The Hot Wave.

For the past week the country has been in the grip of a hot wave and Monday was probably the hottest June day on record. The thermometers about Chelsea according to reports registered from 96 to 98 in the shade. Reports from Chicago and Tucson, Arizona, gave them as the two hottest cities in the United States with a record of 102.

About 7:30 in the evening a rain storm reached here that lasted for a short time that helped to cool the atmosphere. There was considerable lightning and wind but no damage seems to have been done. The power at the Chelsea sub-station of the Au Sable Power Co., went off about 6:30 o'clock and the plant was out of commission for several hours.

The power company's plant at Alblon was damaged, and the loss has been placed at $50,000, and their plant at Jackson was out of commission for several hours. According to the reports wind and lightning was the cause of considerable damage in different parts of Jackson county Monday evening.

The traffic on the D. J. & C., was practically tied up, and some of the cars and their passengers that were due here in the evening did not reach here until between four and five o'clock Tuesday morning.

For a number of years the couple were well known residents of Chelsea and during their residence here Mrs. Jones gained many friends. The deceased was an active member of the M. E. church. Brotherhood Lecture Course.

The Brotherhood of the Congregational church has booked a six number lyceum course for the season of 1913-1914, of the Redpath Bureau. They have the guarantee that this course will not only equal, but in some respects superior to that of last year.

While six instead of five numbers are to be given, it is hoped to make the price the same for season tickets. Single admission will be 50 cents for two or more of the entertainments, so that anyone purchasing season tickets will get the entire course for the same price they would have to pay for two, on the single admission basis.

Tickets will be placed on sale about the last of September. The course will begin in October, and there will be one number each month thereafter until March, when the course will be closed with a concert by the famous Regimental Quartette, with both instrumental and vocal music.

Two Serving Sentences.

Thursday afternoon of last week Fred Oesterle was taken before Justice Witherell and drew a sentence of twelve days in the county jail at Ann Arbor on the charge of drunkenness. He was taken to Ann Arbor in the evening by Marshal Cooper.

Samuel Heselshwerdt on Saturday forenoon was taken before Justice Witherell where he received a fine of $25 and costs or sixty-five days in the Detroit House of Correction. Not having the cash to liquidate Samuel was taken to Detroit Saturday afternoon by Deputy Sheriff McKune. For two or three days before he was taken away he had been annoying the workmen on the Hirth building. On Thursday afternoon he was given a good wetting down by J. P. Foster, who has charge of the work, and a short time afterwards Marshal Cooper placed Heselshwerdt in the village lock-up where he was kept until late in the evening when he was let out.

Friday afternoon Samuel visited the Hirth job again and assaulted Mr. Foster, who was down on his knees at work. Samuel was given another dose of water treatment from the hose and Marshal Cooper placed him in the village jail for the second time.

To Tour the State.

Dr. R. L. Dixon of the state board of health, has made arrangements for a tour of the state with a health exhibit train. There will be examples, samples and lectures on how to prevent and conquer disease. The degree of success of such a tour will depend largely upon the interest taken in it by the public. There is nothing in which the people should be more deeply and vitally concerned than in sanitation and a knowledge of how to eradicate the ill that affects them. It is hoped that the efforts of the state board of health will meet with a hearty response.

A Public Warning.

Dr. R. L. Dixon, secretary of the state board of health is sending out the following:

A general public warning against hydrophobia (rabies) is in order at this time. Reports from over the state show that there are more than the usual number of cases this season.

While hydrophobia can be communicated by other animals than dogs, yet the dog is the most important animal to consider in relation to this disease.

Effective muzzling of all dogs is the only method to prevent spread of this fatal disease. All worthless, tramp dogs should be killed; all others should be securely, but humanely, muzzled. The state law (Act 305, public acts, 1909) authorizes township boards of health to establish quarantine and "to order all dogs in the township or any part thereof, restrained, confined or muzzled." This law should be taken advantage of now, as conditions over the state warrant it. Village and city ordinances providing for restraining or muzzling dogs should be strictly enforced.

All persons bitten by dogs suspected of being rabid (mad) should be taken immediately to the Pasteur Institute of the State University at Ann Arbor for treatment. This treatment, if taken advantage of, will absolutely safeguard the patient. There has never been a death from hydrophobia among all the patients treated at the University Pasteur Institute.

A dog suspected of having rabies should be securely tied and observed for developments. If for any reason it is necessary to kill the dog he should not be shot in the head as that often renders it impossible to make the necessary laboratory examination to determine whether or not he had rabies. The dog's head should be packed in ice and sent to the Pasteur Institute, Ann Arbor, for examination. No charge is made for such examinations.

Let us have a general muzzling of dogs in Michigan the balance of the summer months and a wholesale doing away with worthless, tramp dogs.

Two Baseball Games Friday.

For those who still have a little "baseballitis" in their system, two games of baseball have been arranged between the local club and the Chippewa Indians for Friday, July 4th.

W. S. McLaren who is handling the local end of it assures the Standard that he will have a first-class team in the field. He has arranged his lineup carefully and is confident of victory in at least one game. The battery for the morning game will be either Barbiqan, of Ann Arbor, or Kratzmiller and Dillon. Jack Dunn will be on the mound in the afternoon game and Barney will catch. The rest of the team will be hustlers, who will put up a good game. Two games, one at 10 a. m. and one at 3 p. m. will be played. The Indians carry a band and give a war dance before the game.

"Adventure on Mexican Border."

For its feature picture on Friday, July 4th, the Princess will offer the war dramatic sensation "An Adventure on the Mexican Border." A timely film story, dealing with the troops encamped on both sides of the border between the United States and Mexico. A lieutenant of the United States Army and a captain of the Mexican troops are silently battling for the love of a bright-eyed senorita. The captain is successful. The lieutenant in a fit of passionate anger tells his commanding officer of an alleged breach of the existing martial law by the Mexican captain. Complications follow, but a careful analysis of the situation prompts the lieutenant to release the imprisoned captain and return to face his punishment.

The Princess will be open only on Friday, July 4th, and Saturday nights of this week and only on Saturday evenings thereafter during the months of July and August, unless Manager McLaren decides to book an occasional state rights picture. The Saturday nights program will consist of a two reel feature and one other picture.

STATUE OF ZACH. CHANDLER IS UNVEILED

Second Contribution of Michigan to the Valhalla of the National Capitol

CAREER OF STATESMAN

In Days of Civil War and For Fifteen Years Chandler Was Powerful Figure in Politics of Nation.

On Monday, June 30th, at 11 a. m. in the Hall of Fame in the national capitol at Washington, occurred the unveiling of the statue of Zachariah Chandler. In the presence of a company composed of many prominent citizens of Michigan and national officials the marble likeness of "Old Zach" was formally presented by the state to the nation.

The statue was unveiled by Chandler Hale, son of ex-Senator Hale and grandson of Chandler's. United States Senator William Alden Smith presided at the ceremonies. The invocation was pronounced by Rev. Henry Couden, blind chaplain of the house of representatives, formerly of Port Huron.

Arthur H. Vandenberg, publisher of the Grand Rapids Herald and Chairman of the Commission, presented the statue on behalf of the commission with a few well chosen words. It was accepted for the state and in turn presented to the nation by Lieutenant Governor John Q. Ross. The statue was accepted on behalf of the nation by Hon. Henry B. Brown, of Washington, Justice of the United States Supreme Court, retired. Judge Brown's home was formerly in Detroit and he was one of Chandler's intimates. His address was rich with reminiscence of the days of the reconstruction when Chandler was at the height of his career.

In the afternoon of the same day, there were special Chandler memorial service in the Senate. United States Senator Charles E. Townsend of Michigan took general charge of this program, by invitation of the Commission. At the same time there were memorial service in the House under the auspices of the Michigan delegation.

The Michigan Society at Washington attended the ceremonies in a body.

Stands Beside Lewis Cass

The statue of Chandler is Michigan's second contribution to the national Valhalla, and stands beside that of Lewis Cass, who was also a senator from the Wolverine state.

Cass was a Democrat and Chandler a Republican, but they were men of very much the same type, and it is regarded as fitting that they should be companions in the Hall of Fame, because Chandler came on the scene as Cass was leaving it, and, together, they made the name of Michigan noted in historical and political annals. Cass was a New Hampshire man, born in revolutionary times—1782. His father, in early life, was a blacksmith, who served with distinction under Washington in many famous battles, and who, after retiring to peaceful pursuits, was commissioned for service in the then new northwest. That is how Lewis Cass happened to be in Ohio in 1812, when the war broke out and how he happened to lead a march into Michigan by Ohio militiamen and United States regulars, and how he came to settle in Detroit after several years of legal and political campaigning in the Buckeye state.

Cass was Jeffersonian Democrat

He was educated in Exeter academy, and all his political influences in the early days were those of the Federalist party. Yet he was during all his manhood, a Jeffersonian Democrat, a representative of the people and an expounder and defender of slavery, as a general proposition, and a bitter foe of intemperance.

Cass was first elected United States senator from Michigan in 1845, and resigned on being nominated as the Democratic candidate for president of the United States in 1848. He was defeated by the Whig candidate, General Zachary Taylor. The coming of the Civil war found him a member of the Buchanan cabinet, from which he retired to plead the cause of the Union on the hustings.

Marble Statue of Zachariah Chandler in Statuary Hall in National Capitol.

Lewis Cass died in 1866, and Zachariah Chandler came to the front as a politician rather than a statesman, and yet "Old Zach" had many of the characteristics which go to make up an American statesman.

Chandler Opposed to Cass

"Zach" Chandler's first political speech was in Detroit in 1848, when mounted on a dry goods box set up on a street corner he advocated the election of "Old Zach" Taylor to the presidency as against Lewis Cass. Zachariah Chandler was a New Englander, also, and was born at New Bedford, N. H., in 1813. He declined the offer of a Puritan father to give him a college education, and determined to be a merchant, struck out for the wilderness of the northwest, arriving at Detroit to begin his commercial life about the time Lewis Cass was at the beginning of his public career. Chandler's last speech was made in McCormick hall in Chicago, one night in November, 1879, before one of the largest political audiences ever gathered in that great city. He was never more virile, more direct, powerful and convincing in his public utterances than on that night, and his speech was at once a defense and a eulogy of the Republican party. Before morning he was dead, passing away peacefully and alone in his bed chamber, when the applause of his hearers had hardly died away.

Chandler, although of rough manner and speech, was a student of history and a man of deep conviction, he was one of the founders of the Republican party, when elected to the senate was a man of wealth and influence. Within one week after taking his seat he had turned over his vast interests to others, leaving himself free to act on public questions with an eye solely to the public good. His political adversaries derided his political ambitions, but he took front rank in Washington as a man of convictions and honor: The war clouds had already gathered and he took the oath of office with men who a few years later were seceders and battling to destroy the union.

One of the men who stood side by side with Zachariah Chandler to take the oath as senator was Jefferson Davis. More than 20 years later at a night session of the United States senate, when a bill granting amnesty to southern men who had been soldiers in the Mexican war was under discussion, Lucius Quintus Lamar, senator from Mississippi, delivered a fervent eulogy upon Davis, and as the echoes of his eloquence were dying out of the chamber a note fluttered down from the gallery near the desk of "Old Zach" Chandler.

Was Bitter Against South.

It was written by William E. Chandler.

ler of New Hampshire, and the late Uriah Painter of Washington, and was to the effect that it was a pity there was no man in the senate fearless enough and able enough to reply to that speech. "Old Zach" read the note, looked up at the gallery and winked, pushed his habitual quid back into his cheek, arose and made a speech that is a classic. It held the senate literally spellbound, and no man essayed to make reply. Chandler recited the occasion of his standing with Davis and other southern men before the presiding officer and swearing to support a government that "they were then plotting to overthrow," recounted heart-rending war scenes that he, as a leader of war sentiment in congress, and as a member of the war investigating committee, witnessed on the fields of battle; referred to maimed and wounded thousands whose tortures "made humanity shudder," and then, pounding his desk in emphasis, he denounced Jefferson Davis as one whom "Every man, woman and child in the north believed to be a double-dyed traitor to his country."

Zachariah Chandler served three consecutive terms as United States senator and was defeated in the wave of 1875 that sent the Logans, the Camerons, the Carpenters and the other stalwarts into private life. He was appointed secretary of the interior in the cabinet of President Grant. In the political campaign of 1876 he was chairman of the Republican national committee, and in the crisis and suspense as to whether Rutherford B. Hayes of Ohio or Samuel J. Tilden of New York had been elected president he sent broadcast to the world the famous laconic message which he would never withdraw, alter or amend.

"Hayes has 125 votes and is elected."

LETTER FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

SECRETARY OF STATE ISSUES STATEMENT ON NEW PRIMARY LAW.

FULL INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE VOTER.

Provisions of Amended Statute Are Radically Different From Old Law—All Parties Are to Appear On the Same Ballot.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

During the past session of the legislature many radical changes were made in the primary election laws. The party enrollment was abolished and so many new features were added that Secretary of State Martindale's office has been flooded by inquiries concerning the amended statute. In order that the people might know the changes that have been made and just what their duties will be at the next primary election, Secretary Martindale prepared the following statement:

By the enactment of Act No. 118 of the Public Acts of 1913, the party enrollment of electors will no longer be necessary.

The qualification for an elector to participate in a primary election will only be to have his name properly registered, as is required for other elections. A qualified elector may be registered and eligible to vote at any primary election, if he shall appear in person before the city or township clerk, or other officers in charge of the registration book, and take the oath required as to qualifications for registration. A qualified elector may also be registered by the election inspectors on any primary day, by making oath or affirmation that he is a qualified elector in the particular precinct, and any person registering on any primary day shall be entitled to vote at the registering on any primary day shall be entitled to vote at the succeeding election without other registration. There shall be no registration day or days for primary, general or city elections, except as prescribed by the general election laws.

In previous primary elections a separate ballot has been necessary for each political party, and the ballot given an elector corresponded with the political party with which he was identified, as shown by the enrollment book. The ballot to be used in future primary elections will be one and the same, containing the names of candidates of different political parties in separate columns. At the head of each column shall be indicated the political party and directly under such head a circle one-half inch in diameter. Under this head shall appear the names of the candidates seeking nomination in the particular party. In voting the ballot the voter shall make a cross (X) in the circle beneath the heading of the party column of the ticket which he desires to vote, and then make a cross (X) in the square at the left of the names of such candidates in his party column as he may desire to vote for. The voter may vote for any person whose name is not printed in such party column by inserting any name in such manner as will make it a substitute for any name which is printed therein or where no candidate's name appears in such column. The voter should in all cases make a cross (X) in the circle beneath the heading of the party column and a cross (X) at the left of the names of all candidates for which he desires to vote. If the voter fails to place a cross (X) in the circle at the head of the party column, the votes for all candidates indicated by the (X) at the left of the names of such candidates shall be counted, provided such voter does not vote for other candidates in any other party column. If the voter does not place the cross (X) in the circle at the head of the party column and votes for candidates in more than one column by placing a cross (X) at the left of the names of the candidates, the entire ballot shall be void. If the voter places a cross (X) at the left of the candidate's name, the ballot shall be void and rejected as to all names appearing for that office.

The order of the party tickets on the ballot shall be determined by the party having the greatest number of votes in the state at the last preceding general election, as shown by the vote cast for secretary of state; the position of the other party tickets to be governed respectively by the same ruling. The order of the party tickets on the ballot at the general primary election to be held in 1914 will be Republican first, National Progressive second, Democrat third, Socialist fourth and Prohibition fifth.

The number of petitioners required by any candidate remains the same as under the existing primary, i. e., two per cent and not more than four per cent of the number of votes such party cast for secretary of state, at the last preceding November election in the state, district, county, etc., as the case may be.

The old law provides that party candidates of a new party for a state office may obtain the printing of the names upon the ballot by filing a petition signed by three hundred qualified electors, while the amendment requires nomination petitions signed by at least three thousand qualified voters.

The prevailing opinion appears to be that by doing away with the party enrollment and providing for one primary ballot on which is placed the tickets of all political parties, party lines, so far as the primary is concerned, have been eliminated. This in effect is not the case and, strictly speaking, party lines by the amendment will be drawn tighter. It is true that under the new law any elector may vote for candidates of any political party he may choose, but in doing so he cannot vote for candidates of more than one political party. For instance, if a republican choose to favor a candidate for nomination of the democrat party, he can vote for such candidate, but if he does so vote he is precluded from voting for any of his republican friends. In such a case the republican in order to have his vote counted indicates in the circle at the head of the party ticket his preference as a democrat, and if he makes a cross at the left of the names of any candidate of any of the other political parties, his vote for candidates for such offices is void on all tickets and will not be counted. In another case, if he does not indicate his party choice by placing a cross (X) in the circle at the head of the ticket, and votes for candidates on more than one ticket by placing a cross (X) at the left of the name of the candidate, his ballot is void and cannot be counted for candidates for any office.

The "fifteen per cent clause," which prohibited political parties from having the names of any candidates printed upon the election ballot unless such political party cast at the primary election at least fifteen per cent of the vote cast by such political party for secretary of state at the last preceding November election, has been eliminated.

Secretary Martindale says that by doing away with the party enrollment, a saving of several thousands of dollars will be made to the state each year. The cost of printing and binding enrollment books, the postage necessary to make returns to the secretary of state and county clerks, and the necessary extra clerical assistance required in checking petitions of candidates, amounted to no small sum.

Rep. J. M. McBride, the bull moose leader from Shiawassee county introduced a bill during the last session which was calculated to reduce the high cost of living. The bill passed the house and went to the senate but the members of the upper house did not believe that McBride's measure which was aimed to prevent unlawful discrimination in the purchase of poultry, butter, milk and eggs was constitutional and another measure was substituted which passed both houses and will become a law August 15. A joker was inserted which makes the substitute bill of little value.

The substitute bill is as follows: "Any person, firm or corporation engaged in the business of buying poultry, eggs, milk, cream or butter-fat for the purpose of manufacture, who shall with the intention of creating a monopoly or destroying the business of a competitor, discriminate between different sections, localities or communities or cities of this state by purchasing such commodity at a higher price or rate in one locality than is paid for the same commodity by said person, firm or partnership or corporation in any other locality, after making due allowance for the difference, if any, in the actual cost of transportation from the locality of purchase to the locality of manufacture, shall be deemed guilty of unfair discrimination, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed six months."

It is pointed out that the bill says "for the purpose of manufacture," which would not injure the business of concerns who purchased the products mentioned in the act for the purpose of placing them in cold storage or offering them for sale. It is claimed that as the bill stands it is absolutely worthless.

Rev. Ingvald Hustved, of Minneapolis, Minn., has accepted a call from the Norwegian Lutheran church, at Alpena and the missions of Leer and Spruce.

The board of state auditors has granted the State Bar association the right to use the senate chamber for the annual convention of the association here, July 16-17.

Boys of the Biltmore forestry school, North Carolina, arrived at Cadillac and will go into camp in one of the Cummer-Diggins logging camps. After a stay of six weeks they will leave for the Pacific coast.

The city commission of Port Huron has elected Fred J. Dixon, commissioner of finance and public accounts, major, to succeed John J. Bell, who resigned to become collector of customs of this port.

CLOSE CAMPAIGN WITH A BANQUET

FARMERS OF ST. CLAIR COUNTY ENTHUSE OVER ALFALFA POSSIBILITIES.

BUT THIRTY ACRES IN COUNTY AT PRESENT.

Seven Thousand Acres in Michigan Will Be Increased to One Hundred Thousand in Three Years Is Prediction.

The campaign for the promotion of the growing of alfalfa in St. Clair county closed at Port Huron with a banquet, or as the promoters say, a "farmers' feed," under the auspices of the Young Men's Business association of that city.

The campaign was the first of its kind inaugurated in this county by auto train, carrying the gospel to the farms, giving personal demonstrations of soil preparation, and initial instructions, founded upon reports backed by governmental tests in other states and upon reports of agricultural colleges.

The campaign aroused great interest among farmers who have for years recognized that the land of St. Clair county, having been devoted principally to raising hay and beans, needed another crop.

There are about 30 acres of alfalfa grown in St. Clair county, and but 7,000 acres in Michigan. Lenawee county leading with about 1,100 acres. The prediction was made that in three years there would be 100,000 acres sown in the state.

Men Save Girls From Drowning.

Miss Katherine Maynard, 20, and Miss Helen Brickman, 17, and three companions were saved from death by a man named Forbes, and a companion. The girls, who are employed in a Rochester knitting mill, ventured into a scow which was moored at the edge of Chapman lake just above the dam that furnishes the power to the mill. Some one shoved the boat out and the girls became panic stricken. They crowded to one side and the boat turned over in 15 feet of water. If Forbes and his companion had not jumped in and pulled them out one by one, they would have drowned. Miss Maynard and Miss Brickman were unconscious when taken ashore.

Decorations for Court House.

At the expense of two Lenawee farmers, persons entering the court house at Adrian after the middle of September will behold on the floor and walls a symbol of the chief product of Lenawee county—corn. The principal feature of this unique design will be a representation of two full-sized stalks of corn in its mature state, embedded in the tile floor in the center of the main corridor, over which everyone must pass, to enter any of the county offices. A chandelier, carved by hand, carrying out the same effect, will hang overhead and all details of the decorations will harmonize in representing the emblem of the county.

SYNOPSIS.

Cowboys of the Flying Heart ranch are broken over the loss of their champion in a foot-race with the cook of the Centipede ranch. A house party is held at the Flying Heart. J. Wallingford, chief leader at Yale, and Culver, inter-collegiate champion runner, are expected.

CHAPTER I.—Continued.

"Nonsense! Robert Keap is only twenty-three. Why, she hardly knew her husband, even! It was one of those sudden, impulsive affairs that would overwhelm any girl who hadn't been a man for four years. And when he enlisted in the Spanish War, she was killed."

"Considerate chap!"

"Roberta, you know, is my best friend, after Helen. Do be nice to her, Jack." Miss Chapin sighed. "It's too bad the others couldn't come."

"Yes, a small house-party has its advantages. By-the-way, what's that gold thing on your frock?"

"It's a medal. Culver sent it to me."

CHAPTER II.

HELLEN BLAKE was undeniably bored. The sultry afternoon was very long—longer even than Berkeley Fresno's autobiography, and quite as dry. It was too hot and dusty to ride, so she took refuge in the latest "best seller," and sought out a hammock on the vine-shaded gallery, where Jean Chapin was writing letters, while the disconsolate Fresno, banished, wandered at large, vaguely injured at her lack of appreciation.

Absent-mindedly, the girls dipped into the box of bonbons between them. Jean finished her correspondence and essayed conversation, but her companion's blond head was bowed over the book in her lap, and the effort met with no response. Lulled by the somniferous droning of insects and lazy echoes from afar, Miss Chapin was on the verge of slumber, when she saw her guest rapidly turn the last pages of her novel, then, with a choicest look between her teeth, read wordily to the finish. Miss Blake closed the book reluctantly, uncurled slowly, then stared out through the dancing heat-waves, her blue eyes dancing with romance.

"Did she marry him?" queried Jean. "No, no!" Helen Blake sighed, blissfully. "It was infinitely finer. She killed herself."

"I like to see them get married."

"Naturally. You are at that stage. But I think suicide is more glorious, in many cases."

Miss Chapin yawned openly. "Speaking of suicides, isn't this ranch the dearest place?"

"Oh, I don't think so at all."

"Oh, yes, you do, and you needn't be polite just because you're a guest."

"Well, then, to be as truthful as a boarder, it is a little dull. Not for our chaperon, though. The time doesn't seem to drag on her hands. Jack certainly is making it pleasant for her."

who dove through the open door like a prairie dog into his hole. Carara followed at his heels.

"It serves him right!" cried Miss Blake, rising. "I hope Mr. Carara—"

A din of falling pots and pans issued from the cook-house, mingled with shrill cries and soft Spanish imprecations; then, with one long-drawn wail, the pandemonium ceased as suddenly as it had commenced, and Carara issued forth, black with anger.

"No, no!" Marietetta ran to him, and, seizing his arm, cooed amorously in Spanish.

"Bah! Vamos!" Carara lunged her from him, and stalked away.

"Well, of all the outrageous things!" said Miss Blake. "Why, she was actually flirting with that Chinaman."

"I have heard Culver speak of him, but never as an athlete. Have you and Mr. Speed settled things between you, Helen? I mean, has he—said anything?"

Miss Blake flushed.

"Not exactly." She adjusted a cushion to cover her confusion, then leaned back complacently. "But he has stuttered dangerously several times."

A musical tinkle of silver spurs sounded in the distance, and around the corner of the cook-house opposite came Carara, the Mexican, his wide, spangled sombrero tipped rakishly over one ear, a corn-husk cigarette drooping from his lips.

"It's that romantic Spaniard!" whispered Helen. "What does he want?"

"It's his afternoon call on Marietetta, the maid," said Jean. "They meet there twice a day, morning and afternoon."

"A lovers' tryst!" breathed Miss Blake, eagerly. "Isn't he graceful and picturesque! Can we watch them?"

"Sh! There she comes!"

From the opposite direction appeared a slim, swarthy Mexican girl, an Indian water-jug balanced upon her shoulders. She was clad in the straight-hanging native garment, belted in with a sash; her feet were in sandals, and she moved as silently as a shadow.

During the four days since Miss Blake's arrival at the Flying Heart Ranch she had seen Marietetta sitting noiselessly here and there, but had never heard her speak. The pretty, expressionless face beneath the straight black hair had ever retained its wooden stolidity, the velvety eyes had not laughed nor frowned nor sparkled. This far southwestern part of this far southwestern picture; a bit of inanimate yet breathing local color. Now, however, the girl dropped her jug, and with a low cry glided to her lover, who tossed aside his cigarette and took her in his arms. From this distance their words were indistinguishable.

"How perfectly romantic," said the Eastern girl, breathlessly. "I had no idea Marietetta could love anybody."

"She is a volcano," Jean answered. "Why, it's like a play!"

"And it goes on all the time."

"How gentle and sweet he is! I think he is charming. He is not at all like the other cowboys, is he?"

While the two witnesses of the scene were eagerly discussing it, Joy, the Chinese cook, emerged from the kitchen bearing a bucket of water, his presence hidden from the lovers by the corner of the building. Carara languidly released his inamorata from his embrace and lounged out of sight around the building, pausing at the farther corner to wait a graceful kiss from the ends of his fingers, as with a farewell flash of his white teeth he disappeared. Marietetta recovered her water-jug and glided onward into the court in front of the cook-house, and her face masklike, her movements deliberate as usual.

Joy, spying the girl, grinned at her. She tossed her head coquettishly and her step slackened, whereupon the cook, with a sly glance around, tapped her gently on the arm, and said:

"Nice! I'll gaily."

"The idea!" indignantly exclaimed Miss Blake from her hammock. "But Marietetta was not offended. Instead she smiled over her shoulder

IN THE PHILIPPINES

Story of a Tragedy in the Depths of the Bamboo Thickets of the Tropics.

By FRANK H. MELOON.

Major Tracey's opinions of the Treaty of Paris, which gave the Philippines and their ten million brown heathen over to the civilized influences of American arms, would hardly have borne repeating in the presence of his superior officers of the war department at Washington, D. C., as he mused in front of his untempting quarters in the enervating afternoon heat of the little island village of Majon.

"Lieutenant, captain, major, colonel, general," the major kept repeating. Well, he mused, he had reached the halfway mark of the five grades at a very decent season of life, the other two being more often attained by age than by merit.

In Manila the major's battalion had found life endurable. There were means of entertainment, if one could call it by that name. In the Philippines anything that diverts one's attention from the humdrum round of daily existence is termed entertainment; but after a sufficient time has elapsed, everything falls to turn the mind from the eternal sameness. Then it is that a man goes out into the bush and musters himself out of service. The official records are generally kind enough to lay it to the natives.

The major looked past a clump of bamboo and saw Captain Manson lounging lazily on the ground, which was baking around him like the clay moulds in a brick kiln. Captain Manson looked intolerably old and ugly. He was smoking a makeshift Filipino cigar. He had been in the Philippines seven years. He had come as a second lieutenant, appointed from civil life, with one of the first companies to cross the Pacific in a leaky transport after Dewey's memorable May celebration in Manila Bay. After all, reflected Major Tracey, fortune had been more kind to him than to Captain Manson. Had not Dr. Carey whispered only the day before that the captain's chances of living another twelvemonth were slim? The captain knew it, too. A weak heart liable to be aggravated by excitement is not a nice thing to have inside one's ribs in a country where one is liable to be popped at from the scraggy bush at any moment, like a jackrabbit.

"I've nothing to go home for. If I had had, I would have gone long ago. If I've got to die soon, I'd as lief it would be here as anywhere," Captain Manson had said.

Dr. Carey had told the story to the major with an unfeeling brutality that had jarred upon his nerves, rendered tense and irritable by the infernal heat of the sun.

Assuredly, thought the major, he did not like this Dr. Carey, who had come from no one knew where. Dr. Carey never volunteered any information about his past life. His appointment to the army, it was known, had been due to civil service and a private pull in congress. Dr. Carey was undeniably handsome. He had an air of refinement which the major admitted to himself jealously, no one else in the battalion could acquire. Dr. Carey had cut a wide swath among the belles of Manila, and his evident chagrin at having to depart therefrom had been the one consolation of the other officers of the mess had found for coming to Majon.

And now Major Tracey's thoughts went back to the day from which he had ever since computed time—the day he had met Rita, who later had become his wife. Rita was a slender, city-bred girl of the east with a face exuberantly feminine in the Puritan delicacy of its outlines and expression. Her father was the descendant of a family which had acquired the foundation of its permanent fortunes by receiving and vending the wares of smugglers in Colonial days. He had married a favorite cousin.

His thoughts of Rita alone in Manila took effect that evening, when he broached the subject uppermost in his mind to Captain Manson and Dr. Carey, telling them of his intention to write the next day for his wife to come out into the hill country and join the battalion.

"She'll break up this deadly ennui that's come over us all," he concluded.

"Aren't you afraid to have her come out here?" objected Captain Manson. "The little brown devils are most dangerous when things appear most quiet on the surface."

"I guess they'll leave us alone until the rainy season," replied Major Tracey easily. "We're in such force that I don't apprehend any trouble before then, but I'll have her return to Manila before that sets in, even if we aren't ordered back there ourselves by that time."

Dr. Carey continued smoking, watching the brilliant constellations set in the sparkling heights of the tropical heavens. He said nothing. When Major Tracey sent the letter to his wife in Manila next day, Dr. Carey, at the last minute, asked permission to send a letter himself. The guard who set out with the message could not fail to note that the major's and the doctor's went to the same woman.

Things went well for the first fortnight after the "little woman," as the major called her affectionately, arrived in Majon. There was something very enjoyable in riding through the quiet growths of the Orient every morning with one of the officers as a companion and with an armed escort close at hand in case there happened to be danger lurking in the depths of the bamboo thickets. There was the convent, too, where the native women did drawn work in pine cloth and waded the shifting colors of the sunshine into silks of exquisite beauty on hand-made looms. The noonday siesta was usually followed by a visit to the market-place, where the native children played, and where the most ferocious devils, in the guise of most humble and obsequious natives, came to buy and sell. And not least was the soldiers' hospital to which she sent the chino coolies with fruit and coconuts.

But there came a day when all these things ceased to interest. A desperate flirtation with Dr. Carey, begun in Manila under stress of the same boredom of things in general, was unknown to the major, renewed; the letter had referred to the possibility. For a time the major remained in blissful ignorance, but the hour for enlightenment came at last. A waking from his slens earlier than usual, he walked into his little house and looked out through the small square shells that did duty as window panes on the farther end; he was just in time to see Dr. Carey take leave of his wife in the manner peculiar to relatives, lovers and husbands.

The next day the little brown men came down from the hills of the north. The major left his wife to return to Manila with Captain Manson and a heavy escort. He did not bid her good by. As soon as she had gone, he ordered an advance of two companies. Dr. Carey accompanied the one under his command.

The two rode out to make a reconnaissance beyond the rice paddies to a point where a rise of land had them from the view of the company. They were no sooner out of sight, than the major addressed his companion grimly.

"There's no use arguing, doctor, and I presume you won't care to when you know I've learned at last what has for some time past been common talk with the battalion. You're man enough to understand me, I take it?"

Major Tracey drew his revolver as he concluded.

"Yes?" interrogated the doctor. "Go ahead."

"Shall it be ten or twenty paces?"

"To oblige you, PW, say fifteen," responded the doctor, smiling as if in a box at the theater.

The two men stood back to back and began to walk forward. The major counted the paces aloud.

"We will turn and fire at the fifteenth," he said.

At the thirteenth, Dr. Carey wheeled about quickly, raising his Remington to fire at the back of the unsuspecting man. At the same instant there was a puff of smoke from the bamboo thicket, followed by another and another. The doctor fell.

For a moment, regardless of the soft patter of bullets all about him, the major stood above the fallen form of the doctor. "It has saved me the trouble," he mused. Then he leaped quickly to the shelter of a rice dike until a detail of skirmishers came at double quick around the hillock, causing the little brown men, leaving their dead and wounded behind them, to make off as quickly as they had come. NIAGARA IS GRAND

Nothing Can Mar Grandeur of This Natural Wonder.

Regardless of Hotels and Refreshment Rooms the Falls Retain Their Wonderful Impassiveness and Charm to the Beholder.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Niagara has been described a thousand times. Dickens did it in masterly fashion. "The first effect," he says, in the course of an eloquent passage, "and the enduring one—instant and lasting—of the tremendous spectacle was peace." Other writers, visiting this celebrated pilgrimage-place at later dates, when hotels and refreshment rooms had already begun to batten upon its fame, have brought away recollections far from peaceful. The falls, they declare, are spoiled, defiled, not only by the catering for trippers and honeymooners, but by the electric power houses and factories which have grown up around the gorge. Whether these severely utilitarian, but none the less interesting, erections are a defilement or not is debatable; one thing is certain, Niagara can never be "spoiled." It is one of the few supremely majestic natural wonders of the world, one of the few show sights which must always justify their reputation. Perch a cheap eating-house on the very brim of the falls, and the falls would remain magnificent. Probably the eating-house, veiled in drifting spray, overhung by trail rainbows and shaken by the thunder of the cataract, would have its banality turned into some strange effect of subtle loveliness. Even if its ugliness were unassailable, it could not, by its presence, make the falls ugly.

A short distance below the falls an iron bridge spans the gulf from America to Canada. For myself, I happen to think the bridge an object exhibiting real beauty, in its curve and in its pattern; no one can deny that the falls, wearing a tremendous gauze of vapor athwart the rigid spider's web of metal, do indeed beautify it and throw round its arch a glamour which it would otherwise lack. Even the much-abused power houses down the gorge are not unpleasing in certain lights. They rise against the sky on the cliff summit like fantastic modern renderings of medieval fortresses of barons' burghs on the Rhine; capitalistic robbers' castles, as maybe some indignant critic would name them, enthroned to plunder both nature and man.

Nobody, I conceive, can screw up much admiration for the trippers and parasitic portion of the town of Niagara Falls itself. The odor of its too blatantly hospitable restaurants, greeting the newcomer on his emergence from the railway station exit, the rag-time of its gramophones and other musical entertainments, are abominable; but these offenses are kept at a proper distance by the park reservation which surrounds the actual waterfall. One the platform which overhangs the American fall one can be alone; and, indeed, I imagined that the most sociable soul would here desire solitude. For, without wishing to indulge in any false rhetoric, one cannot but describe this spot, with all due reverence, as a place of worship. The view which the eye encounters is overwhelmingly impressive, and the roar which beats upon the ear contributes superbly to that impressiveness. Outspread before the spectator is the sumptuous panorama of crushing liquid, flinging itself in a kind of agony of struggle to the brink, and then—by contrast, almost serenely—sinking sheet, upon sheet, down the drop into the caudron whose depths are concealed by veering, billowing steam.

MAKE USE OF SNAKES

SCIENTISTS FIND DEADLY REPTILES AN AID IN MEDICINE.

Captured at Much Risk, Their Peculiar Value Great—Are "Baited" to Induce Them to Eject Valuable Poison.

The majority of snakes are not, as most people suppose, aggressive in their habits, but, like the British viper, far more anxious to get out of the way of the human intruder than into it. But there are a few famous, or infamous, exceptions, and the mamba—one of the largest of the cobras, and a native of Africa—is said to be the most dangerous reptile in the world. It will fly at anything and anybody; goes out of its way to pick a quarrel with every passer-by, and has even been known to come down from a tree where it was resting, apparently fast asleep, to try conclusions with a man armed with a gun. The only snake that at all approaches the mamba in ferocity is the great king cobra, or hamadryad of the east, which is larger than the mamba and generally quite as ready to interfere with any living creature that comes within its ken. It has been known to chase a man on horseback, and so fast can it travel that it is said none but a swift-footed animal has any chance of escape. The poison of both these snakes is so powerful that, as some one once stated in an examination paper on reptiles, "even a scientist when bitten by either of these ferocious creatures, ceases to be interested in the matter after the space of a few minutes." Among the Australian cobras, the pitvipers of America, and the great West African vipers, there are certain species that prefer the offensive to the defensive method, and in most cases it is the aggressive varieties that carry the most poisonous fangs.

Snake-baiting is an amusement that few persons would care to indulge in, but it appears that this hazardous occupation is an actual business in certain parts of Australia. The poison is said to be invaluable in the preparation of particular medicines, and is also much sought after by scientists and experimenters. Its value is such, indeed, that the snake poison collected by the natives of New South Wales has been sold for as much as a sovereign to twenty-five shillings a grain, which works out at the amazing figure of $30,000 per pound troy. The business of snake-catching is naturally exceedingly dangerous, but some of the Australian snake hunters are so expert that they can take their quarry with no other weapon but their hands. While one attracts the reptile's attention another creeps up behind and grasps the snake by the neck, and so holds it until it can be transferred to a cage or bag. The reptiles are then taken to their permanent cages, where they are at intervals "baited" with a specially prepared instrument, upon whose end is a rubber band encircling a small sheet of glass. The snake bites through the rubber and deposits its venom on the glass, which is then scraped into a phial and the contents sealed down. The snake, once captured without injury, is a constant source of revenue, as the poison is quickly secreted afresh, ready for the next "baiting." Thus, at last, the snake, whose reputation has hitherto been mainly earned in its capacity for destroying life, may now be said to be an important agent in its preservation.

Extraordinary Head-Dress.

An ornithologist in Mexico, whose collecting birds for the National museum, caught sight of a blackbird—one of the Mexican cowbirds—which seemed to have a snow-white crest. This would be an extraordinary specimen for his cabinet, and after considerable trouble he succeeded in shooting it. To his further astonishment, the supposed crest proved to be a piece of white cloth stitched into the scalp and trimmed to represent the comb of a cock. The only explanation he could imagine was that the operation had been done by some of the Indian natives when the bird was very young. The wounds of the operation were entirely healed and the bird seemed well and cheerful under its novel adornment.—Harper's Weekly.

Germans Lavish With Honors.

An ingenious statistician says that a German has seventy times as great a chance of getting a decoration as has a Briton. As a fact, the list of persons decorated this month fills eighteen pages of the dry Vossische Zeitung and contains about 4,700 names. This does not mean that 4,700 persons distinguished enough for decorations and orders. It merely means that you need not be distinguished to get a decoration. The 4,700 list contains many honest (and, no doubt, some dishonest) postmen and engine drivers. Even elderly, faithful scavengers get some decoration.

Speaks for Itself.

When you see a man and a woman sitting together in the theater, solemnly reading the jokes on the program between the acts, you don't have to be a mind-reader to know they are married.—Lippincott's.

Acrobatic Pair.

"The bride who married the military hero went up the aisle, the account says, on her father's arm." "The bridegroom was quite as acrobatic. He went up over a lot of other people's heads."

In order that Perry Day may be properly celebrated in the schools of Michigan on September 10, it will be necessary for the teachers in the state to make preparation this summer, so the department of public instruction has just issued a bulletin of exceptionally appropriate material and this will be sent to teachers upon request. A Perry Day celebration will be doubly significant as it is to commemorate the victory of Perry on Lake Erie, which meant more to Michigan than to any other state in the union, and to emphasize the fact that there has been enjoyed a century of peace between Great Britain and the United States. The bulletin contains valuable historical material and is attractively illustrated. A description is given of the million dollar memorial to be erected at Put-in-Bay for the building of which Michigan appropriated $30,000.

Auto Owner Liable.

Attorney-General Fellows, in an opinion rendered Friday, holds that the owner of a motor car may be held liable for an accident resulting from the non-use of lights while the machine is standing on a curb. The law does not specifically state how machines shall be lighted when not in motion, but as a result of Fellows' ruling it is expected that motorists will keep both head and tail lights burning when at the curb.

Made Him Hot

The steer that Jones bought by weight amounted to $49.72. He didn't have the exact change, so his neighbor said: "Oh, just make it even money," so Jones handed over two Twenties and a Ten. He had paid 26 cents too much because he didn't have the exact amount.

The next day his neighbor came over and bought some hogs. When weighed they came to exactly $49.72 and the neighbor pulled out a check book and wrote a check for the exact amount. Said Jones, afterward: "By gosh, that made me hot, but I guess the only way out is to quit carrying around my money and begin to pay by check."

Glimpses of Old Oxford

OXFORD has been much written of since Cecil Rhodes made his bequest and the flower of America's young men have been sent there as "Rhodes scholars." Yet perhaps a few glimpses of old Oxford as seen by an outsider may be of interest.

There are a thousand things in Oxford to attract the visitor. There are the strange old buildings and the strange old town. There are strange old customs and strange old places. There is a charm in the ivy-clad college walls, the memories of great men and events which cluster here, the traditions and customs so carefully guarded and preserved, the high ideals which permeate the atmosphere.

So as the visitor to this quaint old college town wanders about the streets and into the various old buildings, and notes the life here represented, he gains more idea of why England is the great country she is, than he could gain from much observation in other places. For the two great universities of England represent what is best of English thought and culture, and old Oxford, the home of conservatism, "has ever been the huge balance wheel of English life." The very air of Oxford proclaims this fact. Customs old and foolish are observed, yet shall we criticize?

Old Tom's Stroke. When first I heard Old Tom (the bell in the Christ church tower) strike its hundred and one strokes, I inquired and found that this was a nightly occurrence, that shortly after nine, (its time of striking, each college gate was closed and no one was allowed to go out from his college after that time. Students may come in later by payment of a small fee, increasing according to the lateness of the hour.

After nine o'clock no undergraduate is supposed to be out without wearing his cap and gown. The undergraduates consider it bad form to appear at night not adopt the ways of our own American colleges? Pause and consider; can we show better results than they?

Some one has said: "The college teaches and the university examines," which is true, as in few things do the men of the different colleges come together except in examinations. Each college has its own staff of dons and tutors (professors we should call them.) An undergraduate may attend lectures in any college. But the same lot of examiners serves for all. Thus the examinations are impersonal.

There are a few more customs which give most clearly the atmosphere of Oxford. The vice-chancellor still goes to official meetings clad in his scarlet robes, and preceded by two bearers in medieval costume. One head master still writes his letters in Latin to those he knows can read them. Each night the student must sleep in his own room, and as a proof "his scout" must take a loaf of bread from the kitchen each morning. The man who fails in this is apt to be suspended.

Enough, however, of methods and customs in general. The various colleges attract the visitor. Christ church, one of the best known and largest of the colleges, has about 300 undergraduates. It was founded by Cardinal Wolsey, whose cap appears at the top of all college stationery. Its dining room takes us back to the time of Charles I. and his parliament. Its reputation, merited no doubt, is that of being the most aristocratic of all the colleges. Its famous "Broad Walk" is very beautiful. Gladstone, Wesley, Ruskin and Keel are famous names of which Christ church boasts. Each of the colleges has a quadrangle, and some have two. Christ church has the "Great Tom Quad," and the "Little Quad."

New Long Ago. New colleges (it was new long ago), with its gardens is particularly attractive. The gardens, surrounded on two in cap and gown. So each night the proctors walk the streets looking for students uncapped or ungowned. He who is caught will have to appear next morning and pay five shillings ($1.25) to the university chest. But the undergraduate cannot be "progged" unless the proctor is in official garb and accompanied by a "bulldog" (a man fleet of foot) who is supposed to be able to catch the student if he attempts flight. The "bulldog" must wear a derby hat. The freshmen, instead of being wined and dined as in this country, are breakfasted. The breakfasts are so recognized by college authorities that lectures do not begin until ten o'clock.

Tea is also a meal of social attractions, and "over the teacups" are discussed the events of college life. For social life is a thing encouraged by Oxford. During terms a man gets much social life and during vacation he is expected to do much studying.

Three terms of only eight weeks each compose the college year. Hard work, however, must be done by the student during vacation, for Oxford above all demands results, and the examinations are about the "stiffest" known. Yet it makes little difference to the authorities where or when the knowledge of the student is obtained.

The instruction is a combination of tutor and lectures. Each student has his tutor to whom he reports and who watches his progress. He is not required to attend lectures, but pleases himself—and in the end passes or fails. It is not the means, but results that the university cares about.

Ancient Customs Prevail. Such are some few of the Oxford customs and some of its method of instruction: Foolish customs, you say. There are many such. Queer they do sides by the old city wall, relics of the times of Saxon and Dane, are a little inclosed spot of great beauty.

Magdalen (pronounced Maudlin) college grounds contain many acres and forty fallow deer. It has the old pulpit still, preserved where once a year the university sermon is preached on the festival of John the Baptist. To my notion Magdalen is the most beautiful and interesting of all the colleges. An old servant showed us about the place and told us tales of bygone days. He told how the college had always been strongly royalist; how Cromwell planted a row of trees for Magdalen, but after Charles II. Restoration the royalist fellows returned and dug up the trees, so that they might not be indebted to Cromwell for anything.

As we wandered about the water banks of Magdalen college on the banks of the Chorwell, a branch of the Isis (Thames), and saw all the beautiful spots—Addison's walk, with its tall elms. (Addison the greatest and best of all pupils of Magdalen—as the old servant informed us), when we saw the trees and meadows, the water and the old mill, the park with its fallow deer near by, we grasped the inspiration of the place and eagerly drank in the stories which the old man related to us. Here it was among those picturesque haunts that Gebbon, Goldwin Smith, Collins and Charles Reade were educated.

Each May day the choir sings a Latin hymn on top of Magdalen tower at five in the morning. And "they say" that this originated as an annual requiem for Henry VII.

There are 21 colleges in Oxford town, and to each belongs some tradition, some interesting bit of history.

PRACTICAL REASONS FOR PRUNING MANY VARIETIES OF FRUIT TREES

If Strict, Correct System of Plant Restriction Be Faithfully Followed Out, Resultant Harvest Will Be Greatly Enhanced in Value—Great Possibilities in Fine Fruit.

(By L. M. BENNINGTON) To secure the more excellent results the grower of fine fruits must make use of the predominating law of nature, which compels all life to seek the perpetuation of its species by properly controlling and directing the immense, highly vitalized energy back of this law. Fruit trees and plants, if left to their own resources and permitted to follow the instincts of nature in their way, seek to multiply species regardless of quality in the result of fruits, for that which we term the fruit of plants is but a receptacle designed by nature to supply the needs of certain species of plants during the process of seed production.

Size, color, flavor—qualities which are so much to be desired in commercial fruit—are of no consequence as far as the plant is concerned in its efforts to follow the instincts of its being, for plant energy must be expended to develop the greatest number of plant units. If, however, the plant be restricted in the amount of vital force and energy spent in following out this law, the spent and force resulting in a weakened plant and a shortened life.

Now, if this useless waste of plant energy is prevented by being directed into the channel of fruit production, the result will be a larger amount of fruit of a more excellent quality.

There are great possibilities in fine fruit growing when the operations are based upon the intelligent use of a knowledge of the facts presented, and the manner and way by which such results may be secured, we will now endeavor to make plain.

When bush fruit are left to follow out this inner propelling power unhindered, the immense numbers of suckers sent up, together with the large amount of bloom and quantity of seed produced, draws so heavily upon the vitality of the plants that the quality of fruit produced will not only be inferior, but the life of the plantation will be shortened.

But, on the other hand, if a strict, correct system of plant restriction be faithfully followed out, both as to the amount of cane growth and blossom thus saved to the plant will be used in building up plant tissue resulting in increased size, strength and vigor of individuality as to plants. Some fruit plants, such as the strawberry and some of the bush fruits as well, propagate by means of seeds and nodes. With the strawberry the nodes are formed on an elongation of certain tissues of the plant commonly known as runners, having their origin in the crown of the plant. Red raspberries and blackberries propagate in a somewhat similar way, except that the new canes that spring up have their origin at certain points along the roots of the plant.

Whichever the method used in attaining its end, a certain amount of energy is represented in each seed and plant produced, and this expenditure of plant energy draws heavily upon the vitality of the original plant.

permitted, the resultant fruit harvest will not only be enhanced in value but the period of the plantation's usefulness as a means of revenue will be greatly prolonged thereby.

The same may be said of the tree fruits, when left to their own will of reproduction, there is a tendency to blossom and to set more fruit than the tree is able to mature. The result is a lot of ill-shaped, badly colored and undrurable fruit.

In making a practical application of this principle we confine the plants to rows six feet apart and with canes two feet apart in the row. Then, during the spring and summer, at about the time the new growth of the plants are two feet tall, the terminal bud is broken out. This causes a heavy growth of laterals, and when these reach a length of ten or twelve inches the tips of these are taken off.

ROOT CROPS GOOD FOR A DAIRY COW

If Turnips Are Fed Directly After Milking No Unpleasant Flavor Results.

No matter what some people tell you, turnips and other roots make fine milk-producing feed. Turnips, says one writer, will not affect flavor of milk if fed at the right time.

If turnips are fed in large quantities, and two or three hours before milking, they are liable to give the milk an unpleasant taste, but if fed directly after milking, no flavor whatever is noticed.

A peck of turnips to each animal per day is sufficient in most cases. A little salt scattered over the turnips, which should be chopped in quarters or smaller, add to their palatability.

Roots make a very valuable addition to the winter ration, because they add to the variety of the feed; and no animal on the farm appreciates variety more than the dairy cow. In Wisconsin, Iowa and other western dairy states the root crop is becoming a very important part of the crop of the farm.

POTATO SCAB HAS STRONG VITALITY

Germes of Disease Are Able to Pass Through Digestive Organs of Animals.

It is almost generally known that the application of fresh stable manure to the soil immediately before planting often tends to increase the amount of scab on the resulting potato crop. This theory brought up the question in the mind of an investigator whether it is safe to feed uncooked potatoes or potato refuse to animals in stalls without taking precautions to prevent unclean portions from becoming mixed with the litter. Experiments were carried on for two seasons with a horse and a cow fed infected potatoes, and the results indicate that the germes of potato scab are able to pass through the digestive tract of both species and go into the manure pile without being destroyed. This was much more readily the case with the horse than with the cow. The manure of horses fed on raw potatoes is very likely to carry the germes of the disease. On the other hand, that from cows fed a moderate quantity of potatoes is probably not a serious source of contamination.

Kruger became exhausted and nearly drowned. Fred Fortenbacher, who was fishing near there, succeeded in bringing Anspaugh's body to the surface after several attempts. The pulmotor of the Muskegon Traction company was rushed to the scene, but all efforts failed to resuscitate him. Anspaugh is survived by a widow.

Alpena.—Miss Josie Nowak of Detroit, sixteen years old, was drowned while bathing in the bay. With two Alpena girls, Florence King and Florence Budnick, she was bathing in the shallow water near shore, when a swell threw the three girls under water. The Budnick girl escaped injury. The King girl was resuscitated. Rescuers worked over the Nowak girl for a long time, but all efforts to revive her failed.

Lansing.—Officers of the medical corps of the Michigan National guard are to have a special course of instruction at the coming tour of field service of the guard at Ludington. General Abbey states that application has been made for the detail of special instructors from the army medical corps to prepare the course, in accordance with the latest methods of sanitation, hygiene, etc. All lieutenants in the state medical corps will be required to take the course.

Jocelyn, Ann Arbor; general secretary, Alfred Shaw, Ann Arbor; with Regent J. E. Beal elected on the board of directors in place of E. W. Pendleton of Detroit, who refused a re-election.

Brogger, St. Mary's church, Grand Rapids; Leo J. Farquharson, St. James church, Bay City; John W. McNeil, St. Simon's church, Ludington; Stephen Narioch, Holy Rosary church; Isadore and Casimir T. Skowdonski, St. Stanislaus church, Bay City.

Pontiac.—Sheriff Oliver arrested Ned Taylor, charged with horse stealing at Goodrich. He was taken at Royal Oak, where he had endeavored to sell a horse to Frank Parmenter of the Royal Oak hotel. The sheriff believes the man is one of a gang who robbed the post office at Orionville.

Rochester.—Rochester's new M. E. church was dedicated by three services by Bishop Leete, and District Superintendent C. B. Allen. The church has raised over $4,000 to apply on the cost of the structure, which was $12,000. The debt is nearly all provided for.

Marshall.—An all-night search, a broken automobile and three hungry officers is the history of the attempt of Branch county officers to capture four chicken thieves who made away from a farm near Girard with a wagon loaded with chickens.

Jackson.—The safe that was stolen from Murphy Brothers' grocery and saloon ten days ago—was found four miles north in a dump of bushes. The safe had been shattered with dynamite. The money it contained—$30—was gone but a watch and valuable papers had not been taken.

Coldwater.—Four large barns, a silo and several adjoining sheds which contained many bushels of clover seed, farm implements and machinery were destroyed by a fire of unknown origin on the James Barney farm in Girard township, causing a loss of nearly $10,000. Mr. Barney, who is a prominent swine raiser, and his family were visiting in Litchfield when the fire broke out, and it was fought by neighbors who formed a bucket brigade, but without avail. The loss is covered by insurance. The house was saved.

BROKE HORSE OF BAD HABIT

Bag of Sand, Something Like a "Punching Bag," Did the Business Quite Simply.

Noah Spears, a Bay Shore farmer, has discovered a way to break a horse of kicking, according to a Milford letter to the Wilmington (Del.) News. Spears tells the following story: "I filled a stout gunny sack with sand and suspended it from the ceiling in the rear of the stall by a rope in such a position behind the horse that its heels could have good play upon it. This large pendulum, needing only a strong power to start it, would swing with clocklike precision as soon as the horse began to play its acrobatic stunts upon it. At the first kick the bag swung away, only to return with more force, giving the animal much more than it had sent. This unexpected return on the part of the bag caused the horse to kick harder, but each time the bag returned harder and paid the animal with interest. Finally the horse, realizing that further kicking would be fruitless, stopped kicking. The bag was allowed to hang in the same position for an entire week, but no more use for it was seen."

Mercy of Aviators. Robert G. Fowler, an aviator, says that while he was flying across the Isthmus of Panama he found it would be easy for an aeroplanist to blow up the Gatun dam. "There is absolutely no protection," he said. "I think the government has overlooked this. "Any good aviator, flying a first class machine, could carry enough nitroglycerin or other high explosive, to blow such a hole in the dam that it would leave the whole canal useless. I could have done it myself, and I would not fear to attempt it at any time."

Studying the Game. On a certain southern golf course the sand pits are famous for their difficulty. A New York man played into one of the pits, and then cursed none the less malevolently, if silently, while he took six ineffectual strokes, raising only clouds of sand and fairly burying the ball. Presently he was aware of an interested and incredulous darky watching him. "What you see dat snake you's tryin' to kill, man?" he demanded.

Why They Came. Willie, aged four, had been invited out to tea with his mother, and, while he was being dressed for the occasion, the delights in store for him had been depicted in glowing terms. While his mother chatted with their hostess, Willie sat in solemn silence, and at last the lady of the house rose. "Now I must bring in tea," she announced, then added: "Would Willie like some tea?" The child eyed her in astonishment, and, in a deeply hurt tone, responded: "Why, that's what we came for!"

Donald's Opinion. Donald was an old Scotch beadle who officiated in a Highland kirk where the minister, never a bright star at any time, believed in giving full value for the money, as it were, in his discourses. A stranger once asked him his opinion of the sermons. "Ah, weel," replied Donald, "you'll no get me to say anything against them, for they're a' very guid, but I'll just remark this much: "The beginning's aye over far frae the end, an' it would greatly improve the force o' it if he left oot a' that cam' in atween."

In the Barber's Chair. "No sooner was I seated in the chair," began Jones, "than the barber commented on the weather, and directed a current of discourse into my ears. "Je ne comprend pas," said I, with an inward chuckle, thinking his volubility would be checked. "In very good French he started in afresh. I looked at him as if bewildered, and then interrupted him by asking: "Was Sagen Sie?" "He began to repeat in German all that he had been saying, when I shut him off with: "Oh, talk to me with your fingers. I'm deaf and dumb!"

BANISHED Coffee Finally Had to Go. The way some persons cling to coffee, even after they know it is doing them harm, is a puzzle. But it is an easy matter to give it up for good, when Postum is properly made and used instead. A girl writes: "Mother had been suffering with nervous headaches for seven weary years, but kept on drinking coffee. "One day I asked her why she did not give up coffee, as a cousin of mine had done who had taken to Postum. But Mother was such a slave to coffee she thought it would be terrible to give it up. "Finally, one day, she made the change to Postum, and quickly her headaches disappeared. One morning while she was drinking Postum so freely and with such relish, I asked for a taste. "That started me on Postum and I now drink it more freely than I did coffee, which never comes into our house now."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville." Postum comes in two forms. Regular Postum (must be boiled). Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons. A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream. Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future. "There's a Reason" for Postum.

Rid Your Children of Worms. You can change fretful, ill-tempered children into healthy, happy youngsters, by ridding them of worms. Tossing, rolling, grinding of teeth, crying out while asleep, accompanied with intense thirst, pains in the stomach and bowels, feverishness and bad breath, are symptoms that indicate worms. Kickapoo Worm Killer, a pleasant candy lozenge, expels the worms, regulates the bowels, restores your children to health and happiness. Mrs. J. A. Brislin, of Elgin, Ill., says: "I have used Kickapoo Worm Killer for years, and entirely rid my children of worms. I would not be without it." Guaranteed. All druggists, or by mail. Price 25c. Register to Buy Gun. After August 15 men who buy guns in Michigan will be forced to leave a clue behind them with the dealer. A new law, enacted by the legislature as part of the 1913 batch of legislation, directs that henceforth every person purchasing firearms must register with the dealer.

The man buying rifles, pistols, silencers or other tools of destruction will be required to write his name, age, occupation and residence in the dealer's book. Of course, this applies to women. Other means of identification also will be demanded. There will be the number of the gun purchased or other marks which may distinguish the weapon from other weapons.

THE TEST OF MERIT. Chelsea People Are Given Convincing Proof. No better test of any article can be made than the test of time and this is particularly true of a kidney medicine. Doan's Kidney Pills have stood this test and stood it well. What better proof of the merits of this remedy could you demand, than the statement of a Chelsea resident who used it successfully and tells of lasting results.

Read the following: Mrs. S. J. Trouten, McKinley St., Chelsea, Mich., says: "Several years ago I suffered from kidney trouble. My back was lame and sore and I had headaches and dizzy spells, during which I had to grasp something for support. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me at that time and now some years later, I can say that the cure has been lasting. I occasionally take a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills to keep me in good health. Doan's Kidney Pills are fine and I do not hesitate to confirm my former endorsement." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. MATCH FOR THE BILLY GOAT

School Teacher Small in Stature, But She Was Decidedly the Victor at the Finish.

Standing in the lower corridor of the Crescent school, at Frankston avenue and Standard street, a shaggy, dirty, ill-smelling, evil-eyed Billy goat, the hero of a hundred battles, leaped out a challenge to Miss Flora Denniston, as she gently stepped into the hall with a basketball net in her hands.

Having cleared the school of all the children, placed Henry Long, the janitor, hors du combat with a few well-directed "butts," and so disarranged and ripped the clothing of Officer James Warrenton as to force him to retire from the field to make repairs, the defiant old buck looked at the pretty, slight, young ninety-pound school teacher with disdain as he essayed a challenge.

Stepping from behind the door, Miss Denniston lauded "Old William" until suddenly hunching, he hurled himself at her like a rocket. Quickly stepping behind the door, the courageous girl deftly threw the basketball net over "William's" head and horns. Then the trouble began. The old hero of many battles attempted to lurch again for a spring, but each time his feet would become entangled in the net, and down he would go, snorting and bleating like mad.

"Old William," after a period of vain effort, finally acknowledged his mistress and lay down on all fours. Securing a strong rope, Miss Denniston walked over to the vanquished battler and tied him up. Speaking about the battle later, Miss Denniston said: "Billy goats are no trouble to handle. It was merely a battle of wits, and I won."—Pittsburg dispatch to the Philadelphia Record.

Government Maps. It may be of interest to touring automobilists, bicyclists and even suffragette "hikers" to know that the government will furnish at the trifling cost of 5 cents accurate maps of all sections of the country east of the Mississippi river. These maps each cover a section about 20 miles square, and as they are nearly two feet square, they have a scale of about an inch to the mile. On this scale every road and byroad can be readily distinguished. Prominent houses along the highways are set out, as well as every stream and branch. A feature that is especially desirable is the system of contour-lines which coupletly cover the maps. These show the varying elevation, there being a distance of 50 feet elevation between each line. One may thus choose between two roads leading to his destination, selecting from the slightest inspection of the map the one showing the least hills.

These maps are kept for sale in the offices of the geological survey, on F street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets northwest. The price just covers the cost of lithographing.—Washington Star.

Another Worm Turns. "Shave, sir!" "Course! If I'd wanted a haircut I'd a said so." The barber adusted the chair at the proper angle. "Hot or cold lather, sir?" he asked. "What do you want to know that for?" "Well, some customers like it hot and some like it cold. All the same 't me, sir."

"Then 'spose you go right ahead and 'tend to your business. If I don't like what you're doing I'll kick." "Very good, sir; you can kick right now. Next!" vociferated the barber, bringing the chair to an upright position with a jerk that dumped the customer out. "Bill, hand the gentleman his duds an' hold the door open for him."

It may be well to remember that the tonsorial professor in charge of the first chair sometimes owns the shop.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Course in Chores for Boys. The Bethel Women's club of St. Louis believes that a course of home carpentering should be added to the school curriculum for boys. The members of the club believe that the boys may as well be acquiring knowledge which they can put to practical use in their own homes, such as making screens, repairing broken windows, or chairs, putting storm protectors on doors and the like rather than devoting all their time to fancy wood working and cabinet making.

"Stagger" Oil. From the beginning of September until November a small fish called stickleback is caught in considerable quantities off the island of Dunamunde, at the mouth of the Dwina river, in the Gulf of Riga, and also near the island of Semgallen, in the Dwina river, near Dunaburg, Russia. The fishermen make an oil from this fish which is very useful in the leather and harness industry as a preservative. The name of this fish is "Stichling" in German, the common name is "kassager," and in some communities it is called "stagger."

Studebaker. "The LIFE of a wagon is what counts—that's why I buy a Studebaker." "That's reasonable, isn't it?" "A wagon that doesn't last is expensive no matter what price you pay for it." "Suppose you buy three wagons, one after the other, and the three of them don't last as long as one Studebaker—which is the best bargain?" "I didn't find this out myself. I heard my grandfather say it a good many years ago. He said he had proved that it paid to buy a Studebaker. I followed his advice to my own satisfaction." "A wagon can't have life in it unless it has the material and work and finish in it. The Studebaker people have been making vehicles for sixty years. They ought to know how to make wagons right—and they do. They have the reputation because they've produced the goods. They don't put the name Studebaker on until the wagon's right, and when you see the name Studebaker on a vehicle of any kind it is your insurance of quality." "That's why I buy a Studebaker. I trust a Studebaker wagon because I trust the people that make them. It's good business." "A Studebaker promise is always made good." See our Dealer or write us. STUDEBAKER South Bend, Ind.
