elegant farm home of Rep. Jas. N. McBride, of Burton, who was the Bull Moose floor leader in the recent legislature, was burned to the ground. The loss is several thousand dollars. The fire originated from a defective chimney.

Burglars again visited Fraser and entered the postoffice, securing $10 in stamps. They took several drawers from a desk and carried them down the road about a half mile, where they left them. The safe was easily opened, as it has not been repaired since burglars broke it open two weeks before.

The baggage car and engine of a G. R. & I. train was derailed two miles south of Summit City and turned over on their side. The accident was caused by a kink in the track, which was not seen in time. Engineer Hayes, Fireman Swan and Mail Clerk Nichols were slightly hurt about the head and face.

An alfalfa campaign will be conducted in St. Clair county during the week beginning June 23, with a big dinner for farmers and business men in this city the Saturday following.

TENDERFEET WIN WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP

HILL AND SONS, THE OAT CHAMPIONS, ARE COCKNEYS BORN AND BRED.

City-bred in the world's greatest metropolis and untrained as to things agricultural, were J. C. Hill and his three boys when they settled on home steads at Lloydminster, in the Province of Saskatchewan (western Canada), eight years ago. Today they are the recognized champion oat growers of the North American continent, having won twice in succession the silver challenge cup, valued at $1,000, at the Fifth National Corn exposition, Columbia, S. C. The Plate, officially known as the Colorado Oat trophy, is emblematic of the great championship prize for the best bushel of oats exhibited by individual farmers or experiment farms at these exhibitions.

The Hill entry won this year in the face of the keenest competition, hundreds of exhibits being sent by experienced farmers from all parts of the United States and Canada. The oats were grown on land which was wild prairie less than four years ago.

When Mr. Hill and his three sons, who probably never saw a wider acreage than the hills of Hampstead Heath, or the parks of London, came to Saskatchewan eight years ago, they had little more capital than was required for homestead entry fees. They filed on four homesteads, in the Lloydminster district, which straddles the boundary of Alberta and Saskatchewan. They went to work with a will, ripping the rich brown sod with breaking plows and put in a crop, which yielded fair returns.

They labored early and late and denied themselves paltry pleasures, glad to stand the gaff for a while in raising to their possibilities. They talked with successful farmers and studied crops and conditions and profited by both. The new life on the farm was strange but they never lost heart, handicapped as they were by lack of experience and capital.

The farm house, modern in every respect, compares favorably with any residence in the city. The Hills have substantial bank accounts and their credit is gilt-edge from Edmonton to Winnipeg and beyond.

"There is nothing secret about our methods nor is our plan copyrighted. We first made a thorough study of climatic conditions, soil, and seed," said Mr. Hill. "We tended our crops carefully and gradually added live stock, realizing from the beginning that mixed farming would pay larger and more certain returns than straight grain growing. We have demonstrated that fact to our satisfaction and the result is that many of the farmers in the district are following our example."

The land that the Hills work is of the same class as may be found anywhere in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta.—Advertisement.

Aged Survivors of Our Wars.

I am informed by the United States pension office that the last soldier of the rebellion will die in 1955. That is the estimate made by those who make a study of vital statistics. If the last veteran survives until that date he will have lived ninety years after the surrender of Lee. Kronk, who died a couple of years ago in New York state, was the last soldier of the War of 1812, and he lived considerably more than ninety years after peace had been signed. Bakeman, the last soldier of the Revolution, lived for eighty-six years after the peace of 1783.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

HANDS BURNING, ITCHING

905 Lowell Place, Chicago, Ill.—"The trouble began by my hands burning and itching and I rubbed and scratched them till one day I saw little red sores coming out. My hands were disfigured and swollen, and troubled me so that I could not sleep. They were cracked and when the small sores broke a white matter would come out. I could not do any hard work; if I did the sores would come out worse. For two years nobody could cure my eczema, until one day I thought I would try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used warm water with the Cuticura Soap and after that I put the Cuticura Ointment on my hands twice a day for about five or six months when I was cured." (Signed) Sam Marcus, Nov. 28, 1911. Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Scene—one of the piers at Southampton. A group of boys playing in dangerous proximity to the edge. Suddenly an old salt, who has been a fidgety onlooker of their gambols, leaves his favorite post and proceeds soundly to cuff one of the lads in question. Surprised by his actions several interrogated the old-timer thereon. "Well, son," was his reply, "it be like this. 'Tisn't as I care a haug whether they fall in or whether they don't, but it's the bloomin' uncertainty about that I can't stand!"—Pittsburgh Courier.

SYNOPSIS.

At the beginning of great automobile race the mechanic of the Mercury, Stanton, who has been working at the factory or with you ever since we came back from Indianapolis.

In a nervous exasperation the assistant manager whirled his chair around. "He had a two weeks' vacation," he reiterated crossly. "He told me that he was going off by himself for a quiet rest. You don't have to know everything, Stanton. I fancy he needed a rest after what you put him through out west, he asked me not to tell you about it. Hello—454—"

Stanton paused for a moment, dumb, then turned on his heel and went out. He was so stunned and bitterly angry that the little red flecks danced before his vision. Floyd had lied to him, systematically deceived him. In order to escape from his too pressing friendship, no doubt, he remembered that the mechanic had always shrunk from his personal advances and only yielded to them under compulsion. Now he understood the letter which he had received the previous night from Green, and Mr. Bailey's confused answer to his question about Floyd. He had been put off to be amused by Jessica, until Floyd was again ready to use him in the plans for the Comet factory. Jessica! Stanton stopped short in the dark hall. Had Jessica also deceived him? Was she too playing a part in order to keep him in a good humor? He struck his clenched hand violently against the wall beside him.

"What's that?" cried the affrighted Mr. Green, within the room. "Who—?"

"I ran against the wall, in the dark," Stanton called, his voice a little hoarse, but evenly controlled. "Good night."

"Good night. We'll fix things all right, Stanton; you take a good sleep."

"I shall," promised the driver. He did not.

At seven o'clock, the next morning, Mr. Green burst into the hotel dining-room where Stanton was at breakfast. "He's got them! They're coming," he rejoiced maniacally. "The car wasn't at Brighton, but he located it ten miles farther over, on a siding. And he raised such a disturbance around the express people's ears that they unloaded the tires then and there, and rushed out two motor trucks to cart them across to us. They'll be here by eight and the race starts at nine. I have been up all night—an hour ago it looked as if you would have to be withdrawn from the contest for lack of a few sets of rubber tires. That fool tire company!" He wiped his forehead. "Don't you want to come out to the course, after you finish here? Floyd is due on the train which arrives in fifteen minutes, if he isn't smothered by the crowd. I never saw such a mob of people; they have been coming since dawn; all night, in fact, and they're still coming."

"Yes," acquiesced the other unemotionally. His dark face gave an

The assistant manager stared in a reproach touched with hysteria. His collar was wilted, his eye-glasses dangled by their cord.

"Buy them? Buy enough racing tires fitting the Mercury to last you for a three hundred mile road race, and get them here by to-morrow morning? What's the matter with you, Stanton?"

"Well, since there is nothing to do but eat, come to dinner, Floyd," said the other.

"It isn't dinner, it's supper," corrected the mechanic. "This is the country and you had your dinner at noon. But I'll come, anyhow."

At the table in the course of the meal, a small tea-pot was set before Stanton.

"Chocolate, sir," he was apprised.

"Why, you had none at luncheon?"

The pompadoured waitress giggled.

"No, sir. But the gentleman sent a boy after some and came down and saw the cook, and cook's that fond of nonsense, and she fifty-four next December."

Stanton looked across into Floyd's mischievous gray eyes.

"I hadn't anything better to do," was the malicious explanation. "And I was afraid your nerves would go to pieces if you didn't get your usual drug and then you'd wreck us to-morrow."

"He'd coax a bird off a tree, sir," giggled the departing maid.

"Give me your cup and have some," Stanton briefly commanded.

"Going to throw it at me, like you did that jug of water on the first night we raced together?" teased his companion, obeying.

Stanton's head tilted slightly, the regard in which he enveloped Floyd was almost savage in its leap of intense and tempestuous passion. Such a glance from man to woman would have been a declaration, from man to man it was not a thing to be voiced. Floyd himself faltered before it, started into pallor.

"You can throw it at me, if you like, and square up," was all Stanton said, and reached for the sugar-bowl with his customary nonchalance.

"Thanks; it's boiling. I guess I won't," Floyd acknowledged. But he did not look at the other, and his manner was troubled.

The meal was ended and the evening had commenced, when a telegram came in from New York.

"Car marked Ruby Co. consigned to Mercury Co. Coney Island, left here last night."

Mr. Green uttered a howl and felt for the telephone.

"They've shipped the car to Coney Island instead of to Long Branch," he raged. "The tires must be out at the Beach track, or near it."

"Don't telephone; send some one out there to get them," advised Stanton practically.

"I've got to be here, and I can't get out New York men in time, now."

"Well, I'll go, then. Coney Island has got to be raked fine and the tires brought here as soon as they are found."

"You? You? Traveling and wearing yourself out on the eve of a grueling race? No. Go to bed and get your rest, please, Stanton. I'll send some one."

Stanton did not go to bed, but he went into the hotel room across the hall and played billiards with three of his fellow-drivers.

He was less forlorn, less caustic of speech than formerly. Floyd had taught him the art of companionship. Before the game ended, the four players found themselves very good company and drank a good night in Apollinaris, to the landlord's Bacchic disgust.

About ten o'clock, Stanton looked into the apartment where Mr. Green sat between the telegraph operator and the telephone.

"Where is Floyd?" he casually wondered.

"Hello, hello—no, hold the wire. What is it? Floyd? Oh, he's gone to Coney Island. Hello, yes—wrong number."

"To Coney Island! You sent him?"

"He offered to go," Mr. Green jerkily imparted. "Please go to bed, won't you? Floyd can take care of himself, I should think, and he has had a two weeks' rest to get ready for this."

"What do you mean? He has been working at the factory or with you ever since we came back from Indianapolis."

In a nervous exasperation the assistant manager whirled his chair around. "He had a two weeks' vacation," he reiterated crossly. "He told me that he was going off by himself for a quiet rest. "Why, you had none at luncheon?"

The pompadoured waitress giggled.

"What have I done?" he asked simply.

Both men were still unmasked, their privacy of speech was secured by the uproar around them. Stanton looked grimly back.

"Lied to me. You were not kept away from New York by work with Green, or any other work, for the last two weeks."

A tinge of scarlet streaked Floyd's pallor, he bent his head.

"Yes, I lied to you," he admitted. Stanton's gauntleted hand closed on his wheel.

"There was no need. Your time was your own, Floyd; I claimed no control over you. I don't know why you did it, to be rid of me for a while, I suppose, but the reason doesn't matter. Last night I thought a good many wild things about you, and your sister, but this morning I've got my grip again. No doubt you had all you could stand of me, I'm not precisely lovable and I would have understood if you had just told me so. But I will have no friend I can't trust all the way. Get in—we will finish this race, and part."

Floyd raised his head and gave to the stern scrutiny his candid gray eyes.

"Stanton, trust me all the way now," he appealed. "Can you do that? Can you take my word that your friendship is the only thing in the world I want? If I deceived you, it was so I could be here to race with you to-day. I will tell you afterward, I can't now."

"You mean—"

Floyd held out his hand.

"I've got everything badly mixed up, but it's clean to offer you, Stanton."

As swiftly impulsive as his condemnation was Stanton's movement as he bent to give the clasp.

"All right," he said curtly. "Get in; I ought to have given you a chance. And as the other obeyed: 'I didn't mean to meet you as I did, an hour ago, anyhow; it slipped me.'"

"They're signaling," warned Mr. Green, hurrying over. "Are you ready? Both of you?"

From his place beside Stanton, Floyd turned a face of incarnate sunshine to the assistant manager, a face so changed in its color and glow and warmth that all who saw drew breath in sheer wonder.

"We're ready," his lilting tones assured. "Don't worry."

Stanton laughed with him, fastening on the mask, and sent the Mercury rolling forward. The world was right once more, and life sane.

It was an exquisite morning; windless, cool, with happy little effects of snowy cloud against a cobalt-blue sky. The October air was a summer-distilled cordial, an ethereal intoxicant. The racers had no time to notice it, yet the effect was there. The speed made on the first laps was record-breaking.

The brown or gray streak of road ahead, the deadly turns, the treacherous smooth hill down which it was so easy to make speed and still more easy to meet disaster—for the first hour Stanton had no attention to spare from these. Moreover, the spectators were massed over the course in many places, recollecting just enough to leave a lane for each car's passage, and so imposing another anxiety upon the drivers who knew the swerve of a foot must bring death to some one.

"Car behind," Floyd's clear accents gave the familiar cautions, from time to time. "He's tryin' to get us before the turn. The Atlanta's head in the dust."

The pace maintained was the fastest at which the Mercury could be held to the lead first, when possible, then keep a steady average regardless of his rivals' spurts of speed; unless the race were too short to permit such tactics or the contest too close. Now, at the end of the second hour Floyd made the desired announcement, as they shot past the grand-stand and the bulletin boards.

"We're leadin'. The tires have been holdin' fine—look out for them this round."

Stanton moved his head affirmatively, his narrowed eyes unswerving from the line of course ahead. Heeding the advice, he did take the turns more carefully.

Bird's Nest in Mail Box.

Probably a bird's nest in a rural mail box is a rare thing, if it has ever happened before, but out in Oswegatchie a small bird has taken possession of a mail box and has already built her nest and laid three eggs and it looks as though she would complete her work of hatching and rearing her young.

The particular box picked out by the bird is one that is in use daily and the mail carrier never misses a stop at this box. Mrs. Bird seems to enjoy the idea to have the mail carrier lift the cover of the box and deposit the mail and will sit on her nest as unconcerned as can be. The mail box has been fixed so that it will not close entirely so that the bird may complete the task of rearing her young. It is not known what kind of a bird this is, but it is thought that it is a pheasant, being brown of color and about the size of a sparrow and laying sky-blue eggs.—Watertown Correspondent New London Day.

Much Required of Physicians.

In Beloechistan when a physician gives a dose he is expected to paralyze a similar one himself as a guarantee of his good faith. Should the patient die under his hands the physician, though rarely exercise relatives, the right of putting him to death, unless a special agreement has been made for freeing him from all responsibility as to consequences; while, if they should decide upon smothering him, he is expected to yield to his fate like a man.

HIS NARROW ESCAPE

By MARY POYNTER.

"You certainly do look good to me this evening, Eleanor," said the young man with a sigh of satisfaction as he deposited his box of confectionery on the table and sank into a divan corner all with the same motion.

"Thank you," said the pretty girl with great sweetness. For an instant her eyes rested upon him meditatively, and then she hurried her bomb.

"Albert," she said, "who was the girl with whom you were walking down Michigan avenue Saturday afternoon—the afternoon you telephoned that we couldn't go to the matinee after all, because you had to work?"

"Who—me?" said the young man in rather staccato tones, sitting upright with great suddenness. An expression of utmost surprise began to show on his face.

"Did you think I was referring to my grandfather or the president of Mexico?" she inquired, crushingly.

"Who," began the young man with great indignation, "told you such a ridiculous story? I don't want to reflect on any of your friends, Eleanor, but there are unscrupulous persons who don't trouble to be sure of identifications."

"I've known you two years," broke in the pretty girl, "and I'm tolerably sure of my own eyes, Albert!"

"Oh, then you saw me!" the young man murmured unthinkingly. He put up a protesting hand as she opened her lips. "Now, Eleanor!" he said, "don't be hasty! If you will stop to think, you'll remember that lives have been ruined on all sides of us just because people have jumped to conclusions! You're too broadminded, I know, to do anything like that! Why, just think—"

"I suppose that's all true," admitted the pretty girl. "But incidentally, who was she, Albert?"

The young man regarded her with a beautiful expression of reproach. He sighed as he shook his head. "I can't tell you how disappointed I am."

Women who have been cured say "it is worth its weight in gold." Dissolve in water and apply locally. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. has recommended Partine in their private correspondence with women.

For all hygienic and toilet uses it has no equal. Only 50c a large box at Drug-gists or sent postpaid on receipt of price. The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

New York is now planning popular opera. It will probably be ragtime in three reels.

Liquid blue is a weak solution. Avoid it. Buy Red Cross Ball Blue, the blue that's all blue. Ask your grocer. Adv.

At the School.

"I never saw such heads as you girls have! Who's got your hair?"

"Old Miss Prim—the cat."

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children's Teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, cures wind colic, and keeps the bowels open.

City Grass is Different.

A remarkably interesting fact was brought to light by Lord Redadsale before the advisory committee of the King Edward memorial fund for London, which was discussing the laying out of Shadwell market site as a pleasure garden. It was curious, he said, that grass brought from the country withered away in London, on the other hand, grass from London grown seeds flourished. That is a striking example of what scientists call adaptation to environment.—London Globe.

Womanliness.

Perhaps it would not be so easy to lose "womanliness" as some people seem afraid it would be. Perhaps all the pow-wow about becoming desexed is superfluous. Weininger calls attention to the fact that while there are people who are anatomically men and psychologically women, there is no such thing as a person who is anatomically woman and psychologically man. However masculine her appearance, a woman's psychic qualities remain distinctively feminine. At least, Mr. Weininger says so.

Be Happy Today.

He that hath so many causes of joy, and so great, is very much in love with sorrow and peevishness, who loses all these pleasures, and chooses to sit down upon his little handful of thorns. Enjoy the blessings of this day, if God sends them; and the evils of it bear patiently and sweetly; for this day only is ours. We are dead to yesterday and we are not yet born to the morrow. But if we look abroad and bring into one day's thoughts the evil of many, certain and uncertain, what will be and what will never be, our load will be as intolerable as it is unreasonable.—Jeremy Taylor.

Not So Polite as It Looked.

Crowds were on the street car when the tall woman struggled up the aisle and grasped a strap. Twelve men were seated on each side, but not one arose and offered her his seat. At last a small boy touched her on the arm.

"You can have my seat, lady," called the youngster.

"Thank you," said the tall woman, seating herself in the vacant space; "that was very polite of you."

"No," replied the boy, "it wasn't politeness; there's chewing gum all over the darned seat."

"LIKE MAGIC"

New Food Makes Wonderful Changes.

When a man has suffered from dyspepsia so many years that he can't remember when he had a natural appetite, and then hits on a way out of trouble he may be excused for saying "it acts like magic."

When it is a simple, wholesome food instead of any one of a large number of so called remedies in the form of drugs, he is more than ever likely to feel as though a sort of miracle has been performed.

A Chicago man, in the delight of restored digestion, puts it in this way: "Like magic, fittingly describes the manner in which Grape-Nuts relieved me of poor digestion, coated tongue and loss of appetite, of many years standing."

"I tried about every medicine that was recommended to me, without relief. Then I tried Grape-Nuts on the suggestion of a friend. By the time I had finished the fourth package, my stomach was all right, and for the past two months I have been eating with a relish anything set before me. That is something I had been unable to do previously for years."

Fortune's Ladder

There are three very important steps on the ladder that leads on to Fortune. Here they are: First—"Work." Second—"Save." Third—"Invest."

Work—because it's the way to get the money. Save—because if you do not, there is nothing in sight but to work until you are worn out. Invest—the savings prudently so that they may work for you. Master these three steps and you are well started up the ladder. A good bank will help you at every step. We offer our services.

Old style United States Separators did not run so easy as new style Interlocking Separators. This picture shows the contrast between the old style and new style United States Separator bowls.

The skimming capacity of these two bowls is practically identical—yet the new style bowl is only half the size of the older model, and runs with about half the power of older models.

The 1913 model U. S. has one of the smallest bowls, capacity considered, and is one of the easiest running separators made.

In Montenegrin Mountains

MONTENEGRIN SOLDIERS

AT THE hamlet of Virpazar, surrounded by ruins of miniature castles on frowning crags by the side of the lake, we went aboard a little steamer and presently were gliding slowly out through the reedy channel on the way to Cetinje, a barge of flour lashed alongside, much hampering our progress. There were on board a number of peasant girls, a quartet of Serb officers on a mission and some ill kempt soldiers, writes a Cetinje correspondent of the Chicago Daily News. One of these last presently moved over to where we were sitting on our baggage and addressed us to our surprise in good racy United States:

"American? Thought so! Well now ain't this fine! Mighty glad to see you! What you boys doing away down here?"

He was a Dalmatian Slav, still young, a glass worker, who, at the beginning of the war, being single, had thrown up his job, sold his bit of property in Portland, Ore., and staked almost the whole of his twelve years' American savings in hastening back to draw head at least once on the Turkish foe before the fun should be over.

Too Dull for Him.

"But these fellows ain't done much since I came," he complained. "They got all they wanted in the plain outside of Scutari over a month ago, and now they're lying low. You say the Greeks are really having some fighting down Janina way? Blamed if I don't believe I'll go down there! I'm a volunteer, you know, so I will let me do as I please. No, I don't talk much Greek, but I know a little. Learned it off of some fellows I used to work with. Guess I could get along all right."

Scutari proved to be an odd and decidedly an interesting variety of mountain lake. Despite its great length, it is hardly more than three miles wide in the broadest parts. And while to the south we could see clear to the mighty mountain, Tarabosch, at whose eastern base the beleaguered city lies, to the north the waters wind blindly through the rocks like a river, seeming at every turn to end abruptly, but proving, as we glided gently along, to extend always in one more secret reach to the right, and then in another to the left, and in another and another, till we thought we should never come to the end.

"Say, did you ever see such a rock pile in your life?" It was our friend, the volunteer, who had seated himself on the deck beside us. "It certainly beats all. I've been pretty much all over the United States, and I reckon I've seen some pretty rough mountains, but these fellows here have got more solid rock in their dinky little country than all the rest put together."

We passed an island off to the right on which stood a quaint old castle, said to date from Roman times. Then we came upon two women rowing a crescent shaped canoe laden with hay. They stood one at each end and each with an oar.

"Say!" exclaimed our friend. "Look at that! Ain't that primitive, though? But for that matter, this here old tub we're aboard of ain't moving much faster than they are. Say, how'd you like to have a nice little motorboat on this lake, now? Wouldn't it make their eyes stick out? I've been in America too long to be able to stand much of this kind of life. When I start out to go somewhere I want to get there. I like speed!"

Pairs of snowy cranes began to fly up among the shores of the channel, and the soldiers amused themselves by firing at them until the pilot made them stop, saying shooting on the lake was forbidden. Presently we found we could get Turkish coffee on board. We ordered three cups.

"Say, don't you fellows order none of that for me," protested the volunteer. "I'm only a common soldier, you know. These other guys wouldn't know what to think if they'd see me sitting here drinking with you. You boys—er, I mean, you gentlemen—understand, same as I do, that clothes and all that don't make no difference and that one man's just as good as another. But these guys ain't up to that yet. They're got their king and all. Say, ain't these kings the

HUMAN SYMPATHIES

Peculiar How They Are Sometimes Influenced by Mere Money.

BY GRACE EVANSON.

"Yes, Mrs. Tompkins, Uncle John's dead and gone at last, and it was about time, too, seeing that he was eighty-nine last June—and when a man gets to be that old and has a temper like Uncle John's he isn't good for much more. And deceitful! Well, I don't want to speak ill of the dead, but if his whole life was like the last year of it, when we knew him, I'm not over sanguine about his future."

"This is how it all happened. Of course Silas and I had heard of Uncle John all our lives, for we were cousins before we were married, and having no children we naturally kept a warm spot in our hearts for the old man. We knew he was good for nothing and never put by a penny all the years of his life, but still, we're not uncharitable."

"Yes, we'd heard all about that tontine years ago and put it out of our minds. We thought it was just a story. So when Uncle John turns up at the farm on his eighty-eighth birthday, all ragged like a tramp, and hungry as though he didn't know what food meant, we were naturally annoyed. We've always held up our heads among our neighbors, and we didn't want it said we couldn't do right by our uncle."

"Maria," he said—those were his very words as he sat in the parlor in his dirty, shabby clothes, and we mortally afraid some of the neighbors would come in and see him—Maria, I've come to lay my bones among you. Will you give me a home now that I'm good for nothing any longer?"

"I looked at Silas and he looked at me. Then he took me aside. 'I guess we'll have to, Maria,' he said softly. 'We can't put him in the poorhouse—us being so respectable. Besides, maybe he can earn his keep doing chores about the farm.'"

"So we took him in and let him sleep in the attic. There's an old straw mattress there, and we gave him

"Will You Give Me a Home?"

an old crazy quilt and let him eat his meals with us, just like one of the family, and what little work he did hardly left a penny of profit after his expenses were considered. At like a hog, he did. I say it's indecent for a man of eighty-eight to eat like that."

"O, that wench Mary Callaghan! I was just coming to her, Mrs. Tompkins. Well, she was a poor girl Silas and me had taken pity on out of the goodness of our hearts. Daughter of an old friend of my husband's, Mrs. Tompkins, and Silas owed him a thousand dollars, and he asked him on his deathbed if he wouldn't take care of his girl and tear up the note. Of course Silas consented, seeing he was an old friend. Besides, we wanted a maid, for I'm not so strong as I used to be. And she was that lazy! Often I'd come down at eight o'clock and find the rooms wasn't swept and the pigs not fed and the chickens hungry for food, and Mary'd just stare at me in her stupid way and say nothing. I couldn't train her at all. We'd have packed her off, but for our charitable natures—besides a maid would have cost fifteen dollars a month."

"Well, would you believe it, Mary and the old man struck up the queerest kind of friendship. She used to steal pies and things for him out of the kitchen when I was away. Fancy an old man of eighty-eight eating pie! And she'd give him blankets for his bed when it was cold—my blankets, that I keep for company, all wool, and costing five dollars a pair!"

"Well, Maria," said Silas, when I told him I couldn't do anything with her, 'I guess them paupers just naturally take to one another.' And that was the way it seemed to me. If I had known! But I'm a simple woman, Mrs. Tompkins, and it never entered my head what a designing hussy she was."

"Well, it was on the old man's eighty-ninth birthday, and he hadn't done a chore for two days, and Silas spoke up to him."

"Uncle John," he said, 'I guess we can't keep you for nothing. You never was worth anything to me and now you'd best apply to the poorhouse.' 'Poorhouse!' says Uncle John, looking kind of surprised. 'Why, nephew, I'm not going to any poorhouse. I'm eighty-nine today, and when a man's eighty-nine he's supposed to be dead, and I've got twenty thousand dollars due me this morning. I'm expecting a letter any minute.'

"Well, you could have knocked me down with a feather. But this is what had happened. It was that old tontine. It seems that sixty years before Uncle John and ten other young men had each put five hundred dollars into what they called a tontine, which meant that the one that lived the longest of them all got the whole of the money with the accumulated interest on his eighty-ninth birthday. If none of them lived so long, then it went to the heirs of the one that lived longest. And Uncle John was the last of them and being supposed to be dead, by life insurance rules, at eighty-nine, there was twenty thousand coming to him."

"And sure enough it came that morning. And do you know, he acted in the queerest way. He forgot all about our kindness to him and wanted to go off and enjoy himself. Well, we couldn't let an old man that age go in to the hard world with all that money to squander. He gave in at last, but he wouldn't let Silas put his money in the bank for him, nor he wouldn't buy a share in the farm neither."

"No, Maria," he said, chuckling. 'I'll stay since you seem so fond of me. But it's cold in the attic and my old bones are chilly.'"

"Then why don't you say so? I answered. 'We'd have put you in the best room, only Silas was waiting to have it painted.'"

"He chuckled in the most malicious way, which, seeing all we had done for him, was at least cruel. But those old men don't have the same human sympathies as us younger folks."

"Well, after that Uncle John stayed on with us, and of course we couldn't let an old man like that do any work. He just moaned about the farm, smoking his pipe and eating his head off, and seeming to grow younger every day. Took a dislike to Mary, too. I'd thought of getting rid of her, but Uncle John wouldn't hear of that. 'Keep her, the good-for-nothing wench,' he said. 'I'll make her work.' And he used to give her a tongue lashing every morning and talk to her about her duties to her benefactors which almost brought tears of joy to Silas's eyes and mine. But Mary didn't seem to care."

"Once, when she'd gone over to Long Falls to do some marketing for me and wasn't back in time, Uncle John got so mad with her he wouldn't be satisfied till Silas let him take the buggy and drive in after her. They came back about eight in the evening, and if you'd heard the language he was using to her when they got out of the cart it would have warmed your heart. And the hussy was laughing! Didn't care a bit—just laughed!"

"However, Silas got him to make his will a month before he died, and he left everything to me, and Silas got it in black and white and took it in to his lawyer. We thought we had done our duty then, and so we just folded our hands and waited."

"Well, Mrs. Tompkins, the end came very sudden. Apoplexy, the doctor said. And would you believe it, the old rake had made a second will the day after he gave his first to Silas, and in it he left us ninety-two dollars apiece for board and lodging and comforts, and the rest went to 'my dear wife, Mary Callaghan Smith.' They'd got married that day at Long Falls."

"Yes, Mrs. Tompkins, the deceitfulness of some old men is past reckoning, and the only charitable thing to do is to forget about it. Besides, Mrs. Smith has the mortgage on our farm, so don't let her know that I was speaking of about her."

Diagnosed the Case.

An elderly doctor, who was as peppy as a cayenne pod, was from time to time sprung upon by the practical joker.

On one occasion a well dressed young fellow called and asked the doctor to prescribe for a breaking-out and rash on his left arm. The doctor examined the limb and pronounced it to be a bad case of psoriasis and eczema.

"I suppose, doctor, you can cure it?" said the patient.

"Why, certainly," replied the doctor. "How long will it take to get well?"

"Oh, I should say about two months," said the doctor.

"Quite sure? Is it a bad case?" "Positively the worst I've seen."

"Then I will leave it with you and call for it again when cured," solemnly said the patient, slowly unfastening his arm, which was an artificial one, and painted for the occasion.

Just Glimpses.

A group of small boys stood on the gallery of a little cottage in a quiet side street; they were very small boys; also they were very much wrapped-up and absorbed in something that was taking place just inside the window. They were crowding about the sill, peering over each other's shoulders, nudging each other for seeing space.

Curiosity prompted a passer-by to tiptoe silently up the steps. Inside the window was another and still smaller boy; he was the center of a group of three; the other two boys were tipping the wee boy's head back—so far that it seemed as though his neck would break. One assisted the very small chap to keep his mouth open by grasping his chin and forehead firmly in two very dirty hands. The two bigger boys were looking out upon the crowd with all the pride of showmen exhibitors.

"Can you see 'em?" called one of the proud assistants of the small boy. "The doctor says he's got white spots on his throat."

Social Forms and Entertainment

What shall I give for a wedding gift? And what for a gift to the sweet girl graduate?

These are the questions uppermost in the minds of most every one these days. Christmas and birthday presents are easier to select, as we are apt to know the individual preferences of our near and dear friends, but in making a gift that is to mark two of the most eventful occasions in life one is often at a loss.

In days gone by teaspoons seemed to be the accepted offering to a bride; once a young woman received seven dozen. Afterward in confidence she said, "Of course, I suppose it's true that one never can have too many spoons, but how many other things I would have liked!" It just happened that she could not change any of the spoons, as all were marked, and all from friends who sent personal notes, saying they were just sure she would be delighted with teaspoons."

A woman of discretion and judgment who has given wedding presents to several generations says that if the young people are going to house-keeping she gives a door knocker, for even if the home is an apartment it's quite the thing to have a knocker on the door; otherwise she gives candlesticks of brass, Sheffield or silver. Silver sugar tongs are a charming gift not apt to be duplicated or glass and silver dishes for sliced lemon with a two-pronged lemon fork, an odd-shaped tea caddy, in Sheffield, are good, as are all bits of Sheffield, either old or modern.

There are lovely silver baskets and individual salts and almond dishes in pierced silver, and several girls are making collections of all sorts of little odd-shaped boxes in silver, brass and Sheffield. If we know the special fad or hobby of our friends it is always well to add to the collection as the opportunity presents itself.

There is no great difference between graduation presents and those given for weddings, but for the former we may find very delightful books, with pages for class history, class photographs and all the doings of commencement week. Such books are also obtainable for the bride, but one should make sure that there are no duplicates.

To go back to silver, there are all sorts of tea strainers, cups in silver holders, jelly jars, cheese jars with silver scoops, silver flower holders and handkerchief chains, such as our grandmothers carried.

In china, who would not like bouillon cups, compotes or salad plates, all of which may be odd pieces? Then there are wonderfully clever bowls and jugs in inexpensive pottery for holding flowers; the shallow ones may be equipped with Japanese or glass flower holders. Instead of the omnipresent cut-glass bowl, of which brides usually have dozens, select one good piece of rock crystal or a bit of opalescent glass; sherbet cups and tumblers look well in the latter and one does not tire of them. Nearly every one has something of which they make a specialty. For instance, an industrious maiden aunt sees that all the girls in her family are supplied with knitted wash clothes and bath towels, and a goodly showing they make, all tied with ribbon. A box of fine toilet soap accompanies the handkerchiefs, all done up in tissue paper, banded with white satin ribbon. A grandmother gives each grandchild a silk quilt on the wedding day and an adoring aunt furnishes all her nieces with exquisite bags.

Then, who would not like four colonial glass candle sticks or a set of coasters with lemonade or iced tea glasses? Or trays there is no end in shapes, prices and materials. Any girl would like a set of clipping scissors and magazine opener. They come in brass, bronze and silver and a case of three or five scissors is an always welcome gift, as are jewel boxes and work boxes in leather.

Gifts of hand work are best of all and made from rare bits of brocade and embroidered, picked up during frequent trips abroad. Speaking of bags, one can never have too many and they are an acceptable gift to either bride or graduate; those of white hand embroidered or of Irish crochet are fitting accessories to the popular all-white costume. A set of six hand-made towels, a pair of pillow cases or a bedroom set in art embroidery are all good and stationery of all sizes, while the die is a gift longed for by many a girl.

When it comes to personal gifts, the list is too long to be given in a limited space, but I heard an eighteen-year-old girl say "she just hoped everybody would give her things that she could not afford herself." Silk stockings, for instance, was there ever a maid with too many?

A good idea is for the family or a group of intimate friends to combine and each give a piece of either turquoise or coral, so the girl will have a complete set. This makes the expense evenly divided, and it is better than each giving a separate article. Desk sets may be given in this way, for it is more harmonious to have all pieces match in form and coloring. Fans and hair ornaments must not be forgotten, and how about a real lace handkerchief for either bride or graduate?

MME MERRI.

If your forearm is white and round, it deserves the decoration of a bracelet. Depending upon the size of your income or of your earnings, you may have a pretty and dainty bracelet of filigree silver, of silver links and crystals or in silver bands joined by tiny chains in coral. Just a wee bit more expensive are the beautifully engraved bangles in sterling silver and gold and a trifle beyond the income of the well-to-do wage earner (who is thrifty) are the snake brace-lets in gold, set with amethysts.

Tulle Scarfs.
Pretty little scarfs are made of two long or short lengths of tulle, knotted at the ends or ornamented with tassels. They supply a little warmth and a touch of color may be given to the costume by them, as the two lengths used together may combine a color with either white or black.

are fastened on with screws, by which the case and contents may be lifted and moved when occasion requires. Suitable handles, with brass screws to fit, may be obtained at any ironmonger's. Trifling cost. When complete, a case can be stained a nice dark green and afterwards varnished.

A case of this kind will be found extremely useful upon a writing table, for the few books of reference that are always necessary to have at hand, and in a bedroom also, placed, perhaps, upon the chest of drawers, it will be very handy for holding just a few of the favorite books that one likes to have at hand.

Table Bookcase May Be Made by Amateur Carpenter

The making of the useful table bookcase of which we give a sketch is extremely simple, and may be undertaken by the amateur carpenter without fear of failure.

It can be carried out to suit requirements, and is composed of four pieces of wood, which can be dovetailed together or fastened together with screws.

Well-planed wood about half or three-quarters of an inch in thickness should be used for the upper part, and for the base a piece of wood of at least an inch in thickness will be required, and it should be rounded at the corners and bevelled at the edges.

At either side small brass handles are fastened on with screws, by which the case and contents may be lifted and moved when occasion requires. Suitable handles, with brass screws to fit, may be obtained at any ironmonger's. Trifling cost. When complete, a case can be stained a nice dark green and afterwards varnished.

WASN'T GOING INTO DETAILS

Four-Year-Old Had His Own Idea of Propriety of Not Airing Strictly Personal Affairs.

One little four-year-old boy who doesn't live far from Central park west, New York, has as his particular playmate a little girl of about the same age. The children frequently spend their evenings together, and the other morning the girl came to the fence and called him.

"Alton," she cried, "come out and play."

Alton's mother heard the call and said to him:

"Tell her you can't come over just now because you have to take a bath."

So Alton went to the front window. "Elizabeth," he called, "I can't come over now."

Then he turned back to his mother and added:

"I don't flink the rest of it need be said."

Less an Illusion.

James C. McReynolds, who investigated the tobacco trust for the government, thereby bringing on a lot of things, says that just after he started practicing law in a small town down in Tennessee, a few years ago, a stout billman came into his office one day and announced that he desired to sue a neighbor for $10,000 damages.

"Two years ago," he stated, "he called me a hippopotamus."

"Two years ago!" echoed McReynolds. "Why didn't you sue him sooner?"

"Well, suh," said the injured party, "until that circus come through here last week I thought all the time he was paying me a compliment!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Whistled for a Liner.

After running the whole 900-foot length of the Kronprinz Wilhelm—a heavy suitcase in each hand just as the big liner pulled out recently, a young man sank down at the end of the pier, exhausted, and gazed a moment after the ship. Then he put his fingers to his lips and whistled long and loud. The ship did not stop.

"She don't know your voice," said a sympathetic bystander.

"How independent those big ships are," soliloquized the belated one. He had got stuck in the tubes, he said.—New York Mail.

His Honor Was Safe.

Chief Justice Isaac Russell of the court of special sessions tells how he went to the city hall to call on the mayor on a rainy day, and as he was leaving the building he slipped and bumped all the way down the stone steps. A man rushed up, helped him to his feet and asked:

"Is your honor hurt?"

"No," replied the judge; "my honor remains intact, but my spine seems to be jarred."—New York Sun.

Comparative Digestibility of Food

Made with different Baking Powders

From a Series of Elaborate Chemical Tests:

An equal quantity of bread (biscuit) was made with each of three different kinds of baking powder—cream of tartar, phosphate, and alum—and submitted separately to the action of the digestive fluid, each for the same length of time.

The relative percentage of the food digested is shown as follows:

Bread made with
Royal Cream of Tartar Powder:

100 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with
phosphate powder:

68 1/4 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with alum powder:

67 3/4 Per Cent. Digested

These tests, which are absolutely reliable and unprejudiced, make plain a fact of great importance to everyone: Food raised with Royal, a cream of tartar Baking Powder, is shown to be entirely digestible, while the alum and phosphate powders are found to largely retard the digestion of the food made from them.

Undigested food is not only wasted food, but it is the source of very many bodily ailments.

BREVITIES

BUNKER HILL—Sedgwick Lawrence has purchased the Geo. Mackinder home and is moving in.

MILAN—The common council of Milan has passed a resolution to construct sewer system that will cost about $3,600.

BRIDGEWATER—Geo. Kies and wife are packing their household goods and will leave soon for Denver, where they will make their future home.

MANCHESTER—The teachers of the village were all invited to remain another year, but Mr. Warren has engaged to superintend the Bridgeman schools, Miss Hickox and Miss Kenward, the music teacher, will resume their studies. The others will remain.—Enterprise.

ANN ARBOR—After the jury was out 40 minutes in the case of John R. Addis vs. the Eastern Michigan Edison company to secure damages in the sum of $10,000 for injuries alleged to have been received last August because of negligence on the part of the defendant, it brought in a judgment of $1,500 for the plaintiff.

BRIDGEWATER—Howard Koenig, the boy who was seriously injured when a railing gave way and he pitched forward onto a pile of rubbish, injuring his head and breaking his shoulder, is so much improved that he came from his home in Jackson, Monday, to spend some time with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Johnson.

HOWELL—Mrs. James P. Adams of Lansing has served notice of a claim against the Michigan Condensed Milk Company in connection with the death of her son Harry in the fire at Howell recently. The claim is filed with the Industrial Accident Commission at Lansing which commission has jurisdiction in the case.

BRIGHTON—The doors of the L. H. Westphal & Sons' hardware store were closed Monday night. Too much credit business is given as the cause of the failure. It is said the liabilities are heavy and the assets comparatively small, so that when the bankruptcy proceedings are finished the creditors will get but a small percent.—Argus.

STOCKBRIDGE—A colt that Fred Gailey was breaking took into its head to go and started for a pond, and notwithstanding Mr. Gailey tried hard to prevent it, the animal plunged into the water and threw itself. Mr. Gailey partially held the horse's head above water until help arrived, but enough water got into its lungs so that it died from the effects of the bath.—Brief-Sun.

YPSILANTI—Elmer C. Allen, who for several years has been assistant superintendent of the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago railway with headquarters at Ypsilanti, has accepted a position with the Cedar Rapids Railway, Light & Power company. He will act as general manager for the entire system. This concern also has 27 miles of interurban track which operates under the name of the Cedar Rapids & Marion Railway company.

PLYMOUTH—Considerable petty thieving seems to be going on about town of late. Last Monday night someone entered the wood shed at the rear of J. D. McLaren's home on Union street and helped himself to the contents of the ice chest. He was not satisfied with the staples of life, such as roast beef, pork chops, bread and eggs, but evidently had a sweet tooth for he also confiscated a platter of home made candy.—Mail.

SOUTH LYON—A band of traveling people of unknown nationality worked this place to a finish Tuesday selling what they claimed to be hand made lace. They also claimed to run a school at Ann Arbor and wanted to get up a class here. At each place they claimed some other lady here in town and purchased of them and had then sent them to the parties they were soliciting. It was a fine story all right but no one is letting on whether they fell for it or not.—

GRASS LAKE—It is expected that the extensive repairs on the Methodist church will be completed in June, and when reopened for religious services, exercises of a dedicatory character will be held. The church when the work now in progress is completed will be in a finer and more attractive condition than ever before. Our Methodist friends are entitled to much praise for the liberality and energy manifested in restoring the ravages of the hurricane of March 21.—News.

"The wagon that stands up like the reputation of its makers"

When you buy a Studebaker wagon you buy a wagon that will last until you turn the farm over to your son and he turns it over to his son.

One of the first Studebaker wagons ever made saw constant service for thirty years, and we will gladly send you the names of farmers who have in their possession wagons that have been in constant use anywhere from 17 to 48 years—and there are thousands of them. We are building the same kind of wagons today.

A Studebaker wagon is an investment that will give you full return for your outlay. It is built on honor. Iron, steel, wood, paint and varnish used in its construction are tested and retested to make sure each is the best.

For work, business or pleasure—for town or country use—there is a Studebaker vehicle to fit your requirements.

Farm wagons, dump carts, trucks, buggies, surreys, runabouts, pony carriages, business vehicles of every description—with harness of the same high standard.
