WHEREABOUTS UNKNOWN

Ted Hueston, of Sharon, Left Home for Jackson—Missing Since April 20.

Ted Hueston, aged about 35 years, who has been a well known resident in the Irwin neighborhood, of Sharon, for the last ten or twelve years, left his home for Jackson on Monday, April 20, and his family is unable to find any traces of him.

Mr. Hueston is quite well known in Chelsea, having for several years driven a milk delivery route to this place. He owns a forty acre farm on which he made his home, but had commenced packing his household goods to have them moved to Jackson, for which city he left on Monday to complete the final arrangements.

For several years he has been suffering with an affliction of one of the drums of his ears, and was quite deaf. About a year ago the physician who treated him, informed his friends that he was liable to become mentally unbalanced, and it is thought by those acquainted with him that his ear trouble has caused him to wander away. Mr. Hueston has a wife and three children.

The missing man was seen boarding a car at Francisco Monday evening and from that time all trace of his whereabouts is unsolved.

Mrs. Harriet H. Keller.

Mrs. Harriet H. Keller, was born in West Virginia, February 5, 1838, and died at the Methodist Old Peoples' Home Saturday afternoon, April 25, 1914, aged 76 years, 2 months and 20 days.

Mrs. Keller came to the home six years ago last January from Detroit. The funeral was held at the home at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, Rev. J. W. Campbell officiating. Interment Oak Grove cemetery.

Queen Esther Circle.

The Queen Esther Circle of the Methodist church met with Miss Sylvia Runciman Wednesday evening. This was their annual mite-box opening, and the banner meeting of the year. There were thirty-four present and the offering will amount to about nine dollars. The following excellent program was rendered:

Vocal Solo—James Barch.
Prayer—Rev. J. W. Campbell.
Piano Solo—Miss Esther Hammond.
Reading, "Cindy's Chance"—Miss Mildred Daniels.

Violin and Piano Duet—Miss Ethel and Lloyd Kalmbach.
Reading, "First and Last"—Miss Ruth King.

Piano Solo—Miss Esther Riemschneider.
Reading, "The Other Girls"—Miss Ruby Wightman.

Vocal Duet—Bernice Prudden and Letha Alber.

After which ice cream and cake was served. Esther Kalmbach, Sylvia Runciman and Amy Wolff were chosen to represent the local Queen Esther's at the convention to be held at Stockbridge, May 7 and 8.

County Corn Contest.

The Washtenaw county boys' and girls' corn contest is financed by the banks and business men of each of the following contest centers: Chelsea, Dexter, Manchester, Milan, Saline and Ypsilanti. Salem township contest will be financed by the Farmers' Club and Salem Arbor of Gleaners.

The county has been divided into seven districts, and the Chelsea contest district consists of Sylvan, Lyndon, two school districts in Dexter township, six districts in Lima, one district in each Sharon and Freedom.

The following names have been received by County School Commissioner Essery of those who have entered the contest in the Chelsea district: Clarence Buss, Julius Haas, Freedom; Florence Kilmer, Douglas Hoppe, Leon Lambert, Sylvan.

Commences Law Suits.

As an echo of the suits against Wilbur Jarvis, ex-county drain commissioner, found by referee Charles L. Miller to have given rebates unlawfully, the Western Indemnity Company which paid the $1,700 judgment rendered against Jarvis, has instituted suit in the circuit court, against a number of taxpayers who are alleged to have received rebates illegally.

After considerable correspondence, a number of those who received such rebates to the Western Indemnity Company, as Jarvis' bondsmen, but suits against the following have been instituted: Herman Gross, John Schill, Ernest Elsasser, Michigan Central Railroad Company, Chas. McDaniel, Henry Vickers, George Schable, Mrs. A. A. Aulls, Charles F. Maurer, Solomon Tate, George Schmidt, Fred Ottmar, Godfrey Cool, Jacob and Sam. Bauer, Amelia Klenkamp, H. H. King and Isaac Shipley.

Spraying and its Importance.

The month of May is usually a critical period with fruit crops, as aside from the danger of injury from frost and other unfavorable climatic conditions, the delicate flowers and fruit are likely to be greatly injured by the attack of various fungous diseases. If fruit growers can only be made to realize this fact and to understand that most, if not all of the injury can be prevented by thoroughly spraying the trees, the value of the fruit crop could be easily doubled.

These fungi develop on the leaves and fruit in the presence of moisture, and it has been found that if before infection has taken place the trees are thoroughly sprayed with either lime-sulphur solution or Brodeaux mixture, the development of the spores will be prevented and the attack warded off. In order to be effective, the spraying should be repeated often enough to keep the leaves and fruit at all times covered with the spray.

In practice it is customary to spray fruit trees of all kinds when the flower-buds have opened so they show a pink or white color, as at this time it is possible to cover the flower stalk ovary, which will later develop into fruit, and thus protect them during the blossoming period. If the weather is cold and wet so that the opening of the buds is delayed more than two weeks, it is advisable to repeat the application.

A second spraying should be made as soon as the fruit has set in order to cover the newly developed leaves and the fruit. Care should be taken at this time to use an abundance of the spray so as to fill the calyx-cup at the blossom and end of the apple and thus poison the apple worms when they attempt to enter the fruit. Two or three weeks later, another application is necessary, especially for apples and pears which are subject to attack of apple scab, and in seasons when the weather is cold and wet, a fourth application a little later is always advisable. For the winter varieties of apples, a fifth application during the first part of August (the date varying with the season), should be made for the second brood of the codling moth. A slight modification of the sprays may be used to advantage for any of our orchard fruits.

For the apple and pear, it is advisable to use a good brand of commercial lime-sulphur solution at the rate of one part to 40 parts of water; one part to 50 for the cherry and plum; and one part to 100 for the peach. Two or three pounds of arsenate of lead should be added to each 50 gallons of the spray for the control of curculio, codling moth, tent-caterpillar, canker worm, and other chewing insects.

For grape vines the same rules can be applied but Bordeaux mixture, composed of four pounds of copper sulphate, five pounds of lime and 50 gallons of water, should be substituted for the lime-sulphur. Ordinarily, this treatment will suffice, but for the control of plant lice and similar insects, an application of tobacco decoction or the commercial "Black Leaf 40" tobacco solution should be used when the insects first appear.

Will Open a Branch Store.

J. Bloomberg, of Flint, has rented the Campbell-Wood building on north Main street, at present occupied by A. G. Faust, and will open a branch shoe store. Mr. Bloomberg conducts a large shoe store in Flint and his branch store in Chelsea will be an exclusive shoe store for men, women, boys girls footwear. Mr. Bloomberg expects to open up about May 11, and the Chelsea store will be under the management of an experienced shoe salesman.

Strengthens Weak and Tired Women.

"I was under a great strain nursing a relative through three months' sickness," writes Mrs. J. C. VanDeSande, of Kirkland, Ill., and "Electric Bitters kept me from breaking down. I will never be without it." Do you feel tired and worn out? No appetite and food won't digest? It isn't the spring weather. You need Electric Bitters. Start a month's treatment to-day, nothing better for stomach, liver and kidneys. The great spring tonic. Relief or money back. 50c and $1.00. Recommended by L. F. Vogel, H. H. Penn Co. and L. T. Freeman Co. Adv.

DISASTROUS FIRE

Samuel Guthrie Loses His Barn and Live Stock Early Sunday Morning.

A fire at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Guthrie, of Sylvan, made a clean sweep of all the buildings on the farm, except their residence. The fire broke out about midnight Saturday night and had gained so much headway when discovered that Mr. Guthrie was unable to save a single article that was in the three buildings that were burned.

The blaze lighted up the streets of Chelsea and T. G. Speer, who is a nightwatch at the Tlenders buildings, informs the Standard that he was able to make a trip through building No. 19, without the aid of the lantern that he usually carries with him. A freight train crew on the Michigan Central, east bound, alarmed many of the neighbors by the blast from the engine whistle. When the crew on the last east bound car on the D., J. & C. electric line passed the premises everything seemed to be in secure shape. At the Vickers switch the crew changed off and took charge of the last west bound car and when they reached the west Guthrie crossing the buildings were nearly all burned to the ground.

Mr. Guthrie was at the barn between ten and eleven o'clock and there were no indications of the fire at that time. The loss consists of three buildings, two horses, three cows, one calf, one hundred and twenty-five chickens, the farm dog, hay, grain, wagons, buggies, harnesses, and all of the farm tools, except a plow and drag. The value of the destroyed property is placed at about $2,000; insured in the Washtenaw Mutual Fire Insurance Co. for $950.

The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is thought by many to have been caused by some one who had entered one of the buildings for a night's lodging.

Struck by Lightning.

The home of Mrs. Mary Young of Sylvan was struck by lightning about 1 o'clock last Saturday morning. The bolt struck one of the chimneys and followed it into the house. A partition was badly shattered and the carpet in the sitting room was set on fire which was put out by a few pails of water by her son Charles. Both Mrs. Young and son were somewhat stunned by the bolt of electricity. The damage to the house is fully covered by insurance.

Quarterly Business Meeting.

The Young People's Society of St. Paul's church held their quarterly business meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Pielemeier, of Lima, last Friday evening.

The following were elected as delegates to attend the meeting of the Evangelical League of the Michigan District, which will be held in Muskegon on May 9 and 10: Paul Niehaus, Edwin Pielemeier, Nada Hoffman, Ardena Lambrecht, Clara Koch, Mary Koch, the latter being one of the League officers.

A Musical Treat.

A Chelsea boy made good last Friday night before an audience composed of his friends who have watched his efforts for some time. James B. Barch, basso-cantante, accompanied by Miss Esther Riemschneider, pianist, gave a recital at the Methodist church before an audience which nearly filled the large auditorium, and which showed its appreciation of his splendid rendition of the various numbers on the program. Mr. Barch is the possessor of a rich voice of great volume and range, and which is under perfect control all of the time. Miss Riemschneider's work is also entitled to great praise.

Cavanaugh Lake Grange Meeting.

Cavanaugh Lake Grange will hold its next meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Riemschneider, on Tuesday evening, May 5. The program will be as follows:

Song.

Recitation, Aurleit Lehmann.
Roll call, What are the three important things your mother did for you?

Appreciation of mothers in art, literature and history, Mrs. K. Geiske.
Song, "Silver threads among the gold," Kathrine Notten.
Reading, about mothers, Lucy Hoppe.

Does it pay to raise potatoes for market? Discussion led by Christian Weber.

STRATEGIC POINT ON VERA CRUZ RAILWAY

This is one of the two bridges on the line of the railway from Vera Cruz to Mexico City, the control of which means much to the success of the American troops. The bridges are only a few miles from Vera Cruz, and their destruction would seriously hamper the movement toward the capital.

FIFTH BRIGADE EMBARKS AT GALVESTON

The Fifth brigade, U. S. A., under command of Brig. Gen. Fred Funston, on its way to the transports at the Galveston docks, where it embarked for Vera Cruz. In the brigade are about 4,700 officers and men, comprising the Fourth, Seventh, Nineteenth and Twenty-eighth infantry, the Sixth cavalry, one battery of the Fourth field artillery, a company of engineers, a company of the signal corps and an ambulance corps.

BORDER COMMANDERS AND TROOPS

CENSUS ESTIMATE IS ANNOUNCED

CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES HAS POPULATION OF 98,000,000.

DETROIT SHOWS GREAT GAIN

Calculations of Bureau Give Michigan Nearly Three Millions of People at Present Time.

Washington—Continental United States now has a population of more than 98,000,000 people, while the country, with its possessions, is peopled with more than 109,000,000 persons, the census bureau announced Monday. Census experts have calculated that the population of continental United States on July 1, 1914, will be 98,781,324 against 91,972,268 on April 15, 1910, when the last census was taken. For the United States and its possessions they estimate the population this July will be 109,021,992 compared with 101,748,769 in 1910. Estimates for cities under 100,000 have not been announced.

Detroit is given as 537,650. The last regular federal census, taken in 1910, showed Detroit to have a population at that time of 465,760.

Michigan's estimated population by July 1 is 2,976,030, against 2,810,173 in 1910, making the state eighth in the country.

HOTEL MEN HOLD MEETING

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Michigan hotel-keepers here Friday organized the Michigan Hotel Men's association, with the following officers: F. R. Green, Greenville, president; C. B. Southworth, Monroe, vice-president; L. C. Pearson, Albion, secretary; Charles Clements, Detroit, treasurer. The executive committee is: George Woolley, Detroit; Ernest McLean, Kalamazoo; L. J. Montgomery, Battle Creek; Walter Hodges, Kalamazoo; E. C. Puffer, Flint.

Legislative committee: George Fullwell, Detroit; John C. Thompson, Cadillac; J. H. Lewis, Marquette; W. G. Kerns, Lansing; W. L. McManus, Petoskey.

"DIVINE RIGHT" BAER DEAD

Noted Figure in Great Coal Strike Passes Away.

Philadelphia—George F. Baer, president of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Co., who was the leader of the anthracite coal railways and operators in the great struggle of 1902 with their men, is dead.

He was known as "Divine Right" Baer on account of a letter in which he was quoted as saying "The rights and interests of the laboring man shall be protected and cared for—not by the labor agitators, but by the Christian men to whom God in His infinite wisdom has given the control of the property interests of the country, and upon the successful management of which so much depends."

Flyer Sideswipes Freight Train. Graying, Mich.—The Michigan Central flyer, northbound, sideswiped a freight train north of Frederic at 5 o'clock Saturday morning, derailing the engine and express car. A. W. Lamb, of Bay City, engineer on the flyer, has a broken arm and is internally injured, and Expressman George Hawkins, of Bay City, sustained several broken ribs. The injured trainmen were taken to Bay City on a special.

TELEGRAPHIC FLASHES

E. C. Fish, of Jackson, was elected vice-president, and E. R. Chaplin, of Hillsdale, secretary-treasurer of the Knights of the Railway Service, a national organization of electric railway employees.

Moses Gombert, of the chemistry department of the U. of M., was recently elected a member of the National Academy of Science, the first time such an honor has ever come to a member of the Michigan faculty.

Elder L. H. Christian, of Hutchinson, Minn., has been elected president of the Lake Union conference of the Seventh Day Adventists, at Battle Creek. He is secretary of the Scandinavian department of the North American conference.

Albert Panter, farmer near Vesta, Ill., fell when he jumped from a Pere Marquette passenger train and struck on his face and tore his upper lip loose. He carried it to a physician and had it sewed back on.

City Clerk T. H. Thorne of Battle Creek has advertised biggest bond issue ever attempted by that city at one time. The amount represented is $180,000, of which $65,000 is for paving, $50,000 for finishing the new city hall, $3,000 for sewer construction, $20,000 for city jail purposes, and $15,000 for bridge work.

FORSEES NEW TRIBUNAL ON THIS HEMISPHERE

JOHN BARRETT.

Washington—A new tribunal on the western hemisphere for the settlement of difficulties among American nations and the withdrawal from the Hague tribunal by every American nation of strictly American disputes calling for adjudication—these are the possible results of the Argentine-Brazil-Chile mediation of the trouble between the United States and Mexico. This forecast was given Monday by John Barrett, director of the Pan-American Union and former minister to the Argentine Republic.

WILL INVESTIGATE P. M.

Rep. Cramton Previews on Interstate Commerce Commission to Take Up Matter at Once.

Washington—Immediate investigation of the Pere Marquette railway, in accordance with a resolution introduced in the house by Representative L. C. Cramton of Lapeer, Mich., is promised by an order issued Saturday by the interstate commerce commission.

With the assistance of Chairman Adamson, of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, Congressman Cramton had not only convinced the commission that there was need of haste, but also prevailed on it to place the Pere Marquette first on the list of railroads to have their physical valuation determined.

The supreme court decision that appraisal is the only basis on which rates may be fixed will now have its first actual demonstration in the case of the Pere Marquette.

Will Hunt for Gold.

Ishpeming, Mich.—John A. Doelle, superintendent of the public schools of Portage township, including the village of Houghton, in the Michigan copper country, is going to search for gold in Marquette county. He has procured from the John M. Longyear interests of Marquette, an option on a section of land in the Dead River district, north of Ishpeming, and will shortly institute exploratory work. The tract includes the old Free Center property, from which several thousand dollars' worth of gold was obtained a quarter of a century ago.

Discourage Illegal Frog Hunting.

Lapeer, Mich.—The Lapeer Game and Fish association has adopted a resolution discouraging frog hunting during the hatching season. Lapeer county is known throughout the state for its frog-leg suppers and hundreds of people come here annually from other counties. Although the state law restricts frog killing to the summer months between July 1 and November 1, notice has come to the game association that many frogs are being killed now out of season, hence the resolution.

MICHIGAN NEWS IN BRIEF

The annual encampment of Uniform Rank, Woodmen of the World, of Michigan and Ohio, will be held in Port Huron the week of August 10.

The body of Cyril Mellis, 11 years old, who was drowned at Ypsilanti March 28, was recovered Sunday. Two boys saw the body floating and summoned help.

The flooring mill at Dighton, Osceola county, belonging to Jones & Green, of Big Rapids, burned Monday night, causing a loss to the mill property of about $35,000, with some insurance.

Wool buyers are predicting that within a very few years there will be no sheep in Clinton county. During the last four years the wool clip has steadily decreased, and this year the reduction is marked.

E. W. Rice, 72 years old, of Kalamazoo, indicted recently on a charge of trading a lot in Kalamazoo which he did not own, for a farm, is dead. He collapsed the night the indictment was returned, and had failed rapidly since.

Struck by a switch engine while hurrying through the Grand Trunk yards Nicholas Dragowick, an employee of the locomotive shops of the same railroad at Battle Creek, was killed. Dragowick was 34 years old and unmarried.

A jury in the Livingston county circuit court returned a verdict of $4,000 against the Grand Trunk for the death of William R. Wood, a former farmer near Gregory in Livingston county. Wood was killed on November 12, 1912, when a passenger struck him as he was crossing the track.

203 MEN PERISH IN COAL MINE FIRE IN WEST VIRGINIA

Fifty-nine are Saved Before Flames Force Rescuers to Quit

GAS EXPLOSIONS IN DEEP SHAFT WRECK TWO MINES

Of 190 Men Working in One, Property One One Is Saved—Second Largest Disaster in History of State.

Eccles, W. Va.—All hope for the rescue alive of the 203 miners entombed by an explosion Tuesday in mines Nos. 5 and 6, of the New River collieries company here was abandoned late Tuesday night. Rescuers were unable to force their way into the burning shafts.

Fifty-nine men, all severely burned, were rescued alive from No. 6 mine and are receiving medical treatment in improvised hospitals. Four bodies were recovered from the same shaft.

The disaster, the second largest in the mining history of West Virginia, was caused by a gas explosion in the 600-foot level of mine No. 5. It was followed five minutes later by a second explosion, which completely wrecked this mine and partially demolished mine No. 6, a connecting operation.

One hundred and ninety men were at work in mine No. 5, and not one of them reached the surface. The mine immediately caught fire and attempts at rescue were futile. Late Tuesday night all hope of getting the miners out of mine No. 6 was given up and rescue parties, driven back by the intense heat and deadly gases, were forced to halt their effort to reach the entombed men.

REFUGEES REACH VERA CRUZ

All Americans Believed to Be Out of Surrounding Territory.

Washington—Arrival of 109 Americans at Vera Cruz at 5 p. m. Tuesday was reported to the navy department by Admiral Fletcher. Of these 63 were from Lomo Ponito, 11 from Potrero, and the remainder from Cordoba, Tierra Blanca and outlying districts.

Admiral Fletcher announced that all Americans are now believed to be out of the country lying between El Burro and Cordoba, as well as that between Cordoba, Tierra Blanca and Vera Cruz. He added that as far as could be discovered no Americans had been injured.

Practically all foreigners in the vicinity of Durango and Torreón have now left Mexico, according to a telegram from Consul Edwards at Juarez.

The telegram was as follows: "Special trains arrived Tuesday morning from Torreón, bringing 65 Americans and 25 other foreigners. About a third of the Americans will probably ask for transportation to their homes in the United States. This brings out nearly all of the foreigners from Durango and Torreón. Fully 200 refugees have crossed the border from this district during the past week. All of them report courteous treatment by the natives during their journey. Those expressing their determination to wholly abandon Mexico or remain away until peace is fully restored are largely in the majority. There is very little military activity and no alarming symptoms in the local situation."

To Guard Against Disease.

Washington—A new phase of the Mexican problem was brought to the attention of congress Tuesday when Secretary McAdoo, on behalf the house to appropriate and make "instantly available," $100,000 to prevent the introduction and spread of epidemic diseases. The current year fund for this purpose is exhausted.

"The danger to this country from the introduction of smallpox and typhus fever," Mr. McAdoo reported, "is greatly augmented on account of the arrival of refugees and persons returning from Mexico to the United States ports."

Secretary McAdoo also asked $25,000 for establishment of quarantine facilities at Province, R. I. He proposed to use for that purpose the old cruiser Newark, now at the Norfolk navy yard.

ITEMS OF STATE INTEREST

Paul Wiegman, of Holt, who graduates from Albion college in June, has accepted the position of athletic coach and teacher of science in Ionia high school for next year.

Judge Sessions Tuesday at Grand Rapids, imposed fines of $8,000 on both the Saginaw Beef Co. and the Ann Arbor Railroad Co. for violating interstate commerce regulations pertaining to freight shipments. There were 10 counts against each of the defendants.

The MAID of the FOREST

SYNOPSIS.

Joseph Hayward, an ensign in the United States army, on his way to Fort Hammar, meets Simon Girty, a renegade Indian, who has been connected with all manner of atrocities, also headed for Fort Hammar with a message from the renegade general, Hamilton. Hayward guides him to the fort. At General Hammar's headquarters Hayward meets Rene D'Auvray, who professes to recognize him, although he has no recollection of ever having seen her before. Hayward volunteers to carry a message for Hammar to Sandusky, where Hamilton is stationed. The northwest Indian tribes are ready to fight and are only held back by the fear of the friendly Wyandots, to whom the latter are demanding the return of a white man, a religious teacher, whom they believe to be a prisoner. Hayward's mission is to assure the Wyandots that the man is not held by the soldiers. Rene tells him that she is a quarter-blood Wyandot and a missionary among the Indians. She has been in search of her father, who she believes is a French officer. She insists that she has seen Hayward before, but in a British uniform. Hayward agrees to accompany her to the north accompanied by a guide named Brady and a private soldier. They come on the trail of a war party and escape from the Indians. Hayward finds a murdered man in the hut. It proves to be Rene's father, a French officer. Rene is called by the Wyandots "white chief." Rene appears and Hayward is puzzled by her insistence that they have met before. Rene recognizes the murdered man as her father, who was known among the Indians as Wa-pa-tee-tah. She tells Hayward her father was killed by the French court and had spent his life among the Indians as a missionary.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

"Yes, Monsieur Brady, but unknown to them, even to Girty himself. They know me—the Miamis—and I have no fear even of their young men when painted for war." She spoke simply, clearly, as if she would conceal nothing. "This was my father's cabin. No one knew of it but me—not even Simon Girty. It was reported at Fort Hammar that he was dead; I did not know, yet it was that vague report which made me so eager to get back to my own people; made me reckless enough to risk the trail in company with the white renegade. I do not fear, but I despise him. Yesterday we came upon that raiding party, and need needs join them as they journeyed our way."

"What settlements had they attacked?"

"Those of the Moravians; they had scalps and booty."

"And their chief?"

"Black Horse, an outlaw of the Ojibwas; Girty knew him."

"You left them when?"

"I hardly know, monsieur," glancing toward me, "perhaps two hours ago; I had forgotten time. They kept no guard, for there had been no pursuit, nor any sign of danger. It was easy to slip away unseen. None among them knew of this place, not even Girty, and I came alone. There was nothing for me to fear; I knew the way, and I had faith I should find my father."

"This is the truth? The whole truth?"

"Oui, monsieur," and bowed her head.

"Then you know nothing of any new arrivals at the camp? There were some expected?"

"I am sure not," her aroused interest apparent in her voice. "Did others join them? Who were they, monsieur?"

Brady looked at her searchingly, leaning on his gun, the lines of his face stern. I could not forbear stepping forward beside her.

"Never you mind speaking, Master Hayward," he said shortly. "The girl needs no defender; I believe what she says. Now listen, both of you, and see what you make of it. I was within twenty yards of their camp, at the edge of the underbrush, and could see clearly all that occurred about the fire. There was no guard set, but the prisoner lay between two Indians, so that any attempt at rescue was impossible. I could not tell just how many were in the band, for some were lying well back beyond the range of light. I saw Girty, however, get up and put wood on the flame. I had sight drawn on the devil, yet dared not fire. Then he lay down again, and I crept around toward where he had disappeared, thinking I might use a knife to rid the world of such a beast. But before I could reach him there came along the shore a considerable body of Indians. The sand made no sound, and they passed so close to where I lay one fellow stepped upon my hand. Yet they passed by, trooping into the camp, and I counted thirty."

"Of what tribe, monsieur?"

"From the Wabash. I caught words in the language of the Shawnees. They had a white man with them."

"A prisoner?"

"No; he talked with Girty in English, and then to the savages in their own tongue. I could only catch a word now and then I could understand, but he pointed toward the island, and seemed to urge them this way. I dared not stay there longer, for fear I should be too late, and so crept backward, and got away."

She stepped forward and grasped his arm.

"What was the white man like, monsieur? You saw his face?"

"No; never once did he front the fire. I heard his voice, and could see the outline of his figure. He was a tall fellow, not unlike the ensign here, and he wore a red coat."

For one moment she stood motionless, one hand pressed against her temple, the other grasping his sleeve. The cheek toward me flamed red.

"You—you are sure?" she faltered.

"He—he looked like that?"

"Yes, mademoiselle," his tone that of surprise. "It was dark but I could see that."

"And this man is really an American officer?" her dark eyes flashing toward me. "He has never been in the north before?"

A grim smile curled Brady's lips, as his keen gray eyes swept over the two of us.

"I reckon maybe it was 'bout a year ago I first met the ensign, mademoiselle, up at Port Pitt, an' off an' on ever since we've run against each other along the Ohio. I don't know what all this may be leadin' to, but so far as I can see, he ain't no cause to tell you a lie."

She hesitated, glancing from his sober face into mine; then impulsively held out her hand.

"I—I am glad, monsieur," her lips trembling. "I—I cannot tell you how glad. It is such a strange thing that you should look so much alike and bear the same name. Can the other be a relative of yours?"

"Hardly; we are I suppose of English stock, but my family has been a hundred years in Maryland. But about this Englishman?"

"He was ever urging the tribes to war, lying to them, pledging them help. He came to my people—I am a Wyandot—often. He met my father there in council, the one ever advocating war, the other counseling peace. He failed in his mission to our people, yet somehow my father liked him; perhaps it was a pleasure to talk again with one who knew Europe and the late books. And the Englishman, hoping thus to finally win my father over to his side, was most cordial. He played a part that he might keep my father on long journeys to other tribes, while he remained behind to poison the minds of our own people. I overheard his words, his lying promises to our warriors. Yet in spite of all, the Wyandots remained at peace; they alone held back the tribes from war. I appealed to them, monsieur; I, a mere girl, held before them a cross, and they listened, and were afraid. They drove the Englishman from the camp, back to his master."

"And what then?"

"My father still trusted him, and he came back once more. They went away together, as I supposed on some mission to the tribes. I heard nothing, no message came back. I came to this island with two of my people, but there was no one here; the cabin was deserted. There came to me a report that they were seen together on the Wabash, and I journeyed there also. The Miamis told me a strange story of treachery and death at the hands of the Americans. I half believed it a lie; yet I must know. My Wyandots would go no further; they were afraid, so I came by myself to the Shawnees, and then, with French boatmen, journeyed up the great river to the fort of the American command. You know the rest, messieurs."

She was leaning back against the table, holding herself erect by her hands. Her story had been told swiftly, interjected with French phrases where English failed her.

"Yes," I burst forth, "you came here again and found him dead—murdered—and—and you believed I did it?"

CHAPTER X.

The Barrier Between.

Her eyes deserted Brady's face and sought mine. "Not now, monsieur, not now," she said gently. "I was blind then with suspicion. The name, the face, the giant form deceived me. But, messieurs, we must not stand and talk. I am in no danger; they will never lay hands on me, but they will come here seeking you. It will be as the Englishman wishes; he will tell them you are here, that you have killed Wa-pa-tee-tah of the Wyandots. He will point out to them the dead body, and cry for vengeance. They are young warriors, mad already with blood-lust—Miamis, Shawnees, Ojibwas—many of them outcasts from their tribes. No words of mine will restrain them, or save you. There will be blood and war. You must not wait, messieurs; you must go!"

"And leave you here with those demons?"

She made a swift gesture.

"I—Mother of God, you do not understand. There is nothing for me to fear. They dare not touch me. They know me—I am a Wyandot. To do me evil would mean war. It is of yourselves you must think. I will remain here with my father's body; they will find me alone when they come."

She stepped past Brady to the door, opened it and glanced out into the night.

"It is an hour yet until day," she said coming back. "That will give you time. They will be here with the first light of dawn. There will be no attack until then. You must delay no longer."

We followed her out into the night, across the narrow clearing into the fringe of woods. There were clouds overhead, and very dark, but there seemed to be a path winding through the dense tangle of underbrush. Only for a moment did the girl hesitate, bending down and listening. Then she led the way around a narrow point of sand, pressed back some bushes, and revealed the sharp prow of a canoe. Brady lunged down his pack, and hauled the light craft down to the edge of the water.

"Lay hold there, Schultz," he ordered in low voice, "I'll get her aloft."

I stood alone back in the shadow, hesitating, uncertain. It was in my heart to refuse to desert her there. She turned toward me.

"You must get away at once," she said. "There is little enough time. Head straight out for the opposite shore."

"But I have no wish to go without you."

"Without me?" her voice questioning. "There is nothing for me to flee from; I have nothing to fear from Indians. Is it so hard for you to recall what I am?"

"Yes, it is, mademoiselle," I pleaded earnestly. "My thought will not associate you with these savages. Perhaps I might if I knew your people, but not such ruthless murderers as those yonder, wearing the scalps of women. Who is to protect you from that motley crew? Will it be Girty? or that English agent?"

Her eyes met mine even in the darkness.

"I shall need appeal to neither, monsieur. You do not in the least understand. I am not a mere squaw of the Wyandots, but a teacher they love. There is not a tribe from the Wabash to the upper lakes among whom my name is not known. I have even sat in council with the chiefs, and spoken. Touch me, those outlaws! Not one would dare lay a finger upon me. I am as safe among them as my father was."

"But he was killed."

"By no Indian hand. Please, monsieur, do not urge me any more. As it is I am balanced between two duties—to go with you, guard you, and see you safe, or remain and condemn my father's murderer."

"You believe then—"

"That he was the Englishman who bears your name. That man alone had knowledge of this hut on the island; he alone possessed opportunity. The scarlet jacket left behind, and his sudden appearance in the Indian camp, all point direct to his guilt. I remain to make sure; that is my duty, Monsieur Brady!"

The scout rose to his feet, a black smudge in the night, and came up the low bank to where we stood.

"You called, mademoiselle?"

"Yes; I was talking with the officer, but perhaps you do not understand all. Captain D'Auvray was known to the Wyandots as Wa-pa-tee-tah. He is dead, and his body will be taken to Sandusky; I shall tell the Wyandots how he died. There is no longer need that monsieur should meet them in council. It is better that you return to Fort Hammar."

She paused, but neither of us spoke, and she held out her hand.

"Good-by, Monsieur Brady."

He accepted the proffered hand awkwardly, dropped it almost instantly, and stepped back.

"I reckon that would be the best way, miss," he stammered, "so maybe we better go. Are you ready, sir?"

"Yes, run out the canoe; I'll be there in a minute. Mademoiselle!"

She turned toward me, as we went noiselessly across the sand beach. Her hand was not extended, but I had the courage to reach out and grasp it in my own.

"Do not say good-by to me," I whispered, feeling my voice tremble. "I go because you wish it, because it seems to be the wise thing to do; but I will not believe we are never to meet again."

"Yet that is not likely, monsieur."

"If I seek you it might be."

"It will require more than peaceful travel to do that," she replied soberly. "There is going to be war."

"War! The Indians of the north-west?"

"Yes; the time has come—is here. The council at Sandusky was for no other purpose. Girty's message was merely an excuse for the Wyandots to join the other tribes. He confessed as much to me. It was because my father realized his helplessness longer to restrain British influence, that he disappeared. It is war, monsieur."

"But not between us," I insisted, shocked at the picture. "Mademoiselle, come with me. There is nothing left to hold you to this life among savages. With your father dead, why should you continue to bury yourself in these woods? You have education, refinement, gentleness; why should you not go now, before war breaks along the border?"

"And desert my people?"

"But they are not your people; you are white, not red. That small drop of Indian blood in your veins does not make you a Wyandot. You have nothing else in common with them. Why not be yourself, choosing life among those of your own race?"

I thought she hesitated, and I grasped her hand more closely, the hot blood leaping in my veins. In the dim light I could see her lowered face, the eyes downcast.

"No, monsieur," she said at last, very low. "It is good of you to think thus of me, but—I cannot do that. You must not urge. The Wyandots need me—more now than my father is gone than ever before. They are my people; I was born to them, and played as a child in their villages. They love me, trust me, and I help them by teaching them the Christ. To desert them would be to desert him. I cannot do that, monsieur, merely to gratify myself."

"But have I no call upon you?" I insisted in desperation.

"No, monsieur," and she was looking at me now with some amazement.

"I am scarce an hour since I believed you a murderer. We do not know each other. Let me trust, and believe in you; do not speak like that."

"I meant nothing wrong, mademoiselle," I broke in hastily, stung by her words of reproof. "You have come to me out of the woods like a new life. I know it is strange, all strange, but there is already something between us that can never be severed."

"Is there, monsieur?"

"Yes; race makes no difference. I thought it did once. When you said back there in the shadow of the stockade that you were a Wyandot it was as if you struck me a blow in the face. I swore then I would think of you no more, yet, even that night, you were in my dreams, and ever since your face has been in my memory."

I felt her handclasp tighten on mine, although her body remained motionless.

"You do not believe me in earnest?"

"I! How can I, monsieur? I think you jest, you amuse yourself. Let us stop it all now. You go back to your people, I to mine, and we will both forget. No! Do not say more! I will not listen. Come with me to the boat."

I followed her down the bank, words burning on my lips she gave me no chance to speak, for she moved with quick decision. The two men had the canoe turned over, at the very edge of the water, and the scout was upon his knees in the sand. He looked up hastily at our approach.

"I reckon we stay here, miss," he said soberly. "Somebody has smashed a hole through the bottom with a stone."

She uttered a little cry of alarm, leaning over his shoulder.

"A hole! How could that be? Surely it was no accident!"

He arose to his feet, brushing off his knees.

"That's what I told the Dutchman, though neither of us could find the rock. I reckon the Englisher did that job; he had it all figured out, and meant to keep us here."

I saw her look up at the man's face, and then about in bewilderment.

"You think that—why?"

"Cause it seems ter me nat'ral. I reckon it's 'bout what I would a done if I was in his fix. He had proof against us, if he could get some Indians along as witnesses. Nobody would ever believe what we said, or even wait ter listen. All he had to do was catch us here, charge us with murder, an' turn them devils loose. That would let him out slick as a whistle."

She stood erect, one hand pressed against her temple.

"Then—then what is to be done?" she questioned blankly, "why—what—quick, look there!"

She was bending forward and pointing out at the lake. Some dark, moving object was visible in the water only a few yards from shore.

MISS FULLER TO RESIGN POSITION

DEAN OF WOMEN IN STATE NORMAL SCHOOL AT YPSILANTI TO LEAVE.

WILL TAKE UP PRISON WORK

Has Done Great Work in Michigan School, Building Up Important Department to Three Years' Course.

Ypsilanti—Miss Grace Fuller, dean of women and head of the department of household arts in the Michigan State Normal college, has tendered her resignation to the state board of education to take effect at the close of the summer session. She has accepted an offer, under consideration since last year, to become superintendent of the reformatory for women at the Illinois state penitentiary at Joliet.

Miss Fuller has accomplished a great work at the Normal college, building up her department from nothing to a three-year course in household arts of national high standing.

She has been assured of assistance from the Chicago cathedral mission and other organizations that will help find work and homes for her charges when they leave the reformatory.

Miss Fuller has been connected with the Normal for seven years, being dean of girls for four and one-half years.

FELLOWS GIVES OPINIONS

Burning of Saloon Does Not Constitute Surrender of License.

Lansing, Mich.—Attorney-General Fellows, in opinions filed Monday, holds that when a saloonkeeper's place of business burns, it does not constitute a surrender of his license. The case arose in a southern Michigan town. Fellows says such an incident does not warrant the village council denying a license.

He holds also that township boards and common councils have no right to grant saloon licenses in place of those surrendered, where the limit has been reached under the Warner-Cramton law, which gives one saloon license to every 500 population.

A marshal of a village is an officer and not an employee, under the terms of the workman's compensation law, says the attorney-general.

BOYS TO ASSIST VETERANS

Scouts will Act as Guides at National Encampment.

Detroit, Mich.—Local boy scouts will play an important part in the national encampment of the G. A. R. which is to be held here next September.

At a meeting of the executive committee Saturday noon in the mayor's office it was voted to accept the services of the scouts at the time of the encampment. The scouts will act as guides and will assist the medical corps in caring for the veterans as well as in giving assistance at all the information booths.

State to Have Elk Herd.

Lansing, Mich.—If the present plans of Land Commissioner A. C. Carton are not frustrated, Michigan, within a few years, will have a large number of elk among its herds of other game. Mr. Carton Monday received a letter from the secretary of the interior to the effect that the government would present Michigan with five elk, which are to be used as a nucleus for a large herd. The elk will likely be placed on the Houghton lake reservation.

TO PAY COMPENSATION FOR UNUSUAL FATALITY

Lansing, Mich.—The Negau-nee Iron Co. has notified the state industrial accident board that it will pay compensation to the dependents of Floyd Temby, killed recently by falling from a cage while coming up from the mine.

A fellow employee's finger was caught in the cage and the sight of blood caused Temby to faint. He rolled from the cage and was dashed to death at the bottom of the shaft. The company's action relieves the state board from giving a decision in the case.

DAIRY

OATS IMPROVE MILK FLAVOR

Interesting Experiments Conducted at Government Farm Favor Bran and Corn Ration.

It has been asserted by some dairymen that the feeding of crushed oats to cows will improve the flavor of milk. To ascertain the correctness of this theory a series of experiments was made by the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture at the experimental dairy farm at Beltsville, Md. Six cows were used in the experiment; three were fed a grain ration of corn meal, bran, and cottonseed meal; the other three were fed a grain mixture of five parts crushed oats and one part cottonseed meal. A number of samples of milk from the cows fed these rations were submitted to various persons in the dairy division and they were asked to indicate their preference. In all, 50 opinions were passed on various samples. Of these, 16 showed a preference for the milk from cows fed on crushed oats; 25 preferred that from the bran and corn ration, while nine expressed no choice. The results show that

To Organize County League.

Ann Arbor Times News: Monday afternoon in Saline, representatives from Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor, Milan, Chelsea and Saline met and decided to attempt the organization of a county baseball league among these towns, and a great deal of business of a preliminary nature was accomplished.

The representatives agreed upon a schedule to last 14 weeks, and decided that all players must be bona fide residents of the town which their teams represents. No professionals will be allowed to play.

A merchant in Milan has already offered a valuable suit case to the player on the winning team, who makes the most runs during the season. It is expected that other prizes will shortly be announced by merchants in the other cities of the league.

The Y. M. C. A. Intermediate team, strengthened by an older and more experienced battery, will probably represent Ann Arbor in this county league. These boys showed by their work last year that with a strong battery of older and steadier players, they could play ball of high class, and it is now felt that Ann Arbor can well be proud of the team which represents her in the county league.

NO CLOTHES FOR FAT PEOPLE

Verdict of German Physician Who Has Made Study of Adiposity and Its Cure.

Fat people ought to wear as little clothing as possible. In fact, they ought to wear no clothing for as much of the time as conditions will allow.

This is the bold statement of an original German physician who has been making a special study of adiposity and its cure. He dwells upon the fact that fat is in itself a disease when it becomes adiposity. Every person should be plump, i. e., have fat in certain parts of the body, and a layer of fat of no great thickness should underlie the skin for its protection.

But the taking on of too much fat is an evidence of faulty assimilation of food. Too much is being made into fat and too little into the harder tissue of the muscles. It is for this reason that many specialists insist upon their stout patients taking all of the exercise they will, for exercising serves the double purpose of correcting the malassimilation of food and burning up of the fat already accumulated by the action of the muscles. Fat is, so to say, "burned up" by exercise, the little globules being melted away by the heat of the activity of the muscles.

If it were possible to oxidize the fat in our tissues, it would melt away just as it does when put into a frying pan, but exercise is indulged in by the stout only at a great expenditure of will power.

The stout person should wear as little clothing as possible, in order that the oxygen of the air may act upon the fat through the pores of the skin, for while oxidation is not as rapid in this way as it is by the muscles, it is more continuous and does take place, as is plain from the hardened fat of the hardy, exposed person, when compared with the flabby fat of the cod-dled stout man or woman who is always wrapped in heavy garments and furs. Under the action of the air the fatty globules lose much of their moisture, and become hard, shrinking somewhat and serving the purpose for which nature intended the fatty layers—protection of the more delicate tissues beneath it.

New Form of Flytrap.

A new style of flytrap is made of Manila paper and stiff cotton fly-screen netting, and consists simply of an inner and outer cone. This trap is folded flat for shipment and is readily opened out for using. The trap is placed over any kind of bait, preferably molasses. When the fly has finished with the bait it naturally lights on the netting of the inner cone and crawls up through the aperture at the top into the upper cone, which is also of netting and from which there is no escape. The base and apex of the device are made of heavy Manila paper to give it stiffness. When enough flies have been caught the trap may be burned.

Rev. Talmage Says:

"I cannot imagine any more unfair or meaner thing than for a man to get his sins pardoned at the last minute, and then go to heaven and live in a mansion, and go riding about in a golden chariot over the golden streets while his wife and children, whom he might have provided for, are begging cold victuals at the basement door of an earthly city. It seems to me there ought to be a poorhouse somewhere on the outskirts of heaven where those guilty of such improvidence should be kept for a while on soup and gristle, instead of sitting down at the King's banquet. It is said that the church is a divine institution, and I believe it. Just as certainly are savings banks divine institutions."

Whaling in the North Sea

FRANCIS HARBOR, LABRADOR

MEMORIES of Nantucket whalers dance again on the mental horizon! Recollections of the old-time, off-shore whaling at Monterey come to mind. Whaling is no longer to be accounted an extinct profession, as it is on the coast of Labrador, even now, they are making ready for the spring catch of whale. Not little whales, either, but fellows so large that we recall a ship's captain once seating himself comfortably in the mouth of one about to be dissected on the dock.

Of course you've read and read of whales and, probably, when you crossed the Atlantic you may have seen a whale or two blowing in the distance, but unless you have gone to the far north, the chances are you've never really seen a whale at close range.

Naturalists place the whale as the largest of known animals and they will tell some strange facts about him. For example, the head of the whale forms nearly one-half the body. If our own heads were in like proportion, fancy the queer looking creature we would be. The nostrils, again, are on the top of the head and vary—sometimes one, sometimes two. More than this, they do not serve as organs of smell, but only as respiratory openings, through which the water, taken in while the animal is beneath the surface, is ejected.

Has No Voice. Though living on animal food, the stomach is complex, consisting of from four to seven apartments. Queerly enough, this giant creature has no voice.

Nor is that all. One of the important products of whaling, prior to the introduction of the metal stove, was the whale bone. In certain varieties of the whale there are several longitudinal rows of horny plates, from which this came. These plates are set cross-wise and hang from each upper jaw into the cavity of the mouth below, which, to make place for them, is also destitute of teeth. When the mouth is shut these plates are inclosed on the outside of the upper lip and the tongue lies between the two rows. These plates, which are fastened at their base in the roof of the mouth, are hardly more than one-fourth of an inch apart, and their inner edges are fringed. This curious device is admirably suited to the wants of the animal. It lives on small marine crustacea and mollusca and is said never to take in anything larger than a herring. Indeed, its throat is so small that it cannot swallow larger objects. It swims along in the water where myriads of these minute animals are moving and ingests a whole shoal of them at once. The water is strained off, as through a sieve, through the spaces between the whale-bone, and is discharged at the sides of the mouth, or through the blow-holes, but all the animals, even the minutest, remain in the mouth. Thus, by this capacious net, the whale is enabled to make a meal suited to his enormous bulk, though his prey consists of creatures often not larger than insects.

Whaling has been the theme of the writer of romance and adventure since time immemorial, but as a matter of fact, the method of it has changed little. At the big modern whaler's great black painted steamers go out in search of whale, otherwise methods are as of old. As soon as a whale is sighted by the lookout the vessel "hears to" and dories, carried aboard for the purpose, are released and rowed cautiously as possible, toward the whale. When close enough to suit his purpose, the harpooner, who has position in the prow of the vessel, shoots his great iron bar into the head of the whale.

Instantly the infuriated whale makes off, releasing the long harpoon line behind him. By and by he must come up to breathe and by that time the other dories are at hand and ready to dispatch him. In some cases an explosive is fired into the head of the whale, but the whalers do not seem to take kindly to this modern innovation and it is not generally practiced.

Working up the whale presents the interesting modern aspect of the story and to see this one needs to visit Hawk Harbor, or some other whale "factory" on the Labrador coast. A single fifty steamer carries passengers up these bleak shores beyond Battle Harbor, which is the first port of call after one has crossed the Straits of Belle Isle and left Newfoundland behind.

Killed in the sea the monster whales are towed to the factory and there, if time for cutting up be inopportune, the whale is pumped full of air and allowed to float out in the bay until the men can find opportunity to get at him. Then, by aid of windlass and cable, he is slowly but steadily drawn up the wide platform to the station which runs with gentle slope to the sea.

Many-Sided Subject. The background to the scene presented at the whaling stations of Newfoundland and Labrador is practically the same for all. One has the harbor, with the great islands of pinkish rocks and on the land behind, the white-painted main building or whale factory. Smaller buildings nestle beside this on the rocks. At one end of the dock are the warehouses; behind these a series of vats flank each side the dock.

In these vats, if one visits at the lucky moment, he finds boiling the greenish mass which is what remains of the black hunk of the whale meat after a continued boiling. Over the vats there extends a bridge out over the rocks to little coves, in whose water one sees the huge jaw bones of whales slowly washed clean by the tides.

Then in another bowl, or pocket, formed by the rocks there lies, jumbled together, a mass of gills of the whale, a consecutive series of slightly-curved black plates, each and all edged with grayish-white bristles and running out from a heavy, bloody bone-rod. These are the gills that permit the whale draining off water when it engulfs a bit of sea thus leaving only fish in the maw!

Scattered over the granite rocks, too, are the messy remains of the whale. Cleaning a whale, however, is a many-sided subject. Once the great mammal has been brought on the beach, the fat is removed and carried off in buckets, mounted on an endless chain. Its destination is the cutter and in this the fat is cut into square chunks, which, in turn, make their way down to tanks, to be boiled for perhaps a day. As a result one has the oil as clear as water and ready to be put into casks and exported as the whale oil of commerce.

What is left after the oil is taken out, the "pitchings," so-called, is sent away to be worked up into fertilizer. This is done very largely at Savannah, Ga. The bone, too, is boiled until perfectly clean, when it, in its turn, is exported to Boston. The upper jaw-bone of a fair-sized whale will average five feet in length. The thick black gills, too, must be cleaned and cut up for sending away.

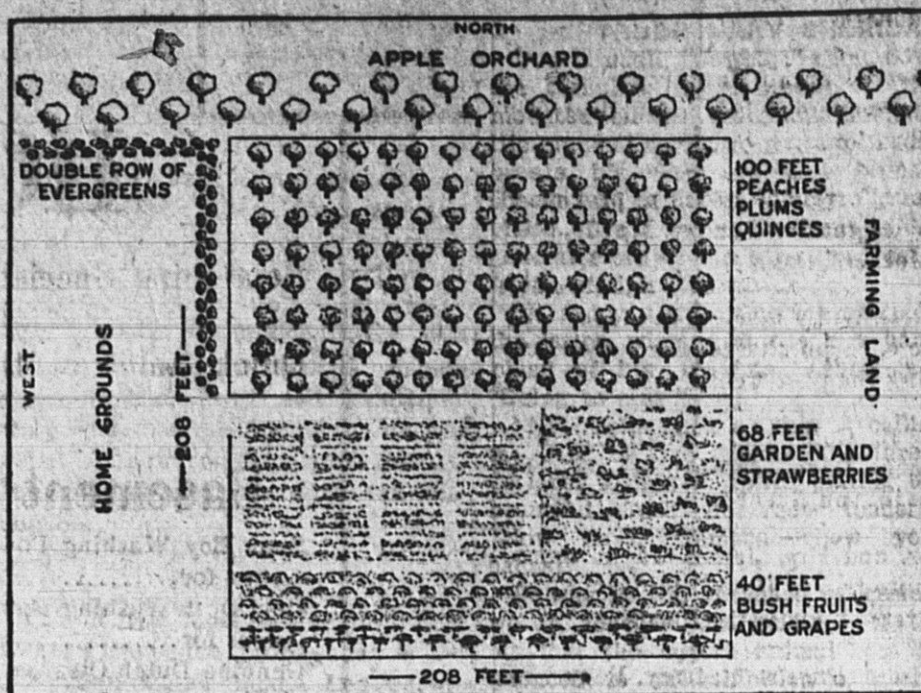

It takes perhaps a day in all to cut up a whale, 20 men being employed. One station, that at Hawk's Harbor, cut up 60 whales in one summer and what this means may be surmised when it is recalled that an average whale will yield from 25 to 30 barrels. A single sperm whale is on record there as yielding 90 barrels.

Beginning of Oblivion. It is pleasant to learn that R. L. Stevenson's grave in Samoa has not been neglected. The German authorities, as it appears, remember his genius and take care of his last abode. They will continue to do so for a time, but ultimately Stevenson's grave will be neglected and forgotten like all others. Oblivion has her poppy laid up for great names as for little ones. When Cicero visited Archimedes' tomb he could not find the cylinder and sphere until he had raked away the briars.—Portland Oregonian.

Absolutely Necessary. "Now is it that you, who owe every body, can afford a man servant?" "The way bill collectors chase me. I've got to have somebody to act as a bluffer, old boy."

Jude Johnson's Affliction. "Something is loose in Jude Johnson's head. Jude says it is a tooth, but no one believes that."—Athenian Globe.

HOME SUPPLY OF FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

(By W. M. KELLEY.)

Our greatest joy in farming is growing a bountiful supply of palatable and nutritious fruits and vegetables for home use. There is nothing that draws the whole family into a closer spirit of unity than the hours spent working among the good things which a well-kept garden provides for the family table. For many years we have used one acre of ground, which is fenced chicken tight, to grow vegetables and small fruits for home use.

During the summer and fall months more than a comfortable living has been obtained from this one acre. It has provided everything in the way of fruits and vegetables except apples and potatoes, and a surplus of some things to exchange for groceries at the store. This garden adjoins the home grounds and is protected on the north by an apple orchard and on the east by two rows of evergreens. The portion occupied by peaches, plums, pears and quinces serves as a runway for the young chicks, which in turn benefit the trees by their droppings and destroying insects.

A supply of peaches for two months is provided by the Carman, Alexander, Early Crawford, Champion, Elberta and Late Crawford, which gave us about 30 bushels last year. Twelve pear trees of nearly as many varieties, including the Bartlett, Bosc, Anjou, Clapp's Favorite, Blenheim Beauty Laurence and Seckel, furnish plenty of this delicious fruit for eating from the hand and for canning purposes.

An abundance of plums has been furnished by 20 trees of six varieties, four Green Gage, two Monarch, two Shropshire, two Damson, two Red June, four Satsuma and four Abundance. Eight quince bushes, four Orange, two Champion and two Meech's Prolific, furnish an abundant supply of these appetizing fruits for canning, preserving and jelly making.

The chicken-yard fence is hidden from the home grounds by the row of evergreens. The west side of the garden is devoted to grape vines and bush fruits. Two rows of grape vines 8x8 feet apart and tied up on wire trellis-work furnish plenty of this healthful and delicious fruit from the last week in August until frost comes.

The varieties include the Worden, Moor's Early, Moor's Diamond, Concord, Niagara, Lindley, Agawam and Catawba. Next to the grape rows are the rows of bush fruits; one row each of currants, black raspberries, red raspberries and blackberries. Next to these rows of bush fruits one lone row is devoted to rhubarb, asparagus, and various herbs and medicinal plants.

Among the bush fruits our favorite varieties for home use are Fay's Prolific and cherry currants, both large, vigorous growing bushes, which produce fruit of excellent quality. Of red raspberries we grow the Cuthbert, Ruby Red and Syracuse Red varieties. The Kansas and Cumberland are the most satisfactory of the black varieties.

We also have a few bushes of the Columbia raspberry; a purple variety which is a strong grower, unexcelled for productiveness and desirable for canning. Our favorite blackberry is the Eldorado, which is the hardest and sweetest blackberry we have ever grown. This variety matures strong, vigorous wood and has never winter-killed or failed to produce a full crop of the finest fruit. The berries are large, jet black, borne in large clusters, and ripen well together. It is a very promising berry.

We mulch the vines and bush fruits in the summer as soon as the cultivation ceases and remove this mulch early enough in the spring to plow it under for our vegetable garden. In this way the mulching material serves a twofold purpose—a cover for the vines and bushes during the winter and manure and humus-making material for the garden the next spring.

In the vegetable garden, which is 60x200 feet, we plant beans, peas, tomatoes, early cabbage, peppers, carrots, turnips, beets, and other vegetables in long rows and cultivate with a horse. The only vegetables grown in beds are radishes, lettuce, small pickling onions and various plants for transplanting into rows.

Tomatoes are set three feet apart and trained to barrel hoops fastened to stakes. This takes a little more time and labor than to allow them to spread over the ground, but the fruit is of better quality and ripens more evenly. We have found the Clark's Early Jewel, Acme and Ponderosa the most satisfactory varieties for home use.

We grow cucumbers in rows and find it the most satisfactory way for a small plot. Early peas and string beans are planted in rows 24 inches apart, but late peas are planted in double rows with a 30-inch chicken wire between for the vines to run up on. We plant the Burpee Bush Lima bean instead of the pole beans, because they are much easier to grow.

They are by no means as prolific, but two rows halfway through the garden gives us all we can use green shelled during their season and enough dry beans for winter. We grow peppers about the same as tomatoes, except that we do not train the plants to grow up on stakes or barrel hoops.

We have practiced intensive culture with the best of results. By using plenty of manure, fertilizers and mulching material we have been able to get good crops each year. We plow deeply and apply lime, wood ashes and chemicals to the soil to keep it sweet and kill various insect pests. Such crops as onions, radishes, lettuce, beets, peas and cabbage that a light frost will not injure, are put in as soon as the soil will permit.

As soon as these early vegetables are out of the way we replace them with cabbage, tomatoes, turnips and other late vegetables. We also plant seeds of the same vegetables at different times so that we may prolong their seasons. In this way we can have corn, tomatoes, peas, string beans and other early truck until in the fall. The surplus of beets, turnips, cabbages and other winter vegetables make a valuable supplement to the fowls' rations in the winter.

We have no permanent place for our strawberry beds, as they are rotated with the garden crops from year to year. We usually put out 600 plants each year. We frequently renew an old bed if it shows unusual promise, or if the newly-started bed does not get well-started early in the season. However, as a rule, I believe it pays best to start new beds each year, because in a rich garden soil the old matted rows afford a fine breeding place for rank growing weeds.

We depend upon our own beds for about one-half of the plants we put out each year and usually buy from 200 to 300 plants of some of the standard varieties. Our favorite berries are the Dunlap, Glen Mary, Clyde and Marshall.

The whole acre is inclosed with poultry-tight fence. This does not deprive the fowls of their liberty and they cannot injure the garden. No attempt has been made to plant and arrange fruits and vegetables artistically; and main effort has been to get the greatest return for the time and work expended. Ours is simply a farmer's home acre.

Of Great Help on the Home Acre

Dressiest of Midsummer Hats

If you would be abreast of the very latest things in millinery, or just a little ahead of what has really arrived, select a lacy tulle or hair braid for your midsummer hat. It was inevitable that these fragile-looking and filmy braids should be brought out along with all the frivolities in fashions of times gone by with which the summer girl has determined to garb her fair body.

In the picture a hat is shown made on a fairly large frame, which is first covered with crepe. It is raised at the left by a wide bandeau covered with the crepe also. This is one of those efforts in millinery which require much skill, and put the art of the milliner to test in the making. The crepe covering must be cut to fit the frame and put on with finished neatness.

After the adjustment of the crepe the braid is sewed over the brim and crown. It is placed with scalloped edge extending beyond the brim edge and falling over it. On account of the fancy pattern in the braid it may be sewed to the shape in many ways.

Small tulle buttons, joined by tiny tulle cord, are applied over the braid, although so fancy a pattern needs no decoration. But since fashions demand that we adorn the rose and paint the lily this hat affords only one more example of elaboration in a fashion world that is full of it.

There is a trimming of sprays of wild roses with rose leaves and foliage. A spray is fastened at the front and right side of the crown. A similar spray fastens a bow of blue velvet ribbon to the bandeau and another is fastened to the long sash of velvet near the end.

Such a hat presupposes others more substantial in the possession of its owner. It is, of course, not appropriate for general wear, but is designed for the dressy occasions of summer time.

New Slippers and Shoes for Summer

(1) Easy Joint. (2) Ostend Pump. (3) Week End Vanity Case. (4) House Slipper. (5) Brocade Boot.

AMERICA holds first place in the making of shoes, and within a few years women have made wonderful advances in knowledge and discrimination in choosing footwear. Their demands keep the makers of shoes always striving for new elegancies and new beauties. Besides these things, comfort is taken for granted. Shoes must be comfortable.

No season has ever presented so great a variety in footwear to choose from. And this is necessary because one or two pairs of shoes will not serve the needs of any one who makes a point of clothing the feet properly. They are to be dressed, now and henceforth, to suit the occasion. This requires a greater number of pairs of shoes at one time, but is an economy in the long run. Five or six pairs are really required if one would dress the feet to be in keeping with all occasions that come up in the life of women of today.

In the group of shoes pictured here an outfit in footwear is shown. There is the low-heeled, square-toed walking boot, laced up the front, for heavy wear—walking in town or country, shopping, sightseeing, etc. It is made of kid, and may be had with buttons instead of laced fastenings. It is shapely and put together for solid comfort, and is called the "easy joint," by way of designating its main recommendation. For all those occasions where the feet must be prettily and daintily clad, but still able to withstand the strain of walking in the street, the handsome pump with French heel or the cloth-topped boot with brocade uppers are the proper choice. They are made of patent coltskin with leather heels. The pump is elaborated with fancy fastening and is one of the most successful of this season's models.

The brocade boot is a type of many boots, made with cloth tops. These tops are often made in a color to match a suit, but the great majority of them is in black. Brocade boots are dressier than plain weaves. The pump called the "Ostend" is rather more dressy than the boot, and fine for summer wear.

The house slipper of soft kid is made purely for comfort, but is not unattractive in shape. It is laced across the toe and as flexible as a glove.

A pair of brocade slippers for evening wear, with high French heels, are of a type which has held its own so long that they do not need special description. The little "week end" vanity case is a pretty affair which is very convenient. It is suspended from a brocade garter and is made of moire ribbon. It contains powder book, mirror, pins, pencil, and many little essentials to the comfort of fashionable women.

BUSINESS ABOVE ALL THINGS

Farmer Willing to Let Wife Sob Her Fill if He Got the Price for the "Coo."

The farmers met in the market town, and there was a calculating look in the eyes of both as they faced each other. "About that there coo I was talking to you of the other day," began Farmer Dobbins; "will you take twelve pounds for her, George?" "No, no. Of couldn't part with 'er for that—not by a long chalk." "But t'other day you told me you might let 'er go for that." "Something's 'appened to the coo, since then." "Mercy on us, George, what's the matter? Coo dead?" "Worse 'n that," said George. "You see, my old missus can't bear to part with t' old coo. It 'ud break 'er heart. She'd sob 'erself into a fit over it." "Well, well, I suppose that ends the business?" "Well, I'm not so sure of that, Farmer Hayseed. Look 'ere. Make it twelve pun' ten, and let the missus sob."—London Tit-Bits.

ECZEMA ON BACK AND CHEST

Pierson, N. Dakota.—"The eczema started on my scalp. It finally went on to the back of my neck, then on to my back, arms and chest. It broke out in pimples first and then seemed to run together in some places, making a sore about the size of a dime. At times the itching and burning were so intense that it seemed unbearable. The more I scratched it the worse it became, and there would be a slight discharge from it, especially on my scalp, so as to make my hair matted and sticky close to the scalp. The hair was dry, lifeless and thin. My hair was falling so terribly that I had begun to despair of ever finding relief. My clothing irritated the eruption on my back. The affected parts were almost a solid scab.

"I had been bothered with eczema for about a year and a half. Then I began using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used them daily for two months and I was cured." (Signed) Miss Mildred Dennis, Apr. 30, 1913. Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Disfigurements. Don C. Seitz of New York, was praising the newspaper advertisement. "But billboards," he said, "bring small returns, and, besides, they disfigure the landscape.

"In a recent play the stage manager staged a meadow with chewing gum and cold-cure and cigarette ads. of every rock and tree and fence. "Hold, hold," said the star. "Add in our meadow scene! That's carrying commercialism a bit too far." "Commercialism nothing," said the stage manager. "I'm a realist, I am, and I want that meadow to look like a genuine one."

Constipation causes and seriously aggravates many diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Peppermint. Tiny sugar-coated granules. Adv.

Not Guilty. Mother—Well, Bobbie, I hope you were a good boy at Mrs. Bond's and didn't ask for two pieces of pie. Bobbie—No, ma, I didn't ask for two pieces; I only asked if there wasn't goin' to be any.

WOMAN COULD NOT SIT UP

Now Does Her Own Work Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Ironton, Ohio.—"I am enjoying better health now than I have for twenty years. When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could not sit up. I had female troubles and was very nervous. I used the remedies a year and for the last six months I have worked for other women, too. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for I know I never would have been well if I had not taken it and I recommend it to suffering women."

Daughter Helped Also. "I gave it to my daughter when she was thirteen years old. She was school and was a nervous wreck, could not sleep nights. Now she looks so healthy that even the doctor says of it. You can publish this letter if you like."—Mrs. RENA BOWMAN, 161 S. 10th Street, Ironton, Ohio.

Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out and drag out a sick half-beat existence, missing the fourth of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham, Medford, (Mass.), for a free trial. Your letter will be opened and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

BREVITIES

BRIDGEWATER—The people of the Bridgewater Lutheran church are building new sheds east of the German school building. They are to be ninety feet long.BRIGHTON—Livingston County Ministerial Association have arranged
a general exchange of pulpits by the pastors for the second Sunday in May. By this arrangement no local pastor will be in his pulpit for that day.—Argus.DEXTER—Chas. Hoffmeyer's residence was destroyed by fire which broke out about 1:15 last Thursday afternoon. Most of the furniture was saved. The fire is supposed to have caught from the kitchen chimney.—Leader.MILAN—The interest in our public library is increasing all the time as denoted by the number of visitors
each Saturday, and we are also pleased to note that some of the young people
are taking advantage of the reading room privileges.—Leader.MANCHESTER—The date for the annual poultry show of the Manchester Poultry association is set for December 16 to 22, 1914. It promises to be one of the best shows ever held in this section of the state. The boys and girls' contest will be held in connection with the poultry show.JACKSON—Jehiel J. Freeman on Monday resigned as manager of the local Michigan employment bureau
office. State Labor Commissioner
James V. Cunningham was in the city
Monday morning and it is understood that he asked for the resignation.
Perry W. Ward of Detroit is temporarily in charge of the office.PLYMOUTH—William H. Cattermole, for years a leading merchant
of Northville, has filed a trust deed
for the benefit of his creditors. He has been the victim of business reverses since last winter, when his
implement store was destroyed by fire.
Soon after he suffered a nervous
collapse, from which he has not recovered.—Mail.YPSILANTI—Miss Grace Fuller,
dean of women and head of the household department at the Michigan State Normal college here, has tendered her resignation to the state board of education, to take effect at the close of the present school year.
She has been appointed superintendent of the state reformatory for women at Joliet, Ill.TECUMSEH—H. L. Jones has in his possession the first book used by the U. S. Express Company in Tecumseh, which was organized in 1834.
Mr. Lebbens Drew was the first agent and was assisted by H. L. Jones. On
Mr. Drew's retirement in 1893, Mr.
Jones continued the business until 1896. A period of 33 years. The first to send goods from Tecumseh was the firm of Satterthwaite & Comfort.—Herald.STOCKBRIDGE—Supt. George A.
Smith, who has headed our schools
for the past three years, has accepted a similar position at Manchester
for next year. Mr. Smith entered our school at a critical period, and by his faithful work has placed it in the line with the fore most schools of the county. As an enterprising and far-seeing superintendent he has but few equals.—Brief-Sun.GRASS LAKE—In an effort to make fishing conditions at Wolf Lake better large numbers of dog fish are being taken out of the lake. This is being accomplished by spearing under the direction of Deputy Game Warden
W. H. Coons, of this county. The work has been successful so far and will be carried on in the hopes of ridding the lake of a large part of the fish which seriously impair fishing conditions.—News.CLINTON—W. H. Worth, who is spending his winters in the Soldier's Home at Grand Rapids was in Clinton
Saturday last. Mr. Worth exhibited several medals he obtained for his bravery while in Uncle Sam's service.
He is a son of the late Captain Worth
a resident of Bridgewater years ago.
Mr. Worth stated while here, that Sunday would mark his 100th mile stone. The old gentleman seemed active for one of his years and handled many topics of the day in a pleasing manner.—Local.JACKSON—Boys in Jackson county, will have an opportunity to enjoy a
fresh air camp and summer vacation
under a unique plan outlined by officials of the Michigan Agricultural college. The plan is to have a camp
somewhat similar to the one conducted by the Y. M. C. A. boys. This will afford an opportunity to rural as well as city boys to enjoy a novel vacation. The plan is to go to some such lake as Torch lake in August. The camp will be for two weeks. Recreation and educational work will occupy the time of the boys. Every morning there will be classes in various subjects.Margaret F. Connell, Chiropractor

Supervisors Met in Special Session.

The board of supervisors met in special session at Ann Arbor Tuesday morning to consider tax questions.
Supervisor Kenny, of York, was chosen
temporary chairman.State Tax Commissioner Thomas D.
Kearney addressed the board, laying particular stress on the wisdom of assessing all property at its full value.A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Kearney for his address, and the board adjourned to meet at 1:30, when the first business was the election of permanent chairman. Supervisor
William Evers, of Bridgewater was elected permanent chairman. Supervisors Jede, Berg and VanRiper were named as the committee on perdium. The principal part of the afternoon was taken up with tax discussion.

Peace Day.

One of the most active organizations in the peace propaganda is the American School Peace League, organized in 1908, with headquarters at 405 Marlborough street, Boston. The League strives to lay emphasis on the teaching of peace in history
courses rather than on battles and campaigns. It also promotes the observance in the school of Peace Day,
May 18, the anniversary of the meeting of the first Hague Conference on international peace. Special efforts are to be made by the Michigan
branch of the School Peace League
to have exercises held in every school
in Michigan, May 18 next, and state superintendent Fred L. Keeler is about to issue a circular on this subject.

Runaway Caused Death.

A team of horses which he bought
last fall, to replace one that had been killed in a runaway, caused the death Sunday of Charles Schmid, of Northfield.A team belonging to Schmid ran away last fall and one of the horses
was killed by a passenger train and was found on the Michigan Central right of way, while the other fell a victim to a freight train and was picked up in front of Tessmer's boat house. Mr. Schmid replaced the team with two horses which were thought to be very gentle.On Friday these two ran away and in the accident, Mr. Schmid was so seriously injured that an operation
had to be performed.Mr. Schmid was plowing and when the horses scared at a train and started to run, was struck in the abdomen
by the handle of the plow, which injured him internally. An operation was performed on Saturday, but it did not relieve him, and death came Sunday afternoon. He was 56 years old, and is survived by his widow and
three daughters and two brothers.

Library Money.

The library apportionment this year
will be made in accordance with sections 4761 and 4762 as amended by the 1913 session of the legislature. The apportionment will be made by the Department July 15, the date for making the primary apportionment.
A statement will be sent every county
clerk and treasurer and to the township clerk of the districts that will share in this apportionment. Each county treasurer shall, before the first day of August, make the apportionment of the penal fine money at that time in his hands, among the several townships, districts or township districts in his county. This money
when received by the township treasurer shall be applied to the support of the libraries in his township according to the statement sent him by the Department of Public Instruction.
Every township clerk should report
to each director on or before August 15 the amount of primary and library
money belonging to the district.
Directors should see to it that they have this statement that they may give account in their yearly report
of all money belonging to the funds
drawn by their district or still in the township treasury. Dog tax is not a part of the library fund. It belongs to the general fund.

Seeking Alfalfa Information.

Secretaries of the Granges throughout Washtenaw county are now being asked to forward to the secretary of the Ann Arbor Civic Association, the names of all farmers in their community who are growing alfalfa, and the names of all those who want to see a practical demonstration in their neighborhood when the county alfalfa campaign is started in June. It will be a big help to the general committee in charge if all farmers who are now growing alfalfa would send their names direct to the association secretary.

Chelsea Druggist Has Valuable Agency

H. H. Fenn Co. has the Chelsea agency for the simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc.,
known as Adler's-ka, the remedy
which became famous by curing appendicitis. This simple remedy has powerful action and drains such surprising amounts of old matter from
the body that JUST ONE DOSE relieves sour stomach, gas on the stomach and constipation almost IM-MEDIATELY. THE QUICK action
of Adler's-ka is astonishing. Adv.

DAN RANDALL, COWBOY

By GERTRUDE MARY SHERIDAN.

Dan Randall, "Cowboy," came down
the turnpike like a breath of wind
mounted on his pet pony, Tempest.
His graceful sombrero fluttered in the breeze, his clear eye and bronzed
cheeks told of health, energy and ambition. He drew up in front of the general store of the town to greet a friend—Ralph Pearson."Heard you had come back," spoke
the latter, wincing at the iron hand-
clasp of his old-time schoolmate.
"Going to stay?""Not while such as this is calling
me back to true friends of nature!"
declared Dan with spirit, patting the beautiful steed he rode tenderly.
"Now then, Tempest—show your paces!"It was at the response of certain words, touches and guidings of the bit that the superb animal was influenced to an exhibition of clever
horse-sense that made the natives
stare—Pearson included.Tempest knelt, stood on three feet,
arose on two hind hoofs to a lofty height. He made a circular dash with a rapidity that took away the breath of the onlookers. A stray dog passing by was pursued by the mischievous animal, caught up by the scruff of his neck, carried yelping to
a water trough and dropped therein
uninjured, only frightened."Horses think out on the ranch
where I came from," averred Dan proudly, "and where I'm going back soon. As to the men, they're all brothers—except the scallawags—and those we hang on sight.""Well," smiled Pearson, animated at the free, heartsome appearance of his friend, "you certainly resemble some young Lochinvar come out of the west. Haven't come back to pick out a bride, have you now, Dan?"The cowboy laughed merrily, his clear eye twinkling."Not until I have a nest for the pretty bird I shall find some day," he answered. "No, fact is, Pearson, I have scripped along out in Idaho until I have paid for two thousand acres of land. I want to stock it, and I came back to the home town hoping to borrow the capital. The man I relied on is dead, and others I hopedCarried Yelping to a Water Trough.
to interest haven't the money to spare.""I wish I was in shape to accommodate you, Dan," said Pearson, loyally."I know you do, but I need quite an amount. I tried old Martin Dobbs.
My father did him a great favor once,
but I found he had grown into a grasping, selfish miser, with no human feeling left, it would seem, except for that handsome little three-
year-old tot, the child of his dead
daughter, who lives with him.""Yes, Dobbs is a hard case," assented Pearson. "Well, I hope you'll strike luck somewhere. That horse of yours ought to bring a fortune.""Tempest!" spoke Dan with kind-ling eyes. "He's a jewel, a treasure.
Confidentially, I've found out that I might make quite an income in the next year if I would travel with a druce, giving some clever cowboy stunts. I expect a visit soon from a showman and may close with him, if
it would lead to getting that two thousand dollars."Then Tempest and his master were away like the wind. Five miles, ten miles, a dazzling dash and turning
across a treeless waste, Dan suddenly halted Tempest and fixed his eyes on the far western horizon with a prolonged:"Hello!"
Across the sky suddenly and without warning there had spread a broad black ribbon. Rising above this, a second seething strata of clouds
balled, bubbled, tumbled, approaching with appalling swiftness. For the skilled plainman a practiced eye read these menaces of a coming storm. He calculated to a second when it might cross his trail. As he touched up his horse, the intelligent animal sniffed
and threw up its head as if scenting
excitement and danger.Half way across the desolate
stretch of moorland Dan brought Tempest to an abrupt halt. It was where he observed the faintest little lady he had ever seen. The rain had started, the wind nearly blew her off
her feet. He noticed her rich attire,
her fair patrician face, but had she
been a scrub-woman the chivalrous
sentiments of Dan would have even equally aroused."Quick!" he spoke rapidly, with a superb sweep reaching directly the side of the young lady. "There is nota moment to lose. Get into the saddle and then—a dash for our lives. We're a-goner if that storm overtakes us!"Miss Nina Grant drew back and regarded this unceremonious stranger
with disturbed dignity, despite her environment. Dan, for all his crude western ways, read the oracle. He reached down, seized her by the slender waist and planted her on the saddle
in front of him before the astonished maiden could realize it all."How dare you," she flashed out.
"Scold me later," retorted Dan.
"Just now—there she comes! Tempest, old boy, do your last!"Nina could not help but admire the manly strength and determination of the young man. She was chagrined for all that at his mastery ways. As he landed her, wet through but safe,
on the porch of the first home they came to, she remarked rather sharply:
"You see, sir, the storm was not so harmful after all!""Not here, young lady," returned Dan, "but look yonder. We got out of the scrimmage just in time."Nina shuddered as she looked back
the course they had come. A veritable cyclone had swept the route just covered and flying debris and uprooted trees told what she had escaped."Sorry I offended you," said Dan in his offhanded way."Oh, no!" cried Nina quickly. "You don't know how grateful I am," and then each had time to observe the other. It was love at first sight. A week later the whole town was discussing "the rare catch" the young ranchman had made of the daughter of proud aristocratic Judge Grant.In the midst of his love-making bad luck came to Dan. One night Tempest kicked the shed he was in to pieces and started forthwith to ravage
several gardens. The animal came home limping, a load of buckshot in one limb. The veterinary surgeon
said he would never do his clever tricks again, as he was lamed for life."No sale of Tempest now!" Dan sighed to Nina. "Well, we will have to wait a year longer."One afternoon during a storm, a woman hastening to shelter with a shriek saw the little grandchild of old Martin Dobbs fall into the creek.
She was helpless to aid him. Tempest, near by, plunged into the swift current, seized the loose clothing of the little tot in his teeth and brought the imperiled child ashore. That evening Martin Dobbs sent for Dan.
"Mr. Randall," he said, "it was I who shot your poor horse, and I'm ashamed of it. He saved the life of my only cherished treasure on earth.
I understand you need capital to stock
your ranch. You shall have all you need as long as you like, without interest."So the young ranchman took home
a bride to his western home—and they did not leave brave, loyal Tempest behind.

HAS NO FEAR OF PUBLICITY

According to London Times, That Is
One Reason Why American Gets
What He Wants.It is a familiar saying that no man can achieve anything worth doing unless he run the risk of looking ridiculous. The men who have done the great work of the world have cheerfully taken that risk, and ridicule,
which is the severest form of publicity,
has failed to kill the noblest enterprises. An eminent difference between the Englishman and the American lies in the attitudes of the two toward publicity. The American lives in public;
he has not even a fence around his house. . . . And there is no question but that in many ways the American suffers for his want of reserve.On the other hand, in many fields of activity he gains enormously. There is a gay adventurousness about him.
He is a little hampered by conventions, traditions, social codes and other devices for securing caution and circumspection in movement. If he wants a thing, he does not mind who knows it nor who sees him making
efforts to get it, and no kind of sensitivity will be allowed to come between his desire and its object. If he wants profits out of his business,
he is indifferent to any clamor that may be raised about his methods. If he wants to forward an idea, to help
a cause, he becomes a cheerful and shameless "crank." With the American, to be seized with an idea is not to think it round and over, compare it with other ideas, weigh the pros and cons and calculate its effect on this body of interests or that. It is to put it to the trial, and see what happens.
The results of this adventurous
quickness are often unfortunate. Scatterbrained efforts in philanthropy,
art, eugenics, social reform and what not, sporadically sprouting, fill the ground that might better be occupied by order and concerted work. But at least the American seldom loses anything that he wants for fear of lowering his dignity by trying to get
it. His sprightly power of initiative carries him straight to his point, and he is too busy getting his way to care
what he looks like to other people.—

Pineapple Industry in Hawaii.

During the past few years the pineapple industry of the Hawaiian islands
has experienced considerable development, causing it to rank second to that of sugar. At present there are about 7,000 acres on the islands planted to pineapples. And although they are grown on nearly all of the islands
of the group, by far the larger part of the acreage is on the island of Oahu.
The fresh or raw fruit, proportionately small in quantity, is distributed only to points in the United States.

FINE FLAVOR IN BAKING—

Is always due to extreme care in milling the flour you bake with. In milling Aristo Flour we are more careful than other millers to put delicious flavor into our flour. For example, the proportion of GLIADIN in the gluten is carefully adjusted so as to produce whole
some, delicious flour—flour that will IMPROVE the quality of your BREAD, BISCUITS and PASTRY.PRINCESS

COMING ATTRACTIONS

Tonight Thursday the Princess
theatre offers a sensational feature film by Warner's Co. entitled "Olga Treskov" featuring that celebrated actress Helen Gardner. The picture is in three reels and is said to be a magnificent picture.On Saturday evening the feature offering is a three part picture "The Trail of the Law." This western melodrama, produced by the Albuquerque Film Manufacturing Company, is one of the distinctive type
that so picturesquely portrays the rugged life of the rancher as it was in reality on the frontier back in the early "fifties." The scenes are most alluring, the picture having been produced right in the heart of the barren mountain ranges that lie in Northern New Mexico. The plot is woven about a jilted outlaw who,
when spurned in love, attempts to carry out an intricate plot in seeking revenge. One's eyes are ever on the screen as the story unfolds. Thrill follows thrill with rapid-fire precision
throughout the three parts. A red-blooded, gripping production that will hold your attention.
