Lafayette Grange Meeting.

The next regular meeting of Lafayette Grange will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. English, on Friday, April 24. The program will be as follows:

Opening song by the Grange.
Roll call, responded to by each giving some short cut in their method of doing work.

Each member will then tell of or read some article that has interested them in the course of their reading during the past winter. Discussion on the articles read will follow.
Music.

Election Expense Accounts.

Every mail these days brings to County Clerk George Beckwith's office the legally required statements of expenditures by candidates at the recent elections.

The major number received contain affidavits that their makers have not spent anything, but there are a number that contain quite candid statements of expenditures for boxes of cigars, some greatly differing in value. A few candidates have also listed hacks and automobiles to bring out "sick" voters, which is permitted under the law. Most of the items of expense are for printing cards.

Cavanaugh Lake Grange Meeting.

The next regular of Cavanaugh Lake Grange will be held on Tuesday evening, April 21, at the home of Mrs. James Runciman. The following is the program:

Song.
Roll call, each member giving a sentiment or fact relating in some way to a cow.
Recitation or reading, "The farm creed," Martha Harvey.

Which is the most profitable, making butter at home, selling cream at the creamery, or selling milk at the condenser? 1st, making butter, opened by Ehlert Notten and Henry Lehman 2d, selling cream by August Hoppe. 3d, selling to condenser by James Richards.

Care of the cream to be sent to a creamery, Ricka Kalmback.
Reading, "The discontented farmer," Sophia Kalmback.
The surprise feature in the hands of the Steward.

Easter at St. Paul's Church.

The services at St. Paul's church last Sunday were very impressive. The church had been very beautifully decorated with palms and lilies; especially attractive was a white cross five feet high decked with lilies. The Sunday school at 8:30 o'clock in the morning was well attended. Only once this year (Palm Sunday) was the attendance better than last Sunday. The pastor's Easter sermon on the text, John II, 25-26, was a message full of hope and good cheer. The special music by the choir was exceptionally fine. Then followed the communion service. It was the first communion of the confirmation class. The number of communicants were larger than it has been for several years.

Wedding Anniversary.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Dresselhouse, of Sharon, was the scene of feasting and gaiety Saturday evening, April 11, 1914, the occasion being the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. There were about sixty guests present. The house and tables were beautifully decorated, the color scheme being pink and white. Silver and pink carnations graced the tables. At 6 o'clock the guests sat down to a bountiful two course dinner prepared and served by Jackson caterers.

The couple were remembered with many beautiful and costly pieces of silver. The guests departed at a late hour voting Mr. and Mrs. Dresselhouse royal entertainers and expressing the wish that there might be many returns of this anniversary.

Those from away who attended were: M. H. Heselschwerdt and family, of Rochester, John Heselschwerdt, jr., and family, of Sylvan, Elmer Dresselhouse and family and Miss Jennie Dresselhouse, of Jackson.

COUNTY CONVENTION

Lady Maccabees Met Here Tuesday and Elected Delegates and Officers.

The Lady Maccabees of Washtenaw county held a convention in the Maccabee hall of this place, on Tuesday, at which they elected delegates and alternates to attend the meeting of the Great Hive that will be held in June at Bay City, and they also elected officers for the county association. Eight of the twelve Hives in this county were represented by nineteen delegates.

The members of Columbian Hive of this place served a banquet at noon to the visitors and about thirty partook of the feast. A number of the visiting delegates attended the evening meeting of the local Hive. There were two sessions of the association, forenoon and afternoon, and they were presided over by the County Commander Mrs. Wm. M. Campbell of this place. The following delegates to the Great Hive were elected:

Emma Leach, Chelsea; Florence Krapp, Ann Arbor; Eliza M. O'Brien, Ypsilanti; Emma Ferman, Milan; Bertha Draper, Mooreville. The alternates are as follows: Ada R. Speer, Chelsea; Minna Trojanowski, Ann Arbor; Dora Fletcher, Ypsilanti; Nellie Douglas, Milan; Anna Brownell, Mooreville.

The following were chosen as the officers of the county association: Past commander, Lila Campbell, Chelsea; commander, Eliza M. O'Brien, Ypsilanti; lieutenant commander, Kittle Ottley, Ann Arbor; record keeper, Sophia Dixon, Dexter; finance keeper, Olive A. Cressy, Saline; chaplain, Kate Paul, Whitmore Lake; sergeant, Minna Trojanowski, Ann Arbor; mistress-at-arms, Mary Ferner, Ann Arbor; sentinel, Bertha Draper, Mooreville; picket, Emma Ferman, Milan.

The newly elected officers of the county association were installed by deputy great commander, R. Rose Rasey, of Ann Arbor. The next meeting of the association will be held in Ann Arbor.

A Speed Record.

One of farm teams of Dr. G. W. Palmer was driven into Chelsea Wednesday forenoon by Patrick Hickey, who is employed by the Doctor and resides on one of his farms north of town, made a record breaking get away. The team was tied near the corner of Main and Middle streets and they became frightened, broke the tiestrap and started out for the farm leaving a cloud of dust behind them that resembled a young cyclone. A grain drill was hitched to the rear of the wagon and it was freed from the outfit at the VanTyne farm and the team came to stop at the Sibley farm on the North Lake road, when they came in contact with a telephone pole which was broken by the impact. A freight engine was switching cars at the Main street crossing of the Michigan Central, but the frightened team crossed the tracks without coming in contact with any obstructions. Other than a broken telephone pole no particular damage was done. To say the least that farm team can run some, and might make a record on the race course.

City Beautiful.

The following clipping refers to a former Chelsea resident, but now a resident of Santa Ana, Cal.

"A great deal of interest is being shown in the 'City Beautiful in 1915' movement. S. D. Laird, who is attending to the work of setting out the geranium cuttings on the lots furnished by W. A. Zimmerman, reports that he has set out 17,000 slips since he began work two weeks ago today."

"Mr. Laird will have all the plants in the ground by the last of next week. He hopes to have from 30,000 to 35,000 in shape for transplanting by the last of August or first of September."

A Business Change.

Fred H. Belser has sold the hardware, furniture and implement business that he has conducted here for the past few years, to the Belser Hardware Company. The change was perfected about the first of the month and the officers of the company are as follows: President and general manager, Fred H. Belser; vice president, Fred E. Belser; secretary and treasurer, Paul P. Belser. The new company will continue to handle the same lines of goods as heretofore and will remain at the same location.

Eastern Services.

Seldom have the services at the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart been as beautiful and impressive as on last Sunday—Easter day. The church was beautifully decorated, and the attendance at all of the services was very large, especially at the solemn high mass at 8 a. m. A choir of 80 voices sang the mass in splendid style, 40 boys in the sanctuary, and 40 girls occupying the front pews in the center aisle. The children showed their fine training by the Sisters of St. Dominic. The procession both before and after the high mass were inspiring. Father Howard preached a most eloquent sermon on the "Resurrection of Christ" and the venerable Monsignor DeBever celebrated the mass. After the last mass at 10 a. m. Monsignor DeBever, who is in his 84th year, preached the sermon with wonderful vigor and eloquence. Benediction followed with the singing by the entire congregation of the Te Deum, or "Holy God we Praise Thy Name."

Concert.

James B. Barch, the local bass soloist, assisted by Miss Esther Riemenschneider at the piano, will give a concert at the Methodist church, Friday, April 24th, at 8 o'clock p. m. Mr. Barch is not only a talented musician, but is experienced as well, having appeared in solo work in cities of this state and Ohio.

To a broad and liberal education is added a voice of rare beauty, which has been carefully developed under the instruction of Prof. W. L. Blumenschein of Dayton, O., and Mrs. Pauline Kempf of Ann Arbor. Mr. Barch also studied the theory of music at the University School of Music at Ann Arbor.

Miss Riemenschneider is an accomplished piano soloist as well as accompanist, having spent six years in the study of the piano under Miss Helene Steinbach of Chelsea.

The program which will be offered will cover a wide range of songs by the most famous song writers.

No admission for this recital will be charged.

Grand Opera.

That the visit of the famous San Carlo Grand Opera Company to the Whitney theatre, Ann Arbor, on Friday and Saturday, April 24th and 25th, will constitute a most important page in that city's artistic history, is acknowledged from the fact that musical circles are astir over the event, which will also, no doubt, prove the occasion of a great social outpouring. Quite a number of opera parties will, it is understood, journey to the Whitney Theatre to hear the distinguished song birds. The San Carlo forces have recently thrilled great audiences in St. Louis, New York, Milwaukee, Memphis, Atlanta and other cities where the love of grand opera is one of long standing, and are now making their second tour of the United States. Only four Michigan cities will hear the artists.

The magnitude and importance of the company is better realized when it is understood that its members travel by special train of six cars, carrying a complete grand opera orchestra, and scenic, costuming and property effects sufficient for the production of fifteen different operas. The repertoire chosen for Ann Arbor, Lucia Di Lammermoor, Rigoletto and Il Trovatore have been so scheduled that opera patrons will hear the entire roster of leading singers—fifteen in number, during the engagement.

The event will be a most interesting and important one to opera lovers, and music enthusiasts generally as, while the city has heard and entertained many of the world's masters of music, this will be Ann Arbor's first real grand opera. Seat sale will open on Wednesday, April 22d.

GREAT COPPER STRIKE IS OVER

MEN VOTE TO GIVE UP STRUGGLE WHEN BENEFITS ARE REDUCED.

SCORES LEAVING DISTRICT

Miners Applying for Positions Are Compelled to Sign Agreement to Give Up Federation.

Calumet, Mich.—The district union of the Western Federation of Miners Monday afternoon officially declared closed the Michigan copper strike, which opened with rioting and the closing of the score of copper mines, July 23, last. This decision was taken as the result of the referendum vote of Sunday, when the strikers themselves voted to end the long industrial war, on advice from the head officials of the Western Federation at Denver, transmitted to them through the district union, that the strike could only be continued on benefits reduced to such a point that the strikers could scarcely hope to exist on them.

It was not till Monday afternoon that it was positively known that the question of closing the strike was settled. In an official statement issued by Secretary Heitila, of the district union, it is declared a total of 4,760 votes were cast, 3,104 in favor of ending the strike, and 1,656 to continue it, the majority being 1,456.

All union headquarters but that of the district union at Hancock will be closed at once and the men advised to return to work. Those who cannot obtain work at once will be enabled to subsist by means of grocery orders paid for by the Federation.

Most of the strikers applied for work Monday, the mining companies receiving about 2,000 applications. Not more than 300 obtained work, but others will be put on as fast as places can be found for them. Each applicant must sign an agreement to give up his Federation affiliation and not again become a member of that organization.

Scores are leaving the district.

Railway Improvements for Manistee.

Cadillac, Mich.—The Manistee East & West railway, formerly the Manistee & Grand Rapids, is planning extensive improvements on its line from Manistee to Marquette to give direct passenger service between these points. At present a local runs from Manistee to Dighton, 20 miles from Marquette, the roadbed making it impossible for the train to proceed nearer the eastern terminal. Thirty-five thousand ties have been purchased for the purpose of improving the roadbed, and these will be placed in May and June. By July 1 Manager Morey promises that a motor or a passenger will be running daily between Marquette and Manistee. The road purposes to put about $75,000 in improvements.

Students Lose Suits in Fire.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—When the students returned Monday morning from university spring vacation, it became known that a fire had broken out in the Phi Rho-Sigma house, a medical fraternity, during vacation, and had been extinguished by the caretaker of the lodge, without calling the fire department.

Though the house was only slightly injured, there was $1,000 damage to medical and surgical instruments that were in the house, and several suits of clothes were destroyed, as well as some of the rugs.

To Protest Increase in Rates.

Lansing, Mich.—At a meeting of the railroad commission in this city, April 21, Michigan manufacturers will protest the proposed increase in freight rates. The Michigan Manufacturers' association will lead in the fight. Some of the proposed raises are as high as 50 per cent, it is said. The association will fight to keep the increase within 5 per cent. The proposed increases average between 15 and 20 per cent.

Summer Hotel Is Burned.

Holland, Mich.—Fire Sunday afternoon destroyed the Lakeland hotel and five cottages at Ottawa Beach. Mrs. D. W. Heath, of Grand Rapids, who came to serve Easter dinner for a Grand Rapids party, started a fire in the fireplace and in some unaccountable way the building caught fire. With no protection the fire spread to cottages and an hour's time the hotel and cottages were burned to the ground. The loss is about $25,000.

GUNMAN MAKES A FULL CONFESSION

"DAGO FRANK" TELLS WARDEN DETAILS OF KILLING OF HERMAN ROSENTHAL.

MEN DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Statement Made Just Before Execution Clears Lieutenant Becker of Complicity in Noted Crime.

Albany, N. Y.—Shortly before "Dago Frank" Cirofici went to the death chair in Sing Sing prison early Monday, he told Warden Chancy that "Gyp the Blood" Horowitz, "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg, and Harry Vallon, an informer, fired the shots which killed Herman Rosenthal, for which crime the four gunmen paid their lives.

"So far as I know, Becker had nothing to do with this case," the gunman also declared. "It was a gamblers' fight. Cirofici avowed he was five miles away at the time the crime was committed and that 'Whitey Lewis' Seidenshner, although present at the scene of the shooting, did not fire any of the shots. Cirofici made no attempt, however, to deny he was included in the original plot to slay Rosenthal, even admitting that two nights before the gambler was slain, he went with other gangsters to look for their intended victim. They were frightened away from Rosenthal on that occasion, by men they thought were detectives. The condemned man also admitted that early on the night of the actual killing he was in the gray 'murder car' with the gunmen, but he insisted that he left them before they shot the gambler.

All four of the gunmen were executed at 6:21 o'clock Monday morning. Every effort on the part of friends and relatives to secure a reprieve for the men convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal in New York City on the night of July 16, 1912, failed. On Saturday Justice Goff listened to what was claimed to be new evidence tending to prove the innocence of the gunmen, but declared that it was insufficient.

"Dago Frank" was taken to the chair first, in a state of total collapse. Two applications of the current killed him.

"Whitey" Lewis was the second to be executed. He died with a protestation of innocence.

"Gyp the Blood" was the third to die, going to the chair with a prayer on his lips, which he continued to repeat until the current was turned on. "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg was the last of the gunmen to be executed. Three shocks were required before he was pronounced dead. He made no statement.

Forty minutes were occupied in the four executions.

GEO. DROUGHT PLEADS GUILTY

Drought, former election inspector in the third precinct, Saturday admitted that he tampered with the ballots of Port Huron citizens cast at the municipal primary in 1913, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $500 or serve one year in the Detroit house of correction. He wrote his check for the amount.

Drought, accompanied by his attorneys walked into circuit court late in the afternoon and before Judge Tucker, of Mt. Clemens, changed his plea of not guilty to that of guilty.

No political event in years has so stirred the city as the sensation which was created when Drought, who for years has been a power in politics here, was arrested on a charge of tampering with the ballots. A fist fight preceded his arrest and the revelations and accusations which followed kept the pot boiling for several weeks.

ATLANTIC FLEET SENT TO TAMPICO

HUERTA GOVERNMENT WILL BE COMPELLED TO SALUTE THE FLAG.

MAY CAUSE INTERVENTION

Refusal of Mexicans to Obey Admiral Mayo's Demand Causes Grave Crisis in Affairs.

Washington.—President Wilson, Tuesday ordered practically the entire Atlantic fleet to Mexican waters to force a public salute to the stars and stripes from the Huerta government, as an apology for the arrest of American bluejackets at Tampico last Thursday.

No ultimatum has been issued, that is, no specified time has been set within which the Huerta government must comply, but the naval demonstration has been ordered as a concrete evidence of the fixed determination of the United States to back up Rear Admiral Mayo's demand for a salute. Up to Tuesday night General Huerta had not made satisfactory response to that demand.

"Future developments depend on Huerta himself," was the way a high administration official close to the president summarized the situation.

The decision to send the fleet was reached after the president and Secretary Bryan had conferred for an hour with John Lind, personal representative of the president in Mexico, and after a two-hour cabinet meeting, during which dispatches from Charge O'Shaughnessy revealed that the Huerta government disputed the right of American bluejackets to be ashore at Tampico and contended that its recent public statement of apology was ample.

Immediately after the cabinet meeting adjourned, Secretary Daniels issued his order to the Atlantic fleet and wireless messages flashed up and down the Atlantic coast to put the fleet under steam for Tampico. It will be the largest fighting force the American government has assembled for possible action since the Spanish-American war. Forty-six warships and 15,000 men will comprise the force off Tampico.

Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus Granted by Judge Aldrich.

Concord, N. H.—Harry K. Thaw's petition for a writ of habeas corpus was granted by Judge Edgar Aldrich of the United States district court Tuesday.

The court said, however, that no order would be issued for the prisoner's discharge from custody until arrangements had been completed to take the case to the United States supreme court on appeal.

Thaw's petition for admission to bail, the court left undetermined, taking the ground that it would be more appropriate for this to be passed upon by the supreme court.

The result of the decision is that Thaw's guardianship and condition will be unchanged for the present, but that his position for a writ of habeas corpus will go to the highest court in the land with a decision of the lower court in his favor.

Seven Killed in Boston Fire.

Boston.—Seven persons met death and another is missing as the result of a fire which raced through the fashionable Hotel Melvin in Allston early Tuesday and trapped the occupants in their beds.

The flames surged up through the 30 apartments and drove the occupants upon small balconies, where fear forced them to leap outdoors to death or injury on the pavement below.

Priest and Usher Prevent Panic.

Owosso, Mich.—The calmness of an usher and Father J. P. Slane, who was conducting low mass, averted a panic among 700 worshippers in St. Paul's Catholic church Easter morning when a portion of the floor gave way and settled several inches, due to a rotten pillar.

As the ripping of the timbers echoed through the church many rose as if to rush for the doors, but were quitted by an usher and the attitude of Father Slane, who calmly continued the service.

SYNOPSIS.

Joseph Hayward, an Englishman, is the son of a British officer. He is a renegade who has been connected with all manner of atrocities, also headed for the gallows. He is a French general. Hayward guides him to the fort. At General Hayward's headquarters Hayward meets Rene D'Auway, who professes to recognize him. Hayward has no recollection of ever having seen her before. Hayward volunteers to carry a message for Harmar to the northwest Indian tribes are ready for war and are only held back by the return of the friendly Wyandots to join. The latter are demanding the return of a religious teacher, whom they believe to be a prisoner. Hayward's mission is to assure the Wyandots that the man is not held by the soldiers. He is to let her accompany him. He tells him that she is a quarter-blood Wyandot and a missionary among the Indians. She has been in search of her father. She insists that she has seen Hayward before, but in a British uniform. Hayward refuses her request and starts for the north accompanied by a scout named Brady and a private soldier. They come on the trail of a war party and to escape from the Indians take shelter in a hut on an island. Hayward finds a murdered man in the hut.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

I stood staring at it, and then down into the face of the dead man. D'Auway: Her name! The same name she had given me! The face of the girl came back instantly to memory, distinct, living. There was a familiarity, a resemblance, now that I thus connected the two together. She had told me her father was a French officer—but dead, killed in action. Perhaps she thought so; had been deceived into this belief. Yet I was convinced now that this was the man; that he had been living up to a few hours before, and had met his fate here in the wilderness by a foul and treacherous blow. Her father! The knowledge seemed to shock me, to leave me helpless; I could not divorce my mind from the remembrance of the daughter. Where would she be that night? Safe at Harmar? or in the dark woods with Gliry? Did she know about this hidden cabin? This island rendezvous? Surely this could be no mere coincidence of name and history, yet what was the mystery that enveloped both? Why was this Captain D'Auway hiding here, and why did she deny that he was still living? The more I thought, the more tangled grew the skein. Brady called me, and I stepped back into the other room, still dazed, grasping the medal in my hand. "Well, what is it?" he asked gruffly. "What have you found out?" "I told him briefly, describing the appearance of the body, and handing him the medal. He turned it over in the light of the torch. "French, ain't it? What does it say?" "An army decoration for gallant conduct given to Capt. Rael D'Auway, Fifth Cuirassiers."

"You think it belonged to him?" "Beyond doubt; it was pinned to his shirt—the one thing he treasured in his exile." "D'Auway," he repeated, as if the name had familiar sound. "I've heard of him before. Wait a bit; now I have—he commanded Hamilton's Indians at Vincennes when Clark took the town. I saw him once." He got to his feet with my help, and thrust himself in the doorway, looking intently at the upturned face, as I held the torch extended. "That's the man," he said soberly. "I remember the white beard; some one told me the Wyandots called him the white chief, and he was in the French army? An officer? Poor devil! I wonder what happened to drive him to this."

He stared about among the shadows at the miscellaneous articles littering the shed, his trained eyes noting things I had overlooked in my excitement. "He was murdered all right, lad," he commented slowly, "and by a white man. This was not an injury work. Here is the imprint of a boot heel; you can even see the nails. That's odd; I didn't suppose there was a boot worn in this country except by British officers. What is that red garment lying on the box? I thought so; an English infantry jacket, made in London, and it never belonged to D'Auway." He held it up. "It was a big fellow who wore this coat, about your size."

I drew up the bench, and sat down. "There is more to this than you have discovered, Brady," I said, determined to explain. "Did you chance to see a French girl back at Fort Harmar?"

He shook his head.

"Not as I remember; who was she?"

"That is what I would like to know. I hoped you might have picked up some information. She was at General Harmar's office—a young girl, not much over twenty, I should judge, with dark eyes and hair, speaking broken English, her dress half Indian and half border French. She was one in a thousand, in my thought. What name do you suppose she gave me?"

His eyes, interested, questioned me, but he sat silent.

"Rene D'Auway; and she explained her father was a French officer, killed in battle."

"And her mother?"

"A woman of the Wyandots, but a half-breed."

"D'Auway! The same as the dead man yonder! And he was a soldier. 'Tis an odd case. What else do you know about her?"

"Precious little. Indeed, for she seemed an adept in deceit. She even pretended to know me, and actually spoke my name before it had been told her. How she ever learned it is more than I can guess. The little mix is full of tricks, but plays them so saucily it was not in my heart to become angry. By heavens! one glance in her eyes would disarm any man—"

"Yes," he interrupted, "but whence came she there, and for what purpose?"

I told him all I knew, and he listened eagerly, his eyes on Schultz pattering about the fire.

"She must have jested in her threat to travel hither with the renegade."

"I fear it was not jest," I said soberly. "She was in a mood to do even that, and I do not think she feared the man. They may be on our trail now; ay! close at hand, Brady, for they both know these woods better than either of us. 'Tis my thought, now, the dead man yonder was the less' father, and she would know his cabin."

His eyes turned to the door, and then to the food Schultz was placing on the table before us, but whatever his thought it remained unuttered. As we sat there eating, he was apparently turning it all over in his mind, trying to draw the tangled ends of the skein together. As we finished the meal, some newly awakened curiosity caused me to glance out again into the rear room. It was gloomy with shadows, the bodies of man and dog beyond view; yet what I perceived brought from my lips a sudden exclamation.

"Brady, some one has been in here! The outer door is unlatched—yes—and the soldier's coat is gone!"

We searched the room carefully, but discovered no sign of its having been entered, except for the door standing slightly ajar, and the disappearance of the red coat. We dare not carry a torch into the open, and the night was too dark for us to trace marks on the ground. Brady stood in the glow of firelight, looking to the priming of his rifle, his face shadowed.

"I am going out awhile, Hayward," he said finally. "Yes, I am all right now. I meant to take you along, but I reckon, it will be safer not to leave the Dutchman here alone. However, I don't think there will be any more visitors tonight."

He slipped out the back way, disappearing instantly, and I picked up my own rifle, bade Schultz remain where he was, and followed, with the purpose of scouting about the island. I could perceive the new danger we were in. Suppose the assassin, eager to save himself from suspicion, should be attracted to that camp of raiders, and, relying on their friendship for protection, charge us with the murder of D'Auway. What mercy could we hope for at their hands? Beyond doubt the band was composed of ambitious young warriors, who had already tasted blood, and under control of no chief able to restrain them, if their wild passions should be appealed to.

But I emerged into darkness and silence. Quickly as I had made this decision I was too late. The scout had already disappeared across the narrow open space, and vanished into the fringe of trees. There was nothing to guide me, except a vague sense of direction, yet I felt my way forward through the dense tree growth, hearing no sound of movement, and compelled to move slowly until I emerged at the shore, and could perceive the stars reflected on the surface of still water. As I lingered there clear of the woods' shadow, my courage gradually returned, and our situation appeared less desperate. Whoever the fellow was who had killed D'Auway he might have as much cause to fear the Indian raiders as we did. The mere fact that he wore a red coat was no direct proof he was a British soldier; doubtless many a forest renegade had picked up bits of discarded uniform. Besides, why should any soldier desire to kill D'Auway? He had led his Indians to action under Hamilton. More likely the fellow was French, and the murder the end of some private feud. His only desire then would be to get away safely, to escape unseen. Brady would learn all this, and he would be back presently.

I do not know how long a time passed, only I had circled the house twice, skirting the edge of the woods in my rounds, keeping well in the blacker shadows, and moving noiselessly, every nerve alert. Back of the house I discovered a mound of earth, heaped as a roof, over an opening in the ground, evidently a cellar of some kind. So far as I could discover, by groping in the darkness, there was nothing concealed within, but the entrance offered a good hiding place, and I sat down there where I could see in every direction, with my rifle across my knees. The stars yielded a spectral light, and no one could move across the clearing unobserved. I sat there for ten minutes, seeing and hearing nothing, gradually growing drowsy in the silence, my head sinking back against the earth mound. Yet I remained awake and watchful, although when I first perceived a figure flitting out of the black fringe of woods, I half believed it a dream. But it was no dream, and I sat up suddenly, my heart beating like a tripphammer, and stared. I could see little, not enough to determine whether the intruder was savage or white, merely perceiving an indistinct form, crouching low, yet advancing directly toward me. There was no hesitancy, no evidence of fear, but merely the natural caution of one traveling alone in the wilderness. At first I believed it to be Brady returning, yet hesitated to step boldly forth, for the figure appeared small and unnatural, barely perceptible against the darker background of earth.

To render myself more secure I drew cautiously back a step within the cellar entrance, and waited breathlessly, bracing myself to meet either friend or foe. I could no longer see the intruder, and the caution of his approach made me certain the man must be an enemy. Surely Brady, even while exercising every precaution, would never hesitate like this, and grope his way forward inch by inch. I felt the hot blood leap in my veins; then the fellow, still crouching low, but with rifle barrel advanced, appeared around the edge of the pile of earth, scarcely two yards distant. All I saw clearly was a hat with a feather in it, an indistinct outline of form, and the black rifle barrel. My rifle came up to the shoulder, and I slipped into the open.

"Stop where you are!" I ordered sharply. "Drop your gun, and stand up!"

I heard a quick breath of surprise, almost an exclamation; the stock of the rifle sank to the ground, but the hands still clung to the barrel, as the startled figure straightened up. I could not distinguish the face, only the white outline shadowed by the hat, yet the short, slender form was that of a boy. The relief at this discovery brought a laugh to my lips.

"What does this mean, lad?" I asked. "Have children gone to war? Come, answer me; you are no savage."

"'Tis not a lad with whom you deal, Monsieur Hayward," replied a soft voice, trembling a bit nevertheless, though attempting boldness. "You know me now?"

She flung the concealing hat into the grass, the silvery light of the stars on her face.

"You here! you!" I exclaimed in swift surprise at this unexpected announcement, and feeling the hot blood flush my face. "You came with Gliry?"

She ventured to laugh lightly at my tone and manner.

"We traveled together—yes. What of that, monsieur? The wilderness is not a parlor where we can choose associates. Did I not warn you I would come with him when you refused me? An' you think I did what was wrong?"

"I?" puzzled by her direct question. "What is it to me, mademoiselle? You would not care what I think. Yet were you sister of mine I would speak plainly enough; we all know what Simon Gliry is."

"Oh, no, monsieur, the Americans do not," and her voice rung with earnestness. "He is to them an enemy, a fiend. He wars on the other side, and as the Indians make war. Why not? He has lived in our wigwams, and sat at our council fires. He belongs with us, save for the birthmark of a white skin. To me he is not enemy, but friend: I have known him always, from childhood; there is no fear in my heart; did he desire, he would not dare harm me—I am a Wyandot."

The swift words were a defiance, a challenge.

"Have it as you will," I said coldly. "but nothing you may say will ever make me think well of that renegade."

"You!" she exclaimed passionately. "Why do you say that, Joseph Hayward? Why do you keep up this masquerade with me? Where are no longer at Fort Harmar where it was safer for you to guard your speech."

I knew you would be here; that was why I came alone—that we might talk to each other, and no longer lie." I stared at her face in the twilight, my memory suddenly reverting to the dead man within.

"You knew I would be here?"

"I guessed it, and my instinct was true. Why not, monsieur? You alone knew the house was here, and who lived in it."

CHAPTER VII.

Mademoiselle Meets Her Father.

There was evidently no use of my groping longer in the dark. The girl was in earnest; she firmly believed me to be another. There could be no understanding between us until this mystery of identity was cleared away. Her discovery of me here had only served to increase her hallucination.

"Mademoiselle D'Auway," I said earnestly, and I stood bare-headed before her, "there is a serious mistake being made. I am not willing you should deceive yourself any longer. I am going to be perfectly frank with you, and in return I ask you to be equally frank with me. Who do you believe me to be?"

She gazed straight into my face, answering:

"Monsieur Joseph Hayward."

"Of course," smiling, "you heard the name at Fort Harmar."

"But I did not; it was never mentioned in my presence. I recognized you."

"Which would imply that we had met before, yet I have no recollection, not the faintest, of such a meeting. You are not one it would be easy to forget."

"Unless one particularly desired to do so," she replied swiftly, "and that I am beginning to suspect is the case." She straightened her slender figure, throwing back her shoulders and using a clearer English than before, as if throwing off disguise. "You ask me to deal with you frankly, monsieur; very well, I will. Down in my heart I have never trusted you—never! My father did, and I made pretense to please him. But from our first meeting my womanly instincts told me you were false. Now I know it! You are not with us, but with our enemies; you are a traitor! a spy!"

The words stung; they were like the thrusts of a knife. Was the girl insane—mad?

"You call me a spy," I said soberly, as her breath failed, "but I am not. To me this is all mystery. But what about yourself, mademoiselle? Why were you at Fort Harmar? What purpose brought you there?"

"I went there openly, and in no disguise," she replied, restraining herself with an effort. "I was not a spy, nor a victim of curiosity. I told the truth when I said I was seeking my father."

"Yet you left at once to return north without finding him?"

"Because I had learned he was not there, not in the American forts. I heard the general tell it to you."

"To me! the name was not mentioned. We spoke only of a medicine man—Wa-pa-te-tah."

"Yes, the White Chief. He came to the Wyandots with the Christ message. He was there before the priests, and it is through his efforts there has been peace. Yet why should I tell you all this? You have met him in council, have eaten at his table, and shared his bed. He alone has stood, and blocked your plans of war."

"Mademoiselle," I said, "let us forget this controversy, this misunderstanding, for it is that, and be friends for this night at least. I wish to help you, and not be held as an enemy. You have been in my mind ever since we first met; I have not been able to drive you from memory. I must bring you evil news, but my heart is full of kindness and sympathy. You will believe this?"

ing my womanly instincts told me you were false. Now I know it! You are not with us, but with our enemies; you are a traitor! a spy!"

The words stung; they were like the thrusts of a knife. Was the girl insane—mad?

"You call me a spy," I said soberly, as her breath failed, "but I am not. To me this is all mystery. But what about yourself, mademoiselle? Why were you at Fort Harmar? What purpose brought you there?"

"I went there openly, and in no disguise," she replied, restraining herself with an effort. "I was not a spy, nor a victim of curiosity. I told the truth when I said I was seeking my father."

"Yet you left at once to return north without finding him?"

"Because I had learned he was not there, not in the American forts. I heard the general tell it to you."

"To me! the name was not mentioned. We spoke only of a medicine man—Wa-pa-te-tah."

"Yes, the White Chief. He came to the Wyandots with the Christ message. He was there before the priests, and it is through his efforts there has been peace. Yet why should I tell you all this? You have met him in council, have eaten at his table, and shared his bed. He alone has stood, and blocked your plans of war."

"Mademoiselle," I said, "let us forget this controversy, this misunderstanding, for it is that, and be friends for this night at least. I wish to help you, and not be held as an enemy. You have been in my mind ever since we first met; I have not been able to drive you from memory. I must bring you evil news, but my heart is full of kindness and sympathy. You will believe this?"

SMILES

HAD A MUSICAL SOUND.

Gov. Allen M. Fletcher of Vermont recently handed this one across the banquet board when reference was made to the enthusiastic way in which young girls describe scenes and personages.

"Some time ago," so ran the story of the governor, "a young Vermont girl who had just returned from her summer vacation, was telling her girl chum of the happenings of the happy weeks. Eventually she mentioned a young man that she had met."

"And, oh Della!" she enthusiastically exclaimed. "He was simply grand. So square! So upright! So highly polished! There seemed to be a sympathetic tone—"

"Say, Gladys," interrupted Della, with a merry twitter, "are you talking about a young man or a piano?"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Insult to Injury.

Mrs. Hemmendorff—Some one broke into the Beanbrough homestead while they were away and stole half their furniture.

Hemmendorff—Well, that surely is tough luck.

"But it wasn't the loss of the furniture that worried Mrs. Beanbrough the most."

"What do you mean?"

"It nearly broke her heart when she learned that the robber stole the goods to a junk dealer."—Youngstown Telegram.

Modern Marathon.

Hicks—I tell you, Smithers is a most resourceful man.

Ricks—How so?

Hicks—He heard yesterday there was a run on his bank and he hired two sprinters to make a dash there for him.

WITH OR WITHOUT

Bella—I've made up my mind to one thing—I won't marry a man without money.

Della—It's pretty hard nowadays for a girl to marry a man without money.

Fate.

"Pa, what is fate?"

"Fate, my boy, is that mysterious something which leads you to pick out of 400 people in the ballroom the one man who has a personal interest in the homely woman you are making fool comments about."—Detroit Free Press.

Just the Man.

"One of the talesmen blew out the gas last night," announced the sheriff. "We brought him around, though."

"Which one was it?" inquired the attorney for the defense.

"That pale fellow over yonder?"

"Just the man for jury duty," commented counsel with enthusiasm.

May Never Recover.

Hicks—Isn't Withington a long time getting well? They told me that three weeks ago he was convalescent.

Wicks—I see you don't know what a pretty nurse Withington has.—Somerville Journal.

None in Sight.

Mother—Well, Bobbie, I hope you were a good boy at Mrs. Bond's and didn't ask for two pieces of pie.

Bobbie—No, ma, I didn't ask for two pieces; I only asked if there wasn't goin' to be any.—Boston Transcript.

Toning It Down.

Talkington (pleased)—So your friend, Miss Gusher, said that I was a wit, did she?

Miss Keen—Yes, but Alice is so given to exaggeration. Now, I should call you merely a half wit.

NOT A SUFFRAGETTE

He—What would women do with the franchise if they had it?

She—What's a franchise?

Fortune and Feet.

Oh, some enjoy a favorable lot And tango when they choose; And some feel lucky if they've got A pair of overshoes.

Occupation.

"Miss Kowler complains that she has too much leisure."

"Well, why doesn't she take up something?"

"She does—she takes up other people's time."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Soldierly.

Smith—Were you at Balaklava, may I ask?

Taylor—No; why?

Smith—You charge so magnificently.—Chatter.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS

Marshall.—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bennett of this city celebrated their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary. They were married in Oconod, Ont., and moved to Richland in 1887.

Menominee.—Albert Cander, aged twelve, reflected sun rays into the eyes of a dog with a pocket mirror. The enraged animal attacked him and the boy is in a serious condition.

Olivet.—Olivet village business men pledged $10,000 toward the support of Olivet college in the campaign for $1,000,000 in ten years which is now under way.

Brighton.—Miss Mary McNamara, sixty-seven years old, of Genoa, died of nervous breakdown at St. Joseph's sanitarium, Ann Arbor. She had taught school for 40 years and did not leave her position until three weeks ago. Dr. William McNamara of Lansing is a nephew.

Battle Creek.—The interior of Penniman's castle, known throughout Michigan as "Penniman's Folly," is a wreck. "The damage was done by burglars, who slashed every light fixture, marred the walls and tore out the plumbing and expensive woodwork. Police all over Michigan have been asked to watch attempts to sell copper, brass and expensive woods. It is magnificent, modeled on German castle plans.

Grand Rapids.—With a rope made of the bed sheets of his cot at the Soldiers' Home hospital, David Currie, seventy-one years old, an inmate of the home, lowered himself from the second story of the hospital and is at large. He was clad only in a brown night gown. Dr. Howard A. Grube, head surgeon at the home, states the veteran was receiving treatment at the hospital for chronic drunkenness.

Monroe.—Right Eminent Sir Charles E. Hisecock of Ann Arbor, grand commander of the Knights Templar of Michigan, presided at a public installation of the officers of Monroe commandery No. 19. The commandery marched in a body in full regalia to the church. Easter will mark the retirement of Sir Knight Dr. D. Howe, for a number of years eminent commander of the local commandery, his successor being Sir Knight Mark L. Osgood.

Saginaw.—For the first time in a number of years the Republicans in Jonesfield township elected a Republican for the board of supervisors. The successful candidate was George Siler. After qualifying, Siler was informed that the work was hard and would take him away from his farm so he resigned and the township board, which is Democratic, appointed Charles Bow, the defeated candidate. Eighteen votes separated the men election day.

Pontiac.—Orders from Adj. Gen. R. C. Vandercrook, Michigan National Guard, are to the effect that Capt. D. L. Kimball has again been placed in command of Company E of the Third regiment, M. N. G., stationed in this city. Captain Kimball will take charge of the company at once and will seek to recruit it to its full strength.

Bay City.—Mrs. Mary William, a full-blooded Chippewa Indian, believed to be the oldest resident of Bay County, died at her home in Indiantown, Bangor township, at the age of one hundred and three. She came to Bay county when it was a wilderness more than sixty years ago. Her first husband was William Aubwa-coom, who died some years ago, at the age of ninety years. The woman lived under the name of her first husband.

Lansing.—The supreme court affirmed the decision of the industrial accident board in the case of Mrs. Lydia Rayner of Grand Rapids vs. the Sligh Furniture company. The woman will receive $1,866 compensation. Rayner was employed by the Sligh company, and was running to punch the time clock when he collided with another workman, and suffered injuries resulting in his death. The company refused payment on the ground that Rayner was not performing his regular duty.

Kalamazoo.—The building occupied until two months ago by the Baldwin tuberculosis sanitarium and owned by Dr. Charles Fletcher, was burned with a loss of more than thirty thousand dollars. The structure was being made into a dormitory for the use of students at the Western Michigan Normal school. A son of Doctor Fletcher was fumigating and it is believed the flames originated from spilled sulphur. Herbert Streamer, lieutenant of station No. 2, fell through the floor and was cut on the head. Doctor Fletcher announced that he would start the reconstruction of a dormitory at once.

Saginaw.—Herman Whalin, charged with stealing chickens, was sentenced to Jackson to serve from one and a half to five years and Clifford Scrimshaw, convicted of the same offense as an accomplice of Whalin's, got six months to five years in the Detroit house of correction. Jesse Tillotson, convicted of the charge of abandonment, was sentenced to serve from one and a half to three years in Jackson.

INTERNATIONAL Harvester

manure spreaders have a score of good features in their construction. Each one is the result of careful field experiment.

An IHC spreader is low enough for easy loading, yet it has plenty of clearance underneath. The rear axle is well under the load, rear wheels have wide rim and Z-shaped lugs, insuring good traction under all conditions. Frame, wheels, and all driving parts are of steel. Apron tension is adjusted by a simple device. Winding of the beater is prevented by large diameter, and beater teeth are strong, square and chisel-pointed.

International manure spreaders are built in several styles and sizes, low or high, endless or return apron, for small farms or large. Examination will show sturdiness of construction in every detail. Repairs, if ever needed, may always be had of the dealer. We will tell you who sells them, and we will send you interesting catalogues.

SHOE REPAIRING

IN CURIOUS OLD ORVIETO

One has forsaken the convenience and tedium of the railway and traveled alone across the rather sinister moorland round Baginbora. Civita, it is with a sense of security that one sees the lofty rock of Orvieto in front of one at nightfall. One can imagine the feelings of a fugitive—a pope, say, out of favor, and flying the populace—at the sight of the impregnable rock-built town which was one of his ultimate defences. In the pleasant garden of Tuscan towns stretch in a friendly way from outskirt to outskirt; villas join to villas and farms to farms. But from the lofty rock wall of Orvieto one sees neighboring towns perched high as if for observation of an attacking enemy; self-contained as if for defence. One knows that the wind visits the rock in winter, for the women wear serviceable shawls, as in a fishing village in Scotland, and the gravity of the summer heat can be known by the cactus sticking its spikes securely in the wall. Houses seem built to defy the weather, some even, as one sinks to the lower outlet of the town, to have needed little help from other material than the rock itself to furnish a dwelling, writes Gertrude Bone in Country Life.

A Curious House.

"Yes; it is a very curious house, signora," said one of the inhabitants. "A gentleman came here who said it was of Volscian origin. Who knows! It is certainly a curious house." As one gains the summit of the precipice fenced by the town wall, a fanciful person might imagine himself to be standing on the prow of a ship, and the undulating pale clay earth, lapsing on all sides into strange shapes, to be an ocean stiff with a more formidable substance than ice, imprisoning one forever on a high-pooped vessel. One's first impression of a town may endure only to be modified, but children, of lighted and frequented shrines, add a good deal to the settled and companionable air of an Italian town. True, there is no kindly and gracious Madonna presiding over the cathedral at Perugia, only the high mystery of the Corpus Domini, and I suspect it to be rather a comment on human nature in general than Italian nature in particular that the shrines of Our Lady of Pity, of Succor, of Sorrow, of Comfort should be thronged with worshippers while the churches of the Holy Spirit or of the Trinity should be empty save for an occasional religious who seeks the solitudes rather than the consolations of religion. For the great Duomo of Orvieto is almost always empty, save for tourists and intoning priests. Built on the tide of one of those waves of inspiration which visited Italy, it would seem as though with the ebbing of that wave the people's interest in their treasure slackened and they returned to the half-pagan beliefs which sustained their ancestors. At Pentecost a wild crowd of peasants comes from the hills and fills the piazza and the Duomo, on the steps of which is enacted a "mystery." "Signora, come at Pentecost itself, and you will see it," said one of those loquacious and genial Italians whose business it is to awaken his own enthusiasm with that of the foreigners. "There is a tabernacle similar to this in the museum (one of the first models for the shrine of the corporeal venerated in the Duomo) set up on the steps of the Duomo. On the opposite side of the piazza are the clouds of heaven; within the tabernacle there is the Madonna sitting above, and below kneel the 12 apostles, all with little candles attached to their heads. A white dove is brought to the church and fastened with outspread wings within a hoop of fireworks. At midday the fireworks are lighted, and the dove travels along

PIAZZA DEL DUOMO, ORVIETO

I never revisit Orvieto without recovering anew the sensation which I had on my first visit—that of half the people having gone away and the remaining houses being too large and numerous for those who have stayed behind. It was the equivalent of a winter's evening (though I had left spring in Rome), and thin snows were lingering in wreaths upon the treeless hills. The wide lane, whose edge is the convent wall of San Bernardino, was empty save for the activity of one bright star. Street after street was vacant. The palaces seemed forsaken; some even had the air of having been abandoned suddenly and unfinished. A group of boys seemed to be playing on the eve of disaster, and a few cronies in a wine shop had the appearance of conspirators. I have seen Orvieto thronged so that one could hardly push one's way through the piazza, but that first impression always returns, of the active and adventurous having gone and those who remain remaining in spite of themselves.

It may be that, in reality, the emigration, so deplorable a feature of modern Italy, has smitten Orvieto above other towns of a like size, but I think the natural features of the town have something to do with the impression of constant going away and emptiness. Few vehicles pass through the town as in a less rugged countryside. The steep approach forbids the heavy cart. The streets, save for an occasional omnibus from the hotels, are empty of traffic, and the continual presence of saddled mules and asses, of men with sheepskin cloaks folded about them, deepens the impression of a population which is always journeying and passing on difficult roads and hills. The emptiness of the churches has something to do with it also, for the familiar coming and going in the churches the presence of a wire toward the tabernacle. There is a great crackling and noise, and when the smoke has cleared away one sees all the holy apostles kneeling with lighted flames upon their heads. It is, of course, especially important for the contadini.

Observe the Wind.

"Why for them above the others?" I ask.

"They come up in crowds, signora," answered he; "for they all believe that in whichever direction the wind blows while the dove is in flight will be the prevailing wind during the harvest, and it is very important that they should know. You will see, signora. The contadini will not be watching La Palomba at all. They will be watching the wind."

They came in crowds, as he had said, and encamped in the piazza all day, eating their food on the cathedral steps, wild looking men and handsome women, the elaborate structure of religion and dogma embodied in the church behind them having touched them but little. It is neither the "mystery" within the Duomo nor the thought of Pentecost that has urged them from their farms. It is the wind they have come to watch.

Natural Mistake.

"Well, are you going to be a doctor?" asks the friend.

"Not at all. Why?" inquires the man.

"I've noticed you poring over that medical volume for half an hour."

"Medical? Why, so it is! Do you know, I thought it was a bound volume of the Snappy Bunch Magazine."

A Sensation.

"Did your daughter make a faux pas at her debut, Mr. Comeup?"

"Indeed she did. It was the biggest one seen at the whole ball."

USE ARSENATE OF LEAD AS INSECTICIDE

A Beautiful Apple Orchard in Bloom, Showing the Result of Spraying.

(By L. M. BENNINGTON.)

The great question among fruit growers everywhere is: Shall bordeaux be replaced by the lime-sulphur as a summer spray? Mr. Everett Wallace, the lime-sulphur expert who has conducted many interesting experiments along this line, announces that his observations indicate that heavy drenching is a common cause of injury to foliage.

He says that much of the injury by the burning of apple foliage last summer following the application, just after the blossoms fell, was due to previous scab infection of the leaves. He has found that arsenate of lead is the only insecticide known which may be used in the lime sulphur with safety. It not only decreases the burning, but actually increases fungicidal value of the mixture by 50 per cent. Injury to both fruit and foliage by the lime sulphur is much less serious than that caused by bordeaux under the same conditions, and the addition of lime or the presence of sediment does not materially affect the burning qualities of the lime-sulphur one-way or another.

Another important point found is that cultivated trees will withstand foliage injury much better than neglected orchards.

PRACTICAL HINTS FOR CHICKEN YARD

Poultry Will Not Prosper on Scanty Rations—Close Up All Drafts in the Henhouse.

You will not make anything by pinning the poultry down to scanty rations. Can't be done. Everything must have enough to eat that makes a profit for you. Remember that.

Close up the drafts in the henhouse. The hen that sits in a draft of cold air all night is in no shape to do business the next day.

Have you plenty of dust for the hens to rustle in? If not, you can use some finely sifted coal ashes.

Not all of us can make a success of growing fancy stock. We may be too far from market or the centers of business. For us the production of eggs and poultry for table use is best. Wheat, as warm as the hens can comfortably eat it, is the finest morning ration I know of.

If you feed bran mash at all, let it be at night. Wipe off every egg that comes into the house. They not only look better and bring a better price by two or three cents a dozen, but they are more healthful to have in stock.

It does not take much to disturb hens. Keep out everything and everybody that looks like an enemy.

See to it that the doors are kept well closed yet awhile. It is not warm enough yet to let the chilly air in at night.

Every farm garden should have its hotbeds.

START TOMATOES IN EARLY SPRING

Should Be Transplanted Into Tin Cans When 4 to 6 Inches Tall—Some Use Boxes.

When tomato plants get to be four to six inches tall transplant them into tin cans. Take quart cans, and cut out a square piece in the bottom, the top having been all removed, to leave a smooth edge. Take a piece of lath two inches long and put over this opening in the bottom; fill with rich earth and set one plant in each can. Pack these cans so filled as closely as possible in your hotbed. Give plenty of water, and harden by removing glass as long as necessary.

No matter if they get to be a foot tall, bloom and set fruit. When you come to transplant, press upon the piece of lath in bottom of can, and the whole lamp of earth will come out without disturbing the roots. All this is some work, but it will accomplish the end. You will get early fruit.

Instead of using cans, many gardeners use a shallow box about one foot by two. It should be deep enough to hold about three inches of earth. Set the plants in this about four inches apart. Then when transplanting to garden the roots will be found to nearly fill the whole space and by cutting evenly with a trowel the plants may be moved with very little disturbance.

DAIRY PROFITS IN SELLING CREAM

There Are Various Grades, Based on Percentage of Fat They Contain—All Bring High Prices.

(Copyright, 1914.)

(By C. S. LANE, Expert Dairyman.)

The word "cream" signifies little to purchasers unless it is accompanied by some term indicating its quality or richness. We therefore have a basis for grading cream which we term "butter fat," which is the amount of pure oil or fat it contains. This varies from 20 to 60 per cent., depending upon amount of skim milk incorporated with it. Fortunately we have an accurate method of determining butter fat in cream, known as the "Babcock test."

This consists in weighing a definite amount of cream, placing it in graduated test bottles made for the purpose and adding sulphuric acid. After shaking, the bottle is placed in a centrifugal machine, which revolves a thousand revolutions per minute. The fat, which is the lighter portion of the cream, is thrown to the top, and then hot water is added to bring it into the graduated tube, where the percentage is read. Most cities have a minimum standard for butter fat in cream, usually about 18 per cent.

We have various grades of cream based on percentage of fat they contain. Cream testing from 18 per cent. to 22 per cent. is called "table cream" and is used in households for cereals, coffee, fruit, retailing for 24 cents to 40 cents per quart. The next grade is termed "whipping cream" and tests from 30 per cent. to 35 per cent. butter fat, retailing for 40 cents to 45 cents per quart. If kept cold this cream readily whips and is popular. It is also used for making butter in creameries. The next grade is called "heavy cream." This is also popular and tests from 40 per cent. to 45 per cent. butter fat, retailing from 50 cents to 80 cents per quart. Another quality is sold under the name of "double cream," or "Double XX," and frequently tests from 50 per cent. to 60 per cent. butter fat, so thick it will not pour from a bottle and sells for from 75 cents to $1 per quart.

Many farmers have separators removing cream from milk on the farm and hauling it or in some cases shipping it to a creamery at a distance. This plan has the advantage of keeping skim milk to feed stock. This cream tests from 35 per cent. to 35 per cent. Cream properly pasteurized is kept in cold storage for three weeks at a temperature of 30 degrees F. (freezing temperature for cream is 29 degrees F.) sweet and without deterioration in flavor. It is almost impossible for a farmer to produce cream for shipment to the city to be sold as sweet cream, as it will not keep without being pasteurized.

MILK BOTTLE TRAY IS HANDY

Directions Given for Making Cheap Carrier Which Does Not Permit Bottles to Hit Each Other.

Bottled milk is difficult to deliver without knocking the bottles together when carrying them or while in a wagon. There are several kinds of wire baskets for carrying the bottles, but they all have the disadvantage of allowing the bottles to strike one another, writes G. H. Clemmons of Storm Lake, Ia., in the Popular Mechanics.

A carrier not having this fault can be made very cheaply as follows: Procure a board one inch thick, eight inches wide and two feet long, plane and make it smooth, and use ordinary tin fruit or vegetable can for the bottle holders. Cut each can off 2½ inches from the bottom and smooth off the jagged edges with a file. Nail these in two rows on the board, starting one inch from each end. Attach a segment of a barrel hoop for a handle. The carrier can be painted as desired.

FEED FOR THE DAIRY COWS

Brief and Simple Rules Given by Nebraska Experiment Station—Big Aid to the Dairyman.

The Nebraska station gives the following brief and simple rules as an aid in determining the amount of feed required by each cow:

"Feed all the roughage, such as alfalfa, corn silage, etc., that the cow will eat up clean."

"Feed approximately one pound of grain for every three pounds of milk produced per day."

"Give the cows as much feed as they will consume without gaining in weight."

"Feed some succulent feed, such as corn silage or roots, to make the ration more palatable."

"Be prepared to supplement the pastures by feeding silage when the dry season sets in."

SEASONABLE HINTS.

Native greens begin with the dandelion, and the dock and mustard soon follow. The tops of beets, pepper grass, which may be early sown, and the leaves of horseradish all make most effective brooms of the blood. Sorrel of both kinds are always an addition to a lettuce salad and water cress is an ideal spring green. Greens of all kinds are far better than beef iron and wine for a spring tonic.

Carrot Soup.—Wash young carrots, scrape them, cut in pieces and cook until tender, mash and put through a sieve; to two cups of the carrot pulp add a quart of milk. Mix together two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter, season with salt and red pepper, mix all together and when very hot serve. A little onion juice is an improvement.

Oyster Loaves.—Use a small roll for each person and five oysters. Cut off the tops of the rolls, scoop out the inside, brush with butter inside and out and put into a hot oven to brown. Drain the oysters from their liquor, scald the liquor and add the oysters to the boiling hot liquor. When the edges begin to ruffle remove them, season with salt, pepper and butter and a tablespoonful of cream for each roll. Fill the shells with the oysters and serve hot, at once. Crab meat is put up nowadays so that the flavor is very delicate and the mimer in the far off camp may as easily favor his appetite with the delicacy as the epicure in the high-priced hotel.

Surprise Snowballs.—Peel five even-sized apples after coring with the corer. Into one end put sugar, a little nutmeg and butter and close the other side in the same way. Place a half cupful of boiled rice on a small pudding cloth, spread it and wrap the apple in it, tie and when the five are ready drop into boiling water and cook for three-quarters of an hour or until the apple is cooked. Take off the cloths carefully and drop a spoonful of currant jelly on each and serve with sweetened cream. This makes a most wholesome dessert for children. Raisins may be added to the apple stuffing if a new flavor is desired.

TRY THESE.

Here is one of the several hundred ways of preparing potatoes. We tire of the same old ways and a new dish is greeted with enthusiasm.

Antwerp Potatoes.—Pare and cut potatoes into inch cubes, boil until tender, drain and shake over the fire to remove the moisture, but do not break them. Add melted butter, salt and a bit of chopped onion, toss up and serve well seasoned with salt and red pepper.

Broiled Salt Mackerel.—There is no fish that is more delicious than mackerel if it is nicely prepared. Salt mackerel must be soaked some time to be fresh enough to be palatable. Soak it skin side up, and at least 24 hours if it is a large fish. Drain and wipe and lay on a well greased broiler. Broil and serve with melted butter and lemon or pour hot cream over it on the platter.

Broiled Hamburg Steak.—This is a most appetizing dish when well cooked. Pat the meat into a flat loaf, having it of even thickness. Place on a well greased double broiler with wires close together. Turn often as in broiling any steak and when well browned place on the platter with a little butter and chopped parsley for a sauce.

Fastidious Salad.—Chop two slices of pineapple, cut an orange and a banana into small pieces, shred a green pepper, cut in half a cup of white grapes, removing the seeds, place these all in a bowl and add 2 or 3 slices of firm tomato, then chill and serve on lettuce with a French dressing or with a mayonnaise to which whipped cream has been added.

Pineapple Anchovy.—Take six anchovies cut fine; add a very little cayenne pepper and a squeeze of lemon juice, shred enough pineapple to make half a cup, and add a tablespoonful of onion juice. Serve on toast as a canape.

Waste of Noise.—Harris was lying on the couch very ill. The servant in the next room knocked down some dishes with a tremendous clatter. Harris' nerves were quite unstrung and he called out in a rage:

"I suppose you have broken all the plates?"

"No," replied the servant, meekly, "there isn't one broken."

"Well, then," growled the enraged invalid, "why did you make all that noise for nothing?" —Everybody's Magazine.

TOAD A VALUABLE SERVANT

Its Uses in the World Have Not Been Accurately Recognized It Has Long Deserved.

Few well-meaning creatures have been more thoroughly misunderstood than the homely, meditative and retiring toad.

Formerly the toad was considered a venomous reptile, but in our day his habits have been more carefully observed and his great value to the promulgator and gardener has been fully established on account of his propensity for destroying insects.

We should, therefore, cultivate the friendship and assistance of the insectivorous reptiles, including the striped snake, as well as that of birds.

Every tidy housewife detests the cockroach, mice and other vermin. Two or three domesticated toads would keep the coast clear of these and would be found more desirable than a cat, as they are wholly free from trespassing on the rights of man as does the cat. The toad is possessed of a timid and retiring nature, loving dark corners and shady places, but under kind treatment becoming quite tame.

Many instances might be cited of pet toads remaining several years in a family and doing most valuable service with no other compensation than that of immunity from persecution.

In Europe toads are carried to the cities to market and are purchased by the horticulturists, who by their aid are enabled to keep in check the multiplication of the insect tribes which prey upon their fruits, flowers, etc.

Finding it was useless to continue the pursuit, and almost beside herself with rage, the old lady shouted at the top of her voice: "I'll give anybody a time to catch that boy!" The boy instantly stopped and, turning round, shouted in reply: "Give me the dime and I'll come back."

UPWARD START

After Changing from Coffee to Postum.

Many a talented person is kept back because of the interference of coffee with the nourishment of the body.

This is especially so with those whose nerves are very sensitive, as is the case with talented persons. The use of a simple, easy way to get rid of coffee troubles and a woman's experience along these lines is worth considering. She says:

"Almost from the beginning of the use of coffee it hurt my stomach. By the time I was fifteen I was almost a nervous wreck, nerves all unstrung, no strength to endure the most trivial thing, either work or fun."

"There was scarcely anything I could eat that would agree with me. The little I did eat seemed to give me more trouble than it was worth. I was literally starving, was so weak I could not sit up long at a time."

"It was then a friend brought me a hot cup of Postum. I drank part of it, and after an hour I felt as though I had had something to eat—felt strengthened. That was about five years ago, and after continuing Postum in place of coffee and gradually getting stronger, today I can eat and digest anything I want, walk as much as I want. My nerves are steady."

"I believe the first thing that did me any good and gave me an upward start, was Postum, and I use it altogether now instead of coffee."

Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled, 15c and 25c packages.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Acting War Chief Is Barred From the House

WASHINGTON.—Henry Breckenridge, assistant secretary of war, found out the other day that the rules of the house does not admit to the floor assistant secretaries, even though they are for the time acting cabinet officers.

Mr. Breckenridge is very much interested in the tolls debate and the other afternoon started to walk past William Gormley, assistant doorkeeper, who guards the portals at the southeast entrance. Mr. Gormley put up his hands as a sign to Mr. Breckenridge not to enter.

"I am entitled to enter," said Mr. Breckenridge stiffly.

"How's that?" asked Mr. Gormley courteously.

"I am the assistant secretary of war," said Breckenridge. "In fact, today I am the acting secretary of war."

"That does not entitle you to the floor privilege," responded Mr. Gormley. "I have been told that I can go in," persisted Mr. Breckenridge.

"It is against the rules of the house," responded Mr. Gormley. "If you want some one of more authority I will send for the chief doorkeeper."

Mr. Gormley sent a page to hunt up Joseph F. Sinnott, chief doorkeeper. The boy could not find him. At this point Representative Oscar Underwood passed by.

"If you are waiting for someone you may go to my office," said Mr. Underwood.

"I wish you would find out whether I can go in," insisted Mr. Breckenridge. "I do not intend to be subjected any further to such indignities, young man; give me your name."

Mr. Breckenridge took the name and went away.

The rules of the house admit only cabinet members, and it was agreed Mr. Gormley was acting within his rights.

Wrong Man, but Got Call-Down Just the Same

REPRESENTATIVE W. J. CARY of Milwaukee, Wis., is considered a very busy man. It is only occasionally that he can steal away and forget that he is in the capital of his country, representing one of her great states. On one such evening, recently, he attended a stag party, and did not get back to his hotel until some time after midnight. It was Saturday night, or rather, Sunday morning, and he slipped into bed with a sigh of relief at the thought that he could sleep all day if he liked.

About seven o'clock the telephone bell rang, startling him out of the nicest rest he had had for weeks. So it was not with a very pleasant voice that he said:

"Hello—"

"Boston?" was the astounded reply. "Somebody from Boston calling me? You must be mistaken."

"Hello! Hello!" came impatiently from Boston, and, without waiting for response, launched into a tirade of abuse.

"You're the man that got up on the house floor the other day and declared that the Boston tea party was one of those historical fakes; that our ancestors were all drunk at the time—eh?"

"No, madam. I assure you that you are mistaken. I'm not the man. You have the wrong man. I say—"

"But, madam, you are only spending a lot of money to tell me of something I—"

"I don't care how much money I spend, I wanted to have the pleasure of denouncing you—you, who are trying to be mayor of Boston. Yes, you're a fine man to be our mayor, now, aren't you?"

"I don't know, as I am not aspiring for the honor. I am Representative Cary and I live in Wisconsin, when I can, and am at home—"

"Oh, oh—oh, I am so sorry! Oh, you just don't know how sorry I am, sir! I wanted to talk to Representative Curley. You know he is—"

"Yes, madam, I know he is running for chief official of your city. About his speech on the floor I—"

"Pardon me, please. Goodbye—"

Educational Work Makes a Hit With the Sailors

NOT only are the enlisted men of the navy displaying an amazing interest in the educational work recently instituted by Secretary Daniels on board warships, but the officers also are applying themselves with great diligence to the task of teaching the men. This, in substance, is the report of George A. Reeder, shipboard secretary of the Young Men's Christian association, assigned to the Atlantic battleship fleet, made public by the navy department.

Secretary Reeder relates that on the second day at sea the men of the fleet were summoned below decks to listen to the reading of the department circular, outlining the plan of education and the various lines of study that the men could study. It was both interesting and amusing, he says, to see the expressions on the old sea dogs as they heard the courses outlined and discussed the studies they were going to pursue. The real spirit of the work, however, he said, began to manifest itself when "school call" sounded on the following day and the men went to their class rooms.

"The interest that was developed on the part of the men was amazing," Mr. Reeder said. "It so happened that a night or two after the work began I stood a mid-watch with one of the junior officers and in coming down the quarters I heard two men talking in subdued but earnest tones. One man said to the other: 'Why, you fool, four times eight is thirty-two. Ain't you never going to learn that?' And it struck me that if the educational plan had gripped men sufficiently to keep them at work between 1 and 2 o'clock in the morning on simple sums in arithmetic it was going to prove of real value to the personnel of the fleet."

Rep. Kahn Says Japanese Girls Like Fat Men

THE writer of the popular song, "Nobody Loves a Fat Man," ought to go to Japan and learn his error. So says Representative Julius Kahn of California, who is very far from being a "lightweight" champion when it comes to adipose tissue. Mr. Kahn is a great traveler and has found his size of some disadvantage in foreign countries when it comes to the matter of transportation, for in China the men who carry passengers in chairs always get twice the number of carriers when he goes out on a trip. It was the same way in other Oriental lands; everywhere he had to pay double.

In Japan, however, he met his reward. In the land of the chrysanthemum fat is regarded as a sign of beauty, and is an object greatly to be wished for by the men. One evening Mr. Kahn and his wife were at a bazaar. Strolling about they finally paused before the booth of a fair maiden.

The girl gazed with admiration on the imposing figure of the American representative and at last ran out from behind the table, threw her arms around his neck and burst out into exclamations of delight.

"Oh, how nice!" she cried in broken English. "Nice and fat!" proceeding to bestow a series of most emphatic hugs on the object of her admiration.

Mrs. Kahn burst into laughter and the representative hastened to extricate himself and his wife from the building.

Net Waist Draped With Lace and Silk

ONE of those pretty fancy waists which are so easily made by draping a net foundation with silk or chiffon and lace is pictured here. Any woman who can sew even a little can manage a waist of this kind and get results that will delight her.

The blouse shown in the picture is made over a ready-made foundation waist of cream-colored net, cut with a round neck and elbow sleeves. Waists of this kind, or of inexpensive all-over lace, may be had for a dollar or two. And, since fashion decrees that clothes are not to fit but to hang upon the figure, a ready-made foundation is altogether satisfactory for use in making a dressy blouse of lace or of crepe or silk or chiffon, or combinations of these fabrics.

Over the foundation waist of net there is a surplus drape of wide shadow lace. It is gathered in at the shoulder seams and brought to the waist line at the front and back, where it is sewed into the narrow belt or tape that finishes the net waist. This gives the blouse the full, soft appearance which is required for style and for beauty.

A plain over-bodice of crepe de chine in paprika color is cut, opened in a V shape to the waist line at the back and in front. This is finished with a very narrow hem and a fold of chiffon, in the same color as the crepe. It is placed over the waist and sewed in at the waist line. The shoulder is long and the armholes are finished with a narrow border of chiffon.

Sleeves of net dyed to match the crepe in color are placed over the sleeves of the foundation and sewed down to them at the armholes. The crepe bodice extends over the arm's eye and conceals it.

Short motifs of dyed lace with touches of silk embroidery in turquoise blue, pale green and silver thread are placed over the full lace surplice at the front. The round neck is finished with narrow velvet ribbon in turquoise blue.

There is a wide, soft girle of the crepe de chine, which fastens in front and, as a finishing touch, frills of plaited net are set on to the sleeves.

Such a waist would be as effective developed in any other color or in black and white. The color of the velvet at the neck and those colors in the embroidery are to be chosen to harmonize with that used for the over-bodice.

THE toque for mourning, illustrated here, is designed for a widow and shows a conservative shape covered with crepe very cleverly put on. A crepe veil, in the fashionable length and drape, is a part of the design and is not removable.

The toque frame is rather long and narrow. The coronet is covered with narrow folds of crepe laid on in a pattern. The veil falls from the back and is a part of the hat, not removable. It falls not quite to the waist line. This veil is a good type of those used this season. It is entirely of crepe, with a three-inch hem, and somewhat shorter than the average of former seasons. Vells as a rule are shorter and are used as a part of the design.

The turban is to be worn with a face veil of net bordered with a narrow fold of crepe. The frame is covered smoothly with black crepe and is faced with white crepe which extends part way up on the coronet. It is prettily trimmed with a knot and ends made of the crepe.

For summer wear mourning millinery shows all the designs that are made up in black, duplicated in white crepe, which is correct mourning. Combinations of black and white in the same hat develop wonderfully attractive millinery and demonstrate that it is the fabric rather than its color which signifies its use and purpose.

Among the shapes fashionable this season there are many which are adapted to crepe hats. They are medium in size and set almost squarely on the head, two things which are excellent points in their favor. When crepe veils are used with them they are almost always rather short and fall from the back of the hat.

PIMPLES ALL OVER FACE

1413 E. Genesee Ave., Saginaw, Mich.—"Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me of a very bad disease of the face without leaving a scar. Pimples broke out all over my face, red and large. They festered and came to a head. They itched and burned and caused me to scratch them and make sores. They said they were seed warts. At night I was restless from itching. When the barber would shave me my face would bleed terribly. Then scabs would form afterwards, then they would drop off and the so-called seed warts would come back again. They were on my face for about nine months and the trouble caused disfigurement while it lasted.

"One day I read in the paper of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I received a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and it was so much value to me that I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment at the drug store. I used both according to directions. In about ten days my face began to heal up. My face is now clear of the warts and not a scar is left." (Signed) LeRoy C. O'Brien, May 12, 1913.

PRINCESS THEATRE

COMING ATTRACTIONS

For the Friday night attraction at the Princess the management has secured Robert Louis Stevenson's powerful version of the well known book of adventure, "Treasure Island."

Buried treasure is one of the very foundations of romance. This thrilling Warner's Feature follows Stevenson's original story closely and the result is a stirring production depicting the merry life of a pirate crew and their hunt for buried treasure. The picture, which is in three parts, is a romance of gold seeking pirates, and bristles with thrills and sensations.

"THE WAY TO HAPPINESS"

The Princess offers an unusual feature attraction for their Saturday night show. It is a drama in three parts "The Way to Happiness."

The startling scenes of this most unusual photodrama are bound to bring tears to your eyes and a lump to your throat. You will be shown that the true way to happiness lies not in riches nor in the pleasures of the world, but in rendering a simple service to your fellow-man.

This splendid Warner's feature is not a dry sermon by any means. The characters are types taken from real life and they play their parts with an earnestness that is most convincing. The photography is matchless and the settings are quite up to the highest standards of motion picture making. There isn't a member of your family that will not enjoy this clean, wholesome, feature production, and the same thing applies to every one you know. It shows clearly the hand of the master producer, and the gripping intensity of the scenes leaves nothing to be desired in the way of plot.

A mighty good comedy picture will be shown in addition to the above feature.—Adv.
