All Poultry Ills

Are Quickly Cured By

Lee's Germozone

It fits most cases of chicken disease and there is no long period of "doctoring." One thorough application should cure the dreaded canker in one night. Two or three applications suffice for roup, swelled head, chickenpox, frosted comb, skin disease, cholera, bowel trouble, and it is so easy to use. If you will use GERMOZONE your poultry will keep healthy.

Pomona Grange Meeting.

The members of the various Granges in this vicinity met with the Washtenaw County Pomona Grange at the Sylvan town hall on Tuesday of this week. The hall was handsomely decorated with flowers, fruit and samples of farm products and presented a very attractive appearance. There were about sixty-five members from the Granges in the county present, and a very interesting program was carried out by the members of the local Granges, and those who attended the meeting were highly pleased and returned to their homes feeling that the day had been well spent.

The local Granges entertained the visiting Granges, and the ladies of the M. E. church served the dinner and supper in the church parlors. The next meeting of Pomona Grange will be held in Ann Arbor December 5-6 and will be the ending of the ninth annual corn contest.

Farm Residence Burned.

The large dwelling on the farm of John J. Pratt of Lima, was burned to the ground Monday afternoon of this week. The farm is occupied by Charles Pratt, and the roof of the house was discovered on fire just as the family were about to sit down to dinner at noon.

A high wind was prevailing at the time and the blaze was carried away from the barns. Shingles from the burning house were carried fully a mile away from the site of the blaze. The house, woodhouse and smokehouse were consumed by the flames. The contents of the home on the first floor were saved but most of the effects on the second floor were burned.

The house was insured in the Washtenaw Mutual Fire Insurance Co. for $1800 which will be paid in full and the contents for $600. Director O. C. Burkhardt was called to the scene of the fire Tuesday and adjusted the loss.

"Made in Detroit."

All of the "come-on men" do not live in the country and wear a little bunch of whiskers on their chins, as usually described by the city papers. Down at Detroit the real estate people, the automobile dealers, furniture men, and others have been carting a youth about town, filling him full of good things and giving him a good time generally. The young fellow wore a suit of clothes that cost about $7.50, but the Detroiters fell for his line of talk. He purchased a home for $155,000, a couple of automobiles worth $6,000, and several thousand dollars worth of furniture, and at the same time did not have money enough to "wad a gun." The newspapers state that the aforesaid Detroit dealers are sore. Why?

Not Required of Them.

"The attention of postmasters at rural delivery offices and of rural carriers," says Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General Blakeslee, "is again directed to the fact that rural carriers are not required to collect loose coins from rural mail boxes. Patrons should enclose coins in an envelope, wrap them securely in paper or deposit them in a coin holding receptacle, so that they can be easily and quickly taken from the boxes, and carriers will be required to list such coins and when accompanied by mail for dispatch, attach the requisite stamps. Lest the temptation to 'lift' loose coins prove too strong, the department adds that if it is done, the carrier disclosing such weakness will do so purely as a matter of accommodation, and not by any direction or requirement of the department."

Change Birth Certificate.

Owing to the fact that the last legislature passed a law requiring physicians to treat the eyes of newly born infants with a prophylaxis approved by the state board of health, within one hour after the birth, it has been necessary for Secretary of State Martindale to make a change in the prescribed form of birth certificates. The new birth certificate makes provision for a statement from the physician that the eyes of the child have been treated in the manner prescribed by law.

Seven Cars Derailed.

Spreading rails on the long side track in the Chelsea yards of the Michigan Central was the cause of seven cars of a west-bound freight train being derailed near Eppler & VanRiper's slaughter house early Saturday morning.

A wrecking crew was brought here from Jackson and it was late in the afternoon before the work of clearing and repairing the tracks was completed.

Twentieth Michigan Reunion.

The surviving members of the Twentieth Michigan Infantry held their annual regimental reunion in Jackson on Tuesday of this week. About three hundred members of the regiment were present.

The regiment rendezvoused at the "Marvin Farm," one-half mile outside of Jackson on the Lansing road, on August 18, 1862, and on the next day the regiment as a whole was mustered into the service of the United States for a period of three years. The regiment left Jackson on September 1, 1862, for Washington.

The regiment was actively engaged in many of the hardest fought battles

Is Up To Boards

Whether or not school children of this county will spend the next school year under conditions which are sanitary, healthful and conducive to comfort, depends entirely upon the school boards. Under the present law, the board has complete authority to make any improvements it sees fit and purchase any school equipment which is desirable, as the board votes the taxes. The people at the annual or at special meetings vote money for but three things, new school buildings and additions, sites and high school tuition in excess of $20 per year for each pupil.

Rural school boards can make their

of the Civil War, and during the siege of Fort Sanders, which is shown in the accompanying illustration as it appears today. During their stay at Fort Sanders they were kept one-quarter rations and were in a starved condition and on November 29, 1862, were among those who took part in the hard battle at this fort.

One of the most important features of the reunion was the election of officers, which takes place only once in five years. Col. C. B. Graft, who for the past twenty years has filled the post of president, was again elected to this office, and A. N. Morton of this place was re-elected secretary.

The reunion next year will be held at Ann Arbor.

School Notes.

Claude Spiegelberg and Eddie Frymuth have re-entered school and are enrolled as special students in Commercial work.

The total enrollment in all grades is 410, of whom 55 are non-residents. The enrollment is 132 and that of the kindergarten-primary 60.

Miss Ethel Burkhardt has been engaged as an assistant in the kindergarten. Miss Burkhardt has charge of the busy work of this department under the supervision of Miss Davidson.

During the summer months Supt. Hendry made a special study of the psychology and pedagogy of writing and spelling, and as a result of his work some new methods of teaching spelling and of judging handwriting are to be introduced into our schools.

The Commercial course is still very popular. So many have elected the typewriting that a new machine will have to be purchased. The Royal machines are the ones being used. Misses Ethel Wright, Mildred Cook, Clara Runciman and Mrs. Fannie Crawford are taking the typewriting-stenography course.

The Athletic Association has re-organized with the following officers: President, Donald Bacon; vice president, Roland Kalmbach; secretary, Walter Hummel; treasurer, Supt. Hendry; manager of football team, E. Wagner. Several games have been scheduled and the prospects for a winning team are quite bright.

Officers for the several classes in the Chelsea High school for the coming year have been elected as follows: Senior Class—President, Ernest L. Wagner; vice president, Alma Widmayer; secretary, Doris Schmidt; treasurer, Oscar Schettler.

Junior Class—President, Leo H. Martin; vice president, Mildred Greening; secretary, Esther Chandler; treasurer, Lloyd Kalmbach.

Sophomore Class—President, Allan Crawford; vice president, Alberta Dole; secretary, Ethel Kalmbach; treasurer, Lloyd Hirth.

Freshman Class—President, Clare Fenn; vice president, Marion Schmidt; secretary, Jessie Clark; treasurer, Paul Wagner; reporter, Leonard Shepherd.

Annual Meeting.

SECRETARY CALLS ATTENTION TO ACT

LAW PROVIDING FOR TREATING EYES OF INFANTS IS IN FORCE.

USE OF PROPHYLAXIS APPROVED BY BOARD.

Physician Must File in Birth Certificate Statement That Eyes of Baby Were Given Treatment According to Law.

Lansing, Mich.—Secretary of State Martindale calls attention to the act passed by the last legislature providing for treatment of eyes of infants and the filing of birth certificates, born of which are of considerable interest to the physicians of Michigan. Act 123 provides it shall be the duty of the state board of health to officially name and approve a prophylaxis to be used in the treatment of the eyes of newly born infants, and to issue instructions for its use. It shall be the duty of any physician, nurse or midwife who treated the eyes of the infant with a prophylaxis approved by the state board of health. The certificate of birth now being sent out by Secretary of State Martindale include this statement.

Dr. Francis Clark Is Dead.

Flint, Mich.—Dr. Francis Devereux Clark, superintendent of the Michigan School for Deaf and Blind, died suddenly of heart failure at his home on the institution grounds early Sunday morning.

Surviving Dr. Clark is the widow, who was Miss Celia Ransom, niece of the late Gov. Ransom.

Dr. Clark had been superintendent of the Michigan School for Deaf since 1892, coming to Flint from the Arkansas School for Deaf, where he had been since 1885. He had devoted his life to the work, fitting himself for it during his college career.

Dr. Clark was made a Mason October 15, 1901, by Flint lodge No. 23, F. & A. M. He was also a member of Washington chapter No. 15, R. A. M.; Flint council No. 56, R. & S. M.; Genesee Valley commandery No. 15, Knights Templar; Michigan Sovereign Consistory, and the Order of the Eastern Star.

He was elected grand master of the Michigan grand lodge last May, his term extending to May, 1914.

Automatically succeeding Mr. Clark will be Deputy Grand master William M. Perrett, of Detroit.

Gives Boy Gold Medal

Zeland, Mich.—Residents of the village of Forest Grove, with the memory of the fire a month ago fresh in their minds, have not forgotten the hero of the occasion, James Gitchel, aged 18 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Gitchel.

Young Gitchel climbed to the roof of the building when it was ablaze, and, tearing the burning shingles away, stopped the advance of the flames. He had no water, blankets, or anything but his bare hands, but with these he rendered valiant service.

In token of their appreciation, 700 persons gathered in the church and on the lawn to hold a thanksgiving service, the principal feature of which was the presentation of a solid gold encased watch to young Gitchel, bearing the inscription, "First Reformed Church of Jamestown to James Gitchel, for Bravery, July 30, 1913."

Students Study New Comet.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—An unexpected comet discovered only recently soon will be visible to the naked eye. It is of the ninth magnitude. Observers at the observatory here were notified of its discovery by Rev. Joel Metcalf in his observatory at South Hero, Vt. The aerial stranger will be known as Metcalf's comet. At the hastily estimated speed the comet would be due in about three months, and astronomers throughout the country are preparing to make observations. "It is said the wanderer will upset many astronomical theories and calculations. It was thought at first that the comet was coming directly towards the earth, but later observations show that it will not come close enough to cause anxiety."

Acting under instructions from the board of police and fire commissioners, every patrolman in Grand Rapids must learn how to operate an automobile. The order is the result of the experience of Patrolman Edward Janenga, who was taken on a wild ride by auto thieves two weeks ago, in which he was nearly killed, and which could have been avoided had he known how to operate the car.

J. S. Noyes, former prosecuting attorney in Calhoun county, ended his life by swallowing poison in Los Angeles, where he had lived for several years.

H. G. Barnum, president of the First National Exchange bank, of Port Huron, was stricken with heart failure in his home and died before a physician could reach him. He had been connected with the bank for many years as cashier, vice-president and as its executive.

MICHIGAN NEWS IN BRIEF

Frank McGrath, of Ironton, accidentally shot himself while preparing for a hunting trip. He died a few hours later.

Fred McBain, 24 years old, was drowned in Flat river Sunday night while swimming near Belding. His body was recovered.

Vermontville has called a special election for September 22 to settle the question of bonding for better fire protection.

Peter Arends, 21, of Sturgis, was killed when he attempted to block a separator. He intended entering college the next day.

P. J. Connell, of Grand Rapids, was elected a trustee of the International Order of Good Templars at the annual conference in Cleveland.

Fire in the pan house at the Stearns Salt & Lumber company plant at Ludington, destroyed costly machinery to the value of about $25,000.

The International Milk Products company of Detroit, has decided to locate a factory in Bad Axe. Thirty tons of milk a day will be used.

Christopher Yaude, 86 years old, a retired German farmer, was instantly killed, while crossing a track in the Michigan Central yards, at Marshall.

The city council of Bessemer has ordered a special election, to vote on an issue of $50,000 bonds for water works, street improvements and sewers.

Because of the great growth of St. Anthony, a school established at Comstock some time ago by Monsignor F. A. O'Brien, it has been found necessary to purchase additional ground, 18 acres having been added to the property.

Joseph Brown, of Kalamazoo, was saved from being burned to death by his 12-year-old daughter. Brown went to bed and took his pipe with him. He fell asleep and the bedding caught fire. The girl smothered the fire with a blanket.

The new $25,000 home of the local Arbeiter society was dedicated. Michael Reigle, of Salsburg, president of the state Arbeiter Bund, made the address. About 3,000 members of the society, including several from other cities, were present.

At the annual meeting of the Calhoun County Rural Route Letter Carriers' association, B. E. Williams, of Tekonsha was elected president; Albert Adams of Eckford, vice-president, and C. B. Newland, of Marshall, secretary-treasurer.

Archie McDougall, an aged man of Capac, was thrown from his wagon on Sunday night, receiving injuries from which he died in a few hours. His team became frightened at a bicycle and ran away. For years McDougall ran a blacksmith shop in Capac.

State Trespass Agent Jesse G. Woodberry died at Grand Haven of pleurisy after being ill five months. He served two terms as sheriff of Otsewa county and was later given his land office appointment by Huntley Russell. The funeral was held under Masonic auspices.

Marshall company No. 22, of the uniformed rank, Knights of Pythias, not only won third prize, $60, in the drill contest at the convention of the grand lodge in Kalamazoo but also $50 for having the largest number of members present. The Marshall company is the youngest in the state.

A man identified by a bank book found in his pocket as Ike Snyder, of St. Louis, Mo., was struck and instantly killed by a D. U. R. car near Monroe, Monday. The book showed deposits in a St. Louis bank amounting to $2,100. The man was shabbily dressed. He had no money.

Robert Kane, an employee of the Lake Shore railroad, was crushed to death when he was caught under many pounds of steel in a gondola car. Kane got aboard at Lenawee Junction, and when the train started the load of steel shifted and crushed him against the side of the car.

The steeples of the Swedish Baptist church and St. Mary's Roman Catholic church at Iron Mountain, were struck by lightning and demolished during one of the most severe electric storms ever known in the city. This makes the third Iron Mountain church steeple to be destroyed by lightning this season.

Two Twin City residents Monday celebrated the forty-fifth anniversary of their escape from one of the greatest of Lake Michigan tragedies. They are Capt. Charles Morrison, of St. Joseph, and Cyrus Rittenhouse, of Benton Harbor, the only living survivors of the Hippocampus, which sank in mid-lake. Twenty-eight persons were drowned.

The fight between the good roads men and the anti's was renewed at Grand Haven when attorneys for the latter commenced suit for the cancellation of the temporary order issued against the county clerk and board of election commissioners, restraining them from calling an election for a vote on the rescinding of the $600,000 bonding proposition voted in 1912.

The Ypsilanti Normal college position left vacant by the death of Miss Alice Barnes, who was librarian in charge of accessions, has been filled by the appointment of Miss Thirza Grant, who has had training and experience in the Cleveland library.

The engine exploding in a $3,500 motor boat belonging to John Spicer, of Alpena, knocked him senseless and caused a fire which burned the boat to the water's edge. Spicer recovered consciousness just in time to leap from the larger boat to a yawl, saving himself from the flames.

TARIFF BILL IS PASSED BY SENATE

MEASURE CARRIES FEATURES ADVOCATED BY THE ADMINISTRATION.

LA FOLLETTE AND POINDEXTER VOTE FOR BILL.

Two Democrats Oppose Majority On Final Vote—Bill Will Go to Joint Conference With House.

Washington—The Underwood-Simmons tariff bill passed the senate late Tuesday afternoon by a vote of 44 to 37.

It went through carrying all the features for which President Wilson has contended—free wool, free sugar, free meats and greatly reduced duties on all of the necessities of life.

As it passed the senate the tariff bill represents an average reduction of more than 4 per cent from the rates of the original bill that passed the house, and nearly 28 per cent from the rates of existing law.

The bill now goes to conference between the two houses and ten days, it is expected, will see final action on this important measure which already has dragged itself along for five months.

The vote in the senate today was big with political possibilities. Two Republicans, La Follette, of Wisconsin, and Poindexter, of Washington, voted for the Democratic bill. Only two Democrats, Thornton and Ransdell of Louisiana failed to stand by the caucus pledge. They voted with most of the Republicans against the measure.

Fatal Results of Duel

Antlers, Okla.—C. B. Taylor, postmaster at Farris, Okla., and Bert Stevens, a constable, are dead as the result of a pistol duel in which they engaged on the streets of Farris.

Two years ago two men went to Taylor's home, and after calling him out attacked him and inflicted injuries which kept him under a physician's care for three months. Taylor accused Stevens of being one of his assailants. Since then both men have threatened to shoot each other.

When they met both began shooting and each fell fatally wounded. Both died soon afterwards.

Close Up Sea Hotel

New York.—Heirs of the John Arbuckle estate have decided to close one of his old philanthropic hobbies, known as the "Arbuckle Deep Sea Hotel." The hotel is made up of two boats, one an old square-rigged ship named the Jacob A. Stabler, and the other the schooner yacht Gilana, once a palatial craft used by the late coffee merchant as his private yacht. For years the two boats have been moored off the East river shore and largely patronized by poor working girls, who have lived there for $2.80 for both room and board a week.

German Aid Ship Wrecked.

Berlin.—The worst of the numerous disasters which have overtaken Germany's airship fleet happened Tuesday evening when the new naval Zeppelin ship L. H-1 was wrecked while on a voyage from the mainland to Helgoland, 28 miles away. Thirteen of the crew of 20 were drowned. This is the twelfth accident to befall the Zeppelin airships and the first to be accompanied with loss of life.

Jerome Is Set Free.

Coaticook, Que.—William Travers Jerome was acquitted Monday of the charge of having gambled on Thursday last, on the station property of the Grand Trunk railway here, while waiting for the immigration authorities to pass on the case of Harry K. Thaw. In discharging him the court apologized for the humiliation to which he had been subjected.

The hearing before Magistrate Henry Mulvena, of Sherbrooke, lasted less than an hour. It began at 7:35 o'clock and at 8:20 the court said: "Sir, you are honorably discharged."

Big Money Is Cut Up.

St. Louis.—Two million and a half dollars in currency was partly destroyed here at the United States treasury by order of the treasury department at Washington.

Holes big enough to put a finger through were punched into the notes and they were then divided lengthwise by an electric cutter. The notes were gold and silver certificates of the $5,000 and $10,000 denomination put up in packets of $500,000. About $1,500,000 of the $5,000 notes and $1,000,000 of the $10,000 were sacrificed.

J. H. Kent, 65 years old, a Galeburg farmer, is the first victim of the corn shredder this season in this county. He lost his right arm when his coat sleeve became caught.

The state board of education announces the appointment of Norman Cameron, of Chester, Pa., as head of the department of education of the Western Michigan normal school in this city. Mr. Cameron succeeds Prof. E. W. Hockenberry, who died last spring.

LETTER FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

COMMISSIONER HELME FINDS WAY TO FORCE SWIFT & CO. TO PAY LICENSE.

TONAGE TAX WILL BE URGED AT NEXT SESSION.

New Law Governing Hotels Is of Little Effect on Account of No Appropriation for Enforcement of Same.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Lansing, Mich.—Dairy and food commissioner, James Helme, who has been kicking up considerable dust in Detroit recently by his investigation of meat markets, bakeries and cold storage plants, claims to have "put one over" on Swift & Co., during the last session of the legislature and he says that hereafter the big packing house will pay its regular fee for operating creameries in Michigan.

For a number of years there has been a law on the statute books which provided that every creamery, milk station and condenser should pay a yearly license of $5. However, there was no penalty clause attached to the old law and Swift & Co., which controls about 400 creameries and milk stations in Michigan, refused to pay. The smaller concerns paid rather than go to court as legal services would have cost them more than the license fee.

During the last session Helme had a bill introduced to amend the old law so that it would be possible to prosecute. While the attention of Swift & Co. and the other big concerns was drawn to this bill, another measure was slipped in by Helme giving him authority to condemn impure cream. Apparently this bill was overlooked by those who represented the interests of the big companies, and it was not until the statute took effect August 14 did Swift & Co. discover that Commissioner Helme was in possession of a weapon that would compel them to do business.

Helme says that it was the intention of the companies to refuse to pay their license fees, Helme stationed some of his dairy experts and at their creameries and confiscated several hundred gallons of impure cream. After the siege had continued for three days Swift & Co. remitted and other concerns are paying up. Helme says the department will collect more than $5,000 from the creameries this year.

It was learned here that the state grange will redouble its efforts at the next session of the legislature to bring about the passage of a tonnage tax and owing to the fact that it has already cost the state $200,000 to maintain the militia in the copper country to protect the mines during the strike trouble, it is believed that a tonnage tax will stand a better chance of passage than any time in years.

Auditor General Fuller has already paid out $200,000 from the general fund of the state to the military authorities in the copper country and the cost to the taxpayers is mounting each day the troops are kept in the upper peninsula.

The copper properties of Houghton and Keweenaw counties are owned largely by eastern capitalists and the taxpayers of Michigan are paying the freight," said a prominent granger who has always boosted for a tonnage tax on the output of the mines.

Under a law passed at the last session of the legislature the cost of maintaining troops in a county is placed upon the whole state. It is claimed that the grange leaders will use this as an argument when the tonnage tax bill comes up for consideration at the next session and it is believed here that the bill will have the support of all labor leaders in the house and senate who will not be kindly disposed towards the mining interests.

Clifford Vetter, of Grand Ledge, who sustained a broken wrist while playing baseball with the Reo team in the factory league of this city, has applied to the industrial accident board for compensation.

Vetter claims that it was his intention to go home the afternoon of the accident, but he says he was ordered by a foreman to play with the Reo team. Owing to the fact that Vetter is not regularly employed as a ball player, there is considerable question as to whether he is entitled to any compensation from the Reo Motor Car company.

When State Treasurer Haerer unlocked the vaults of the state's strong box at the beginning of the September business, there was a balance of $1,891,147.91 in the general fund available for immediate use.

The specific tax fund was credited with $87,005.01 and the primary school interests fund contained $6,715.32. However, within an hour after the treasury was opened, $177,000 was drawn from the general fund by the various state hospitals.

During the month of August, $1,048,169.37 was drawn from the general fund and if this record breaking pace keeps up state officials predict that it will be necessary for the state to borrow money before November 1.

State Fire Marshal Waship says that more than half the fires reported to his department during August were caused by lightning. During the month of July lightning caused 85 fires, while 159 were reported last month. Waship says the fire loss from lightning last month amounted to $153,422.96. There were 267 fires during August with a total property loss of $14,942.78.

The records show that 1.6 fires occurred in rural communities outside the range of adequate fire protection. A property loss of $25,991.75 is charged against fires of unknown origin.

All state employees are protected under the workmen's compensation and employer's liability law and Insurance Commissioner Waship filed a list of 3,769 employees, with the accident board.

The Kalamazoo State Hospital has 376 employees. This institution has more employees than any other in the state. Every institution in the state is included and some of the largest are as follows: Traverse City State Hospital 228, legislative employees during sessions 102, Newberry State Hospital 50, Ionia State Hospital 35, Central Michigan Normal School 100, secretary of state's department 50, Industrial School for Girls 150, Pontiac State Hospital 281, Michigan Home and Training School at Lapeer 100, Michigan Soldiers' Home 100, Kalamazoo State Hospital 376, University of Michigan 300, Michigan Agricultural College 345.

When the last legislature passed the bill endorsed by the traveling men's associations creating a hotel commission and providing for a vigorous inspection of all hosteleries and lodging houses, the lawmakers neglected to make an appropriation for carrying out the work. However, this fact apparently was not discovered until the commission composed of Labor Commissioner Cunningham, Dairy and Food Commissioner Helme, Insurance Commissioner Waship and Secretary Dixon of the state board of health, held a meeting recently.

Inasmuch as the law pays particular attention to the equipping of hotels and lodging houses with fire escapes Labor Commissioner Cunningham's inspectors will be able to carry out this provision as it is along their line of work.

Section six of the act provides that every hotel keeper shall provide all beds with regulation sheets not less than ninety inches in length. The law provides also that the beds shall be provided with sufficient number of regulation size blankets that are kept in a sanitary condition.

Owing to the fact that the state is without an official inspector of sheets and pillow cases and there is no funds to hire one, it appears that the hotel keepers can do about as they please in this particular regard.

An echo of the Balkins reached the industrial accident board when Tony Dimoff, injured May 26 at the Morgan & Wright plant, in Detroit appeared with a petition for a lump sum payment of the 35 weeks' compensation due him for the loss of his index finger. He stated that his wife and three children had been turned into the streets of Sofia, where they were subject to the insults of wandering soldiers and in danger of starvation.

When Tony, who is a Macedonian by birth, came to America to make his fortune, he left his family in the care of his brother, Michael Dimoff. Michael answered the call to arms when the recent affair with Turkey opened up, enlisting under Bulgarian colors. February 1 he laid down both arms and life in a warm engagement with the enemy.

The bad news came to Tony at Detroit, but he was then earning $12.50 per week, which he found ample for the support of himself and for the support of his family in Sofia. The on May 26 Tony's right hand was drawn into the machine for the wrapping of automobiles, which he was operating. The index finger was wrenching off at the second joint. The nails were torn from all the fingers on that hand and the skin was laid back to the wrist.

Tony suddenly found his income cut in half. The $6.25 per week compensation was barely sufficient to provide for his needs in this country. He had no friends here to whom he could appeal. The brother in Sofia was dead. When the money from America stopped coming, the mother found no means of meeting the bills incurred in the care of her brood of three young children. As a result they were turned out of their home and wandered for several weeks. The price of all foodstuffs has been advanced to an exorbitant standard in Sofia, according to Dimoff and even a good American quarter is barely sufficient to purchase one loaf of bread.

Tony seems to be an honest, intelligent sort of workman. He is now in America for the second time, and he reads English fairly well. His petition will probably be acted upon by the industrial accident board Monday. He professes a willingness to permit the superintendent of the Morgan & Wright plant to accompany him to the postoffice to make sure that the money is mailed to his wife in Sofia.

Secretary of State Frederick C. Martindale, has been elected chairman of the State Board of Control, which has supervision of the leasing of the property located in the St. Clair flats. Auditor General O. B. Fuller is secretary of the board which was created by the last legislature to succeed the old St. Clair Plate Commission.

SYNOPSIS.

Cowboys of the Flying Heart ranch are heartbroken over the loss of their champion in a footrace with the cook of the Centipede ranch. A house party is given at the Flying Heart. J. Wallingford Speed, champion runner, is expected. Helen Blake, Speed's sweetheart, becomes interested in the loss of the photograph. She suggests to Jean Chapin, sister of the owner of the ranch, that she induce Covington, her lover, to win back the photograph. Helen declares that if Covington won't run, Speed will. The cowboys are hilarious over the prospect. Speed and his valet, Larry Glass, arrive. Helen Blake asks Speed: who has posed to her as an athlete, to race against the Centipede man. The cowboys join in the appeal to Wally. And fearing that Helen will find him out, he consents. He insists, however, that Covington will arrive in time to take his place. Fresno, glee club singer from Stanford university and in love with Helen, tries to discredit Speed with the ladies and the cowboys. Speed and Glass put in the time they are supposed to be training playing cards in a secluded spot. The cowboys explain to Speed assures them he will do his best. The cowboys tell Glass it is up to him to see that Speed wins the race. Willie, the gunman, declares the trainer will go back east packed in ice, if Speed fails.

Carara returned the knife to its hiding-place, swept the floor gracefully with his sombrero, then placing the spangled head-piece at an exact angle upon his raven locks, lounged out, his silver spurs tinkling in the silence. Glass took a deep breath. "He doesn't mean to kill you—just cut you," said Speed.

"I got it," declared the other, fervently. Again he laid repressing hands upon his bulging front and looked down at it tenderly. "They've all got it in for my pad, haven't they?" "I told you to keep away from that girl."

"Humph!" Glass spoke with soulful conviction. "Take it from me, Bo, I'll walk around her as if she was a lake. Who'd ever think that chorus-man was a killer?"

"Surely you don't care for her seriously?" "Not now. I—I love my Cuban, but—"

"He quivered apprehensively—"I'll bet that rummy packs a 'shiv' in every pocket."

From outside the bunk-house came the low, musical notes of a quail, and Glass puckered his lips to answer, then grew pale. "That's her," he declared, in a panic. "I've got a date with her."

"Are you going to keep it?" "Not for a nose-bag full of gold nuggets! Take a look, Wally, and see what she's doing."

Speed did as directed. "She's waiting."

"Let her wait," breathed the trainer. "Here comes Stover and Willie."

"More bad news," Glass unrolled his prayer-rug, and stepped upon it hastily. "Say, what's that word? Quick! You know! The password, quick!"

"Allah!"

"That's her!" The fat man began to mumble thickly. It was plain that his spirit was utterly broken.

But this call was prompted purely by solicitude, it seemed. Willie had little to say, and Stover, ignoring all mention of the earlier encounter he had witnessed, exclaimed:

"There's been some queer goin's on around here, Mr. Speed. Have you noticed 'em?"

"No. What sort?" "Well, the other mornin' I discovered some tracks through one of Miss Jean's flower-beds."

"Tracks!" "Sure! Strange tracks. Man's tracks."

manner to reassure. "If there's any shootin' comes off, I'll be in on it."

"S—say, what's to prevent us being murdered when we're out for a run?" queried Glass.

"Me!" declared the little man. "I'll saddle my bronc an' lope along with you. We'll keep to the open country."

Instantly Speed saw the direful consequences of such a procedure, and summoned his courage to say: "No. It's very kind of you, but I shall give up training."

"What!" "I mean training on the road. I—I'll run indoors."

"Not a bit like it," declared Stover. "You'll get your daily run if we have to lay off all the punchers on the place and put 'em on as a body-guard. We can't let you get hurt. You're worth too much to us."

"Larry and I will take a chance." "Not for mine!" firmly declared the trainer. "I don't need no mineral in my system. I'm for the house."

"Then I shall run alone." "You're game," said Willie admiringly, and his auditor breathed easier, but we can't allow it."

"I—I'd rather risk my life than put you to so much trouble."

"It's only a pleasure."

"Nevertheless, I can't allow it. I'll run alone, if they kill me for it."

"Oh, they won't try to kill you. They'll probably shoot you in the legs. That's just as good, and it's a heap easier to get away with."

Speed felt his knee-caps twitching. "I've got it!" said he at last. "I'll run at night!"

Stover hesitated thoughtfully. "I don't reckon you could do your self justice that-away, but you might do your trainin' at daylight. The Centipede goes to work the same time we do, and the chances is your assassin won't miss his breakfast."

"Good! I—I'll do that!" "I sure admire your courage, but if you see anything suspicious, let us know. We'll git 'em," said Willie.

"Thank you."

The two men went out, whereupon Glass chattered:

"W—what did I tell you? It's worse'n suicide to stick around this farm. I'm going to blow."

"Where are you going?" "New York. Let's beat it!"

"Never!" exclaimed the college man, stubbornly. "We'll hear from Covington before long. Besides, I can't leave until I get some money from home."

"Let's walk."

"Don't be a fool!" "Then I've got to have a drink."

Glass started for the living-quarters, but at the door ducked quickly out of sight. "She's there!" he whispered triumphantly. "She seen me, too!"

Mariodetta was squatting in the shade opposite, her eyes fixed stolidly upon the training-quarters.

Glass allowed his mouth to open in amazement. The day was replete with surprises.

"'96!" he said, while the light of understanding came over him. "You're Cloudy-but-the-Sun-Shines?"

"Yes—Carlisle." Cloudy threw back his head, and pointed with dignity to the flag of his Alma Mater hanging upon the wall.

"By Jove, I remember that!" exclaimed Speed.

"So will Yale so long as she lives," predicted the Indian, grimly. "You crippled me in the second half—he stirred his withered leg—but I dropped it on you; and—I have not forgotten." He ground the last sentence between his teeth.

"See here, Bo—Mr. Cloudy. You don't blame us for that?" Cloudy, grunted, and threw a yellow envelope on the floor at Speed's feet.

"There is something for you," said he, while his lips curled. He turned, and limped silently to the door.

"And I tried to kid him!" breathed Glass with disgust, when the visitor had gone. "I ain't been in right since Garfield was shot."

"It's a telegram from Covington!" cried Speed, tearing open the message. "At last!"

"Thank the Lord!" Glass started forward eagerly. "When'll he be here? Quick!" Then he paused. J. Wallingford Speed had gone deathly pale, and was reeling slightly. "What's wrong?"

The college man made uncertainly for his bed, murmuring incoherently: "I—I'm sick! I'm sick, Larry!" He fell limply at full length, and groaned, "Call the race off!"

Glass snatched the message from his employer's nerveless fingers, and read, with bulging eyes, as follows: "J. Wallingford Speed, Flying Heart Ranch, Kidder, N. M."

"Don't tip off. Am in jail Omaha. Looks like ten days."

"CULVER COVINGTON."

The trainer uttered a cry like that of a wounded animal.

"Call it off, Larry," moaned the Hope of the Flying Heart. "I've been poisoned!"

"Poisoned, eh?" said the fat man, tremulously. "Poisoned! Nix! Not with me!" He walked firmly across the room, flung back the lid of Speed's athletic trunk, and began to paw through it feverishly. One after another he selected three heavy sweaters, then laid strong hands upon his protegee and jerked him to his feet.

"Sick, eh? Here, get into these!" "What do you mean, Lawrence?" inquired his victim.

"If you get sick, I die." Glass opened the first sweater, and half smothered his protegee with it. "Hurry up! You're going into training!"

CHAPTER XI.

THAT was a terrible hour for J. Wallingford Speed. As for Larry, once he had grasped the full significance of the telegram, he became a different person. Some fierce electric charge wrought a chemical alteration in his every fiber; he became a dominating, iron-willed autocrat, obsessed by the one idea of his own preservation, and not hesitating to use physical force when force became necessary to lessen his peril.

Repeatedly Speed folded his arms over his stomach, rocked in the throes of anguish, and wailed that he was perishing of cramps; the trainer only snorted with derision. When he refused to don the clothes selected for him, Glass fell upon him like a raging grizzly.

"You won't, eh? We'll see!" Then Speed took refuge in anger, but the other cried:

"Never mind the hysterics, Bo. You're going to run off some blubber to-day."

"But I have to go riding!" "Not a chance!"

"I tell you I'll run when I come back," maintained the youth, almost tearfully beseeching. "They're waiting for me."

"Let 'em gallop—you can run along side."

"With all these sweaters? I'd have a sunstroke."

"It's the best thing for you. I never thought of that."

As Glass forced his protegee toward the house, the other young people appeared clad for their excursion; their horses were tethered to the porch. And it was an ideal day for a ride—warm, bright, and inviting.

Lobsters That Do Not Boil Red.

Native French lobsters are growing scarce as the result of a series of epidemics, and an attempt is being made to introduce those from Roumania, Hungary and Russia. But these foreign lobsters have little flesh on them and turn a dull color when they are boiled.

To give them if possible the attractive scarlet tint, appetizing odor and delicious taste of the native Professor Leger is making researches in his laboratory of pisciculture in the University of Grenoble, and he hopes, in naturalizing the foreign species, to give them some at least of the French characteristics.

Lord Wolverhampton's complaint of the burdens added to the cares of heads of departments in official life by bad handwriting recalls an amusing incident which occurred when the House of Lords was in committee on the reform bill of 1867. The clerk of the house intimated that an amendment had been handed in, the writing of which was so illegible that he was unable to say what it was about or who had written it. It was then discovered that Lord Lyttelton was the author, and it turned out to be a proposal disfranchising all persons who could not write!—London Answers

HOLE IN THE FENCE

By WALTER JOSEPH DELANEY.

"The hole in the fence!" murmured Wade Rayner, in his sleep.

"Poor fellow!" spoke David Rose, leaning solicitously over his fever-stricken comrade. "He is thinking of home—dreaming of the dear old spot we may neither of us ever see again."

It was a chill, dreary scene, one calculated to banish the remotest suggestion of home and its comforts, its serenity, its fond strong shelter.

An Alaskan winter held a grim frozen landscape locked in the embrace of pitiless ice and snow. Where a shelf of rock protruded the two prospectors had sought refuge the evening previous—ill, half-famished, worn out.

It had been at the suggestion of Rose, the older of the two, that his chosen friend had invested his all in an outfit and joined him in braving the rigors of the great Nome trail in quest of the wonderful gold fields that were making princes of paupers daily.

Thus far it had been all experiment, disappointment, vain fruitless effort. Three days previous, however, they had met a sick crippled miner going home to die. He told of a partly developed claim upon the Yukon, workable the year round. He showed his papers of ownership, he told a seemingly straight story. The partners ventured their last capital, a bare five hundred dollars, and had started out to locate their treasure.

And now, for twenty-four hours poor Wade had been stricken with fever, delicious a part of the time, no medicine available, not even a decent shelter.

But he was dreaming, and the glories of his fancy kept at bay all the grim realities surrounding him. The hole in the fence! How it came back to him—the break in the palisade at the edge of the home village that seemed to shut in that little world to itself. Beyond it was the great unknown of boyhood's days. Even when he and Rose had left on their great adventure, to the broken barrier May and Ida Woolson had come. May to kiss him a sorrowful good-by, for they were engaged, Ida to shyly bid Rose good luck as she promised to write to him.

In the vagaries of delirium that rude board fence was a frame of the rarest gold for the picture of the last time Wade had seen the girl he loved.

Rose covered up his restless charge as best he might. He too was thinking of his past dreams of the wealth he would some day lay at the feet of Ida with his heart's best love. Moodily as he reflected he watched the snow begin a new downward swirl. His soul sickened as he reflected what another foot of snow would mean in that sterile wilderness.

And then—chaos! It had come so suddenly that afterwards neither of the two dauntless prospectors could have described the primal catastrophe or its later developments. David Rose seemed to see the great mountain slide into a plunging distorted mass. In the arms of an avalanche he was carried thousands of feet to be flung senseless into a frightful chasm. To his unconscious comrade it was a dim sense of motion and then nothingness.

Six months after that event a thin ragged man entered the trading post at Vitma, with a brief mournful story and a simple earnest request.

"Where from?" the superintendent had asked him.

"Picked up after an avalanche, my partner gone, penniless, sick, friendless, and taken in by an Indian family. I have tramped it 350 miles to get this far and beg work to start on my way home."

Thus Wade Rayner, this as an end of his hard earned savings. This the home coming with the bright yellow gold that had lured him to peril and suffering, and most mournful of all, the loss of the best friend he had in the world.

"There's a pack train starting next week," explained the trader. "It's all tramp, for the dogs are light, the trail bad and the sledges carrying all they can stand. Will you try it?"

"I would crawl over the trail on my hands and knees, but I must get home!"

"We'll help you do it," said the superintendent, but in his secret mind he doubted if the applicant would survive one-half the journey planned.

Ambition was dead in Wade Rayner, hope pretty near, but love!—poor, ill, beggared, still did love seem to shine, a beckoning beacon at the far distant end of the lonely desert trail.

At last! Heaven seemed near when finally the weary pack train reached the first post of civilization. Wade Rayner had received a little package of gold dust for his services as an attendant on the train. In an inside pocket he carried two minute nuggets. They represented all he had found in the land where he had expected to gather the yellow treasure all along the highways.

He converted these small possessions into current coin. Then a train for the east. More dreams, rapid, eager, suspenseful, and one evening—home!

The train ran five miles from the village and he had to cover the rest of the distance on foot. How strange to near the old sand pits, the creek stretch and then the hole in the fence! Ah! beyond that the loved one. Here had he seen May Woolson last. She seemed to beckon him on and he crossed lots to the little garden surrounding the Woolson home.

The house was lighted. How glad-some, how welcoming it looked! And there was a light in May's own room—and May herself.

She stood before a mirror dressed in bridal attire, wedding flowers in her hair. A chill struck the heart of the gazer.

"She believes me dead and—"

He tottered away. A man passed him by, stared at him, went on, looked back. In a vague baffling tremor Wade Rayner made his way along back to the hole in the fence. There, leaning against the aged timbers, he looked out on the dark world beyond. Its cheerlessness seemed all there was left for him.

"Another's!" he breathed. "It must be true. I will go. What right have I, a beggar, a broken man, to intrude upon her welfare?"

He turned at the sound of foot-steps. The man who had passed him with a stare was hurrying with a white robe toward him.

"I was not mistaken, Miss Woolson," he said. "See, it is, it must be—"

"Wade! oh, my lost darling, Wade!" and May Woolson was in his arms. He had come back—oh, that was all, enough, everything—she sobbed out her heart's devotion. Beggared?—oh, what was that against the flowing wealth of love! love! love. He was ill—she would nurse him, she would win back brightness to the dimmed eyes, courage for the wavering soul. Come! come! to waiting hearts—sister, friends, partner—

Partner! Then David Rose? returned after searching far and wide for the dear friend he gave up as dead. But rich—the great claim! He had gone to it, sold it, and the share of his dead partner safely set aside.

But she in bridal costume? Oh, how her glad heart laughed! My dear! my dear!—the attire for the wedding of Rose and Ida.

A bride's joy, upon this, the joyous night of his return, his only, and now! this golden hour, and the very angels seemed to sing in echo of her pure, ravishing joy!

FIRST REWARD OF AMBITION

Polish Writer Tells of Emotion Produced by Sight of and Contact With an English Ship.

Joseph Conrad has told in his book, "A personal Record," how he happened to become an English writer. What is perhaps not so well known is how he, a Polish aristocrat, entered the British marine. From his fifteenth year, though he "had not six words" of the language in which he afterwards wrote "Nostromo" and "The Mirror of the Sea," his ambition was to be an English seaman. After much opposition he began to see his way clear and he has recorded his emotion when his hand first touched an English ship. "There are ships," he says, "I have known well by sight, whose name I have forgotten; but the name of that ship seen once so many years ago in the clear flush of a cold, pale sunrise. I have not forgotten. How could I—the first English ship on whose side I ever laid my hand! The name—I read it letter by letter on the bow—James Westcott. Not very romantic, you will say. The name of a very considerable, well-known, and universally respected North-country ship-owner, I believe. James Westcott! What better name could an honorable hard-working ship have? To me the very grouping of the letters is alive with romantic feeling of her reality as I saw her floating motionless and borrowing an ideal grace from the austere purity of the light."

Plain Facts.

"Washington threw a dollar across the Potomac."

"That feat was overrated."

"Who ever excelled it?"

"Washington himself, the time he threw 3,000 troops across the Delaware."

That's Why.

The Lawyer—If marriages are made in heaven, why are not divorces made there, too?

The Client—Because it takes a lawyer to get a man a divorce, and I don't suppose there are any lawyers up there.

SMILES

THE OLD, OLD GAME.

At nine p. m. they were seated at opposite ends of the couch. At 9:30 they were slightly nearer to each other. At ten o'clock they were only three feet apart. At 10:30 there was scarcely any perceptible space between them.

The young man spoke. "Has your father gone to bed?" he asked.

"Yes, Tom."

"Has your mother gone to bed?"

"Yes, Tom."

"Do you think your little brother is under the couch?"

"No, Tom."

The young man heaved a sigh of relief.

"It's your move," he said.

Reparation.

John Butts, Sr.—I want to leave my property to my two sons. One-tenth to my youngest son, John Butts, and nine-tenths to my eldest son, Royal Chesterfield Chauncey De Peyster Butts.

Family Lawyer—H'm! Do you think that's quite fair?

John Butts, Sr.—Yes. I want to make some kind of reparation to Royal for allowing his mother to give him such a damnable name.—Puck.

In Colonial Days.

The Settler's Wife—Why should we go any further into the wilderness? Why not build our cabin here where there are eight or ten families already?

The Settler—Gadzooks! What wouldst thou? A couple of hundred years from now there would be folks around here blowing that our family isn't the oldest in the place.—Puck.

Beautiful Names.

"We must have a beautiful name for the baby," said the fond mother. "Something that sounds like poetry and is not at all commonplace."

"Well," replied the fond father, "I'm doing my best to help you make a selection. Here's a list of the names of all the apartment houses in town."

FASHION'S WHIM.

He—These high collars you women are wearing are like financial stock. She—How so?

He—Subject to rises and falls.

Good for Anything.

My friends, a great deal might be done to help the teething. If we could but teach a kid deep breathing.

It's Coming.

There's a lucky young fellow. He's never known a bit of trouble in all his life.

"Well, he soon will. He's going to marry my daughter."

Threatened Men.

"Do you think a man whose life has been threatened should be permitted to carry a gun?"

"No. It would spoil the appearance of the game to see the umpire standing around with a six-shooter in his pocket."

Out of Sympathy.

"What happened to the clock in the labor hall?"

"Oh, it wouldn't strike any more, so the boys pitched it out and got a new one."

Vacation.

"Hello, old chap; still doing newspaper work?"

"Yes, on the Daily Black-Mail."

"On the regular staff?"

"Nope, on space yet—what you might call a penny-maligner, you know."—Life.

Bacon—I see electricity generated in Sweden is delivered in Copenhagen.

Egbert—This parcel post system is really wonderful.

Adjusting Records.

Mrs. Wombat called me in to see her new graphophone. She's all puffed up about it.

"How do you know she's puffed up?"

"Well, she was putting on airs."

Putting It Off.

"He's a mean man."

"How so?"

"When his little girl begs for an ice cream sundae, he asks her if she wouldn't rather have a gold watch when she's nineteen."

De Quiz—What do you think of the modern game of football, doctor?

Doctor—I think, sir, that the pugilist ment fits the crime.

Classy Sort.

Still waters may run deep. But in high life we find that swaggers people keep the carbonated kind.

Efficiency Expert.

"James," said the efficiency expert annoyed by the cheerful habit which his chauffeur had of whistling while at his work, "you should remember that the greatest fortunes nowadays are made from the by-products of waste. Hereafter when you whistle whistle in the tires and save me the expense of a pump."—Harper's Weekly.

She Caught Him.

The young girl confronted him with flashing eyes.

"What did you mean," she demanded, "by kissing me as I lay asleep in the hammock this morning?"

"But," protested the youth, "I only took one."

IMPROVE BY TOP-WORKING FRUIT TREES

Heavy Bearing Tree Ready for Pickers.

In a most interesting and instructive treatise on top-grafting fruit trees, Prof. O. B. Whipple, of the Colorado experiment station, says it is becoming more and more apparent that certain localities and soils are peculiarly adapted to growing particular kinds and even varieties of fruit.

Commercial fruit-growing localities are making their reputation by being able to grow their few varieties well. There comes a time then when the grower will have to solve the problem as to what to do with the undesirable varieties. Shall he pull them out or graft them over to better varieties?

It has been proven by long experience that if properly done the grafting over of old trees by top working brings quicker returns than the replanting of young trees. In fact, it is not uncommon to see a fairly good crop on the three-year-old top of a top worked tree.

Trees properly worked over give crops which are sometimes more desirable than trees of the same variety grown from first class nursery stock.

Top working, as a means of establishing a weak-growing variety on a stronger root system than its own is now coming into favor. For instance, the Rome Beauty, when on its own roots, is on the best soil an indifferent grower, but when worked on some strong-growing stump it makes a very satisfactory tree.

The practice of grafting is not a mysterious art as many suppose, but is so simple that any careful orchardist can and should do it himself. All common fruit trees can easily be budded or grafted.

The apple and pear may be inter-grafted upon each other and this is true of the peach, plum, apricot and almond. However, such wholesale inter-grafting is not in practice, and the pear and apple never make a good union.

Peach grafts start vigorously upon apricots and plums upon the peach root. Professor Whipple says he has seen peach trees top-worked to peach trees with perfect unions and the tender buds bearing excellent crops.

Growth in diameter of the tree only takes place in a very small region between the bark and the sap wood. This part of the stem is called the cambium and in this thin layer of tissue the cells are still active while the activity of each succeeding layer on each side grows less and less.

The important point in grafting is to see that the cambium layers of the stock and the cion are matched at some point. When the growth is active we say the bark "peels." Budding is done during this period, not only because the ease with which the bark separates from the wood simplifies the work of inserting the bud, but as the growth is more active the tissues of the bud and the stock are more likely to unite.

It does not pay to graft trees which show poor growth, and it seldom pays to top work any crab. It is also questionable as to whether it pays to top work stone fruits. While good tops may be grown on either peach, apricot or almond, it is doubtful whether these crops will bear much quicker returns than young trees set in the place of the old ones.

There are various methods of grafting, the most common in the west being cleft and crotch grafting. These operations are simple and are known to most orchardists.

In cleft grafting, the limb is sawed off squarely, the stub split down about two inches with the grafting chisel and the cleft is wedged open with the wedge on the back of a knife and the cion inserted as a wedge.

The first bud should be left a little below the top of the wedge, cutting the edge of the wedge opposite the bud a little thinner than the other. The cion is then driven firmly into place with the lower bud to be outside and a little below the top of the cleft.

It is important that the inner bark on the outer edge of the wedge should be brought in contact with the inner bark on the stub. It is between these parts that the union takes place.

Kerf grafting is almost the same as cleft grafting only the stub is prepared by saw cuts instead of splitting. These are made on opposite sides of the stub, and trimmed to thin V-shaped grooves with a saddle's knife, the cion is then trimmed to fit, driven firmly into place and waxed as in cleft grafting.

It is not good practice to remove the whole top of the tree the first year and graft all the stubs. Often this proves too much for the tree and it falls even after the grafts have made a good start. They may linger two or three years and then die.

A better plan is to cut away only enough limbs to set cion for a good top, generally about half of the tree. Working of more stubs results into dense top, or, necessitates their removal later.

The remaining limbs may be shortened, but some foliage is needed to protect the stubs and trunk from sun scald as well as to supply nourishment.

Budding is another method of putting a new top on young tree. The buds are generally set from six to twelve inches from the main stem, depending on the formation of the head. Two-year-old trees may be budded the following fall.

As any stem as large as a lead pencil may be budded quite easily. Buds may be set during the month of July, August and September. Fall budding should generally be given the preference over spring budding. In fall budding the buds are taken from the current year's growth and these may be inserted in the wood of one, two or three year's growth.

Heavier bark makes the insertion of the buds difficult. Place the bud on the shady side of the stock. A T-shaped incision is made in the bark and the corners of the bark below the transverse cut raised to facilitate starting the bud.

The bud is then cut from the bud stick by starting the knife half an inch below the bud, cutting under and about the same distance above. The cut should be deep enough to leave a small shield of wood.

The bud is then shipped into place and well wrapped with raffia or soft wrapping twine, and this wrapping should be cut when the bud has united with the stock, which is usually within ten days or two weeks.

Care must be observed that the wrapping does not cut into the bark as too much pressure interferes with the flow of sap and tends to throw the bud into premature growth.

The buds set in August and September should remain dormant over winter and the following spring, as soon as the buds on the top of the stock begin to push out, the original top of the stock is cut away.

Vegetable Garden.

Farmers and fruit growers who are troubled to make ends meet, will find that every day's work put into the garden to the extent of providing a full supply of choice vegetables for the table, the year round, will improve the appearance of the balance sheet at the end of the year.

Prevent Bursting Heads.

Cabbage heads may be prevented from bursting by giving the stalks a jerk sufficient to break some of the roots and disturb the root system. This retards development.

Social Forms and Entertainment

New Bird Game.

This is a novel way of giving a "bird party," the idea is given by Martha Burr Banks.

Supply the guests with cards bearing as many members as there are birds portrayed, by various methods on the walls. These examples will show how the names of the birds are demonstrated, each illustration is numbered, so the guest may write his guess down opposite the corresponding number on the card. It is well to attach pencils to the cards and to start the contest after all have arrived. A half hour is sufficient time to allow for the guessing.

Blackbird: A bird cut from black paper. Redwing: A home with a wing painted red. Flicker: A candle blowing in the wind. Highhole: A hole in the top of the paper. Cuckoo: A cuckoo and two o's. Woodpecker: A match, a peck measure, and an R. Meadow lark: Children romping in a meadow. Yellow-breasted chat: Two men, with yellow shirt-fronts, talking together. Brown thrasher: A school-master in brown, with a rod in his hand. Cardinal: A church dignitary. Crow: A cock in the act of crowing. Hawk: A peddler. Swallow: A child eating. Swift: A boy running. Cross-bill: A bill on which are written these words: "Pay at once!" Spoon-bill: A spoon and a bird's beak. Blue-jay: A blue J. Fox sparrow: A fox and the letters S and P above an arrow. Song sparrow: A bar of a song, a spar, and a man rowing. Junco: A junk cart and an O. Bluebird: A bird with drooping head and wings. Wagtail: A dog. Maryland yellow-throat: A map of Maryland and a stork with a yellow neck. Chippy: A man chopping wood. Flycatcher: A piece of fly-paper. Redstart: The word "start" written in red ink. Indigo bunting: A scrap of blue bunting. Kinglet: A child wearing a crown. Pewee: A small P. Hummingbird: A spinning top. The names of other birds, such as catbird, oven bird, nut-hatch, snowflake, yellow-hammer, brown creeper, kingfisher, sandpiper, chickadee, etc., will suggest their own illustrations.

Have chicken in some form (sandwiches are always acceptable) and feed or cream in shape of birds would be appropriate. It will be easy to manage "bird" cookies and perhaps the confectioneer will make nests of spun sugar in which candy eggs may be placed.

These would be charming at each place on the table. There are many delightful as well as inexpensive bird books to give for prizes.

A Field Day Party.

This is just the season for a "Field Day" party with all sorts of athletic sports. The guests may be any number, but twenty-four is just about right for the competition. This affair is fine for children, young people and those who are older grown.

Egg and spoon races are great fun, as well as the "needle and thread" contest. Then there should be running races, forty yard dashes, interspersed with three legged and sack races.

Rope climbing is most laughable as well as the merry "obstacle" race.

A time-keeper, referee and a "judge" add to the interest and the prizes may be as many and elaborate as the hostess wishes. In some of the races blue and red ribbons may be awarded.

Perhaps tennis, croquet, archery and baseball matches may be arranged.

Refreshments or supper should be served on the lawn or porch. Such a party as this was recently given at a country place called "Glimmerglens."

It would be a jolly thing to have the guests conveyed to and from the place in a hay wagon drawn by four horses. Provide horns and have bells on the harness.

It is needless to say that outing suits should be worn. From four to ten are good hours, but the time should be set to suit the convenience of the largest number.

Unique Card Party.

Any game of cards may be played that the hostess prefers or that is popular in the town. Request the guests to dress in costumes, representing either the face or suit cards. For instance, have two five of diamonds, one lady and one a man, so that when all have arrived partners may be chosen for the first game. The prizes may be a handsome deck of cards in a case, a book on card games, ferns growing in a pretty jar, a bit of brass or a piece of pottery.

The score cards may be cut out of cardboard in the shape of diamonds, hearts, clubs and spades; the markers may be of these same figures, cut out of thin colored paper and gummed a few days before they are used, so they will be dry.

Serve hot bouillon in cups, patties of chicken and sweetbreads, salad, orange sherbet, small cakes, coffee, nuts, bon-bons. If ice cream is preferred, use the brick, cut in thin slices, ornament with tiny hearts, diamonds, clubs and spades cut from citron and candied cherries.

MME MERRI.

On Parasols.

Fine shadow lace decorates some of the daintiest parasols, and it is put on in many pretty ways. Sometimes tiny lace squares are inserted in the silk, but in a number of cases the lace is put on in the shape of a frill and caught here and there with a tiny pink rosebud. When the parasol is simple and of one color it is a pretty fancy to have the edge outlined with tiny closely packed silk blossoms.

Wait From French Jurymen.

In France, as well as in England, jurymen have their grievances. The latest can easily be remedied. The French minister of justice has received an address signed by citizens figuring on the Paris jury lists, protesting against the bare appearance of the courts where they have to sit. They point out that if tired of looking at the judges, counsel, witnesses and other parties to a suit—they turn their eyes upon the walls, nothing but an artistic paper meets their gaze. In order to relieve this deadly monotony they beg that a print of Prud'hon's famous picture, "Justice in Pursuit of Crime," may be hung in each court.

WATERY BLISTERS ON FACE

Smithville, Ind.—"Six months ago our baby girl, one year old, had a few red pimples come on her face which gradually spread causing her face to become very irritated and a fiery red color. The pimples on the child's face were at first small watery blisters, just a small blotch on the skin. She kept scratching at this until in a few days her whole cheeks were fiery red color and instead of the little blisters the skin was cracked and scaly looking and seemed to itch and burn very much.

"We used a number of remedies which seemed to give relief for a short time then leave her face worse than ever. Finally we got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. I washed the child's face with very warm water and Cuticura Soap, then applied the Cuticura Ointment very lightly. After doing this about three times a day the itching and burning seemed entirely gone in two days' time. Inside of two weeks' time her face seemed well. That was eight months ago and there has been no return of the trouble." (Signed) Mrs. A. K. Wooden, Nov. 4, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Banana Eaters.

Americans used to be called a nation of pie eaters. Today a more appropriate term would be a nation of banana eaters. The United States takes more than two-thirds of the bananas shipped to the handlers in the world.

Part of this pre-eminence in banana consumption is due to geography; the source of supply on the Caribbean is almost at our doors. Part is due to accident; a Boston skipper introduced the American public to this tropical fruit while it was still unknown in Europe. Whatever reason one may choose to give, the United States is the world's chief banana market, and though the use of this fruit is increasing abroad, the American boy remains the Jamaica grower's best friend.

Extremely Modest.

"Rather a modest, retiring fellow in a crowd, isn't he?"
"Yep. Pretty modest. Reminds me a whole lot of a governor on a state occasion surrounded by his staff of colonels—in uniform."—St. Louis Republic.

Hard Luck, Indeed!

"How's your son, the lawyer, who went to Texas, getting on?"
"Badly, poor fellow. He's in jail."
"How's that?"
"He was retained by a horse thief to defend him, and he made such a good plea that the judge held him as accessory."—Lippincott's.

Its Advantages.

Haste Unnecessary.

"Hurry up that order!" said a traveler in a railroad eating house down south. "I'm afraid I'll miss my train!"

"Yes, sah, boss!" the waiter answered as he hurried off.

After what seemed an almost interminable wait to the traveler, he returned with the food. As he set it down he asked:

"Is you de gentlemen what feared he'd miss de train?"

"Yes," was the reply.
"Well, you needn't be feared ob dat, sah, no mo'."

"Good! Is it late?" the traveler inquired.

"No, sah, it's done gone!" was the waiter's affable and reassuring response.

Interesting Beginning.

A fair graduate was conversing with a young gentleman who had been presented to her after the commencement exercises.

"Well," she sighed happily. "I am an A B now. Of course you have a degree?"

"Yes," he replied, "but I am only a B."

The fair grad pondered. The degree was puzzling.

"Why, what is that?" she asked.

"Bachelor," he said.—New York Times.

Strength

Does not come from exercise alone, but also from the food one eats.

For real strength there is no better food than

Being partially predigested, Grape-Nuts is quickly converted into strength for body and brain—the power to "do things."

"There's a Reason"

It's The Best Polish I Ever Used

That's What Every One Says Who Tries

Black Silk Stove Polish

DON'T imagine for a moment that all brands of stove polish are the same. Don't get the idea that to keep a nice glossy shine on your stove you must black it every few days. It's not a question of oft-repeated application. It's a question of the stove polish to use.

Black Silk Stove Polish is so much better than other stove polishes that there is absolutely no comparison—it is in a class all by itself. It makes a brilliant glossy shine that doesn't rub or dust off. It cleans the iron—becomes a part of the stove. It makes old stoves look like new and lasts four times as long as any other shine.

Get a can and give it a trial. Try it on your parlor stove, your cook stove, or your gas range. If you do not find it the best stove polish you ever used, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. Black Silk Stove Polish has been made by the same formula and sold under one name for 30 years.

Here is what some of the ladies write us

"I sent you for a can of Black Silk Stove Polish and found it so much better than any I had ever used that I asked my hardware dealer to order a supply. He did so, and is now selling nearly everyone in the place your polish. I had no idea there could be such a difference in stove polishes."

"I was visiting friends and they used Black Silk Stove Polish on their stoves. It made the best shine I ever saw, and after blacking, the polish did not rub or dust off. It is way ahead of any polish I have ever used."

Ask Your Dealer for Black Silk Stove Polish and refuse a counterfeit brand. Costs you no more than the ordinary kind, so why not have the best. Made in liquid or paste—one quality.

Black Silk Stove Polish Works, Sterling, Ill.

Use Black Silk Air-Drying Iron Enamel for grates, registers, stove pipes, etc. Prevents rusting. Not affected by heat or cold. Produces a permanent glossy black surface. Can, with brush for applying enamel, only 25 cents. Ask your dealer.

Use Black Silk Metal Polish for nickel, brass, silver-ware or tinware. It has no equal for use on automobiles.

Once Upon a Time

ONCE there was really no way out of it for the farmer. Plodding home from the field with his team at close of day, he saw before him the waiting small jobs about the house, barn, and yard, jobs that took time and labor, and never seemed to end. There was water to be pumped, wood to be sawed, various machines to be run by hand. It was a dreary prospect—but that was once upon a time. Today he lets the engine do it.

Buy from the I H C engine line. I H C engines are built right and consistently all through, to work efficiently for years. Whether you want it for sawing, pumping, spraying, electric light plant, for running separator, or repair shop, or for all sorts of tiresome energy-wasting small farm jobs, you have need of an I H C Oil and Gas Engine

An I H C engine will develop from ten to thirty per cent more than its rated capacity. Perfect combustion makes it economical in fuel consumption. Its simplicity makes it practically trouble-proof.

I H C engines are built in vertical, horizontal, stationary, portable, skidded, air-cooled and water-cooled styles. The line includes sawing, pumping and spraying outfits. Sizes from 1 to 50-horse power. They operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, naphtha, distillate and alcohol. I H C oil tractors range in size from 6-12 to 30-60-horse power, for plowing, threshing, etc.

Have the I H C local dealer demonstrate the engine to you and explain its various points. Get catalogues from him, or write the
