MET WITH AN ACCIDENT

William Bone, of Sylvan, Injured by Freight Train Tuesday Afternoon.

William Bone, of Sylvan, aged about 75 years, was struck by a west bound freight train on the Michigan Central railroad about two o'clock Tuesday afternoon and seriously injured.

Mr. Bone, who owns the farm known as the Kellogg place, was on the crossing that leads to his woods on the south side of the track to assist his son in cutting wood and did not hear the approaching train. As he is badly crippled he would have had considerable difficulty in getting out of the way. He was thrown from the north track to the south track and was badly bruised, but no bones seem to have been broken. A gash was cut on the left side of his head that required six stitches to close it up, his left arm was injured at the elbow and his left side badly bruised.

Mr. Bone's son was on the south side of the track and the train crew stopped their train and assisted the son to carry the injured man to his home on the north side of the highway near the scene of the accident. As Mr. Bone is well advanced in years it is feared that his injuries may prove fatal.

Arrested on a Serious Charge.

Alphonse Lemble, a business man of Ann Arbor, caused the arrest of his wife, Mrs. Iva Lemble, and J. Walter Hill, on the charge of adultery. Mrs. Lemble was placed under arrest in Jackson Monday afternoon, and Mr. Hill was arrested in Ann Arbor Monday evening by a Jackson officer and taken to Jackson and both were placed in the county jail.

According to the complaint the couple spent two nights and one day the last of the past week together in a Jackson hotel. Mrs. Lemble has been married twice, and is the mother two children by her former marriage and she was divorced from her first husband. She has been married to her present husband about five years. Her parents are residents of Ann Arbor.

Mr. Hill was a resident of Chelsea for several years and left here when the ball bearing plant was moved to Ann Arbor, and he is in the employ of the Hoover Steel Ball Co.

The couple were arraigned in Jackson on Tuesday and their examination will be held on Monday, February 16. Bail was placed at $300 for each.

Gives Indemnity Bond to County

On Monday of this week Mayor McKenzie and City Clerk Granger of Ann Arbor executed a bond for $5,000 to the board of supervisors of Washtenaw county, to indemnify the latter in case any of the vagrants or drunks whom the city has requested should be put to work under the street commissioner, and under guard of a deputy sheriff, should be hurt. In the bond reference is made to the resolution passed by the board of supervisors on October 8, 1913, asking the sheriff to put these prisoners to work.

Both the city and county authorities look for a considerable decrease in the number of tramps to be dealt with, as the result of the squelching of certain members of the constabulary in their efforts to fill the county jail and their own pockets.

George H. Purchase.

George Hayward Purchase was born in Lyndon, Washtenaw county, Michigan, May 22, 1860, and died at his home in the Alhambra apartments, Detroit, Tuesday, February 10, 1914.

His early boyhood was spent on his father's farm. He attended the district school, then the Chelsea high school, and later working his way through and graduating from the State Normal college at Ypsilanti in 1885. A few years were spent in teaching in northern Michigan, where he married Mary C. Ostrander, of Calumet, August 14, 1889. They made their home in Marquette where he was engaged in the insurance business. In a few years his business called him to the Pacific coast for a year, after which he returned and has since made his home in Detroit. Six years ago he purchased the Alhambra apartments.

He fought a hopeless disease for fourteen years. We say hopeless, yet he was always hopeful and cheerful. No one ever visited his sickroom without having to smile at his amusing stories and cheering thoughts. He is the first to go of a family of twelve children of the late William and Maria Purchase. The family circle is broken.

He leaves to mourn, his wife, her aged father, Edwin R. Ostrander, one son, Edwin Kenneth, eight sisters and three brothers. His funeral will be held at the home of his sister, Mrs. N. F. Prudden, Friday, February 13, at 2 o'clock.

CAR WAS WRECKED

East of the D. J. & C. Chelsea Waiting Room Sunday Evening.

A wreck occurred about 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening on the D. J. & C. electric line just east of the Chelsea waiting room. The car was a local west bound and was due here at 7:25, but was five or ten minutes late.

At the switch near the residence of Mrs. G. Ahnemiller, the front trucks followed the main track, but the rear trucks took the siding and the body of the car was drawn from them. The rear end of the car was drawn along the side of the track for some distance and came in contact with two guy poles on the north side of track which were broken off close to the ground. The steps of the car were torn off and some of the windows were broken. The car was brought to a stop near the east end of the freight dock.

H. S. Holmes was a passenger on the car which was fairly well filled with passengers, but none of them were reported as being injured.

A wrecking crew was brought here and it was between eleven and twelve o'clock before the wreck was entirely cleared up. Passengers on both east and west bound cars were transferred at the Chelsea waiting room and the cars returned to Jackson and Ann Arbor.

Has Plans for Great Corn Contest.

County School Commissioner Essery has started to work already on plans for the next Washtenaw county corn contest and is working for the organization of a Corn Growers' Association in this county. In discussing the Mr. Essery says:

"For five years Pomona Grange and subordinate Granges of the county have conducted a corn contest for boys and girls of the county and considerable interest has been aroused.

"I have acted as chairman of the corn clubs because of my connection with the schools of the county. Last year 47 exhibited corn but in 1912, there were over 60 entries. At no exhibit have all the townships been represented. The time has come to broaden out and make it truly a county affair.

"Washtenaw county is in the corn belt of the state and I think it can advertise itself as such by the plan I have in mind. It is this:

"Chelsea banks, business men and those interested in better corn and more corn should offer cash premiums for exhibits of ten ears by boys and girls 8 to 13 years old and 14 to 18 years old inclusive. The premiums suggested are $10, $5, $3 and two $1 premiums for each class.

"This should be done also by the other towns of the county where local contests will be held.

"Each exhibit should be judged by a representatives of the Michigan Agricultural college.

"The exhibitors getting premiums should then send their prize ten ears to the county exhibit. This will increase the interest and also help to advertise each locality. The prize winners at the county corn show would then exhibit at the state corn show.

"The territory allotted to each town would be as nearly equal as it is possible to make it and would be about two and one-half townships each.

"The matter of premiums and general plan of each corn contest would be under the control of the locality getting it up.

"Elementary agriculture is in the rural course of study. For that reason and also that we may have a part in creating a greater interest in farming and securing better results from it, each of us should be willing to enter into any plan that looks to that end. The time has arrived when Washtenaw should have a Corn Growers' Association."

INVESTIGATORS IN STRIKE ZONE

CONGRESSMEN AT WORK ON INQUIRY IN COPPER COUNTRY.

WITNESSES FOR STRIKERS ON STAND FIRST.

Officials of Union Tell of Conditions That Led to the Calling Out of the Men By Referendum Vote.

Hancock, Mich.—The congressional investigators have been at work since Monday examining witnesses. It will require several weeks for them to complete their inquiry into the conditions in the copper country and concerning the great strike. The witnesses on behalf of the strikers are being examined first.

O. N. Hilton, counsel for the Western Federation of Miners, read into the record notations on miners' pay envelopes to show the low monthly wage earned by some workers under the contract system.

Deductions for such items as "hospital, store and board" were shown on some of the envelopes.

"We will prove," Mr. Hilton said, "that in many instances the mining company would take out of the employees pay the amount owed it and then would pay the storekeeper and the boarding housekeeper from what was left."

The exhibits covered a wide period, some dating back as far as 1898.

At the suggestion of Mr. Casey, of the committee, A. W. Kerr, assisting Mr. Hilton, explained the system of pay used by the companies. All underground workers except the miner, he said, were paid a day wage. The miner worked on contract.

William J. Rickard, president of the Calumet local of the Western Federation of Miners, also testified.

Mr. Howell of the committee asked the witness if a miner frequently was not able to make more by contract than on a fixed daily wage.

Rickard said he could during the term of his contract if he happened to strike a good vein, but in that case he was cut down when the time came to make a new contract. It was for that reason, he said, that the men demanded a minimum wage of $3 a day.

"What would happen if a miner refused a contract tendered him by a mine boss?" asked Mr. Kerr.

"He would have to work somewhere else," the witness replied. He added that a miner who took such action would find difficulty in finding employment in this section because most of the mines were owned or controlled by one corporation, the Calumet & Hecla. He added that a man of his age could not afford to leave one company's employ because other companies would not hire men who were more than 40 years old.

The witness told about the miners' local unions and their connection with the Western Federation. He said demands had been made on the mining companies by the locals and they had been ignored. Then a strike was ordered by referendum vote, although federation officers opposed it. Rickard said the installation of the one-man drill had put an added burden on the miners and trammers, who formerly were compelled to handle 16 or 18 cars of rock daily were forced to move 24.

"You think then that the companies have been increasing their efficiency at the expense of the men?" asked the chairman.

"Certainly do," was the emphatic response.

NEW CHARTER FOR DETROIT BEATEN

OF FORTY-ONE THOUSAND VOTES PROPOSED LAW LOSES BY 9,293.

FIVE WARDS GIVE SMALL FAVORABLE MAJORITIES.

Vote Cast Is Little More Than Half of the Presidential Election of 1912—About as Predicted By Workers.

Detroit.—The proposed new charter was buried under an avalanche of votes on Tuesday.

Complete returns show a majority of 9,293 against the charter. The totals are as follows: Yes, 15,952; no, 25,245.

The vote cast was little more than half that shown in the presidential election in 1912. It compared favorably with votes cast in similar special elections in the past and was about what had been predicted by men active in the charter campaign. The total vote was 41,197.

Five downtown wards spoke feebly in favor of the charter. A sixth one (the tenth), beat the charter by a narrow margin. But the 12 other wards figuratively put the document under foot and waltzed on it. In the eleventh ward the charter got only 17 per cent of the vote cast. In the ninth it had but 18 per cent; the thirteenth and seventh wards, 20 per cent; the fifteenth ward, 25 per cent. In other words the charter was beaten by more than five votes to one; in the fifth ward the vote was four to one against.

Army Aviator Is Killed.

San Diego, Cal.—Lieut. H. B. Post, first aero corps, United States army, was instantly killed Monday by a fall of 500 feet in a hydro-aeroplane. About 150 feet from the surface of the bay Lieut. Post was seen to shoot clear of the machine. It was said by watchers that the engine exploded.

Lieut. Post was flying for an altitude record. He had the reputation of being the best aviator in the army camp on North Island, across the bay from San Diego.

Panic in Hospital Fire.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Forty-five panic-stricken patients of the city sanitarium for tuberculosis, were rescued Tuesday from a fire which destroyed the institution. The loss was $50,000. The hospital was in Wauwatosa, a suburb.

Panic reigned for a time among the patients who were able to leave their beds unassisted, while the screams of weaker ones made the rescuers hasten.

Will Inspect Hotels of State.

Lansing, Mich.—James F. Hammel, state hotel inspector, will begin the work of inspecting the 15,000 or more hotels in the state on April 1. Mr. Hammel does not expect to make the rounds in a year. He will use the regular force of the state department of labor to assist him. This will give him 15 additional assistants; and a rigid enforcement of the law will be made.

Col. Goethals Suspends John Burke.

Panama.—Col. George W. Goethals, chairman of the Panama canal commission, Monday suspended John Burke, manager of the commissary department. Burke is accused of grafting in connection with purchases made in his official capacity.

TELEGRAPHIC FLASHES

Abraham Abradella, proprietor of an Alpena hotel, threw $300 in bills into the stove instead of a handful of waste paper. He managed to save $300.

Mrs. John Ives, blind, and 70 years old, of Saginaw, was burned fatally when her clothes caught fire from a live coal while she was putting wood in the stove.

In the annual report of the state board of agriculture it is shown that 36 per cent of the students in M. A. C. at East Lansing are self-supporting, 10 per cent partially rely on their own efforts and 54 per cent are dependent on their parents.

Many fruit growers of the state met in Benton Harbor Thursday and Friday for the two-day mid-winter session of the state horticultural society. R. A. Smythe, of Benton Harbor, was elected secretary to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of C. E. Bassett.

SYNOPSIS.

Lieutenant Holton is detached from his command in the navy at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war and assigned to an important secret service duty. While dining at a Washington hotel he detects a young lady. She thanks him for his service and gives her name as Miss La Tossa, a Cuban patriot. Later he meets her at a ball. A secret service man warns Holton that the girl is a spy. Senior La Tossa chides his daughter for her failure to secure important information from the hands of a newspaper correspondent. Holton is ordered to follow her. She leaves for her home in Cuba. Holton is ordered to return to Tampa. He meets Miss La Tossa aboard and she gives him a letter from her father. He saves the transports from destruction at the hands of dynamite and reports to Admiral Sampson for further duty. Holton is sent to General Garcia's command in the guise of a newspaper correspondent to investigate Cuban plots against the American troops and to learn the plans of the Spanish navy. He detects a fomenting trouble among the Cubans in the interests of the Spaniards. Holton is seized by friends of the spy and later ordered executed as a spy. He escapes and saves the American troops from falling into a Spanish ambush. He learns from Gen. Garcia that the spy is Jose Cenola, one of the most trusted leaders. Holton takes part in the battle at San Juan, disguised as a Spanish soldier. He enters Santiago, goes at night to the home of Miss La Tossa, where he overhears a discussion of the Spanish plans by leading army and navy commanders. He learns that the Spanish fleet will leave the harbor at Santiago on July 2. While attempting to leave the house he is confronted by Miss La Tossa. Holton ceases his friendship with Miss La Tossa by assuring her that the Americans intend to leave the island as soon as the Spaniards are driven out.

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

"I know, I know," he laughed, "but just the same, I think you had better leave the weapon in its holster. For I have—what do you Americans say?—ah, the drop on you!"

The girl stamped her foot.

"Senior Cenola, I command you to leave us; you are a guest here."

"I shall not leave you. On the contrary, I must ask you to slip that revolver from your friend's belt." He stopped, as though struck with a thought. "But you need not mind. I suggest merely that you quit the room; there is about to be an execution."

Holton stood facing the man, immovable as a statue. The girl stepped forward.

"You are lying!" she cried. "There will be no execution."

"Oh, but yes, there will be!" was the smiling rejoinder, "and right before your eyes unless you retire."

"You fiend!" With a sudden, lithe movement she sprang in front of Holton. "Now fire, if you dare!"

Holton placed his hands upon her supple waist and lifted her to one side. The revolver darted forward to aim. The girl uttered a little cry and sprang back, seizing the American's coat with her hands stretched behind her.

"Miss La Tossa!" cried Holton.

"You—"

Cenola's face was working with the rage of a fanatic.

"Out of the way, girl!" he cried, glancing behind him at the door of the opposite room, which he had closed as he left it. "That man is a spy! He has got to die! He is an enemy, a snake in the grass, not worthy of a minute's quarter!"

Miss La Tossa never moved; and Holton, his mind working like lightning, did not attempt to put her back.

OPEN WINDOWS IN SCHOOLS

Fresh Air in Study Rooms Beneficial to Health and Happiness of Children.

A medical inspector of the Philadelphia public schools, with the co-operation of teachers and parents, made an experiment to determine the value of fresh air in school rooms. He opened the windows at top and bottom and kept them open throughout the winter.

"Out of the way," repeated the Spaniard, with a sort of hissing of the breath. "Out of the way, or, by God! I'll shoot through you."

There was the crash of an opening door.

"What's this—this noise and shouting?" came a deep voice.

Holton, watching his enemy like a hawk, saw the revolver-barrel deflected from him, the man's head turned in the direction whence the voice had come. Springing backward and sideways like a deer, Holton shot across the room.

There was a loud report—a bullet singed his hair. The next instant he had leaped through the window, glass and all, and was on the porch. From here, as two bullets sped after him, he leaped down upon the back of a horse that was being held by a soldier. Striking the animal with the butt of his revolver, he went careering off through the darkness like a rocket.

From the men on the drive, from men on the porch, came a rain of bullets; and Holton, who had learned a trick or two in the way of horsemanship, slipped down along the animal's body, shielding himself almost completely. But the horse was exposed, and a whining bullet pierced the steed to the heart. He suddenly plunged forward, throwing Holton to the ground, then rolled over and was still.

Holton landed on his knees, and, although jarred, was not stunned. He scrambled along desperately, regaining his feet, and struck out for the woods, about a hundred feet away.

He toiled on for two hours, distancing all sounds of pursuit, and then flung himself on the wet ground like a tired animal and fell at once into a deep sleep. When he awoke the sun was shining through the trees.

But it was not this that had roused him. It was the roaring of field ordnance and the racking of small arms. Evidently they were at it again. His one thought was that this was the 2nd of July, and that on the morrow the Spanish warships meant to dash out of the harbor and attempt an escape.

His feet must be warned. That was what he was there for, and this, from now on, must be the single aim of his life, the one thought in his mind, the supreme struggle of his body.

By constant concentration upon the object of his mission, he brought his mental condition into a sort of hysteria. The heat, too, had got into his brain. As he stumbled over a log he would sob or curse, and once, when he tripped and was thrown flat, he lay for a second, weeping like a child.

So he went on until once, upon climbing a tree to ascertain his position, he looked down upon the upper waters of the harbor. He was on the hills to the right, and another hour's journey would bring him within signal of his fleet.

He struggled feebly, and then lay back with the realization that, great as was the exigency, he was not able to meet it. A sort of stupor, partly hunger, partly fatigue, stole over him, and he closed his eyes.

It was night when he opened them again, startled. At first he could not recall where he was. Then he remembered, and with a start remembered why he was there.

He sat up and walked. He did not know he was walking; he had no consciousness of moving, and no sense of direction; but his subconscious powers were leading him right. A breath of pure salt air blew on his face. He turned toward a line of brush and parted it, and there, below him, lay the Spanish fleet, their lights, reflected in the velvet waters, twinkling and winking. He heard the chug-chug of a steam launch, and several times the murmur of a voice rose to his ears.

Farther down, in the moonlight, he could see the masts and funnel of Holton's Merrimac. Ships' bells struck as he looked, and the sound floated sweetly to the hilltops.

He turned his face seaward and walked along, partially revived by his rest. At length a sense of openness came upon him, the sensation of a vast void in front of him. He paused, and then stole noiselessly onward, until, at last, passing through a growth of mangrove, the wide expanse of the Caribbean lay before him.

Here he hung himself on the ground and waited for morning. His limbs were aching with almost unbearable pain. His eyes burned with fever, his head throbbed. And yet all these things he regarded lightly, for the Caribbean was in front of him, and the American fleet would receive his warning as soon as God brought the dawn.

CHAPTER XII.

Destroying a Fleet.

It was well past dawn when Holton awoke. He was in a panic of fear that he had permitted valuable time to elapse. He rose to his feet stiffly and broke through the bushes until the blue sea lay beneath him. His eyes were strained to the left, where the stern of the flagship was swinging toward him. He noticed black smoke belching from the funnels. Evidently the New York was leaving her station when the ships of the enemy were preparing to come out of the harbor where they had been bottled up for so long.

Cold sweat stood out upon Holton's forehead, and, hastily throwing aside his coat and tearing off his shirt, he took from beneath it a white signal flag, which he had carried around his body for days against just this emergency.

Breaking off a branch and knotting the corners of the flag to it, he sprang tensely into position.

The flagship was leaving beyond peradventure. Her stern was still toward him, and it was growing smaller. The admiral going away, of all times! In desperation he raced along the hill, trying to catch an angle where his signaling would be seen.

Finally, seeing the futility of further running, Holton stopped, and began swinging the flag right and left, right and left, with frantic energy. For five, ten minutes he repeated the T. E. call, but without eliciting the slightest response, and so, ceasing his exertions, he watched the New York move away with tears springing from his eyes.

The Brooklyn had swung broadside to him, and the picturesque ram bow and the tall funnels were as cleanly cut against the sea as a cameo. Admiral Schley, he knew, was on board her, and must of necessity be the commander-in-chief pending Sampson's return. So it was to this rakish craft that he now turned his attention.

Walking to a point as nearly abreast of her as he could get, he began snapping the flag right and left, in the effort to attract her attention. If he could only get her now, and could deliver his message, there was no doubt that the New York could be recalled by a signal gun. So simple did this seem that he wondered why he had not thought of it before.

He swung his flag with fresh ardor, but it was as though he were signaling to Mars, so far as any answer was concerned. Holton could see a launch leaving the Indiana for the Massachusetts. Everything was peaceful. From the city drifted the sweet notes of the matin bells and through the trees he could catch glimpses of the red roofs and the blues and greens and browns of the houses of Santiago.

Holton redoubled his efforts with the flag. It seemed as if he had moved his arms to and fro for an hour without response. He had to rest. He lowered the flag and was leaning on the staff when suddenly from the bridge of the Brooklyn he saw a flutter of bunting.

As he looked he read that vessel's call letter. No doubt now they had seen his signal and were making inquiries. Quickly raising his flag over his head he repeated his E. E. call and then, as he caught the answering flashes of white from the Brooklyn, he began his messages. And this is how it read:

"Message to admiral from Lieutenant Holton."

"All right. Ready."

"Cervera's fleet will leave the harbor this morning."

There was a pause. Holton waved his flag frantically.

"Did you get it?"

There was still no answer. Finally it came.

"Repeat."

Holton scowled.

"Cervera's fleet will leave the harbor this morning."

There was another pause.

"Who are you?"

"Lieutenant Holton, United States navy."

After a short wait the flag on the Brooklyn flashed again.

In that other room the pupils were of the same grade and of about the same number, but the room was heated and ventilated according to the usual methods. The pupils in both rooms were normal, healthy children from the same kind of homes, so that the test was as fair, accurate and searching as possible.

At the end the inspector found that the pupils in the open-window room had gained in weight on an average more than twice as much as those in the warm-air room. The pupils in the

"The admiral sends his compliments and his thanks."

There followed several up and down movements of the flag, indicating that Admiral Schley had received all he wanted to know and that his mind was already turning to more important matters of the hour.

As Holton threw his flag aside and turned shoreward he saw two tall columns of black smoke arising from the direction of the harbor. They were coming!

He dashed for his flag, but even as he did so he saw the flash of a tier of guns from Morro and Socapa, and then suddenly, as he glanced down toward the mouth of the bay, he saw a leaden-colored cruiser, with yellow and red flag of Spain snapping defiantly from her jack-staff, appear from behind the hills, and then, as a panther dashes from a cave in the mouth of which hunters have kindled a fire, she turned to the right and dashed into the open sea.

It seemed an age, but it was not more than a few seconds, when a terrific roar shook the waters, and a burst of flame and gases rolled from a turret of one of the American ships.

Holton marked the course of the great thirteen-inch shell, saw the great, dark shape dart with lightning speed toward the Vizcaya, saw it hurtle over the deck, ricochet on the water, and explode in the woods beyond. Then the earth shook with fearful noise.

From all the American ships, and from those of the Spaniards, great guns vomited forth their messengers of death and destruction. The sky grew dark, and a yellowish pall settled upon the sea.

As Holton stood tense, following the combat as in a trance, he heard a tremendous explosion, and saw the Marie Theresa list sharply, and then saw her turn in toward the land, where she soon grounded. He could see men clinging to her decks.

It was clear that the American vessels were overhauling the enemy's ships, although Holton had understood that, as regards speed, our vessels were inferior. The discharge of guns was incessant. Almost directly beneath him he saw two Spanish destroyers disengage themselves from the larger vessels and swing about, evidently with the intention of returning to the harbor; but, like a hawk, a long, rakish American craft, a converted yacht, pounced down upon them, letting fly with her machine guns and six-pounders as she came.

The Earth Shook With Fearful Noise

The torpedo boats fought back with all the venom of maddened serpents, but gallant Wainwright and the Gloucester were not to be denied, and, under the fury of his onset, the two destroyers succumbed like craft of cardboard, disabled and sinking within the course of what seemed to Holton a very few minutes.

He could see two or three of the larger Spanish vessels aground now, flames seething from hatchways, the men of the crew leaping into the sea. Lieutenants from the American vessels were among them, attending to the work of rescue as diligently as, but a few moments before, they had set themselves to the task of dealing death to their foes.

open room kept wholly free from colds, and were much more regular in attendance than the others.

They were also more alert, free from day-dreaming, quicker to learn, needed less review work and were better behaved.

In health, happiness, in body, the children of the room with open windows had a clear advantage over the others.

Signature of George Washington
Makes It Invaluable to Its Owner.

A LETTER signed by George Washington is an heirloom in the family of William H. Paret, a real estate man of Kansas City. Mr. Paret received the letter from his father, the late William Hale Paret, Episcopal bishop of Maryland, who in turn had it from his father, a resident of New York City.

The letter follows: "Headquarters, 3d December, 1782.—Dear Sir: Your favors of the 21st September and 24th and 26th October came regularly to hand, as they contained only intelligence of the movements of the enemy's fleet, and required no particular answer, I did not think it worth while to give the Chain of Expresses the trouble of riding the whole way back to you.

"You must have seen the resolve of congress by which Captain Agill was released. All things considered, I question whether the determination of congress upon the proceedings of Lippincott's court martial would have been different from what it has been, had not the courts of France interceded warmly in Captain Agill's favor, but after a request made by the prime minister in which he expresses the wishes of their majesties that Captain Agill's life might be saved there was scarcely any possibility of refusing, more especially as Sir Guy Carleton promised to prosecute still further the persons who might be found guilty of Captain Huddy's murder. I have lately written to him and begged him to inform me what steps had been taken.

"The report that General Carleton had pledged his word that during his command no small parties should come within the American lines or to any part of our shores is not literally true. But I have reason to believe that he has taken measures to discountenance and discourage all acts of violence on the part of the refugees. Indeed we had an instance of it a few days past. Two of Sheldon's Dragoons were taken off their post by a party of refugees from Montisania, and carried off to Kings Bridges. They were immediately returned with their horses, arms and accoutrements to Colonel Sheldon, intimating that as they had been captured without proper authority it was not thought justifiable to detain them. Upon the whole, sir, I cannot help hoping that the savage kind of desultory war which we have long experienced is at an end.

"There will be no occasion for you any longer keeping a lookout upon the coast, or a communication with Morris Town. But should there in future be any uncommon arrival at New York either of ships of war or transports with troops, or should an embarkation of any consequence take place, you will very much oblige me by sending a particular express. You will now be pleased to furnish me with an account of all the expenses which have been incurred by you in this last business and it shall be repaid with thanks by, dear sir, your much obliged and obedient servant,

"G. WASHINGTON.

OFFICER OF THREE CHURCHES

Edifices Still Standing Proud of Washington's Connection With Their History.

Three churches in Virginia hold proud claim to close connection with George Washington, in each of which he held the position of vestryman. One of these is Christ church, in Alexandria; another, Falls church, in the town of the same name (about six miles southwest of Washington, in Fairfax county); the third is old Pohick church in Mount Vernon parish so called for Pohick creek, a small stream flowing close by. The last named was the "home" church of Washington, and that to which he was most closely allied, having served as warden and vestryman in it for over twenty years, and contributing generously to its support.

Of Christ church he was a frequent attendant, as business often called him to Alexandria (which place was his post office, voting and market place) for considerable periods; and especially was this true after the Revolution, when Pohick church (which suffered severely from the misfortunes of war) was frequently closed. With Falls church he had a somewhat slight connection and for a shorter period.

NO POSSIBILITY OF HELP

Actor Had Been Called on So Often That Further Assistance Was Out of the Question.

When "September Morn" was in its final week of rehearsal a bare spot in act III. gave unbounded annoyance to the actors, and the managers, the librettist, who was appealed to again and again to do something to brighten a scene which was simply talk, and yet could not be cut out without throwing away the stage director's scheme of songs, dances and costume changes. The librettist at length made this appeal to "Dave" Lewis, the star of the piece:

"Say, old fellow, you've been a comedian for 20 years and must have a trunkful of hokum. Won't you dig down into it and fish up something that will help us over this spot?"

Mr. Lewis' answer was: "I've been an actor for 20 years, and I had a trunkful of hokum. But I've dug down so often fixing up the first and second acts that the trunk's empty and there's a hole in the bottom."

His Grievance.

The court of appeal has finally decided against Mr. George Gray, the well-known actor, in the action brought against him by Miss Marie Corelli for infringing the copyright of her novel, "Temporal Power," in his sketch, "The People's King."

If Miss Corelli has a large circle of readers who admire her books, there is also a number of people who do not. Two men belonging to the opposing camps, both well-known journalists, were discussing her the other day.

"What I like about Miss Corelli," said the one who admired the authoress, "is that she is so—so alive!"

"Yes, that's what I object to!" retorted the other.—Pearson's Weekly.

His Table Manners.

"The charity worker," says one of them, "is always learning. We can learn much from the destitute. Thus, apropos of the affectation of some of our table etiquette, I once heard a haggard little chap at a school treat say, as he held a chicken leg in one fist and a hot potato in the other: "The trouble about table manners is that they were invented by people who was never very hungry."

Low Suspicion.

"Tumble is a young man of ingratiating manners."

"So he is. I'll bet he never pays his board bill promptly."

Cannot Give Permission.
The attorney general has given an opinion that farmers owning property cannot give permission to others to hunt rabbits with guinea pigs and ferrets, there being a state law against hunting rabbits with these animals; also a farmer or other person has no right to sell skins of fur bearing animals when such animals are killed in order to protect property. There is a closed season on certain fur bearing animals and the question was raised as to the right to sell the skins when such animals were killed to protect property. The right to kill is not denied when property is to be protected, but no sale can be made.

Princess Theatre.
As a special attraction at the Princess on Friday and Saturday of next week, Manager McLaren announces the engagement of Miss Dorothy Dunbar, sweet singer of late popular songs. "Good-for-nothing Jack"—Wilful Rose insists upon marrying "Good-for-nothing Jack," as her father calls him, instead of Ned, her father's choice. After the marriage the stern father orders the pair from the house. What follows is a series of tragic incidents bound together in strong action. M. H. Fahrney directed the piece, which was made at the Pacific coast studios. His aim has been to construct a play, a melodrama of the highest order, which clutches the spectators sympathies and stir one with climaxes that are big and original. Three years elapse and Jack has proven himself unworthy. Rose is prevailed upon to come home. Jack makes no objections and finally consents that she should take their child, Rosie. Again the action shifts to five years later. Just how the picture works itself out makes an interesting story. It will be shown at the Princess on Friday, February 13th. Adv.

"LITTLE LOST SISTER"

Attempt Made to Kidnap Philadelphia Clerks.

"The white-slaver is not always a smiling, well-dressed young man. Often she is a smiling, well-dressed young woman, or a dignified, well-dressed 'motherly' woman. Many an innocent girl is dragged into the depths because of her trust in a new-found woman friend who appears to her unsophisticated comprehension to be as respectable as she is friendly," writes Miss Virginia Brooks, author of the now-famous book, "Little Lost Sister," dramatized into a powerful four act play by Edward E. Rose, to open at the Whitney theatre, Ann Arbor, Monday, February 16, for three nights and matinee.

Lettie Spear, the 15-year-old Philadelphia girl, who for three days refused to tell the police where she obtained the poison tablets, with which she tried to end her life last Tuesday, Saturday gave the names of three women, with whom she had been associated. Detectives immediately set to work to find the trio, which, they are convinced, are members of a white slave band, which has been operating there for several months.

Only a week ago, the police say, an attempt was made by a man and a fashionably dressed woman in an automobile, to kidnap several sales girls, in a store in the heart of the shopping district.

The girl took the poison, while shopping. The woman, who is known to have accompanied her, disappeared. Previous to that time the curiosity of Miss Spear's parents was aroused when, on several occasions, she returned home, dressed in expensive clothes and adorned with cheap jewelry, after starting out in the morning, garbed in a plain suit. Miss Spear is also known to have received letters daily from a new acquaintance, named "Virginia" of whom she declared she was very fond.

Standard Rule For Saving.

Any person with a steady occupation may follow this rule successfully. Make a sauce of equal parts of DETERMINATION and PERSISTENCY. Dip into this sauce one slice of SALARY, place carefully in the Kempf Commercial & Savings Bank, and salt-down thoroughly. Each week add a slice, well marinated in the sauce. Keep on doing this indefinitely for, like a roast, the larger it is the better the quality. The less this mixture is disturbed the better it will ripen, and the richer its flavor will be.

U. S. Keeps Tab Upon Army and Navy Deserters

WASHINGTON.—As Uncle Sam finds trouble in locating recalcitrant members of the army and navy who take "French leave," there is a bureau in both the war and navy departments to keep tab on these individuals. In the war department the bureau is presided over by a "graybeard" who has been in the service since eight years after the Civil war. He is so familiar with the files of the office under the adjutant general that each yellow-back envelope is almost like an old friend. "Like father, like son" is an old adage, and it was never more true than of conditions in this office.

Like the old man who presides over the destinies of the yellow-back paper envelopes and the antiquated furniture, are the methods which he employs in conducting the affairs of the bureau. "I would like you to look up for me the name of Ray Schultz or Roy Schult or Schults," was a request made of this official recently. It has been estimated that in the past ten years nearly 1,000,000 record enlistments have been filed in the office. As the files are arranged, however, a search is not the arduous task that upon first glance it seems to be.

On every side of the room, which runs the entire length of one wing of the war department, are steel file cases. The enlistment date was secured in a little less than two hours.

An answer to a similar inquiry in the navy department was obtained in a little less than 20 minutes.

The system there is entirely different. It follows the index system of the modern department store.

As an officer explained, it sometimes developed that hurry was mandatory. He pointed out the case of an enlisted man who had been arrested in a southern city for deserting his ship, which had been ordered to Mexican waters. The enlisted man upon arrest denied he was an enlisted man. No immediate proof could be obtained that he was in the navy or that he was a deserter. The only accusation against him was brought by a witness who thought he had recognized the man. Navy officials were communicated with, but the only word received by the court officers was "hold the prisoner for identification." It was three days before the court was completely convinced that the enlisted man was a member of the navy.

Everything Under the Sun at Special Prices

"EVERYTHING but a nursing bottle!" was the conclusion reached by Byron R. Newton, assistant secretary of the treasury, commenting on the wide and inexhaustible range of articles in the schedule of the general supply committee, showing that the government is prepared to supply at special concessive prices to all departments and administrative bureaus in Washington. "It embraces every other commodity under the sun."

"Hold on!" said his private secretary. The private secretary took over the general schedule that Mr. Newton had laid aside. He thumbed over the pages.

"Nursing bottles—bottles—ah, under laboratory apparatus. Bottles—but not the right sort. Hospital supplies. Here we are," said the private secretary, pointing out an item to Mr. Newton.

"5620. Bottles of samples. (d) Nursing, graduated, 12 ounces," Mr. Newton read in the book.

"By jove. Even a nursing bottle. It has every thing under the sun that can be bought," he admitted. And so it seems.

Stationery and drafting supplies; hardware, metals, cordage and leather and saddlery; dry goods and wearing apparel; drugs and medicines, chemicals and reagents; laboratory, hospital appliances and surgical instruments; electrical engineering and plumbing supplies; lumber, millwork, packing boxes and building materials; paints, oils, glass and brushes; provisions and household supplies; forage, flour and seed; photographic supplies and special equipment; engraving, printing and lithographic supplies; fuel and ice; incandescent electric lamps; incandescent gas lamp supplies; motor trucks; typewriting and computing machines; electric service; telephone service.

There are the general classifications under which nearly every conceivable thing on earth is sublisted. One could be born into the world by virtue of the facilities of this general schedule and go out of it by its aid at any old time, and in the course of the life between never know a need that the general schedule could not meet.

Here Are Two Men Who Get Paid for Eating

It sounds like the ideal job when one hears of getting paid for eating, but there are two men in Uncle Sam's employ who draw their salaries mainly because of this, and they will vouch for the fact that such a position is by no means as simple a little thing as a person might suppose. Of course they do more than this. They investigate into foodstuffs, prepare reports and do other things that a layman can hardly explain. But they get paid for eating as well.

The two men are Dr. C. F. Langworthy, chief, and Dr. Robert Milner, assistant, in the bureau of the bureau of food hygiene of the department of agriculture. These two men have a corps of assistants, who, like themselves, are required to do plain and fancy eating. Occasionally a subject is brought in, under the auspices of Uncle Sam, and he is placed in a contrivance which looks like a cell in a police station, and is fed and his temperature is taken. Reports are made as to the effect that the food had on him.

Not long ago a cheese investigation began. Every kind of cheese, rich, juicy cheese, crumbly cheese, cheese that was odorless and cheese that smelled like a Tammany investigation, was brought into the office. Dr. Milner picked out a nice, ripe cheese and cut off a generous slab.

"Everybody try some," he urged, biting into his slice, and everybody did. For a week the office ate cheese omelette, cheese soufflé, cheese pudding, plain cheese, baked cheese, fried cheese and several other kinds of cheese.

The point was to determine whether cheese could be assimilated. The office decided that it could and, inasmuch as some of the hardy workers ate six ounces a day without suffering the slightest ailment, the office seemed to be right.

Pen Picture of Senator LaFollette on Rostrum

Did you ever see Robert M. LaFollette speak? If it is more of a sight than a sound. He doubles himself into knots, grinds his teeth and puts on every "prop" of intensity known to the forensic play-actor. He looks as if he means business. One constantly expects to hear him say something that will rip the stars from their appointed places and tumble the indigo firmament upon the frightened worlds. But he never says it. That's where the joke comes in. And that's what gives point to an observation made recently by W. S. Sinker Manning. One evening recently Senator LaFollette was making a speech on end, his eyes glittered, his voice sounded like that of the ghost in Hamlet, his snaky fingers wiggled and waved through the air at the terrified Democrats. The blood mantled his face; his teeth ground. At any moment he might say: "Fe-o-a-fum, I smell the blood of a Roosevelt Mun." But he didn't. He said nothing of importance whatsoever, nothing that might not have been uttered in tones as droll as that of a mating dove. Mr. Manning watched him for a while, then, turning in disappointment, he remarked with a sigh:

"I live always in the hope that he will utter some sentence so vital that it will justify the expression on his face."

GOOD JOKES

She was fitting stealthily through the shrubbery, when a dark figure loomed up before her. With a little gasp of surprise, she drew back as she recognized her father.

"You are too late!" he said, chuckling.

"There is some mistake," she quivered. "I am not Isolde, your daughter; I am Yvonne, the cook."

"You cannot deceive me, Isolde," he said. "You were about to elope with Henri, the chauffeur. Is it not so?"

"Yes," Her tone was defiant.

"Then you are too late. I have paid him to elope with Yvonne instead."

DAIRY

MUCH DAIRYING IN SCOTLAND

Cows Kept Are Practically All High-Grade or Pure Ayrshires—Heifers Are Raised.

In the southern part of Scotland, dairying is almost the sole occupation of the farmers. The cows kept are practically all high-grade or pure bred Ayrshires, and as a class are efficient and economic producers. Heifer calves from the best cows are always raised, not sold. A good registered Ayrshire cow brings from $125 to $200, and a good grade cow $80 to $100. Cows that are good milkers are kept as long as they are healthy. In many herds in Scotland are cows 20 years old, and still good producers, but the herds which are fed heavily on grain they do not last as long, and the oldest cow is not more than twelve years old. For the American dairyman, the striking features of Scotch dairying are the uniformly good cows kept, the excellent care given them, and the attention paid to feeding them economically on a small amount of grain, never wasting concentrates on cows that are not producing heavily. When we consider the low efficiency of the average cows milked in America compared with the average Ayrshires milked in Scotland, it is easy to see the great possibilities yet unattained by the dairymen of this country.

GLUTEN FEED TO DAIRY COWS

Good Supplementary Food May Be Profitably Given in Place of Bean Meal—Other Good Feeds.

Gluten feed forms a good, supplementary food for dairy cows and may be profitably fed to take the place of bean meal in forming the concentrated part of the ration. Cows eat gluten feed regularly and it may be safely given up to seven pounds a day, though smaller quantities fed as part of a mixture will probably give the better result.

Bean meal and crushed oats have fully maintained their past reputation of being an excellent food for dairy cows, but the mixture is more expensive than an equal weight of gluten feed.

Sugar beets are an excellent food for the dairy cows. There is a little difficulty at first in getting some animals to take to it. It shows a very marked effect in stimulating and maintaining the yield of milk, even when the cows are advanced in lactation.

Cows fed on sugar beets produce a cream more difficult to churn than those fed on an equal weight of turnips and the butter is very pale in color.

Gluten feed is the refuse after the extraction of starch from grain and may be had in two forms, either as gluten meal or as gluten feed, the latter consisting of the hull, the gluten layer and the germ, the hull being absent in the case of gluten meal.

The gluten feed is naturally the lighter fed of the two and may be fed to the extent of seven pounds or eight pounds daily. Its feeding composition approximates fairly closely to beans and peas and it keeps well.

FEW CLEAN MILK ESSENTIALS

Simple Procedures Are All That Is Required to Keep the Dirt Down to Small Proportions.

"All is not gold that glitters." Not all white substances are clean. The cleanest appearing of all foods—virgin white milk—is the dirtiest of all foods. One can eat a good deal of dirt with safety if it has been cooked, but raw dirt is dangerous. If one can eat a peck of dirt with safety it must be cooked dirt.

Dirt gets into milk from the milkster's hands, from the cow's udder, from the swish of the cow's tail, from the milk pails and milk cans, from the air of the stable, and from any faulty handling after it leaves the farmer.

Simple procedures are all that are necessary to keep the dirt down to small proportions. They are clean hands, clean udder, and clean pails and cans.

Varied Rations for Cows.

Cows should not be kept too long on one particular ration, good though it may be, and the feed should consist of a variety of materials rather than any single one. A sufficient ration must be given for the maintenance of body and the production of milk. It is false economy to allow a cow to produce milk at the expense of her own body.

Disproving a Proverb.

Lady Cook (Tennessee Clafin) was talking in Pittsburgh about time's changes.

"Woman used to wear the hoop skirt," she said, "and the wind blew it up outrageously. She now wears the slashed skirt, a much more modest affair."

"Time changes all things," ended Lady Cook. "I said to a young man the other day:

"Distance lends enchantment."

"But not," he answered, "when you're taking your girl home in a taxicab."

ITCHING TERRIBLE ON LIMB

R. F. D. No. 3, Clarkfield, Minn.—

"My trouble was of long standing. It started with some small red and yellow spots about the size of a pin head on my leg and every morning there was a dry scale on top covering the affected part and when those scales were falling off the itching was more than I could stand at times. The first year I did not mind it so much as it was only itching very badly at times, but the second year it advanced all around my leg and the itching was terrible. I had to be very careful to have my clothing around the affected part very loose. At night time I often happened to scratch the sore in my sleep. Then I had to stand up, get out of bed and walk the floor till the spell was over."

"I bought lots of salves and tried many different kinds of medicine but without any success. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a fifty-cent box of Cuticura Ointment and when I had used them I was nearly over the itching. But I kept on with the Cuticura Soap for six weeks and the cure was complete." (Signed) S. O. Gordon, Nov. 20, 1912.

OLD HOME of the RANDOLPHS

EDGEHILL is one of the oldest and most beautiful places in Virginia, ranking second only in historic interest to Mount Vernon and Monticello. This interest lies largely in the fact that it was the home of Martha Jefferson Randolph (the daughter of Thomas Jefferson) and her husband, Governor Thomas Mann Randolph, one of Virginia's ablest governors, writes Alma Turner Phelps in Town and Country. The original grant was patented from the crown of England by William Randolph early in 1700 and contained 2,000 acres. Edgehill crowns a hilltop and nestles in a grove of magnificent old trees that stretch out on either side of the porch like great arms and frame a wonderful view over the Piedmont valley, looking across to Carter's mountain; upon the summit of which stands Monticello (Italian for little mountain), the home of Thomas Jefferson, which can be plainly seen on a clear day.

"Punch Bowl Tract." Adjoining this tract of land Peter Jefferson, the father of Thomas Jefferson, obtained a patent for a thousand acres and named it Shadwell for the parish in England where his wife was born. Not having a good building site for his house and wishing to be near his friend and neighbor, William Randolph gave him 400 acres of his estate. Edgehill, the purchase price as named in the deed was "Henry Weatherbourne's largest punch bowl of arrack punch." For that reason this particular place is still known as the "punch bowl tract."

William Randolph's son, Thomas Mann, settled at Edgehill in 1767 and soon after he married Martha Jefferson. Thomas Jefferson speaks of his son-in-law in an old letter as "a man of science, sense and virtue, in whom I have nothing more to wish," and feeling as he did, he wished to have his daughter and son live near his home. An extract from an old letter, written by Jefferson in 1791, says: "I hope Randolph's idea of settling near Monticello will gain strength and no other settlement in the meantime be decided upon. I wish some expedient be devised for settling him at Edgehill." Thomas Jefferson is said to have planned Edgehill and it was built by the same workmen as the buildings of the University of Virginia.

The estate obtained its name from a field near the village of Edgehill, in Warwickshire, England, where the Cavaliers under Charles I. first crossed swords with the Roundheads. The Randolphs came to this country from Warwickshire in 1651, soon after this event. It is said that the view from the present Edgehill much resembles that of its English namesake. The Jeffersons and the Randolphs were very neighborly, Jefferson spending much of his time at the Randolph home.

Old Tulip Trees. There is a quaint old cottage immediately back of Edgehill. It is said that it stood originally on the site of the present mansion and had been removed back. Between the two houses there are several huge, misshapen old tulip trees, towering overhead and leaning in a threatening manner. This is the explanation: The cottage was moved over the trees when they were mere twigs. Mrs. Randolph loved trees and was a well-known horticulturist. The old-fashioned garden still remains, where peonies, English violets and lilacs of the valley bloom luxuriantly. The old formal garden is at the side of the house, as is also the vegetable garden, which is bordered by flowering shrubs. On every side are evidences of out-of-door life which characterizes the southern home.

Edgehill is well arranged; a large drawing room and library on one side of the hall, which runs the entire length of the house; on the other side the morning room and dining room. The morning room is particularly attractive, for in this room is the exquisite Italian carved marble mantelpiece, beautifully preserved, given to Martha Jefferson as a wedding present by the people of France. The place was soon famous for lavish entertainments and as a resort for distinguished visitors.

Martha Jefferson died in 1836, her eldest son, Thomas Jefferson Randolph, inheriting Edgehill. He also managed his grandfather's farm, Monticello. For a young farmer (he was then twenty-one) it was a difficult undertaking. He assumed the debts of his grandfather, Thomas J. Jefferson, and after his death Monticello was offered for sale. All this practically ruined him financially, and later on, after the losses of the Civil war, his wife opened a private school for the education of her daughters and those of her friends. This was the beginning of the famous Edgehill School for Girls. Mary Johnston, who was one of the students, often speaks of Edgehill in her novel, "Lewis Rand."

Edgehill still stands, after a lapse of eighty years, in its majestic pride, while so many of the great and the good and gifted who have graced its halls have passed away forever. At present it is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Twohy, who have spared no expense in preserving and restoring in all of its pristine beauty the old home of the Randolphs of Virginia.

BULLETS STOPPED BY PAPERS

War Correspondent Has Bible and Wallet Which Saved His Life in Russo-Turkish War.

To illustrate the bullet-resisting powers of papers, a veteran war correspondent brought for the inspection of some of his journalistic colleagues a pocketbook filled with photographs and papers and a Bible, each of which on separate occasions had been instrumental in saving his life in the course of the Russo-Turkish war.

In one instance he was knocked off his horse by the impact of a bullet and became unconscious, only to find on regaining his senses that the friendly wallet had prevented the bullet entering his body. On the second occasion, at Plevna, the Bible, which he had placed in a side pocket, deflected a heavy piece of shrapnel that threatened to end his existence.

He had kept the wallet intact as a memento of his escape, and one of the journalists who was examining its contents came, by a curious coincidence, upon a letter which he himself had indited to the war correspondent some 30 or 40 years ago, the very existence of which he had entirely forgotten.

In the letter he had expressed the hope that his friend would return safe and sound from the seat of war. The words "safe and sound" had been almost cut away by the bullet, which, but for the providential interposition of the bundle of papers, would probably have ended the war correspondent's life.

Her Only Musical Instrument. Miss Helen Keller, after speaking with her teacher, Mrs. Macy, several times in and near New York, has started west on an itinerary which takes her all over the south, west, middle west and into many cities in Canada. In these lectures Mrs. Macy speaks about three-quarters of an hour and Miss Keller for fifteen or twenty minutes, and then the audience usually enjoys an opportunity to ask questions, which are passed on to Miss Keller through Mrs. Macy.

"Do you play any instrument?" was one of the questions put to her at a New York lecture.

"Only the hand organ," was the quick reply, throwing out both hands.

LETTER FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

SUPERVISORS ADOPT RESOLUTIONS AT CONVENTION AT LANSING.

BELIEVE THAT PRESENT TAX LAW IS DESIRABLE.

Gov. Ferris Says to Cut Down Amount of Taxes Raised for Educational Purposes Would Be Criminal.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Lansing.—In a maze of parliamentary rulings that would have done justice to a heated session of the legislature, the Thursday forenoon meeting of the State Association of Supervisors came to a close, following a unanimous adoption of the report of the committee on resolutions.

The resolution committee reported that consideration had been taken of recommendations in the line with suggestions made therein, the committee's report recommended the following:

"That the continuation of the present tax law is desirable until such time as vital need shall point to the necessity of radical changes; that the efforts of the state tax commission are commendable and deserve co-operation of all supervisors; that the amount of taxes to be raised in any one year should be limited and that a committee of five be appointed to request the tax committee of the legislature to pass such legislation; that it should be the duty of all co-officers to assess property at cash value.

The committee also recommended the amendment of the law of 1911, to provide that the membership of the state board of equalization be composed of the three members of the tax commission, the governor and the auditor-general. It was supported on the ground that the tax commissioners are better acquainted with property values; that present methods are not satisfactory and that the experience of other states has demonstrated that the tax commissioners' estimate of values gives the most general satisfaction.

A resolution proposing an amendment to the mortgage tax law by which the rate should be computed at one-half of 1 per cent at the date of filing the mortgage, payable annually, the tax going into the treasury of the municipality where the mortgage or bond is held or owned, was put over until next year.

A resolution indorsing the free employment method advocated by the auditor-general; one for home rule legislation by which compensation of co-officers should be placed on salary basis; and all other resolutions, introduced to the committee after the first day's session, were passed up until the next annual meeting.

Governor Ferris spoke briefly, "To attempt to cut down the amount of taxes raised for educational purposes is little less than criminal," said the governor. "If Michigan is to progress, taxes must increase. The question is not how little the amount shall increase as what do we get for the money we pay."

All the deputy wardens of the lower peninsula will meet at Lansing February 18. Speaking of this week State Game Warden W. R. Oates says: "Recently I have visited several sections of the state conferring with sportsmen and getting their ideas in reference to the propagation and distribution of game in suitable covers of the state under proper auspices. While I think we have a good patrol force in the department and our work along this line last year was real vital, yet in my opinion it is essential that something be done to restock our depleted covers and it is important that we secure the co-operation of sportsmen's associations and sportsmen generally, with the department in propagating and distributing game."

"One of the biggest sportsmen's clubs in the western part of the state informs me that they have obtained possession of a large tract of land suitable for the propagation of quail and other birds, that they expect to dedicate such lands to the state under the refuge act, place some one in charge to keep out the vermin and other destructive agencies, and under the law the department has agreed to post such refuge and protect the game for a certain number of years."

"Several private land owners dedicated some of their holdings to the state as game refuges under the act passed by the last legislature. We also propose to set aside certain state lands suitable for game covers and the stock them with game purchased by the state. Our experiments along this line will be confined for the time being to native birds of Michigan such as grouse, quail, prairie chickens, etc. There is no question in my mind but that prairie chickens are increasing in Michigan, as depictions are reporting numerous flocks in the extreme southern part of the state, particularly in Livingston county and adjoining territory, and I have personally observed many flocks of these birds in the upper peninsula, in Iron and Dickinson counties. The department feels that if it can obtain the active interest of the private sportsmen with the department in a vigorous campaign to restock the covers suitable to game propagation, that it will be the only sure way or perpetuating the game life of the state.

"In order to give more more publicity to the value of game protection and conservation, we are also inaugurating a lecture system. A representative of this department is ready and will be glad to present these lectures not only to the sportsmen's associations, grange meetings, county fairs, but also in the public schools. These lectures will be particularly interesting as they show the importance of protecting the wild life of the state, the kind and value of Michigan's game and insectivorous birds, the great value of our commercial fishing industry, if the great lakes are properly replenished with commercial fish spawn, the care and vigilance which should be exercised by those who visit the woods with the object in view of suppressing forest fires, and generally to inform the Michigan public what the department is doing, what it would like to do and the methods employed and money expended to secure good results."

Representatives of the Grand Rapids Chamber of Commerce and the Lansing Chamber of Commerce, appeared before the state railroad commission and protested against the action of several railroad companies for their alleged refusal to provide adequate equipment for the shipment of perishable fruit and the clause recently attached to the bills of lading providing that the owners are liable for the loss in case the fruit is frozen, where shipments are made in less than carload lots.

The complaint is directed against the Grand Rapids & Indiana, Michigan Central, Pere Marquette, Grand Trunk and Lake Shore roads. Attorney F. L. Williams, of Grand Rapids appeared for the complainants, and Attorney Frank Robson, of Detroit, handled the case for the railroad companies.

It declared that the railroad companies should provide equipment that will make it possible for perishable goods to arrive at their destinations in sound condition. It is set forth that an immense amount of business of this nature moves out of Grand Rapids and that the railroad companies should be required to substitute on certain days of each week equipment for the ordinary box car that will afford protection against freezing.

At a meeting of the public domain commission recently a request was read from the State School Teachers' association which desires the state to set aside lands to be used by the teachers as a summer resort. Houghton lake is talked of, though no action has been taken.

Gov. Ferris has appointed the following as members of the Michigan Panama Pacific exposition commission: H. A. Jones and Gordon MacEdward, Detroit; L. C. Covell and J. Newton Ninds, Sr., Grand Rapids; W. A. Comstock, Alpena; Floyd A. Allen, Flint; Schurman C. Collins, Muskegon; A. R. Treanor, Saginaw, and R. B. Lawrence, Bay City.

Fearing that the bill which was introduced in the last Michigan legislature relative to compelling all threshing outfit owners to have smooth tire wheels on their engines will come up again, the Michigan Threshermen's association, at its annual convention here March 11, 12 and 13, will make this one of the big issues. It is preparing to fight the proposed measures.

Governor Ferris has refused to approve the action of the supervisors of Saginaw county in changing the method of electing a county road commissioner, and making that official appointive by the board, and also in making the office of sheriff salaried instead of compensated by fees as is the present plan.

Both these changes were authorized by the board of supervisors at its January session, and were immediately sent for approval to the attorney-general, who sent both measures to the governor, with the recommendation that he approve them.

Prosecuting Attorney Devereux plans to appeal direct to the legislature.

Announcement of the absolute refusal of the postmaster-general's department to relieve the Pere Marquette railway receivers of the road's obligation under its mail-carrying contract; declaration that the courts have no jurisdiction to alter the terms of the contract; denial that the railroad is losing money because of the increased amount of mail under the parcel post law, and denial that the constitution is violated by requiring extra service or that the question of exaction can be brought into a collateral matter, embrace the main points of the answer filed in the United States court in Detroit late Friday afternoon by Joseph Stewart, second assistant postmaster-general, to the petition of the road's receivers for the court to order a higher rate for carrying mail or allow the cancellation of the contract.
