For That Tight Cough

When that cough of yours tightens up, the membranes become irritated and trouble you every time you take a breath, it's time you were using

NYAL'S CHERRY COUGH SYRUP

If neglected, the cough will surely fasten and tear the membranes of the throat and affect the bronchial tubes and lungs as well. A cough in every instance paves the way to further trouble.

Nyal's Cherry Cough Syrup soothes and heals the irritated membranes, removes the tickling sensation, allays inflammation and prevents further infection. The first dose affords a grateful relief. Two sizes, 25c and 50c.

ANNUAL MEETING

Four Hundred Dollars Appropriated to be Expended on South Main Street.

The annual meeting of the electors of Sylvan was held in the town hall at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon and was well attended. The meeting was called to order by Supervisor VanRiper. The annual report was read by the clerk, W. C. Boyd, which on motion was accepted and adopted.

The township board recommended that the following be raised for the various funds: Contingent, $1,700; highway improvement fund, $2,000; road repair fund, $1,000; poor fund, $200. A motion was made and supported that the recommended be accepted and adopted, which was carried.

A motion was made by Frank Staffan, which was supported, that $250 be raised by the township for the purpose of graveling south Main, from the south line of the electric line to the village limits. John Kalmbach moved to amend the original motion and that $400 be raised for the purpose, which was supported and carried. Geo. T. English moved to amend the motion, so that the work be done from the electric line to the territorial road which was accepted and adopted.

To get an expression of the sentiment of the electors, a motion was made by John Kalmbach that the township be divided into four road districts, which was supported and adopted.

Jacob Hummel made a motion which was supported, that the township be divided into four road districts, and it was carried.

It was moved and supported that the township board have a new roof put on the town hall and have the interior of the building redecorated, which was carried. The meeting then adjourned.

Easter Services.

Easter, the Feast of the Resurrection of Christ, as usual will be celebrated with great solemnity at the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The altars and sanctuary will be handsomely decorated with Easter lilies, potted plants, candles and lights. The vested choir of 40 altar boys will occupy the sanctuary and will take part in the services, assisted by the children of St. Mary's school. The choir has prepared a beautiful new mass in honor of the day.

Low mass will be celebrated at 6 a. m. Holy communion will be given at 7 a. m. Solenn high mass be celebrated at 8 a. m. with Rt. Rev. Monsignor DeBever, of Dexter, as celebrant, Rev. P. J. Howard, of Sandwich, deacon, and Rev. W. P. Considine, sub-deacon, Raymond Steele will be master of ceremonies. Rev. Father Howard will assist the pastor during Easter and preach at the solemn high mass.

The last mass on Easter day will be celebrated at 10 a. m., followed by solemn benediction and the singing of the Te Deum by the entire congregation. The offertory on Easter Sunday will be a tribute to the pastor of the church.

Mrs. Wm. E. Salisbury.

Mrs. Mary Cordelia Salisbury was born in Sylvan township December 28, 1841, and died at her home at Sylvan Center Sunday, April 5, 1914, of Bright's disease.

She was united in marriage with William E. Salisbury in August, 1882, and the couple have made their home at Sylvan Center for the past 20 years. She is survived by her husband, one sister, Mrs. Emeline Beckwith, of Chelsea, two brothers, Charles Stephenson, of Chelsea, and William Stephenson, of Philadelphia.

The funeral was held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, from the Sylvan Center church, Rev. Geo. C. Northcutt officiating. Interment at Maple Grove cemetery, Sylvan Center.

Defeated the Proposition.

By a majority of 681 the voters of Washtenaw county on Monday defeated the proposition to donate $1,500 for a soldier's monument to be erected on the court house grounds in Ann Arbor. The G. A. R. of that city has raised by subscription a fund of $2,500 for the monument and at the session of the board of supervisors last October the G. A. R. asked for an appropriation of $1,500 so that they would be able to put up a $500 monument.

Announcements.

The W. R. C. will meet Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All members are requested to be present as there will be extra business.

The men of the M. E. church will serve their annual Easter supper at the church parlors Friday evening, April 10. Everybody invited.

There will be a regular meeting of the K. of P. on Monday evening, April 13. Work in the third degree. All members are requested to be present.

SPRING FEVER IS HEALTHY

It Indicates Fresh Hopes and Renewed Buoyancy of Spirit.

How wonderfully tight the spring wander-lust for the countryside grips one!

Spring fever, with all of its healthfulness, is the harbinger of fresh hopes and a buoyancy of spirit.

I noticed a passenger on a Detroit-Chicago train the other day who had started out on his trip with the evident intention of becoming deeply taken with one of the best sellers, that he might shorten the trip between the two cities. You have done the same thing yourself.

But his book had been cast aside. He had read only a few pages. His interest in it had lagged.

From the car windows he was counting the fields now bare of snow. The ditches were carrying away the water and the still less sluggish creeks were now streams bearing the overflow to the rivers. The farmer, in his shirt sleeves, was repairing the fences after the winter drifts; the cattle showing proof of a winter's stabling and now heading here and there toward the meadows, seeking the new-green patches of grass; the farm help, in field and stubble, was putting into repair this and that necessary feature, here looking after his plow and there his harrow, and on all sides were scenes which reminded the traveler that spring was here, at last!

As the train sped onward and glimpses of the painter as he worked on the weather-beaten buildings were revealed, the interest of the tourist was aroused and, when I asked him the reason, he answered: "Spring is here and I feel its blood flowing!"

The truth was, that like many others, he was planning the work he was to do the coming summer. He was going out to the farm—his farm in Western Canada. He had his wells to dig, his horses to get into shape, his grain implements to fix up, his seed grain to prepare, and other details for the land that was ready to receive it. He was what might be termed an "unrest"—to get to the farm!

Thousands in Western Canada today are making the preparations that this interested man contemplated. Their summer fallows are ready for the wheat, their spring plowing is being attended to, fences are being rebuilt or being put into repair; indeed, the entire country is one great hive of industry.

Railroads are in readiness to take care of a great rush of settlers, those charged with the reception of whom are prepared to extend every courtesy and thus meet the rush with judgment and without the least friction. Thus, the enjoyment of the opening of spring is fully met.

At many of the stations throughout many of the middle western states, trains of settlers' effects are in readiness to move to Western Canada. Not only in these states are scenes of this kind to be witnessed, but, also, on either coast and throughout the eastern states there is the same activity among those going to Western Canada this spring. The crops have been heavy and all reports are that the winter was enjoyable; also, that the prospects for a satisfactory year were never better. There is plenty of land yet to be had by homesteading or otherwise. Adapted as Western Canada is, to small-grain farming, it is especially adapted to cattle raising and many of the farmers are placing small and large herds, as their individual means will permit.

The illustrated literature sent out by the Canadian government agents tells the truth clearly and the inquirer should send for a copy and if you be one of those who has an ambitious interest, you may be the gainer by a perusal of such information—straight, cold facts in themselves.—Advertisement.

Caravaggio Picture Found.
An important find has been made in the art collections of Marchese della Stufa at France. It is a painting by Caravaggio, which had been lost sight of for many years. The painting was known to connoisseurs through a print in the Galleria degli Uffizi.

Sig di Pietro, the secretary of this gallery, was determined to find the picture. It was known that in the year 1700 it was in possession of the Cerratani family, which is now extinct.

Sig di Pietro, while examining Marchese della Stufa's collection saw the painting and immediately identified it. The Uffizi print is an exact reproduction of the picture, which is a typical Caravaggio. It depicts six youths, one of whom is playing a violin, one a lute and one a flute, while two are singing and one is listening.—New York Sun.

Wasted Effort.
Miss Dixon, a charming society girl, had spent the entire summer in trying to elevate the simple country people with whom she was boarding. When she was about to leave, she said:

"Goodby, Mr. Ingersoll, I hope my visit here hasn't been entirely without good results."

"Sartin not," replied the old farmer, "you've learnt a heap since you first come; but, by heck! you was about the greenest one we ever had on our hands."—National Monthly.

WOMEN LOSERS IN CHICAGO VOTING

FEWER TURN OUT IN FIRST BIG OPPORTUNITY THAN EXPECTED.

MANY ILLINOIS CITIES DRY

Former Socialist Mayor of Milwaukee Is Defeated By Present Incumbent.

Chicago—Fewer than 100,000 of the 217,614 women eligible to vote here, took advantage of their newly gained suffrage and voted in the municipal elections Monday.

In the First ward, the cohorts of "Bathhouse John" Coughlin and "Hinky Dink" Kenna, Democrats, defeated Miss Marion Drake, Progressive, for the council, by a vote of four to one. Miss Harriet Vitum, settlement worker, made a much better showing in the Seventeenth ward, but was beaten by Walkowiak, the Democratic candidate.

Women Drive Out Saloons.

Chicago—Illinois women swarmed to the polls Tuesday in nearly 300 townships and as a result of their activity it is estimated that at least 12 counties have been added to the 30 which now bar saloons.

The country districts saw the greatest gains in anti-saloon territory. Of the larger cities, the following voted from wet to dry: Bloomington, Decatur, Belvidere, Canton, Freeport, Galesburg, Joliet, Monmouth, Kewanee, Lockport, Elgin and East Galena. Rockford and Galva, which were dry, remained dry.

Springfield, Quincy, West Kalena, Rock Island, Dixon, Aurora, Waukegan, Alton and Moline.

Socialist Beaten in Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Mayor Gerhardt A. Bading, non-partisan, was Tuesday re-elected over Emil Seidel, the social democrat candidate, by 5,000 majority according to returns from a majority of the precincts.

Mayor Bading will have a common council made up largely of non-partisan, though it is expected a few of the social democrat candidates will pull through in wards where that party is strong.

BOARD OF DOCTORS RESIGN

Advise On Vaccination Not Accepted By Ypsilanti Council.

Ypsilanti, Mich.—Dr. Floyd Westfall, Dr. R. A. Clifford and Dr. H. B. Britton, appointed as a board to advise with the board of health on account of the presence of smallpox in the city, resigned in a body Saturday.

The three physicians with Dr. Hubert H. Johnson, health officer, recommended the compulsory vaccination of all school children, college students, stores and factory employees. The board, which consists of the city council, decided merely to recommend vaccination and not make it compulsory until after the period of incubation has passed. The doctors held that the time for vaccination was before and not after smallpox appeared.

Former Mayor Is Dead.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Following an operation, James Wittichill, Osborn, three times republican mayor of Kalamazoo, died Saturday at his winter home in Orlando, Fla. He was vice-president of the First National Bank and a thirty-third degree Mason. He was also identified with realty and other business interests of this city.

Mr. Osborn came to Kalamazoo in 1874 and three years later became senior partner in the law firm of Osborn & Mills.

DRYS WINNERS IN ELECTION

MOST POPULOUS COUNTIES ARE WON BY ANTI-SALOON FORCES.

CAPITOL OF STATE TO BE ARID

Each Side Loses Two Counties to Other—First Reports Indicate Eight Dry and Four Wet Victories.

Lansing—Incomplete returns from the twelve counties voting on the local option issue Monday indicate that the drys have won in eight and the wets in four by the following vote; counties voting dry:

County.	Popula- tion	Result Monday
Benzie	10,638	85 D.
Kalkaska	8,097	386 D.
Mecosta	19,466	450 D.
Midland	14,005	550 D.
Shiawassee	33,245	45 D.
Oscoda	2,027	116 D.
Ingham	53,310	700 D.
Roscommon	2,274	54 D.

Counties voting wet:

Arenac	9,640	156 W.
Clare	9,240	156 W.
Ogemaw	8,907	49 W.
Wexford	20,761	10 W.

Clare and Wexford were previously dry and Ingham and Roscommon wet. These four are the only counties to change status by reason of Monday's vote.

It is the most notable victory ever won by the drys in Michigan. They carried all the populous counties in the zone of contest. Ingham, including the capital of the state, now wet, goes dry by over 700 votes; Mecosta, the home of the governor, now dry, remains so by an increased majority. Wexford, including the city of Cadillac, is close, but appears to be wet by 10 votes on the face of the returns give it to the wets by four majority with one precinct missing; that in the last previous contest gave 54 dry majority.

The anti-saloon league claims Ingham county by 1569 and the wets at 10 o'clock Monday night conceded that it had probably gone dry by 700 majority.

Despite the blizzard and bad country roads, the farmer vote apparently rallied in force, as usual, to the dry cause. There were abundant charges of colonization from dry sources but only one arrest was made. This was in Mason in Ingham county where a wet worker was charged with offering a $2 bribe to a voter.

It was in Ingham that both sides put up their hardest fight. Ingham went wet two years ago by 456 after two years of dryness. Prohibition will outlaw upwards of 35 saloons in the county.

Early returns from Wexford county indicated that the city of Cadillac had gone wet by a bare 200 majority. This was received with dubious shakes of the head at wet headquarters, it being declared that Cadillac should have showed double this wet majority to make Wexford safe for license.

Other Results.

Early returns from out in the state indicate that the voting was light for all city offices in cities where the local option issue was not involved and in many places rain, which began early, kept the voters at home. In Greenville a revision of the charter to include commission form of government was voted. St. Johns voted against a revision. In Hillsdale a proposition to build a good roads system appears to have lost.

With returns coming in slowly, the indications are in Washtenaw county that the state reward plan of good roads, adopted last spring, has been rescinded by a large majority. Ionia voted to revise its charter.

Shiawassee Must Assess Again.

Corunna, Mich.—William R. Kennedy, deputy state tax examiner, who had been in the county two days, has notified the supervisors that assessments throughout the county will have to be boosted or the state tax commission will come in and boost the valuations.

Two deputy tax examiners were in the county several weeks ago and spent two weeks comparing property sales with the assessed valuation of adjoining property, and the order of Examiner Kennedy is a result of their findings.

Extensive repairs are being made along the entire Huron lake front of summer cottages and cement walks damaged by November's big storm.

Roy McLellan, 19, son of James McLellan, a farmer, south of Sandusky, was instantly killed when his foot slipped and he plunged head-first into the fly-wheel of a gasoline engine in motion.

George Kerzin, 35, of Auburn, is at his home suffering from injuries suffered when a ton of slate and dirt fell on him in the Robert Gay mine Sunday. Kerzin was bending over in the mine when the roof caved in. Miners say that it is remarkable that none of his bones were broken. Fellow miners dug him out.

Secrets of the Wardrobe. When Winston Churchill was running for the governorship of New Hampshire, his opponents became pestiferously active, making speeches, writing letters and distributing campaign buttons. One morning a friend sent this telegram to Churchill:

"Have you no buttons for your supporters?"

The candidate was out of town and did not get the telegram, but a pretty girl stenographer did.

She sent this answering wire: "No. We use safety pins."

EVER, said Frederick Bronson. "But, father," Billy replied, "you haven't seen her. You haven't any right to say what you have, said about her, merely because you once quarreled with her father, and still cherish a grudge against him."

"Whether I have any right to say it or not, you may as well give up the idea of persuading me to ever have anything more to do with you if you marry her. Rather than receive a daughter of Henry Brooks as a member of my family I'd cut off my right arm. If you wish to break my heart and have me disinherit you go ahead and marry her—if she'll have you. Now you know exactly where I stand."

Billy Bronson looked at his father steadily for a moment and was silent. He thought of Helen Brooks and it was with difficulty that he controlled himself. He was strongly inclined to tell his father to do his worst—to fling defiance in his face. He kept his head, however, and without betraying his emotion, asked: "What was the trouble between you and her father?"

"I don't care to speak about that now," the older man replied. "He is dead. Let him rest in his grave. I merely give you notice that no daughter of his can ever set her foot inside my door—much less expect me to receive her as a member of my family."

"But Helen is the loveliest girl in the world," Billy fervently replied. "If you could only see her I know you'd change your mind. Besides, do you think it is fair to hold her responsible for anything her father may have done?"

"I don't hold her responsible. I merely don't want a daughter of

"Now You Know Exactly Where I Stand."

Henry Brooks to become the wife of my son. As for her being so lovely, that's all both. I suppose her experience on the stage has given her a mastery of the arts that young women of the world learn, so that she has been able to cast a spell over you. Take my advice and have nothing more to do with her. I don't believe any girl can lead that kind of a life and remain good."

"If Helen isn't good and pure," Billy indignantly replied, "there isn't a good and pure girl in the world. She hasn't really been on the stage, you know. She has merely sung in opera a few times. She says she doesn't care for the life and would much prefer to find a place in some church choir."

"I suppose she has merely been saying that to pull the wool over your eyes. But it doesn't interest me at all. I don't want to hear anything more about her. You'll oblige me by never referring to her again in my presence."

"Very well," said Billy, squaring his shoulders and permitting a set of his jaw to become a little more determined than ever. "I'll never bother you with the subject again—only I wish you would tell me what her father did to make you feel so bitter. I think you owe me that much, if you expect me to regard your wishes concerning Helen."

"It was a business matter. He was as bitter against me as I have been against him; so you may console yourself by remembering that if he were alive he would be just as strongly opposed to you as I am opposed to his daughter. Now let the whole thing drop. I refuse to discuss it any further."

Billy spent a wretched night. He was unable to sleep and spent the long hours thinking of Helen and trying to make up his mind to give up everything else for her. When morning came he was fully determined. In fact he had been determined from the first, but he had debated the question with himself in all its phases, and had been unable to arrive at any other conclusion than that Helen Brooks was more to him than everything else in the world.

He decided, however, that it would be useless to make his decision known as long as a declaration was unnecessary. There was one thing that bothered him more than his father's opposition to Helen. That was his fear that she would never consent to be his wife if she learned that their parents had been enemies, and he felt that he was in honor bound to tell her. While he was thinking the matter over at breakfast he was called to the telephone and informed that Mrs. Wallingford, the soprano of the church choir of which he was the director, had been stricken with appendicitis and would be compelled to undergo an operation at once. This would make it impossible for her to sing on Easter, which was only three days away.

Billy hurried to Dr. Williamson to consult him about it.

"We simply must have somebody who can take Mrs. Wallingford's place," said the reverend gentleman. "Easter is the occasion of all occasions when we ought to have our choir at its best. You must find somebody—somehow."

Billy suddenly brightened. "I will find somebody," he said. "I think I know a young lady who will come."

"Get her, by all means, if she can sing," the clergyman urged, and Billy hastened to Helen.

"I have an engagement for you for Easter," he said. "Will you come?"

There was a sparkle in her beautiful eyes, and a look of gladness over her face as she replied:

"I should think I would. You don't know how sorry I have been to think I was not going to have a chance to sing anywhere on Easter. Tell me all about it."

He hastily explained the situation and she agreed with much enthusiasm to fill Mrs. Wallingford's place.

"Only it's too bad," she said, "that the engagement had to come because of another's misfortune. You will have very little time and I will need to rehearse, you know."

When Easter Sunday came Billy Bronson was in a state of nervousness such as was not at all common to him. He had never worked as he had worked during those three days, and he felt ready to collapse when he took his place in the choir. Looking out at the immense congregation, he saw his father in a pew well down toward the front.

When Helen rose to sing her solo Billy held his breath and watched his father. He saw the old gentleman lean forward in his pew as the rich, sweet, sympathetic strains floated out. He had never heard such singing before, and the loveliness of the singer entranced him. The sternness faded out of Frederick Bronson's countenance; the spirit of Easter crept into his breast, and a look of glad benevolence overcame his face.

At the end of the service Mr. Bronson was in a very mellow state. He had hardly seen Billy for three days, and he wanted to grasp his son by the hand and offer him a word of congratulation on the success he had achieved in carrying out the musical program of the morning. When he had reached the vestibule he paused and looked back, but Billy was talking with a group of his friends.

He drew a deep sigh and went outside. His limousine was waiting for him at the curb. He was about to step into the vehicle when a hand was laid on his shoulder, and, turning, he looked into his son's radiant face.

"Hello, Billy," he said. "Get in. We'll ride home together."

"Won't you wait a minute, father?" Billy replied. "There's some one whom I want you to meet."

"Who is your new soprano?" Frederick Bronson asked.

"I will bring her out and introduce her to you," said Billy, and he rushed back into the church.

Mr. Bronson was holding the door of the limousine open when they approached him.

"Father," said Billy, "I want you to let me introduce Helen Brooks."

The old gentleman straightened up suddenly, was silent for a moment, and then, taking Helen's outstretched hand in his, said:

"This is the finest Easter day I ever saw. Come on, let's go home before somebody else gets you away from us."

Lighter Side of Easter

(By HENRY HOWLAND.)

WHAT do you think of my Easter hat, Bessie?" Mrs. Waddums asked when the maid entered and found her admiring herself before her mirror. "It's kind of nice," Bessie replied. "I almost bought it myself yesterday, but they told me, when I tried it on, that it wasn't young enough for me, and that it was intended for a middle-aged person."

Ten minutes later Mrs. Waddums had informed Chagrit & Sellum—that her hat didn't suit her, and that she would return it, with the hope that they would have the decency to let her have her money back.

When Henry Waddums had been informed by his wife that the hat had been returned and that the price had been refunded, he went to the maid and said:

"Bessie, you did that very well. I'm going to authorize Mrs. Waddums to raise your wages a dollar a week."

Dropped. Gladly—So you're keeping Lent? What have you given up?

Myrtle—Two of my beauty. I really didn't have any regular evenings left for them any way.

Never Deceived. A man may not be able to tell the difference, but a woman always knows whether an Easter hat is home-made or not.

Not Always.

"I suppose you sometimes feel sorry that your children are all boys."

"Yes; but never at Easter time."

THE KITCHEN CABINET

THE men whom I have seen succeed best in life have always been cheerful and hopeful men, who went about their business with a smile on their faces, and took their changes and chances of this mortal life like men.—Kingsley.

RISE OF THE POPOVER.

There are some places in our country made famous by the wonderful breakfast cakes like muffins and popovers. The secret of success in any line is painstaking care and she or he who gains a reputation in any line is one who not only does things well, but does them a little better than anybody else. There is real skill in the making and baking of a good muffin and popover. In the popover we want something entirely different from the texture of the muffin. The inside of the popover is hollow or made up of very large bubbles, so we must remember not to beat the eggs only enough to mix them, as the popover uses the eggs solely for the lightening. In all cakes in which eggs are used for the lightening the oven should be slow. With popovers it is extremely essential for their perfection that the oven should be slow at first. As the popover bakes in this, if heat is applied too rapidly at first the mass begins to expand quickly and the mixture being so thin the walls of the air cells burst and the popover refuses to pop. Have the oven so slow that the popovers rise very slowly the first 20 minutes.

Popovers—Take three eggs, a pint of milk and a pint of flour, sifted before measuring and a teaspoonful of salt. Grease nine deep cups or muffin pans; this is another point not usually followed; a shallow gem pan will not do, the deep granite cups make the best popovers; they will then rise 6 to 8 inches high. Break the eggs into a bowl without separating the yolks from the whites, beat just enough to mix them, then add the milk. In a second bowl have the flour and salt and add the egg mixture slowly, beating well until smooth. Strain through a sieve and put into the cups, they should be two-thirds full. They will be done in 50 minutes and should be as light as a feather when lifted. The interior is always slightly moist and they should be served without being piled on one another.

Cold popovers may be opened like cream puffs and filled with any desired filling, then served as a dessert or for a child's lunch. If filled with a good custard this is a most desirable dessert for children.

Thinkers are rare. Most of us think we think, but that is about as far as we get, and the worst of it is, we often fail to find out that we have been deluding ourselves until it is too late to acquire the habit.

"He guesses, thinks he's thought and expresses an opinion."

SOMETHING NEW.

Cuban Dish—Peel and slice four Bermuda onions into cold water. Leave them there half an hour and dry them well by laying them in a cloth. Have ready in a deep saucepan a dozen ripe tomatoes sliced thin, heat them slowly while you fry the onions in butter to a light brown. When the tomatoes are soft and thoroughly heated, season with salt a teaspoon of sugar and a few dashes of paprika. Add four young okra pods, canned will do, sliced thin, bring to the boiling point and add the fried onions, cook fast for 15 minutes. Line a platter with a well buttered toast and pour the "olla" over them. Set in the oven for three minutes to soak into the toast and then serve.

Genoa Dish—Stew a dozen tomatoes until soft, season with sugar, salt and cayenne to taste. Rub through a colander and return to the fire. In a deep frying pan heat three tablespoons of butter; break into it rapidly six eggs, stirring all the time. As soon as they are broken and mixed, pour on the tomatoes. Cook for 2 minutes, stirring all the time, then add three tablespoons of Parmesan cheese. Turn out and eat with brown bread.

Lamb's Liver au Casserole—Lay the liver in cold water slightly salted for a half hour to draw out the blood. Rinse it then wipe dry. Fry slices of fat salt pork until crisp and brown, set aside them, put them into the casserole and fry six slices of onion in the fat. Take out the onion and add the liver to the fat and brown well all over, add a little soup stock to cover thickened with flour and butter mixed together, add a few small potatoes or cut them in balls, a few onions the same size, a little parsley, put all in the casserole and cook for two hours. This makes a whole dinner with a light dessert and it may be served piping hot right from the casserole.

Humiliating. Harry—I understand Gertrude Gadelotte married a man who made a big fortune by a lucky speculation in rap.

Grace—Yes, and he disgraced her while they were on their honeymoon.

Harry—How did he do it?

Grace—Gertrude wanted the other passengers to think an ocean voyage was an old story to them when her husband, the first crack-out of the box, pointed to a row of life preservers and asked the captain what was the idea of all the extra ties.—Judge.

Hairdressing for Little Maids

HAIRDRESSING for little maids, from babyhood to the debutante age, really means the manner of using the hair ribbon, more than anything else. Every one who knows girls, little and big and all sizes between, knows how keenly they are interested in the latest hair bow, the newest hair ribbon, and how insistent they are in the matter of keeping up the pace set by the fashion leaders in their young world.

The baby girl finds ribbon-decked caps awaiting her. Before she reaches the dignity of enough hair to dress little rosettes of baby ribbon have made gay her headwear. When she gets to be in the neighborhood of two years old, the reign of ribbon begins for her and her first hair dressing is inaugurated with small rosettes and bands of baby ribbon-like that shown in the picture.

These little bands are made over narrow elastic, which adjusts them to the head. The rosettes are more or less simple according to taste and occasion of wearing.

As the baby girl grows older she is allowed wider ribbons, although the narrow ribbons continue to play a part in her hair ornaments. From the time she is five years old until she begins to dress her hair in the fashion for grown-ups the hair bow is a momentous question in her estimation.

For these buoyant decorations the best grades of taffeta ribbon will be found more satisfactory than other weaves. They stand wear and are easily freshened. The child should be taught to tie them so that creases will come in the same place, and to press them out with a warm iron under white tissue paper. These ribbons may be washed and ironed or dampened and ironed.

The bows are nearly always tied on the hair, but sometimes they are made and sewed to a hairpin or bow fastener. For handsome ribbons and for bows that are seldom worn it is best to make them in this way.

The position of the bow or bows depends on the accepted styles, that is, there are fashions in wearing bows. Their size is also determined in this way, and the shape of the loops, length of ends and other little details. The bows shown in the picture are made of ribbon five inches wide and are only moderately full. Such bows are always good style.

Hats That May Be Trimmed at Home

THERE are many women who from motives of thrift or because they like the work, undertake to trim their own hats. They are more likely to be successful when they select a model and undertake to copy it, than when they try to design for themselves. Two of the fashionable flower-trimmed hats (called "sailors" for some undiscovered reason), are pictured here which can be copied easily by the home milliner.

After making a selection in shapes the next thing is to decide upon the color of silk or ribbon to be used in facing the brim, and after that comes the choice of the trimmings. Supposing that a shape similar to those shown in the picture has been chosen and is to be trimmed with flowers, the work is proceeded with as follows:

Select a messaline or other soft ribbon, three to five inches wide, matching the hat in color but in any shade of that color which is desired. Or if the color is not becoming next the face as a facing, choose a harmonizing color that is becoming. For the facing buy a length of ribbon one and a half times the circumference of the hat brim at its edge. Hem the ribbon in a tiny hem about one-eighth of an inch deep along one edge. Use silk thread to match the ribbon and sew the hem in on the machine.

Insert in this little hem a fine wire called "shirring" wire. This should be one inch and a half longer than the circumference of the brim. Pull the ribbon evenly on the wire and finally overlap the ends of the wire about one inch and wind them together with silk thread. This forms a circle of the wire with a ruffle of ribbon gathered over it.

Place the wire edge of the ruffle on the underbrim of the hat near the edge and pin it down. Use a fine needle and silk thread matching it in color. Draw up the lining and sew on it a tiny bow made of baby ribbon. This completes the work.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Backache Warns You

Backache is one of Nature's warnings of kidney weakness. Kidney disease kills thousands every year. Don't neglect a bad back. If your back is lame—if it hurts to stoop or lift—if there is irregularity of the secretions—suspect your kidneys. If you suffer from backache, dizziness and are tired, nervous and worn-out, you have further proof. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, a fine remedy for bad backs and weak kidneys.

AN OMO CASE

Francis M. Hurman, 45 E. 14th St., Portsmouth, Ohio, says: "My back has given out completely and I had to use two canes to get around. If I dropped one, I couldn't stoop to pick it up. My back was terribly lame and painful and by spells I was laid up in bed. I lost hope. As it seemed that nothing could be done for me, I fortunately heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and before long they made me strong and well, so that I could work. I have remained cured."

RASH ITCHED AND BURNED

400 South, Hermitage Ave., Chicago, Ill.—"I was attacked with a breaking out on the inside of my arms. It was a small rash or pimples and it itched and burned, especially at night, so that before I knew it I had made myself sore. I had to wear the finest kind of cotton underwear, no woolen at all, because the least thing irritated it and made it much worse. The rash itched and smarted until at times I got no sleep at all."

"I had this trouble and took treatments for about one year, but they only gave me relief while taking them. Then I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I got relief right away. In three months I was a well man again." (Signed) H. W. Foley, Nov. 5, 1912.

LOOK for the following points in the manure spreader you buy: 1. Correct, efficient, well-tested design. 2. Guarantee of first-class materials. 3. Reinforcing of parts where strains usually come. 4. Strength of parts where occasional strains come. 5. Wearing qualities and protection of driving parts. 6. Reputation of manufacturer, insuring efficient repair service. Satisfied American farmers find these essentials in International manure spreaders. International spreaders have, besides, many features that grew out of long field experience. Study the steel construction in frame, wheels, and driving mechanism; the easily-removable beater; the differential in rear axle, insuring even spreading while turning corners; the reversible worm and gear; low, easily-loaded box; and many others. International spreaders are of all styles and sizes, high and low, endless and reverse apron. Write for illustrated catalogues, and when we send them we will tell you where you may see the spreaders.

Keeps Your Stove "Always Ready for Company"

A bright, clean, glossy stove is the joy and pride of every housekeeper. But it is hard to keep a stove nice and shiny unless Black Silk Stove Polish is used. Here is the reason: Black Silk Stove Polish sticks right to the iron. It doesn't rub off or dust off. Its shine lasts four times longer than the shine of any other polish. You only need to polish one-fourth as often, yet your stove will be cleaner, brighter and better looking than it has been since you first bought it. Use on your parlor stove, kitchen stove or gas stove. Get a can from your hardware or stove dealer. If you do not find it better than any other stove polish you have ever used before, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. But we feel sure you will agree with the thousands of who up-to-date women who are now using Black Silk Stove Polish and who say it is the "best stove polish ever made."

BLACK SILK STOVE POLISH

LIQUID OR PASTE ONE QUALITY

Be sure to get the genuine. Black Silk Stove Polish costs you no more than the ordinary kind. Keep your grates, registers, fenders and stove pipes bright and free from rusting by using BLACK SILK AIR-DRYING ENAMEL. Brush free with each can of enamel only.

Use BLACK SILK METAL POLISH for silverware, nickel, tinware or brass. It works quickly, easily, and leaves a brilliant surface. It has no equal for use on automobiles.

PRINCESS THEATRE

COMING ATTRACTIONS

Tomorrow, Friday evening, the Princess offers the second of the Warner's features, "A Waif of the Plains" a three reel picture made on Miller Bros. 101 Ranch and features the former Powers stars Baby Early and Elsie Albert. It is an exceedingly powerful story of the early American settlers, with lots of action, genuine cowboys, and many stirring and dramatic settings.

On Saturday evening the offering will be Shakespeare's delightful comedy "The Taming of the Shrew." It is in three reels produced with a superb cast of photoplayers. For years stage productions of this famous old classic have been given. The motion picture production of "The Taming of the Shrew" is quite as delightful as any stage production. You will enjoy this superb Warner features with its atmosphere of clean wholesome comedy.

Next Wednesday evening the feature will be a sensational film "In the Clutches of the Ku Klux Klan." The Ku Klux Klan, originally a splendid organization formed after the Civil war by property owners for protection against ignorant and superstitious negroes, later degenerated into bands of outlaws which the Government eventually broke up by armed force. The action of this story takes place in North Carolina, where one of the strongest outlaw klans flourished. It is presented by the Gene Gauntier Feature Players, and may be said to be historically accurate in every particular. There is excitement and action in every scene of the three parts. The picture features the worlds most popular motion star, Miss Gene Gauntier, and her capable company.

BROOKLYN—An increased amount of spraying is going to be done by fruit growers here this year. High winds and rainy weather have lately prevented activities, but the first good day will start the oil and lime sulphur clouds. The scale made terrific gains in this locality last season and growers recognize that it is either spray or lose the trees. Next year will be too late for many of them. Only while the trees are dormant as now can the spray be applied strong enough to kill the scale. Fungous diseases which renew growth with the first damp days of spring are also killed by the strong dormant spray, which can be neglected by no grower here who desires to raise good fruit.—Argus.

Of Course You Are Going to Clean House

House Furnishings

When the cold, chilly winds of winter have given away to the balmy breezes of spring, and nature is pulsating with new life and energy, we are made mindful of the fact that it is time to be up and doing. While the farmer is preparing to fit the fields for the seed he must sow in order to reap the harvest. The busy housewife is preparing to renovate the home, and there is always some things that must be replaced with new. We want every woman in and around this town to know that we are better prepared than ever before to render her every assistance in the selection of any new article of house furnishings she may find it necessary to buy. Both from the standpoint of quality and value. We are more than meeting any competition whether it be the retail store or the mail order house. Everything is new here and our guarantee is back of the goods we sell. Our thirty-five years merchandising experience is of considerable consequence in the judging of values and accordingly as we secure values can we give values. You must have the worth of your money here or we are not satisfied.

SYNOPSIS.

Joseph Hayward, an ensign in the United States army, on his way to Fort Hammar, meets Simon Girty, a renegade whose name has been connected with all manner of atrocities, also headed for Fort Hammar, with a message from the British general, Hamilton. Hayward guides him to the fort. At General Hammar's headquarters Hayward meets Rene D'Auvray, who professes to recognize him, although he has no recollection of ever having seen her before. Hayward volunteers to carry a message for Hammar to Sandusky, where Hamilton is stationed. The northwest Indian tribes are ready for war and are only held back by the refusal of the friendly Wyandots to join. The latter are demanding the return of a Wyandot and a missionary among the Indians. She has been in search of her father. She insists that she has seen Hayward before, but he has no recollection. Hayward starts for the north accompanied by a scout named Brady and a private soldier.

"Put her into the bank there, boys, to the right," I commanded. "Beyond the roots of that big oak. We'll breakfast, and then rest awhile."

This was accomplished with a sweep of the paddles, and we stepped ashore, the Indians drawing the light canoe well up into the mud, Brady stamping about to restore circulation. Schultz collapsed in his seat, and I stopped to shake him.

"Tired, man? Move about and you'll feel better."

"Mein Gott," he moaned, rolling his eyes up at me imploringly. "I was mosed mit der tire-ness. Mein feet won't move already."

"That will be all right, Schultz," I said kindly. "I'll help you ashore, and you can rest awhile, until you feel better. I'll do the cooking this morning."

We were still too close to the settlements to be in very much danger, and felt little necessity for guarding our presence. White hunters penetrated as far north as the forks, and any raiding parties of hostile Indians would have been reported. Brady shook his head when I mentioned the possibility, smoking calmly.

"There ain't no red-skins down in yer," he returned confidently. "Or some of the boys along the river would o' let me know."

"How far have we come?"

He spoke to the Delawares, and one of them replied in his own language.

"He reckons 'bout fifty miles, though it would be less than that straight across country. It takes maybe two days an' a night to make the forks with good paddling."

As none of the toll of our progress up stream had thus far fallen upon me, I remained on guard over the tired sleepers, cleaning away the debris of the meal, and packing the cooking utensils back in the canoe. The men slept soundly, although I noticed how any movement, even the slight rustle of leaves in a sudden puff of wind, served to rouse Brady or the Indians to instant consciousness. They possessed the instinct of wild animals, ever alert to danger. It must have been fully noon when I aroused them, and we again headed the canoe up stream, Brady willingly taking the soldier's place at the after paddle, while I lay back in the stern, my coat serving for a pillow, and finally fell asleep.

The river narrowed rapidly as we advanced northward, until the great trees on either bank nearly obscured the sun overhead. The Delawares were already exhibiting a disinclination to proceed, and we were compelled to hold them by threats to their work. Each mile of advance northward added to their terror, and made our task more difficult. Once Brady struck the chief, driving him back to his place in the canoe. This was when we discovered unmistakable signs that a party of Miami had crossed the river only shortly before we passed the spot.

However, we ran the gauntlet safely, a mere silent shadow slipping along in the dark shade of the protecting banks, and thus finally attained the fork, and landed on the west shore. It was dark when we got there, but the Delawares were so eager to return, that we immediately put ashore all we intended to pack with us, and parted with them gladly. The canoe sped swiftly away into the gloom, leaving the three of us alone. Bearing our loads with us, we groped a blind way through the forest, back toward the foot of the bluff, where we made camp, as best we might, at the mouth of a ravine, well sheltered by underbrush, and lay down, without venturing to light a fire. For some time, scarcely a memory of Rene D'Auvray had remained with me, my mind being fully occupied with the increasing peril of our position; yet as I lay there in the silence, looking up at the stars, her eyes seemed suddenly to smile again into mine, and I dreamed of her as I slept. The dawn found us safe, seemingly alone in the wilderness.

CHAPTER V.

The Text of a War Party.

Before the sun's rays touched the summit of the bluff, we were climbing the sides of the ravine, with light packs on our shoulders. Brady led the way, fearless and watchful, his long rifle held ready in the crook of his arm, his alert eyes searching out the ground ahead. Behind him lumbered Schultz, heavy-footed, and grumbling Dutch oaths at every misstep, yet somehow managing to keep up; while I brought up the rear, my gaze intent on the surrounding ridges.

For three days we encountered nothing to alarm. Brady purposely kept away from all trails, trusting implicitly to his instinct as a woodsman to discover a safe passage. He possessed the instincts of the wild, the subtlety of the savage, born of constant peril and loneliness.

Once, where we forded a considerable stream, which I think now must have been the Vermillion, we came upon the blackened remains of a campfire, apparently deserted but a few hours before. Brady examined it with great care, trailing the party to the river bank, and then making a wide circuit of the woods, before he finally returned satisfied.

"Less than three hours gone," he said soberly, "and traveling north."

"Do you know who they were?" I asked. "How many were in the party?"

Miamis and Ojibwas, I reckon, and they had a prisoner, bound to that small tree out yonder; see here, Hayward, the fellow had boots on, and not moccasins. From the trail they made here on the bank there must have been twelve or fifteen Indians; ay, and a white renegade," he bent down again to study a track in the mud, "for this is no red-skin's foot, with the toes turned out." He swore, the only oath I had heard thus far from his lips, plucking a few long hairs from off a spittle of underbrush, and holding them up into the sunlight. "A war party all right, with scalps. One fellow brushed against this bush as he came down the bank; from the color they must have been raiding the German settlements."

I stared at the floating hairs, shuddering in horror, and hands gripped hard on my rifle.

"Good God! and they are going our way?"

"That needn't trouble us, while they leave a plain trail behind. Those devils feel safe enough now, or they'd take more care. We are in no danger while they keep ahead of us."

We made a detour to the right, plunging straight forward into the unbroken woods. Brady led at a fast gait, his trained iron muscles tireless, while I urged the breathless soldier to exertions, warning him by constant reference to the raiders so close at hand. The perspiration rolled down his face, yet he kept close to Brady's heels, falling flat on the ground during our brief halts, but determined not to be left behind. There was certainly good stuff in the fellow, although he swore stiffly, and had a tread like an elephant. Just before dark, the forest about us already in gloom, we suddenly emerged from out the shadow of great trees, and stood on the shore of a lake girded with woods. A few hundred feet from where we stood a small rocky island, dense with trees, rose above the mirrored surface. After one swift glance about the line of shore, Brady's eyes rested on this haven, as though questioning its feasibility as a night camp. There was a yellow tinge to the intervening water, suggestive of shallowness, and I spoke first.

"It will be dark in a few minutes more; isn't that a sand-ridge leading out yonder?"

"It looks so to me," he replied quietly, "but the only sure way to tell is to test the passage. In my judgment we better get out there if we can, for there's no knowin' where these injuns may be."

He led the way, and we followed in single file, our packs and rifles held high overhead. The water deepened until it reached Schultz's armpits, but there was no perceptible current, and the sand underfoot was firm as rock. Deep purple shadows were firm as rock. Deep purple shadows seemed to shut us in, as we clambered up the steep bank of the island, our clothes dripping. Brady with outstretched hand helped me to climb, clinging with his other to a sapling. Then he pointed across the darkened surface toward the lower end of the lake. In the distance there was the red glow of a fire, barely visible.

The island was wider than I had supposed, and must have contained fully five acres, densely wooded, with no sign of a trail anywhere. Apparently we were the first explorers to penetrate its thickets. Suddenly we came to the edge of a small opening, sloping down like a saucer, grass covered and treeless, open to the sky, but with a dark irregular something at its center. So shapeless was this black blotch that I took it at first to be a clump of brush, but the scout gripped my arm.

"Hayward! there's a log house!" he whispered, pointing. "Do you see? Keep the Dutchman back."

I dropped to my knees, and studied the dim outline, which the night rendered so indistinct. Little by little it assumed more definite shape—a one-story log hut, with an extension at the rear, and an outside chimney forking up beside the roof. It was a gloomy-looking place, with no glimmer of light showing anywhere.

"What do you make of it?" asked Brady in a whisper, as though doubting his own eyes.

"It's a house, all right," I answered. "Some French hunter's shack."

He shook his head negatively.

"They don't build like that. It beats me, but whoever built that house put it up to live in. Howsoever I don't see no sign o' anybody that now, an' I'm goin' ter find out what the shebang looks like. Dutchy, you stay yer, an' watch these things, while the two o' us scouts round a bit."

Stooping low, so as not to be so easily perceived in the darkness, the two of us, grasping our rifles in readiness, stole across the open space toward the house. There was no sign of life so far as could be seen or heard, yet if the place was deserted it could not have been for long, as there were no appearances of decay or abandonment of the premises. The log walls were firm, the clay between resisting the pressure of our fingers in an attempt to dislodge it, and the only door noticed was tightly closed. We hesitated to open this, uncertain what mystery might await us within, and listening anxiously for any sound. The stillness was so profound as to be painful, and, whispering to me to stand back, with rifle poised Brady silently lifted the strong wooden latch. The door slid back in grooves, the sound of movement barely perceptible, and we stared into the black interior, seeing nothing except a little section of dirt floor, dimly revealed by the stars overhead.

"We'll feel it out, boy," muttered the scout, his hand gripping my arm. "No body at home, I reckon, but it won't do to risk a light. You take that side, an' I'll take this, an' see what we find."

I moved forward slowly, foot by foot, feeling blindly with one hand, the other grasping my rifle. I came to a rude bench, home-made without nails, touched a small table with crossed legs, holding nothing but an empty pewter bowl, felt the ehaggy skin of some animal fastened against the log wall, and then a few articles of warm clothing dangling from wooden pins. These were rough garments, made of skins, with a single coarse shirt. Beyond them my fingers came in contact with the latch of a door. As I touched this the menacing growl of some animal broke the intense stillness. I stepped back, startled, and in my recoil, came into contact with a man. A hand like iron gripped me, but it was Brady's voice that spoke: "From the other room," he said shortly, "a dog."

"A dog! Then why hasn't he barked?"

"Because he is not that kind, I reckon; a big brute from his growl. Did you find anything?"

I told him briefly.

"Fireplace on my side, two chairs and an ax in the corner," he added shortly. "Nobody home but the dog, I reckon, but we will have to fight it out with him, before we take possession. Stand where you are until I feel out the door. Leather hinges, and opens this way. Here, Hayward, take hold of the latch; we'll have to brain the brute. Don't open until I say so, and then only about a foot. Brace yourself to hold it firm, and keep your gun ready; I've got the ax."

I took my position, but with heart beating rapidly, and waited. The dog, as though realizing danger, flung himself with full force against the door, and gave one deep bark of savage ferocity. Brady touched my hand, locating the opening. Then there was an instant of silence.

"Now!" he said.

I lifted the wooden latch, gripping with both hands, my shoulders and foot braced. There was a fierce leap of the brute, so sudden as to cause me to give back, the thud of descending ax, a howl of pain and rage, the ugly snap of jaws. Coarse hair swept my hands; there was another blow, the sound of a falling body; then the helve of the ax struck my foot. Back and forth on the dirt floor man and brute struggled, crashing into the table, and overturning it. Brady uttered one oath; then the dog snarled, and lay still, while I stood with the ax poised, unable to tell which was which in the darkness. Something moved, and I took a step forward.

"Brady!"

"All right," he said breathlessly, "I had to knife the brute—he was as big as a calf, and—and he got my shoulder. Did you find a window on your side?"

"No."

"There was none on mine. We'll have to risk a light, I reckon, for I'm bleedin' considerable. Try the fireplace yonder."

I felt my way along the wall, discovered some tinder, and, with flint and steel from my pocket, coaxed a blaze. There were a few pieces of wood piled up on the hearth, and a moment later, the curling red flames revealed the entire interior. Brady rested against the bench, the sleeve of his blouse ripped into shreds, blood dripping from his fingers, and sinking into the earth floor. A few feet away, a great mass of shaggy hair, lay the dog in a heap, his lips still drawn back in a snarl, revealing the cruel white teeth, the shaft of a knife protruding from the throat. He was a massive animal, terrifying to look upon even in death. Yet I barely glanced that way, assured that he was dead, and all my interest centered on Brady, his face ghastly under the brown tan. There was a water bucket half filled on a low bench, and I tore down the shirt from the peg, and swabbed out the wound. It was a jagged, ugly gash, the print of each tooth revealed, and the man clinched his hands in agony as I worked rapidly. The blood staunching somewhat I bound it tightly with a silk neckerchief, and gave him a drink of brandy from my pocket flask. This brought a little color back into the man's face, and he found strength to sit up, resting against the bench, his eyes on the dead dog.

"Mastiff," he said, "and the biggest devil I ever saw. I hit him with the ax the first blow, but in the dark failed to strike high enough, I reckon. What do you suppose he was guardin' so savage?"

I shook my head, glancing about at the open door. Brady's eyes followed mine.

"Get a light of some kind, Hayward, and take a look," he said slowly, "and then have Dutchy bring in the packs."

I did as he suggested, finding a bit of pitchy wood that burned freely, and holding it out before me as I peered cautiously through the opening. A glance about told me that the lean-to was used as a shed, for it was half filled with split wood, opened boxes, and various odds and ends. This knowledge came to me in a flash, but the sight which riveted my eyes was the body of a man lying directly beyond the doorway, face upward, his skull cleft as if by the vicious blow of an ax.

CHAPTER VI.

Captain D'Auvray.

"What is it?" asked Brady, startled by my sudden exclamation, and striving to get up. I glanced back at him.

"A dead man; stay where you are; he is dead all right. I'll be back in a moment."

I stepped within, and held the torch down closer, the ghastly yellow light falling full on the upturned face. He was a man of seventy, or over, a sturdy looking fellow for his years, in the garments of a French courier de bois; his features strong, refined, bearing even in death a certain peculiar dignity, increased by a snow-white beard. Apparently he had not been dead long, nor was there slightest evidence of struggle; the hands were empty, and, judging from the ugly gash in his head, he had been struck from behind unexpectedly. It was a ghastly wound, and the man had probably died instantly. The blow must have been a treacherous one, delivered by some person acquainted with the cabin; otherwise the dog would have sprung to his master's defense. Plainly this was murder, and the assassin had taken his time; had closed the door, locked in the dog; had even washed off the blade of the ax, and left it standing there against the wall. What could have been the object? Was it revenge? Robbery? I felt in the pocket of the loose blouse, finding nothing, but my eye caught the glimmer of a medal fastened to the front of the shirt. I unplugged it, and held it up to the light of the torch, studying out the French inscription, letter by letter, half guessing at its meaning—it was a medal of honor, given for special gallantry in action at Fontenoy to Capt. Raoul D'Auvray.

To the Middle-Aged.

Say to yourself that you are entering upon the autumn of your life; that the graces of spring and the splendors of summer are irrevocably gone, but that autumn weather is often darkened by rain, cloud and mist, but the air is still soft, and the sun still delights the eyes, and touches the yellowing leaves, carelessly; it is the time for fruit, for harvest, for the vintage, the moment for making provision for the winter—André's Jour-

VOTE LIGHT IN ELECTION MONDAY

SEVERAL PROPOSITIONS ARE PASSED ON IN VARIOUS COUNTIES.

COMPLETE LIST OF MAYORS

Jackson and Greenville Indorse Commission Form While St. Johns and Ypsilanti Reject It.

Lansing—Outside of the cities where there were bitter contests or where local option was the issue, the vote in Michigan Monday was very light. Even in Grand Rapids, where the hardest fought municipal campaign it was thought would establish a record, the vote was not as large as expected. In the number of mayors elected, the republicans appear to have the better of it.

Special propositions were voted on in many places. Pontiac voters favored municipal ownership of all public utilities while Ypsilanti turned down the proposition to build a $150,000 gas plant. Gladwin county voted $75,000 for good roads, but St. Clair turned down the $500,000 good roads bonding project, although that county favored a $40,000 poor house. Bad Axe defeated the new court house bonds. Lapeer defeated a municipal lighting plant by 86.

Jackson and Greenville decided on a commission form of government, Ypsilanti and St. Johns voting against it. Port Huron voters turned down the plan to employ an industrial secretary at $2,500 a year. Ionia voted to revise its charter.

Mayors were elected as follows: Albion—Burnett, Dem. Alma—Prof. A. P. Cook, Rep. Adrian—A. W. Chase, Dem. Alpena—William A. Comstock, Dem. Boyne City—C. C. Schaub, Union. Bessmer—W. J. Trevorthorn, Tax Reform.

Benton Harbor—Dr. C. M. Roynoe, Dem. Cheboygan—J. C. Rittenhouse, Dem. Coldwater—G. E. Kleindinst, Rep. Charlotte—Geo. Brackett, Dem. Eaton Rapids—C. H. Horner, Rep. Escanaba—Oliver P. Chatfield, Citizens.

Flint—John R. McDonald, Pro. Fremont—W. S. Neff. Grand Haven—Nathaniel Robbins, Citizens. Grand Rapids—George H. Ellis, Non-partisan.

Greenville—C. H. Gibson, Rep. Gladwin—F. M. Aslett, Rep. Hancock—Abraham Ojala, Citizens. Hastings—William R. Jamieson, Rep. Hillsdale—L. A. Goodrich, Rep. Iron Mountain—Dr. S. E. Cruise, Citizens.

Ionia—Fred W. Green, Rep. Ishpeming—G. G. Barnett, Rep. Ironwood—Henry Rowe, Citizens. Kalamazoo—B. Connable, Rep. Lansing—Gottlieb Reutter, Dem. Lapeer—R. F. Frary, Rep. Ludington—A. A. Keiser, Rep. Manistee—John P. Patterson, Dem. Muskegon—John H. Moore, Pro. Mt. Clemens—William F. Nank, Rep.

Mason—A. A. Bergman, Dem. Marine City—Geo. W. Becker, Dem. Muskegon Heights—A. J. Slinney. Nemoine—Marshall B. Lloyd, Rep. Manistee—Frank A. Mitchell, Pro. Mackinac Island—M. G. Bailey, Citizens.

Midland—S. B. Gordon, Rep. Marshall—C. E. Gauss, Dem. Negaunee—W. S. Heggerton, Citizens. Norway—J. C. Weekstrom, Citizens. Owosso—James De Young, Rep. Potosky—Chas. J. Ditto, Rep. St. Ignace—W. S. Wing, Rep. St. Clair—Max Jennings, Rep. St. Johns—Geo. H. Schoenhals, Dem. St. Louis—J. H. Whitney, Rep. St. Joseph—A. J. Wallace, Citizens. South Haven—Harry W. Barnes, Pro.

Sandusky—George Tarrant. Stanton—E. S. Stebbins, Rep. West Branch—E. R. Chapin, Union. Yale—James Wallace, Rep. Ypsilanti—Lee Brown, Dem. Zeeland—John Mock, Pro.

ITEMS OF STATE INTEREST

Rev. J. D. Sutton, 95, of St. Clair, is dead. He preached in several Michigan towns and retired in 1878.

The state board of corrections and charities has forbidden Sheriff Rimmel from making repairs to the Saginaw county jail. The county must build a new jail, the board says.

The supreme court has issued a writ of certiorari against Judge Gilday, of Monroe county, to review a court "some time ago to compel the Detroit, Monroe & Toledo Short Line railway to operate two more cars each day between Monroe and Detroit and between Monroe and Toledo.

The office of the Henry Stephens Co. at Waters burned Sunday night, with a loss of $5,000. The postoffice was located in part of the building. All records were stored in a vault and were saved.

MICHIGAN LAW HELD UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Washington—An automobile owner cannot be held responsible for injuries caused by his car while not under his control or direction. That was the ruling of the United States supreme court in the case of John Parrott, Macomb county farmer, against the Metzger Motor Car Co. Parrott was given a verdict of $1,800 because Metzger's chauffeur ran him down while taking an unauthorized pleasure ride. The high court held that the Michigan law permitting recovery of damages under such circumstances is unconstitutional because it deprives a person of property without due process of law.

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFS

The Albion high school debating team to meet Port Huron high at Port Huron, April 17, consists of Ellery Oakes, Paul Burns and Harold Wochholz.

Plans for a new 375-room hotel at a cost of $175,000, to be erected opposite the Union station in Grand Rapids, are announced by Louis H. Mehrkens.

Twenty-five new members will be added to Company "C," Michigan National Guard, at Port Huron, before the annual government inspection, April 21.

The working time of about 350 men in the Anna Arbor shops at Owosso has been cut from six to three days a week. Dull freight business was given as the cause.

Melba Lighthall, 26 years old, of Saginaw, fell in a Saturday against a wire fence and strangled to death. The accident occurred on the street near where he lived.

The state board of corrections and charities has ordered the board of supervisors to provide a new jail at Kalamazoo because of the unsanitary condition of the old building.

The 22-month-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Desire Luzerne, of the town of Gardner, died at a local hospital from strangulation, the result of a peanut becoming lodged in its throat.

Capt. R. O. Ragsdale, United States army inspector, instructor for the Michigan National Guard, and Adj. Gen. Roy Vandercreek are on a tour of inspection of the Michigan Guard.

Members of the Equal Suffrage association are planning to start a suffrage paper in Michigan. Charles Wilkinson, former Grand Rapids newspaper man, will probably publish the paper.

The oldest immigrant ever known to enter this country through Detroit came in the person of James Quinn, 106 years old, of Toronto. Mr. Quinn came on a visit to his son, George Quinn.

Lester O. Moody, of Detroit, has been offered the position of local secretary of the Holland Y. M. C. A., which has just been launched here under the auspices of the state association.

Joseph Harris, charged with setting fire to a house in Port Huron occupied by a number of foreigners and alleged to have confessed the crime, was discharged in police court Monday for lack of evidence.

Secretary Chas. A. Gadd, of the board of education, estimates Detroit will receive about $1,950,000 in the primary school fund apportionment of the state this year for the payment of teachers' salaries.

Kalamazoo county's good roads commission has started the construction of 28 miles more of good roads. During the last five years the county has built from 25 to 30 miles of state reward roads each year.

Production and delivery of beer stopped in Detroit Tuesday when 1,200 brewery employees failed to get a two-year agreement, calling for higher wages. Only the office force and engineers were on duty.

Arthur Aikens, marshal, of Onaway, has been arrested on a charge of manslaughter, in connection with the death of Benjamin D. Gallero, who died on March 8, while confined in the city jail. His examination has been set for April 21. He is out on bail.

Two men were killed and two injured when an infernal machine, sent by members of the "Black Hand," exploded in the drug store of Dr. Victor Gusmano, Detroit, at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. Gusmano was killed instantly, his body horribly mangled and burned, and "Sam" Cipriano lost both arms, dying when he reached St. Mary's hospital.

Cases of whooping cough, scarlet fever, measles and smallpox, separated only by screens, will be found in the new $25,000 contagious hospital, just completed in Anna Arbor, which will be opened in about a month.

Thomas Doran, of Saginaw, who has started suit against the Saginaw-Bay City Street Car Railroad Co. for $5,000 for alleged personal injuries, says in his declaration that he accepted $42 from a personal friend in settlement of his claim, not knowing the man was an agent for the traction company.

BOTH VERSATILE AND STRONG

Young English Author Especially Fitted With Talent Along Many Lines Other Than Writing.

Elfrid Reynolds, the young English woman who is the author of the "Whispering Dust," belongs to an Yorkshire family, and numbers among her ancestors Elizabeth Fry, prison reformer, the poet Bloomfield, and James Ward and George Land, both noted as painters. Reynolds spent her childhood in a wide, heather-covered Yorkshire moor and the wild Cornish coast. This is a story of space, freedom and the menialities which she voices in "Whispering Dust." It is doubtless the result of her early environment.

The book itself is the result of winter on the Mediterranean and Egypt, but the heroine, who is thirty years of cramping duties as a nurse's daughter and a companion, "longs to accomplish something that can be by no means by the author. Miss Reynolds has accomplished a great deal in less than three years. She created stories before she could read; wrote, acted and produced plays for home and school before she reached her teens; published her story at sixteen and her first novel, "Red of the Rock," at twenty. She has a decided talent for drawing and singing and her favorite recreation show that she can be by no means a dreamer. Among them are sailing, fishing, dancing, winter sports, caravanning, amateur theatricals, topography, painting, drawing and writing.

MAN THEY WERE LOOKING FOR

Fortune Was Good to Youngsters
Eager for the Delights of the Moving Picture Theater.

"Going in?" queried the small boy excitedly.

His question was put to the elderly pedestrian. Behind the boy came other boys, all peering eagerly into the pedestrian's puzzled face.

They hung to his footsteps until he found himself, a little further on, in the midst of a numerous crowd of youngsters. Each boy clamored for the pedestrian to accept a five-cent piece.

"What is all this?" demanded the pedestrian sharply.

"We are too young to go in alone," volunteered a ready spokesman. "If you will buy our tickets for us we can go in with you."

Then came a sudden light and the old man smiled broadly. He went to the ticket window of an adjacent moving-picture theater, where he paused to count faces.

"Nine tickets," he said.

"There is a law against children," objected the ticket man. "Are those little people with you?"

"They are," declared the old man. "Come on, boys—going in?"

FINNS

A PATRIOTIC RACE

AMONG the distinguished women of the world can be named Fru Alno Malmberg, a well known Finnish writer and lecturer. This woman is now living in London. In the course of a recent interview, Mme. Malmberg, who would have been elected a member of the Finnish parliament had not the government of St. Petersburg sent her into exile, stated that Finland was in a very bad way.

"Russia," she said, "is breaking up gradually, bit by bit, all that remains to us of the Finnish constitution. The most strenuous efforts are being made to Russify our country. Recently it became obligatory for all school children to learn the Russian language, and now the czar's government refuses to vote any money whatever for next year toward our national education. If no funds are granted, the schools will have to be closed. That will not matter, however, as we shall teach our children ourselves."

"The senate now in power is composed almost entirely of Russian members, who, of course, do not represent Finland. Some time ago a law was passed by a majority of three-fourths of the members of the landtag to abolish the sale of all alcoholic liquors. The bill did not at first go through the senate, but finally it was passed by both houses. Then—like all other measures—it was forwarded to the czar for his indorsement. The czar refused his assent. This is significant when it is remembered that

"Russia, of course, sent the troops against us with the order—should it be necessary—to destroy Helsinki and all its inhabitants. What could we do? We sent a deputation of three men to speak for us. Two miles away from the town they found the encampment of Russian soldiers waiting with their big guns pointed in the direction of Helsinki. When our representatives asked the soldiers if they were going to fire on the Finnish people, the men said 'No, we will not fire. Should our officers command us to fire, we will shoot them instead!'"

"And so the great strike ended, Russia, for once, having conceded all that we asked. At that time it was too busily engaged with Japan to pay much attention to Finland."

Home Research Society.

"The Finns are the most patriotic race in the world and are passionately attached to their country, 'the land of a thousand lakes.' In reality there are more than 100,000. One institution we have which is, I think, peculiar to the Finnish people, although there exists a pale imitation of it in Sweden. It is called the Home Research society, and every Finn is a member, be he rich or poor, land owner or peasant. On its archives is kept a faithful record of every inch of our country and of all events that take place throughout the land. The peasant, for instance, will describe his house, the furniture in it, how much land he owns, the nature of the soil, the number and kind of domestic ani-

DAIRY FACTS

DAIRY INDUSTRY IN HOLLAND

Immense Amount of Butter and Cheese Exported From Little Kingdom—Land is High.

The little country of Holland exports an immense amount of butter and cheese. In this country land is worth from $500 to $1,000 per acre, yet these people pay their rents or interest on the investment by producing butter and cheese which they place on the European markets in successful competition with that produced in America on land of less than one-fifth the value.

A cheese market is held one day in each week in the towns. One of the largest markets is in the town of Alkmaar. The market consists of a government weighhouse and a square block of pavement. On market day the farmers drive in early with the cheese they have made, pile them in neat piles on straw on the pavement and cover them with canvas to protect them from sun or rain. Cheese buyers, representing commission firms from the different parts of the country are present. Precisely at ten o'clock the gong sounds, the market opens, and the scene is a busy one. In about two hours 60,000 cheese will change hands. After being sold the cheese are removed on carriers, each borne by two men, to the official weighhouse, where they are weighed and then packed into boxes on the canal near by and taken to the different cities or stored in large curing houses close by.

A summary of the points to be followed in operating the Babcock test as given in circular No. 122 from the Ohio experiment station follows:

1. Secure a representative sample.
2. Measure out the required amount of milk with the 17.6 c. c. pipette and deliver it to the test bottle.
3. Add 17.5 c. c. sulphuric acid for whole milk, 20 c. c. for skim milk; mix gently but thoroughly.
4. Place in centrifuge and whirl at full speed for five or six minutes for whole milk, seven to eight minutes for skim milk.
5. Add hot water to bring the fat up to the neck of the bottle.
6. Whirl again at full speed for two or three minutes for whole milk, two or four minutes for skim milk.
7. Add hot water again to bring the fat up in the neck of the bottle to the 8 or 9 per cent mark.
8. Give final twirling at full speed for at least one minute.
9. Read the test at 125 to 140 degrees Fahrenheit.
10. Record the test and empty the bottles immediately; cleanse thoroughly by shaking to remove sediment.

VALUE OF A COW'S PRODUCTS

Sales Should Reach at Least $50 Per Annum to Allow Dairy Man to Break Even on Investment.

The value of a cow's products should pay the cost of feed, the labor of caring for her, even though no help is hired, and at least six per cent interest on the capital invested, that is on the value of the cow and the cost of sheltering her. Feed, labor and interest for the average cow kept in the northern states amount to $50 a year at the lowest estimate.

It may be said that the sales from the average cow, or rather the value of her product, should be at least $50 per year. It should be this amount to break even. It should be more than this to make dairying as profitable as it must be to interest and hold the northern farmer. It must be more than this to build up the farm and make the buildings more comfortable and the hours of work more reasonable.

Value of Wisconsin's Products.

The value of Wisconsin dairy products made in one year exceeds by $16,000,000 that of the yearly gold output of the United States, Alaska included. Yet what is of more consequence is the fact that while the gold can be mined but once, the dairy cows stand ready at the beginning of the new year to duplicate their annual production.

35 BUSHELS PER ACRE

was the yield of WHEAT

160 Acres
WESTERN CANADA
FREE

On many farms in Western Canada in 1913, some yields being reported as high as 50 bushels per acre. As high as 100 bushels were recorded in some districts for oats.

J. W. Reed arrived in the country 5 years ago from Denmark with very little means. He homesteaded, worked hard, is now the owner of 320 acres of land. In 1913 had a crop of 200 acres, which will realize him about $4,000. His wheat weighed 68 lbs. to the bushel and averaged over 35 bushels to the acre.

Thousands of similar instances might be related of the homesteaders in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The crop of 1913 was an abundant one everywhere in Western Canada.

VITAL FORCE

Disease germs are on every hand. They are in the very air we breathe. A system "run down" is a prey for them. One must have vital force to withstand them. Vital force depends on digestion—on whether or not food nourishes—on the quality of blood coursing through the body.

DR. PIERCE'S Golden Medical Discovery

Strengthens the weak stomach. Gives good digestion. Enlivens the sluggish liver. Feeds the starved nerves. Again full health and strength return. A general upbuilding enables the heart to pump like an engine running in oil. The vital force is once more established to full power.

Year in and year out for over forty years this great health-restoring remedy has been spreading throughout the entire world—because of its ability to make the sick well and the weak strong. Don't despair of "being your old self again." Give this vegetable remedy a trial—Today—Now. You will soon feel "like new again." Sold in liquid or tablet form by Druggists or trial box for 50c by mail. Write Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.
